LIAO YANG THE OBJECT OF ATTACK

GENERAL KURIKO STATES THAT HE CAN TAKE THAT POINT WITH THE 80,000 JAPANESE THAT ARE UNDER HIS COMMAND

A BLOODY BATTLE

The Russians Are Entrenched Here and Will Make a Stubborn Resistance—This Point and Haichen Command the Approach to New Chwang—Russian Army Filled With Undrilled Conscripts

SEOUL, Korea, May 7.—News from the front is very hard to obtain, owing to the fact that the temporary telegraph line is in the possession of the Japanese signal service and nothing is permitted to pass over it but official business, as this latter taxes the lines to their full capacity.

It is persistently reported that the Japanese have occupied Dalgung, and that the cord across the Liao Tung peninsula has been completed and that the troops are throwing up rifle pits so that they can stand a rear guard attack.

General Kuriko has divided his forces, and they are moving against Liao Yang. The Japanese troops are flushed with victory, and while a desperate conflict is expected, there is good ground for the belief that the Russian position at Liao Yang will be taken within a fortnight. Once in possession of the Russian entrenchment at Liao Yang and Haichen, it will be easy to cut New Chwang off and to capture or destroy the Russian garrison there.

It is reported that General Kuropatkin has massed an army of 100,000 men at Liao Yang, but this report is not generally credited. Even though it should be so, however, the Japanese officers here profess to have no fear of the troops now in Manchuria, are not the pick of the Russian fighting force, but are composed of the undrilled conscripts, who hardly know the muzzle of the gun from the butt. These men are declared to be no match for the well trained Japanese. General Kuriko is known to have stated that he can take Liao Yang with the 80,000 men he has in his command.

JAPS OVERJOYED AT LANDING OF TROOPS

TOKIO, May 7.—Heartfelt joy is written on the faces of Japanese officials, who usually mask all emotion behind an affable smile, because at last the Mikado's flag is flying and the Mikado's troops are marching on the Russian soil. When General Kuriko crossed the Yalu and planted his colors on Chinese territory and when the marines of Admiral Hayashi's squadron hoisted their banner on the heights of Pitsewo they signalled the occupation by the Japanese of Russia's concession in the Liao Tung.

TAKE NO MESSAGES FOR PORT ARTHUR

That Port Arthur is no longer accessible to the Russians was brought home to the people of St. Petersburg yesterday by the posting of a proclamation stating that no more messages could be accepted for transmission to Port Arthur until further notice.

JAPS BLOW UP A STEEL BRIDGE

ST. PETERSBURG, May 7.—No definite announcement as to the reasons for the abandonment of Feng Huang Cheng are procurable here. At the war office the officials refuse to discuss the matter beyond the statement that General Kuropatkin is planning his own campaign and that he will not give battle until he considers victory certain.

So far as can be learned no report has been received as to whether there was an engagement before the position was abandoned, but it is generally believed that there was nothing further than severe skirmishing. The Japanese have destroyed the railway line at Port Adams and blown up the steel bridge and telegraph station there. It is rumored that

INDICTMENT FOR DEBENTURE CO.

Jackson, Mississippi Concern in Trouble for "Get Rich Quick" Methods

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 7.—A special grand jury created a profound sensation this morning by bringing indictments against five very prominent persons connected with the Mississippi Debenture Company, which is domiciled in this city. The grand jury charges the concern which has been operating here for about three years with being a "get rich quick" scheme and using the mails for fraudulent purposes.

FURTHER DETAILS OF NIXON KILLING

LULING, Texas, May 7.—S. M. Nixon, a prominent banker and member of the democratic executive committee and widely known throughout Texas, shot and instantly killed R. W. Malone here today, putting five bullets into him, and then sent the sixth bullet in his weapon through the heart of Captain John L. Veazey, a cousin of Malone, who came rushing to the scene. The two dead men are cousins of Mrs. Nixon.

NO TRUTH IN THIS SANTA FE RUMOR

CLERBURN, Texas, May 7.—A rumor has been afloat today that the Santa Fe strike would be called off tonight. A telephone message to Mechanical Superintendent W. E. Symons disproved this by stating that there were no developments. A number of guards were let go from there and it is thought that the rumor there is no excitement here and it is estimated that half of the men are working.

ENCYCLOPEDIA MAN SWINDLES J. J. HILL

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 7.—Upon complaint of W. D. Washburn, Bend, Smith was arrested here this afternoon on a charge of swindling, among others, J. J. Hill, president of the Great Northern railroad. Smith represented himself to Hill as the agent of an encyclopedia company. Among his effects was found a letter from Andrew Carnegie, the contents of which the police refuse to divulge.

AUSTIN WILL MAKE IT HOT FOR VAGABONDS

AUSTIN, Texas, May 7.—A vigorous crusade is being inaugurated here against all non-workers, whether white or black, and all those who have no visible means of support under the law will be arrested, fined as vagabonds, and made to work on the streets of Austin. This was the decision reached by Mayor White yesterday evening.

ANDREW McNALLY PUBLISHER, DEAD

CHICAGO, May 7.—Andrew McNally, member of the well known publishing house of Rand & McNally, died suddenly tonight of heart disease in the California Club in Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. McNally had been in Los Angeles for some time on account of impaired health, but his condition was not such as to preclude a sudden demise.

COLONIAL DAMES ADJOURN TILL 1906

WASHINGTON, May 7.—The bi-annual council of the Colonial Dames adjourned this afternoon to meet in Washington in 1906. No final action was taken upon the proposition to require the members of the society to sever their connection with the Daughters of the American Revolution although it was thoroughly discussed. In the afternoon delegates presented in the home at Arlington a historic book, containing the names of soldiers and sailors who lost their lives in the Spanish-American war.

CHURCH MAY AID ROYALIST CAUSE

The Vatican Can Attack the French Government Best in This Way

SOME ACTION IS DUE

Loubet's Visit to Rome Formally Denied Temporal Claim of the Pope

LONDON, May 7.—Up to this time in the contest in France between church and state, the state has had most of the say and church has maintained, officially, at least, a complete silence. Its partisans among the laity have rushed into print and occasionally a priest has unobscured himself in a sermon, but the Roman Catholic church in France, as a body, has maintained a reserve as remarkable as it must have been difficult.

Even the visit of President Loubet to Rome, which put France in the position of formally denying the temporal claim of the pope, was passed over in silence. But it added to the exasperation of the clerical party in both France and Italy. Many now believe the time has come for something to happen. The great difficulty is, of course, that the church receives something like $9,000,000 a year from the French government and any closely drawn battle might lead to its disestablishment and the loss of this income.

The French peasants, who are the most faithful of French Catholics, have never been used to making heavy contributions and it is feared they would not give enough in the event of the state support being withdrawn to keep up the smaller country parishes. About the only way the vatican can openly attack the French government is boldly to support the Royalist restoration would bring the church to her own again in France, although if the restoration were attempted and failed the church would be worse off than at present.

While not unexpected, such action would cause a huge sensation in France and throughout Europe and would kindle a strong revolutionary movement, even perhaps the royalist restoration, which was last vainly attempted the day of the funeral of President Faure. Such a movement would be helped by the third Dreyfus trial, which is generally expected during the summer. It will lead to further exasperation on the part of the army, and with the army sufficiently affected, the royalists would have easy sailing.

SHERIFF KILLS HIS PREDECESSOR

Sneed Nobles Puts Three Bullets Into Borders at San Augustine

HIS VERACITY WAS QUESTIONED

BEAUMONT, Texas, May 7.—Hon. R. C. Duval, a member of the legislature, and H. M. Whittaker, an attorney, became involved in an altercation this morning in the district court that led to blows and caused all kinds of excitement for a time. Friends parted them.

REDRESS FOR HAVING TRUNK LOCKED UP

BEAUMONT, Texas, May 7.—Because a Santa Fe special officer arrested W. J. Heath in this city some time ago while he was trying to obtain his trunk from the baggage room of the Santa Fe depot and had him locked up for two hours, Heath has filed suit for damages to the amount of $100.

RAILWAYS IN GOOD CONDITION

Well Known Correspondent Contradicts Story of the Trans-Siberians Road

WILL NOT BREAK DOWN

Finds Everywhere an Army of Workmen Keeping It in Repair

LONDON, May 7.—Charlie Hands, who as the war correspondent of the London Daily Mail, was one of the best known newspaper representatives who accompanied General Shafter's army to Cuba in 1898, and who is now in St. Petersburg for his paper, contradicts with ample detail the general impression that the Trans-Siberian railway is in any danger of breaking down by the demands put upon it.

He has been to Harbin and back since the beginning of the war. On the frontier of Manchuria he found that the Russians have built a new station and a military town since the war broke out. In fact the authorities seemed to be more keen about getting workmen to the front than they were soldiers.

"I got out of the train," says Hands, "and looked around for work, and found it was not war, but work. The station was full of Russians and Chinese—ragged Chinese—standing about impassive, doing nothing. The Russians hustling away at work. There were soldiers by the hundreds, most comfortably clad in great coats of gray frieze. One troop's train had just come in and another was just prepared to proceed. There were sentries on the platform and in front of the station buildings. The place was under military control. But it was not warfare, but work that was the feature of Manchurian towns. It was the workman and not the soldier that one looked around and saw."

"I took a walk a little way along the line with the commandant, and found building operations on a huge scale. Colonel Aponevoff had been there in command eight days and in that time he had built a town of bricks—soldiers building a huge brick canteen with kitchen and bakery, in which a thousand soldiers, and a large building for officers' quarters, a hospital building, a huge store house, offices, and I don't know what besides. The bricks had all been made on the ground nearby, and with the aid of steel girders, brought, of course, from the west, this little town was run up in eight days.

"In fact, in addition to carrying an army of soldiers, munitions and provisions, the Siberian railway had been able to transport an army of workmen with their appliances and materials. And in addition to this new military town a new civilian town had sprung up along the line with wooden houses, wooden shops, and, of course, a wooden church, where a few weeks before there had been nothing but bare earth. And not only at this station, but all the way along the line from the frontier to Harbin, rest houses and dining halls and barracks for the troops in transit or in occupation have been run up with the same celerity. Everywhere they are working away doing things, constructing, developing, preparing for the end of the war, while they are as yet hardly begun."

Hands was with the column which relieved Mafekin in the Boer war, and was shot in the attack on the Boer lines at Tloen. He is well qualified to write of the conditions as he has found them.

COLONIAL DAMES ADJOURN TILL 1906

WASHINGTON, May 7.—The bi-annual council of the Colonial Dames adjourned this afternoon to meet in Washington in 1906. No final action was taken upon the proposition to require the members of the society to sever their connection with the Daughters of the American Revolution although it was thoroughly discussed. In the afternoon delegates presented in the home at Arlington a historic book, containing the names of soldiers and sailors who lost their lives in the Spanish-American war.

DENVER BUILDING GUTTED BY FIRE

DENVER, May 7.—The immense four story building at 1439 Lawrence street in the heart of the business district of Denver, occupied by the wholesale department store of Hurlbut Gray company, with the stock, was completely gutted by fire at 11 o'clock tonight, causing a loss of between $75,000 and $90,000. The origin of the fire is as yet unknown. The flames were stubborn and it was only with the greatest difficulty that the fire was kept within the four walls of the building in which it started.

BANANAS AND ONIONS TOO MUCH FOR HIM

SALT LAKE CITY, May 7.—James Sharp, aged 61 years, twice mayor of Salt Lake, whose "retirement" caused the arrest and figure largely in the conviction of Peter Mortenson, executed last Tuesday for the murder of James Hay, died suddenly at his home here today. He had been on a visit to Vicksburg, Idaho, he ate heartily of bananas and young onions. That night he was taken sick. Gastritis set in and he was brought home. He died after much suffering.

BOY IN 1865 AND DIES WEALTHY MAN

CHICAGO, May 7.—Andrew McNally, member of the well known publishing house of Rand & McNally, died suddenly tonight of heart disease in the California Club in Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. McNally had been in Los Angeles for some time on account of impaired health, but his condition was not such as to preclude a sudden demise.

Mr. McNally was born in Armagh, Ireland. He was 68 years old. He came to Chicago in 1865 and started business in a little printing room. Later he and Mr. Rand entered co-partners and from that small beginning grew one of the largest publishing houses in America. Mr. McNally was a director in two Chicago banks, several large industrial institutions and a member of several leading clubs. He leaves a widow, one son, Frederick G. McNally, who is manager of the publishing house, and three married daughters.

SOCIETY BELLE WEEPS IN JAIL

Evelynn Rogers Fights Desperately to Avoid Going to Joliet Prison

SAYS SHE WAS IN TEXAS

Insists Her Brother in Dallas Will Testify She Was With Him on September 7

CHICAGO, May 7.—Evelynn Rogers, society belle, member of a wealthy family, convicted of forgery, branded as a skillful check worker, is weeping in the county jail and fighting desperately to avoid going to Joliet to serve time in a felon's cell. She weeps because she wants her baby, a little daughter a year and a half old, to escape disgrace.

Two glimpses into the hidden history of this woman of mystery were given today, when she broke down under the shame of her conviction, and, while pleading mercy on her infant daughter, declared her innocence and vowed that her wealthy relatives would rally to her assistance and prove that she is not the criminal the police say she is. She vowed her brother would come from Dallas, Texas, and testify that she was with him in Dallas on September 7, when the forgery in Chicago is alleged to have been committed.

"My God!" she sobbed, "is this the end of it? I don't care for it myself. I have been in jail so long that I have become hardened, my life is gone, my future will be blighted even if I prove my innocence. But I want to save my baby from the pain of learning some time that her mother died in a convict's cell. I am not guilty of this crime of which they accuse me. I never was arrested before. I never committed any forgery in New Bedford. I never was in that town nor that section of the country in my life. Before God, I must have a double. People who seem to be honest come into court and accuse me. They seemed honest, but, as sure as there is a God in Heaven, who forgives sinners, they were wrong. I must have a double."

"I was supporting myself and my baby while waiting for the result of my action for divorce in Kansas City. It had been a longer and check raiser I would not have been forced to work ten hours a day for a miserable salary in a shoe factory to sustain life and keep my baby. Ten years in prison means nothing to me now. I am disgraced, but it is terrible for the baby." Then the woman broke into uncontrollable sobbing.

BRYAN MAKES AN ATTACK ON PARKER

WRITES A LETTER TO JUDGE McCABE OF INDIANA WHICH IS FRANKEST PIECE OF LITERATURE THE CAMPAIGN HAS YET PRODUCED

IS A SIMPLETON

Likens the New York Jurist to a Boy Who Proved Himself Simple by Merely Keeping His Mouth Closed—Continues in Arraignment of Parker for His Silence on Questions Before the People

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 7.—Wm. J. Bryan has written a letter which is one of the most interesting pieces of campaign literature yet produced. The letter is written to Judge Jas. McCabe, of Williamsport, Ind., a member of the supreme bench. In part it is as follows:

Lincoln, Neb., May 5, 1904.

"My Dear Judge—I remember very distinctly your part in the writing of the Chicago platform and your loyalty to the ticket in 1900 and I am gratified although not surprised to know that you fully realize the importance of the great contest that we are now engaged in—a contest more important, if possible, than the contest of 1896, which resulted in the repudiation of Mr. Cleveland's administration by the democratic party. Then the party returned to virtue after a disgraceful alliance with Wall Street. To fall now would be a deliberate yielding to temptation and would denote a political instability which would not only injure the party, but endanger its chances for years to come."

"The re-organizers, as you say, have deceived some of our democrats and it has failed me to learn that some of the prominent democrats of your state have been caught in the trap, but certainly the New York platform and the loud speaking silence of Judge Parker ought to undeceive them. It is impossible to conceive of a democratic campaign upon a meaningless platform and under the leadership of a muzzled candidate. The excuse that his judicial position makes it improper for him to discuss public questions is a pious and contemptible pretense. Other judges have not been so hampered by judicial ethics and besides this, he can resign any day and thus free himself from the imaginary restraints which he has evoked to excuse his inaction. Frankness and a democratic nomination are not mutually exclusive. It is certainly worth resigning a judgeship to secure."

"But the judge's attack of lockjaw does not save him; actions speak louder than words. You have doubtless heard of the simpleton who when leaving home was told by his mother that if he would not say anything he could conceal from others the fact that he was foolish. When he returned he had a bad report to make to his mother. 'It's no use,' he cried, 'I was found out just the same. I met a man and he asked me what I had said and he said a word. Then he asked me where I lived and I did not answer him, and then he said: "What's the matter with you? Are you simple?" It's no use, mother, I can't conceal it, even when I keep still, and so with Judge Parker. The people have found him out even though he has refused to give his opinion upon public questions. He may dodge the trust question, evade the labor question, ignore the money question and be silent upon imperialism, but when he undertakes to secure a democratic nomination by concealing his political views, he confesses himself lacking in at least one essential principle of democracy. If democracy means anything, it means the rule of the people, that is, the rule of the called democrat who lacks confidence in the people or who does not recognize the right of the people to sit in judgment upon every public question which concerns them."

After devoting some space to the rights of the voters of the country to know the views of a candidate, he continues: "Judge Parker would refuse to consider the case of a litigant who would ask a decision, while refusing to furnish any evidence or to cite any law in support of his contention and to expect the party to consider his application for a nomination when he withholds the facts necessary for an intelligent determination of the question of his availability. If we were engaged in a sham battle, such tactics might be resorted to with less serious consequences, but when we are engaged in a battle royal between organized wealth and the common people, the cause of the people cannot be safely intrusted to the discretion of either political conviction or the courage to make an honest, a constant and fearless attack on entrenched private privilege."

"As you know I have no choice as among the more than five millions who voted the ticket, both in 1896 and 1900, there are many dauntless spirits whose democratic zeal has defied repression, men who are worthy to lead the militant democracy and able to inspire the masses with hope and resolution. Very truly yours,

"WM. J. BRYAN."

WILL COST TOO MUCH TO HOLD PRIMARIES

BEAUMONT, Texas, May 7.—The county democratic committee decided today to hold precinct caucuses instead of precinct primaries, to elect delegates to the San Antonio delegate convention. They claimed that it would cost too much to hold primaries. Primaries will be held for the state nominations.

MURDER IN THE SECOND DEGREE

This Is the Verdict in Trial of Mrs. Powell for Killing Adopted Daughter

DOVER, Del., May 7.—Mrs. Mary Powell was convicted of murder in the second degree, of Elsie Albin, her adopted daughter, by a jury in the county court this evening. The jury had been out less than two hours when a verdict was reported.

Attorney General Ward, in his closing words to the jury, pictured Mrs. Powell as a demon in woman's form. He reviewed the case showing how with hellish thoughts she had left the knife in the murdered girl's hands and how she then calmly prepared dinner and had remained the stolid friend and the perjurer until arrested.

The judge charged the jury and it returned at 5:30. At 7:15 word was sent to the sheriff that a verdict had been reported and court was reconvened at 7:25. The jury entered the courtroom and in answer to the clerk, the foreman of the jury announced the verdict of murder in the second degree.

Mrs. Powell is hysterical tonight and Sheriff Melvin has placed guards to watch her. She collapsed when she heard the verdict, crying: "My God! My God! I lost my home and all I worked hard for before I saw Powell and the girl robbed me of my love, my home and has now sent me to a felon's cell for life. There is nothing left for me but death and death would be a sweet thing." The sheriff will guard the woman so that she cannot make any attempt at self destruction. She will be sentenced on Monday.

100,000 MEN OUT ON GREAT LAKES

DETROIT, Mich., May 7.—An army of at least 100,000 men is out of work indefinitely in consequence of the closing of the lake commerce, according to the statement of Harry C. Baxter, general secretary of the Interstate Longshoremen Marine and Transport Association.

SETTLEMENT OF LAKE STRIKE FAR AWAY

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 7.—A settlement of the Lake Carriers' Association and the Masters and Pilots' Association is as far away as ever. The conference between committees of these organizations ended abruptly this afternoon and no arrangement for another meeting was made. This means a tie-up of the commerce on the lakes indefinitely. It is said that fully 70 per cent of the tonnage of the lakes is represented. Under the existing circumstances no master who is a member of the union can go aboard his vessel until a settlement is reached.

Important May Sale of Ribbons

This month is perhaps the busiest of the entire season in this Section. Ribbons are more in demand in consequence of the many social functions usually held during May. Our efforts to make it the greatest selling month of the year is evidenced by the extensive lines of new and effective novelties included in this sale, also the very low pricing.

Bows Tied Free of Charge by Our Expert Bow Maker
The following examples indicate to a certain degree the extent of the values we will offer Monday.

Brilliant Taffeta Ribbon, No. 40, all colors, 15c value; special, yd., 12c.
Brilliant Taffeta Ribbon, No. 60, all colors, 25c value; special, yard, 17c.

Fancy Taffeta Ribbon, three inches wide, in stripes and dots, excellent value at 1 1/2c; Monday special, yard 10c.

The Basement's 29c Sale of Kimonos

The introduction into our Basement Section of an extensive line of Women's Summer Kimonos has met with the greatest success which is the result of the unequalled low pricing throughout the entire line.

Among the exceedingly good bargains is a very special number of Kimonos of fine, sheer lawn, priced at 29c.

Special Sale of White Dress Goods for Girls Commencement Robes

The newest and most to be desired Wash Chiffons, Organdies, Paris Mousselines and Imported Swisses are combined in these selections. The completeness of the lines and the numerous price advantages make this the best opportunity of the entire season for making purchases. The following prices will immediately convince every buyer of the importance of attending this sale.

Wash Organdies, 32 inches wide very sheer and smooth, very appropriate for commencement robes, 25c value; Monday, special 19c.

45-inch Wash Chiffon and French Lawns, 50c value; special, yard 35c.

German Spachtel Work At Half Prices

In our Basement Salesrooms we are showing the largest and best assortment of Genuine German Spachtel Work we ever had. Our very heavy purchases enable us to offer the entire line including Pillow Shams, Dresser Scarfs, Table Covers, etc., at about half the usual price asked elsewhere.

May Sale of Chinese and Japanese Matting of Unusual Interest

An exclusive selection of desirable, serviceable qualities in China and Japanese Matting will be offered at considerably less than regular values at Our Special Sale Monday. This is the first Great Sale of the Season and one which offers the most excellent money saving opportunity. Special attention is directed to the fact that these prices apply to purchases by the bolt only.

Drop patterns of China and Japanese Matting, four different designs, 30c and 35c value; 40-yard bolt, special $8.00.

Good quality Chinese Matting in all the most desirable colorings, 15c and 20c values; 40-yard bolt, special, $4.50.

Chinese Matting in colors of blue, red and green—exceptional value; 40-yard bolt, Monday special, $3.00.

Basement Sale of Domestic

Unusual price concessions were granted us on a large purchase of Lonsdale Cambric and Roman Crash Toweling which we will offer Monday at Special prices.

Lonsdale Cambric, in lengths of 2 to 10 yards; special, yard 10c.

Roman Crash Toweling—usual 7 1/2c value; special price, yard 5c.

Women's Low Priced Wrappers in Basement

The demand for these practical garments is greater this season than ever before and was anticipated in our purchases of several months ago. Ever since the first line was placed on sale in the Basement Section the success has been phenomenal.

Lawn Wrappers with deep flounces, braided trimmed over the shoulder; price 75c.

Light weight Wrappers, trimmed in braid and embroidery—splendid value; price $1.00.

Lawn Wrappers, small, black and colored dots on white grounds, lace and braid trimmed, $1.50.

A 7 1/2c Sale of Women's Hosiery

The Basement announces a Special Sale for Monday on Women's Hosiery that should attract considerable interest in this section. A reduction of just half the regular price has been made to close out the entire line at once.

Women's All Lace Hose (imperfect), 15c value; special, pair 7 1/2c.

WHAT IT WILL COST TO VISIT THE WORLD'S FAIR FOR A WEEK

One May See the Actual Sight of the Fair and Live Well for a Week for $25

By W. B. Kenny.
ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 7.—What will it cost to see the fair? This is the question hundreds of thousands of people are asking. And there are as many answers as there are questioners. It will cost you as much or as little as you choose. By careful economy and by making arrangements in advance, one should be able to see the fair one week—the actual fair without trimmings—for $25. This does not include railroad fare, the Pike, the theaters, the purchase of souvenirs. It does include just this:

Room, 6 days at $1.50.....$9.00
Admission, 6 days.....3.00
Breakfasts, 6 days at 25c.....1.50
Luncheons, 6 days (on grounds), at 75c 4.50
Dinners, 6 days (on grounds), at 75c 4.50
Car fare to grounds, 10c day......60

Total.....$23.10
By arranging in advance, a pleasant room may be secured for $1.50 or $2 per day. By good luck, this may include breakfast. Of course a breakfast at 25 cents will not be very elaborate. But it should consist of good coffee, good rolls and fruit.
To save time and a second admission ticket, one should count on eating lunch and dinner inside the grounds. The gates are open from 6 a. m. to midnight. Prices inside the grounds are high. Of course, one might live on a ham sandwich and a cup of coffee, but the exertion of walking around the immense extent of grounds makes one's appetite ravenous. Sandwiches cost 15 cents each and coffee 10 cents per cup, and neither is very large.

But for 75 cents one may obtain a simple meal, including a roast, coffee and a small dessert. An elaborate dinner in the high-grade restaurants will cost you as much as you wish to spend.
By remaining six days, you can devote one-half day to each main building. Your evenings you may spend on the Pike, witnessing the illuminations or inspecting the state buildings.
This is the minimum one should expect to spend. There will be many things to tempt you to exceed the limit, and it will require great strength of will to resist them. This, however, is a fair basis upon which one can estimate what it will cost to see the fair.

By writing to the Bureau of Information, Louisiana Purchase Exposition, people can arrange for rooms or learn how it can be done.

WANTED DIVORCE ON TWO WEEKS' NOTICE

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)
BUDAPEST, May 7.—An old woman of independent means and owner of considerable property in a small town, in this neighborhood some time ago entered into civil marriage with a much younger workman. Before the marriage ceremony took place both parties agreed a contract by which the woman agreed to marry the man and to allow him $125 a week for pocket money on the condition that she should be entitled to get a divorce from him at any time by giving him two weeks' notice. Immediately after the marriage the man began to squander his allowance in a reckless manner and took to drinking, obtaining liquor on his wife's name, and she then gave him two weeks' notice, and when he did not leave her house, appealed to the courts to have him turned out. She was very much disappointed by finding out that the contract she had made was not valid in the eyes of the law.

COUNCIL OF SEVEN TO CONTROL MILITARY

VANCOUVER, B. C., May 7.—Sir Frederick Borden, minister of militia, will amend his militia bill so that a council of seven will have control of the Canadian military. This council will comprise four officers of the headquarters staff and three civilians, vice minister of militia, the deputy minister of militia and the accountant of the militia department.

CONTRIBUTES TO MINERS' FUND DENVER, May 7.—The quarterly report of the secretary of the Western Federation of Miners on contributions to the eight-hour fund shows that $39,749 has been added to the fund since the last report. This brings the total up to $106,033.

THE MAN OF IT—HIS EXTRAVAGANCE

Man is naturally extravagant; he is a spendthrift. If it were not for the wives of men they would eventually land in the poorhouse.

Woman is the household economist. Why, the man when he is single spends all and even more than he earns. The same man married will have a bank account.

Woman will deprive herself of all of the luxuries of life if she knows that she can afford only the mere necessities.

One dollar looks as large to a woman as $5 looks to man, and she will make it go as far.

When a woman spends a dollar she has something to show for it. A man spends many dollars with apparently no appreciation of the fact that the money is going.

A woman will walk six blocks to buy vegetables for a cent a peck cheaper than the vegetables selling at the corner grocery. A man buys the first peck of vegetables he sees, even if he knows he can buy just as good and cheaper two blocks farther on.

When a woman reads that there is a bargain sale in hand towels down town she goes and buys a supply. Ask a man to buy hand towels, he goes into the first dry goods store he sees and buys the first towel his eye rests on. It is too much bother to look about and try to save 10 cents or a quarter.

If a woman wants a certain thing she figures this way: "What will I have to go without if I buy it?" And she buys what she most needs.

A man's argument is this: "I want it," and he buys it.

CHILDREN'S WHITE APRONS

While her niece was visiting her, Mrs. Ted Terry gave a 12 o'clock breakfast for all the little girls of the neighborhood. They wore their everyday dresses and pretty white aprons. Most of the aprons were hemstitched above a deep hem around the bottom. And even the finest were trimmed with embroidery instead of lace. The little girls wore aprons with embroidery ruffles, and their dresses and aprons were longer than the older girls were.

Mrs. Terry prepared for the little people as carefully as she would have done for older guests. She had filled the porch with rubber balls, jumping ropes, toys and playthings of every description. And for breakfast she had everything that little people like—creamed potatoes, fried chick-

FOR APPETIZERS

Olive Sandwiches—Select olives that are stuffed with red peppers, chop fine, mix with cream cheese and spread on thin slices of buttered bread.

Fruit Cup—Any fruit, tart apples, pineapples, oranges, white grapes or bananas, may be grated, or merely cut in small pieces, thoroughly chilled and served at the beginning of a meal. Squeeze the juice of a lemon over sliced bananas for a pleasant change.

Grape Fruit—To serve grape fruit, cut in halves, then with a sharp knife loosen the pulp around edges, make a few cuts into the pulp, sugar and mix with a little lemon juice. This will satisfy the craving of one who is not able to eat and digest much food.

Grape Pulp—For an invalid or convalescent fever patient, select good white grapes, remove all seeds and then place the pulp on a tray until cold. Serve in a dainty glass. This will satisfy the craving of one who is not able to eat and digest much food.

Prunes—The much-abused prunes are excellent, particularly for breakfast. They should never be boiled fast, but should simmer for four or five hours with a little sliced lemon. Boiled rice served with prunes is very good.

Radishes—Wash thoroughly, but do not cut off the little green ends; cut the top of each radish across each way, so that the four corners will separate, making them look like little flowers. Serve cold and crisp.

Dainty Relish—On square crackers place a little shredded green lettuce, then a thin slice of neutchalet cheese with a drop of jelly or bar de luc on it, and around the edge of lettuce place drops of mayonnaise.

Fruit cocktails, like fruit cup, only thinner, can be made from all kinds of fruit juices and served with a cherry in each cup.

Creamed Cucumbers—Slice thin, let stand in salt water, drain and chill, then add pepper, vinegar and a tablespoonful of whipped cream to each slice dish.

Fried Apples—Put into a frying pan piece of butter size of an egg; fill pan with tart apples pared and quartered, then cover with sugar and fine bread crumbs. Simmer under cover until apples are tender, then brown. May be served with meat or as a dessert with cream.

JOLIET MAYOR IS INDICTED

JOLIET, Ill., May 7.—Mayor William E. Cridpus, three of his policemen and one citizen were indicted today for conspiracy. The policemen were held for alleged intimidation of voters. The case grows out of an election in the First ward. The mayor and the police officials are alleged to have interfered with a number of republican Italians, who, by arrest, threats or other means, were prevented from voting.

TWO KINDS OF OH! Zoltan Doehme, until further notice Mrs. Nordica's husband, has an amusing way of putting things, says the New York Times. On one occasion he was speaking of the vocalization of the well-known singer, Van Dyck, and professional leniency vanished in critical sarcasm: "With most tenors they sing along an' sing alone, an' once in a while they strike a false note, an' you say, 'Oh!' (Mr. Doehme frowned and winced). 'But with M. Van Dyck he sing along an' sing alone, an' once in a while he strike a true note, an' you say 'Oh!'"

And Mr. Doehme's smile of pleased surprise called forth a round of laughter.

The earliest spur known consisted of a sharp rod mounted on a base to fasten about the heel. Antiquarians place its date at from 800 to 100 B. C.

For a new variety of raspberry it is claimed that it not only fruits all the year round, but that its flavor resembles a combination of the raspberry and strawberry.

RUSSIAN GRENADIER

The grenadiers of Napoleon's day were foot soldiers whose duty it was to hurl hand grenades. In the Russian army the grenadier is a mounted soldier armed with sabre and carbine. During the summer months he wears a steel helmet surmounted by a heavy black plume, and in the winter an astrakhan cap.

There are in use in the United States 1,400,000 miles of telegraph wires.

The Seventy-first regiment, Virginia volunteer infantry, with 500 officers and men, will camp at the World's Fair August 1 to 10, inclusive.

F. Marion Crawford, the novelist, has gone to Italy, and in his Italian home will revise his biography of Pope Leo XIII.

King Edward has set his face against long dinners of numerous courses, and declared war on dinners of more than six courses.

SOUTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION

The annual meeting of the Southern Baptist convention will be held in Nashville, May 12 to 18, 1904. For this occasion the LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD will sell round trip tickets to Nashville at ONE FARE plus 25 cents for the round trip, tickets being on sale May 10, 11 and 12, 1904. These tickets will be limited for return ten (10) days from date of sale, but an extension until June 6 can be secured by depositing tickets with the joint agent at Nashville and upon payment of 50 cents. From Texas points rate will be ONE-FARE plus $2.25 for the round trip, dates of sale May 8, 9 and 10. Same rate will be in effect from Arkansas, Indiana, Territory and Oklahoma; dates of sale May 8, 9 and 10. Rates, time tables and full information can be secured from

PENED IN BY FOREST FIRE

CUMBERLAND, Md., May 7.—Ten families were penned in by a forest fire which is raging nine miles west of Prorhote, on the side of the mountain, and it is feared they may perish unless the fire is got under control. The fire started yesterday in the underbrush, which at that point is very dense, and it was not noticed until it had spread over a mile of territory. A dead fall was constructed and it was believed that it had been checked, but early today the flames jumped the plowed ground with almost railroad speed. All the farmers in the vicinity joined forces and they are working heroically to save their homes. Miles of fences have already been destroyed, while five saw mills and a large quantity of valuable timber have gone up in smoke. Help has been sent from here.

CHESS GAMES AT CAMBRIDGE SPRINGS

CAMBRIDGE SPRINGS, Pa., May 7.—The two consolation games with the subject of the rice gambling as played today between Miss, Lasker, Showler and Bray against Delmar, Fichman, Napier and Lawrence, on the one side and Tschigorin, Sculcher, Janowski and Fox against Marco, Pillsbury, Marshall and Hodges on the other side were both won by White, the first named on the tie limit rule after 13 moves and the second after 41 moves. In both games the 10 B. B. variation was played.

MAHER COULD NOT KNOCK OUT GRIM

PHILADELPHIA, May 7.—The rejuvenated Peter Maher, the Chicago champion, attempted to knock out Joe Grim, the Italian champion, within six rounds at the National A. C. club tonight and failed. The human punching bag, as Grim is known, came near going in the second round but the bell saved him and he came up fresh for the third. Although pounded and slugged with all the force the husky Irishman could command, the Italian stayed the limit and maintained his reputation as the hardest man to knock out in the ring.

FAT SUM AWARDED FOR DAMAGES BY CAR

BEAUMONT, Texas, May 7.—R. W. Scott was awarded damages of $2,500 this afternoon in the district court against the Beaumont Traction Company for injuries received last winter in a street car collision.

SPINDLE TOP STILL IN THE OIL BUSINESS

BEAUMONT, Texas, May 7.—That Spindle Top is still in the oil business was proven this afternoon when D. R. Beatty brought in a 500-barrel well in what is known as the Trembley tract. There is quite a good deal of drilling going on around the hill.

BILLY BURKE IN A FAST CONTEST

CHICAGO, May 7.—Billy Burke, of this city, and Harry Berger of Trenton, met in a fierce six round draw at the Richmond Academy here tonight. The bout was a fast one, with honors so evenly divided that a draw could have been the only decision.

JESSIE MARTIN DIES EARLY THIS MORNING

Died, at 1:15 o'clock this morning, Jessie Ann Martin, aged 13 years, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Martin. The deceased had been ill for four weeks with typhoid fever and death resulted early this morning, after a long struggle with the disease. The funeral arrangements are not complete, but it is not expected it will occur before Monday afternoon. The death occurred at the family residence, corner of Crump and Seventeenth streets. The delay in the funeral is to give relatives time to arrive from distant points.

There are more than a dozen business women in Chicago enjoying incomes of from $3,000 to $10,000 a year resulting from their own enterprise, prompted and managed by themselves.

THIRD BATTLE OF BULL RUN

General Corbin Will This Time Try to Improve Strategy of Stonewall Jackson

NEW YORK, May 7.—Major General Corbin will fight the third battle of Bull Run. The general staff of the army is now engaged upon improving the strategy of General "Stonewall" Jackson in what is regarded by military strategists as the most masterly campaign of the civil war. From Fortland, Me., which never came nearer to war than seeing in the offing Spanish fleets which never existed, the army maneuvers will be transferred this year to Manassas, Va., which still bears the marks of the heavy blows dealt by blue and gray forty-two years ago. For the first time an opportunity will be afforded for effective comparisons between the old army which fought and the new army which is being trained to fight. Can the modern armament and the methods of transportation which have developed forty years from the days when Pope and Lee raced from their respective bases to the battle ground change the result of their maneuvers? Twenty-two thousand modern soldiers will be used to test the powers of the ancient armies of the rebellion and prove what would have happened had the commanders whose names made history possessed Krag-Jorgensen rifles, Dougherty wagons and the

LITTLE CHANGE IN FIELD

It is probable that no field in any of the great southern conflicts could have been selected which has suffered so little change as the low lying land in the valley of Northern Virginia between Thoroughfare Gap and the Potomac. There have been few alterations in the general make up and characteristics of Manassas since the rear guard of General Pope's army fell back to Washington. Railroad lines and roads which afforded the old combatants their only methods of transportation other than that afforded by the country roads have not changed. The lines shown upon the map of 1862 are still unchanged, except that upon what was the left flank of the northern army there has been constructed a road between Alexandria and Fredericksburg, and a line across what was the base of the southern army from Fredericksburg to Charlottesville. These latter lines would so materially have affected the operations of the civil war that it is probable, if the general staff follows its plans of reproducing the campaign of 1862, they will be barred by the umpire.

FAMILY CARRIAGE WRECKED BY TRAIN

NORRISTOWN, Pa., May 7.—A passenger express tonight demolished the carriage of Frederick Selser of Philadelphia on a grade crossing. With Selser was his wife and two children, Gertrude, aged 3, and Marion, aged 18 months. Gertrude was instantly killed. The father had a leg broken, the mother's head was badly gashed, but the baby, who was torn from the mother's arms and thrown upon an embankment, was unharmed. The dead child and the parents were brought here.

ABANDON FIVE MEN TO HORRIBLE FATE

SHAMOKIN, Pa., May 7.—The Reading railway officials gave up all hope tonight of finding the five men alive who are entombed in the burning Locust Gap slope, and their whole attention is now being turned to extinguishing the fire. It may take weeks.

Thurber Journal: P. S. Wilson of Victor, Colo., has been here several days in the interest of the Western Federation of Miners. He comes duly accredited to solicit aid for the unemployed miners of Colorado. Local No. 2538, U. M. W. of A., at its last meeting donated $500 to-

PHYSICIANS' STRIKE FINALLY SETTLED

LEIPSI, May 7.—The strike of the physicians of the town which has continued for three months is finally settled. The compromise is a complete victory for the strikers. The strike was caused by a reduction by the municipality of the tariff which the physicians are permitted to charge. The physicians banded together and agreed not to attend any case until the old tariff was restored. This agreement was generally observed with the result that many persons have died of neglect.

PRESIDENT SIGNS FOR CANAL PAYMENT

WASHINGTON, May 7.—The president at 3:30 signed the warrant for $40,000,000 for the Panama canal. There were present at the time a large crowd of spectators, including all the assistant secretaries, a number of clerks, chiefs of divisions, and a number of newspaper men. The official photographer of the treasury was present and took pictures of the historic scene. The present Trinity church at the head of Wall street, New York, is the third edifice of that name, the two preceding structures erected upon the same ground having been burned.

WE WILL CHOOSE COUNCIL FROM BEST HUNTERS

WHAT WILL PROBABLY BE THE LAST INDIAN BUFFALO HUNT, SCHEDULED FOR TODAY

BLISS, Okla., May 7.—The last buffalo drive by blanket Indians will be held here tomorrow. The occasion will mark the inauguration of Horse Chief as ruler of the Poncas, a tribe which has maintained unbroken its peace with the white man and has preserved its race peculiarities and purity of blood.

While all ceremonies of the Poncas are unusually impressive, the spectacle on May 8 will be the most elaborate and the last of its kind, for the last tribe of Indians may disintegrate before Horse Chief's little son succeeds his father, as Horse Chief now succeeds White Eagle, his sire.

Nearly 2,000 Indians will be present. The Poncas will be feathered, painted and bedecked in their gorgeous blankets, and will be the hosts of the occasion.

Ponca custom requires that the incoming chief shall select his council from the most skilled buffalo hunters. When White Eagle assumed office, thirty-eight years ago, the prairies were filled with buffalo and the precedent was maintained. But conditions have changed, and young Horse Chief was in dire straits to preserve the traditions of his fathers. Finally J. C. Miller, owner of a large ranch, offered to furnish the buffaloes and a place to hunt them, and joy reigned in the Ponca tepees.

Miller purchased three of the last buffaloes for the drive. Skill in hunting these will determine the next council of ten of the Ponca tribe.

A sixty-acre arena has been inclosed in cattle-proof wire fence. Instead of killing the animals with bow and arrow lance and knife, the Indians will drive them into corral, and after this has been accomplished Horse Chief will announce his selections.

The Indians have acquiesced in Miller's plan to have white people as spectators and a row of seats will inclose the field. A general exhibition of rounding up and branding cattle riding, roping, shooting and of other accomplishments, past and present, of life on the plains will be given.

Horse Chief was selected chief at a sun dance a year ago with all the world ceremony of Indian custom.

The custom of selecting the council from the most skilled hunters dates back to the days when the Indian who could bring in the biggest amount of buffalo meat was the best man.

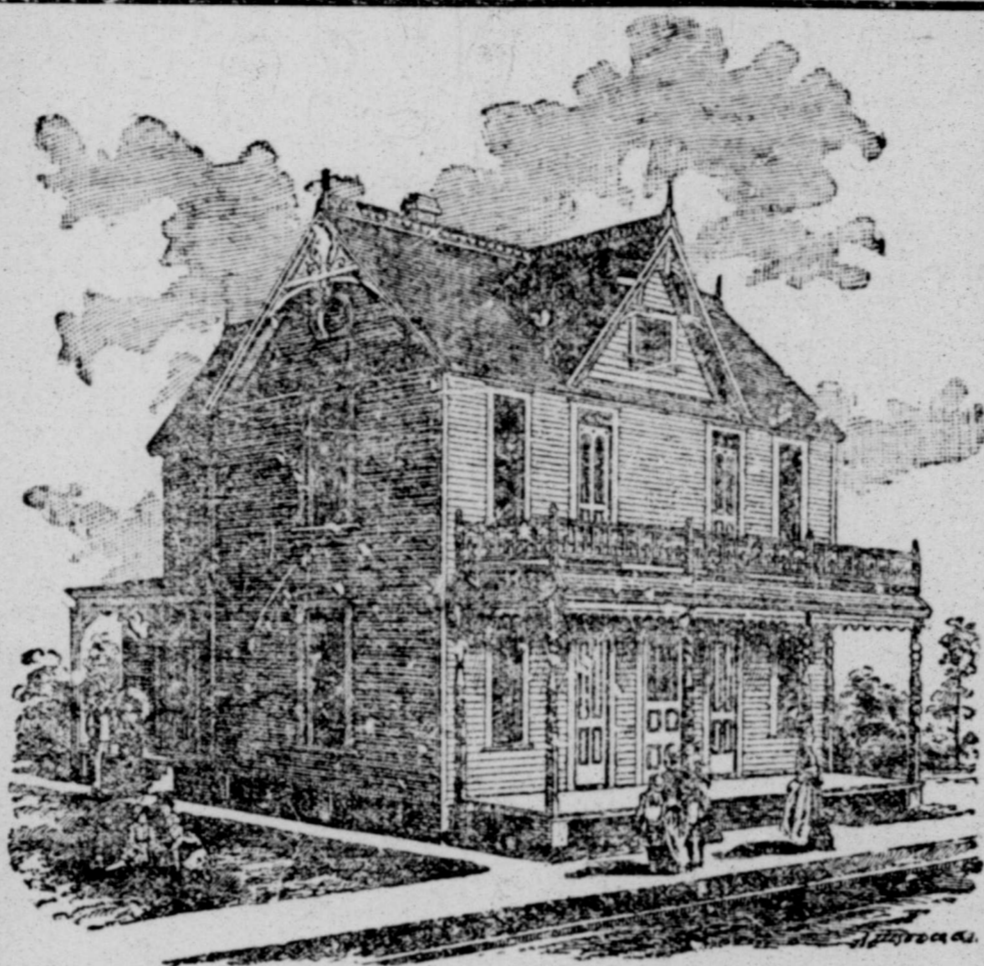

His achievement was an indication of superior strength and skill with bow and lance.

The Ponca invitations have gone to the Osages, Pawnees, Kaws, Tonkawas, Otoes, Missouris, Cheyennes and Arapahoes. The Poncas are now making their bows and arrows and spears for the celebration. The young braves are unskilled in their use, and old warriors like White Eagle, Red Leaf, McDonald, Iron Thunder, Standing Bear and William-Raises-the-Other, by turns laugh at and upbraid them for their clumsiness.

Horse Chief is elected for life. Should he live as long as his father has, he will be the last chief of the tribe, and his cute little copper-skinned infant son, Hairy Back, will never be the central figure of a sun dance or select his council by a buffalo hunt. The tribe will be scattered to the winds, probably, before he comes of age, and the buffalo will be a memory.

Watch North Fort Worth Grow!

Among the most gigantic enterprises of the present age are the packing houses for slaughtering and curing of meat. They have hundreds of millions of capital and employ tens of thousands of workers. Wherever they have gone they have built cities. The packing house district of Chicago has 100,000 people dependent upon the packing house industry. Kansas City has 50,000 in the same employment. Omaha and East St. Louis has 30,000 each, and South St. Joseph has 20,000. These are conservative figures. The acknowledged chiefs of the packing industry are Armour & Co., and Swift & Co. Each has unlimited money to carry out their undertakings, and the necessary experience and skill to make their plans a success. Two years ago these great packers came to North Fort Worth and built the most complete packing plants in the United States—not the largest, but the most complete. They have been in business there about a year. The first year's operation showed receipts there of 446,000 cattle, 150,000 hogs and 125,000 sheep. The first year's business of these stock yards was far larger than the first year's business at Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha or any other place. The country immediately tributary to the Fort Worth packing houses contains one-fourth of all the cattle in the United States. It also contains a large proportion of the hogs and sheep. Where one or two packing houses succeed, others will come, for the conditions that make success with one will make success with others. Nelson Morris, Cudahy, S. & S.—it is certain that they are coming. Every business man in Fort Worth knows this. One of the largest packers in Chicago has said that in ten years Fort Worth will be the largest packing center in the United States next to Chicago. Consider these facts and figures and think what lots in North Fort Worth will be worth then.

George Melkey has consented to act as trustee, and all money received from the sale of these lots will be put in his care, to guarantee the carrying out of the agreement.

FARVIEW

Is only a few blocks northwest of the Armour and Swift packing houses. It is the prettiest location surrounding North Fort Worth. It is high and well drained. The price is low for the value of the lots. Others near by and worth no more are selling at $250 to $400 apiece. These lots are 50x140 feet each. Every lot fronts a 60-foot street and runs back to a 20-foot alley.

The Price of Each Lot is Only $150.00

Payable $10.00 cash, remainder in monthly installments of $10.00. Though a large number of lots have been sold, purchasers who buy now have as good an opportunity of getting the choice lots as those who bought earlier. BUYERS CANNOT PICK OUT LOTS—All lots will be distributed by a plan agreed on and satisfactory to the buyers.

NO INTEREST! NO TAXES FOR TWO YEARS!

$7,500 GIVEN AWAY TO PURCHASERS

There are sixty-one gifts to be distributed among the purchasers of 300 lots. One purchaser in every five will receive a gift of $75, $150 or $1,500.

THESE PRESENTS CONSIST OF

- 1 six-room, two-story house worth..... $1,500
- 20 lots, worth $150 each..... $3,000
- 40 gifts in gold, $75 each..... $3,000

Total..... $7,500

Every purchaser receives a certificate that entitles him to share in the distribution of gifts aggregating $7,500 in value. These will be given away absolutely free.

FIFTY YEARS' SERVICE ENDS IN CRIMINAL COURT

The Trial of Ex-Postmaster General Tyner at Washington a High Tragedy—Broken in Health, He Is Borne Into the Court in an Invalid Chair—His Ministering Wife

A smile expresses his appreciation. "For better or for worse," the minister said when they were wedded long years ago. That was in Grant's time when Tyner was postmaster general and his wife a clerk in the department.

It all seemed "for better" then. Now in the twilight of life they are in a criminal court. True to her vow his wife is at his side just as in the bright days.

Like a ministering angel she comforts him while the heavy hand of the government that he has served for nearly fifty years is raised against him and life seems black and desolate.

Her devotion helps the rugged spirit of the old man to assert itself. He tries to shake off his helplessness and to speak with a strong voice.

It shows a brave spirit, but his affliction holds him fast. The best he can do is to declare in a resolute way his ability to withstand the trial.

"I am 78 years old," he said a few days ago in a husky voice and an effort to be cheerful, even facetious, "but except for this paralysis I am a spring chicken yet."

It is feared that when Tyner is called upon to testify he will find it a trying ordeal.

ANNIVERSARY

Tuesday, May 31, has been designated by Governor Mickey of Nebraska as the day for the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Kansas-Nebraska territorial bill. The bill was signed by President Pierce on May 30, 1854, but as that date is Memorial Day Governor Mickey has thought it proper to delay the intended celebration for one day.

By Jacob Waldeck

WASHINGTON, May 7.—There has been high tragedy in the great dingy criminal court in the district building.

There have been trials that challenged the attention of the entire country because of the prominence of the persons arraigned, the magnitude of the crimes charged or the sensational details. Never, though, has a more dramatic spectacle been presented than is the trial of James N. Tyner, former attorney general of the postoffice department.

Giltspur was tried and convicted in the bare, dismal room where the government arraigns offenders.

The star route trials occurred there. It was the scene of sensational proceedings a dozen years ago when half a dozen men were arraigned, and one of them sent to jail for refusing to disclose the sugar speculations engaged in by senators.

The disgraceful Breckenridge-Pollard affair was thrashed out in the old court of justice. Recently Machen and his associates in the postoffice scandal were convicted there.

Now there is presented the pathetic sight of a broken old man in an invalid chair as the prisoner at bar.

His arrival every day is a spectacle that rouses the sympathy of hundreds. A carriage drives up and the old man is tenderly lifted to a wheeled chair with a high back. It is carried up the steps and rolled to the court room. There he

MARSHALL FIELDS ADVICE TO HIS SALESMEN

All fixtures and property of the house should be treated with the greatest care; the first scratch paves the way for carelessness.

Each day should find us doing things better than previously. Acquire the habit of promptness in every matter, large or small, which is left to your care.

Know the value of a good personal appearance; do not think that any detail of your attire will escape notice.

Spend wisely your spare time; count every hour golden, every moment an opportunity; don't waste a minute at any time.

Avoid being influenced for the wrong by other persons; have a purpose of your own; weigh counsel, but act from your own best thought.

Cultivate a happy expression and a happy manner; feel it, mean it; the advantage is wonderful in every way.

Learn to ask such questions as will draw out the most profitable information.

Let every effort be toward the idea of permanence; do things to last; make the casual customer a permanent one through satisfaction.

Salesmanship may be made a profession, and receive the same degree of respect accorded to an artist of any class. Be emphatically unwilling to ask or receive favors from any person who expects a return in business favors.

The great majority of errors are made through carelessness. Learn to care; be exact; strive to have it absolutely right; making a mistake in business is like falling down in a foot race; it is a setback.

MEMORIAL DAY FOR SOLDIERS OBSERVED

Graves of 200 Departed Ones Who Wore the Gray Strewn With Flowers—Addresses in Honor of Their Valor

By the flow of the inland river. Where the fleets of iron have fled. Where the blades of the grave grass quiver. Asleep are the ranks of the dead. Under the sod and the dew. Waiting the judgment day—Under the laurel the blue. Under the garland the gray.

Yesterday was observed a Confederate memorial day, and the graves of nearly two hundred departed comrades were strewn with flowers.

Promptly at 10 o'clock Saturday morning Commander E. W. Taylor of R. E. Lee camp, United Confederate Veterans, called the meeting to order and Chaplain J. I. Wright of the camp offered a prayer.

Commander Taylor said this was a day made memorable by the Daughters of the Confederacy. He then called on Judge C. C. Cummings who delivered a ten minutes address. He said he was before the audience on restricted time to memorialize this of all days of the Southern Confederacy. This day had its origin soon after the war by the wives and daughters of the South. He said the day was also instituted by John A. Logan among the soldiers of the North. This is a custom that has been observed from time memorial.

The speaker enlarged on the question and referred to decoration day as observed during the early days of the world's history. "Long before the Christian era began it was the creed of those living to honor the dead. The work has been perpetuated. We are here to honor the dead, and it is our mission to keep green the graves of the old Southern heroes who fell in the defense of their country."

Chaplain J. I. Wright was the next speaker. "We have met to pay a tribute to the memory of our departed comrades," he said. "We must not forget to include in the observance of this day, our mothers and wives. It was through womanhood that men have attained the prominence they now occupy. Every good that has come to us has come through the motherhood of the Confederacy of the South. We have come to bedeck the graves with flowers emblematic of only that which is good. I am glad God Almighty has his grip upon humanity, through whose power we live and have our being. Comrades, while we scatter these emblems over the graves of the departed, we must not forget to do good to the living old soldiers. In the years to come this event will be referred to with great pleasure by those who follow us."

Commander W. R. Booth of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, was the next to address the meeting, in behalf of the sons. He eulogized the old veterans for giving to the sons and daughters this beautiful occasion, when we assemble to strew flowers over the graves of the departed. While this is a joyous occasion, it is necessarily a solemn one, and while we place these flowers over the resting places of the dead, we communicate with the departed as it were, and recall the sympathetic speech given up by those who do not and cherish the memory of the dead because he endured hardships for a principle which he believed to be right."

The speaker referred to matters which brought on the civil war. The same principle of right which dominated the South in war times, continues to predominate.

He said it is the duty of all to continue to work as did the dead comrade, who died in harness.

When Comrade Booth had concluded his address, the camp adjourned to the cemeteries where the graves were bedecked with flowers, of which there was a large profusion.

Flowers were placed on the graves of the following veterans:

VIM, VIGOR AND VIRILITY REGAINED!

How beautiful, how grand is Manly Strength and Vigor. Do you possess it? If not, you can.

Specialty work, in this progressive age of ours, is called for and demanded in almost every vocation. This is especially so when life or health is at stake. It is then that the best treatment that the medical profession affords is sought, and such treatment can only be secured from a physician who has concentrated his faculties on a single line of ills. Dr. Terrill is such a physician. He has given assiduous attention and limited his practice to Diseases of Men, such as

VARICOCELE, STRICTURE, NERVO-VITAL DEBILITY, PILES, FISTULA, CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON, HYDROCELE, URINARY AND BLADDER COMPLAINTS, CATARRH, EPILEPSY AND ALL NERVOUS DISEASES.

CONSULT HIM AT ONCE. Do not be deterred from seeking his advice because, after having been treated by many who failed to cure you, you have become discouraged. This is the very time that you should make one more trial. DO NOT DESPAIR, but write him today; it will cost you nothing, neither will it obligate you to commence treatment nor to continue correspondence.

BASEBALL, RACING NEWS AND SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

DALLAS ELKS' PLAYED WELL BUT NOT QUITE WELL ENOUGH

AFTER FIERCE COMBAT THEY GO DOWN TO DEFEAT AT HAINES BASEBALL PARK BY A SCORE OF 10 TO 8—THE EXHIBITION NOT SO ROTTEN AS IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN

"I wish I were an angel and with the angels stand. White raiment on my legs, a bat within my hand," only the small boy said: "I wish I was," as he watched the immaculate angelettes wind up the men of horns from down the Trinity to the tune of 10 to 8.

The gray uniform of the visitors mingled with the purple of the stockings when the game was over and the only hint of cheerfulness was the sunny hue of Harry Van Eaton's locks.

Umpire Goetz opened the hostilities. He appeared before the grand stand crowned with the insignia of his office, a pair of Elk horns. His impressive speech

Harry Van Eaton and Samuels. Here the Grays changed batteries. H. Van Eaton going into the box and Samuels behind the bat. Gilton was sent to right garden.

Casualties loomed threatening in the sixth. Safe hits by Cobb and Elkins, a base on balls to Littlejohn and Kolf getting a corn cutter. The result was four runs. Laird got his blow where Adam got shy and nothing came of it. Gilton, Petty and Van Eaton put a brighter hue to the outlook by making the trip home.

SAMUELS DIED AT FIRST.

was hurried into the ranks of the enemy amid the explosion of a thirteen-inch gun that was trained from a revolving turret on his quarter deck. The full disaster to the enemy was not discovered until the battle had been waged through several innings.

When the final smoke of battle was cleared away the victims of passed balls, hit by pitcher, wild throws, bases on balls and errors tallied ten runs for the Angelites and eight for the Grays.

THE BATTLE WAS FIERCE

The battle was fierce while it lasted. Elkin was chief gunner for seven innings and then Doc Frazeur lammed 'em out over the plate.

In the first Frazeur at third let Stange out easy on a throw to first.

Pitman got four which he refused on the advice of the umpire, advice also given to the next batter, Ferry. A wild pitch, a passed ball and an error of short sent both runners and H. Van Eaton across the plate. Samuels, a man of discretion, proved it by getting a runner who could run and steal a base when wanted. However, a tagging party given by Elkin sent him out of the game, and C. Van Eaton sailed in the blue to short. Sweet peace dwelt within the ranks of the Grays as the Angelites failed to connect.

In the second, however, the A—s began to set their minds to more useful occupation, that of flyings. Phillips scored on a fumble by short, giving him the right of way to first as a starter. Frazeur hit right and galloped along as Laird doubled to right. A hit that carried Elkin to second landed Frazeur and Laird on the right side of the count.

The Grays had hard luck in the third and shook their heads sadly as Samuels died at first.

Kolf followed Littlejohn's base on balls by a two-bagger and centered around the route a length to the good of the ball. A passed ball brought in Littlejohn and though Laird spat upon his hands and wiped them in the sand, the best he could do was to encourage the feathered industry—finally getting three strikes called on him.

C. Van Eaton got a safety and in trying to pilfer was nabbed.

Stange in the fifth hit under the pitcher and got second and then Pitman in trying to get a safety past second interfered with the umpire. The ball struck from the umpire's anatomy, not unlike an attack in the rear from an unfriendly hoof. Stange scored on hits by

SMATHERS PAYS WELL FOR LEONIDAS

MORRIS PARK RACE TRACK, NEW YORK, May 7.—Probably one of the largest sales of thoroughly bred racing horses took place here today. It was the disposal sale of the stable of the late William C. Whitney, and was patronized by all of the leading owners and trainers.

The bright particular star of the sale was the Hamburg colt, Leonidas, who ran second to Hamburg Belle in last year's futurity and who is regarded as the king of the three-year-old division. Before he was knocked down there was spirited rivalry between John J. Ryan, E. E. Smathers and Herman B. Duray. E. E. Smathers had the last word, and the colt was made a stable mate of the great McChesney on the payment of $16,000.

Reliable, a cracking good race horse, went to J. J. Ryan for $8,800; Hippocrates went to J. J. McDonald for $6,200; But Mask, a 2-year-old, went to Herman Du-

NATIONAL LEAGUE

BOSTON WASN'T GAME
National League Park, Chicago, May 7.—Boston had the winning lead over Chicago today, but Wilhelm could not hold the pace. In the seventh inning the Cubs gave him a gift, which spoiled his young ambitions. The game was closely contested all the way through and Chicago had to earn its victory. Kilgus' catching, some wonderful shortstop plays by Williams and the hitting of Kilgus and McCarty were features of Chicago's fore. Great catches by Geler, Tenney and Raymer kept Boston in the struggle. The score: R. H. E.

AMERICAN LEAGUE
WHITE SOCKS BEAT BROWNS
CHICAGO, May 7.—The White Socks won out at the finish from the St. Louis Browns today, after one of the most exciting games of the season. In the ninth inning, with the score 6 to 4 in favor of Chicago and two men out, Wallace and Hill hit safe and Jones drove the ball to deep left for a home run. When the White Socks came up, Davis went out. Donahue singled and Dunton followed suit. Sullivan then lifted the ball far into left and the game was won. Four pitchers were used and two of the Browns, Sudeen and Burkett, were run out of the game for jawing the umpire. The score: R. H. E.

Today will be a big day in Dallas for base ball fans for the Panthers and the Dallas team will do stunts and play a "double header" for the general amusement of the public and incidentally to "smash" each other.

ARMOURS VS. PEACOCKS TODAY
The Peacocks, nee retail clerks, and the Armours, the local amateur champions of last season, play their first game of the year at Haines Park at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Both teams consider their line-up this year as stronger than ever, and the rivalry for local honors promises the fans a fast and exciting game.

DON DOMO IS BEATEN AT WORTH

But Winner Is Compelled to Run Six Furlongs in 1:12 4-5 to Do It

WORTH TRACK, CHICAGO, May 7.—D. C. Hildreth's derby colt, Monastic, turned the tables on Don Domo, the "Silver Cyclone," today, but in doing so was forced to do the six furlongs in 1:12 4-5, which is by far the fastest race run at the meeting. Jockey Oliphant had waiting orders with the favorite and instead of going out in front as is his custom, Don Domo checked until the far turn was reached, where he cut loose, passed Alista, the pace-maker, and led by a head, turning for home. He looked a certain winner at the eight pole, but Henry brought Monastic up on the inside with a rush and catching Don Domo 100 yards from the wire, won, going away by a length to spare. Don Domo was an easy second, two and a half lengths in front of Alista, which beat the other three lengths.

George C. Bennett, the Memphis owner, cut loose a good colt in the second race in King's Trophy, which was backed from 15 to 1 down to 11 to 1 to beat Luzarion, the colt from the Cook stable, which was always the favorite at 11 to 10, backed from 13 to 10, and which was also beaten by M. H. Tycheber's Philanthropist, the son of the great race horse, Ornament. It was a sensational race that King's Trophy put up. He seems to be a notoriously slow beginner, but comes with a rush at the end which carried him today from sixth place to the front, getting up just in time to beat Philanthropist by a head. Luzarion was badly cut off in the stretch. He was hopelessly pocketed in the last eighth and was lucky to get third money by a head in the final strides from Dixie Lad.

STUTTERER SAVES BETTOR $400

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 7.—Stuttering, the only infirmity that besets Paul Lasch, a young Louisville man, who is something of a plunger, was the means yesterday of winning him $200, and saving him $400. He wanted to bet on Alice Lloyd in the second race, but he did not get to do it. Lasch caught bookmaker Ed Alvey's eye and began to stutter. He wanted to bet $400 on Alice Lloyd. The next man in the rush said: "He is trying to place $400 on Mary Lasca, I believe." Alvey handed him a ticket for $3.20. Lasch tried to protest, but his tongue still failed him.

SHOOTS UNDER BED AND KILLS HER DOG

BELLEVILLE, Ill., May 7.—Mrs. Fred Eichler, upon retiring last night, for the first time in fifteen years, failed to lock under the bed. Mrs. Eichler leaped from the bed and rushed out of the house. A policeman ran to her and ventured into the room gun drawn and expectant. He found Mrs. Eichler's big Newfoundland dog dead under the bed with a bullet hole in his head.

KANGAROO TAIL IS EXPENSIVE

TAMAQUA, Pa., May 7.—The Nelson Theatrical Company, which recently toured the section, values a kangaroo's tail at $1.25 an inch. While the tail containing the company and its effects was being shipped on the Reading tracks here, a yard engine butted into the rear of it. The windows were broken and a piece of glass fell upon the tail of a performing kangaroo, severing four inches from the end.

A piece of property on Throckmorton street, between Sixth and Seventh streets, 75x100 feet, has been purchased for $10,000 and it is understood that a new owner will commence at once the erection of a three story building which will be occupied by a grocery house. These interested decline to give out the particulars of the building.

NEW RECORD FOR POLE VAULTING

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 7.—Ward C. McLanahan of Hillside, Pa., a member of the class of 1905 at Yale, established a new world's record at pole vaulting at the Yale field this afternoon, clearing the bar at twenty feet from the ground. McLanahan's record was not made during the competition in the Yale-Princeton dual meet, but he was the winner in the event, his vault equalling the Yale record at eleven feet, eight and one-half inches. His jump for the record was an exhibition after the finish of the events, and was made in the presence of the judges. The record was held by W. G. Clapp, Yale, and was made in Chicago in 1891. This was eleven feet, ten and one-half inches.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

The first meeting of the new convention year of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held in St. Paul's Methodist church at 11 a. m. today. The pastor, Rev. J. F. Boyce is traveling in the holy land, and by request Mrs. Stoddard has consented to occupy his pulpit and deliver a temperance address.

Tonight the second meeting of the year will be held in St. Paul's church, Mrs. Stoddard presiding. Mrs. Weaver will tell the people about the "Scientific Temperance Instruction Law," dwelling particularly on the books recently published by the committee of fifty for the purpose of breaking down the S. T. I. law in the United States. Mrs. Purinton, state superintendent of the purity department, will read a paper on "Purity," not only in the thoughts, words and deeds of lives, but purity in literature and in art. As these meetings will be held at the regular hours for church services large audiences are expected.

The arrangements for the state convention at Wills Point are nearing completion. The delegates will leave Fort Worth on the Texas and Pacific in time to be present at the opening of the convention at 9 a. m. Thursday. The executive committee will meet in the new auditorium in Wills Point at 2 p. m. May 11.

The L. T. L. will hold their regular meeting this afternoon at 3 p. m., at the home of Mrs. D. L. Weaver on Hemphill street.

Friday at 3:30 p. m. the Woman's Christian Temperance Union met in the First Christian church, and after devotional exercises, elected officers as follows: President, Mrs. R. B. Bishop; recording secretary, re-elected, Mrs. C. B. Van Horn; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Eunice Carter; treasurer, Mrs. Nellie Moore.

The following vice presidents for the churches were also chosen: First Methodist, Mrs. D. L. Weaver; St. Paul's Methodist, Mrs. Ada L. Austin; First Baptist, Mrs. Annie Walton; Tabernacle, Mrs. Belle Gaines; Congregational, Mrs. Carrie Post; Cumberland Presbyterian, Mrs. W. W. Purinton; First Christian, Mrs. L. Clough; and Broadway Presbyterian, Mrs. Nye.

Mrs. Austin, treasurer, read her report for the year. This was considered very satisfactory, the union having raised for all purposes over $600, all indebtedness being paid, all pledges met, delegates to the state convention elected.

Mrs. Carrie Faxon will deliver a lecture May 10 on the conditions of affairs in the Philippines, at the Tabernacle Christian church. The various missionary societies of the churches are co-operating with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and a large audience is expected. Mrs. Faxon was sent out from the Fort Worth national convention to the Philippines, and was there nearly two years.

You Take No Chances on Our Clothing

Did you ever stop to think that in clothing buying it is well to have a house that will stand back of every sale; that will say, money back if not dependable—and on the other hand, how you are taking all the chances with absolutely no redress, when you trade here and there indiscriminately with stores which lose all interest in you and your purchase the moment you part with the price. The strongest point in the up-building of this great business is—if your purchase isn't what we say, WE stand the loss.
$10.00,
$12.50,
$15.00.
These are the lines you can pin your faith to—each one the identical quality every store that handles good clothing will ask from $3.00 to $5.00 more. The tailoring in every detail could not be bettered at any price—the fabrics are selected as carefully as the tailoring is inspected. Whether your selection is from the $10.00, $12.50 or $15.00 line, there is satisfaction of the most lasting kind awaiting you.

RIVERSIDE FOR SURGEASE OF SORROW

Life Worth Living in That Delightful Suburb These Days
When Nature and Man Are at Their Best

People who live in Riverside are progressive and enterprising. Nearly everybody owns his own home. Very few are renters there. The homes are neat and cozy and have an appearance of prosperity and comfort that one does not always find in a city the size of Fort Worth. Each house is surrounded with a plot of ground from two to ten acres. This ground is planted with fruit trees, vegetables and grape vines and berry bushes. Most of the residents are gardeners who raise truck for the Fort Worth market. This year they have raised exceptionally large crops and have succeeded in disposing of their vegetables, which were ready for market, at very fair prices. The fields after the close of the work are at their best. It has been a field for several days to keep the weeds down and all kinds of vegetables have been ready for market. Riverside was one of the best places in the state for the people who have been so successful in their efforts to make their homes a great deal more comfortable than they were before. and turnips and eats the center from them, entering the vegetables at the stem of the leaf.
The soil at and near Riverside is the finest in Tarrant county for the raising of green goods. This soil varies from a sandy loam to a black loam. Very few rocks are to be found to turn the plow point or to impede the growth of the seeds.
The public roads running through the suburb are gravelled and in fine condition. The Riversideites are beginning to select names for these roads and expect soon to have each one of them named. Mail is delivered to the people by rural free delivery. The mail box decorates the front fence all along the road. There is an excellent water supply close to the surface. These people at Riverside have nearly all the advantages of city life with the many enjoyments of rural country. They are having the advantage of fresh air, vegetables and poultry and a whole lot of the little joys to build good homes and to pay their bills and expenses. They, too, who have a good school to attend with good teachers. They live only a few miles from the city with a good road to drive over. ALL READY NOW FOR SECOND NUMBER

Another Splendid List of the World's Fair Views Ready Tomorrow — All Features Covered in the Series

With the issue of Portfolio No. 2 which will be ready for our readers tomorrow morning, the great distribution may be considered fairly under way. The demand from the West was so great that the second issue was ready to go to press before the first issue had been out for a week. The series is thus doubly official and will afford the only authentic pictorial and descriptive record of the event. It will afford infinite entertainment and amusement for every member of the family and no household should fail to possess the work, especially as it can be secured practically free, the only charge being the nominal sum of 10 cents, to cover cost of handling, wrapping, mailing, etc. The series is thus doubly official and will afford the only authentic pictorial and descriptive record of the event. received a tremendous impetus, as everyone who saw the pictures at once realized the exceptional opportunity which was being offered to secure a beautiful pictorial and descriptive record of the great Louisiana Purchase Exposition, on terms so easy as to make it almost reprehensible not to take advantage of the offer.
As a consequence, coupons came pouring in from out of town readers and hundreds of city folks have visited our portfolio department to secure the views.
Portfolio No. 2 presents in the highest style of art, reproductions of the following photographs:
"New Jersey Building," "The Protest of the Sioux," "The Galveston Flood," "Canada Building," "United States Government Building," "Why 'The Forest City,'" "The Plaza of St. Anthony," "Louisiana Building," "General View Embracing Palaces of Electricity, Manufactures and Education," "Palace of Mines and Metallurgy," "Chinese Building," "North Front Palace of Manufacturers," "The Japanese Commission," "Waterway Promenade," "Facade and Lawn."

RECORDS FALL BEFORE VASSAR ATHLETES
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., May 7.—Four new records were made at the annual field day games at Vassar field today. In the fifty-yard dash Fanny James of Kansas City, Mo., covered the distance in six and one-fifth seconds, and a short time later ran one hundred yards in thirteen seconds. Helen C. Babson of Gloucester, Mass., in the running high jump, made a new record of four feet two and one-half inches, while Alice H. Belding of Poughkeepsie did the baseball throw distance to 155 feet 3 inches.

REMARKS OF PRESIDENTS OF COTTON CROPS

President of Texas Growers' Association Says Next Convention Will Be the Largest Ever Held in This State

Colonel E. S. Peters of Calvert, Texas, president of the Texas Cotton Growers' Protective Association, was in the city last night on a business trip and had a conference with Oswald Wilson, statistical agent of the department of agriculture.

In addition to having mutual interests, as one is a cotton grower and the other is a government agent to gather statistics, these gentlemen are interested together in the Pan-American Mining and Smelting Company, which is operating in the State of Chihuahua, Republic of Mexico.

Colonel Peters came here to confer with Mr. Wilson regarding the coming meeting of the cotton growers to be held in July at College Station, and also to talk of the mining prospects. Mr. Wilson will go next week to Guadalupe y Calvo, to look at some of the prospects, and he wired Colonel Peters to join him here and accompany him on the trip.

The Texas crop was discussed to some extent by the gentlemen, and try as he would, the reporter for The Telegram could not induce either one to say anything about the acreage, as they understood it to be. Colonel Peters talked freely of the conditions in the Brazos Valley, however, and says that plenty of rain has fallen and prospects are good, but that the weevil is showing up. "There are ten weevils to a stalk of cotton," he said.

"What are you doing with them," he was asked. "Putting on Paris Green in an effort to poison them," was his reply. "The weevil is plentiful and is going to damage the crop, but we will save all we can." CONVENTION OF COTTON GROWERS. Passing from that, Colonel Peters called attention to the convention of cotton growers which is to be held in College Station July 5-8.

"There will be between 1,200 and 1,600 people at the meeting this year," he said. "We are satisfied of a greater attendance than ever before and every preparation is being made to entertain them. President Houston of the college is preparing places for all who will come and we expect to accomplish a great deal. The proceedings of the convention this year will be most interesting than ever before. The full program has not been prepared, but we know that we will have a talk by Dr. S. A. Knapp on 'Government Work in Texas,' one by George W. Curtis on 'The Demonstration Farm,' one by W. B. Hunter on 'The Soil and the Cotton,' one by L. A. Quantan on 'The Bell Worm,' a talk by A. W. Elson on 'Improvement in the Cotton Plant,' one by Professor Miles on 'Root Rot,' and an illustrated lecture by E. Dwight Sanders, state entomologist. President David Francis Houston of the Agricultural and Mechanical College will also address the convention."

Colonel Peters states also that when the convention meets arrangements have been made that the mess hall will be a continuous performance. In other words, meals will be served all day from 6 a. m. so that every one attending can get what he wants and when he wants it.

they also captured a large quantity of rolling stock.

ACCIDENTS BEFALL ADMIRAL SKRYDLOFF

MOSCOW, May 7.—The superstitious Russians, and they form the great mass of the Russian people, are greatly troubled by a series of minor accidents that have befallen Admiral Skrydloff since he was named as the successor of Admiral Makaroff, after the latter was killed. During the admiral's triumphant march through the streets of Moscow prior to his departure for St. Petersburg, he lost his hat, which was blown out of the window of the carriage. As he started to enter the train his hand was jammed by the car door blowing shut on it, and he was painfully hurt. Shortly afterward he smashed his eye glasses, and to cap the climax, when he tried to open his dress box, he discovered that he had lost his keys. The publication of this list of accidents has led to the belief that the admiral is not likely to be much more successful in his operations against the Japanese than was the unfortunate Makaroff.

SUBMARINES BEING BUILT AT PORT ARTHUR

BERLIN, May 7.—According to a naval engineer attached to the Russian embassy in this city submarines are being built at Port Arthur. By this means Russia hopes to restore the balance of marine power in its favor. Admiral Skrydloff ordered the completion of the boats to be rushed that he might assume the offensive immediately on his arrival. The investment of the fortress is likely to change these plans. It is said that the bottling of the harbor will not interfere with the operations of the submarines. Despite Admiral Alexeff's official report that the Petropavlovsk was blown up by a Japanese mine, the Russians assert positively that a submarine did Eruptions Dry, itchy, watery, all forms of eczema, salt rheum, pimples and other cutaneous eruptions proceed from humors, either inherited, or acquired through defective digestion and assimilation.

To treat these eruptions with drying medicines is dangerous. The thing to do is to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Which thoroughly cleanse the blood, expelling all humors and building up the whole system. They cure Hood's Sarsaparilla permanently cured J. G. Hines, Franks, Ill., of eczema, from which he had suffered for some time; and Miss Alvinia Wolter, Box 212, Algona, Wis., of pimples on her face and back and chafed skin on her body, by which she had been greatly troubled. There are more testimonials in favor of Hood's than can be published.

Hood's Sarsaparilla promises to cure and keeps the promise.

the work. This is why they are so anxious to provide themselves with similar means of offense.

INTEREST IN LONDON LONDON, May 7.—Interest prevails here as to what course the Japanese will pursue with regard to Port Arthur. Will it be a simple investment and siege or a bombardment followed by assault? The question is answered in all possible ways, even in the most competent quarters. The Mikado's representative in London adheres to the opinion often enunciated that the fortress will be invested and used as a bait to lure the Russians to sea. Nevertheless circumstances may dictate a different course.

For political considerations the Japanese must act quickly if they wish to float a large loan. The fall of Port Arthur, together with other dramatic triumphs would immensely facilitate such a transaction. Once the war chest is well filled the Tokyo authorities face what they expect will be an arduous campaign with more confidence than at present.

Perhaps the strongest motive including the Japanese in the operations against Port Arthur are from the growing unrest in China and the consequent menace of a movement that might cause a general scramble in which Japan's most cherished plans would come to naught.

The Japanese might discover that there are not enough soldiers and sailors left in the stronghold to attempt relieving operations; or that the place is so generously victualled that starvation would come too late, or that the total number of the czar's mobile troops in Manchuria is not sufficiently large to make it impossible for the Mikado's army to play any part in the plan of campaign. It is certain that the Russian performance at the Yalu has augmented the influence of the party in Tokyo that favors European haughty aggressive action all along the line.

A BUSINESS SCOOP Fort Worth Concern Makes the Largest Single Purchase Ever Effected by a Texas Retailer

A few more packing houses, a few more buildings in the Fort Worth National bank, and especially a few more business strokes similar to a big clothing deal closed in New York a few days since, and the notion, prevalent in the city east that Fort Worth is still a frontier burg will be effectually dispelled.

The eyes of the whole country are upon this town. Those of us at home are unable to appreciate the enchantment that distance alone can lend. This town is a ten-time winner, because its business men are winners. This fact was made apparent on a day during the last of April, when a Fort Worth clothing man quietly dropped into New York and bought for the first time a small matter of 5,000 suits of the finest clothing ever shipped into the state of Texas. This sale was made the largest single purchase of exclusively high-class suits ever effected by a Fort Worth concern.

The thing came about in this way. All August, a member of a local business concern, received a quiet tip from his firm's New York representative that weather conditions were such in the north and east that spring would not materialize, or rather that it would materialize in summer, and leave two of the large fashionable manufacturers very much overstocked. Mr. August took the hint, made a record-breaking trip to the matter of time, and, judging from the talk of clothing people, a record-breaking triumph in the clothing trade. It's what would be called a ten-time winner when it occurred in the newspaper life. When he saw the chance, he said: "Fort Worth can use that stuff, I'll take it all."

The suits purchased in this big deal are mostly of imported fabrics and are all the finest products of the world's best looms. There are two or three merchants in a town east of Fort Worth who think themselves big buyers, but since this Fort Worth deal they will probably be able to appreciate the feelings of the Dallas Elks after yesterday's baseball game.

CONNER TELLS OF MATAGORDA OIL FIELDS

Fort Worth Man Has Been at Scene of the New Strike in the Coast Country—Many Derricks Are Up

C. W. Conner of this city has returned from the Matagorda oil fields and speaks in highest terms of the oil prospects there. A number of wells have been started and oil derricks are being erected all over the field. A townsite company has been organized and a postoffice is to be established at once. "The town is to be called Big Hill."

The Griffith well, which is down to 850 feet, came in unexpectedly and blew out fourteen barrels, or over 550 feet of pipe. The wells seem to have considerable salt water in them, as well as gas, and this has handicapped the working of them. Bushing of the four-inch size has been used to overcome the rising of salt water in the six-inch pipes.

Wednesday night the storm blew down the derricks of all but two of the wells. It was very severe all along the coast, and did much damage. The property there is selling fast and all the larger oil concerns have representatives snatching up leases and land. These derricks are in proven territory and the wells are already showing good results. The Santa Fe and Drillers Oil Companies are in wild-cat territory, but prospects are good for them. The Santa Fe is down 1,240 feet. Nearly a dozen more wells will be started within the next thirty days, and the field will then be at its best.

Dr. Griffith, one of the best authorities on oil wells in the south, estimates that the prospects are as good at Matagorda as are to be found in the state. The oil is of the same grade as that found at Sour Lake and Beaumont. One of the Matagorda peninsula prospectors have found what the natives term sea wax or asphaltum in paying quantities, as well as gas. The prospects in this field are reported very good. A number of Fort Worth citizens have already made investments there.

NORTH SIDE AND ROSEN HEIGHTS Arrangements Made for City Council to Meet at Marine in the Future

Nash Furniture Company. Before the time of the next regular meeting of the North Fort Worth city council, arrangements will be made to have that body hold its meetings in Marine instead of at the Exchange building, as heretofore. At present every alderman, with the mayor, resides in Marine, and it is a convenience to both the democratic body and the spectators who attend the meetings. If a suitable place can not be had in Marine the council will arrange for a regular room in the Exchange building, where they can have access to the vaults for keeping the books of the city secretary, tax collectors and assessor.

NORTH SIDE NOTES AND PERSONAL. At All Saints' Catholic church today morning will be celebrated at 10:30, with the benediction and sermon at the regular time in the evening. The evening service will be a discussion of the Virgin Mary. At the regular meeting of the Knights of Pythias Friday night, S. C. Skidmore was initiated to the rank of equite. Farther than the routine no other business was done. Judge J. G. Smith has rented the Meservey home on Main street and Central avenue. Miss Nellie Holmberg and Miss Ethel McGiffin are the guests for a few days of Miss Snell of San Jacinto street, Dallas. L. G. Pritchard has moved into his home on Main and Eleventh streets. S. W. McGregor has bought the stationery business of J. Blythe on Main street. Miss Lucile Manning is the guest today of friends in Cleburne. O. Richter of Alamogordo, N. M., is visiting his friend, S. C. Skidmore, with the Haddaway Drug Company.

There was an election in Glenwood yesterday for school trustees. Of the candidates William Newman and J. Shepherd were elected and J. M. Stewart and W. I. Brokaw tied. There were three to be elected. The race was very quiet and about thirty-eight votes were polled.

The St. Andrew's Parish choir boys yesterday afternoon visited the Masonic home and played a game of base ball with the team from that institution going down to defeat by a score of 15 to 6. The batteries were: St. Andrew's, Judd and Ryan; Masonic home, Adams and Graham. Although losing the game the boys enjoyed their trip thoroughly, being met at the end of the car line by the wagonette from the home and in all ways treated royally.

A conference lasting the whole afternoon was held yesterday between a committee of the Trades Assembly acting on behalf of the Brewery workers and the officials of the Texas Brewing company at the close of the conference no information as to what transpired could be elicited from the parties other than that affairs were moving along smoothly. From this however it is thought that the differences are in a fair way to an amicable settlement.

MELLODY AND MEMSIC IN RED-HOT BATTLE

CHICAGO, May 7.—In a rattling six-round bout before the Chicago Academy tonight, Melody, the eastern boy, was awarded the decision over George Memsic, the Chicago lad, much to the disgust of the spectators, who hissed the decision on the ground that Memsic should at least have had a draw.

There was not a tame moment during the six rounds, each man sailing in for a knock from every tap of the bell. Melody floored his man in the second, and Memsic evened up by returning the favor in the fourth. Neither man was down more than three times, but each administered a liberal amount of punishment. The referee decided that Melody had delivered the greatest number of clean blows and awarded the decision accordingly.

YALE WINS SHELL RACE FROM NAVY

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 7.—Yale won from the navy this afternoon by half a length in the eight oared shell race over a two mile course. Owing to the high wind the race had to be postponed from 1 o'clock until sunset and it was after this when it was finally finished. Owing to the position of the referee and boat at the finish, it was at first thought that the navy had won and pandemonium broke loose among the navy "rooters." The mistake, however, was soon discovered and the decision of the judges was unanimously for Yale.

201 S. Main St. Both Phones 5 First Hundred Cases FREE

To the First Hundred Cases They Will Give Absolutely Free Treatment for Two Months (except the cost of the necessary medicines to handle your case)

The above proposition was opened just a week ago today, and many have taken advantage of it already. It can not remain open but a short while at the rate it is being accepted, therefore if you need treatment and expect to get the above advantage, you must act quickly. It will never appear again. Those under treatment are entirely satisfied, which is the fact in every case treated who have done as promised since the New York Doctors located in this city.

This is certainly an exceptional chance for all afflicted people to secure the services of these noted doctors. They do this because there are a number of people in this town who are not able to pay a fee to a first-class specialist. This proposition is open to all, rich or poor, and made for the benefit of those who could not otherwise secure their services. Their free proposition was accepted by many when they first opened offices here, who are glad today that they called before the time expired and received a cure. Remember this proposition CAN BE OPENED BUT AS ABOVE STATED. They can refer you to over one thousand people cured by their methods, many of whom had been told there was no hope for them by other doctors. They have the very best references, in fact they need none to the people of this vicinity, as they have been here long enough to establish a reputation and are known to almost every one. They have specialists for all the special diseases they treat, and cure all chronic special and private diseases of men, women and children, such as lung, bronchial, heart, liver, bowel and stomach troubles. Their system of curing catarrh and catarral deafness has cured more people than any known today. If you are a sufferer of this condition do not put it off, but come at once and get well. This special treatment for rheumatism and dropsy has cured every case they have taken in this town. They cure these diseases when all others have failed. Cancers in the primary stage absolutely cured without the knife and burning plasters. Epilepsy and paralysis cured in many cases not too far advanced. Diseases of the kidneys and bladder given special attention. Skin troubles of long standing cured. Ruptures, piles and other rectal troubles cured without the knife or detentor from business. SPECIAL DISCOUNTS OF WOMEN TREATED SUCCESSFULLY WITHOUT OPERATION. Special diseases of men, such as Stricture, Gleet, Varicocele, Hydrocele, Lost Manhood, all drains and other private diseases cured without operation by our up-to-date method. Man, if you are suffering do not put it off, but come now and get well. If your peculiar condition is not enumerated above, come and consult them, they will examine you carefully and tell you what your condition is and if they tell you you can be cured they will do it. They make a specialty of eye, ear, nose and throat troubles, straighten cross eyes without operating, and fit glasses to make you see or money back.

These doctors have all the up-to-date electrical and other devices for handling these special conditions, and certainly can give you better results than you have had. It costs you nothing to find out, therefore if you need any special treatment and wish the most scientific, do not fail to accept this generous proposition, as it will never occur again.

Remember, they will take only a limited number for free treatment, so you had better come at once. Consultation free to all. It will require a small payment for expenses to begin, therefore if you mean business do not come unprepared to pay for necessary medicines to handle your case. NEW YORK DOCTORS. 615 Main street.

PROSPECTS FOR GOOD COTTON YIELD

Reports Favorable From Territory Along Rock Island, Denver, and Frisco Roads and Tributary Lines

The general freight offices of the Rock Island, the Denver road and the Frisco have information touching cotton prospects along and tributary to the lines of the respective companies, which indicate that the crop will be a very good one this season, despite the unfavorable early weather, which was entirely too dry. Reports being received by all these companies would seem to indicate that the yield, provided seasonable weather prevails, will be very large, as in most instances the acreage has been greatly increased, in some locally from 25 to 33 1/3 per cent over last year. This is the case along the Rio Grande division of the Frisco, but some apprehension is felt that the late severe hail storm along this line may have resulted in doing some damage.

Cotton prospects are exceedingly good along the Fort Worth and Denver City road. The recent rains have put the ground in good condition for planting, which is generally later in this section of the state than elsewhere. The acreage will be very much increased over last season, because much of the ground put into wheat is to be replanted with cotton, the wheat and oat crops being considerably damaged by the long continued drought which has prevailed until recently in the Panhandle country. It is believed by officials of the Denver road that the total yield this season will far exceed that last year, which was approximately 59,000 bales.

The prospects for a good crop of cotton along the Rock Island road were never better than now, according to late advices received at the general freight office of the company in this city. There will be 50 per cent more cotton planted in Rock Island territory in Texas and the two territories than last season, the increase being due to the same causes that exist along the Denver road—had wheat and oat conditions—much of the land sown to these two grains being replanted with cotton. There will also be more corn planted this year along the Rock Island road than heretofore. The wheat yield north from Hennessy, Okla., to the Kansas line will be about 60 per cent of a crop.

Altogether, the crops along the Rock Island are expected to be the best in many years, provided the weather conditions do not prove to be damaging, and this is not now likely, as there is a good season in the ground, the drought having been broken.

In this, Tarrant county, cotton prospects were never brighter than now, and in some sections the plant is up. This is the case between Fort Worth and Mansfield and Birdville. In the former locality cotton has been worked out, and is looking healthy and thrifty. The prospects at this time are much better than was the case for the same period last season.

Wheat and oats are also looking well in this county and a good yield is expected. The acreage in cotton, wheat and oats has been very much increased over last year. This county marketed between 40,000 and 50,000 bales of cotton last year, and if nothing unforeseen happens the 1904 crop will reach 75,000 bales.

DENVER TO TIDE WATER

President Frank Trumbull of the Colorado and Southern and the Fort Worth and Denver City Railway Companies, accompanied by M. A. Spotswood, general attorney in Texas, left yesterday morning for New York city and other eastern point.

There is a report here that the matter of constructing the Denver road on to the Gulf is to be considered in New York on President Trumbull's arrival there, but whether there is anything in the rumor remains to be seen. It is known, however, that Mr. Trumbull has desired to reach tide water, which fact lends color to the persistent report.

If Gould constructs the line from Mineral Wells on to a connection with the Denver and Rio Grande at Pueblo there is hardly a doubt but that the Denver road will be built to Galveston from Fort Worth.

Mrs. Crouch was today presented with a thousand dollar check from the company and all law suits will be avoided.

RECEPTION IN BIRDVILLE SOCIETY

Out at Birdville, four miles beyond Riverdale, last evening Mrs. Plymouth Rock gave a charming reception to which the Misses Chick made their debut. The residence, which is located along the main pike in a spacious cottage of lovely slated exterior, was simply but appropriately decorated for the occasion, with wild rose grass and several bunches of last year's hay, while here and there an exquisite bit of shell which Mrs. Rock had gathered for this particular event while sojourning abroad, was used in pleasant decorative effect.

Mrs. Rock wore a beautiful gown of gray and black in bars, studded with white dots. Her comb was the envy of all. It was of a deep red and matched to perfection the dainty feathers she wore in her head decorations. Some of the feathers she had gathered while traveling.

The debutantes, the Misses Chick, were lovely in their coming-out gowns, which followed the conventional style for such occasions. The gowns were of delicate and fluffy chiffons. They were all dressed alike, with here and there a slight variation in the bodice.

During the evening confections were served, consisting of frozen fishworms, candied red ants and stuffed black berries, with sparkling Trinity river water as a beverage.

Miss Brahma and Miss Langshan served egg nog in the ordinary.

Among those attending the affair and who participated in the musicale on the lawn were Mr. and Mrs. Light Brahma, Mr. and Mrs. Black Langshan, Mrs. Rose Comb-Brown-Leghorn, Mr. and Mrs. Buff Rocks, Mr. and Mrs. White Wyandotte of Riverdale, Judge and Mrs. S. C. White, Leghorn, Miss Brahma, Miss Langshan, the Misses Rocks and Wyandottes, Miss Red, Miss Leghorn, Hon. J. W. Wyandotte, consul from Mainz, Captain S. C. Red of the Gulf fleet, Mr. B. C. Bantam of Honduras, Congressman Cockerell and Mr. Rocks.

CAPTAIN JOHN T. LYTTLE TALKS ABOUT THE DENVER MEETING

IT WAS A SUCCESS IN EVERY PARTICULAR AND GOOD HAS ALREADY RESULTED FROM IT—ALL INTERESTS WERE REPRESENTED AND KEYNOTE FROM FIRST TO LAST WAS BUSINESS

Captain John T. Lytle, secretary of the Cattle Raisers' association of Texas, has returned from Denver, where he attended the cattlemen's conference, and says the meeting was a big success in every particular, practically all the range states being represented. The proceedings were harmonious and much good has already been accomplished. The results so far have been mostly felt in the amelioration of the railway situation, and more improvement will surely follow.

There was no hurrah connected with the meeting, the delegates realizing from the start that they were there for business, and every one of the sixty delegates participating in the conference was thoroughly imbued with the idea that he was there for a specific purpose, and that purpose was to make a determined effort to accomplish something for the good of the great stock industry. Few sheepmen were present, the meeting being composed almost entirely of cattlemen, and while a few of the states such as Nevada and California, were not represented, they will be in the organization in the future and will work in concert for the objects sought to be attained. The railways were represented by a strong lobby, each railway representative present being as nice as pie, and endeavoring to impress the conference with the fact that his particular line was entirely disposed to do the agreeable at all times and under all circumstances. The kindness of the railways, while thoroughly appreciated by the conference, did not affect the determination of those present to proceed with the work in hand and the shaping up of a strong permanent organization to deal with future complications that may arise.

The stock yards people were also well represented at Denver, and to all intents and purposes were in hearty accord with the objects to be attained. If there were any representatives of the packing interests there they did not make themselves known. Captain Lytle says that the Kansas City stock yards people report that the railways centering at that point are making a sincere effort to better the service there and the shipping of that service there has been improved at least 100 per cent since the first of April. The impression is that the roads will abolish the tonnage system and otherwise improve the service as fast as possible, and a part of the address of the newly organized will be to see that they do it.

The bureau of commerce at Washington had a special representative present in Denver, who had been engaged in investigating the alleged beef trust at the leading meat centers. The result of this representative's investigations will be made to the department at Washington, and the organization perfected at Denver will watch for that report with much interest, as it is hoped that the Federal government now in progress will furnish the organization with the necessary facts and data with which to go after the beef trust. Nothing has yet been done along that line from the fact that there is nothing yet in hand upon which to base an action. But as soon as this feature of the situation has been remedied, the intention is to go after the market manipulators with the same vim and determination that has characterized the fight that has been made against the railroads.

In dealing with the railway situation, the new organization proposes to go directly to headquarters. A strong committee has been selected, which will hereafter conduct negotiations with the heads of the various systems, going to New York and other eastern cities where they can be reached. The idea involved in this proceeding is not to ignore the lesser officials, but it has been found from past experience that these matters have to always be referred to the higher officials, and the idea is to save time and insure attention by going to headquarters first.

The objects to be attained by the new organization are to formulate, prepare and put into effect a plan and active operation looking to the securing of such laws or amendments thereof by the congress or the United States as will afford the relief to which the live stock interests are entitled against exorbitant rates and injurious practices in the shipment of the stock to urge upon the agricultural and shipping interests generally the necessity of organization against unreasonable exactions and injurious practices by railroads and other corporations, and to do any and all things that may seem to be of benefit to the live stock interests of the country.

Steps have been taken which assure the new organization of all the funds that will be necessary to carry out the objects of its existence, and the alacrity with which cattlemen are responding to the assessment feature provided for that part of the situation serves to prove that they are more thoroughly aroused over this matter than any other that has been brought to their attention in recent years.

AN ODE TO THE ELKS

We have an army in the Lone Star state, Three thousand, brave and strong; We fight for a cause, fight right and late— For right against the wrong.

Our colors are bright, of purple and white; White the emblem of peace, And purple, the royal banner bright Banner of Waco's surcease.

B for Benevolence, golden rule; P for Protection's arm; O is for order of the old line school; E for Elks—do no harm.

B. P. O. E., the letters sing to me The virtue, charity, With pride I wear the badge, B. P. O. E., Pride in its rarity.

The Elks do not live for themselves alone, But for their fellow man, So that when they meet at the Great White Throne, The Elks will lead the van.

That it does not take long for the novice to get into the swing of the thing is shown by the above ode, written by one of those who recently was put through, and is now entitled to wear a tooth. Altogether, twenty-one candidates were added to the organization last week, judging from the tired looks of the older members the following morning, full justice was done each of the twenty-one.

The cafe, open to the members and their friends, which was opened during the past week, is meeting with great success.

Following the game of baseball yesterday afternoon, an informal dance was held last night in the club rooms.

KNIGHTS TEMPLARS

"The Apostles' Creed and Prayers"—1. The prelate. Music—Male quartet, composed of Mr. Reddick, first tenor; Mr. Taylor, second tenor; Mr. Hoffman, first bass, and Mr. Haggart, second bass.

Address by the prelate illustrating—(1) The Crucifixion; (2) The Resurrection, and (3) The Ascension. Music—Male quartet. Historical address—"Knights Templars," by Eminent Commander Sir Knight T. M. Hunt.

Music—Male quartet. Closing prayers—The prelate.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

A smoker will follow the regular business session of Red Cross lodge, No. 14, in their hall next Thursday night, at which time three candidates will be initiated.

Henry Miller of Weatherford, keeper of records and seal of the grand lodge, was in the city yesterday, arranging for the printing of the proceedings of the recent session of the body at Houston.

ODD FELLOWS

The celebration in honor of the eighty-fifth anniversary of the O. O. F. fellows, which was to have been held last Tuesday night, was postponed because of the bad weather, and the program arranged for that night will be given next Tuesday night. Union lodge acting as the host of the other lodges in the city.

At the regular meeting of Fort Worth lodge, No. 251, held Friday night, the committee on the new building laid before the lodge plans for the issuing of 6 per cent bonds to the amount of $20,000 for the purpose of erecting the building. This plan was put to a vote and adopted at the meeting.

Plans for the proposed building, which is to be erected at First and Throckmorton streets, have already been accepted and the necessary papers were sent yesterday to Grand Master T. L. Wrenn of Austin, to secure the necessary approval.

The new building, which will be a three-story brick structure, will be erected on the lot at First and Throckmorton streets, 100 feet square, which is already owned by the lodge.

A number of the members and officers of Queen City encampment will go to Alvarado next Thursday to reorganize the encampment at that place.

RED MEN

Members of the I. O. R. M. are making preparations to attend the carnival and council to be held by the order in Galveston during the week, and many of the members of the two local lodges as well as many of the Daughters of Pocahontas will attend the session.

Members of Naomah Council, No. 11, Daughters of Pocahontas, I. O. R. M., going to Galveston to attend the Red Men's carnival, will leave here Monday at 8 a. m., via the Santa Fe. The following members are going: Mesdames H. R. Zimmerman, S. A. Hoyt, Agnes Geer, C. A. Parker, A. Goss, J. H. Williams, Ed Otto, S. Parker, Missis Christi Otto, Bell Hargis, Verna Moser, Minnie Moser, Mattie Hamilton, and Mrs. Ross and others.

The members of the council remaining home will give a social next Tuesday evening at Red Men's hall. Tom Dunn and Miss Grace Butler are the committee on arrangements.

J. R. A. O. U. A. M.

Representatives of the Junior A. O. U. A. M. lodges in this city and Glenwood attended the state council of the order, which convened at Sherman, Texas, last Wednesday. A large number of the members also attended the session, the party being in charge of Captain T. J. Adams attended the state council of the order, which convened at Sherman, Texas, last Wednesday. A large number of the members also attended the session, the party being in charge of Captain T. J. Adams.

MASONS

The Masonic reunion at Dallas made the city for the time being the Mecca of all members of the organization. Many of the local members visited the city and a few of them received new degrees at the various times appointed.

On Wednesday degrees were worked from the ninety-two to the twenty-ninth, and W. H. Feld of this city on that day took the highest degree. Messrs. Young and J. P. Hughes also became Scottish Rite Masons.

Other exercises were held on Thursday, and the city was the scene of a social session of the Shriner's degree was conferred upon a number of candidates, among those reported as taking it being W. H. Harris and D. S. Thomas of this city. Many of the local Shriner's attended these exercises, and remained for the banquet at the Oriental, which was unique in being the first one to which the ladies were admitted.

It is expected that a social session will be arranged during this week by the Eastern Star, although definite plans have not yet been completed.

UNDER ARREST FOR IMPORTING GIRLS

ST. LOUIS, May 7.—Mrs. Weinzell of 2919 Arsenal street, a good looking, fashionably dressed woman of middle age, wearing about $1,000 worth of diamonds, was arrested Saturday afternoon and arraigned before a United States commissioner on a charge of importing girls to St. Louis from Europe, especially from Germany, for improper and unlawful purposes.

The arrest was brought about by Inspector James E. Dunn of the United States department of commerce and labor at Washington, and followed the arrival here a week ago of ten girls from Germany. Pending her hearing set for Monday, she is held in $2,000 bond.

GERMAN POET BLEEDS FROM FIFTY WOUNDS

BERLIN, May 7.—The well known German poet, Peter Pille, was found today lying in an unconscious condition on the platform near Berlin. He was bleeding from nearly half a hundred wounds and his condition is so serious that his recovery is despair of. The police are investigating the affair, which is clouded in deep mystery, and until Pille can be restored and his version of the assault secured, but little can be done to locate the perpetrators of the crime.

HISTORY OF THE Panama Hat

Panama hats have been made by the native Indians of South America for the past four hundred years, and their sale, until recently, has been very limited, except in countries where made. In 1897, an ingenious dealer in Guayaquil, Ecuador, sent to London a few dozen of the Alpine shape, one of which he presented to the Prince of Wales, now King Edward the Seventh, and their success was instantaneous.

They are made by old men, women and children in the interior of Ecuador, "whence the best come," also in Colombia and Peru.

They are woven of the leaves of the screw Palm Jipijapi, called by the natives Hippijappa.

Children six and seven years of age are set to work on native hats of coarse palm fibre which they work at daily, advancing each season to a fibre of finer quality, and in twelve or thirteen years are able to make a hat of a fairly good sort. The majority never become expert enough to make hats of the finest weave.

A hat of the very finest quality takes six months in the weaving. Its texture is like damask, and its fibres are as delicate as threads of linen. A straw broken, a knot obtruding on the pattern, decreases the value of this hat fifty to seventy-five per cent, hence the care required to make a perfect hat can be imagined.

To begin to weave a Panama hat they start from the center of the crown, and the little circular beginning, which varies from the size of a pin head to a ten cent piece, is called the button, by which an expert can tell where the hat was made, for the Panama of Ecuador has a button of one shape that of Colombia another and Peru still another.

While Panama hats are made in France from the natural product sent from South America, the climatic conditions are such as to deteriorate their strength, lustre and durability, hence the growing unpopularity of the French Panamas.

The finest grade of hats can only be made by natural light in the first hour of day break and the last hour of twilight; work on the coarser grades is pursued during the day, which necessitates constant dipping in water. This has led to the erroneous idea that Panama Hats can only be made under water.

HANNA'S POLITICAL FATIGUE
Governor Myron T. Herrick of Ohio, writing of the late Senator Hanna in Harper's Weekly, gives the following story, which was used by Senator Hanna to illustrate his state of mind when utterly exhausted by a strenuous political campaign undertaken after a period of sickness. One evening after making five speeches he got into a corner seat with difficulty, where he lolled in sheer exhaustion and tried to smoke. Looking at the end of his cigar he told this story: "I feel like the soldier in the civil war who, while leading a charge, was knocked over, stamped on, rolled in the mud and kicked by a mule. Gathering himself up he followed his regiment with a sore mind and a sorer body. As he limped along he said: "I love my country. I hev fit fur her. I hev bled fur her, an' I stand ready to die fur her. But when this blame war is over I ain't never a-goin' to love another country."

TRACED HIS STUDS
At the reunion of the Seventh regiment at Sherry's in New York a few night ago Herbert Brooks, the man of mystery, was on the stage pleasing the diners with his tricks. He took a deck of playing cards, and, while in full sight of the audience, caused the cards suddenly to disappear. Then he told those present to call for poker hands and he would draw them from the air. "Flush!" "Full hand!" "Straight!" "Four queens!" came from the men about the tables, and after each call Brooks produced the hand called for by drawing five cards back out of the air. Colonel Apelton sat immediately in front of the stage, and, after the performer had drawn forth numerous big hands, the colonel turned to a man sitting alongside of him and was heard to remark: "I think that must be the fellow I played draw poker with last night. In fact, I know it is, for I see that he has studs such as I formerly wore in his shirt front."

The queen of England has a favorite teapot of which she is very fond and which is in frequent use at Sandringham. It is in the shape of a barrel of wine, with a stout old Dutchman sitting astride. His cap serves for a lid, and a gold tap lets out the beverage.

YOU KISSED ME

BY JOSEPHINE S. HUNT.

This poem was written by Miss Hunt in 1867, when she was less than 20 years old. James Redpath, the historian, thought so much of it that he had an edition printed on white satin, and the poet Whittier wrote of it and its author that she had truly mastered the secret of English verse.

You kissed me! My head had dropped low on your breast, With a feeling of shelter and infinite rest.

You kissed me! My heart, and my breath, and my will In delicious joy for the moment stood still.

You kissed me! My soul, in a bliss so divine, Reeled and swooned like a foolish man drunken with wine.

You kissed me! My soul, in a bliss so divine, Reeled and swooned like a foolish man drunken with wine.

You kissed me! My soul, in a bliss so divine, Reeled and swooned like a foolish man drunken with wine.

AGENTS HAVE NO RIGHTS ON TRAINS

Court of Civil Appeals Hands Down Decision Giving Railroad Right to Exclude Baggage and Transfer Agents

The court of civil appeals handed down an opinion yesterday morning recognizing the right of a railroad company to enforce reasonable rules and regulations concerning the soliciting of patronage by transfer men and baggage agents on its trains. The opinion is regarded as very important, in view of the fact that it is a case of first impression in Texas, though the authorities in other states are not harmonious. The question arose at Mineral Wells, where the Weatherford, Mineral Wells and Northwestern Railway Company had denied the right of Lewis and his agents from entering its passenger trains for the purpose of soliciting patronage of its passengers in behalf of Lewis' transfer line at that place. The company had established a rule that only one person or more than three could be on the train for the purpose of soliciting transfer business from the passengers on its trains. Under the arrangements made by the company with one Green, who conducted a transfer line, Lewis and his solicitors were denied the right by the company to drum for business on the trains. The company procured an injunction against Lewis and his agents, which, at a trial on an agreed statement of facts, was perpetuated by the district judge of Palo Pinto county. An appeal was prosecuted to the court of civil appeals at this place and in an exhaustive written opinion today by Associate Justice Ode Spear the judgment of the trial court was affirmed. In its written opinion the court said in substance, after detailing the facts reflected above, that Appellant Lewis contended the right of Lewis and his agents to enter the trains for the purpose of soliciting the injunction, because the rule of the company whereby the exclusive privilege of soliciting patronage was given to Green creates a monopoly and is violative of the anti-trust law. After citing that portion of the anti-trust law said to be germane to the point made, the court said: "It is, we think, sufficient answer to this contention that the rule or regulation of appellee whereby Green was permitted to solicit the patronage of its passengers to the exclusion of appellant did not 'create or carry out restrictions in the free pursuit of any business authorized or permitted by the laws of this state,' because the only restriction imposed is with respect to the transportation of appellant's business on appellee's passenger trains, which he is nowhere authorized or permitted by the laws of this state to engage in. It is therefore not a restriction upon the free pursuit of large per cent of his business, but the regulation prevents appellant from securing the patronage of appellee's passengers, it may be said to be a restriction upon his business. But the least reflection will show that if this construction of the law were to be adopted a very large per cent of the every-day contracts in the business world, such as those of leasing, of agency, of service and the like, would be reprobated—a result never dreamed of by the legislators who enacted the statute. If appellee is to be denied the relief prayed for it must be upon other grounds than those asserted in this assignment of error." In disposing of the remaining assignment of error, which was to the effect that a railroad company has no right to make unreasonable rules controlling the conduct of passengers and can make no regulations giving to one individual exclusive rights upon its trains, and exclude others from exercising the same rights, where the business is one in the nature of a necessity for the convenience and welfare of the passengers, the court said that it readily assented to the proposition that a railroad has no right to make unreasonable rules controlling the conduct of its passengers and that the converse of this was equally true, that is, that the company has the right to make reasonable rules and regulations concerning the conduct of its passengers. In the case at bar the court concluded as a matter of fact shown by the record that the rule involved was both reasonable and salutary. In its opinion the court cited cases arising in New York, Georgia, Minnesota and other states, where the question had been discussed, and concluded as follows: "The rule announced in these cases commends itself to our consideration. There is no wanting authority, however, for a different holding. There are many cases which deny the right of a railroad company to enter into an arrangement whereby the right of its passengers to choose their own transfer agents after leaving the railway's premises is controlled. But this is a different question from the one presented in this case and the authorities referred to need not be discussed. Ordinarily all hackmen alike have the common right of soliciting the patronage of passengers, but this right may be defeated by the establishment of a reasonable rule with respect to passengers while they are in such company's charge. At the point where the right to maintain its rule ends, this common right of the transfer companies begins. It is not contended in this case that the railroad company did not have the right to exclude all hackmen from its trains. Our statutes have never declared railroad companies common carriers of transfer companies. A properly regulated transfer service on passenger trains in this day is not only a convenience, but practically a necessity. To admit all transient agents would not only amount to an inconvenience to the traveling public, but would render it well nigh impossible to establish any rules or regulations in regard to the business whatever. To hold as appellant suggests in this case would be nothing short of judicial legislation. If the rule is unreasonable the courts will doubtless afford relief, otherwise the question is one for the legislative and not the judicial branch of the government. The rule in the present case seems to be a reasonable one and one which in no sense interferes with any right of appellant. The judgment of the district court is therefore affirmed."

THE BUTLER CASE

The motion for a rehearing by former County Clerk W. E. Butler and the sureties on his bonds in the fee bill case decided some weeks ago was overruled in the court of civil appeals yesterday. The case was remanded for a new trial in the district court, in accordance with the opinion originally filed. A shoe manufacturing company in East Manchester, N. H., received last week a single order for a little over 700,000 pairs of men's shoes, valued at $1,000,000. This is said to be the largest single order of the kind ever placed in the Granite State. YOUR FORTUNE DOES NOT QUIT WORK

A. L. Edmundson Receives a Letter Telling Him of an Inheritance Amounting to Ten Thousand Dollars

How would you like to get a letter saying that you had inherited $10,000? That is what happened to A. L. Edmundson of this city Friday afternoon and Saturday he was at work as usual. Friday afternoon, a letter bearing the postmark of Seattle, Washington, addressed to A. L. Edmundson, was delivered at a modest cottage on Monroe street.

Edmundson was at work when the letter came and did not get it until about 6 o'clock when he reached home. On opening it he was informed that he had been bequeathed $10,000 by the death of an uncle in San Francisco.

Surprised though he was Edmundson did not entirely lose his head and immediately telegraphed to find out if the news was really "true." He received an answer telling him that it was no "pipe dream" and that all he had to do was to go to San Francisco and secure the inheritance.

Edmundson is in the employ of the Southwestern Telephone and Telegraph company of this city. He expects to leave in a few days for San Francisco.

IN THE COURTS

Two years is the sentence meted out to Pearl Davis, a mulatto woman, by a jury in the Seventeenth district court yesterday. She was tried on a charge of assault to commit murder. The victim was another negro woman.

In the Seventeenth district court next Monday the celebrated Hoskins case will be taken up and tried. It is a criminal case in which Mrs. Nellie and Oran Hoskins have heretofore been made to appear prominent in the courts of this county, growing out of the alleged attempt to secure from the Frisco Railroad Company the sum of $30,000 for alleged personal injuries to the son, Oran Hoskins, in the trial, which commences Monday, will be represented by State's Attorneys Lattimore and Buck, while the defendants will be represented by W. R. Parker of this city and Attorney Seay of Dallas.

It was learned yesterday that the state will introduce much new testimony and that the trial will be exceedingly racy from start to finish.

Besides the Hoskins case, several other criminal cases are to be considered by Judge Smith during this week, notably Andrew Crews in the son, Oran Hoskins, indicted for participation in the killing of young Hendrix Long, for whose murder Joe Wolf was recently acquitted in the Seventeenth district court.

MOTIONS ACTED UPON
Following motions were acted upon favorably in this court:
In the cases of M. B. McDonough and Bob Kennon, to file statement of facts.
In the case of the state against A. N. Townley, to permit transcript to be sent to court of criminal appeals.
J. L. Mitchell, convicted of disposing of mortgaged property, was granted a new trial in this court.

PROBATE MATTERS
In the county court the will of the late Andrew Scoble was admitted to probate. Mrs. Virginia Scoble, his wife, is appointed independent executrix, without bond. The property is valued at $25,000.
E. P. Kirby was appointed guardian of the estate of Hugh Kirby et al., minors, with bond in the sum of $3,000.
The last will and testament of Newton Wilson, deceased, was admitted to probate, with Julia A. Wilson as independent executrix, without bond.
The final report of J. M. Lewis, executor of the estate of J. P. Nicks, deceased, was examined and approved.
C. H. Williams was appointed guardian of the estate of Mrs. M. A. Williams, with bond in the sum of $500.
The annual account of C. W. Sparks, guardian of the estate of Frankie Lee Cambron, was examined and approved.
The final account of Mrs. B. D. Smith, guardian of the estate of Meddie Ward et al., minors, was examined and approved and finally discharged upon payment of costs of court.
The fifth annual account of George Mulkey, guardian of the estate of Julie Emberson, a minor, was examined and approved.

MARRIAGE LICENSES
Following parties were yesterday granted marriage certificates by the county clerk:
E. W. Burch and Miss Allurida Watson;
R. W. Ray and Miss Myrtle M. Coggins;

BEACH LEAVES TO FIGHT A CHARGE IN CHICAGO

Officers Arrive From Chicago and Pay Chief of Police Real One Thousand Dollars as a Reward

Last night, via the Rock Island, Fred A. Beach left for Chicago, to answer for a charge of embezzlement.
Yesterday morning M. P. Magner, detective sergeant from the firm from whom the money was taken, arrived from Chicago. They went directly to Chief Rea's office and made arrangements to pay the $1,000 reward and to take Beach back with them. Last night Fred A. Beach, leaving his newly married wife behind, boarded the train for Chicago to face his former employers.

The officers from Chicago, when seen by a Telegram reporter yesterday afternoon, said that they had been all over the country trying hunting for Beach and were rather surprised to learn that he had surrendered in this city.

GETS BIG DAMAGES FOR HIS INJURIES
GAINESVILLE, Tex., May 7.—D. B. Hays was today awarded $12,500 damages against the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe railway company in the district court for injuries which he received in the employ of the company as engineer.

NOTES OF THE COURTS

ALLEGED HORSE THIEF CAPTURED
A negro who gave his name as Jim Richie was arrested yesterday afternoon by Deputy Sheriff Purviss in the act of stealing a horse and cart on the public square. The negro at first denied that he had anything to do with the property and said he came to Fort Worth from Waxahachie. Later, however, he admitted the horse and cart were taken from Oak Cliff Friday night, but that the theft was committed by another negro, and not by himself. He said he drove the rig to Fort Worth, but had nothing to do with taking it. Richie was jailed and Sheriff Johnson of Dallas county notified of the arrest.

NOTES OF THE COURTS
Lizzie Adams, colored, was placed under arrest yesterday, charged with theft from the person.
Ed Morgan has a suit pending in the county court against J. J. Lydon for damages, but as yet no judgment has been reached in the case.

POLYTECHNIC COLLEGE
The following ex-students of the college were on the hill last Monday: J. W. Hill of Greenville, G. L. Ford of Dallas, W. F. Woods of Stephenville, Professor Glass of Tyler, Rev. A. D. Porter of Cleburne, T. V. Elzy of Cowa, I. T. They were here to attend the eighth annual banquet of the Philosophical Literary Society, which was given at the Worth hotel last Monday night.

President Boaz, after being absent for five days, returned yesterday morning. He is confident that the cornerstone of the young men's dormitory will be laid commencement week, and that it will be completed by the 1st of September.

J. L. Flemming of Chicago spent yesterday on the hill.

E. Davis is a visitor to Polytechnic Heights and is thinking of entering the school.

Several new students have enrolled for summer work in the commercial department, among whom are Miss Ina Lomax of Meridian and E. L. Stevens of Cowa, I. T. The gymnasium will soon be equipped and ready for use. The order has been placed for the apparatus, which will be here in a few days.

Miss Zula Smith of Dallas was the guest of Miss Edna Coffman last Tuesday.

The college team played the mail clerks on the Handley diamond last Thursday afternoon, and were defeated by a score of 5 to 4. Batteries—Mail Clerks, Calson and Sullivan; College, Cavanaugh and Gaskill.

G. Jackson of Blum, Texas, spent Thursday at Polytechnic Heights.

CHURCH PEOPLE TO BUILD SOON ON SOUTH SIDE
Missouri Avenue Methodists Are to Select a Location Just West of the Site of Burned Building

Having sold the lot adjoining the Fifth ward school property to the city for $1600, the congregation of the Missouri Avenue church will soon begin the building of a new church on a lot directly west of the old location.

At the meeting of the council Friday night a proposition to sell the church property to the city to be used with the Fifth ward school property was made. The city accepted the proposition and will pay $1600. The congregation has secured a piece of property 100 feet front just west of the corner where the church was destroyed and it is reported that work will commence very soon.

THE HEAD OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
How M. E. Stone Rose From Reporter to Highest Position in Newspaper World

NEW YORK, May 6.—The life of Melville E. Stone, the directing mind of the Associated Press, who has risen from reporter to the highest journalistic eminence ever attained in this or any country, giving him the consideration of an ambassador abroad and the confidence and support of every newspaper in his own country, is romantic. What he has attained is the product of industry and common sense. Early in life he got out of newspaper work and started an iron foundry which was on the high road to success when the Chicago fire wiped it out. Before that he was just a fair reporter. After the fire he returned to journalism and tried to be a Washington correspondent without much success, started a news bureau which didn't work and finally set out on his own.

Even after Stone made a definite success in journalism and acquired a competence he withdrew from all connection with it and became a banker. But some time in his soul there must have been a recognized, and he set himself the task of re-establishing the Associated Press, aided by Victor Lawson, his partner in the establishment of the Chicago Daily News.

A good many years ago when the Chicago Times, under the editorship of Wilbur F. Storey, was the leading newspaper of the United States, and its staff included the strongest group of newspaper men in any office of the country, it found itself unable to cope with a peculiar news condition in Chicago. A man named Colvin was mayor, and under the existing charter of the city he presided over the deliberations of the board of aldermen.

LABOR NOTES

Probably the event of greatest importance in labor circles during the past week was the organization of the Tarrant County Farmers' Protective Union. At this meeting, as reported in The Telegram, delegates from about 20 of the 21 local unions in the county were present, many of them being represented by their officers. By the adoption of the system of fraternal delegates with the trades unions practically a new force was added to the union endeavors in the city. A similar co-operation is expected in state affairs and in presenting the claims of workmen before the legislature and as the farmers' unions comprise practically 90,000 members in this state the importance of the branch can be seen.

LABOR LEAGUE ENTERTAINMENT.
The program for the Labor League Entertainment to be given at the Labor Temple next Friday night has been partially completed showing a large number of recitations and musical numbers. Several musical numbers are yet to be added and the evening will be ended with refreshments and a dance.

The entertainment, which is given to raise funds for sending delegates to the national convention at Niagara Falls, promises to be well attended. The numbers already placed upon the program are: Recitation, "The Union Label," Mrs. Clara Lytle; recitation, "In Union Town," Mrs. B. F. Estes; piano solo, Mrs. Kate Connelly; recitation, "Swimming Time," Edwina Ehrenstein; vocal solo, Edward Shanahan; recitation, "A Union Man," Babetta Ehrenstein; instrumental solo, "Who Killed the Lodge?" Bella McLeod; and "Take a Tumble to Yourself," Mrs. Lee Spline.

TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION.
A special meeting of the Typographical Union has been called for this afternoon at 2 o'clock for the purpose of choosing a delegate to the meeting of the International convention. Preparations will also be made at the meeting for the election of officers of the international body.

LECTURES TODAY.
Two speeches will be delivered at the Labor Temple this afternoon, the one by J. S. Graves and the other by Dr. Broiles, who will take the rich man as his theme.

Indorsed by the Masses DR. CALDWELL'S (LAXATIVE) SYRUP PEPSIN

Read What the People Have to Say:

A prominent merchant of Mansfield, O., writes under date of Oct. 6, 1903.

Mansfield, Ohio, Oct. 6, 1903.
Pepsin Syrup Co., Monticello, Ill.:
Gentlemen—I wish to express my appreciation of your most valuable remedy, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. I suffered many years from indigestion and constipation, and tried many remedies, from some of which I received benefit, but no medicine that I have ever used or tried gave me so much benefit as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. I have used several bottles and I am now almost entirely relieved of my trouble, and I can most heartily recommend it to any one suffering from indigestion or constipation.
Very truly yours,
V. M. DICKSON.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 26, 1903.
Pepsin Syrup Co., Monticello, Ill.:
Gentlemen—After using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for my family and for myself for a number of years, I can truthfully say it is the best medicine for stomach and liver troubles I have ever used.
I have always recommended it to my friends and have always seen the best results from its use. I would not think of being without it. We have a bottle in our house "on tap" always.
Very truly,
W. K. ACKERMAN,
30 S. Main St., Mansfield, Ohio.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 26, 1903.
Pepsin Syrup Co., Monticello, Ill.:
Dear Sirs—Was so pleased with the good effects of your Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin that I always keep a bottle of it in the house.
I suffered constantly with biliousness and sick headache, but the use of your Syrup Pepsin entirely relieved me. Can recommend its use to every one.
Respectfully,
MRS. P. F. HENRIQUEZ,
1033 E. 57th St.,
Nov. 10, 1903.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 26, 1903.
Pepsin Syrup Co., Monticello, Ill.:
Gentlemen—Having suffered the discomforts of dyspepsia for many years, it gives me pleasure to recommend your Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin as a speedy and effective remedy—pleasant to take and producing none of the objectionable results following the use of many patent dyspepsia remedies.
Gratefully yours,
MRS. E. D. CARROLL,
6307 Woodlawn Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Nov. 8, 1903.
Pepsin Syrup Co., Monticello, Ill.:
Gentlemen—Some time ago I was presented with a sample bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. I have used several bottles since for myself and family. Would not be without it, as I find it to be a most pleasant laxative and is all you claim.
Very truly yours,
MRS. C. COOPER,
917 Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

Bow Creek, Kan., October, 1903.

Monticello, Ill.
Pepsin Syrup Co., Monticello, Ill.:
Dear Sirs—I can truthfully say that Syrup Pepsin has cured my little girl of constipation, after using one bottle and a half. Had tried many other remedies and had almost given up trying to get anything to help her. I saw your advertisement, but thought your remedy like all the rest until I had used it. I can't say too much for your splendid medicine for children.
Yours respectfully,
MRS. FLORA HEBREW.

May 22, 1903.
Pepsin Syrup Co., Monticello, Ill.:
Gentlemen—I have customers who come seven or eight miles to my store to get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.
I always recommend it above all other medicines for children and grown persons as a laxative and cure for stomach troubles. I take it myself and know what it will do. Yours truly,
J. A. KUMLER (Druggist),
Baltimore, Ohio.

Nov. 10, 1903.
Pepsin Syrup Co., Monticello, Ill.:
Gentlemen—With pleasure I advise you what a great benefit your remedy has been to me. When I got two 50-cent bottles I was suffering with indigestion and my stomach every time I ate; my life was not worth living. I had tried so many remedies; they all had failed, and I had almost given up all hopes. I was so weak that I could not sit up but a little while at a time. The first few doses began to help me; now I can eat anything I please without suffering, and can be up all day and walk about the house. I would not be without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.
Yours truly,
MRS. E. Y. KING.

Oct. 7, 1903.
Pepsin Syrup Co., Monticello, Ill.:
Gentlemen—I wish to say that I have used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for over 10 years and it has always given excellent results. I suffer from dyspepsia, biliousness, sour stomach, heartburn, kidney, liver and bladder troubles, etc.
I have been actively engaged in the drug business for over 47 years (nearly 30 years in my present location), and never had any medicine in my store which gave universal satisfaction, as does your Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.
Very respectfully yours,
C. W. WAGNER (Druggist),

Chillicothe, Ohio, July 2, 1903.

Monticello, Ill.
Pepsin Syrup Co., Monticello, Ill.:
Gentlemen—In 1861 I enlisted in the army and served until the close of the war, was with Sherman in his famous march to the sea, during which I was wounded, afterward being troubled with constipation and stomach trouble.
I have spent much time and money in traveling and doctoring, but never got any relief until I tried Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, about five years ago, and I can truthfully say that it has been a godsend to me, as it has given me the relief so long sought, and I cheerfully recommend it to all.
Very truly yours,
J. W. ADNEY,

AFTER THE TRUST.
Seven special agents of the Department of Commerce and Labor are now at work in Chicago on the so-called "beef trust" investigation. Their work here, which is being done in pursuance of the resolution adopted by congress at the instance of Representative Martin of South Dakota, will consume about six weeks. Newspaper reporters are being avoided and no advance reports of the work will be given out, consequently newspaper stories purporting to be of that nature may be accepted as fabrication, pure and simple.
The investigation will be thorough. Hundreds of shippers and feeders will be interviewed in search of specific instances calculated to indicate combination on the part of buyers. These interviews will be submitted to the authorities at Washington as taken.
Commission houses are throwing open their records and affording the investigators every opportunity to get at the facts in the matter.
Retailers by the score being interviewed the object being to arrive at the disparity between wholesale and retail prices.

So far none of the investigators have visited packingtowns and there is no indication that the probing will be one sided. Other investigators are working at the minor markets and in the country.
The report on the matter will probably be ready within 90 days.—Chicago Live Stock World.
NEW MEXICO CATTLE.
As yet cattle in the counties of Mora, Taos, Union and Colfax counties, are in good condition as compared with previous years. The fact that the past winter was open is the main reason for it.
As concerns cattlemen it does not make any difference if rains do not come until the latter part of May, as the early rains are very injurious to their stock.
Still water is getting scarce, owing to the little snow in the mountains, and that will be needed really before grass.—Springer Stockman.
SOLD FINE BULLS.
Thornton Jones sold ten bulls here Monday at public sale which brought him $1,210, an average of $121 a head, all registered Herefords.—Crosby County News.

SOLD AT AMARILLO.
Will A. Miller, Jr., bought some fine Herefords at the sale Wednesday from William Reynolds, of Columbia, Mo. Simplicity, 8-months-old calf, $80; Dutchess, 2-year-old heifer, $85; Jessie, 2-year-old heifer, $85; also Block, 9-months-old bull, $85. Mr. Miller will place these animals on his alfalfa farm.—Amarillo Star.
CAUSE AND EFFECT.
A conservative talker and man closely in touch with the financial conditions of West Texas, said to us the other day that the whole section was a somewhat depressed state of circumstances. "It is due," he said, "to three direct causes. First, the drought which has prevailed for ten months. Second, the low price of cattle, due to the beef combine. Third, the fact of this being a presidential election year. Of course the rains must come, the trusts be made to turn loose, and the election be over, before a normal condition need be looked for."—Ozona, Texan.
RAILROADS AND PASSES.
Traffic officials of the western roads had two sessions yesterday considering the cancellation of the agreement which went into effect January 1, not to grant passes to live stock shippers. The fact that some of the low lines had promised the Iowa railroad commissioners to grant return passes to men in charge of live stock shipped from that state to Chicago appeared to make it necessary that the same concession be made to shippers of live stock from other states.

Some of the roads did not believe return live stock passes should be granted on interstate business, but when they found other roads were determined to carry out the pledge made to the Iowa commissioners, it was agreed to cancel the agreement of Jan. 1 and go back to the old conditions. It was arranged to meet next week to adopt measures to prevent the manipulation or abuse of return live stock passes by scabbers and others.—Chicago Live Stock World.
WORSE THAN PACKERS.
A. H. Tandy, of Woodward, O. T., one of the extensive cattle handlers of the southwest country, spent the past few days around the yards, says the Kansas City Drover's Telegram. Mr. Tandy's object in coming here at this time is to study the cattle situation and at the same time make arrangements for summer pasture for a large string of steers that are now on his ranch in Roberts county, Texas. On this ranch Mr. Tandy has wintered about 3,000 head of cattle, and besides these he is running a string of cattle in Fort Supply reservation in Oklahoma. Mr. Tandy has been actively engaged in the cattle business for many years and keeps in close touch with the business in all of its details. "The cattle problem," said Mr. Tandy, "is just at the present time more than at any previous period demanding the close attention of all men who are engaged in it. It is all the more important for the reason that but very few of the ranchmen in particular have made any money during the past year. The business must be reduced to a science, and the ranchmen must adopt the strictest business methods if they expect to succeed. The old ways and old customs must be abandoned, and more care and attention must be paid to the affairs of the cattle raising business. Here is just where I differ with many of the stockmen, as I firmly believe that the railroads have been getting the lion's share of the money right along, and are doing so at the present time. Big feeders come to market and buy stock that has been shipped in and they take it out, and then when it is fat they ship the stock back again, making three freight bills. But this is natural, of course, as the cattle must be moved from one place to another. But where the railroad companies get the best of the stockmen is in the miserably poor service. We have our shipments dragged along and shrank up by long delays while they are being sent to market, which takes off all the profit there may be in the business. It is very easy to take off $2 per head on cattle shipped from Texas or Oklahoma by these unnecessary delays. On a large herd this $2 a head means several thousand dollars. These railroad companies seem to ignore all laws and run things just as they see fit, and any one who has been shipping very much can readily see how they can injure the shipper by their poor service. Then the return pass rule cuts another hole in the profits so that, taking it all around, the railroad companies are a much worse menace to the live stock interests than the packers."

same conditions seem to prevail with regard to cattle, Texas is, of course, the biggest shipper. Our business alone last year amounted to more than 100,000 head. The depression in live stock seems to extend to other lines of business in the west."
PLENTY OF CARS
"The Denver road is in a better condition today to give the live stock traffic quick service than ever before in its history, and live stock shippers on our line will have more strength I say that we have done some pretty satisfactory stunts in this line before," said General Superintendent F. T. Dolan, of the Denver yesterday. "We have completed arrangements for some 2,500 stock cars. We have an abundance of power, our roadbeds are in better condition now than ever before, and our operating system is in first class condition in every detail."
"The only thing we are waiting on now is for a good rain to bring up grass to permit the cattle to fatten sufficiently to make them strong enough to stand traveling. That is the situation in a nutshell. The stockmen along the greater portion of our line say that the present condition of cattle precludes moving them, for the reason that an attempt to move them would produce a greater mortality than letting them remain on the ranges."—Fort Worth Record.
SOLD BIG STEERS
W. T. Knox sold to John Gibson of I. T., about 400 head of steers, threes and fours, at $23 and $24. Donald Cameron sold to Mr. Gibson 110 head of steers at the same price.—Coleman Democrat.
RESTORING THE RANGE
Prof. David Griffith, representing the U. S. department of agriculture, with headquarters at Washington, D. C., is at the Orndorff, while in this section securing data on the ranges and their possibilities. In speaking of his work he says:
"My work in particular is in connection with grass and forage plants, with special reference to ranges."
"At Tucson the department has been carrying on the work of attempting to find some logical method for the reclamation of the worn out ranges of that section. The work was first started on a half section of land, but now we have a tract of land comprising 50 square miles, fenced in on which we are trying to determine how many head of cattle it is capable of taking care of. As yet the work has not been carried on far enough to give anything definite. We find that the desert lands are not suitable for grazing purposes except at short seasons of the year, when possibly a few weeks grazing might be furnished."
"We are also carrying on some work in the Mesilla valley in connection with the agricultural college at that point, but so far the work has been limited to determining the chemical properties of the different grasses and forage plants found in that section, which is a very important branch of the work that we have to carry on, as it can readily be understood that some of the grasses and forage plants carry more chemical properties suitable for food for the stock than others and before we can do much on other lines we have to determine which is the best adapted for the purpose."

"I will return to Tucson tomorrow, where I have about two weeks' work before me, when I will return to West Texas to carry on some experiments there, with a view to helping the stockmen of that section. In all probability the work will be carried on in connection with the ranches already established there, but if not, then it will be taken up in connection with an experimental station."
"This work, while it is important to the stockmen of this section, has to be carried on very slowly, especially in view of the fact that specific data that would be of use to us is hard to get and in a measure we have to go at the proposition blind."—El Paso Herald.
CANADIAN STOCK BUSINESS.
The Canadian minister of agriculture predicts that the raising of live stock will become the chief line of Canadian production, even in Manitoba and the northwest, and that wheat and other grains will take a subsidiary position. This seems to most people an improbable outcome of the development of the agricultural industry in the dominion, but the minister is sanguine.
In Canada the basis of agriculture is live stock. As an instance of the great growth and increasing importance of this industry it is pointed out that the increase in the exports rose from $15,000 to $200,000. This is principally attributable to the proper catering to the demand abroad for fattened fowls. Of the total value of exports from Canada last year, amounting to $214,000,000, more than $114,000,000 worth were represented by farm products.
In the last census the farm lands in Canada were valued at $400,000,000, farm implements at $100,000,000 and live stock at $50,000,000. With 47,000 farms, only seven per cent of the available land has been tilled by farmers.
The climate, soil and local environment of the dominion enables the highest quality of domestic animals to be raised. These conditions have been augmented by careful breeding from pure stock, and now Canada is exporting largely to South America, Mexico and the West Indies.
CATTLE FOR TERRITORY.
A. M. Miller is making up a herd for the territory this week and had the following purchases: From A. Schawe, 21 head of 3 and 4; H. Wike, 29 head of grown steers; Bedford Caperton, 28 head of cows; Pat Murphy, 35 head of steers. He paid about $20 for the steers.—Ballinger Ledger.
HERBINE
Will overcome indigestion and dyspepsia; regulate the bowels and cure liver and kidney complaints. It is the best blood enricher and invigorator in the world. It is purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, and should be used by a sufferer from disease, you will use it if you are wise.
R. N. Andrews, editor and manager Cocoa and Rockledge News, Cocoa, Fla., writes: "I have used your Herbine in my family, and find it a most excellent medicine. Its effects upon myself have been a marked benefit. I recommend it unhesitatingly." 50c. Sold by H. T. Passburn & Co.

I suffered for nearly seven years with female trouble, bearing down pains, and at times intense agony. The doctor said that I had strained myself and produced prolapsus uteri. It was a chronic and constant affection, forbidding any considerable effort. And at times I was confined for days to my bed. I felt a weight and a heaviness in the lower abdomen, and across the back and loins and a sensation as if everything had fallen out when standing. There were frequent sensations of faintness at the pit of the stomach, but all these pains are a thing of the past, and four months' use of Wine of Cardui brought about a complete cure. I feel that I must give it all praise for it has changed my life completely for me.

LATE NEWS BY CABLE FROM FOREIGN CAPITALS

FRANCE HAS FEW VERY RICH MEN

But Prosperity Pervades All Classes in Both Country and the Cities

ARE BUT FEW PAUPERS

Remarkable at This Time as England and Germany Are in a Depression

BY PAUL VILLIERS

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) PARIS, May 7.—This is an era of prosperity in France no less than in the United States. Money is plentiful everywhere; everybody has money. And just at this time, when our two great neighbors, England and Germany, are in the woes of financial trouble and their governments are at their wits' end how to wipe out the growing deficits on the national budgets, it is with great satisfaction that France points to her well filled coffers.

What is more, our prosperity is of a far healthier kind than the much-praised prosperity in America. We have no billionaires, not even milliardaires in fancy; we have no Rockefeller of J. Pierpont Morgans; there is no figure in France like Daniel J. Sully, a millionaire today and a bankrupt tomorrow, because speculation is against the nature of the French people and because our laws would speedily put behind the bars any man who attempted methods of "high finance."

But, on the other side, we have practically no paupers; the prosperity has pervaded through all classes; every laborer has something stored away, waiting for a profitable but safe investment, and every time state or commune offers bonds for sale the latent riches of the masses are brought into evidence.

A few weeks ago the city of Paris wanted a loan of 170,000,000 francs and offered for sale 286,363 bonds of 500 francs. In an incredible short time more than 34,000,000 bonds had been asked for—that is to say that the loan had been oversubscribed eighty-nine times; and most of the requests came from people who wanted ten bonds or less, showing that it was the money of the people, not of the bankers, that sought investment.

In a short time Russia will arrange for a war loan of many millions through French banks, and there is every indication that the czar will be able to get every rouble he asks for in this country—not because the French people have more confidence in Russian securities than other nations, though they have gone with Witte's return to power, but simply because investments are hard to find.

There is great satisfaction throughout the country that the affairs of the Panama company have been finally settled, though the 200,000,000 francs in American bonds will find an already profitable market.

With the "entente cordiale" with England and the amicable settlement of all difficulties between the two countries the commercial intercourse with Great Britain has already grown in a most marvellous manner, and the coming year promises unusually well.

Should the day ever come that the powers of Europe agree to disarm, France may be able to imitate Monaco and abolish all taxes.

Judging from the prosperous financial condition of the United States and France, the two greatest republics in the world, one is almost forced to believe in the superiority of the republican form of government.

A Nightmare Gives point to the fact that excessive or irregular eating disturbs the digestion. Nightmare or night hag has its day time correspondence in the undue fullness after eating, with the belchings and sour or bitter rising so often experienced after too heavy or too hearty eating. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures dyspepsia and other diseases of the stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nutrition. When these diseases are cured, the whole body shares in the increased strength derived from food properly digested and perfectly assimilated.

BARONESS BURDETT COUTTS CELEBRATES 90TH ANNIVERSARY

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) LONDON, May 7.—In the drawing room of a staid old house in Stratton street, Piccadilly, the other day a benevolent looking old lady clad in the simple black lace collar and cap of the Victorian era, sat in tender, tearful confusion, amid the shower of letters, telegrams and flowers pouring in upon her from all parts of England and America, and, in fact, from every corner of the world, with congratulations on the completion of her ninetieth birthday.

She was the Baroness Burdett Coutts, who surely needs no introduction to American readers, among whom her deeds of charity are as household words. The baroness is the sixth and youngest child of Francis Burdett, the famous radical and friend of Daniel O'Connell, and his wife, who was a daughter of Thomas Coutts, the founder of the bank that bears his name.

For his second wife Mr. Coutts took Harriet Mellon, a distinguished actress, to whom at his death he left the bulk of his fortune. It was in 1837 that the widow, having married the Duke of St. Albans, died without children and decided that the money of her first husband should return to his family. And it was thus that Angela inherited her grandfather's millions. Mrs. Coutts, naturally distrustful of suitors and with good reason, summarily dismissed a cheap adventurer, afterward Napoleon the Third.

She had spent a long life in good works and earned a peerage in her own right when she amazed the world by marrying her youthful secretary, who has been her husband for twenty-seven years. In her arms on the morning of her ninetieth birthday she held a 5-year-old girl, unwilling to part with her even for a moment.

The child was the Baroness Clifton, and the old lady loves her because, on the beautiful bouquet of roses bearing the inscription, "From the Youngest Baroness to the Oldest Baroness."

"The baroness enjoys in association with the Duchess of Abercorn the distinction of being the last of the little group of grand old ladies who were the chosen friends of Queen Victoria. Prominent among the floral offerings was one from her servants inscribed, "To the best mistress and the kindest in all the world, with the respect and affection of her household."

"It really renews my youth," said the baroness with her charming smile, "to greet my old friends in this way at luncheon. But my little contemporary must have the place of honor by my right." And it has to be said that the tiny Baroness Clifton, perched on a high chair, comforted herself with a dignity and gravity fully worthy of the occasion among those who paid her court being Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain, Mr. Baillifour, the Princess Christian, Prince Francis of Teck, Lord and Lady Wolsley and the Duke of Argyll.

One of the Baroness' old friends who in forty years was the Duke of Cambridge. The irreverent ones of the modern time used to say that the meeting of these two relics of the Old World resembled a statey minute.

NO TACT SHOWN BY FRENCH PRESS

This is the Reason Emperor William Didn't Continue Trip to the Riviera

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) BERLIN, May 7.—The Kaiser's trip to the Mediterranean trip left a number of disappointed people along the Riviera.

Probably the most disappointed among these was the Prince of Monaco, who had surely counted on seeing His Majesty as a guest at Monte Carlo, which would have meant an influx of thousands of people to that famous resort, and a corresponding increase in the receipts of the Casino, and now the Kaiser even says that never at any time did he think of visiting that wicked place, as he did not want to act as a living advertisement for a gambling resort of which he is a most bitter enemy.

He did intend to visit San Remo to see the house in which his father, Kaiser Frederick, battled with cancer before his succession to the throne, and he had also intended to meet President Loubet in neutral soil, but all this had to be changed on account of the lack of tact shown by the French press.

TWO FRENCH WOMEN WHO DRESS AS MEN

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) PARIS, May 7.—Among the many details of life regulated by French law, the question of dress is one which is strictly watched over by the government.

A man can be arrested and fined for wearing women's clothes, and a woman for wearing men's clothes.

There are two women, however, who have obtained government permits to dress habitually as men. One was the late Rosa Bonheur, who alleged that she could not sketch freely or move about the country when hampered by feminine dress, and the other is Mme. Dieu Lafoy, whose archaeological researches are only equalled by those of her celebrated husband.

Mme. Dieu Lafoy attained to world-wide fame when she made the discovery of the Palace and Necropolis of Artaxerxes at Susa.

Her studies in Oriental art have been unique. She devoted fifteen years to solving the problem from whence the knowledge of ancient Oriental art had sprung, as she maintained that it had not originated in Arabia, as was usually supposed. She traveled through Spain, Algeria, Morocco and Egypt, tracing its history step by step; and finally from Babylon she turned back again across the Straits of Gibraltar to Granada, having conclusively proved that from that ancient city the schools which had so manifestly influenced the world had originated.

NEW DAILY PAPER FOR DEAD PERSONS

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) PARIS, May 7.—A young man here has conceived the idea of sending a new daily paper to this city to be called Journal des Deces. (The Journal of the Deceased.) This paper will publish a record of all names of people who die, with suitable remarks, but to these will be added the names of the persons who have treated them, the physicians who will be sent in proof form to the physicians in question, and they pay an amount in proportion to their wealth as estimated by the honorable editor, the announcement will not be published.

VERESTCHAGIN'S OPINIONS OF US

Before His Death the Russian Painter Expressed Himself Freely of Conditions

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) LONDON, May 6.—Verestchagin, who has done more than any other painter to depict the hideous realities of war, met a tragic end to his labors on the Russian Baltic ship Petropavlovsk.

He knew war first hand, having fought at Plevna and around Constantinople, and it is said also during the Boxer rebellion. Pencil in hand, he was taking his first sketches of naval warfare when the fatal explosion occurred.

Truth in speech and in art were essentially the characteristics of this great painter. He rebelled against its grim horrors, and showed it in its grim horror.

"Asked about America some years ago, he answered: "I don't know America. I only know New York; but there it does not seem to me that the progress is what you would expect. The principal privilege is still that of demanding money from their husbands in order that they may pursue the great business—shopping, shopping, always shopping."

"About American men," he said meditatively, "out west they may be different, but in New York the standard by which they judge everything is peculiar. The worth of a man is there reckoned by the dollars he has in his pocket."

"Another strange thing is that they use different words to describe the same thing. For instance, there is something which here we call swindling, but there they call it business. It is curious; the word is so different, but the thing is the same."

"I must be remarked apropos that those who, like myself, looked for other social conditions in America are disappointed. The American worker is in better condition than in Europe, only because of some essentially palliative means, as, for instance, the high tariff, prohibition of cheap workmen, etc."

"But the measure which I consider as the first step toward the reasonable socialism—the recognition of the right of the workman to a share of the benefits of capital—is not yet acknowledged. Only a few original men are daring to do this, but again as exceptions."

His opinions of England were expressed with equal frankness: "First," he said, "a little hypocrisy, or what you call cant. Oh, have I not seen it in India! On Sundays, when I was at the Sahib, he must not be disturbed because he is reading his Bible, and you see him through the window. He has the Bible upon his knee, no doubt, but his head droops over his shoulder, and you listen and you hear the good man snore. Sleep is such a good thing that it can be openly called sleep and not Bible reading."

MAY RESIDE HERE PERMANENTLY

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) BERLIN, May 7.—Princess Alicia of Saxe-Coburg and the youngest daughter of the Spanish pretender, Don Carlos, who was recently divorced from her husband, has announced her intention of visiting the United States, where she will stay at least for six months, with the probability of taking permanent residence there.

SEASON ALREADY HAS A SENSATION

Society Tongues Are Wagging Over the Marriage of Lady Constance Mackenzie

FAMILY NOT PRESENT

The Bride Possessed of Brains and Independence in Remarkable Degree

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) LONDON, May 7.—The season has already provided a sensation likely to keep the tongues of the elderly dames of society wagging for many a day to come.

For in the recent sudden marriage entirely in the best vein of the late William Black, of Lady Constance Mackenzie to Sir Edward Stewart Richardson, a quiet, gray-haired, middle-aged officer of the Black Watch, they detect an awful example likely to be followed by girls who have been forced into uncongenial engagements.

Lady Constance, in her fearless independence, however, furnished only the exception that proves the rule of blind unquestioning obedience to a tyrannical parent long held sacred in England.

There is, however, unhappily no hope that other girls will summon courage sufficient to defy matchmaking mothers and marry the man of their own choice.

Everybody from the king and queen, with whom she has always been a favorite, down to the old crone who nursed her as a baby, is asking what on earth Lady Constance will do next.

It is remarkable, too, that none of her family were present at the wedding. Her august aunt, the Duchess of Sutherland, her stately severe elder sister, the Countess of Cromartie, long ago gave up in despair of understanding her.

The king holds that Lady Constance is a creature of mind and heart, and in will is about fifty years ahead of her time, and has the misfortune to be aware of that fact. Hence she has been a law unto herself.

At her ancestral home in the Highlands she wears a kilt, and in the Mackenzie clan she is known as the "Queen of Shantler Hall." With all her eccentricities she has a generous heart, and the poor on the Mackenzie lands at Tain hold her tenderly in their hearts.

POLICE LOOKING FOR AMERICAN SWINDLER

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) PARIS, May 7.—The police of Marseilles are looking for an American who, posing as agent of a great transatlantic line, has swindled a great number of Italians out of many thousands francs.

M. Burdere, the special commissioner of the Gave de Lyons in this city, has during the last two weeks been approached by hundreds of Italian emigrants, who with tears asked him to assist them either to America or back to Italy.

They all told the same story—that an American, called Garde de Lyons, had formed a large syndicate in the north part of the United States and that he could give them profitable employment on the land belonging to the syndicate if they would emigrate to America.

As he was a French representative of the syndicate, they would send them to their destination if they paid him 100 francs each.

As soon as he had received the money he put them aboard a train for Paris, saying that his representative would meet them in this city in two weeks.

ANOTHER REASON FOR THE KAISER'S RETURN

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) BERLIN, May 7.—It is now said that another reason of the Kaiser's sudden return to Germany was the anxiety caused here by the many signs of a secret understanding between the governments of Japan and China.

Dispatches from German agents in the northern part of China report that there is no doubt that the government at Peking is secretly stirring up trouble in that part of the empire and exciting the inhabitants against Russia.

American sources have been considerably talk of recalling the Chinese ambassador from St. Petersburg and declare open war against Russia.

EXPENDITURES OF FITZWILLIAMSES

What Ancestral Homes Cost Make Americans Look Cheap by Comparison

A BIG $10,000,000 CASTLE

There Are No Less Than Eight Miles of Walks and Paths About the Grounds

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) LONDON, May 7.—The economists and reformers of the United States, who dilate with such bitterness on the vast sums spent by the Vanderbilts, the Goetzes and other millionaires, would find an even more instructive lesson in the outlay involved in keeping up such an establishment as Wentworth Place, the home of the ancestral home of the Fitzwilliamses.

The house is 600 feet long, has a hall big enough to hold two suburban villas, and has no less than 165 rooms. The corridors of Farnham Castle average a quarter of a mile in length. Blenheim Palace, the home of the Vanderbilt Duchess of Marlborough, has fifteen staircases.

Mount Stuart, the home of Lord Bute, cost $10,000,000; Castle Howard has 125 rooms and costs, with the estate, $25,000 a year to keep up; while Chaworth, the home of the Duke of Devonshire, has no less than eight miles of walks and paths.

The expenditures of a Vanderbilt on an Astor on a country seat fade into insignificance by the side of these records.

LOUBET CHARMED WITH ITALIAN HOSPITALITY

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) PARIS, May 7.—President Loubet returned from Italy perfectly charmed with the king and queen of Italy. He says that Victor Emmanuel is the most democratic of kings and an excellent host.

He has told his friends a number of anecdotes which the king told him, though in nearly all of them the laugh was on His Majesty himself. One of them occurred only two days ago.

King Victor Emmanuel is passionately fond of fishing, and his hard luck in this line of sport is almost proverbial in Italy. One day, the king told, he was returning from a fishing trip alone and unattended, and had only two little fishes to show for several hours' patient endeavor.

Walking home toward Rome, he met a peasant who was carrying a number of magnificent fish and who asked him for a light for his pipe. Seeing his majesty's poor cat, he said in a tone of pity: "You do not seem a very good hand at fishing. Judging from what you bring home today one could almost swear that you were the king."

"Victor Emmanuel blushing answered: "I did not swear that you would have hit it exactly."

"Never mind, Your Majesty," the peasant said encouragingly, "even if you are a poor fisher, we are all satisfied that you are a first-rate king."

DISCOVERIES AMONG RUINS OF BABYLON

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) PARIS, May 7.—The Society of German Orientalists reports that they have made an historical discovery of the greatest importance in the Valley of the Tigris, where for some years they have been busy exploring the ruins of old Babylon.

This last discovery consisting of five palaces and a large temple in only slightly better condition, will now permit the historian to construct and locate the principal events of the reign of Sardanapalus, of whose history only very little has been known heretofore, and this not substantiated by any proofs.

One of the palaces which has now been unearthed is literally covered with inscriptions describing the glorious reign of the famous king of Assyria, the last descendant of Semiramus.

ONLY FOUR LADIES TO BE PRESENTED

King Edward Has New Rule for Each of Four Yearly Drawing Rooms

ASPIRANTS SHUT OFF

Out of Hundreds, a Niece of President McKinley Is One of the Favored Ones

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) LONDON, May 7.—The first of the royal drawing rooms brought to light a new rule likely to cause endless disappointment and heartburning among the ambitious American women who year for cachet into London society that goes with a presentation at court.

The king has, after consultation with his advisers and the American ambassador, decided that the number of American ladies available for presentation at each drawing room shall be limited to four.

As only four courts are held each year, only sixteen Americans can be presented to the British sovereign in any one season. Every American lady must of necessity be presented through the American embassy.

The number of applications for each drawing room runs away into the hundreds. It will thus be seen that many estimable ladies are doomed to wait from youth to old age for the realization of their fond dream, only to die "unpresented" in the end.

The four happy women who were happily chosen for the first court included Miss Marguerite McKinley Osborne, the daughter of the late William McKinley Osborne, late consul general to London, and a niece of William McKinley; Miss Faith Moore, orphan daughter of a long forgotten New York banker and sister of Mrs. Arthur Lee, a wife of a junior lord of admiralty; Mrs. Charles Ainsworth Spofford, of New York, wife of the famous electrical expert; and finally Mrs. H. C. Knapp, a wealthy widow, well known and highly popular in New York society.

Miss McKinley, a handsome brunette, looked radiant in her court dress of white silk, and, perhaps inspired by the example of her elder sister Bessie, who was presented in 1903, went through the ordeal with all possible sang-froid.

Of notable attraction among the youthful brides and buds, and lending color and beauty to a brilliant scene, were Lady Ellen Wellesley, presented by her mother-in-law, the Marchioness of Lansdowne, Lady Denman, Lady Finlay-Castle, Mrs. Walter Farquhar, Miss Sybil Brodick, the handsome daughter of the secretary of war; Lady Olga Osborne, second daughter of the duke of Devonshire, and finally Mrs. H. C. Knapp, the daughter of the duke of Wellington, and finally, Lady Viola Talbot, who is already one of the reigning beauties of the season.

IMPROVEMENT ON THE OLD DAYS. The ladies whose good fortune it is to make their courtesy to the kindly King Edward and his much loved queen, may thank their stars that they do not live in the days of the good Queen Victoria, who held two drawing rooms a year, and held these in the broad light of day at the very hour when the woman of society is at her worst and longs for her afternoon nap.

In those times the spectacle of a crowd of women crushed and packed first to sit for hours in a carriage exposed to the biting spring winds and against the jeers of a gaping crowd, and then to wait in the draughty rooms of the old St. James palace or in the Buckingham palace of the old unregenerate days, with agonizing slowness till the long line reached its end. The physical strain was almost insupportable.

Painting women were carried one after another into the little retiring rooms, there to lie until the came for them to summon their strength and march before the queen. The queen herself always until the last days of her life, in spite of her rheumatism, a woman of remarkable vitality and physical power, was seated, and therefore able to bear the labor of many hours with ease and comfort. But the members of the family around her were compelled to remain standing, and the strain upon the then princesses of Wales and the other princesses stretched to the breaking point.

WINS LOTTERY PRIZE AND WILL TRAVEL

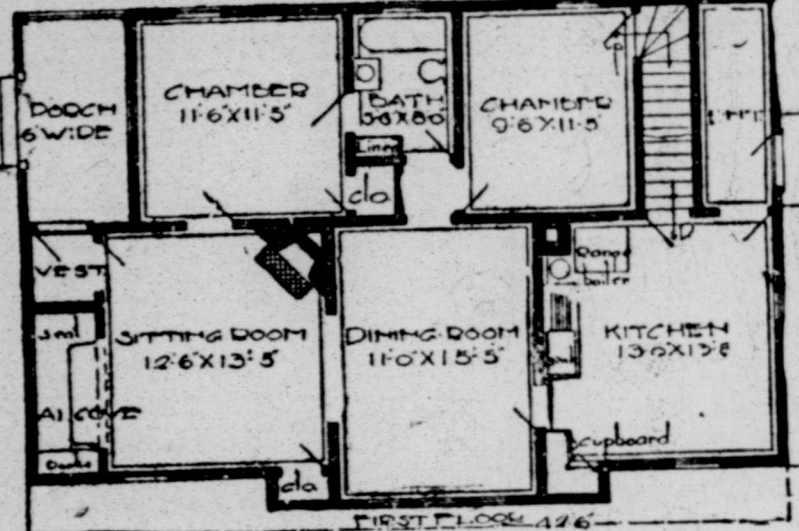

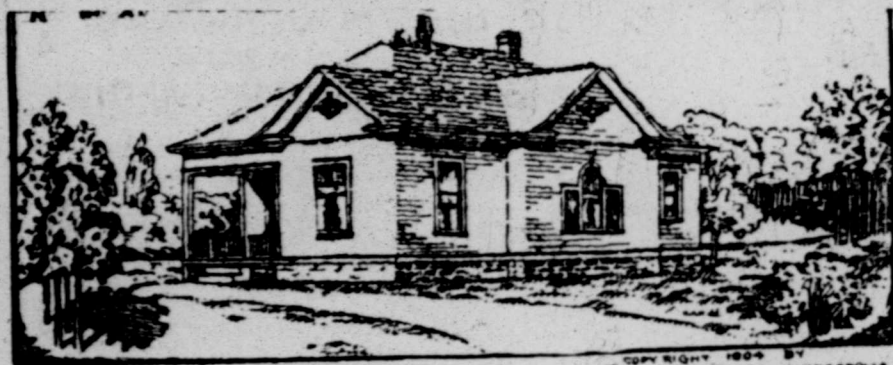

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) PARIS, May 7.—A short time ago a lampighter in Rue Sainte-Louis-en-l'Isle, M. Christophe, bought two tickets in the lottery organized by the Anti-Tuberculosis Society and gave one to his wife, another to a nurse girl in his service, Mlle. Juliette Biret.

A few days ago the girl lost her pocket-book containing her lottery ticket. She did not mind the loss much, as the pocket-book contained only a few cents, but the other day, when she was walking, she nearly fainted by seeing that her lost ticket had won a prize of 25,000 francs. She immediately notified the police, who stopped payment, and in two weeks she will receive the prize, part of which she will spend visiting the United States and the World's Fair at St. Louis.

His habits have been even of the simplest. From 10 to noon he gives audience to all who would seek his counsel, then he spends three hours with his secretaries.

A ONE-STORY COTAGE FOR $1000 BY WALTER J. KEITH

(Copyright, 1904, by Newspaper Enterprise Association.)

This design is a one-story cottage, that under the prices quoted below and a condition of affairs insuring a reasonable amount of earnest competition among contracting builders, can be erected for $1,000. No greater problem exists, probably, or at least one interesting a greater number of people than this problem of the modern home of moderate cost.

Comparatively easy it is, to design and plan a house that shall be acceptably complete in its modern convenience, equipment and artistic appearance. If we have at our disposal an unlimited amount of money, or at least the sum of $5,000 or more, but for every thousand dollars that same is reduced below this point, the problem becomes more intricate and difficult of solution, for nowadays the clerk or laboring man who has acquired a small amount from scrupulously nurtured savings to invest in a home desires when that home is built that it shall be comfortable, pretty and, above all, practical in the performance of the daily household duties.

Dandierine GREW THIS HAIR and we can PROVE IT.

This lady started with a 25c bottle.

Miss Sarah MacComb, whose hair reaches the floor when she stands erect, says: "My hair would not reach below my waist when I commenced using Dandierine, and it is now over five feet in length." (Look at her beautiful hair and judge for yourself whether or not she got the worth of her money.)

Miss May Densmore, now the longest-haired lady in the world, says: "I have used your Dandierine two years, and my hair has grown over an inch in length every month since I commenced its use. It surely contains most remarkably invigorating qualities." (Miss Densmore writes us under recent date that Dandierine had made her hair grow three feet longer than it was naturally, and is still growing.)

$60 and had cashed in her chips with charming coolness prepared to go home "winner." The dealer paid her without comment. He counted out the money; two twenty-dollar bills, one ten, one five, four dollars in silver, two half dollars. She picked up the money, put the bills in her purse, and laid a half dollar on the table. It lost. She laid down a dollar. It won. Another few moments and she had lost the silver. Reluctantly she drew out a five-dollar note and began to play again. In a few deals she was playing heavily again. In half an hour she was broke. It was a simple trick which has won the bank many millions of dollars after the player cashed in—the manner of payment. One is reluctant to break a bill, but silver is convenient to lay down on a card and most gamblers will do it. Before they know it they are again drawn into the game. They sometimes win. It is rare, for the games are on the square, but one can't win always, and the chances on a second round are in favor of the "tiger."

ALMOST INCREDIBLE CASE OF CRUELTY

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) VIENNA, May 7.—An almost incredible case of cruelty has just come to light in this city. The police were informed that a man of 55 was being confined by his three other unmarried sisters in a stable. A policeman was sent to the house and found the victim of his sisters' cruelty lying in the stable full of sores, covered with dirt and almost dead with starvation. The three worthy women made no secret of the fact that they had kept their brother there for more than a year, feeding him on bread and water once a week, and because he was an habitual drunkard and refused to reform. The man, who was so sick that he was unable to move, was sent to the hospital, but refuses to make a complaint against his sisters.

PEASANTS THINK JAPS LIVE IN THE GROUND

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) MOSCOW, May 7.—The patriotism and enthusiasm of a number of gentlemen of Kursk has led to the formation of the first debating society in Russia. Every Sunday evening the peasants of the surrounding villages are invited to gather in the school houses and listen to popular lectures on the war, after which they are asked to express their own views. The peasants' views, though peculiar, are, however, no more so than some of their instructors. One lecturer, for instance, declares that the Japanese are so poor that most of them live in holes in the ground, and that flocks of native Japanese peasants may be seen on all fours browsing on the grass in the fields. "The Japanese," says this lecturer, "never give quarters. When prisoners fall into their hands they cut them open, stuff them with salt and impale them on sticks."

UNFORTUNATE CIRCUMSTANCE It has come to light that through some mistake of an express company the wrong casket was delivered to the relatives of the late Lieutenant Gridley, and that the funeral services were therefore held over the wrong body. WASTECOAT THAT WASN'T HIS OWN

Husband Returns Unexpectedly and Finds It Hanging to the Bedpost

HE PUT IT IN SUIT CASE

And Carried It Away as Evidence, Leaving Young Man With His Wife

NEW YORK, May 5.—A mere trifle has separated the Bryants, who live in an attractive, if not highly fashionable, apartment house in the northern edge of that section of the city that once long ago was Chelsea Village. Mrs. Bryant is the offender in the case, Bryant the accused. She put up a stout plea of complete and persecuted innocence, to which Bryant gave the sarcastic ha! ha! Thereat she sought to return to mommer, but mommer wouldn't have it. No, said mommer, she'd trouble enough with her daughter from the earliest knowledge of her to the time of her marrying her off, and she didn't intend, now that parental cares were off her shoulders, and she had some chance for a good time, to resume responsibility for her progeny just because of some petty marital tiff. So daughter returned to her own apartment, much to the disgust of her husband, who immediately vacated it, repeating to her forcibly his intention never to live again under the same roof.

LONELINESS RELIEVED BY YOUNGER MEN

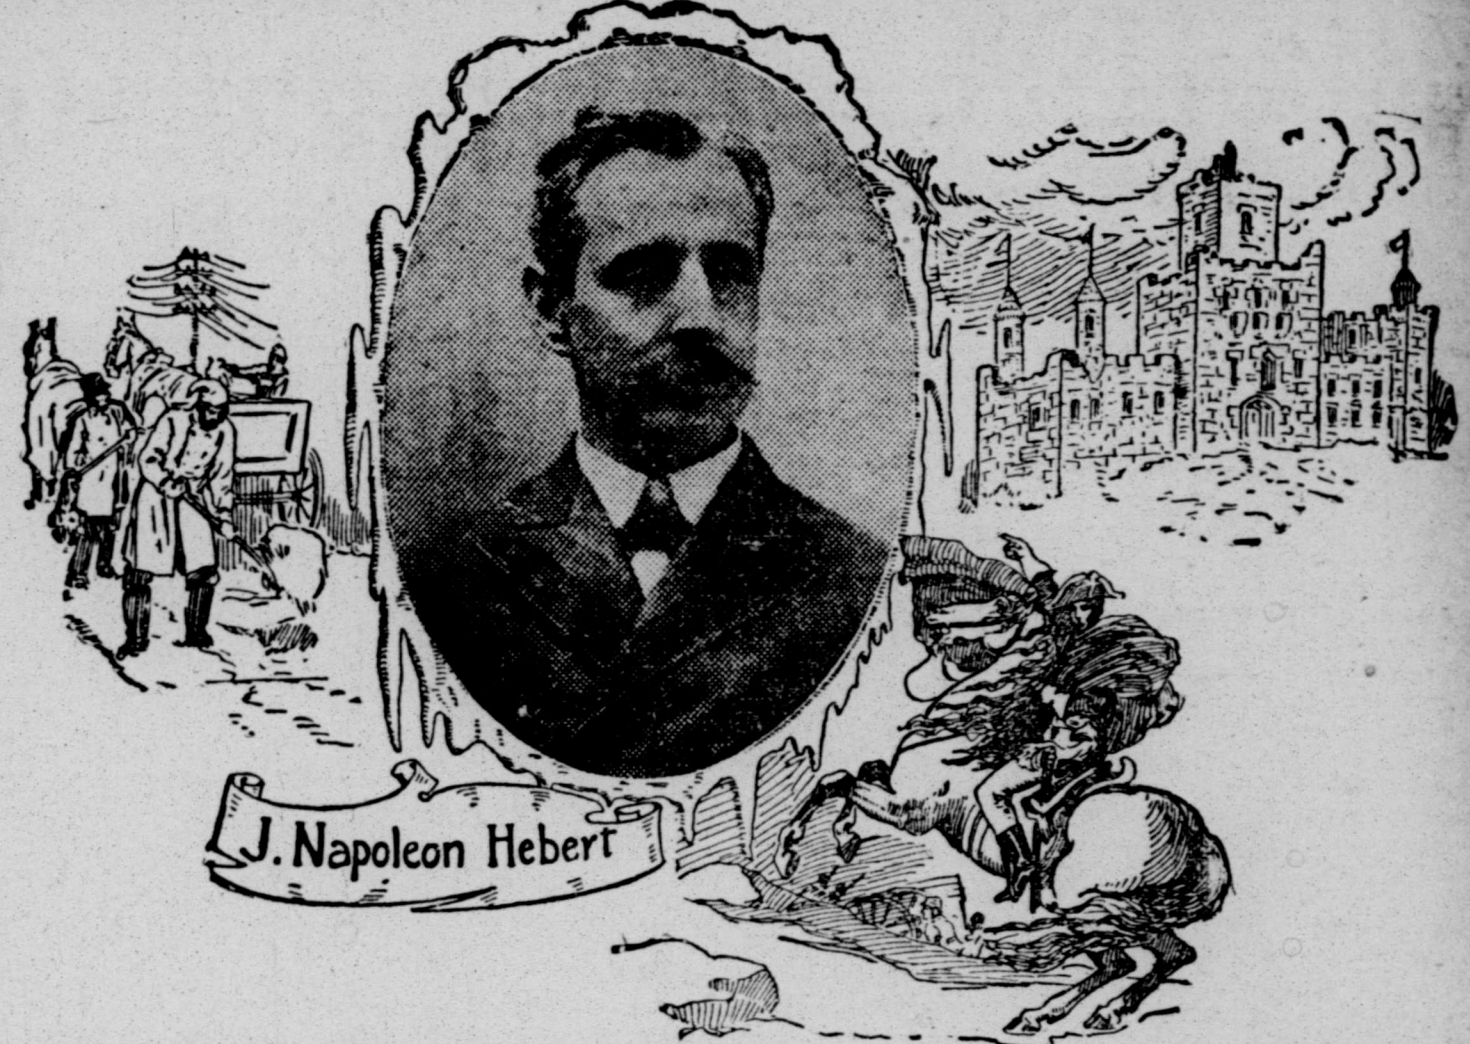

The Bryants had been married five years and their friends had no hint of any skeleton in any of their closets. He was twice her age and rather given to evenings out, but could not be called a misbehavior, and she never was heard to complain that he left her too much alone. None of her friends had any idea that younger men than her husband saved her from loneliness, though the night elevator boys of the Bryants' apartment house might have told another story. All they knew, of course, was that Mrs. Bryant had several young callers, all young chaps, one of whom had proved very liberal in his tips to the boys, at the time letting the recipients understand that they must make return for his gifts. Even at that the boys had to read between the lines, and they were not sure how they were to earn their tips. The formula from which they secured this information was gone through every time the young man called, which was nearly every night, and consisted of these words of greeting: "Ah! Mr. Bryant? No? How provoking! Well, I think I'll go up and see Mrs. Bryant a moment. Let me know if Mr. Bryant should come in."

THINGS ELEVATOR BOY NOTICED

Apartment house elevator boys are not noted for astuteness, rather the contrary, but when one of them has such a speech dinned into him about every night, he is bound to notice things. So the speaker grew so careless as to mumble the first part of his formula like a court clerk reciting an oath, making emphatic only the closing sentence, the boy may be contented on to respect that he was doing something. The boys were made thoughtful, too, by the fact that this caller never used the elevator in going away, though he surely showed himself to one of the boys in departing. So by the time each of these lads had received a few dollars from the visitor, one of them had a chance to give good return. This was one night but a few weeks ago, when Bryant returned while yet the caller was seeing Mrs. Bryant for a moment. A troubled look came into the boy's face, and he stammered out in vein at his lover. Remarkably apologetically to the tenant that the blamed machine had been cutting up tricks all day, the boy declared that he would have to go up a few stories and start down again in order to fetch the grand fellow. So up he shot, leaving Bryant cooling his heels below. On the way up he passed the other car and held a whispered consultation with its boy. Consequently the latter announced indifferently at the lowest station that he would start up all the other car returned, which wouldn't be but a minute, Bryant isn't of the build to approach seven flights of stairs without impelling reason and waited until the approach of the first car, whose boy had conveyed warning to Mrs. Bryant's caller.

FOUND HIS WIFE IN FLURRY

It was not long after the grand fellow turned the trick. The opportunity and the need were practically the same. Yet Bryant let himself into his hall while the caller was struggling to make himself presentably for departure. The newcomer found his wife in a flurry, and she was unreasonable kind. Also he found a hat on the rack that did not fit his head, the presence of which his wife explained by declaring that the janitor's assistant had left his and taken "that old one" of her husband's, and he had put it on for a day. That sounded like a pipe, Bryant thought, especially since examination of the hat showed that the janitor's assistant patronized the most expensive hat-tailer in the city. Mrs. Bryant continuing the purchase, Bryant began a search. Grabbing his stick by the wrist, he dragged her with him. It didn't require the muscle-reading abilities of a bishop to complete that quest. Mrs. Bryant's reluctance for approaching her boulevard would have been evident to a tyro. Into that room Bryant fairly dragged his wife, but it was empty and apparently in its usual condition of half disorder. This gave Bryant pause for but a moment. His first searching glance at Mrs. Bryant showed him that she had taken her hat to get and take away a sample of Croton from the pipes of their apartments. Pipes again, thought the husband,

Nature Intended What Was Right. GREAT ACHIEVEMENTS.

NATURE provides everything necessary for human existence. The more we penetrate the secrets of nature the more we find to wonder at and to convince us that the closer we live to the laws of nature the healthier are our lives. We can live long lives if we keep the body in health, strong to resist the attack of disease germs. Practice preventive medicine. Keep the blood pure and the principal organs active. Do not repose in the false idea that some tonic, made largely of alcohol, will give you strength; it is only a false strength at best and means the shrinking up of the red blood corpuscles. Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., never believed in a tonic or blood medicine made with alcohol, so he set about to find a means that would increase the red blood corpuscles and tone up and strengthen the human system. This he found in certain roots, herbs and barks, which he made into an alternative extract called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is a tonic and blood-maker without a particle of alcohol or narcotics contained in it. Nervous exhaustion, when the slightest exertion tires one, sleeplessness, pimples, boils, or colds are the warning signals that the blood is not in a healthy state.

With a body that has been weakened by an attack of Typhoid, Grip or Pneumonia, nothing will put on healthy flesh so fast as this tonic alterative of Dr. Pierce, a truly "Golden Medical Discovery." It nourishes the blood, and, instead of the ill-shaped corpuscles, the person's blood takes on a rich red color and the corpuscles are more nearly round.

Take for example the case of Joseph Napoleon Hebert, Chairman Board of Relief, of 293 St. Paul Street, Montreal, Quebec, whose picture is given above: "I am a firm believer in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Find that it has been of practical value to a number of men in my employ. They are especially exposed to inclement weather, and often the colds contracted run into pneumonia, stomach trouble, or kidney and liver disease. However, since we have known of the value of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' there is much less sickness, as this medicine seems to keep the blood in a healthy, active condition, and to ward off colds and all other diseases. It is a very fine tonic for a run-down system. I am pleased to acknowledge its worth." Nervousness and nervous affections is only the cry of the starved nerves for food, and when the nerves are fed on rich red blood, the person loses those irritable feelings, sleeps well at night and feels refreshed in the morning. Dr. Pierce also advises simple diet, work, play, right exercise, frequent baths to keep the skin and pores clean, and a gentle laxative occasionally for the bowels. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are gently laxative, do not grip, and are made entirely of vegetable ingredients. Do not eat too heartily, but when you do, take one as an after dinner pill.

If the man does not stop the cough the cough stops the man; stops his appetite, his sleep, his pleasure and his work. So called "cough remedies" sometimes relieve, but they don't go deep enough to cure. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures coughs and diseases of the respiratory organs perfectly and permanently. Furthermore, it contains no sugar to derange digestion, nor narcotics. It heals the lungs, stops the hemorrhage, if they are bleeding, and by increasing the action of the blood-making glands enriches every organ with good blood which alone makes a good body.

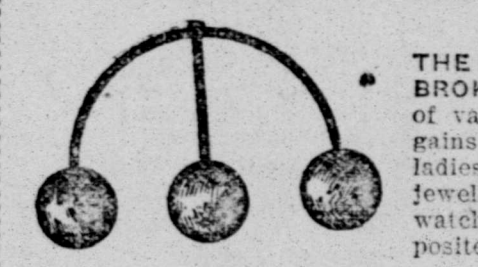

"My husband had been coughing for years and people frankly told me that he would go into consumption," writes Mrs. John Shireman, of No. 265 21th Place, Chicago, Ill. "He had such terrible coughing spells, he not only grew much alarmed, but looked for the bursting of a blood-vessel or a hemorrhage at almost any time. After three days' coughing he was too weak to cross the room. The doctor did him no good. I stated the case to a druggist, who handed me a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. My husband's recovery was remarkable. In three days after he was up and around, and in two more days he went to work. Two bottles cured him."

them this year, but will buy readily on the market here, says the Record-Stockman. One of the Texas men replies, on the back of the letter, as follows:

I have just received the enclosed letter and note what you say about the home treatment your Colorado customers desire. In reply will say that there is not a man who has cattle to sell in my knowing but what has more sense than a weaned dog. There has not been an ounce of beef shipped on that plan, to my certain knowledge. They might correspond with some of the Christian Scientists, I hear they are furnishing home treatment. Say to your customers that we have three and four-year-old steers, lots of them. Can raise them here just as good as anywhere in the world. If they will come down we will meet them at the nearest railroad station, set them up a good square meal or two, take them out in a good rig behind a pair of steppers, show them the cattle and bring them back. They can drink out of our bottle, slay off our plug, price these cattle to them by the head or what they are worth delivered aboard cars. If they are not then satisfied, give them my compliments." It is evident from the above that the Texas men are not yet lacking in nerve.

FRENCH PRINCE AN OFFICER FOR THE CZAR

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) PARIS, May 7.—A French prince has already for several years been an officer of the czar's army. Prince Louis Bonaparte is one of Russia's most brilliant cavalry generals, and is even now commander in chief of all cavalry in the armies opposing Japan on the Yalu river. But he is no longer the only French prince who serves the czar. A few days ago Prince Napoleon Murat was by a special order of Nicholas II. appointed chief of a Daghestan cavalry regiment. Prince Murat, who is said to have inherited the unusual gifts of his brilliant ancestor, the great Napoleon's greatest cavalry general, is a son of the late Prince Achilles Murat and his wife, Daulian de Mignoville, and was already in 1891—hardly twenty years old—considered one of the most gifted officers in the French army.

COMMITTS SUICIDE ON GRAVE OF PARENTS

BERLIN, May 7.—It has become known that Major Arthur Bonnet, who recently committed suicide by shooting himself on the grave of his parents, did not commit this deed because of his failure of being promoted, as was first reported. The authorities who have looked into his affairs have discovered that the enormously wealthy officer killed himself to escape being arrested for criminal assault on a young girl of 14, belonging to a prominent family at Augsburg. Immediately after this discovery the investigations were stopped by the military authorities, who had reason to fear that scandals of a similar nature in which officers of very high rank were involved would be unveiled, and decided that there are scandals enough cropping up in the army without the necessity of the authorities trying to find any more.

"ONE OF NAPOLEON'S MISTAKES"

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

VII.

THE one man, probably, among all the civilian and military agents of Napoleon whose grasp seized upon the very vitals of the Napoleonic system was Joseph Fouché. When Napoleon was advised after the fashion of his time to resort to killing in order to remove certain personages held to be dangerous to his sway, he refrained, with one notable exception, from scruples of heart and conscience. But he more than once declared in tones of bitter regret: "I should have shot Fouché!" "I should have hanged Fouché!" Yet in the most perilous days of the consulate and empire Fouché, self confessed boodler, briber, conspirator and traitor, was Napoleon's right arm. These are Fouché's own words for describing the intrigues which placed him at the head of the national police:

"Underhand means were the only ones that could be employed at first. The time for throwing of the mask was not yet come."
 Recalling, years after the event, the part he played in making Napoleon dictator of France, over the heads of rivals in the directory, he says:
 "The revolution of St. Cloud would have failed had I opposed it. It was in my power to mislead Sleyes, put Barras on his guard and enlighten Gobier and Moulins. I had only to back Dubois de Crance, the only opposing minister, and the whole would have fallen to the ground. But it would have been stupidity in me not to have preferred some future prospects to an unpromising blank."

Worming himself into the secrets of counter conspirators, he says, "I informed Bonaparte of all." Even Napoleon's household was invaded by this indefatigable spy. The royalist plotters for the return of a Bourbon king employed one of their clique, the Comtesse de Gulche, to open communications with Napoleon's wife. Says Fouché:

"She obtained some interviews, and I was informed of them by Josephine herself, who, in conformity to our conditions, cemented by a thousand francs per day ($200), instructed me in all that passed in the interior of the chateau."
 "The nature of the conflict in which I engaged may be conceived. Luckily, I had Josephine in my interest, and the private secretary was devoted to my views. Having charge of the papers and secrets of his master, he discovered that I spent 100,000 francs ($20,000) monthly for the purpose of keeping a constant watch on the life of the first consul. He called on me and offered to inform me exactly of all the proceedings of Bonaparte for 25,000 francs per month, and he made me this offer as a means of saving 800,000 francs per annum. I took care not to let this opportunity slip, of having the private secretary of the chief of the state in my pay, that chief whom it was so requisite for me to follow step by step in order to know what he had done and what he was about to do. The proposal of the secretary was accepted, and he every month very punctually received a blank order for 25,000 francs, the promised sum, which he was to draw out of the treasury. And I was enabled, reciprocally, to verify and strengthen the informations of the secretary by those I received from Josephine, and vice versa. I was stronger than all my enemies put together."

Describing in detail the methods which made him master of the secrets and of the fears of France, as Napoleon was master of her destiny, Fouché says:
 "It will not be doubted that I had salaried spies in all ranks and orders. I had some of both sexes hired at the rate of a thousand or two thousand francs per month, according to their importance and their services."
 "I also had my foreign spies. It was in my cabinet, also, that the foreign gazettes, prohibited to the perusal of the French people, were collected, abstracts of which were made for my own use."

"All the state prisons were under my control, as well as the gendarmerie. The delivery of the visa of passports belonged to me. To me was assigned the duty of watching amnestied individuals and foreigners. I established general commissariats in the principal towns of the kingdom, which extended the network of the police over the whole of France, and especially our frontiers.

 "I will not therefore dissemble that it was in my power to act upon the fear or terror which either more or less constantly agitated the possessor of an unlimited power. The great searcher in the state, I could complain, censure and condemn for the whole of France. Such then was this vast and terrific machine called the general police of the empire."

And Napoleon's minister of police did not overrate his genius and power. Says Bourrienne, Napoleon's first secretary:

"The machinery he set in motion was so calculated that the police was rather the police of Fouché than that of the minister of the general police."

Writing of one of the famous conspiracies against Napoleon, Bourrienne says:

"I have never had any doubt in my own mind as to the secret support given to the conspirators by Fouché's police."

Meneval, who served Napoleon as secretary from 1802 to 1814, says:
 "Two men, or, rather, two evil genii, had attached themselves to Napoleon's fortunes. Everybody will know that I am referring to Fouché and Talleyrand. Fouché needed intrigue as he needed air to breathe."

"It might have been said that Fouché held Napoleon under the effects of a charm, for with the best reasons for dismissing him the emperor still hesitated. One day, at St. Cloud, having, according to a very usual custom of his, come and seated himself on a corner of my writing table, Napoleon said to me, after some words of no importance and with a brusque change of subject, 'Meneval, I have a mind to dismiss Fouché.' I could not prevent myself from exclaiming, 'Sire, I expected this, and I am only surprised at one thing, and that is that you haven't sent him away before.' He rose slowly without answering me, took one or two turns in the study with his hands behind his back and then occupied himself with some other matter."

Dr. O'Meara reports a remark of Napoleon's at St. Helena in which he attempted to justify his relations with Fouché. Said he:

"As a man who had been a Terrorist and a chief of Jacobins I employed him as an instrument to discover and get rid of the Jacobins, Septembrizers and others of his old friends. By means of him I was enabled to send into banishment to the Isle of France 200 of his old associates, Septembrizers, who disturbed the tranquillity of France. He betrayed and sacrificed his old comrades."

Caulaincourt, general and ambassador under Napoleon's consulate, says, "Fouché was one of Napoleon's great mistakes," and Prince Metternich, the Austrian minister, grouping Fouché and Talleyrand, another notorious plotter in Napoleon's cabinet, says that the pair "never had any communications with one another except when they were hatching some plot against the established order of things and chanced to meet."

At last Napoleon saw his influence undermined by the ruling spirits in Paris while he was absent on the battlefield and vacated the throne of France. Among his opponents Fouché was conspicuous, and Napoleon declared at the time:

"I ought to have had him hanged. I leave that for the Bourbons to do."

But the Bourbons didn't hang Fouché, although he had voted to send their king, Louis XVI., to the scaffold, a fact he once boasted of to Napoleon, saying, "That is the first service I had the happiness of rendering your majesty."

The new Bourbon king, Louis XVIII., made use of Fouché, but the escape of Napoleon from Elba and his triumphant return to Paris placed his former adherent under suspicion, and the king's agents came to Fouché's house to arrest him. Slipping out the back door, he made his way to the house of Queen Hortense, Napoleon's stepdaughter, and coolly let the Bonapartists assume that he was ready to serve their cause afresh. How he did so is revealed in his own confession:

"I wished to have nothing further to do with Napoleon, yet if he should be victorious I should be compelled to submit to his yoke. On the other hand, I had engagements with Louis XVIII.—not that I was inclined to his restoration, but prudence required that I should procure for myself beforehand something in the shape of a guarantee. My agents, moreover, to M. de Metternich, the Austrian minister, and Lord Wellington had promised mountains and marvels. The generalissimo, at least, expected that I should divulge to him the plan of the campaign."

As ostensible supporter of Napoleon he obtained a copy of his plan for the Waterloo campaign and dispatched it by a woman confederate to Wellington's camp.

"At the same time I occasioned impediments on the part of the frontier which she was to pass in such a manner as to prevent her reaching the headquarters of Wellington till after the result."

So he kept the letter if not the spirit of his compact with Napoleon's foes and landed at last in the arms of the restored Bourbons.

PEN PORTRAITS OF NAPOLEON

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

VIII.

IN the high tide of the consulate, or about 1802, Napoleon attached to his household a new private secretary in the person of Baron Meneval. The description of Napoleon penned by Meneval is probably the best in existence which can be applied to the time of the coronation in 1804.

"Napoleon was at that time moderately stout," he says. "His stoutness was increased later on by the frequent use of baths, which he took to refresh himself after his fatigues. It may be mentioned that he had taken the habit of bathing himself every day at irregular hours, a practice which he considerably modified when it was pointed out by his doctor that the frequent use of hot baths and the time he spent in them were weakening and would predispose to obesity."

"Napoleon was of mediocre stature (about five feet six inches) and well built, though the bust was rather long. His head was big and the skull largely developed. His neck was short and his shoulders broad. The size of his chest bespoke a robust constitution, less robust, however, than his mind. His legs were well shaped. His foot was small and well formed. His hand, and he was rather proud of it, was delicate and plump, with tapering fingers. His forehead was high and broad, his eyes gray, penetrating and wonderfully mobile. His nose was straight and well shaped. His teeth were fairly good, the mouth perfectly modeled, the upper lip slightly drawn down toward the corner of the mouth and the chin slightly prominent. His ornamented by a little tricolor cockade, fastened with a black silk cord, and the gray surtout which covered the simple uniform of colonel of his guard. The hat and this surtout, which became historical with him, shone in the midst of the coats covered with gold and silver embroidery which were worn by his generals and the civil and military officers of his household."

 Meneval was a man of literary attainments and keen insight. He was with Napoleon over ten years and professed to give in his narratives "an exact and truthful idea of the great man who was their subject."

The Count de Las Cases, who was at St. Helena, gives but a brief description of Napoleon's physique while in exile, simply noting that he was lusty and having a certain embonpoint, somewhat suggestive of the typical alderman.

"He wears shoes in the morning and does not put on his boots until he rides out on horseback. When he first came to Longwood he laid aside his green uniform of the guard and wore a hunting coat, the lacing of which had been taken off. This coat soon began to look shabby, and his attendants were at a loss for a substitute for it. In other respects he retained his usual dress—namely, waistcoat and small clothes of white kerseymere and a black cravat. When he was going out any one of the gentlemen who happened to be in the room presented to him his hat—that little hat which has in some measure become identified with his person."

Las Cases' meager details are well supplemented, however, by Captain skin was smooth and his complexion pale, but of a pallor which denoted a good circulation of the blood. His very fine chestnut hair, which, until the time of the expedition to Egypt, he had worn long, cut square and covering his ears, was clipped short. The hair was thin on the upper part of the head and left bare his forehead, the seat of such lofty thoughts. The shape of his face and the ensemble of his features were remarkably regular.

"Of this portrait, which in its principal features underwent little alteration in the last years of his reign, I will add some particulars furnished by my long intimacy with him. When excited by any violent passion his face assumed an even terrible expression. A sort of rotary movement very visibly produced itself on his forehead and between his eyebrows; his eyes flashed fire; his nostrils dilated, swollen with the inner storm. But these transient movements, whatever their cause may have been, in no way brought disorder to his mind. He seemed to be able to control at will these explosions, which, by the way, as time went on became less and less frequent. His head remained cool. The blood never went to it, flowing back to the heart. In ordinary life his expression was calm, meditative and gently grave. When in a good humor, or when anxious to please, his expression was sweet and caressing and his face was lighted up by a most beautiful smile. Among familiar his laugh was loud and mocking."

"The stoutness which grew upon him in the last years of his reign developed his trunk more than the lower part of his body, a circumstance which made people say after his fall that his bust gave the idea of an imposing and majestic monument, the pedestal of which was not at all proportioned to its greatness."

"My portrait of Napoleon would be incomplete did I not mention the hat, without trimming or lace, which was

Maitland, the English officer who carried Napoleon to St. Helena in the Bellerophon. He says:

"Napoleon Bonaparte, when he came on board the Bellerophon, on the 15th of July, 1815, wanted exactly one month of completing his forty-sixth year, being born the 15th of August, 1769. He was then a remarkably strong, well built man, about five feet seven inches high, his limbs particularly well formed, with a fine ankle and very small foot, of which he seemed rather vain, as he always wore white on board the ship silk stockings and shoes. His hands were also very small and had the plumpness of a woman's rather than the robustness of a man's. His eyes were light gray, teeth good, and when he smiled the expression of his countenance was highly pleasing. When under the influence of disappointment, however, it assumed a dark, gloomy cast. His hair was of a very dark brown, nearly approaching to black, and, though a little thin on the top and front, had not a gray hair among it. His complexion was a very uncommon one, being of a light sallow color, differing from almost any other I ever met with. From his having become corpulent he had lost much of his personal activity, and, if we are to give credit to those who attended him, a very considerable portion of his mental energy was also gone. His general appearance was that of a man rather older than he then was."

Lady Malcolm, an English visitor at St. Helena in 1816, described Napoleon as being well proportioned, but "too fat" and having a particularly short neck. His expression was not at all fierce, but kindly, showing goodness of character rather than ability. Another English visitor in 1817 says that Napoleon's features closely resembled the printed portraits, but his face had grown fat, with large folds under the chin. Napoleon's expression was then sinister, forbidding and rather scowling.

NAPOLEON'S EARLY LOVES

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

IX.

WHEN Napoleon was in his seventeenth year he had a boyish attachment for Mlle. du Colombier, whose family welcomed him in a social way while he was stationed at Valence with his regiment. In the same circle he met Mlle. de Saint-Germain, of whom he afterward said, "Of old I loved both her virtues and her beauty."

These affairs seemed to leave no deep impression upon Napoleon's heart, and he remained fancy free until he reached man's estate, or 1795. About that time his thoughts turned to matrimony, hastened possibly by the good fortune of his brother Joseph. Bourrienne, his bosom friend, and in his confidence, says:

"He envied Joseph's happiness, who had just married at Marseilles Mlle. Clary, daughter of a rich tradesman in the town who enjoyed a good reputation. 'What a lucky rascal Joseph is!' That was the way in which he expressed the slight feeling of envy that was in him."

Being in Marseilles early in 1795, Napoleon paid serious attention to Mme. Joseph's sister, Desirée-Eugénie Clary, a girl of sixteen. Letters penned to Joseph during the separation which followed the first season of lovingmaking reveal Napoleon's state of mind. These letters were all written within the space of five weeks.

"Remember me to your wife and to Desirée," he writes cautiously, and still later: "Desirée asks for my portrait. I will have it taken for her. You must give it to her if she still wants it; if not, keep it yourself."

"In order to get to Genoa it seems necessary to cross the river Lethe, for Desirée is not written to me since she went to Genoa."

"I believe you purposely omit all mention of Desirée. I don't know whether she is alive or dead."

"If I remain here it is just possible that I might feel inclined to commit the folly of marrying. I should be glad of a line from you on the subject. You might perhaps speak to Eugénie's brother and let me know what he says, and then it will be settled."

"Continue to keep me carefully informed; talk to me of your plans and try so to arrange my business that my absence may not prevent that which I long for."

Napoleon was in turbulent Paris then, awaiting the call of destiny, which accounts for the anxious note in one of his letters from the absent "Eugénie," as she signed herself, the name which her lover favored.

"Oh, my friend," she wrote, "take care of yourself for my sake, for I could not live without you. Guard as sacredly as I shall the promise which binds us, for were it broken I should die."

But in spite of her protestations Eugénie was a lax correspondent, and at last Napoleon wrote in despair to Joseph:

"This affair must either be concluded or broken off. I await an answer with the greatest impatience."

Napoleon is depicted at this time as being in a most hopeless frame of mind. Says the Duchesse d'Abantes:

"He was morally and physically wretched. He was to be met wandering about the streets of Paris 'in an awkward and ungainly manner, with a shabby round hat thrust down over his eyes and with his curls (known at that time as oreilles de chien) badly powdered, badly combed and falling over the collar of the iron gray coat which has since become so celebrated."

Communication between the lovers soon lapsed into friendly messages sent in Joseph's letters. Meanwhile Napoleon was rapidly losing himself in Paris. Still inclined to "commit the folly of marrying" himself and to involve other destinies at the same time, he planned three weddings in the family of the Widow Permon, mother of the Duchesse d'Abantes. He had conquered the sections and was already flirting with Josephine Beauharnais, and also with two other widows who rejected offers of marriage. Says the Duchesse d'Abantes:

"Bonaparte proposed to my mother a match between my brother Albert and his sister, Mlle. Pauline Bonaparte, called by her family and all her friends pretty Paulette. This proposal he followed up by the plan of a second alliance between me and his brother Louis or Jerome. 'Jerome is younger than Laurette,' said my mother, laughing. 'Indeed, my dear Napoleon, you are acting the high priest today; you are marrying everybody, even children.' Bonaparte laughed, too, but with an air of embarrassment. He admitted that when he got up that morning a marriage breeze had blown upon him, and, to prove it, he added, kissing my mother's hand, that he had made up his mind to ask her to commence the union between him and herself as soon as a regard to decency would permit."

"My mother has frequently related to me this extraordinary scene, so that I am as well acquainted with it as if I had been the principal actress in it. She eyed Bonaparte for some seconds with an astonishment bordering upon stupefaction and then burst into so hearty a laugh that we heard her in the next room, where there were three or four of us. Bonaparte was at first much vexed at this manner of receiving a proposal which appeared to him quite natural. My mother, who perceived it, hastened to explain herself and told him that it was she, on the contrary, who in this affair played, at least in her own eyes, a perfectly ridiculous part. 'My dear Napoleon,' said she when she had done laughing, 'let us talk seriously. You fancy you are acquainted with my age. The truth is you know nothing about it. I shall not tell it you, because it is one of my little weaknesses. I shall merely say that I am old enough to be not only your mother, but Joseph's too. Spare me this kind of joke. It distresses me, coming from you.'

"Bonaparte assured her over and over again that he was serious; that the age of the woman whom he should marry was indifferent to him if, like herself, she did not appear to be past thirty; that he had maturely considered the proposal which he had just made to her, and he added these very remarkable words: 'I am determined to marry. They want to give me a woman who is charming, good tempered, agreeable and who belongs to the Faubourg St. Germain. My Paris friends are in favor of this match. My old friends dissuade me from it. For my own part, I wish to marry, and what I propose to you suits me in many respects. Think about it.' My mother broke off the conversation, telling him laughingly that for her own part she had no occasion to think any further. She gave him her hand and repeated, still laughing, that, though she had some pretensions, they did not aspire so high as to conquer the heart of a man of twenty-six."

Mme. Permon did not change her mind, and Napoleon wedded the "charming, good tempered, agreeable" Josephine Beauharnais. Then his Eugénie Clary, aroused at last, opened her heart in a pathetic letter.
 "You have broken my heart," she wrote him, "yet I am weak enough to forgive you everything. You are married, and I have no longer the right to love and think of you. The only consolation which remains for me is to be assured of your belief in my constancy; then I long for death, for life is a burden now that I may not consecrate it to you. I cannot accustom myself to the thought that you are married. It is too hard, too cruel. I will prove to you that I am more faithful to my engagement than you to yours, and, though you have broken the chain which united us, I shall hold it binding. I shall never marry. I wish you every happiness and all prosperity in your marriage, and I hope that the woman you have chosen will make you as happy as I had meant to do and as you deserve. But in the midst of your happiness remember poor Eugénie and pity her sad fate."

But she did marry, and Napoleon long interested himself in the fortunes of her husband, General Bernadotte. On one occasion he wrote to Bernadotte, who had just been wounded in battle:

 "I am glad to learn that Mme. Bernadotte is with you. Pray give her my affectionate regards and add that I have one little thing to reproach her with—she might have written me a line giving me the news of Paris, but I will have it out with her when we meet."
 Mme. Bernadotte asked Napoleon to stand as godfather to her firstborn, and when he became emperor he showered honors and wealth upon her husband, who was finally called from French battlefields to the throne of Sweden. Said Napoleon:
 "Bernadotte's becoming a marshal of France, prince of Pontecorvo and king of Sweden were all owing to his marriage with my first sweetheart."

The first offspring of this marriage, Oscar Bernadotte, married Josephine Beauharnais, daughter of the first Josephine's son Eugene. Oscar succeeded his father on the throne of Sweden, and his son, uniting in his blood that of Bernadotte, Beauharnais and Clary, is the present king of Sweden and Norway, Oscar II. Thus, while the Bonaparte dynasty is extinct, a lineal descendant of Josephine Beauharnais, the wife whom Napoleon divorced, and of Desirée-Eugénie Clary, the sweetheart who accused him of jilting her, wears a crown, which in the natural course of things will remain in the family for generations.

A CIRCASSIAN

We have not heard much of the czar's Circassian horsemen, but they rank with the Cossacks. Magnificent riders, daring swordsmen and fine shots, they combine the qualities that go to make an ideal cavalryman, and the Russian army has legions of these wild riders to uphold her honor.

ANOTHER HEROINE IN STATE OF INDIANA

Indiana has a new heroine. She is Mrs. Kate Hyland of Westport. She saved a Big Four freight and its crew from going through a burning trestle, south of Westport.
 Mrs. Hyland is the wife of a railroad engineer. She lives about 100 yards from the trestle. On the morning that she saved the train her baby was ill, and she was awakened at 4 o'clock by its crying.
 Taking a lantern, she stepped out of doors to get some water. As she opened the door, she saw the trestle ablaze. At the same time she heard the whistle of an engine.
 She hurried toward the track, waving her lantern just in time to stop the train as it came around a curve.

OIL AND GAS FIELDS In 1902 a total of 88,277,310 barrels of petroleum and approximately 205,033,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas were produced in the United States. The value of the oil was $70,981,625 and of the gas $30,754,967, for a total of $101,736,592. Oil is found in New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia, Tennessee, Illinois, Kentucky, Alabama, Missouri, Louisiana, Texas, Indian Territory, Oklahoma, Kansas, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, California and Alaska. Gas is also found in these states and territories, and likewise in Wisconsin, South Dakota, Utah and Washington. Gas and oil are not necessarily found together, but their concurrence is so usual that the presence of one is looked upon as an indication of the other.

In the year specified 36.38 per cent of the annual petroleum yield was produced in the Appalachian field, 24.46 per cent in the Lima, Ind., field and 37.16 per cent in all remaining fields, but subsequent calculations are showing that these proportions are materially changing. Oil exploitation west of the Mississippi and the Missouri has practically begun. In the West, Texas, Kansas and California are the biggest producers, but the limits of the fields there have not been defined, while in the other parts of the West the oil business has hardly passed the prospecting stage. The boom now is headed towards Indian Territory, but prospects in Wyoming and New Mexico are encouraging, and so it would not be surprising if the West within a few years should give a larger yield of oil and gas than the older fields of the East.

There is a quick method of getting rich in oil which is a standing temptation to the people to prospect at all times in the hope of making strikes. There is also a speculation—or a gamble, if you please—about the experience in the oil fields which is attractive to the average American as he wants to take a chance to make a great deal of money in a very short time and by a very small investment. Therefore it is no surprise that every section of the country is being searched, and that so many places have been discovered which will yield the valuable flow. The more people there are hunting oil, the larger the percentage of those successful, and therefore we have finds in all parts of the country. There are states in this union which are blanketed with oil leases. They are filed every day. The owners of the land do not know what the tests will show and they do not care to take the chance, but there are enterprising ones with money enough to try, and the lease is taken and a start made. Success comes to many of them, and large fortunes are found in a day. There are some, however, who lose in this game of chance, but it beats a faro bank, however, because more win than lose in the long run.

THE MAY FESTIVAL From early times the festival of May Day has existed, although its form has changed. Poets and old chroniclers wrote in praise of "Merry, merry May." That this festival came down from the Druids, who themselves had it from India, is proved by many facts and coincidences. The Druids celebrated worship to his god on the first of May by lighting immense fires in his honor. It is pleasant to recall a reminiscence of early years, when an aunt gathered her nephews and nieces around her on May eve and told them to be up at daybreak on May morning and wash their faces with dew from the grass on the lawn, as it would do much to make them beautiful. They were up with the lark and washed their faces again and again, and dew or no dew those children had more than the usual share of comeliness and good looks.

Then another little harmless superstition was indulged in. That delightful aunt had the kitchen table scoured very white and the children were sent out to collect snails in the grass and put them on a large deal kitchen table. Then a wooden dish was put over the snails and they were left to write the initials of the future husband and wife of those frolicsome youngsters. Another observance was the erecting of a tall May pole and crowning it with flowers and then the young people danced around the pole. Even men in vehicles drove them around the pole.

"How beautiful May and its morning comes in. The song of the maidens you hear them begin. To sing the old ballads while cowslips they pull. While the dew of the morning fills many pipes full."

In the early days of the settlement of Boston, when Dorchester took the lead, May parties were of frequent occurrence, with picnics in the Milton woods. The festival is still observed, but in different fashion, for which change in climate is partially, at least, responsible.

In Texas the custom is generally observed in communities in which German-Americans predominate, or by German societies. It is not always convenient to have the celebration on May Day, and another date during the month is selected. This is the condition in Fort Worth. There is to be a May celebration here, and elaborate preparations have been made for it. The Germans have the matter in charge, and have invited the entire city to take a part, naming the mayor as one of the principal speakers of the day. While it is an occasion which has a financial feature to it also, still it is an annual celebration in which many participate and all enjoy the festival. Children grow up to expect it year after year and when they become men and women they have not forgotten the pleasures afforded them in the past.

THE PACE THAT KILLS Denver comes forward with an occurrence which brings to mind once more the danger of the pace that kills, and the destruction it brings to the man who follows it.

In his cell in the Denver jail, A. D. Galbraith, a mine manager, is tortured by the remembrance of his cold blooded deed. He deliberately shot his wife while she was in bed and then lured his little son to the bedside and killed him. All that night he remained in the house with his paramour. A few months ago he was a prosperous business man and highly respected.

Galbraith says in answer to questions that he went the pace that kills. He did not remember his home life at all times and joined with women who were not of his class. From one thing he went to the other, until crime showed him a way to get the money necessary to his excesses. He forgot his duty to his home, his duty to society and his duty to his business, and giving himself up to the pleasures that come with the wild life, he gradually started downward. It is a long climb and a hard one to get to the top, and only those who have made the effort know that to reach the highest rung of the ladder one must toil unceasingly. But when one starts down, he goes quickly. In life it is just life the fireman when he is working alongside a high building. He mounts higher and higher, and the moments appear as minutes and the minutes appear as hours to those who strain their eyes and crane their necks to see him reach the top. When he starts down he wraps his extremities about the sides of the ladder and slides quickly to the bottom. The difference is that when he reaches the ground he is ready to work at some other place where his chief directs, but the ladder of life is different. The man who climbs the ladder in life has a chief—the brain. It directs him how to reach the top, and slowly he finds his way. But when he starts down, he goes hurriedly, and when he gets to the bottom the brain is gone, the mind is abused and unable to direct, and at last he is a wreck alongside the pathway.

The pace kills, and too often, as in this instance, it kills the innocent as well as the guilty. This man's wife and child have been given actual death of the body; the man has the living death, and the cold comfort of remorse in a prison cell. Boys study these stories of every day life and do not go the pace that kills. There is no future in it that would make your mother proud of you.

The city council is following a proper course in endeavoring to increase the facilities of the fire department. The city is growing every day and it is covering a great deal more territory now than when the present fire department was equipped. There are more people to protect, more homes to look after, and if there is any possible way by which the needs of the Seventh, Eighth and Ninth wards can be given each a fire station, it should be done. Money spent for such protection will not be criticised by the people, because it is in the interest of the people. It is true there have been no large fires in those wards recently, but we never know where one will break out, and probably the protection now asked for will more than save the people the amount it costs, during the next few months. Judge Parker ably defended the Third ward from assault Friday night when the suggestion was made to move the Chambers Hill fire hall to the Seventh ward, but this was a suggestion in fun, just to initiate the new member. He showed, however, that the Third has a representative ready at any time to defend its interests. The Chambers Hill fire station belongs to that section. The people there provided it, the lot for the place being given by the late A. J. Chambers, and there it will remain. It is located in a thickly settled community now. In the past few months many homes have been built in that section and more are going up every day. If it can be done, the council should provide the three stations, and surely some one will be found who will help the city along with the ready money necessary.

While it is true the Texas Immigration Bureau, with headquarters in this city, is a private concern, maintained for profit, Fort Worth cannot overlook the fact that it will be of much advantage to this part of the state, since its efforts will be mainly directed in settling up the section of the state directly in the Fort Worth trade territory. President Oswald Wilson has just returned from the East and announces that large parties of homeseekers are to be brought through this city, in which event the impressions they will form of Fort Worth will be valuable or otherwise, just as Fort Worth seeks to make it. If these strangers coming through here are given a cordial welcome when they reach Texas, they will be so favorably impressed with this city, that whatever they can throw here in the way of trade will be given us. Therefore, it would be well for Fort Worth to look to the new-comers, give them welcome, show that this city can supply whatever wants they may have after they become Texans, and we will always have them as our friends.

In the Current Issue Col. Louis J. Wortham speaks of the tendency of the people in the state to patronize St. Louis newspapers, and suggests that there are papers in Texas which are good for all purposes. For several years certain St. Louis and Kansas City papers have sought to get readers in this state by sending out a paper which has a date ahead. It reaches Texas on the day it is dated, and is supposed to be a fresh paper of that day. In fact it is old news which can be secured in the Texas papers twelve hours before the foreign papers reach here, and the Texas papers are entitled to the patronage. Give Texas newspapers the chance to serve you with the news, and you will find that they are up to the hour on that which is reliable and late.

Mineral Wells Could do no better than expend some effort in advertising the waters in Fort Worth. During the past year thousands of people have located in that city and many of them have never even heard of the great Texas health resort, which lies right at the door of the Panther city. A little judicious advertising close to home will bring beneficial results.—Mineral Wells Index.

That is a pretty good idea. Try The Telegram. This paper goes into more homes than any paper in this county, and it is in the home that you want to put your good water. At the same time The Telegram goes into many other counties—some dry counties, too—and they all want to know where to get water.

Dallas has secured the Bankers' convention for next year. Its dollars to doughnuts that when the time comes to arrange for the entertainment of the convention Dallas will come over and ask Fort Worth to help. Dallas has done this every time she has had a crowd to take care of. Fort Worth people and Fort Worth money assisted in the Confederate reunion fund, and a Dallas man came to the cattlemen's convention and claimed that Dallas put into his hand $80,000 for entertainment purposes.

If you are going to the St. Louis exposition, do not fail to hide away $21.20, so you can get a chance at every one of the shows on the Pike. What matters it what state buildings and international displays are overlooked if you see all of the dancing girls and the midway attractions?

Will the fellow who goes to all the shows on the Pike at the World's Fair be called a piker?

BANISHED FROM VIENNA FOR THEIR DISSIPATION

VIENNA, May 7.—Emperor Francis Joseph has banished his brother, Archduke Louis Victor, and his nephew, Archduke Otto, from Vienna. His brother has been told to remain in Meran permanently, and Otto is in temporary disgrace. Archduke Otto is 39. Two lives stand between him and the throne of Austria-Hungary; those of the emperor and Archduke Francis Ferdinand, whosemorganatic marriage prevents the crown going to his descendants. Archduke Otto has been notorious for years. Once he stopped a funeral until he had jumped his horse over the casket. Another time, but for the benevolence of his own aide-de-camp, he would have taken a dozen human con-

Good Stories of The Day

RELIGION FOR THAT REGION The Rev. V. B. Carroll, a prominent southern clergyman, tells the following story, says the Mobile Register: "We were driving out one Sunday from Decatur, when we came upon a negro with a club in his hand and a freshly killed possum on his shoulder. We stopped to examine his prize, and the colonel said: 'My friend, do you know it is Sunday?' 'Sartin, boss.' 'Are you a religious man?' 'I are. I see just on my way home from church.' 'And what sort of religion have you got that permits you to go hunting on Sunday?' 'Religion? Religion? queried the man, as he held the possum up with one hand and scratched his head with the other. 'Does you 'spect any black man in Alabama is ever to the house of no religion dat 'lows a possum to walk right across the road ahead of him an' git away free? No, sah! A religion which won't lend a little when a fat possum heads you off couldn't be established round here by all the preachers in the universe.'"

EVERYBODY SATISFIED William Redmond, M. P., once arose to speak in the house of commons, and there came a question, hurled at him from the right side of the house: "Will you vote for the bill if it comes up?" Mr. Redmond looked from one side of the house to the other and slowly answered: "I will." Immediately the right side of the house burst into a storm of applause. But Mr. Redmond continues, as soon as he could be heard: "Then storm came from the left side, and as soon as it subsided for a moment he completed what he started to say: "—answer that question."

DEBATE AND JUST TALK Although the convention of the daughters of the American Revolution is a thing of the fortnight past, stories continue to crop out about the difficulty they had in enforcing the rules of parliamentary procedure. On several occasions the women in the house wished to talk the frequent use of the gavel that order could be maintained. On one occasion an amendment was offered, and then a substitute to that amendment, whereupon at least twenty delegates rushed to their feet. "Madam President General," shouted one woman from Massachusetts, "you know that a substitute to an amendment is not debatable." "Well, Madam President General," cried a delegate from New Jersey, "I do not want to debate the question. I only want to talk about it. Now, I hold," etc.

JUST THE SAME "Here's a note from Mr. Jason saying not to come to dinner tonight, as his wife is dangerously ill. Isn't it sad?" "It is, indeed, by Jove. Still, I suppose we can go to a restaurant."—Brooklyn Life.

MEANING OF THE CROWD "What's that line of people in front of your house?" "Oh, they're neighbors who have heard our cook was due to leave, and they're waiting for a chance to engage her."—Chicago Post.

EXPORTS OF LIVE STOCK

Large Increase Shown in Cattle and Sheep During March, the Greatest Gain Being in Trade With Great Britain

The advance sheets of our trade with other countries during the month of March show good increases in cattle and sheep exports and moderate declines in horses and hogs. They also show that the average valuation of cattle was smaller than last year, that of hogs and sheep being slightly larger, while there was also a small reduction in the valuation of horses.

The number of cattle shipped during the month was 46,012 head of a total valuation of $3,889,804, or an average value of $84.71 per head. During March, 1902, the total exports were 25,741 head and the average valuation $90.41.

The number of hogs exported amounted to 326 head against 468 last March and the valuation was $9.33 per head as compared with $9.46 during the same month of the corresponding year. Sheep showed a good gain, the aggregate total of exports being 43,251 head as against 14,044 head last March, while the valuation was $6.85 as compared with $6.19 for the same month last year.

In the matter of horses there was not a great deal of difference, the total number of exports being 4,406 head compared with 4,709 last March. The valuation this March was $76.85, as compared with $79.33 per head during March a year ago.

The exports of mules were larger and the increase in valuation was a noticeable feature of the commerce. There were 586 head sent out during the month at an average price of $122.45, whereas during March, 1902, the total was 374 head valued at $97.43 each.

For the four months of the fiscal year ending with March the total exports of cattle were 410,816 head at an average valuation of $76.85, as compared with 249,492 head during the previous year which were valued at $78.70 per head.

The exports of hogs during the same period were 4,112 head, against 2,435 head the year previous, and the valuation was $8.21 per head, compared with $9.58 during the previous period. This latter comparison reflects the low state of the market during the latter part of last year.

GROWING ACHES AND PAINS Mrs. Josie Sumner, Bremond, Texas, writes, April 18, 1902: "I have used Balm Snow Liniment in my family for three years. I would not be without it in the house. I have used it on my little girl for growing pains and aches in her knees. It cured her right away. I have also used it for frost bitten feet, with good success. It is the best liniment I ever used." 25c, 50c, $1. Sold by H. T. Pangburn & Co.

"Missouri Kid" Sentenced the Day Partner Is Hanged

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 7.—On May 13 "Bill" Rudolph, "The Missouri Kid," will hang at Union Mo., on the same gallows upon which his nifty young accomplice, George Collins, paid the extreme penalty March 27.

The passing of Rudolph will close one of the most desperate chapters in Missouri's criminal history.

Brief as was his career of crime, it was characterized by an abandon and recklessness which elicited awe if not admiration.

A year and a half ago Collins, who was rarely cast upon the world by his mother's second marriage, drifted into Union, Mo., and met "Bill" Rudolph, a country idler, his same age, 19 years.

Collins had served with Funston in the Philippines, had been discharged and returned to the United States. Rudolph took him to his parents' home, a three-room hut, just outside of Union. Much of their time was spent in devouring trashy literature.

On the morning of January 25, 1903, officers of the Union bank, a small institution in the town, discovered that their vaults had been dynamited and looted of $12,000 in currency and $110,000 in securities.

Pinkerton men were put to work. Charles J. Schumacher, a Pinkerton detective, figured that the job had been done by some one familiar with the bank.

He learned that "Bill" Rudolph had a poor reputation and disguised as a hunter, he visited the Rudolph hut and asked for food.

He was admitted readily. He learned that from comparative want the old man was making unusual purchases in the neighboring town of Stanton.

Summoning a posse, including Sheriff Bruch, he visited the home the next day. Rudolph told the story of his approach.

"That's them. You women this mother and two sisters) go into the cellar. Uncle and Dad, you get out. We have to fight our way through," were Rudolph's laconic orders for the battle. They were obeyed. He seized a pistol. Collins got two, and they took positions at the door.

The posse, led by Schumacher, was within ten feet of the door when Rudolph and Collins leaped out. Statements of survivors indicate that the young bandits opened fire without warning, but they maintained the posse fired first. Schumacher fell at the first shot. The others fled. One of the posse declares Collins fired a bullet into Schumacher's head while he lay on the ground.

Collins denied this, and exhibited a wound in his head which, he declared, prompted him to shoot.

After the posse was routed the youths gathered their currency, burned the $110,000 worth of securities and fled to a neighboring farm, where they compelled a man to sell them two horses, paying him $200 for them.

Search was made for weeks and the Pinkertons redoubled their efforts and vigilance.

Superintendent G. O. Charlesworth took command, and arrested the pair at Hartford, Conn.

While incarcerated in the St. Louis jail Rudolph, through the collusion of fellow prisoners, escaped. Collins had been tried and convicted and sentenced to hang. He had appealed and was waiting the slow process of final decision.

Last February Rudolph was discovered in the Lansing, Kan., penitentiary, where he had been sentenced for safe cracking. He had taken an alias, shaved his head and pried out several of his teeth to avoid identification.

When confronted he admitted his identity, was pardoned and brought to Missouri for trial.

On Saturday, March 27, the date set for the execution of Collins, Rudolph was convicted and sentenced to hang May 13.

Collins was hanged at Union, Mo., at 1:55 p. m. One hour later sentence was passed on Rudolph. Collins had testified in Rudolph's behalf only the day before and had sought vainly to exculpate his pal of the murder charge. He couldn't testify that he had killed Schumacher, as his testimony in his own case was a matter of record. But he did swear one of Schumacher's own party accidentally killed him.

No gamer man than Collins ever went to his death. He said he would "die like a man," and he did.

Standing upon the gibbet, his arms pinioned and the rope about his neck, he said:

"Cut 'er loose, Bruch, and be sure you make a good job of it."

Rudolph's nerve is no less remarkable. "It's all right," he says. "George is gone; I'd just as soon follow suit."

THE LIVES OF "WHITE NEGROES"

An Interesting Paradox Presented in the Way That They Live

DENIED ADVANTAGES

Of the Whites They Suffer Disabilities of Their Colored Brothers

WASHINGTON, May 7.—The people termed and classed as "white negroes" form one of the most interesting paradoxes in American life. The amalgamation of the white and black people of this country finds a prophetic suggestion in the constantly increasing numbers of "white negroes." This malad mixture of negro blood, though infinitesimal, works a terrible disinheritance for the man or woman, who, by every appearance and feature, is entitled to be a white person. They belong to no race and yet they must inherit all the disabilities suffered by the race to which they are least related and are denied all the advantages that might accrue to them from the white race. Amalgamation of the white and black races calls to mind some curious experiences connected with those who are already amalgamated that may be of interest. The complications and confusions resulting from the anomalous position of these people are often as amusing as a "Comedy of Errors" and as tragic as a well-planned drama. These people are not responsible for their anomalous position of being white in some communities and to some people, and negroes in other communities and other people.

The actual experiences of many of these people in their efforts to live the double life into which they are forced would furnish the most kind of material for fiction. To those who have studied appearances for the past thirty years, the negro is not only bleaching out in complexion, but the number of those who are altogether white in appearance, yet are still classed as negroes, is observably on the increase. There are but two courses open to these so-called "white negroes." The one is to remain where American prejudice forces them to stay and heroically share the fate of their darker kindred, freely marry with those who are black, and in this way force each generation of the negro race to become of a lighter complexion. Or betake themselves to communities where they are not known and into the society of white people exclusively. Thus thousands of them, worn out with the ceaseless struggle against race prejudice, go where they are not known and pass for white.

In Washington there are more swart colored folks of the "white negro" variety, who are well educated and well to do, than in any other city in the world. They have their old families and their parvenus just like white society—literary persons among them and statesmen, too, and the life of the Afro-American four hundred in Washington is worth the pains of living. To begin with, the various sets and cliques in the social whirl are numerous, and even if all those who are equal mentally, morally and financially chose to join in one grand social union, it would be inconvenient to do so. It would be easier to locate the north pole than to find "the great and only" among the numerous colored social circles of Washington. The old citizens think they are the elect, the chosen, and dare anybody to dispute it.

The Making of Gay Widows

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

If you are a practical business man, bent on making a fortune for your family, it might be well for you to look about you a bit, and study the widows and orphans you encounter.

There are few sons and daughters who are really benefited by the fortunes left them by hard-working fathers.

The average will is contested and leads to discord and ill-will among the heirs, and the fortune accumulated with industry is dissipated in extravagance.

No one man in 1,000 is great enough to derive benefit from money he does not earn.

Then behold the widows of rich men! On every hand you may see them—past middle age and worn with the cares of helping accumulate the fortune they were never allowed to enjoy—their children, the holders of the purse to the land where banks are not known and coupons are not valued. And now, behold the result!

Here is one—a type of thousands—all her life she has pinched and saved and stifled a woman's natural longing for pleasure, social life and becoming apparel. She married an enterprising young man early in life, and together they established a home.

She helped him save and accumulate, but while he found recreation in business journeys and in coming in contact with bright men at clubs and political dinners, his wife plodded along a monotonous domestic career, and rarely saw beyond the limits of her native town.

The husband explained his desire to provide for their old age, and assured her that at a competence of $5 was referable to a trip to Europe or a sojourn at Saratoga or a winter in the south at $5 or 40.

When the husband died in his late sixties, and left a rich widow, she proceeded to do the things she has always longed to do, despite the fact of advancing years she goes. So a visitor would have been becoming 20 years earlier, and she arrayed herself in jewels, silks and laces, and called forth to see the world.

She finds many others like unto herself wherever she goes. So a visitor is her type that they might be called the widows of the aftermath. They are reaping the late harvest and winnowing the sheaves they missed in the summer season. Many of them are as full of sentiment and romance as a girl in her teens, and far more frank in the exhibition of it.

If they seem ridiculous to the men who watch and criticize woman's conduct, would it not be well for these critical men to pause and ask themselves whether they are preparing the way for other widows of the same type?

Are you, sir, denying your wife the recreation and the apparel you can well afford to bestow, in order that you may leave her a fortune when you die? If you are, be assured it will be spent in fine clothes, travel and amusement, not in a monument to you.

If you are allowing sentiment to become a thing of half forgotten youth, and if you expect your wife to plod along with a silent understanding of your regard and appreciation of her charms and worth, be assured she will seek for sentiment in younger men when you are turned to dust.

Take your choice—give your wife a happy time while you are alive, take her on a journey and treat her like a lover, and know that she will miss you and love you if you pass from earth before her, or hand up your money and your affections and leave her a fortune to squander in forgetting you.

It is the undemonstrative and miserly husband who makes the gay spendthrift widow.

and nearly spherical in form. Each female produces an average of about 25 eggs, about 20,000 of these eggs being required to make an ounce in weight. After the infant worm has gnawed its way out of the egg it proves itself at the outset a prodigious eater, usually consuming its own weight in leaves every day.

The insect becomes restless when full growth is attained, stops eating and throws out the silken threads. This silk is formed in a fluid condition and issues from the body of the worm apparently as a single thread and in a glutinous state. From this the cocoon is constructed, and within from three to five days the worm is safely sheltered in this fragile home. In order to prevent breakage of the delicate silken threads by the moth in emerging from the cocoon, the cocoons are steamed until the imprisoned insects are presumably dead.

The next operation is the winding off of the silk. The outer silk, known as floss, is utilized for carding, while the inner cocoon is tough, compact and strong, being composed of a single continuous thread. The requirements to insure success in silk work are numerous. However, it is necessary that the room in which the silk worms are reared be warm in winter and well ventilated. If only a few insects are raised trays set on tables will serve admirably as the only equipment, but if the industry is to be carried on on a somewhat large scale it is desirable to have deep shelves ranged one above the other. When about to hatch the eggs are spread on a tray and over them is placed ordinary mosquito netting covered with finely cut leaves. When the newborn worms pass through the meshes of the net in search of food they may be transferred to any place desired. Later it is wise to provide tiny arches or twigs, into which the worms may mount in order to spin their cocoons.

The great boon for the American silkworm culturist of the present day is found in the fact that Osage orange leaves have been discovered to be as good food for silk worms as mulberry leaves and the silk produced on this new diet is of the finest quality. The Osage orange is, of course, found in all parts of the United States, and there is consequently removed all possibility of a repetition of the losses which ruined the American silk culture industry during the first half of the past century. One of the pioneers of this new era of silk-worm culture in America is Mrs. Carrie Williams, of San Diego, Cal., who sends out annually great quantities of eggs, whereas Dr. W. L. Hill has at Fortis, Ill., an institute from which over 1,000,000 silk worms are shipped annually.

turned to the cultivation of tobacco. In Carolina and Georgia, however, the industry thrived in a much greater degree. Eggs were brought to those colonies from England, and for more than a quarter of a century silk was exported to London continuously in considerable quantities, and the volume finally reached such proportions that a silk-reeling mill was established at Savannah. After the War for Independence silk-worm culture did not revive in the South, but strangely enough it was after the colonies had attained their freedom that the industry came to its fullest development in more northerly climes.

The long conflict with Great Britain served as a blight upon the activity in all parts of the country, but whereas in the South after peace was declared the people made no effort to again develop the promising enterprise, in the North there was much activity on behalf of the infant industry. The middle of the eighteenth century found silk-worm culture gaining a foothold in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Massachusetts, and such was done by Benjamin Franklin and other public-spirited citizens to encourage the extension of the scope of the work.

After gaining such a foothold it seems strange that so promising a line of work should have been abandoned, but the collapse of silk-worm culture in America at this time was even more dramatic than its inception had been. It resulted from a speculative fever which frequently finds a counterpart in this age in another sphere of operations. During the years between 1838 and 1844 large nurseries of Chinese mulberry trees were established, and it was in this product that speculation ran rife. For a time yearling trees sold for prices that ranged all the way from $3 to $5 each, but in the winter of 1844 there came an unusually severe frost, which destroyed hundreds of thousands of the young trees and sounded the death-knell of the industry in America for the time being. The ruin was especially complete by reason of the fact that many of the silk-growers had purchased the trees at fancy prices and thus had invested in the industry far greater capital than was necessary or desirable.

Fully a quarter of a century ago the United States Department of Agriculture began practical investigation of silk-worm culture, but it has been only within the past few years that the revival of the industry on this side of the Atlantic has assumed tangible form. The experiments which have been conducted by the Division of Entomology at Washington have established the possibility of raising a most excellent quality of silk-worm cocoons over nearly the entire country, up of a reel and the spinning of silk by women operators. Soon Uncle Sam hopes to be in a position to supply silkworm eggs to all persons who ask for them, and it is believed that once a foothold is gained the new activity will thrive apace.

The fact that silkworm culture may be carried on in any ordinary residence, and with the most modest expenditure for equipment, would appear to substantiate the claim that no other business enterprise lies so well within the limitations of the members of the gentler sex who desire to engage in some profitable activity without neglecting household duties, and will instruct any woman who may be interested in the cultivation of the mulberry tree and the scientific rearing of the silkworm. However, the enthusiastic Southern woman hopes are long to enlist the good offices of Uncle Sam in a still more pretentious project. It is her aim to ultimately establish a national College of Scientific Silk Culture in the buildings of the Charleston Female Seminary. Miss Kelly is willing that the United States government shall use, rent free for five years, these buildings, which are worth $20,000.

However, quite a number of American women have not waited upon the government crusade in order to take up the attractive work of silk culture. In Los Angeles the progress made has been particularly notable, and has resulted in the Los Angeles Silk Culture Club, an association of women which is absolutely unique among the organizations of the country. The club has already engaged "missionary" work to the extent of issuing a book of instructions, and has thereby enabled many young girls, who would otherwise be compelled to engage in clerking or other poorly-paid occupations, as well as numerous invalids and elderly women, to engage in this light out-of-door employment.

The Los Angeles Club has received from a New York silk manufacturer an offer to accept the major portion of the output of all the members at the highest market price. Individual successes on the part of members have been particularly gratifying. One California woman last year raised nine crops of cocoons, while quite a number of her coworkers were successful in securing eight crops, these figures being rather impressive in comparison with those concerning silkworm culture in Europe, where many women carry on the work on a small scale and secure but one crop annually. Nor is Los Angeles the only locality in which remarkable records have been made in this fascinating work. One family, consisting of a mother and several children, residing in the City of Washington, last spring raised over 15,000 worms.

Silk culture is one of the comparatively few which, having once gained a foothold on the American continent, was allowed to languish and practically decline. This interesting industry, to whose opportunities American people are now being aroused, was carried on quite extensively in this country over a century ago. The first inauguration of the industry in America was characterized by circumstances somewhat romantic. James I. of England had the greatest faith in the work, and in 1622 he sent to Virginia, his favorite colony, a great quantity of silkworm eggs and mulberry trees and offered handsome premiums for colonial silk, but after brief experiments the planters abandoned the new venture and again

The necessity of competition on the part of American silk culturists with the low-priced labor of foreign silk-raising countries is, to be sure, something of a problem, but in view of the fact that all the children of a household may assist in silk-worm culture, this obstacle is not as serious as might be supposed. Moreover, the gradual improvement of machinery is tending to equalize the difference in wages between this and foreign countries and will ultimately make it possible for the manufacturer to pay a better price for American cocoons.

The silk worm, the basis of this new matter, is, of course, the larva of a moth. Although there are several species, but one variety has been under general cultivation. The eggs of the silk worm are about the size of turnip seeds that people will take it for granted that they to read it all." - Washington Post.

The women of America are to have open to them another important and congenial line of profitable employment at home as the result of recent investigations and experiments on the part of Uncle Sam. Silkworm culture is the attractive means of money-making which is now to be brought within reach of any woman with even the most modest capital, and it is certain to prove one of the most interesting home pursuits which has ever been brought within the reach of women in this country. Moreover, the work is light, not requiring any excessive physical exertion, and while the remuneration, as in many another home industry, may be very moderate at the outset there is no reason why the profits may not be increased considerably by a natural development of the enterprise.

Secretary Wilson and the officials of the Department of Agriculture in their constant investigations in the animal and vegetable worlds for novelties which can be introduced into the United States with a view to increasing the wealth and productiveness of our country, have long been on the lookout for some occupation for American women seeking remunerative employment at home. They are convinced that they have discovered this in silkworm culture. All kinds of tests have been made at the department headquarters in Washington, even to the setting

Black and white ostrich plumes make a favored combination in a season when these two colors are much used in conjunction. As seen in the illustration, the shape of fancy black satin straw is somewhat on sailor lines, turned up at the back, with a double row of half-length ostrich plumes; the black ones close to the brim and the white ones nodding over them, encircling the crown. The under brim is faced with plisse black chiffon, and the upturned back is filled in with little black plumes caught with a full chou of black velvet.

The Smartest of Shit-waist Hats

A broad satin straw braid in a champagne tint has tiny gold braids interwoven to form a plaid pattern in this exceedingly smart hat destined for shirt-waist and other informal wear. The crown is low and broad, and the brim is bent into fascinating curves, eminently becoming above the face. The large rosette of black velvet ribbon at the side is centered with a huge gold cabochon decorated with cut steel work, and this catches the single sewing machine with all the effect of hand work. A velvet binding of the same tint threads through the brim to fall in loops and ends on the hair in the back.

Scilienne Promenade Costume

All of the sheer and lightweight fabrics are highly favored of fashion, and none more so than the scilienne, with their silky surface and dust-repelling qualities. As pictured, a cafe-au-lait tint in scilienne has much shirring and depends upon fancy gold braids for decoration. The blouse coat has a chasuble yoke defined with braids, the shoulder being extended down over the arm, and the bodice appear each side of the chasuble to afford the fulness which is pleated into the deep featherbone girdle. The skirt is shirred around the hips, and a shirred flounce is applied beneath a band of fancy gold braid. The shirring is executed with the oscillating stitch of the sewing machine with all the effect of hand work. A velvet binding of the same tint matching the scilienne finishes the hem.

Street Costume of Mistral Voile

Voile in its many varieties really leads the fashionable procession in the spring and early summer gowns. The mistral voile has a coarse curvaceous weave with a rough, crepe surface, and lends itself well to decorative purposes. Here the little Eton opens with a roll shawl collar over the lingerie blouse, a narrow black and gold braid being effectively used for trimming. The skirt is cut with double effect, the upper portion pointing in front tablier fashion and rounding up shapely to the back. A deeply fitted flounce of velvet ribbon, with little gilt buttons, gives the correct flare at the foot, this being maintained by a narrow band of princess mirlotch on the drop skirt or petticoat.

A Parisian Model Gown

Somewhat complicated are the details of this Parisian model emanating from the atelier of Bour. The jacket bodice is pleated into the shoulders both back and front, the pleats being released halfway down above gathered into the velvet strapped belt. The basques are arranged in postilion form at the back, and narrow to nothing near the front. A narrow vest of white embroidery lends a relief to the tan satin-faced cloth, and a cuff of the same appears in the sleeve. Wreaths and bands are made of big or little flowers—one, two, three, or even more, deep. Garlands of flowers and wreaths of roses always consort with the sleeve ruffles and other feathers that come under the head of "Louis" fashions.

Severely Simple Pedestrienne

Dark brown chevrot fashions this wool-text costume, on which a black sotchache at knee length, a handsome embroidered button marking the flare. The hem escapes the ground all around and is finished with a smart tailored binding.

BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT, MIRIAM SPIER.

There was a time when the term tailor-made called up visions of a dignified toilet built on the trimmest lines, with a finish that was above reproach. But all that has gone by with other evidences of the "simple life," which in these extravagant days is a theory all the more attractive because it is so far removed from gray fashions. The finish is still here, but it is no longer the finish achieved mainly by the tailor's sewing machine and goose. The whole range of materials from crepe de chine to homespun and tweed are made into use for the up-to-date tailor suit, and all the trimmings in the milliner's category are employed in unstinted extravagance upon it. The last line of demarcation between the tailor and dressmaker is down, and both are resorting to devices once monopolized by the milliner. The tailor had abandoned his legitimate tools for the needle, which accomplishes the larger part of his work. Tailor-made means many and are suited to all occasions. For morning wear skirts clear the ground two inches. For more elaborate use they sweep the ground all around, and, like the trained visiting costume, are an "ugly" length at front and sides. A skirt that lies two inches on the floor in the front would be adapted to the statuesque figure in museum halls, but for motoring feet it is an abomination. This is Lane Fashion, the one that is not to be shamed. Front panels and fitted flounces effects are not forgotten, but still figure on new models. The shoulder is long, as long as it can be, a seam at that point being most unpopular. To have front and back cut in one, with a cap of some order, depending between them low over the arm is a frequent ex-pedient. It would be safe to say that in a collection of models from well-known European makers not an observable break could be found between the shoulder and sleeve. This point is sure to be covered by a cape, a yoke or other detail. But the appearance is obtained in a host of ways, and as likely as not the sleeve is set high, where the slope is most apparent. It is, as has been often reiterated, the fact that is sought in this or any other year's style. Some of the new blouses, which are fitted at the bust and below, are shirred at the shoulder, and the shirring falls into line with the shirring of the full sleeve. This is one way of circumventing the situation and blending the high armhole so deftly with folds that its identity is entirely lost. But the cut of such a bodice needs an artist to accomplish it. The Eton blouse and bolero are the favorite jackets for walking suits. The former as a rule bags all around, but its pouch at the back has the appearance of a plait, which, coming at the waist-line, gives the compound title. From these comes the trimmer plain tailor-made, which is coming out with long fitted coats, but no such influence has been felt on this side of the water yet.

For sturdy wear there are more than the usual number of attractive materials. Among them browns and grays play a leading part. Such names, a tulle of certain new tones, as tobacco brown, mouse gray, and elephant gray, give a pretty definite idea of prominent shades. In chiton broadcloth, elephant gray, by the way, there was a costume shown recently which illustrated the independence possible in the present styles. The skirt—this when the full skirt is the one theme, but the hour-waist of that old corselet order which, in spite of its regular failure to make any sort of an impression, bids for favor every season or two. This was accomplished by one of the little loose boleros. Both bolero and skirt were trimmed horizontally with fancy black silk tulle. The repetition of lines as well as material on skirt and bodice is one of the demands of the present. If round and round garnishings appeal on the skirt they must also be hinted at, if not actually repeated, on the bodice and its sleeves. The majority of the smartest imported tailormades have full skirts cut clear to the girdle. A large number of such toilets are without the sign of a seam, the volume being plaited or shirred according to the whim of its maker. Take such a skirt, cut it with two inches on the floor in front and at the sides, and you have this season's masterpiece of the Parisian couturiere—a garment made without a thought of the exigencies of pedal movements. It is just such extremes that are driving the feminine world to open rebellion against such impediments. To every one it is obvious that if the bouffantry of skirts is encouraged, the introduction of the hoop-skirt or a modern guise of it is certain within a twelvemonth. That is what the Paris maker is aiming at. May his plans meet defeat and his allies be discomfited; it is only in the ranks of skirt cloth, tailormades that the hip yoke remains, and there it is likely to stay so long as amplitude at the foot is demanded. In spite of the fact that taffeta and other silk fabrics for the making up of gowns are increasing in importance, it is certainly evident that volles and etamines are shown in goodly numbers and in attractive shades. Coral and various tints of vivid pink and bright red seem to be great favorites, as is also a pale shade of mauve. These may be regarded as novelties, since the greater demand is for tulle, golden brown, gray and white. Etamines and volles are treated in various ways—either in closely shirred combinations or rather flat, so as to bring out the transparent effect over a matching silk foundation. No doubt the majority of women will with its wreaths of pompadour-colored ribbon and flowers, and the more practical turban can all trace their origin to that period of fashion. In some of the new bolero jackets, the shoulder seams are entirely done away with, the front and back being cut in one, but always well over the top of the arm. While the top of the arm will be tightly covered by the body of the waist, the sleeve proper will begin to widen from where it is attached to the body, and will show the most complicated trimmings from there until it ends in the lace ruffles. Lace wrist ruffles will be a characteristic common to almost every species of garment, whether it be the costume outer garment or tailored suit. Never has there been a more becoming fashion, nor one which bids to be more popular. The millinery shapes which will be fashionable during the summer mostly had their origin during the time of Louis XVII. They have been modified, no doubt, to meet the requirements of modern taste and custom.
