VERY QUIET DAY

No Developments Are Reported From War Zone, But Statement That Russian Army Has Twelve-Mile Front

BATTLE NOW EXPECTED

Losses in Ten Days' Fighting Varies Estimated From Forty to Eighty Thousand—All Authorities Admit Figures Will Be Large

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Another day has passed without developments of importance in the Manchurian war zone, except an official report from the Japanese, on October 21, evacuated the village of Shakhe. A dispatch from Mukden, however, says that the battle will be resumed soon. Beyond the general statement that Kurapatnik's front extends a line about twelve and a half miles in length, south of Mukden, supported by strong fortifications on the Hun river, little or no light is thrown beyond this advice on the general position of the opposing armies. Official figures of the casualties of the ten days' battle of Shakhe river are still lacking but a Mukden correspondent estimated the total losses on both sides at 80,000 Russian advisers say that the impending battle will be decisive.

DECISIVE BATTLE IS EXPECTED ANY TIME

BERLIN, Oct. 22.—Military opinion here has decided that while the Japanese were undoubtedly victorious in the battle at the Shih river, information with regard to the battle of the Shakhe affords no conclusive evidence on the vital point as to which side finished the fight in the better position. It is pointed out that Oyama can claim as the result of the fortnight's battle that he has driven the enemy fifteen miles farther north. At the same time it is said that Kurapatnik may be reasonably satisfied with having drawn the Japanese from their mountainous and fortified positions to the plain, where the chance of beating them will be better, especially after the Russian reinforcements have arrived. Everything points to a speedy renewal of the battle, which it is hoped, will be of a decisive character.

GERMAN SYMPATHY IS CLEARLY SHOWN

BERLIN, Oct. 22.—Germany's ambiguous attitude toward the war in the Far East is curiously illustrated by the official military organ's announcement that the kaiser's adjutant, Baron Wenge, has been appointed military attaché at St. Petersburg and at the same time attached to the czar's suit and headquarters. Clearer proof of official Germany's sympathetic neutrality could not be given than this arrangement, usual only between allied sovereigns.

NO NEW OF FIGHTING.
ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 22.—There was no news of fresh fighting today. General Sakharoff reports under this morning's date that last night passed very quietly. There were no collisions. The war office is not in position yet to give figures of casualties of the long battle below Mukden, but everything indicates that Russian losses have reached 40,000, the figure given by the Associated Press correspondent at Mukden. Another correspondent places the losses on both sides at 80,000. The war office is convinced the Japanese losses, while below those of the Russians, are almost as heavy.

ANNULLED THE JUDGMENT.
ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 22.—The admiralty council, sitting as a supreme prize court, today annulled the judgment of the Vladivostok prize court in the case of the British steamer Alanton, seized June 16 by the Vladivostok squadron, and her cargo released forthwith. The council, however, held that the suspicions entertained justified the steamer's arrest.

HOLLAND TO INSIST ON HER NEUTRALITY

THE HAGUE, Oct. 22.—Holland's fleet is mobilizing at Willemsoord-Den Helder, the principal Dutch naval base, as an intimation to Russia that Queen Wilhelmina is determined to defend the neutrality of her realm. The government is glad of this opportunity to indicate its attitude because of a recent article in the "Novoye Vremya," which suggested that Holland might be induced to aid the Baltic fleet on its voyage to the Far East. The article stated that Russia was desirous of arranging for a coaling station by purchasing a station and a pier on the coast of the Black Sea, and that the government has caused it to be announced that Holland purposes to keep and to defend its East Indian possessions.

THE CZAR MAY YET GO TO THE FRONT

LONDON, Oct. 22.—People outside of Russia have heard with astonishment the reiteration of the semi-official announcement that the czar would after all proceed to the seat of war for they naturally speculate as to what possible good he could accomplish in the Far East. The truth is that, had there been no such terrible crisis precipitated by the policy of the mischievous grand ducal ring, the Russian court would during this fall have intended to Tomsk for the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the foundation of that metropolis of Asiatic Russia. The war has spoiled the scheme for the great commemoration, but there are those among the bureaucrats at St. Petersburg who would persuade the czar to go to Manchuria, as his grandfather proceeded to Turkey during the conflict with the Sultan. Then Nicholas II could, of course,

FIRST WOUNDED ARE IN ST. PETERSBURG

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 23.—The first batch of wounded from the front, 145 in number, arrived here last night. A large crowd had assembled at the depot, and as the soldiers left the train, many of the officers without apparent injury but emaciated and weak to the point of collapse, and others again on stretchers, they were greeted with frantic cheers. The police had trouble in keeping the enthusiastic throng away from the invalids. Several pathetic scenes took place, the relatives of a number of soldiers having received permission to take charge of their own immediately after the men had passed inspection.

RUSSIAN CASUALTIES SIXTY THOUSAND

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Viscount Hayashi, the Japanese minister to Great Britain, late last night made public a report received by the war department from Field Marshal Marquis Oyama, relative to the Russian losses up to October 22. The report states that the Japanese took about five hundred prisoners, and that the number of corps on the battlefields along the Shakhe river was approximately 10,550. The booty taken by the Japanese includes forty-five guns, 477 rifles and 18,000 rounds of ammunition. All the dead were buried with military honors, the greater number during the truce of October 15. The total number of Russian casualties is given as 60,000. Further investigation with a view to establishing the exact number of loss is progressing.

TWENTY-SIX THOUSAND

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 22.—Official reports here state that since October 10, 26,000 wounded Russians have passed Mukden.

A STRIKE BREAKER SHOTS TWO OF THE CROWD

They Are Engaged in Efforts to Intimidate, and When He Warns Them He Fires With Fatal Results

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Oct. 22.—Two of the strikers at the American Steel Hoop Mills here were shot and killed tonight while attempting to intimidate Fred Wolfe, employed on the seven-inch combination mill of the upper plant. The dead men are Thomas Connelly, puddler; Patrick McLaughlin, rougher. Wolfe was arrested and admitted the shooting. He said that he intended to shoot them but not fatally. Connelly was the leader with several hunting troubles with the strike-breakers. Several minor encounters occurred. Wolfe refused to be influenced or interrupted by the strikers and after warning them to cease their annoyance under penalty, made good his threat.

EMBEZZLEMENT IS THE CHARGE IN BEAUMONT

Thirteen Thousand Dollars Is the Amount Which It Is Alleged Was Taken During Two Years

BEAUMONT, Texas, Oct. 22.—Charles F. Bridewell was charged in an affidavit before the county attorney with embezzlement of a total of $13,000 from the Southern Oil Well Supply Company. The affidavit was sworn out today by J. A. Wiggs Jr., manager and president of the Southern company. The affidavit charges fifty-one separate instances during which accused appropriated the sum which aggregates the amount stated above. The embezzlement is alleged to have occurred during the years 1902 and 1903, during which Bridewell was treasurer and chief bookkeeper for the company. He severed his connection with the company January 1, 1904.

Mr. Wiggs in a statement of the matter says that the charges have been withheld up to this time in order to give Bridewell opportunity to make a settlement to meet the deficit. Bridewell is well known in the city and prominent in church circles. He is about 35 years of age and has a wife and family. Upon being arrested and arraigned this afternoon before the justice of the peace he was released upon making bond in the sum of $1,000. Mr. Bridewell upon advice of his attorneys refused to make a statement.

Articles of incorporation are to be filed in Austin Monday, and the company will be known as the Bennett Cotton Company, with headquarters in Houston. This means a resumption of gins in twenty-five different localities. The new organization enters into lease with Granville P. Meade, receiver for the Texas Cotton Products Company, and the receivers for the Oklahoma Products Company and the Indian Territory Products Company, for the choice of plants in these districts. THE BISHOPS GET TLE CANON

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 22.—Canon thirty of the Episcopal church of the United States, relating to the remarriage of divorced persons, received what will, in all likelihood, be its last change in the house of Bishops late today when these bishops concurred thirty to twenty-eight in the canon amendment by the house of deputies on Thursday. Two amendments of minor importance were made by the bishops, necessitating the return of the canon to the house of deputies for concurrence. The first amendment is requiring the bishop of a diocese to declare in writing that in his opinion the case of the applicant for remarriage conforms to the requirements of the canon and the second eliminates the bishop of the canon, making the bishop the judge of whether or not the divorced person, having remarried, is entitled to admission to baptism, holy communion or confirmation. The adoption of this canon is a very decided victory for that party in the church in favor of prohibiting absolutely the remarriage of divorced persons or surrounding such marriages with the most restrictive conditions. The canon is a substitute for that which passed the house of bishops early in the general convention, but in which the house of deputies refused to concur.

THREE HUNDRED FALL FROM THE BLEACHERS

DES MOINES, Iowa, Oct. 22.—At a football game here today 300 boys and girls fell to the ground with the west end of the bleachers at the baseball park. Their escape from death and serious injury was little short of miraculous. They were piled in indiscriminate heaps, from which they were hurriedly summoned to the scene, but their services were found to be in most cases unneeded.

THE DIVORCE CASE OF BUFFALO BILL IS PENDING

The Report That It Had Been Withdrawn Is Not a Fact and a Hearing Has Been Had in the Case

CHEYENNE, WYO., Oct. 22.—The divorce proceeding of Colonel William Cody ("Buffalo Bill"), which created a sensation throughout the country when announced a year ago and supposed to have been dropped by the colonel, has not been withdrawn, and the case will be tried in the January term of Laramie county court by stipulation of the parties to this action. Judge Sibley in Sheridan, having been sworn off the bench. The case was before Judge Scott today on a motion of Mrs. Cody that the plaintiff's petition be amended, and that it be made more specific in allegations. Judge Scott ruled in favor of Mrs. Cody only in part. The charge made by Cody that his wife had conspired herself improperly was not sufficiently specific and the plaintiff was given ten days in which to file his amended petition and Mrs. Cody was given thirty days in which to file an answer.

BRYAN WILL HELP DAVIS IN HIS STATE

Nebraskan Speaks to Eight Thousand People at Charleston, the Capital of West Virginia

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Oct. 22.—William J. Bryan spoke here tonight to one of the largest audiences that ever attended a political meeting in this city. In spite of a drizzling rain and cold weather that struck the city, eight thousand people occupied rough benches in an open lot around the speakers' stand.

Mr. Bryan said his visit to West Virginia was an effort partially to repay H. G. Davis for the latter's support of his candidacy, heretofore when other moneyed democrats were unwilling to trust him at the head of the administration. While he did not vote for the nomination of Parker, he did vote for that of Davis. While the democratic platform did not go so far as he would like, it was a good platform and he endorsed every plank in it. He said imperialism is the issue of this campaign and was that of his campaign four years ago. Bryan left tonight on his special train over the Chesapeake and Ohio for Wheeling and will speak Monday at Benwood, near Wheeling.

FITZGERALD GETS IT

AS TO THE TARIFF

Judge Parker Makes a Strong Speech to Six Delegations Which Visit Him, Discussing Protection at Length

THE HAMILTON IDEA

Destroys Argument of Republican Party at Its Successive Stages and Shows Where Combines and Trusts Are Enabled to Flourish

ESOPUS, N. Y., Oct. 22.—Judge Parker made a strong speech this afternoon on the tariff issue to six New York Parker and Davis delegations, which called on the democratic candidate. The speech, which was liberally applauded, represented Judge Parker's view on the tariff question in every detail. Judge Parker declared that the tariff was for the rich and puts the benefits in their hands solely. He spoke.

Protection, I thank you for your generous assurances of the support of yourselves and the various clubs you represent in the campaign now being waged. My response shall be confined to the issue most prominently presented by your speeches.

In order to understand our present situation in respect to the tariff, it is best to glance at the past and see how we reached the position we now occupy. Our present opponents usually point to Alexander Hamilton as the first expounder of the protective system, and they are never weary of quoting from his report on 1791 in support of their positions. They speak of Hamilton's report on manufactures as though it were a report on protective. Even the editor of his complete works, the present senator from Massachusetts, does so. Being a report of manufactures only, it does not justify protective on wool, coal, lumber, ore, borax and other products of the soil, mines and fisheries, in which our present tariff abounds, and without which it could not last. Taking off everything that Hamilton did not include in his report and the allowance of special interests which the tariff represents would be shattered into fragments. Hamilton said that his object was to promote such manufactures "as will tend to render the United States independent of foreign nations for military and other essential supplies." Does anybody say that we have not reached that condition? Does anybody contend that the United States is still dependent on foreign nations for military and other essential supplies? Have we not frequently heard the note of alarm in Europe at the American invasion of the world's markets by our manufactured goods, especially those of iron and steel? Whether Hamilton's report, as to the best way to establish manufacturing industries, which, right or not, the object which he sought was long since gained, but the protective tariff is now vastly higher than that he recommended or probably conceived of.

THE FIRST TARIFF BILL

In this report Hamilton enumerated a number of manufacturing industries as already established in the United States in his time. Among these were leather, iron, steel, copper, brass, tiles, pottery, wood, paper, hats, carriages of all kinds, and most articles of personal clothing and household use. He said that he had grown up and flourished with a rapidly which surprises, affording an encouraging assurance of success, meaning success to other branches of manufactures. If these branches had grown up and flourished with surprising rapidity 130 years ago, what just claim on extravagant government bounties can they advance now? Although Hamilton is usually cited as the founder of the system, it really began before him. The first tariff passed in 1789; it was originally shipped, as a tariff for revenue only. Mr. Randolph was opposed to protection on principle but he yielded in some particulars to the advocates of the doctrine so that the bill became a tariff for revenue with some slight incidental protection, the average rate of duty being 8 1/2 per cent ad valorem. All our tariffs until 1816 were of this sort, and the argument used to support the very moderate protective features was substantially the same as that of Hamilton, already mentioned. It was coupled also with the argument on which Hamilton laid great stress, that the competition of domestic manufactures would reduce the prices of goods and prevent anything like monopoly. He did not foresee the combination of the present day ordered to do away with competition.

DEMANDED MORE PROTECTION

The war of 1812 and the embargo acts which accompanied stopped importation for the time being, having the effect of a tariff, and the same was the case again subjected to the competition which had before successfully met, they demanded more protection, and they got it. The tariff was advanced 24 1/2 per cent, and then by leaps and bounds until 1828, when it reached 28 per cent. The latter passed into history as the "tariff of abominations." It was followed by Clay's compromise tariff of 1833, which reduced duties by a sliding scale extending over a number of years of 20 per cent. Mr. Clay was at that era, and near his whole public life, the standard-bearer of "the American system" of tariff protection, and I wish to recall some words which he used in a debate in the senate of 1828, justifying his course in advocating that tariff reduction. He said: "No one, Mr. President, in the commencement of the protective policy, ever supposed that it was to be perpetual. We hoped and believed that temporary protection extended to our infant manufactures would bring them up and enable them to withstand competition with those of Europe." Mr. Clay has voted the prevailing opinion of the country that the protected trades were so long in a state of infancy. In fact, the infant industry argument was then superseded by the proper labor agreement. It was then contended for the first time that the tariff should be used to compensate the American producer for the higher wages he had to pay as compared with his foreign competitor. This argument has at times done great service, although now quite threadbare. I wild dwell upon it a moment. Inasmuch as the law puts tariff benefits exclusively in the hands of the capitalist and provides no means for the gaining of the wage-earner his share, the supreme virtue says let the government take care of the rich and the rich will take care of the poor—a doctrine abhorred of all sound-thinking men. But it is not true that the wealthy enlarged profits are on that account divided among the workmen helping produce them.

THE WALKER TARIFF

Protection did not come to an end, however, in 1846. On the other hand, it was augmented in that year from 20 per cent to 32 per cent average. The next tariff enacted in 1846 was a reduction to 23 per cent—the Walker tariff. There was a further reduction in 1857, in which the protected classes themselves concurred in a 50 per cent average.

At this point in our history the chief question ceased temporarily to be an issue in American politics. It disappeared so completely that when the republican party was formed nobody thought of reviving it, and this is a good reason for believing that it never would have been revived but for the civil war, which necessitated the raising of a large revenue to meet extraordinary demands upon the treasury. Certain classes availed themselves of this opportunity to reintroduce the protective system for their own advantage and they were successful.

The result was the Morrill tariff, or rather, four successive installments of the Morrill tariff, of which Senator Sherman in a debate on the tariff bill of 1862 spoke as follows: "It must be remembered that the present duties, taken together, are far in excess of what they were before the war and that they have been three times largely increased since the passage of the Morrill tariff act of 1861. If the present rates of duty were high enough during and since the war when home industry was burdened with heavy international taxes, with stamp duties, income taxes and a high rate on raw materials, they are now too high, when all these taxes are removed.

THE STEEL INDUSTRY

Hamilton said that the iron and steel industry was already a flourishing business in his time. He was willing, nevertheless, to give 7 1/2 per cent of protection to steel. It is now $7.85 per ton on steel rails and the Steel Tariff bill of 1892 Canadians at $19 per ton, but exacts $28 from American buyers. It is enabled by the tariff to do this, for without the tariff it would be obliged to sell rails at home for the price at which they could be imported. Why do they not establish rolling mills and make their own rails? Surely the difference of $7.84 per ton, or 40 per cent, is a sufficient inducement to do so? I can not answer these questions, but if the leaders of the steel rail industry are also the controllers of the tariff, which are strong enough to defend themselves against extortion, the mystery is explained. In such accounts the profits go into the pockets of the controllers of the railways in their capacity of steel producers, while the other shareholders of the railways and the general public pay the difference. The tariff leads itself to the railways and the general public pay command large capital do not avail themselves of the opportunity they are not as shown as they are generally supposed to share the profits. I cherish no grudge against the tariff because they are rich, nor do I greatly blame them for taking profits which unjust laws throw in their way, but I protest against the unjust laws. I protest against the men who make them and who "stand pat" whenever anybody proposes to repeal or modify them.

PAUPER LABOR ARGUMENT

The pauper labor argument for the tariff has, for the most part, dropped out of sight and industries that compete with foreigners in foreign markets no longer have the audacity to say that the difference of wages prevents them from competing on equal terms in the American market. In place of the pauper labor argument and the infant industry argument and all the other arguments heretofore noted, the home market arguments of this sort of grab bag are used. This assumes that without the tariff and indeed without the 53 per cent Dingley tariff we should have no home market for the farmer's products or for any other products. This is a bogey to frighten children.

OLD ARGUMENTS ABANDONED

The truth is that the tariff beneficiaries are the "stand patters" have abandoned arguments. They virtually say to us now that a high protective tariff is a good thing and ought to last forever and by these facts have been instituted and are now relied. So far have the old arguments been abandoned that it is necessary for a particular industry, in order to get protection, to show that it can not stand alone and make fair profits on its own merits. A advertised that they could produce borax was found in California. The owners then advertised that the would produce borax at such low rates as to undersell the world, which was the fact. They then went to Washington and expressly on the ground of their ability to undersell foreigners got a duty of 5 cents per pound on this they mean the present Dingley tariff. In England at rates far below what they charged American buyers and are doing so now. But this is only one of a multitude of the monopolies which oppress the public and by no means is the first in point of time which has obtained protection, not because it needed protection, but because it could command votes.

TO FIGHT COMBINES

Not all the trusts and combines are found on the tariff but most of them are. Their continued existence and their mode of self-perpetuation leads to the belief that the country is no longer governed by representatives, but by interests. The most effective remedy that can be applied to the combines or trusts which owe their existence to excess tariff is to reduce the tariff rates. While the remedy, which can be effectively applied as against the other combinations is to enforce the law.

I pointed out in my response to the notification committee how a gradual reduction of the customs duties may be accomplished that they could produce borax as the Hon. Charles D. Keegan suggested. But the work should be undertaken by the democratic party. The republican party will not attempt it. It only promises such a revision as the founders of the tariff wish. As they do not wish any revision downward there will be none in that direction while that party can prevent it. Any other revision will not relieve the masses. And it is to their relief that congress and the president should come.

THE COTTON SALE

Concentration of the Staple in This City to Occur During Coming Week and Bids Will Be Asked Wednesday

NEAR HERMANN PARK

President Washer and Secretary Paddock of Board of Trade Are Taking Quite an Interest in the Affair

On Wednesday of this week will occur the great public sale of cotton in Fort Worth, and plans for the event have all been practically arranged.

The grounds are near the Hermann park. Just across the river on the north and are convenient to the street car lines and are commodious for storing any amount of cotton that may be brought here for sale.

There is an abundance of stock water near at hand and all the conveniences that are essential to guarantee the event being a success.

Good roads lead to Fort Worth from every direction and the farmers need experience no difficulties in reaching the city.

When competition will be a feature that should be an incentive to the farmers to bring their cotton to this sale and that they may receive the highest market price quoted on the day of sale is guaranteed.

There is no doubt but that those who bring their staple here on Wednesday will receive as much or more for their offerings as they would get at any other point in the county or at any town in any other county.

The fact that there are two or three of the heaviest buyers of export cotton in Fort Worth to be found in the state is sufficient to warrant farmers in bringing their product here for the sale, and it is believed by buyers that they will do it.

The farmers have the assurance of President Jacob Washer and Secretary B. B. Paddock of the Board of Trade that they will have quite a large number of buyers on hand, some of whom come from other towns.

Members of the Farmers' Union seen during the past week were unable to give anything like an estimate of the amount of cotton that will be offered for sale here, but they venture the assertion that the amount will be very satisfactory. Still these facts, however, those supposed to be posted on such matters claim that there will be a very fair offering.

There will probably be a very good offering of cotton from adjoining counties, as efforts have been made during the past week to interest farmers in Wise, Dallas, Denton, Johnson and Parker counties to bring in their staple, and the chances are that those outside counties will materially help to swell the offerings by the farmers of Tarrant county.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by doctors, applications, but they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

There will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

and the "stand patters" have abandoned arguments. They virtually say to us now that a high protective tariff is a good thing and ought to last forever and by these facts have been instituted and are now relied. So far have the old arguments been abandoned that it is necessary for a particular industry, in order to get protection, to show that it can not stand alone and make fair profits on its own merits. A advertised that they could produce borax was found in California. The owners then advertised that the would produce borax at such low rates as to undersell the world, which was the fact. They then went to Washington and expressly on the ground of their ability to undersell foreigners got a duty of 5 cents per pound on this they mean the present Dingley tariff. In England at rates far below what they charged American buyers and are doing so now. But this is only one of a multitude of the monopolies which oppress the public and by no means is the first in point of time which has obtained protection, not because it needed protection, but because it could command votes.

TO FIGHT COMBINES Not all the trusts and combines are found on the tariff but most of them are. Their continued existence and their mode of self-perpetuation leads to the belief that the country is no longer governed by representatives, but by interests. The most effective remedy that can be applied to the combines or trusts which owe their existence to excess tariff is to reduce the tariff rates. While the remedy, which can be effectively applied as against the other combinations is to enforce the law.

I pointed out in my response to the notification committee how a gradual reduction of the customs duties may be accomplished that they could produce borax as the Hon. Charles D. Keegan suggested. But the work should be undertaken by the democratic party. The republican party will not attempt it. It only promises such a revision as the founders of the tariff wish. As they do not wish any revision downward there will be none in that direction while that party can prevent it. Any other revision will not relieve the masses. And it is to their relief that congress and the president should come.

RULE OF DEBATE

Committeeman Albert Baskin for the Democrats and Judge N. B. Moore for Republicans Have Arranged the Time

McLEMORE TO OPEN IT

Will Be Followed by Senator Hanger and Wm. H. Atwell of Dallas Is to Close—Large Number Are Expected Here From Dallas

Preparations for the republican-democratic debate in this city Monday night have been completed and the meeting is to be held in the city hall auditorium and begin at 8 o'clock.

Judge N. B. Moore, secretary of the Roosevelt Central Club, and Albert Baskin, chairman of the democratic county campaign committee, met yesterday and completed the details for the meeting. Under the plans agreed to by these two gentlemen the debate is to be opened by Mark McLemore, United States district attorney for the Southern district, in behalf of the republican contention. He is to speak forty minutes and will be followed by State Senator W. A. Hanger, who is allotted one hour and a quarter in which to defend the democratic side of the questions at issue.

Senator Hanger will be followed by William H. Atwell, United States district attorney for the Northern Texas district, who will speak forty minutes, closing the debate.

Judge Moore said last night that this was the agreed program; that there may be some changes made by Monday night, but thought not.

Messrs. Lyon, Atwell and McLemore are expected to arrive in Fort Worth Monday morning. They spoke at Beaumont last night.

Judge Moore and Attorney Baskin are both very anxious to have the city hall well filled with members of both parties to hear the discussions, which promise to be somewhat warm from the very start.

It is understood there will be a large crowd of followers of both the democrats and republicans coming over from Dallas to hear the discussions.

The arrangements by which Senator Hanger will be forced to meet Mark McLemore and William H. Atwell, being allowed an hour and a quarter between forty-minute speeches by each of them does not meet with favor on the part of the local democracy, members of which express themselves as feeling that Cecil Lyon having issued the challenge should appear and represent the republican position in person.

On the other hand great confidence is expressed in the ability of Senator Hanger to cope even with such acknowledged orators as the United States attorneys and a debate of the greatest interest throughout the state is an assured fact.

Although it is learned efforts are being made to secure the appearance of State Chairman Lyon, no official announcement of a change in the program is announced above had been made up until a late hour last night.

NEWS NOTES FROM POLYTECHNIC HILL

Friday evening the Epworth League and members of the First Methodist church, tendered the faculty and students of Polytechnic college a reception at the First Methodist church. The following program was rendered:

Song by the Epworth League.

Prayer by Judge T. H. Connor.

Address of welcome, Dr. C. P. Brewer.

Response, President H. A. Boaz.

Vocal solo, Andrew Hemphill.

Instrumental music, Epworth League.

Talk by Dr. Monk.

After the program delightful refreshments were served in the league parlors. The social feature was very much enjoyed.

Polytechnic college continues to increase its attendance, as new students enroll almost every day. Every seat in the chapel is now occupied at the regular chapel service and new seats will have to be provided at once. Practice pianos have been put in every available place, and it was necessary yesterday to put a new one in the dining hall to accommodate new music pupils.

Guy Pitzer taught his classes this week and has a good number to begin with. Mr. McDonald has all his time engaged with his pupils and now proposes to teach every other Saturday in order to accommodate new pupils who desire to take his work.

A good game of football was played on the college gridiron last Thursday evening with the Elks. The Polytechnic team won eleven 5 to 0.

Yesterday Coach Billeheimer and the team went to Grandview for a game. The team is in first class condition. Mr. Billeheimer is doing excellent work with the men.

The death of Henry Fuchs, recently in a San Francisco almshouse, has served to recall the fact that he was the inventor of barbed wire. It is reported that the fortune Fuchs made from his invention was lost in an unsuccessful and expensive expedition to Nome, Alaska, in search of gold.

CAMPAIGN FUND IS SWELLED BY BIG DONATION

A Sympathizer Makes Contribution Accompanied by Letter of Condolence and Surprise

A prophet is not without honor save in his own country, nor is a campaign collector without contributors save in his own party, according to the wall of Marion Sansom, who was appointed as official sinner gatherer for the democratic party.

According to his story, the $2,000 contribution from Tarrant county's stalwart democracy upon which he set his heart when first receiving his appointment, has dwindled to a position very closely approaching the 30-cent variety.

That the county may not be entirely unrepresented in the democratic treasury, one of the citizens has thrown party lines to the wind and made a contribution to the fund accompanied by a letter of worth, even equalling the sublime figures of the donation.

The letter written on the official stationery of the Roosevelt Central Republican Club, was sent to Collector Sansom yesterday and is as follows: "Mr. Marion Sansom:

"Collector in Fort Worth for the Democratic campaign fund.

"Dear Sir and Friend: "I note in today's press your 'wall and cry' of the manner in which the democratic faithful are failing to 'come across' with certified checks for the campaign fund of the democratic party.

"I sympathize with you in your great bereavement, but you must cheer up my friend, for you democratic folks will need all the 'grit and backbone' you've got in order to survive the great landslide that will overtake you on November 8, 1904. As an expression of my sympathy for you in your official troubles, I beg to enclose herewith a republican dime, and to remark by the way, that there is no better money on earth, and that Mr. Roosevelt's party has made it so. Judging from the great number of democratic office holders present, I should think you ought to have in hand by this time at least $2,500,000. "Kindly forward me an official receipt for enclosed amount.

"Sincerely, your friend, "JAMES L. COOPER."

THOUSAND DOLLARS IS REWARD OFFERED

Police headquarters last night received information of a big jewelry robbery which took place a few days ago at Toronto, Canada, in which property valued at at least $25,000 was stolen.

The description of the goods taken shows many valuable articles, among them a diamond necklace worth $4,000, and a ten-strand pearl collar set with 175 small diamonds and valued at $1,800.

Other articles taken were necklaces, gentlemen's scarf pins, bracelets, brooches, rings, etc., some twenty-five or thirty articles of various description.

The information states that these valuables were taken from a private residence at the noon hour, the thief escaping.

A reward of $1,000 is offered for the return of the articles.

What Sulphur Does

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us daily doses of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mild yet, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium Sulphide, and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health; sulphur acts directly on the liver, and excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and were often compared with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins while experimenting with sulphur remedies soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article, and sold by druggists and chemists, it is not tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles, and especially in all forms of skin disease as this remedy."

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers" will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW AND HIS ECCENTRICITY

Appropos of the coming of "Candida" to Greenwall's opera house on Monday, matinee and night, October 24, a brief sketch of George Bernard Shaw will be of interest to many. This brilliant, erratic genius was born in Dublin in July, 1856. He chose London as the scene of his literary activities, and began his turbulent career there in 1875.

His early literary efforts were five novels, four of which have been published. Of these he once wrote, "I have written but five novels in my life, and of these there will remain three unpublished. This was written as a foreword to his fourth published novel, "Love among the Artists", only the first—a very remarkable work, I assure you, but hardly one which I should be well advised in letting loose whilst my livelihood depends on my credit as a literary workman."

In 1898 his "Plays Pleasant and Unpleasant" were published—seven in all. The "pleasant," three in number, namely, "Widowers' Houses," "The Philander" and "Mrs. Warren's Profession," appeared first. They deal with the crimes of society, "Arms and the Man," "Candida," "You Never Can Tell" and "The Man of Destiny" comprise the pleasant, which treat of the romantic follies of society and the struggles of individuals against these follies. "Three plays for Puritans," his last published volume of plays, appeared in 1900.

He holds high rank as an essayist, as "The Quintessence of Ibsenism" (1891) and "The Perfect Wagnerite" (1898) will show. He is a great musical critic and contributed articles on music (under the pen-name of Curial Bassotto) for two leading London dailies from 1882 to 1898. As dramatic critic he also ranked high, and contributed articles on the drama to the Saturday Review from 1895 to 1898. In addition to these activities he engaged in lectures on socialism and political reform and contributed articles to leading magazines on all kinds of conceivable subjects. He is a born debater and beats down his opponent by flashes of wit and ready marshaling of facts.

Shaw is considered eccentric in nearly everything he does. His plays were written to please himself, with little or no care on his part for their ever being played. When one of his plays was being tried in a London theater, much against his will, he was persistently called by a brilliant gathering of his friends to come before the curtain. As he did so, and when quiet had just been restored, a lank individual in the gallery cried "Boo!" in a tone of derision and disparagement. "I rather agree with you, my friend," said Shaw, quick as lightning, and his retort made as great a hit as the play. He is independent in dress and, before his marriage (that took place in 1898) it has been said that he would go to the opera in a flannel shirt. He is a strict vegetarian, takes delight in cycling and swimming as an exercise, but has little or no interest in sport.

Despite his eccentricities Shaw has been pronounced by eminent authorities as a master of talent. His play, "Candida" is considered by many as his masterpiece so far, but it is eagerly expected that he will even overshadow it by others to follow.

MEETING TODAY OF THE CONFEDERATE VETERANS

About the only discussion of especial importance to come up in the meeting of Lee camp, United Confederate Veterans, tomorrow will be that on a resolution introduced some three or four weeks ago by Adjutant W. M. McConnell to the effect that a committee be appointed to which must be referred all resolutions introduced in the camp.

At a previous meeting there was a heated debate on the matter, many of the members favoring the resolution while quite a number opposed its adoption. Because of the division on the resolution it is expected that there will be a warm debate before the resolution is either adopted or rejected.

The Sons of Confederate Veterans have arranged a very interesting program to be carried out today at the meeting of the camp which begins at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The program is as follows: Instrumental solo, Miss Iris Booth; address on reunion, Mrs. W. P. Lane; vocal solo, Miss Frances Previt; address, Joan M. Adams; music, Miss Louise Barr; vocal solo, Miss Nona Leach; reading, "Furl That Banner," Mrs. F. L. Jourdan; song, Miss Lula Parquett; music, Miss Ada Darter.

RAILROAD NEWS

A. B. Farnsworth of the immigration department of the Rock Island, with headquarters at Chicago, was in this city yesterday looking after affairs in his line and incidentally spreading some of his enthusiasm among his co-workers in building up the great southwest by the influx of good classes of farmers and citizens.

Immigration to this section of the country, he reports, is moving most rapidly at this time and that special trains are being frequently run from Chicago and eastern points, carrying homeseekers to the wide and inviting plains of the southwest. Probably the largest single train of such homeseekers coming to this section recently was one leaving Chicago on Tuesday last. This train carried a total of 241 homeseekers to southwestern points, a large percentage of them, as is the case in all such excursions, coming into Texas.

The great increase in this traffic he attributes directly to the efforts being made by means of the newspaper and magazine articles to teach the people in the crowded eastern sections of the country the advantages offered in the free and boundless country to the southwest. Referring to this matter in detail he made the astonishing declaration that a total of $2,075,000 had been derived as a result of ticket and land sales from a single article which appeared recently in an eastern publication, describing at some length the "Great Southwest."

With this lesson in view, he feels that the railroad will begin to realize properly the advantage of proper advertising and will adopt it to a greater extent, to their great advantage. PECOS LINES OPEN Word was received in this city today from General Manager Turner of the Pecos Valley lines announcing that the road had now fully mastered the flood conditions and was open from Woodward to La Huerta, a distance of 454 miles.

The bridge across the Canadian river, he reported, had been replaced and the Pecos bridge, the only point at which transfer is now necessary, was rapidly being finished and would be in use within a few days.

CLERKS' SMOKER

Quite a large attendance of local railroad clerks was had at the smoker given last night in honor of the National Organizer N. D. Gaven, who is here from Houston. The smoker was held in the rooms of the local chapter at Third and Main streets, and a number of short addresses were delivered during the evening. National Organizer Gaven, who is also a member of the grand executive board, made the principal speech, detailing the growth and objects of the organization and showing how the wages of clerks in railroad work had declined while men in other branches of the work had gradually increased their livelihood by organization. The insurance feature of the order was also explained. The social features of the organization received a practical demonstration of more value than any description could possibly be.

APPOINTMENT

Circulars were received in this city yesterday announcing the appointment of George D. Totten to become traveling passenger agent of the Rock Island lines, with headquarters at Pittsburg. His appointment is made succeeding A. F. Haas, who has been transferred.

Absence From the City of His Sister Is the Cause of Delay in Determining the Time of Interment

No definite time has yet been fixed for the funeral of William Ellis, whose sad drowning occurred yesterday morning. Mrs. L. H. DuBose, a sister of the deceased, is absent from the city and definite arrangements will not be made until she returns. It will be held some time Monday afternoon, however.

Jerry Ellis and wife were absent from the city at the time the drowning occurred, their first knowledge of the sad occurrence being gained upon their return last night. All the members of the family are deeply affected by the sudden death of Mr. Ellis and the news came like a blow also to the community at large, where he was well and most favorably known.

The Ellis family is one of the most prominent in the city and there were few homes either her or in the county where the death was not felt almost as a personal loss.

NORTH SIDE AND ROSEN HEIGHTS

An increase of nearly two million dollars will be shown in the tax rolls valuation of property in North Fort Worth when the documents are completed next week. The rolls may not be completed in time for presentation to the city council at its regular meeting Tuesday night, but sufficient progress has been made upon them by City Assessor and Collector Mulholland to determine approximately the increase.

As returned last year the rolls totaled about $2,150,000 and in the compilation this year that figure has already been passed long ago, the collector estimating that the total to be placed at the end of the pages will be in the neighborhood of $4,000,000. It is possible, he states, that the figures may go even above that amount, and it is also possible they may fall slightly below.

Even with a compromise on the packing house assessments which were given far in advance of those of last year, exceeding them by at least a million.

This enormous increase is due partially to the careful work of the equalization board, but is also due to a large extent to the almost unprecedented growth of the community, which has sprung from a few houses in a short time to a thriving city, having suburbs of far greater size than the community itself a few short years ago. The taking of a census, as is being urged by Mayor Pritchard will also aid much in showing the growth of the municipality and this is one of the acknowledged reasons for urging the count.

FIRM DISSOLVES

Announcement has been made that the real estate firm of Pritchard & Hall, conducted for some time in North Fort Worth, has been dissolved. Mayor Pritchard retires from the business altogether, J. M. Hall, who was associated with him, continuing it.

CITY SWEEPER NOT DANGEROUS

Physician Declares That Germs Lose Their Contagious Power After Exposure to the Texas Sun

Although opposition to the city street sweeper, raising its cloud of dust along Houston and Main streets, exists unabated among the merchants along those thoroughfares, opposition to it from a sanitary point is declared to be unfounded. A prominent physician of the city, in speaking of the matter yesterday, declared that there was little danger of the communication of tuberculosis, the disease most dreaded from such operations. "It has been amply demonstrated," he declared, "that the germs of the disease, when exposed to the rays of the sun for a day, practically lose all their disseminating power. In a climate like that of this city where there is so great an abundance of sunshine, there is little danger of germs from the sputum that has been collected during the day." Steps for the improvement of the present street cleaning methods are nevertheless being zealously attempted by the city officials as previously announced in the Telegram.

THE BUDDHISTS ARE KIND, SIMPLE AND PURE

Douglas Story Tells of His Life Among the Monks in Their Manchurian Monastery—Punishment for Women

Written for The Telegram by Douglas Story.

MUKDEN, *—The religion of the Lamae crept slowly across Tibet, over the wide grassy plains of Mongolia, penetrated into Manchuria, and reached even to Pekin. So it happened that at the very moment the British soldiers were knocking at the gates of Lhasa I was living in a Buddhist temple in Mukden as the guest of the Dal Lama.

I have heard much of the atrocities, the obscenities of Lama worship. There may be such accompaniments in the mysterious monasteries of Tibet, but the Mongolian Lamas, as I saw them and knew them, were gentle, simple, kindly souls, living a life whose purity would shame many a Christian brotherhood. Early in the morning, at the first cock crow, the younger Lamas rose to their devotions, and then for hours the courts of the temple echoed with the babbling of prayers. The Lama novitiate is a matter of ten years' study, during which the candidates for priesthood learn the prayers, the Tibetan theology, the literature of Tibet and Mongolia, Tibetan medicine, astronomy, astrology and Buddhist philosophy.

There was something to me very beautiful in the broad brick court yards of the temple, shaded with trees, embellished with flowering shrubs in pots, peopled with slow-stepping Lamas, gorgeous in silks of canary, and claret, and crimson. Speaking Mongolian, men of an alien race and an alien religion, the Lamas were strangers in a strange land, as I was; in that may have laid our bond of sympathy. In the evening hour, when the monks and the magpies were winging it heavily homeward to the nests in the slim trees about the monastery, the old Dal Lama would link his arm in mine and lead me out to view the treasures of his domain. Little of conversation was there between us, but out of that sympathy which makes the whole world kin grew something of intelligible communication which availed us much. From the old Dal Lama I learned his fears of the war, his dread of the Russians, his admiration for the little Japanese.

These came times when the Dal Lama would lead me by the hand into the dark recesses of the temple, where, from the altars and the vessels, the gongs and the cymbals, the fess sticks and the sacred scrolls, the images of the disciples and the skull of the holy Lama, out of which the priests quaffed their libations.

It was then he would show me the scrolls that denoted the tortures awaiting those who lived a life of impropriety in this world, would indicate with delight that the principal punishments were reserved for women who had had two husbands, for women who chattered too much and for women who beat their husbands—for those were reserved a series of tortures that did credit to the imagination of the artists and bore testimony to the experience of the Chinese.

In one a woman was being sawn in two with a jagged cross-cut saw. In another a group of unhappy mortals was strung along a metal funnel, the white fire of the sun and the display of animal dancers. There were razor beds, and racking frames and thumb screws, quaint suggestions for the disemboweling of patients and novel directions for the listlessly squeezing of life out of recalcitrant sinners. I shuddered, the Dal Lama smiled benignly.

The early weeks of May were busy times in the Lama monastery. There was to be the great ceremony of the 15th day of the moon and the display of animal dancers. People came hundreds of miles from the prairies of Mongolia. The air resounded with the squealing of haggis, the booming of gongs, the booming of horns, the shrilling of conch shells, the deep pealing of the great bell in the monastery. At the evening hour, when we arrived, dusty and travel stained, the younger monks were practicing the steps of their mystery dances. Strangely familiar they were, one recognized the steps of their mystery dances. Strangely familiar they were; one recognized the steps of the old-time Morris dances, the mazurka, and the jigs of Ireland and York-shire.

The great day came when the Dal Lama, magnificent in silken robes 50 years old, emblazoned with precious stones and wearing the hat of his mandarin, presided over the devotions of his fellows. Here again the ritual was strangely familiar. The shaven heads of the monks, the vestments, the altars and the chanting of the choristers might, but for the surroundings of pagoda roofs and pigtailed worshippers, have belonged to some old-time priory in Italy or Spain. The music was sad and plaintive, a "miserere" chanted in deepest bass by the singers of the abbey. To me it sounded as the music I had heard in St. John Lateran's in Rome on Good Friday afternoon, twelve months before.

Suddenly a Cossack soldier strode clanking up the court yard. His rifle was slung athwart his shoulders, his thigh whip dangled from his hand, his great boots were all dust-bespinkled. Arrived in front of the sacred image of Buddha, he threw himself on the pavement, knee-towed three times, rose and made his way to the Lama bishop, whose benediction he received. His devotions done, the Hariat became a soldier once more, and clattered heavily back to the service of the czar. Many and various are the children of the Little Father.

OTTO OF BAVARIA IN A MADHOUSE FOR LIFE

King Is Hopelessly Insane and Crawls on His Hands and Knees Imitating Animals of Various Kinds

MUNICH, Oct. 22.—King Otto of Bavaria, who has occupied the throne of his country since 1886, has spent all the 13 years of his reign in a madhouse.

King Otto was born in 1848, and developed symptoms of incurable insanity in his 22d year. Previous to this he took part in the wars of 1866 and 1870 with some distinction. In 1873 he was secluded in a private lunatic asylum and he has been under control as a dangerous madman ever since that time.

When he succeeded to the throne in 1886 he was incapable of grasping the significance of his accession. The ceremony of coronation was performed in the madhouse and in the circumstances was a veritable mockery. Soon after his accession one of the royal castles was turned into a lunatic asylum for his reception. It was fitted with padded walls and all the other appliances required in dealing with madmen. Here the king spends his life in royal state. He crawls about the floor on hands and knees, eats his food like a dog, and imitates the noise made by various animals, but he is nevertheless king by divine right and his attendants must never fail to address him as "your majesty."

From time to time King Otto suffers from fits of unmanageable rage, when he foams at the mouth, bites his keepers and demolishes everything within his reach. After such outbreaks he lies exhausted for several days. These attacks are becoming more frequent, and it is thought that in one of them he may die from heart failure or exhaustion.

In consequence of King Otto's condition his uncle, Prince Luitpold, of Bavaria, acts as regent. The course of insanity has pursued the Wittelsbachs, the royal family of Bavaria, for centuries past. King Otto's brother and immediate predecessor, King Louis II, was also a lunatic, though he reigned

CAMEL HUNTING IN ARIZONA IS PLAN

Willie Sells Will Go After Them and Will Try and Raise Them on a Farm in the State of Kansas

TOPEKA, Kan., Oct. 22.—Camel-hunting in Arizona and camel-raising on a ranch in Western Kansas is the latest idea on which Willie Sells, son of W. Allen Sells, showman, is working. Sells says that his father conducted a dromedary hunt in the Cactus Plains near Gila Bend in Maricopa county, Arizona, 20 years ago and managed to capture 15 of the ships of the desert. Six of them got away or died while being brought east and the other nine went into the circus business after the wildness and viciousness born of a life of liberty had been taken out of them.

About 30 years ago the government imported a herd of camels to be used for transportation purposes across the desert. The experiment did not prove a success and the animals were turned loose. Some time later a Frenchman tried to resurrect the business and brought over another herd. He failed also and also allowed his camels to roam at liberty.

The two herds mixed and increased, and W. Allen Sells, having heard that there were nearly 1,000 of them, started out to round them up. He took a party of cowboys and dare-devil riders from his circus, some experienced hunters and guides, and tried to capture the animals. The horses, however, would not approach within several hundred yards of the homeliest of God's creations, and the hunt failed of results. Sells, nothing daunted, made a second attempt the following year, using as mounts for his party horses which by being in the circus business were accustomed to the camels. Fifteen were captured.

Willie Sells proposes to duplicate his father's experiment on a larger scale, he says. "From what I hear," he said, "there must be between 1,000 and 2,000 camels browsing around in the Gila river country. There is no reason why there should not be. The animals have enjoyed for 20 years climatic and forage conditions exactly suited to them and have been unmolested by man. The natives down there don't want them. They can't use them as beasts of burden and camel meat offers no attraction as food.

"My scheme is to go down there late in November or in December with about 50 men and horses not afraid of camels and lasso as many as possible. Then I will bring them to my ranch in Kearney county, Kansas, which I believe suitable to camel-raising, and see what can be done. I believe it will not be many years before I can begin selling camels to the ever-increasing number of circuses which must have them. The way things are now, a camel costs about as much as an elephant, because the brutes can't stand the sea voyage."

for 22 years before his ministers became sure of the fact.

King Louis was only 18 when he ascended the throne, and in his earliest manhood he was the friend and enthusiastic admirer of Richard Wagner. He was always eccentric, and as years went on his peculiarities increased. He withdrew more and more from public life and lived in isolated solitude. He developed a craze for building wonderful palaces, and erected three residences which are veritable marvels of luxury internally and externally.

King Louis spent immense sums with reckless extravagance, and appropriated public money to gratify his taste for building. When his ministers protested and endeavored to prevent this misuse of national funds, King Louis, who believed in the absolutism of monarchs and was extremely jealous of his royal prerogatives, simply placed them under arrest and continued to take what he required from the public exchequer.

This brought matters to a crisis, and his own government put him under restraint as a suspected lunatic. Medical experts certified that he was insane, and his government imprisoned him in his own castle of Berg on June 8, 1888. On June 10 his uncle assumed the regency, and on June 13, King Louis, who was able to understand his disposition and fiercely resist his imprisonment, threw himself into the lake near Castle Berg. His medical attendant, Dr. Gudden, was with him at the time, and sprang into the water to rescue his royal patient. King Louis, however, was determined to commit suicide, and a desperate struggle ensued between the two men in the water. In the end both sank and were drowned, afterward their bodies were dragged up from the bottom of the lake, still locked in a deadly embrace.

The castles erected by King Louis at such fabulous expenses are now on show for the public. The money paid for admission is used to pay off the colossal debts which King Louis incurred.

CRIMINAL TRIAL IS CREATING SOME SENSATION

(Special Cable to The Telegram—Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

ROME, Oct. 22.—It is many years since a criminal trial has caused such a sensation as that of Countess Bonmartini, which is now before a criminal court, where the countess is defending herself against a charge of having been one of the conspirators who murdered her husband.

Count Bonmartini, though a high noble of Bologna, was a man with an unsavory reputation, and he rented a flat in the Via Mazzini, in Bologna, in which it is alleged many infamous scenes took place. The count also had a palace in Venice, where the Countess Linda appears to have spent most of her time. There she met Professor Sechi, and under the influence of her husband's neglect and his numerous intrigues, fell in love with him. The police made an examination and then burst open the door. In a pool of blood in the middle of the luxuriously furnished room lay the decomposing body of the count. He has been stabbed in the throat.

Some feminine belongings were found scattered about the apartment, and the dead man's pockets, cash box and bureau had been rifled. The police formed the theory that it was the tragic end of one of the count's numerous intrigues. A closer search resulted in the discovery of some letters which put a different complexion on the crime, and caused the police to interrogate Senator Murri, the father of the countess. On September 19, Senator Murri's son, Tullio Murri, was arrested at Ala, on the Austro-Italian frontier. He declared himself guilty of the count's death. Murri had visited the count in the Via Mazzini, he said, to remonstrate with him for his brutal treatment of his sister, the countess. A bitter quarrel followed, and the count seized a knife and made a murderous attack on him. In the scuffle the knife penetrated the count's throat. But one of the letters which the police had found implicated a girl called Anna Santangelato and in due course this girl was arrested. She confessed that her real name was Bonetti, and that she had been living with Murri.

She declared that the count had been murdered by Murri and a young physician named Naldi. The Naldi men fell into the clutches of the police. He was found to be in low water, and to have a rather doubtful reputation. The police found him very pitiable, and in a few days drew from him the whole sordid story.

Professor Sechi, he said, was in love with the countess, and she had plotted with him to poison the count by means of an injection of curare, which he gave to Naldi, together with a hyperdermic syringe. The scheme was abandoned, however, and another plot was hatched. The countess, who was then in Venice, obtained a wax impression of the key of the castle of Berg in Bologna, sent them a duplicate key to the girl Bonetti, and on the evening of August 27, 1902, Naldi and Murri let themselves into his apartment and hid behind the curtains.

When the count entered the flat Murri dragged him down, and Dr. Naldi, whose surgical knowledge enabled him to do the deed without bungling, drove a knife into the count's throat, killing him instantly.

Then they disordered the room to give color to the story that was concocted, strewed some of the girl Bonetti's linen about the apartment, locked the door and fled. The arrest of the countess followed, and Sechi was taken soon after. A search of their houses resulted in the unearthing of a mass of correspondence which, the police declare, leaves no proof wanting as to the share which each took in this revolting and sensational tragedy.

The fact, however, that more than two years have elapsed since the crime took place indicates the difficulty they have had in piecing together the evidence which is now to be brought forward.

DOGS ARE USED BY ITALIAN SMUGGLERS

(Special Cable to The Telegram—Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

GENEVA, Oct. 22.—Within the last three months no fewer than 270 dogs have been shot by Italian customs officers on the Swiss-Italian frontier, while in the act of smuggling tobacco, sugar and salt from Switzerland.

The fact that these articles are heavily taxed in Italy has led to a great deal of smuggling, especially of tobacco, and the Italian government has fenced off the frontier with high strips of wire netting, of which the gates are fitted with alarm bells, while customs officers armed with rifles are on guard every hundred yards or so.

It has thus become almost impossible for men to carry on smuggling without being caught, and consequently they have taught dogs to do the work.

The animal is first taken to an Italian village near the frontier, where he is petted and well fed. After some weeks of this the dog is taken to the nearest Swiss village, where he is half starved, and where a man in the uniform of an Italian customs officer gives him an occasional beating. After a few days of this treatment a parcel of tobacco is fastened to the dog's collar and he is set free. He immediately makes for the frontier to reach his home on the Italian side, and when he catches sight of an Italian customs officer he remembers his beatings and does his best to avoid coming near him.

The dog wanders up and down the wire fence until he comes to one of the spring gates, which he pushes open. A bell tinkles, and the customs officer immediately fires at the dog, but if he misses the animal the smuggled goods can not afterward be impounded, for all goods that have once got over the frontier are considered as having paid duty. After a dog has been shot at two or three times and has got away he becomes extremely wary and will wait until the officer is at the furthest end of his "beat," and will then endeavor to pass the spring gates with as little effort as possible so as not to set the bell ringing.

Chairman Cortelyou of the national republican committee is devoted to physical culture and all sorts of outdoor sport. He was an experienced hunter at the age of 12 and before he was able to mount a horse without assistance was a horseman of ability. As a boxer he has won many amateur prizes and all his life has been a good swimmer, oarsman, sprinter and walker. He abstains entirely from tobacco or liquor in any form. Mr. Cortelyou does not follow any particular form of diet, but is a strict believer in the efficacy of fruit as a health-maker and eats a great deal of it. His capacity for long hours without sleep is said to be tremendous. He is well built, stands 5 feet 10 in his stockings, is deep-chested, broad-shouldered and muscular—a strong, typical American in every sense.

A startling incident is narrated by John Oliver of Philadelphia, as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue was coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters; to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents. Guaranteed at Matt S. Blanton & Co., Reeves' Pharmacy.

Fairbanks Now at Wheeling on the Tariff

Vice Presidential Candidate Says That Free Trade Does Not Build Up Anything, But Makes People Idle
WHEELING, W. Va., Oct. 22.—It looked this afternoon as if the Fairbanks meeting was going to be a frost. A chilly wind blew over the town and the people did not turn out during the day. At the afternoon meeting the crowd was not over large, but tonight a monster parade was given, the cold weather was forgotten and the populace turned out and gave the presidential candidate a mighty ovation.

DALLAS FOLK ARE TO PUT UP NEW BUILDING

Fair Association Will Erect a Proper Structure Before the Date for the Next Annual Affair

DALLAS, Oct. 22.—Captain Sydney Smith, the veteran official of the Texas State Fair Association, was seen at his office this morning by a Telegram representative, and when asked in regard to the result of the recent Fall Festival and the outlook for the future, had the following to say: "The attendance during the recent entertainment was very gratifying indeed; as a matter of fact, I am not in a position at this time to give definite figures as to the receipts and the attendance, but feel confident that the new association which entered into the matter of entertaining the populace of the state at large will be justly rewarded for all the splendid efforts that it has put forth. The average attendance each day has been all that could be expected; the vineyard pathways of the great State Fair park have been thronged with visitors from the sand loams of the gulf to the fertile black land farms of North Texas. Those who have harvested abundant crops can well afford to spend a few paltry dollars for amusement, after undergoing the toil of perfecting their crops after a season's labor. As a matter of fact the financial condition of the Texas farmer has not been as thoroughly satisfactory in several years as it has been this year.

MILTON PARK IS ENTHUSIASTIC JUST NOW

After a Meeting of the Populist Executive Committee He Gave Out a Statement Regarding the Party

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 22.—The meeting of the state populist executive committee was held this afternoon behind closed doors in the office of National Chairman Milton Park in this city. The meeting was called to order at 3 o'clock by State Chairman J. J. Eager of Cisco, and matters pertaining to the campaign were discussed at length, and the meeting did not adjourn until after 5 o'clock. Colonel Park was seen immediately after the meeting, and had the following to say: "The populist party now has 154 counties thoroughly organized in Texas, and fifty others partially so. Ten organizers are now on the road working like beavers, and eight more will be added this week. We propose to organize the counties as fast as we can get to them. We propose to explain fully the rights and privileges the populist has to ballot. We will have ballots at the election printed by the state, and authorized by the state, and we will have the same representation in every precinct that every other political party enjoys. I am assured by the secretary of state as to this. We have also arranged to have monitors to tell us of any discrepancies or variations from the law that may occur at or before the election.

THE SCOTTISH RITE TO MEET IN DALLAS

Second Semi-Annual Reunion Will Be Held Commencing Monday Morning at Which Many Will Attend

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 22.—Beginning Monday morning at 10 o'clock, the Scottish Rite Masonic bodies of the Valley of Dallas will begin their second semi-annual reunion, which will last through Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. The Masonic gathering will be closed with a ceremonial session by the Hella Temple Shriners, who will meet in ceremonial session Friday evening, October 28. Both organizations will hold their meetings in Turner Hall, corner of South Harwood and Canton streets. The Scottish Rite Masons have made elaborate preparations for conferring the degrees from the fourth to the thirty-second, inclusive, and the costumes and other paraphernalia necessary in the secret work will be of the most elaborate. Music will form an important part of the ceremonies and the St. Cecilia Choral Club, one of Dallas' foremost musical organizations, has consented to handle the musical part of the program. About one hundred candidates have been accepted for the degree conferred upon them and the different degree organizations have practiced frequently on the work during the past few weeks in order to be able to present it in its most beautiful and impressive form. While the Scottish Rite ritual stands for the most serious form of Masonry, the Shriners of Hella Temple have a reputation for being a jovial set and those who have been admitted to their inner circle claim that they did not know until then what real enjoyment was.

OF INTEREST TO THE STOCKMEN

JOHN K. ROSSON'S RETURN. John K. Rossion, of the firm of Campbell Brothers, of Rosson, has just returned from a trip through Western Texas, where he finds range conditions better than for many years, and while the cattle owners are in general ways in excellent condition, the ranch owners are complaining bitterly of prices which they are getting for their cattle that are being marketed, and the majority of them are making arrangements to hold their cattle another year in hopes that the condition may change for the better. "I had one of the largest owners of cattle in Western Texas to tell me that unless there was a radical change in conditions in the very near future the ranch owners of Western Texas would be forced out of business. "We have advanced in price very rapidly and cattle have increased in value, and it now costs almost twice as much to produce a marketable steer as it did four or five years ago, and the ranchmen of West Texas have gone to the expense of buying fine bulls and grading their herds of steers, until they are now three-fourths to seven-eighths full-blooded and therefore require much more attention than the old Spanish breed of years ago. One large ranchman who owns in the neighborhood of 4,000 cattle told me that if he believed prices would be better next year than they are this year, he would round up his entire herd and let them bring what they would go out of the business, and this is the general feeling of cattle people through the range country. They have sustained losses for a number of years and if it was not for the rapid increase in the valuation of their land a great many of them do not would be in a deplorable condition. "We realize there is a big shortage in cattle throughout the western country as well as Indian Territory and a great many of the northern states and we are firmly of the opinion we are bound to see higher prices in the very near future. Montana and the Dakotas are about through shipping for the season, Indian Territory and Oklahoma are practically through, and the Panhandle of Texas will probably finish up their shipping very well within the next three or four weeks, as a great many of the ranch owners figure on holding the best of their young cows and their steers for better prices. This also applies to the western part of the state. Grass and feed have been raised in abundance and cattle and sheep should go through the winter in much better shape than they have for a good many years past, and we sincerely hope to see the cattle industry in the South get in better shape within another year."

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful It is in Preserving Health and Beauty. Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose. Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system. Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables. Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion. It whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic. It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh. All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey. The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit. A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

THE WAR NEWS

FIVE REGIMENTS TO REINFORCE JAPANESE

LIAO YANG, Oct. 22.—Five regiments of Japanese infantry and one of cavalry, together with a large number of provision wagons and others carrying winter clothing, are on their way here from New Changung. The first portion of these reinforcements are expected to arrive in the course of tomorrow. The troops will have a bivouac south of the city, as no accommodations can be secured for them here pending the arrival of orders for their disposition. It is understood here that these new troops will be transferred in Liao Yang and drilled for field service, while the present garrison will relieve part of the reserves to the north and the relieved troops to proceed to the front and fill regiments which have suffered most severely, which will be permitted to rest.

COLD HURRICANE IS RAGING NEAR MUKDEN

MUKDEN, Oct. 22.—A terrific hurricane has been raging in this region since Friday. At night the temperature sinks to five degrees below zero. The suffering among the soldiers is great, but according to dependable reports the sudden cold has come in the nature of a calamity to the Japanese, many of whom are dying. Twelve Japanese were found frost bitten and unable to move in one of the mountain ridges. They were brought here and are now being cared for. Couriers have been sent to Harbin requesting the immediate shipment of whatever quantities of winter clothing can be spared. Tibet's six million people have to support an army of four hundred and thirty thousand priests, who produce nothing but beautifully illuminated copies of the sacred writings. They hold all the public offices.

AUTO RACES ARE HELD AT BRIGHTON BEACH

BRIGHTON BEACH, N. Y., Oct. 22.—Thousands of automobile enthusiasts journeyed to the track by the sea today to witness the contests for the international cup, the diamond cup, the sea breeze cup and the Brighton Beach handicap. Everyone who owned an automobile seemed to be at the track today. They came in all kinds of machines and filled the grand stand and the paddock. The sea breeze was won by L. N. Baldwin in his ten horsepower Stanley. He had a handicap of 200 yards. In the final heat of the international cup Barney Oldfield took the lead and held it for two miles, when Bernin shot to the front, with Sartori second and Oldfield last. Oldfield's machine appeared to have suffered from some disarrangement and he proceeded at a comparatively slow pace, so Bernin won. The race for the diamond cup proved to be a walk-over for Brokaw's car, driven by Bernin. His sixty horsepower Renault outdistanced his nearest competitor, Barney Oldfield, by a half mile. The Brighton handicap was won by the Standard, driven by G. Phillip Adams. During the last lap of the second heat the race, the seat of the machine driven by C. D. Ridgeway slipped and he was thrown headlong over the steering wheel. The driver was not seriously hurt, but the machine was wrecked.

THE DISTRICT INSPECTORS.

John T. Lytle, secretary of the Texas Cattle Raisers' Association, yesterday received several weekly reports from the district inspectors of the association, and all of them, with possibly two or three exceptions, show a splendid state of affairs on the ranges wherever the association has cattle. The stock, according to the reports, which number about thirty, could not be in better condition. There has been fine range and water is in abundance. The places where it is reported to be dry is Ballinger and San Sabu counties. Still the reports from the inspectors say that cattle are not suffering but that it is too dry for the farmers, and that rain is needed. Another point reported to be dry is Ballinger. However, as a whole, Captain Lytle says that conditions are as favorable as can be and cattle generally are doing well. He states that not only are cattle and ranges looking well in Texas, but they are the same in New Mexico, Oklahoma and

REIGN OF TERROR IS REPORT FROM GEORGIA

William J. Cox Returns From His Old Home and Tells of the Race Conditions Which Now Exist There

William J. Cox, a prominent railroad contractor of this city and one of the men who assisted in the grading of the International road between Fort Worth and Dallas, but recently returned from Georgia, where he had been to visit the earlier scenes of his life. He spent three weeks among the old friends and acquaintances of that state and found things in fearful condition.

THE BEST DOCTOR Rev. B. C. Horton, Sulphur Springs, Texas, writes, July 19, 1899: "I have used in my family Ballard's Snow Liniment and it is the best we have ever used for headaches and pains. The cough syrup has been our doctor for the last eight years." 25c, 50c, $1.00. H. T. Pangburn & Co.

and all that is on it will be theirs, and these leaders are urging them to resist the whites in every way possible and do what they can to make the white people leave that part of the state. They have been organized into bands in the various communities and have secret meetings at which time and places they plan the murder of one or more of the white planters. Several of the fiends are then expected to go out in the stillness of the night and steal as quietly as possible to the homes of the people who have been selected to be assassinated. Often the entire family has been wiped out in a single night and many crimes have been committed by these men, who desire the extinction of the race. To combat this outlawsy, the white planters have organized for the protection of their families and the sanctity of their homes and when a crime of that kind is again committed they have taken oaths that they will not stop until every man in the county of the colored race has been wiped from the face of the earth. Mr. Cox said the white people were badly frightened at the situation and were not willing to attempt to guess the outcome. The negroes causing all the trouble are those who have been educated. One of the members of the secret society claims to have had an inspiration from the Lord telling him to tell his people to exterminate the white race and the rest of his followers are foolish enough to attempt to do so. "The situation there," said Mr. Cox, in conclusion, "is a most discouraging one to the planters and to the people in general. No one knows at this moment some assassin will shoot you down from behind some bush or steal into the house in the night and murder the whole family. The people hardly know what to do, as the negroes are far in the majority and the whites are almost afraid to trust any of the colored race at the present time. They are supplied with weapons and are determined to do almost anything to assist in carrying out the state two years for robbery, will be taken to Rusk. Mrs. Eaves and her little boy spent

EAVES REMAINS IN JAIL HERE FOR A FEW DAYS

Was Not Taken to the Penitentiary Yesterday With Other Prisoners—Papers Are Being Prepared

W. R. Eaves, who pleaded guilty to embezzling funds from the Citizens' National bank at Arlington in January last and was on Friday afternoon sentenced to the penitentiary for three years, was not taken to Rusk along with some eight or ten convicts who left here yesterday in charge of Penitentiary Agent Luther. Five Mexicans and three white men were brought to Fort Worth from El Paso county by Agent Luther and held over in the county jail Friday night. They were yesterday morning taken to the Stiner valley farm in Hill county, owned by Major Durham, where they will be leased to the latter to pick cotton. Major Durham now has about 150 state convicts on his three thousand acre plantation, the most of which it is said, is planted in cotton. The papers in the Eaves case have not yet been completed, but will be in the course of a few days, and then he along with Jack Wright, who has been convicted of theft and given four years, and Robert Peters, who will serve the state two years for robbery, will be taken to Rusk.

NEXT MONTH POPE'S BODY WILL BE MOVED

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Pope Pius has decided that the final interment of the body of Pope Leo XIII. in the Church of St. John Lateran, is to take place not later than next month. In July, 1903, the body was laid away in a vault high up in the west wall of St. Peter's and by the traditions of the church the interment should have taken place on the exact anniversary of the first burial. But for reasons of their own the authorities permitted that date to pass unnoticed, and had not Pope Pius taken the matter into his own hands Leo's body might have remained in the vault for years. When the body of Pius IX, Leo's predecessor, was removed from St. Peter's, Italian anti-clericals made it the occasion of a riot in which the body barely escaped being thrown into the Tiber. It was perhaps fear of a repetition of this disgraceful occurrence which made the authorities pause.

FRAUD ORDER IS ISSUED AGAINST EDISON

He Admitted That He Had No Inventive Genius, But Was Allowing the Use of His Name for Pay

A fraud order against Thomas A. Edison Jr. and granted at the request of Thomas A. Edison Sr. has been received at the postoffice here. The order also includes the Thomas O. Edison Jr. Chemical Company of New York and forbids to either the use of the name. In the circulating put out by the firm it was represented to the unsuspecting public that the company was using the ability and inventive powers of the young man who had inherited all the genius of the famous father. Further that he was willing to assist all suffering humanity and asked them to write him. In each case where letters were sent the case was diagnosed and invariably the sufferer was advised to secure one of the cure-alls manufactured by this company at a certain price. The machine recommended was known as an Edison vitalizer. It was offered for sale at a price of $8 each. In the advertising to further convince the skeptical public that the young inventor was the son of the famous father the signature of the "wizard" was used on some of the literature. With this evidence the department ordered all mail withheld and made a thorough investigation with the result that the fraud order was issued against the company and the mail is now being withheld. In the testimony given at the investigation it was admitted that the young man was at the office in New York but twice a week, and then only came to draw the handsome salary which he was paid.

JACQUES I THROWS UP SUIT AGAINST EDITOR

(Special Cable to The Telegram—Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) AMSTERDAM, Oct. 22.—M. Jacques Lebaudy has lost his case for lease majeste against the Handelsblad, a newspaper in this city. The paper had irreverently said that there are many emperors of the same kind as the "Emperor of Sahara" in insane asylums all over Europe who had been sent there because they were poor, while Lebaudy had millions.

POLICE AFTER HIM

LONDON, Oct. 22.—(Copyright, 1904.)—The Spanish police are on the track of a man who the other day attacked M. Monthon, a French journalist who was looking into the extraordinary Casa-Riera affair. M. Monthon had made important discoveries and succeeded in getting hold of valuable documents bearing on the scandal and had mentioned this in an article in Le Matin. Immediately after the appearance of this article he was drugged at Barcelona and robbed of the documents. He nearly died from the effects of the drug.

EXPLANATIONS OF ARRESTS ARE MADE

French Authorities Give Several Reasons Why Certain Officers Are Now Being Held for Trial

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The French authorities are offering various explanations of the arrest of Lieutenant Colonel Rollin and Captains Dutriche, Francoise and Mareschal, who are now in the Cherche Midi military prison.

These officers were attached to the now disbanded spy department of the war office. In the course of the recent further investigations of the Dreyfus case, a question arose as to how the sum of 25,000 francs had been spent by the war department in 1895. As the officers failed to give a satisfactory explanation, they were arrested, but released on parole, pending the result of the military judicial investigation into the charge of embezzlement.

Captain Casse, the military judge, has just concluded the inquiry and in his report he says that he is convinced that the money was used to "suborn" witnesses summoned to appear before the Rennes court-martial and not for the purpose of purchasing secret documents, as was stated by the entries in the books. As, however, all offenses connected with the Dreyfus case are wiped out by the amnesty, the reporter could only ask the military governor of Paris to throw out the indictment, which was done. Notwithstanding this came the officers' arrest. On the other hand, it is stated that General Desahier has decided that they shall be court-martialed so that they can clear their honor. It is also suggested that General Andre, being convinced that some of the papers resorted to by them do not come under the Dreyfus amnesty, has decided to charge them with making use of forged documents. While a third version is that, after the indictment was thrown out they wrote a violent letter to the military governor of Paris, and that it is in consequence of this communication that they have again been sent to prison.

DEFAULTER SAYS HE LOST IN BUCKET SHOPS

NASHVILLE, TENN., Oct. 22.—Allan Parker, defaulting cashier of the First National Bank of Tullahoma, Tenn., gave himself up this morning. He said others led him into his troubles. Parker says he lost the bank's money in Chicago bucket-shops. Parker was deputy revenue collector for the Tullahoma district. He handled large sums of money, and the examiner is now going over the government books, but if any shortage has been discovered it has not been made known.

For the first time since the days of Lincoln United States Consul Abraham E. Smith at Victoria, B. C., will not go home to Illinois to vote. This year the state department decided that all American consuls stationed at Pacific seaports must remain at their posts.

KITCHENER'S PLAN FOR WAR WITH RUSSIA

He Has Outlined How the Battle Will Be Pitched in the Event of Conflict Regarding India

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Lord Kitchener's plan of placing a fully equipped army on the northwest Indian frontier is well advanced. The new field army, which will consist of 100,000 men, will be ordered in divisions, each of which will stand ready and complete in itself for war.

These divisions will cover the great invasion routes via Kandahar and Kabul. These two routes are those selected for the Russian plan of advance by General Kuropatkin in the event of hostilities between Russia and Great Britain. There are seven points to Lord Kitchener's project, the combination of which would, it is believed, make any Russian offensive movement abortive:

- First—The flower of the army to be concentrated for war in the north.
- Second—India to be self-supporting as a military power.
- Third—A greater system to be created.
- Fourth—The extension of the volunteer system.
- Fifth—Coast and fortress defenses to be strengthened.
- Sixth—Breeding of horses to be encouraged.
- Seventh—New transport facilities and the best equipment.

A HINDOO SLEEPER DISAPPEARS ON THE STREET

Friends of a Performer of Hypnotic Character Fear That He Has Been Foully Dealt With in Austin

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 22.—Considerable mystery surrounds the disappearance of Professor H. V. Seiderburg, a well known hypnotist, who styles himself the "Hindoo Sleeper." Professor Seiderburg has traveled extensively over this country, but this time his friends here are considerably worried over his disappearance.

He was in Austin on February 17, 1904, and stopped at the Hancock hotel. He came here to make arrangements to give a series of exhibitions, claiming that he would sleep for thirty days without being disturbed, and he buried during all that time. February 21, about 4 o'clock in the morning, he was the last seen of him here. He was seen at that time coming from the International and Great Northern passenger depot in the direction of his hotel. He never reached there. The porter at the hotel was the last person who saw him.

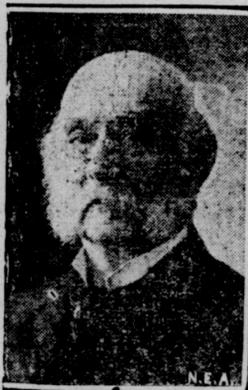

His arrangements for his show were never completed and he never performed in Austin. His baggage is still at the Hancock hotel waiting to be claimed by the owner.

It is known that he had a sum of money in one of the local banks to his credit and inquiry developed that this cash is still there to his credit. This is what has caused the mystery, as it is more than likely that if he left the city he would certainly have sent for his baggage and also for the cash. No trace has ever been found of him or as to his whereabouts. He registered at the Hancock hotel from Houston. Foul play is suspected.

INSPECTOR WHO IS DISMISSED IS VETERAN

General Dumont Who Was for Forty Years in the Service of the Government—Officer of the Civil War

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—When General James A. Dumont, one of the local steamboat inspectors at New York, was dismissed by President Roosevelt for negligence in connection with the Slocum disaster, a career of more than forty years in the government service was brought to an end. He was for GENERAL JAMES A. DUMONT, many years supervising inspector general of the steamboat inspection service of the country.

General Dumont was reared at sea and has had innumerable adventures in wrecks, fires and battles. As a young man he served on whalers. Following that hard experience he was in the transport service during the civil war. He served as mate, captain and pilot of various transport ships that carried troops and ammunition about Port Royal and other ports on the South

TREATMENT OF PILES

Permanence of Cure the True Test. Many so-called pile remedies will afford the user slight temporary relief, and the majority of those afflicted do not expect more than this.

The average sufferer, after having tried every preparation recommended for the cure of piles, comes to the conclusion that there is no cure except by an operation, and rather than undergo this "last resort" he suffers on, resigned to the situation, so far as may be. The attention of those interested is invited to the following experience: "After ten years of suffering from blind, bleeding and protruding piles and after using every remedy I could hear of without any benefit, I finally bought a fifty-cent box of Pyramid Pile Cure, and used it with such good results I bought next a dollar box which finished up the job. That was nearly six years ago, and as far as piles I am cured, and have never felt a symptom of them since."

"Many others have used this remedy, and I always recommend it to sufferers with piles." C. H. Fotts, Burlington, Kan.

Testimony like this should convince the most skeptical the Pyramid Pile Cure not only cures, but cures to stay cured. It is in the form of a suppository, can be applied in the privacy of the home, directly to the parts affected, and does its work quickly and painlessly.

Druggists generally sell this famous remedy for fifty cents a package and sufferers are urged to buy a package now and give it a trial tonight. Accept no substitutes.

A little book describing the causes and cure of piles is published by the Pyramid Drug Company, Marshall, Mich., and same will be sent free to any address for the asking.

Atlantic coast. Dumont learned that men in the transport service ran all the risks of regular enlisted men and officers in the navy, but that they got none of the rewards. A few years ago he secured the passage of a law by congress placing men in the transport service on the same footing as those in the navy and army.

President Grant appointed Dumont to the inspection service in 1876. He became inspector general and served in that capacity until nearly two years ago, when he was reduced to the rank of local inspector and stationed in New York. Old age was the chief reason for the transfer. Although active, Dumont is about 80 years of age. During his latter years as inspector general he was gruff and arbitrary, and it was felt by the treasury officials and the president that a younger man should be given the place. This was done with regret, because of Dumont's long service. He was given the New York appointment, and now, through the wreck of the steamer Slocum, which had been imperfectly inspected and was burned with a loss of over 1,000 persons, his connection with the government has terminated.

BUGGY AND TEAM ARE CONFISCATED

MUSKOGEE, I. T., Oct. 22.—Two negroes, Lee and Jacob Holmes, were arrested by Deputy Cordell at Wewoka, on a charge of introducing, and brought to Muskogee yesterday.

When the officer captured these men he also took possession of a buggy and a pair of horses that belonged to them, in the name of the government, and they will be sold to the highest bidder, the money going to the government. This class of cases has not been tried yet, but Prosecuting Attorney Mollette thinks there will be no trouble in enforcing it. The first case of the kind will probably be tried in the district court soon, and if the law sticks there are other things that will be confiscated besides buggies and teams.

There is a goodly number of horses and buggies that the government is holding in this district, awaiting the result of the first case. The officers are determined to take every kind of conveyance in the future that the peddlers use in transporting the liquor.

AVAILABLE FUNDS FOR PRINTING THE TICKETS

DALLAS, Oct. 22.—The democratic candidates for county officers will not have to put up a cent additional for the expense of printing the democratic official ballot for the reason that enough money was left over from the recent primary election to pay all expenses.

After all the primary bills were paid it was found that a balance of about $100 remained. As this money was put up by candidates of the democratic party it was thought unnecessary to make another assessment, but to use the funds already on hand. The expense of printing the democratic ballot in this county amounts to about $87.

The republicans have come forward with the necessary funds for printing their ballot, although it is said the money was put up under protest. The democrats and the republicans will be the only parties that pay for their ballots. The socialists, prohibitionists and some labor parties have no county tickets in the field, and the county will have to bear the expense of printing the ballots, upon which will be the names of these parties' candidates for state offices.

TWO FIREMEN HURT AT A CHICAGO BLAZE

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Two firemen were seriously injured and a property loss of $250,000 was caused by a fire which tonight destroyed the annex to the Durand & Jasper Company's building, wholesale grocers, at Lake and Union streets.

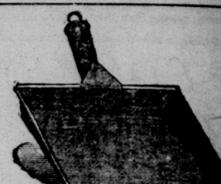

A small loss of such threatening proportions shortly after it was discovered that additional alarms were sent in calling thirty engines to the fire. Sparks and burning embers were carried for blocks by the strong northwest wind and bucket brigades were formed by police and citizens. In leaving positions that threatened to become perilous, two firemen were severely injured. Twenty-five firemen barely escaped being crushed by falling walls. The cause of the fire is supposed to have been an overheated oven.

OKLAHOMA DEALERS FIGHTING LAWTON

LAWTON, Ok., Oct. 22.—The real estate men of Lawton believe they have just cause for being incensed at the treatment they are receiving at the hands of the men of Oklahoma City engaged in a similar business. For three years men seeking homes have been coming into this city by way of Oklahoma City, and it has been often repeated that real estate men of that city have discouraged their coming to the southwest section by attempting to have them believe the country was not worth anything for farming and that the towns were dead. Through this means they have been enabled to stop many men who were headed for Lawton as their destination.

The other feature was the winner of the first heat in the first race. The time was 2:05 1/2, the fastest mile made in a race by a 4-year-old this season. In winning the 2:04 class for pacers, John M. made the fastest time of the season for a pacer in a two-heat race.

BURCH & PRINCE, 2d and Houston

The football team of the Polytechnic College of this city beat the team of the Grandview Collegiate Institute at Grandview yesterday afternoon by a score of 6 to 0. The game was a clean all-around game and was nicely played. Both sides put up a plucky fight, but the skill of the "Polys" was too much for the home team, which outweighed the visitors nearly ten pounds to the man.

The halves played were twenty-five minute ones and this was found to be sufficient for both teams to find out which was the better team. The game was marked by few brilliant plays and this can be attributed to the weakness of the Fort Worth team. Captain Shumate, left halfback; Tandy, right end, and McMahon, left tackle, were left on the side line throughout the game. The Fort Worth team showed improvement in team work but rather weak on defense. Considering the material they put into the game they put up a splendid play.

The score was made in the first six minutes of the game by a thirty-five yard run of Quarterback Braswell. No other score was made at any point of the game. At no time was the ball out of the Grandview territory. The Fort Worth players held the other team within the limits of their end of the field. In the last half when time was called the ball was on the Grandview five-yard line and if the time had lasted a few more minutes it is highly probable that the score would have been larger. The Fort Worth players were steadily pushing the ball down the field.

Adkins, the right halfback of the "Polys," distinguished himself by several fine gains. As did Hanks, the right guard of the Grandview, who made the star play of the game, getting a fumbled ball on the mistake of a man on the other side and away he went down the field for a thirty-five yard run. The Cadets brothers put up a stiff game by kicking the Grandview line to the queen's taste. All the "Polys" players did well and the Grandview boys played their portion of the game to the best of their ability.

Polytechnic College will play the team of the Fort Worth University on the campus of the former school next Saturday.

UNIVERSITY AND HIGH SCHOOL.
The football team of Fort Worth University beat the team of the high school yesterday afternoon by a score of 9 to 0. The game was a well played one and the high school men put up a plucky game against their opponents.

The game was witnessed by a small number of persons. Substitutes were used by the Fort Worth College, who made the high school team had several of the city's old heavyweights. However, both sides were well matched.

Peace of the University made a place kick from the field and put the ball over the goal. It seems that Peace when in any game is good for a sensational play. He has done this in most of the games of the University this season. The creditable showing of the team is due to the excellent coaching of Coach E. J. Mills.

The line-up was:
University..... High School.
Tuffant..... right end.....Shropshire
Hubman..... right tackle.....Williams
Pace..... right guard.....Thompson
Pace..... center.....Oxner

GAME AT ARLINGTON.
The Dallas High school football team met the Carlisle Military Academy team of Arlington on the latter's grounds Saturday afternoon. The game, which was called at 4 o'clock, resulted in a score of 16 to 0 in favor of the Carlisle team.

The Academy boys outplayed their Dallas opponents at every point of the game and succeeded in pushing the pigskin over for the first touchdown in four minutes after the game began. Goal was kicked by Captain Looney.

The teams were about evenly matched in weight.
The game was umpired and refereed by Professor Browder of the Academy and Mr. Lewis of Dallas. Below is given the line-up of each team:
Looney..... right half.....T. Woolen
Delaney..... left half.....McConnell

HARVARD'S CHANCES NO MORE THAN EVEN

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 22.—Secret practice has commenced at Harvard. Injuries have handicapped the crimson and a vacillating policy has retarded progress, but at last the grind is on and the elimination of chaff will pave the way for the battle front.

Probably the last addition to the squad was made when Jim O'Connell appeared Monday to try for the eleven. Two years ago he made a gallant effort but was not heavy enough. He will try for tackle, where Harvard is weakest. There have been 100 men in the squad, and the coaches and Hurley had a task picking the best. The game with West Point disclosed many weaknesses and the secret practice will be devoted at first to remedying a poor defense.

It is at tackle that the weakness is glaring. Harvard's tackles have had little coaching, as it was supposed the men were in good shape and required little coaching.

Five weeks off is that big game. The back field will stand as at present, and with Hurley, Nichols and Mills there is little to fear there from any Yale outfit. The line is perplexing. They are nursing the good ones. Parkinson must be watched. He is in good shape, but has been a sick man and no chances can be taken with him. A scrub game might again be made up to Lewis. The line is perplexing. They are nursing the good ones. Parkinson must be watched. He is in good shape, but has been a sick man and no chances can be taken with him. A scrub game might again be made up to Lewis.

The tackle problem is hardest. Brill is out of the game for three weeks at least. Overson, Parkinson and Derby have been in hospital, but are about and may try a little practice.

Kernan and Noyes are hustling for quarter and are doing good work. Kernan is becoming amenable to orders now that he finds there are a few things that "Brother Bob" did not know. He is punting beautifully, and has it on Noyes. In offense, the bunch has been plucky and all that, but when it comes to retreat, they become unwieldy and lack vision. Each seems impelled to individually save the team and the result is confusion.

A meeting of former coaches has been called, and definite action will ensue. The famous coach, William H. Lewis, the colored lawyer, has been busy with important cases for the last ten days, and his valuable advice and practical demonstration has been sadly missed.

NEITHER TEAM SCORED.
ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 22.—The Annapolis midshipmen put up a poor game here today with the eleven of Dickinson College. Neither team scored. The middies really lost today's contest by numerous fumbles.

VIRGINIA U 17, V. M. I. 0.

NEBRASKA 34, KNOX 0.
LINCOLN, Neb., Oct. 22.—Nebraska University drubbed Knox College on the gridiron this afternoon by the score of 34 to 0. The corn huskers scored three touchdowns in each half. Knox, although light, had the Nebraska's guessing early in the game, and pulled off a 50-yard run on delayed pass and worked the ball into Nebraska's territory to the 10-yard line. A fumble gave Nebraska the ball and thereafter Knox could not withstand the corn huskers' attack. Long runs by Bender and Benedict for Nebraska were the features. Fumbles by Nebraska near the Knox goal cost the corn huskers at least two touchdowns.

GEORGIA 2, TENNESSEE 0.
ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 22.—The University of Tennessee of Knoxville put up a stiff game against the Georgia Technicals' eleven this afternoon. A safety being all that the home team could land. Score: Georgia Technical, 2; Tennessee, 0.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 22.—Kentucky State was no match for the University of Cincinnati this afternoon. Cincinnati winning out, 11 to 0. The visitors' defense was weak.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., Oct. 22.—Harvard defeated the Carlisle Indians 12 to 0 in the presence of more than 2,000 people today. In the first half the Indians played the Crimson to a standstill but in the second long runs resulted in two touchdowns for Harvard. Both teams were penalized frequently for off side play. The Indians put up a stiff defense in the first half but several trick plays failed to work. Libbey, the little quarterback, made several gains for the visitors. The best gains made by the Red men was on cross-tackle formations through Harvard's left.

WEST POINT 11; YALE 3.
WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 22.—West Point achieved a great victory in defeating the strong Yale team 11 to 3 today. The weather was ideal for football and there was an immense crowd in attendance, the largest ever seen here at a football game. A bunch of middies from the Naval Academy were also present and joined in cheering West Point's triumph. Yale kicked off to the 25-yard line and West Point punted back with the wind to Yale's 20-yard line. Hill blocked Yale's kick and ran for a touchdown on the 25-yard line and Graves kicked the goal after five minutes' play.

At the end of the first half the record showed the score, West Point 6; Yale 0. Much of the play in the second half was in Yale's territory. Towards the close, however, occurred "the spectacular feature of the game. Torney got the ball on a fumble and ran the entire length of the field for a touchdown, but failed at goal. Final score: West Point 11; Yale 6.

INDIANA 21; WASHINGTON U. 6.
ST. LOUIS, Oct. 22.—Indiana defeated Washington University this afternoon in the stadium at the World's Fair by the score of 21 to 6. Indiana has the fastest team that has played at the stadium this season.

PHILADELPHIA 16; COLUMBIA 0.
PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22.—Philadelphia's victory this afternoon over Columbia University at Franklin Field by a score of 16 to 0, was accomplished principally through the brilliant playing of Stevenson. He was practically responsible for the third touchdown, making two of the scores himself and making the other possible by a brilliant twenty-two-yard run. Pennsylvania outplayed Columbia at every point.

OHIO 16; CASE 6.
COLUMBI'S OHIO, Oct. 22.—The champions of Ohio met defeat this afternoon, 16 to 6, by Case. Case made most of her gains around state's left end.

ILLINOIS 24; PURDUE 6.
LA FAYETTE, IND., Oct. 22.—Purdue found themselves weak in the first half and presented a change in the lineup in the second. The change strengthened the team and they put up a strong defense. Purdue carried the ball several times by heavy line plunges for first, second and third downs, but the liners were always equal to the occasion. Score: Illinois 24; Purdue 6.

MICHIGAN 130; WEST VIRGINIA 0.
ANN ARBOR, MICH., Oct. 22.—The West Virginia eleven went down to defeat today by the crushing score of 130 to 0. Michigan's play was fast and furious.

CHICAGO 36; NORTHWESTERN 0.
CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Chicago's eleven gave a rare exhibition of football this afternoon by beating Northwestern over-whelmingly 36 to 0. The first part of the game was a brilliant show of defense by Northwestern, but in the second half had no defensive strength and the ball was shot and hurled down the field by Chicago's backs almost at their will. Eckersley came away for more glory by dropping two goals from the field.

PRINCETON 60, LEHIGH 0.
PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 22.—Princeton completely outclassed Lehigh this afternoon in every department of the game, defeating the visitors 60 to 0. The Tigers showed great improvement on the defense, while their speed on the track was overwhelming. Only once was Lehigh able to hold for downs, but succeeded in making eight first downs in the first half. Their gains were made principally by trick plays and quarterback runs around the end. At no time was the Princeton goal threatened. The Pennsylvania men found the Tigers' end napping in the first part of the game and four first downs in quick succession. Fouke's long sprints around the end were the feature of the game. He made the third touchdown by a fifty-seven yard run.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 22.—Quarterback Shufford of Franklin and Marshall ran eighty yards from a kick-off through the Cornell eleven this afternoon and scored, thereby filling the Red and White supporters with gloom. The game from Cornell's standpoint was a dismal failure and showed marked weakness in defensive work and holding the ball. Franklin and Marshall made several long gains by trick plays, gaining twenty yards four times on a fake kick play. Score 26 to 5 in favor of Cornell.

WISCONSIN 84, DRAKE 0.
MADISON, Wis., Oct. 22.—Wisconsin 84, Drake 0. That tells the whole story. Overwhelmed, outplayed and outgeneraled, the plucky Drake team fought valiantly until the umpire called the game on account of darkness. Had Wisconsin played the remaining ten minutes she would have run up a score of over 100 points.

DOKE MURPHREE IS HEARD FROM IN TENNESSEE
Former Citizen of This County Who Was Eccentric — Was Formerly With Salvini as an Actor, But Quit

Regular readers of the daily papers will recall the sensational Doke Murphree murder and insanity cases which were tried in the district and county courts here about four years ago.

It will be recalled that Murphree, at the time lived with his aged mother at Mansfield where he taught school. He was one of the brainiest men in the county, but of a peculiar turn of mind. In other words, he was extremely eccentric, and his eccentricities got him into repeated troubles, until at last he shot and killed a man. One day he went into the Mansfield postoffice and in a firing which followed Sherman Gaudin was killed and his father, Postmaster Gaudin, was wounded.

Murphree was arrested and tried, his attorney being now Assistant County Attorney Buck and Congressman O. W. Gillespie. The defendant was finally acquitted. He was then tried for assault to murder Postmaster Gaudin at two different times, both trials resulting in a hung jury. This charge was finally wiped off the docket of the court.

Murphree was then arrested on a charge of insanity, but this trial, like the murder and assault to murder cases, resulted in an acquittal. In these trials Murphree pleaded his own case and the effort is said by all who heard it to have been the greatest ever made in the Tarrant county courthouse.

Soon after these cases were all disposed of Murphree left this state and removed to Bell Buckle, Tenn., his old home and where his wealthy father resided. Murphree, soon after reaching Bell Buckle, was admitted to the bar, and said to be one of the best lawyers in that part of Tennessee, but he has recently had more trouble which proved serious to him. He got into a street duel with the sheriff of that county but with what results could not be definitely learned here. Soon after this difficulty he was waylaid and shot in the left arm which had to be amputated in order to save his life.

It is believed by friends of Murphree here that the latter shooting was the result of his troubles with the sheriff.

Murphree, besides being a brainy man, was as fearless as a lion. He was for many years leading man for the great Italian tragedian, Salvini, and traveled with him over the whole world. He has played in all the large cities in foreign countries as well as in the United States. Murphree was with Salvini more than four years. One day he took a notion to quit the stage, and he left instantly and has never been heard of since the footlights since he never ever knew why he suddenly decided to quit acting, but he quit, and quit for good.

Those who have seen him act say that he divided honors with Salvini.

IMPROVEMENTS BY BURCH AND PRINCE

The firm of Burch & Prince, 215 Houston street, has made some very neat improvements in the past several weeks. The interior of the already large store with its large stock of dry goods and ladies' wearing apparel, has been neatly papered and painted within and in the rear of the store a large arch has been cut and an addition to the store made.

This addition at the rear of the store is used for the millinery department. Here the ladies purchasing hats have an opportunity to try them on with the best of light and with no danger of being interrupted. The room has large windows on the south and east side reaching to the ceiling. This gives all the desirable light.

Under the present management the firm has made splendid progress and has built up a wonderful business. Burch & Prince also conduct a store at North Fort Worth and when the buyers go to the markets they can thus buy a larger bulk of goods and consequently get the lowest prices, which goes in part to the purchaser. The store has a most obliging and accommodating set of clerks and they are ever ready to serve the public.

LABOR NOTES

A Union colony is to be the next innovation in Fort Worth, plans for such a settlement in one of the most healthful and desirable portions of the city now being under way.

The movement in reality had no beginning as such, being the outgrowth of purchases of land to build homes in this section by a number of the prominent union workers. Others picked upon adjoining locations until it was seen that quite a coterie of union men were about to become neighbors and the "Union colony" was on its feet.

The colony will be located in the Seventh ward, just beyond the end of the present Evans avenue car line, on a plot of land which has a high altitude, giving a pleasing view of the city and assuring good drainage and healthful conditions.

The title to the land is at present being cleared of all clouds and a number of the union men have announced their intention of joining the colony.

Considerable political effect may result from the establishment of such a colony in one of the city wards, but such effect has not been considered in its establishment, and if felt will be the outgrowth and not the object of the settlement.

HONOR TEXAN.

Much favorable comment has been heard in this city among the Carpenters and Joiners over the selection of H. C. Fuller of Denison as second vice-president of the International organization. The significance of his choice at the Milwaukee meeting lies in the fact that it will give this state an active organizer in the field.

TYPOGRAPHICAL.
The movement on foot to establish an eight-hour day in all book and job printing offices which has been referred to a referendum vote, was faltered upon in this city during the week, the result declaring in favor of the eight-hour day.

Reports from Chicago and other parts of the country show the tendency generally in favor of the movement and there is little doubt that it will carry.

Should it carry, the eight-hour day will be made effective in all book and job offices on and after January 1, 1905. From the time of the passage of the measure the defense assessment of one-half of one per cent will be in force in all the locals, the sum thus accumulating being used in making the fight for the eight-hour day.

The countries that have the largest population, China, India and Russia, are not the strongest nations, either industrially, commercially, or in any other way.

THE LIFE OF THE WINDS OF HEAVEN

By STEWART EDWARD WHITE

"LOOKED UP"

By STEWART EDWARD WHITE
(Copyright S. S. McClure Company.)

Barbara hesitated long between the openwork stockings and the plain silk, but finally determined on the former. Then she vouchsafed a pleased little smile to her pleased little image in the mirror and stepped through the door into the presence of her aunt. The aunt was appropriately astonished. This was the first time Barbara had spread her dainty chiffon wings in the air of the great north woods.

After her plain old backwoods aunt had admired and exclaimed over the butterfly so unexpectedly developed from the brown tailor-made chrysalis, Barbara determined to take a walk. She knew that through that cool, fascinating forest, only half a mile away, dwelt the Adams. The Adams, too, were only the woods people, but they were human, and chiffon is chiffon. In the wilderness as in the towns. So Barbara announced her intention and stepped into the open sunlight.

Pretty soon the trail entered the great, cool, green forest. Barbara closed her parasol and carried it under one arm, while with the same hand she swept her skirt clear of the ground.

"Phew!" came a most terrible, dreadful sound from the thicket close at hand.

Barbara dropped her parasol, and clasped her heart with both hands and screamed. From the thicket two slender ears pointed inquiringly toward her, two wide brown eyes stared frightened into hers, a delicate nose dilated with terror. "Phew!" snorted the deer again, and vanished in a series of elastic stiff-legged springs.

"Oh!" cried Barbara, "you horrid thing! How you frightened me." She picked up her parasol and resumed her journey in some perturbation of mind, reflecting on the utter rudeness of the deer. Gradually the trail seemed to become more difficult. After a time it was obstructed by the top of a fallen basswood. Barbara looked about her. She was not on the trail at all.

At first she proceeded circumspectly, with an eye to the chiffon. It was torn in a dozen places. Then she thrust one dear little slipper through the moss into black water. Three times the stiff straight rods of the tamarack whipped her smartly across the face, when finally she emerged on the other side of the hundred feet of that miserable cedar swamp she had ceased to hold up the chiffon skirt, and was most vexed.

"I think you're just mean!" she cried, pettishly, to the still forest, and then caught her breath in the silence of awe.

The forest had become suddenly unfriendly; its kindness had somehow vanished. In all directions it looked the same—straight towering trunks, saplings, undergrowth. It had shut her in with a wall of green, and hurry in whatever direction she would, Barbara was always inclosed in apparently the same little cell of leaves.

Frightened, but with determination, she commenced to walk rapidly in the direction she believed would lead her out. The bushes now caught at her unheeded. She tore through briars, popples, moose maples, alike. The chiffon was sadly marred, the picture hat stained and awry, the brave little shoes, with their silver buckles and their pointed high heels, were dull with wet.

She dropped to ground and gave way to her wild terror, weeping with the gulping sobs of a frightened child, but even in extremity dabbing her eyes from time to time with an absurd tiny handkerchief of draw-work border.

Poor little Barbara, she was lost. After a while, subtly, she felt that some one was standing near her. She looked up.

The somebody was a man. He was young. Barbara saw three things—that he had kindly gray eyes, which just now were twinkling at her amusedly; that the handkerchief about his neck was clean; and that the line of his jaw was unusually clear-cut and fine. An observant person would have noticed, further, that the young man carried a rifle and a pack; that he wore a heavily laden belt about his waist, and moccasins on his feet; that his blue flannel shirt, though clean, was faded; that his skin was brown as pine bark. Barbara had no use for such details. The eye was kindly; the jaw was strong; neatness indicated the gentleman. And a strong, kindly gentleman was just what poor little lost Barbara needed the most. Unconsciously, she tilted her pointed chin forward adorably and smiled.

"Oh! now it's all right; isn't it?" said she. "I am glad," he replied, the look of amusement deepening in his gray eyes, "and a moment ago it was all wrong. What was the matter?"

"I am lost," answered Barbara contentedly, as one would say, "My shoes are a little dusty."

"That's bad," sympathized the other. "Where are you lost from?"

"The Adams, or the Maxwells; I don't know which. I started to go from one to the other. Then there was a deer, and so I got lost."

"I see," he agreed, with entire assurance. "And now what are you going to do?"

"I am not going to do anything. You are to take me home."

"To the Adams or the Maxwells?"

"To whichever is nearest."

The young man seemed to be debating. Barbara glanced at his thoughtful, strong face from under the edge of her picture hat, which slyly she had rearranged. She liked his face. It was so good humored.

"It is almost sunset," replied the youth at length. "You can see the shadows are low. How do you hope to push through the woods after dark? There are wild animals—wolves!" he added maliciously.

Barbara looked up again with sudden alarm. "But what shall we do?" she cried, less composed. "You must take me home."

"I can try," said he, with the resignation of a man who can but die. "What do you advise?" she asked. "That we camp here," he proposed, calmly, with an air of finality.

"Oh!" dissented Barbara in alarm. "Never! I am afraid of the woods! It will be wet and cold. I am hungry. My feet are just sopping!"

"THE PORCUPINE LEFT SUPPLY AT HIS UNNOTICED WAY FROM ONE END OF THE PARASOL TO THE OTHER"

you must take off your shoes and stockings, and put these on." He had been fumbling in his pack, and now produced a pair of thick woolen lumberman's socks.

When the young man returned with an armful of hemlock bark and the silvers of a pine stump, he found her sitting bolt upright on a log, her feet tucked under her. Before the fire he shortly hung the two webs of gossamer and the two dear little, ridiculous high-heeled shoes, with their silver buckles. Then, in a most business-like fashion he pitched a diminutive shelter tent. With equal expedition he built a second fire, between two butternut logs, produced a frying pan and kettle, and set about supper.

"If you please," said Barbara with her small air of decision, "I am very thirsty."

"You will have to wait till I go to the spring," replied the newcomer, without stirring.

Barbara elevated her small nose in righteous indignation. After a long time she just peeped in his direction. He was laughing to himself. She hastily elevated her nose again. After all it was very lonely in the woods.

"Supper is ready," he said, after a time. "I do not think I care for any," she replied with dignity. She was very tired and hungry and cross, and her eyes were hot.

"Oh, yes you do," he insisted, carelessly. "Come on, now, before it gets cold."

"I tell you I do not care for any," she replied, haughtily. For answer he picked her up bodily, carried her ten feet, and deposited her on another log. Beside her lay a clean bit of bark containing a broiled deer steak. She struggled angrily.

"Don't be a fool," the man commanded, sternly. "You need food. You will eat supper."

Barbara looked up at him with wide eyes. Then she began to eat the venison. By and by she remarked, "You are rather nice," and after she had drained the last drop of tea, she even smiled, a trifle humbly. "Thank you," she said.

It was now dark, and the night had stolen down through the sentry trees to the very outposts of the fire. The man arranged the rubber blanket before it. Barbara sat upon the blanket and leaned back against the log. He perched above her, producing a pipe. "May I?" he asked.

Then, when he had puffed a few moments in quiet content, he inquired: "How did you come to get lost?"

She told him. "That was very foolish," he scolded severely. "Don't you know any better than to go into the woods without your bearings? It was idiotic."

"Thank you," Barbara replied meekly. "Well, it was," he insisted the

you have a little the manner of one who has been a trifle—"

"Spoiled," finished Barbara with a wicked emphasis. Stanton merely laughed. "That is not nice," she reproved with vast dignity.

Barbara was furious at herself for blushing. A cry, inexpressibly mournful, quivered from the woods, close at hand.

"Oh! What is that?" she exclaimed. "Our friend, the porcupine. Don't be frightened."

Down through the trees sighed a little wind. "Who? who? who?" droned an owl, monotonously. The sparks from the fire shot up and died. A chill was in the air. Barbara's eyes grew heavier and heavier. The fire penetrated her through. She tucked her feet under her, and expanded in the warmth like a fireside kitten in purring content. Then, had she known it, the man was looking at her—looking at her with a strange, wistfulness in his gray eyes. Dear, harmless, innocent little Barbara, who had so confidently trusted in his goodness.

"Come, little girl," he said, softly, at last. He arose and held out his hand. Awakened from her abstraction, she looked at him with a faint smile, and eyes from which the country had gone, leaving only the chill.

"Come," he repeated. "Time to turn in."

She arose dutifully. The little tent really looked inviting. The balsam bed proved luxurious, soft as feathers. "When you are ready," he told her, "let me know. I want to open the tent flap for the sake of warmth."

The soft woolen blanket was very grateful. When the flap was opened Barbara found that a second fire had been built, with a backing of green logs so arranged as to reflect the heat directly into her shelter.

Hours later, as it seemed, some trifling sound awakened her. The heat still streamed gratefully into the tiny shelter; the solemn shadows still danced across the forest; the contemplative figure still stared into the embers, strongly silhouetted by the firelight. A tender compunction stole into Barbara's tender little heart.

"The poor dear," said she. "He has no place to sleep. He is guarding me from the dangers of the forest," which was quite ridiculous, as any woodsman will know.

Her drowsy eyes watched him wistfully—her mystery, her hero of romance. Again the fire blurred, again the solemn shadows paused. A last thought shaped itself in Barbara's consciousness.

"Why, he must be very old," she said to herself. "He must be 26." So she fell asleep.

Barbara awoke to the sun and the crisp morning air, and a delightful feeling that she had slept well, and had not been uncomfortable at all. The flap of her tent was discreetly bent through the crack and saw Stanton bending over the fire.

In a moment he straightened and approached the tent. When within a few feet he paused. Through the hollow of his hands he cried out the long musical morning call of the woodsman.

"Ro-o-oll out!" he cried. The forest took up the sound in dying modulations.

For answer Barbara threw aside the tent flap and stepped into the sun. "Good morning," said she.

"Salute!" he replied. "Come, and I will show you the spring."

"I am sorry I cannot offer you a better variety for your breakfast. It is only the supper over again," he explained, after she had returned and had perched like a fluffy bird of paradise on the log. Her cheeks were very pink from the cold water and her eyes were very beautiful from the dregs of dreams, and her hair very glittering from the kissing of the early sun. And, wonderful to say, she forgot to thrust out her pointed chin in the fashion so entirely adorable.

She ate with relish, for the woods hunger was hers. Stanton said nothing. The time was pregnant with unspoken things. All the charming elements of the little episode were crystallizing for them, and instinctively Barbara felt that in a few moments she would be compelled to read their meaning.

"At last the man said without stirring."

"Well, I suppose we'd better be going," she said.

"I suppose so," she replied.

They sat there some time longer, staring abstractedly at the kindly green forest; then Stanton abruptly rose and began to construct his pack. The girl did not move.

"Come," he said at last. She arose obediently.

"Follow close behind me," he advised.

"Yes," said she.

They set off through the greenery. It opened silently before them. Barbara looked back. It had already closed silently behind them, shutting out the episode forever. The little camp had ceased to exist; the great, ruthless, calm forest had reclaimed its own. Nothing was left.

Then she noticed that he had dropped and was looking at her in deprecation and was holding aside the screen of mossy maples. Beyond, she could see the familiar clearing and the smoke from the Maxwell cabin.

She had slept almost within sight of her own doorstep.

"Please forgive me," he was saying. "I meant it only as an interesting little adventure. It has been harmless enough, surely—to you."

His eyes were hungry. Barbara could not find words.

"Goodbye," he concluded. "Goodbye. You will forgive me in time—or forget, which is much the same. Believe me: if I have offended you, my punishment is going to be severe. Goodbye."

"Goodbye," said Barbara, a little breathlessly. She had already forgotten the trick. She could think only that the forest, the unfriendly forest, was about to recall her soon. "Goodbye," he repeated again. He should have gone, but he did not. The situation became strained.

"When are you coming to see me?" she inquired, at length. "I shall be here two weeks yet."

"Never," he replied.

"What do you mean?" she asked, after a moment.

"After Painted Rock, the wilderness," he explained, almost bitterly. "The wilderness and solitude for many years—forever!"

"Don't go until tomorrow," she urged.

"I must."

"Why?"

"Because I must be at Painted Rock by Friday, and to reach it I must travel fast and long."

"And if you do not?"

"My mission fails," he replied.

They stood there silent. Barbara dug tiny holes with the tip of her parasol.

"And that is ruin?" she asked, softly, without looking up.

"I have struggled hard for many years. The result is this chance."

"I see," she replied, bending her head lower. "It would be a very foolish thing for you to stay, then, would it not?"

He did not reply.

"But you are going to, aren't you?" she went on in a voice almost inaudible. "You must not go like that. I ask you to stay."

Again the pause.

"I cannot," he replied.

She looked up. He was standing erect and tall, his face set in the bronze liner of a resolution, his gray eyes leveled, straight and steady, beyond her head. Instantly her own spirit flashed.

"I think now you'd better go," she said, superbly.

They faced each other for a moment. Then Barbara dropped her head again, extending her hand.

"You do not know," she whispered. "I have much to forgive."

He hesitated, then touched the tips of her fingers with his lips. She did not look up. With a gesture which she did not see, he stooped to his pack and swung into the woods.

Barbara stood motionless. Not a line of her figure stirred. Only the chiffon parasol dropped suddenly to the ground.

IV. After a time she lifted her head and blinked bravely at the sky. She raised the parasol and slanted it over her shoulder, and drew one of its tiny bud-like rib ends across her face. Then she began elaborately to saunter through the clearing, playing out to herself and to the solemn stumps a brave little tragedy that she was happy.

"He might have stayed," she parried the question: "it would only have been polite, after tricking me so. I do not think it was very nice of him."

A porcupine trundled out from the edge of the forest, and paused to reconnoitre. She did not notice him. She was trying to see.

"I suppose I am unreasonable to expect him to ruin his chances," Barbara conceded, thoughtfully. "But he might have seemed a little sorer about it."

"I wonder if he really cared to see me again," pursued Barbara. "I don't suppose he thought much about it. Most men would have. But he is different from most men."

She threw up her head proudly at the comparison. "He has big things to think of, big things to do. He is strong and brave." Her eyes shone with the splendor of her idea. She was seeing far ahead into the land of mystery and grand romance. Then the exaltation died. "No," she confessed humbly, "he would not think of me. I am not worth his thoughts. I am silly, and a little fool. Oh, I am a little fool. I am ashamed of myself."

The summer day had already begun to lay its silence on the morning. A wild bee hummed musingly over a flower. Far in the woods, clear as a cameo, the crash of a breaking limb sounded. The porcupine, who has just turned over the parasol with his nose, cocked his head inquiringly. From time to time he glanced uneasily back, as other sounds engraved the stillness.

Barbara gazed at nothing with sad eyes. "I wish I had died in the woods," she said, slowly. "I wouldn't despise myself so."

"I must have looked perfectly horrid with my gown all torn," contemplated Barbara. The round tears trembled on her lashes, and finally splashed to the ground. "I shall never see him again," she ended, brokenly. "Never! Oh, I can't help it. I want to see him again! I want to! I want to!"

The tears flowed unrestrained now. Poor, dear little child Barbara, with her tender heart and her quaint, tantalizing, small face, and her eighteen years, was suddenly face to face with the great, terrible life which men and women live. And life was being very harsh with her.

She covered her face and gave herself frankly to her misery. She cried. Nothing else mattered. But the porcupine, crafty and wary animal, long since beyond mere emotion, ceased gnawing the altogether delightful varnish, and prepared to roll into an unassailable ball. He was rather a stupid porcupine, as porcupines run, but he knew better than to omit the ordinary precautions when something reckless and hasty was tearing through the forest exactly in his direction. In a moment he did coil, congratulating himself on his chances for a green old age. The dim, mysterious symbolism of approach suddenly materialized. Barbara did not know it; grief is even stupider than porcupines.

Then suddenly, subtly, she knew. Life, great and mysterious, had relented. She threw out her arms to him, her face transfigured, her eyes streaming. What did she care for torn chiffons and blurred vision, for the gossamer web of convention? Life has turned kind. She, dear little Barbara, whose tender heart was never meant to be denied, knew now that the sun of her happiness had not been really blotted out from the heavens; that the cloud had passed.

"Oh!" she cried. "Oh! Oh!"

They talked, perhaps; perhaps not. They could not have told. Life moved on in cadences. The great life of the winds of heaven had commanded her children; and unthinking, like children, they had obeyed her. That was all. So the porcupine leisurely ate his unnoticed way from one end of the parasol to the other.

THE VERY BEST THAT CAN BE TAILORED—A large variety of styles to humor particular parents. There are lots of advantages in buying here, and not one of the least is the saving of money.

Do you know that one of the worst things you can do for a boy is to buy him poorly-made, badly-fitting clothes? You cut him off from one of the manliest virtues—personal pride. You rob him of right training by making him careless of his clothes, because ashamed of them. Boys, you always take good care of clothes you like, don't you? Parents, is it or is it not better to have a suit that looks well, makes the boy proud and provident? Or is the other kind better—that hangs all askew and goes to pieces in no time, and makes you spend twice the money?

Fathers, mothers, boys! good clothes, at comparatively low prices, are at your service.

The matter of joining the recently organized association of North Texas was discussed and a committee of one, W. J. Warner, was appointed to confer with the officers of the new organization.

C. M. Brown was also appointed by the members present to look for a suitable building in which a future poultry exhibition could be held some time between December 26 and January 5.

The meeting then adjourned to meet on next Sunday, at which time the reports of the two committees will be heard and some action taken regarding both the matters discussed last night.

WHY APPENDICITIS?

Why is appendicitis so common today? Because we have got into the pernicious habit of eating too much.

Dr. Curtis, the great authority on this disease, says: "Appendicitis follows the eating of a very heavy or particularly large or indigestible meal."

After carefully following a foolish custom, you can insure your safety by taking Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

It is an accepted scientific truth which admits of no dispute, that if you will keep your digestive apparatus in good order, you will never suffer from this dread disease, which, at best, means a weakening operation, with long weeks wasted in bed, and big doctor's and surgeons' bills to pay as souvenirs.

Keep your appendix in health by the proper use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Whenever you have had yourself open to danger by overeating, and upon the least sign of stomach or intestinal troubles, or otherwise, at any time, this dangerous disease may lay you low.

The curative influence of this great medicine is quickly shown in the gentle, soothing effect it has on all intestinal conditions of any part of the digestive tract.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets tone all these parts up to a proper condition of perfect health, and regulate their functions into a proper working state.

They also make away with all the causes of irritation, inflammation or indigestion, by helping to dissolve, digest and assimilate, or put to rest, use, all the food which is lying around in odd corners of your digestive apparatus, fermenting, rotting and curdling, like so much garbage in a dirty sink.

In these natural and perfectly simple ways, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets restore all sufferers, from any form of dyspepsia, to health.

They are safe and reliable. They never fail to relieve and cure, quickly and permanently.

Use them, and you need never worry about your appendix verminiformis.

PAWN BROKERS

Deputy Clerk in Federal Court Says He Never Knew One of Them to Take Benefit of the Law

DO A CASH BUSINESS

They Are Capitalists Because They Have Money to Start With—Profit on Investment in Every Case Is Handsome One—Very Little Risk

"As long as I have been connected with the Federal courts I have never known a pawnbroker to go through bankruptcy," said Deputy Clerk J. B. Finks of the United States court yesterday in response to a query.

"I guess every other business has been represented in the cases in the courts here but that one, I know, is not."

Investigation shows that few classes of business men maintain a better standing with banks or a higher credit with wholesale merchants, and no class is more suspected and disliked by the general public. And yet they are seldom known to repudiate a debt or to fall under the angry eye of a creditor.

A leading pawnbroker here stated that the chief reason for the commercial and financial stability of the pawnshop is the fact that it is conducted on a cash basis.

The pawnbroker does not deal in notes, checks or uncertain documents. He never speculates. His process of negotiating with his patrons is not a speculation; it is a sure thing. It can not be said that he takes no chances, for he does, as will be explained, but so far as his collateral is concerned, so far as the actual transaction of loaning money goes, he proceeds on the safest and most conservative basis of any business man.

BEGINS AS A CAPITALIST

In the first place he begins as a capitalist, since he can not proceed at all without cash. He is in effect a true banker with the advantage of having his money active in earning extraordinary interests; but with the relative disadvantage of carrying his loans a whole year. The law prohibits him from selling pawned securities within a twelve-month from the date of the loan, so that if he loans out $1,000 today he may not get that particular sum of money for a whole year.

The interest, however, begins to accumulate at a rapid rate. Pawnbrokers have been known to collect at the rate of 10 per cent a month for a year, but as a rule, this is only on small loans, and therefore in totals not so great as the lesser rates which they get for large loans. Thus a pawnbroker who loaned $10 on a silver watch that cost $20 and was, in his opinion, worth $15, would get the rate at $1 per month, and thus, in a year, if interest and principal were fully paid, would have doubled his money with 20 per cent per annum added without any risk whatever.

Any business that would yield 120 per cent per year would be regarded as highly profitable, but even the most astute pawnbroker can not average any such earnings on his money. "The collateral banker," as many pawnbrokers call themselves, is obliged to make his system as flexible as any other business man. Loans have been negotiated in pawnshops upon which the interest paid was as low as 2 per cent a month. Diamonds are of a price that fluctuates, that of other articles, such as watches, rings, brooches or even other jewels. Diamonds are always "in style"; they are proof against age, sun, and changing fashions, and the pawnshop pawnbroker is a master appraiser of the rank and worth of a diamond.

AD PAWN BROKERS—ONE INTEREST AT VARYING RATES

Established pawnbrokers also make a practice of regulating their interest rates in favor of old or steady customers. They have the same desire to build up their reputations with their patrons as have other business men. It is the seldom customer with an article of great value who pays the highest rates to the pawnbroker, and it is the large borrower who is a regular patron who gets his loans at the lowest figures.

A great addition to the income of the pawnbroker comes with the acquisition of unredeemed pledges, and it is this feature of his business which graduates him into full-fledged merchant. There are few pawnshops which are not also retailers of jewelry, gems, watches, musical instruments, and other small articles of value, and it will be understood that that part of the stock has acquired a great advantage. For, except in the case of diamonds, a broker will not loan on an average more than 15 per cent of the original value of the pawn.

Beginning with the sale of unredeemed pledges, the pawnshop broker becomes a dealer in new as well as second hand goods, and some of the oldest and most successful jewelers in this city began as and still are pawnbrokers. They have two advantages over more pretentious and larger competitors; one is that they do not work under so great an expense and another is that so many customers go to pawnshops to buy jewelry in the belief that it is the best bargain that can be had. But this is not always the case.

STOLEN PROPERTY ONLY RISK

The only serious risk that a pawnbroker runs in his business, outside of fire and burglaries, is accepting stolen property as collateral. That is at all times a real and considerable hazard, and the collateral banker has no way to safeguard against it, cultivated acquaintances and refuse any kind of loan to suspicious looking persons. The thief of portable valuables never in person offers them as pledges, but he wishes to get the cash on them delegates a friend or confederate to do the business. Every pawnbroker is required to furnish the police with a daily list of the transactions of his last twenty-four hours, and this list, containing numbers, descriptions, and valuations of pawned articles, is an almost unerring tracer of property that has been stolen and pawned. When identified all such pawns must be surrendered to the owner by the broker and he has no recourse against any one.

"You may be sure of one thing," said a leading pawnbroker, "most of the stolen valuables which are never recovered go into the hands of goldsmiths, jewelers, and regular dealers in cities other than the location of the robbery. The pawnbrokers do not get much stolen property because they cannot reset diamonds, transform gold and silver, and otherwise disguise the identity of the valuables as a goldsmith or manufacturer can. And if you ask the police they will tell you that the pawnbrokers have helped them as much as any other influence in ferreting out burglaries and in restoring lost property."

CHIEF SOURCES OF PROFIT.

The acquisition of the unredeemed pledges, the regular collection of interest, and the sale of new and second-hand goods are not the only sources of the pawnbrokers' profits. Many pawners continue to pay interest for months, even for nearly the full year, and at the last moment, unable to pay the principal, let their pledges go by default and never come back to ask about their property. In such cases the pawnbroker not only regains nearly the whole amount of the principal, but comes at last into ownership of the collateral itself, and that, in most cases, is worth fully 50 per cent more than the original amount loaned.

In a business sense it would be unwise to expect the pawnbroker to sell his unredeemed pawns at less than their worth. At any rate he may be depended upon not to do so. For instance, suppose one buys a diamond in a store for $100 and takes it to pawn with a broker. The latter will figure that the diamond cost only $70, or 30 per cent less than the pawned for it. He will also, for himself, appraise the worth of the stone regardless of what the wearer gave for it. He may lend two-thirds of the (to him) true value of the gem, but that is the limit.

At the expiration of the year, when he is authorized to sell that pledge, he will, if he can get it for $30, $50 or even $100, and even at the top figure he will not have exceeded the price originally paid for the diamond. Thus, even if the borrower has paid some interest, even if a sum equal to the original loan has been recovered, if the pledge is finally abandoned, the broker may make 60, 80 or even 100 per cent profit over and above the interest, if any, collected.

The pawnbrokers do not often make such advantageous transactions, but they are not infrequent and will help to supply an additional reason for the fact that pawnbrokers never go into bankruptcy.

CURTIS HANCOCK HOPES TO GET AMENDMENT

He Wants to Have the Law Changed So There Can Be Betting on the Race Course at the Fair

DALLAS, Oct. 22.—Promoters of the speed horse industry in Texas are at present looking forward to the twenty-ninth legislature taking the necessary action to insure racing for the state fair after the proposed amendment has been passed to the anti-pool room bill which will permit those who enjoy witnessing and wagering on horse races to patronize the bookmakers at the race tracks during the progress of the state fair.

Curtis P. Hancock, representative from Dallas county, who introduced the bill in the last session of the legislature, which resulted in the abolishment of the regular race meet at the Texas state fair, was seen last evening and asked regarding the possibility of introducing an amendment at the ensuing meeting of the legislature, which will permit horse racing at the state fair. Mr. Hancock had the following to say: "I have repeated so often that I am in favor of exempting the race course from the operation of the pool room law that it is becoming old. The original bill contemplated this exemption and if I had my way the complaint that the bill applies to race courses would not be made today. I have not changed from that position and shall advocate the amendment of a bill in the next legislature as provided in the original anti-pool room bill making it an offense to bet on a horse race except on the day the race is run and within 200 feet of the race track where such race is run. There are other amendments, however, that will be necessary in my mind to perfect the bill, so as to practically cut out the pool room downtown, and my intention will be to offer an amendment as suggested in the case of Windsor vs. the state, Ninth Texas Court Reporter, 90, making it equally an offense to offer to bet or to tender of a bet with the exception as above outlined. This will prevent the pool room managers under the plea that they are acting as agents for principals outside of the state, from even accepting and offering the bet to his principal. This amendment will cure the complaint suggested in the Windsor case, in that case the court says that 'in order to constitute a bet there must be a tender or an offer to bet by one party and the acceptance by the other.' The amendment covers what the court suggests, the tender of an offer to bet.

"There is one other important amendment that should have been contemplated in the original bill, as suggested by article 391 of the penal code. This amendment should provide that any court officer or tribunal having jurisdiction in offenses enumerated in that act or any district or county attorney may subpoena persons and compel their attendance as witnesses to testify to violations of any of the provisions of this act. Any persons so summoned and examined shall not be liable to prosecution for any violation of said articles about which he may testify, and for any offense enumerated in this act a conviction may be had upon the unsupported evidence of an accomplice or participant. I firmly believe that it should be made a felony where a person is found guilty of operating a pool room."

Mr. Hancock appears confident of being able to get his amendment through the legislature and is depending upon the support of the most influential members of the house.

There is every reason to believe that if the twenty-ninth legislature will pass an amendment to the present bill which prohibits horse racing or the wagering on horse races at the track which is equivalent to prohibiting them, Dallas will be admitted to the

THE SOCIAL.

The Social Club opened up their gayeties at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Robertson last Friday evening. This joyous crowd of married folks do not dance, nor do they play cards, yet they can have a party almost any time. For last Friday night the word went around that masks would be the cue. Everybody thereupon got up a costume of some sort and covered their handsome features with masks of various hues and textures. At 8 the crowd was gathered and then everybody got busy. After an hour of fruitless guessing the masks were removed and it was found that everybody had been taken for someone else. The laughter was good for the appetite, and soon the dining room was opened and the table, piled with sandwiches, cheese, pickles and olives, with fragrant coffee ready at hand, called for prompt attention. After a time it was decided to don the masks again and to visit the home of Mrs. Fakos, where a popular church tea was in progress. The advent of the motley crew was a little out of the expectations of the church social folks but they did not suffer any serious damage in consequence.

The following guests were present, though not all of them masked: Rev. and Mrs. Luther Little, Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. John Homan, Mr. and Mrs. De Voll, Mr. and Mrs. Modlin, Mr. and Mrs. Want, Mr. and Mrs. Dowling, Mr. and Mrs. Gooch, Mr. Gooch of Dallas, Mr. and Mrs. Garvey, Mrs. Clough, Mrs. Noble, Robert Noble, Mrs. Gwynne, Mrs. Wynns, Miss Nash, Miss Farrell, Miss Murdock, Mrs. Bibb, W. G. Parker and H. C. Walker.

THE W. C. T. U.

The entertainment given Friday evening for the benefit of the local W. C. T. U. was most enjoyable and the audience proved more than appreciative. Miss Henderson's reading won much praise.

There will be a called meeting of the W. C. T. U. tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. All members are urged to be present.

CHILDREN OF CONFEDERACY.

The Children of the Confederacy of which Miss Mattie Melton is the director, held a meeting Wednesday afternoon and continued rehearsal for their approaching the public last Wednesday afternoon, and evening and many visitors interested in art, especially china paintings, availed themselves of this opportunity to inspect the exquisite work executed by her and by the members of the Ceramic Club.

Vases of richest coloring and massive punch bowls, as well as the daintier trays and bread and butters were enthusiastically admired. The hope was expressed that Mrs. Sharon would keep "open house" often during the winter, when the out-of-town contingent is small, so that more collectors and wielders of the brush might have the opportunity to admire.

MISS McLEAN

Miss McLean's art reception in the parlors of the Worth attracted a large number of art lovers Thursday afternoon. The display of black and white, oils, water colors and china was a treat, whether the observer was a connoisseur or merely a seeker for the beautiful. A special feature of the exhibit was the basketry, a department recently added to the art. There was also a booklet of specimens showing the teaching to little folk the rudiments of plain sewing that was most interesting. The plain and fancy sewing will also be made a feature of Miss McLean's department, being specially designed for the smaller children.

Miss McLean was assisted in receiving by Mesdames W. R. Thompson, F.

During her engagement last week Amelia Bingham accomplished two things. She presented plays that set people to thinking and she wore gowns like the models in the French exhibit at the St. Louis exposition. Miss Bingham is tremendously handsome. So were the gowns. There is a good deal to Miss Bingham. There was not a quarter of an inch more to the gowns than was necessary. But everybody was satisfied with Miss Bingham and the gowns.

One could hardly call the Bingham plays problem plays for the reason that there was no problem involved. There was much of the old, old story of woman's frailty and woman's devotion, woman's weakness and woman's strength of self-sacrifice, but we do not call these problems for more. There was never a presentation of a choice of rights, only clever presentations of the wrong paths followed and some conscience pangs later.

The engagement closed with "A Modern Magdalen." The Magdalen has always been rather a favorite topic to think about and write about. In fact, she is much more interesting in books and in plays than in real life.

Haddon Chambers chooses to clothe her in new garments, garments that set her to wondering what brand of human nature they have where Mr. Chambers lives. Haddon Chambers' Magdalen is a young woman whose father is a ne'er-do-well, with a fondness for drink, any drink, and who is a mother of an inferior position and she is the mother of a daughter. The older girl, daughter of the first wife, is known as Katinka, and she has a little lace factory working overtime for the father, and she is a girl by the way, is several years younger than Katinka. Katinka is supposed to be very beautiful, but wears her shabby clothes with sufficient grace to attract masculine eyes, even married masculine eyes, on the lookout for beauty. While the affairs of the Jenkins family (Katinka's father is named Jenkins) are at their worst Olivia becomes ill and for lack of proper nourishment and medical attentions threatens to be in a bad way, maybe to die.

At this juncture Blinker arrives and offers to put the Jenkins family on Easy Street if Katinka will only be his. Blinker is homely, crude of speech and manner, a money lender with hard-hearted money lender ways. Rather than let Blinker, Katinka removes herself and her handsome figure to an admirer by the name of Lindsay, an elegant man about town, who has had his first advances repulsed. However, he had the forethought to leave his address with Katinka's lover, when she had said him nay. Between having her loving heart torn with grief at the sight of her ailing half-sister, and her objection to Blinker's person and manners, she decides to fly to Lindsay. She flies. Before she does, however, she confides to Eric, a young student, an inmate of the Jenkins home, who adores her, that whenever she sees a handsome dressed woman on the streets she wants to run her hand over her umbrella. Later when her sister faints some, she can stand it no longer, and lies her to Lindsay.

Her disappearance from the Jenkins home is followed by a sudden looking up of Jenkins fortunes. Mrs. Jenkins tells how well Jenkins is doing in life insurance, Olivia, happily recovered to health, becomes engaged to a most respectable young man. Blinker calls occasionally, and Eric continues an inmate of the Jenkins household. The absent Katinka is never mentioned, her existence is carefully concealed from Olivia's lover, who in addition to being most respectable, belongs to the society for the suppression of vice.

Finally Katinka visits her former home and soon discovers that she is persona non grata to her step-mother and sister. What her father thinks does not bother her much. Her gowns are truly gorgeous and she is swell some. So well that the old Katinka might easily want to punch her with the umbrella she implores Olivia to love her, to be loyal, to give her fields to her mamma's side and waits that Katinka is working on her feelings. After many burning weeps Katinka returns to her apartments. Incidentally she has become a shining plant on the "theater" on account of her singing and dancing.

At this auspicious moment Lindsay's fortunes fall and Blinker refuses to help further. Katinka learns that Lindsay has sacrificed his wife and children's fortunes for her. She indignantly advises him to leave the country.

Katinka, arrayed in still more gorgeous raiment, becomes much depressed after seeing Eric and decides to abandon the stage. She had once paid little attention to Eric's love, as his promises did not promise the gowns that would keep from wanting to run down well dressed women with her umbrella. Now, however, since she has had a try at the gowns she thinks she would like to have Eric, too.

The ever faithful Blinker comes along with offers of jewels and all kinds of money. Eric appears wearing a khaki uniform and looking amazingly handsome in it—ready for the war with Spain. He tells her of his hospital work, of his joining the hospital corps, and when the war is over they will "live happy ever after."

Lindsay had been most generous, not only furnishing the clothes, but had kept the Jenkins pot boiling briskly. It was noticeable that Katinka's conscience did not get ready for its turn until Lindsay was ruined. Still Blinker had been getting along fairly well. The chances looked bright for a while for him to succeed Lindsay as a "provider."

But Eric comes on with his hospital scheme. "To save the soul of the woman he loves." Some folks just dote on having their souls saved by a good looking man.

After a struggle she turned down Blinker, marriage ring and all, and chooses the hospital career. She looked at Eric, young and handsome—and in uniform. She will undoubtedly look well in the hospital uniform. But there was suspicion among her friends, the audience, that a year would be sufficient. She then would want to have a try at the Lindsay pattern again.

The play was unconvincing. It was so far removed from the probabilities of real life as most of us have seen them.

That women place love for a man above their womanhood is demonstrated every day. That they will throw loyalty, self-respect, honor, home, friends, family, everything that best makes life worth living to the winds at the bidding of a man, even an unworthy man, needs but a word of reminder. The idea of a woman deliberately trampling her womanhood in the mire in order that a sick sister might have medicine and nourishment falls to be impressive. The time was 1897-1898. The place New York. Even in wicked New York people are not allowed to die from lack of ordinary necessities. And the sister was not stricken with mortal disease. Lots of folks have a bilious attack without the women folks rushing post haste to the aid.

The impulse prompting to the "glided way" was clothes. Every line made it plain. Every gown worn by the star emphasized it. The love that has swayed woman's heart since time began did not sway Katinka's. The young man that loved her in the way men love the one woman in the world awoke no response in the house, but she was young, was strong and loyal, until she had had a try at the clothes. The humiliation of seeing woman not so young nor yet so handsome wear gowns such as only the fortunate of society can afford, bore down her spirits to death.

The plea that she could not find work also failed to find a following. Work of one kind or another is thought to be had by any robust vigorous young woman anywhere. But was it work Katinka wanted? Was it not rather and good things generally, for herself as well as for her sister?

Katinka possessed all the qualities that render a woman most attractive to the opposite sex. That Miss Bingham so recognized was evidenced in her choice of gowns that betrayed every movement of her voluptuous figure. Had she tried to portray a spiritual woman, a woman for whom "life is more than meat, and the body than raiment," she would have added one teeny-weensy petticoat at least!

Would a woman who held her womanhood a sacred trust have stepped out into the path marked "shame" and walked so close to the edge, even for a week, in order that she might purchase a box of liver pills for a sick sister?

In some natures the ties of blood bind stronger than bands of steel. But such natures are essentially noble. Toil, drudgery, self-sacrifice, all are wanted as nothing. It family love calls upon such a nature to sacrifice her womanhood it would have been love that would have pointed to where waited an honest man's love, where there could not possibly be dishonor and shame as the constant attendants.

But Katinka was neither pure nor noble. Her love for the sister was fine in its way, but it was a mask, an unconscious one possibly, for a vanity that longed for the flesh pot of clothes, according to Miss Bingham's idea, clothes a skin tight finicness.

TO SEE THE CIRCUS

There will be a flitting to Dallas tomorrow night at a party of friends, who were attracted Dallasward for the Kalphs and thereby missed the circus. Several circus parties are on the program. Here's hoping they won't miss a single act of ring or platform.

COLD SPRINGS PICNIC

Cold Springs was a most attractive place last Friday evening, with camp fires burning, coffee boiling and bacon and beefsteak on the coals. Tales were told and songs were sung which are good to take part in as well as to listen to. The picnicers proper were Mrs. John Harrison, Mrs. Hertford, Mrs. Glenn Walker, Mrs. Wye, Misses Kittie Bell Jenkins, Varner Beall, Mary Malone, Virgil Paddock, James, Hortense Martin, Katherine Strippling, Margaret Herbert Walker, Goree, Har, Wynne, Collett, C. D. Reimers, Elliott, Andrews, W. B. Paddock and Fain.

Before supper time W. G. Turner brought out a party of friends, Dr. Chase, Holt, Hubbard, W. A. Jones, John Bradley, Ellison Harding and Durham Childress. The best of the feast was set before them and gayety suffered no relapse in consequence.

MRS. DUCKER'S DISAPPOINTMENT

The untoward fates have again worked to interfere with a happy event, whereby Fort Worth would have been greatly honored. Mrs. Maud Peters Ducker, who was to have sung at the Texas building this week, has been prevented from reaching St. Louis in time by a series of domestic and business matters that could not well be ignored. Mrs. Ducker is greatly disappointed as she had looked forward to the professional and social satisfaction toward this visit, and especially to appearing on a program during the season Mrs. Saunders was hostess.

A MARRIAGE ANNIVERSARY

A number of friends called upon Mr. and Mrs. O'Neil last Wednesday evening and offered hearty congratulation on the happy day, the twenty-second anniversary of their marriage. A game of high five followed and a luncheon of delicacies, the best of all. The guests of the evening were Mr. and Mrs. Hinely, Mr. and Mrs. Harold, Mr. and Mrs. Kelley, Mr. and Mrs. Dean, Mr. and Mrs. Levin, Mrs. Conlisk, Mrs. Pulliam, Miss Kate Dougherty and Albert O'Neil.

A BIRTHDAY PARTY

Little Annie Lee Gardner had a birthday last week, the day she was six years old. The little guests who made the party were her playmates from the kindergarten. Besides the usual children's games there were kindergarten songs and plays. When the birthday cake came on each candle was lighted to the accompaniment of a song learned at the little school. There were presents, lots of them, and no end of good things to eat. The guests wore Hallie Wagley, Elsie Creswell, Marie Keenig, Helen Booth, Velma Lewis, Lettie Graham, Avon Dycus, Ruth T. Stabery, Mabel Lewis, Leona Schreuder, Roy Koenig, Peter Booth, Robert Baker and John Lewis.

CRESCENT BOWLERS. The Crescent Bowling Club has its membership list now complete and will play tomorrow afternoon in regular game. Mr. Stephenson, the manager of the Bowling alleys, has planned something in the way of entertainment out of the ordinary for this opening. All the members are enthusiastic over the approach of cool weather so that playing may be enjoyable. The members are Mesdames Godwin, president of the club; Forbes, Dingee, Fielding, Grammer, Dickinson, Conway, Kaufman, Peniston, Littlefair, Gay, Otto, Blythe, Sloan, Stanbery, Spoons, Jere Van Zandt, Claude Van Zandt, Warwick, Smith and De Vell.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY. The Auxiliary to the Postal Clerks' organization will now be known as the Woman's Auxiliary to the Railway Mail Clerks. This change was agreed upon at the meeting at Mrs. Brogdon's last week. There was besides a regular literary program with a number of interesting papers on English literature. The regular membership was present with Mrs. J. W. Blake and Mrs. E. C. Ray as guests. The rule of the club is to confine the literary program to one hour, the remainder of the afternoon to be spent socially.

THURSDAY BOWLERS. The Thursday Morning Bowling Club held their last meeting at the Crescent alleys last Thursday morning. The players were Mesdames Jere Van Zandt, Mrs. Dings, Mrs. Littlefair, Mrs. Conway, Mrs. Fakes and Mrs. Busbee. Mr. Van Zandt made the highest score.

WEDDINGS IN SOCIETY

IRWIN-ZANE-CETTI

The sweetest sentiments of the heart clustered around the marriage last week of Miss Helene Zane-Cetti and W. H. Irwin. The day chosen was Wednesday, October 13, the anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Zane-Cetti. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Robert Hammond Cotton. There were no arrangements other than the love of family and the sweet sacredness of the home. The bride's sisters, Miss Louise and Miss Marion, were companions for the ceremony and the groomsmen were Carl Zane-Cetti, the bride's only brother. The bride, who is the eldest daughter was given to the keeping of the groom by her father.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Irwin left for Havana, Cuba, via New Orleans, and will not return to Fort Worth until next spring. The wedding gown was of white crepe de chine and the going-away gown of tan broadcloth. In this wedding is centered the loving interest of hundreds of friends. None of the girls belonging by birth as well as education to the town has been better loved—none has charmed more by graces of mind, heart and womanliness. In the home and in society she has always been an ideal of gracious girlhood and womanhood. For her happiness there is heard on all sides satisfaction that she has wedded so worthily. Mr. Irwin has been a citizen only a few years, but those years have brought to him the highest esteem of all who have been privileged to know him.

A WEDDING SUNDAY

Mr. and Mrs. M. Goldstick have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Ida, to Joseph Goldgraber, Sunday, October 30, at 5 o'clock at the family residence, 215 Henderson street.

LOWDON-NORRIS

The marriage of Miss Kathleen Norris of Handley to James G. Lowdon of Abilene, although not one of the social events of the week in this city, was a quiet ceremony, attended by only the near relatives of the bride and groom, was one of the leading events of interest. Miss Norris, who lived formerly at Abilene, had been living at Handley for several years and was well known to many of the society set of the city. The groom, the republican nominee for governor of the state and one of the most widely known business men of west Texas, had also many friends in Fort Worth. The ceremony was performed in Trinity Episcopal church, by the rector, Rev. Robert Hammond Cotton. The chancel had been daintily decorated with vines by the forethought of Mrs. Cotton, who

VATICAN AND ELECTIONS

ROME, Oct. 22.—The prevailing feeling among the pope's advisers regarding the attitude of the Vatican at the coming elections seems to be not to abolish the decree forbidding Catholics to vote. The Osservatore Romano, organ of the Vatican, however, in unofficial article, urges abstention from voting will be merely a mask of the free hand matter left to the bishops and advises the faithful to vote when it is considered advantageous to do so in view of local conditions. If this decision is definite the clericals will not have a party of their own in the chamber, but will oppose the extremist and anti-religious candidates, especially the Socialists, and favor conservatives.

The English Church Missionary Society calls attention to the fearful ravages of pestilence in several countries in which its agents are at work. In Uganda the sleeping sickness has desolated Busoga and the northern shores of the Victoria Lake, and is fast depopulating the Sese Islands. The plague in the Punjab has been claiming as many as 20,000 victims in a month, while cholera, which has laid thousands low in Palestine, is now raging in Persia.

SAVED FROM OPERATION

2035 Fitzwater St., PHILADELPHIA, PA., Oct. 12, 1903.

I had congestion of the womb and inflammation of the ovaries and my health was so bad that I was unable to attend to my household duties, and was compelled to hire help which I could ill afford to do. My sufferings in the stomach and around the pelvic organs was something awful, and at times it would seem as if my insides were coming out. The doctor said that I must have an operation to get well, but I dreaded the ordeal, and, hearing of Wine of Cardui I tried it. It is the finest medicine I ever used. I felt relieved within a week and kept getting better. I used thirteen bottles before I was well, but that is now five months ago and I have not had any pain since. I do all my work now and never seem to tire.

Mrs. Davis Wilson
VICE-PRESIDENT, READING MOTHER'S CLUB.

WINE OF CARDUI

Analyzing symptoms is not the first step toward securing health. More care to the laws of health and less attention to the symptoms of sickness is what is needed.

When you buy a dollar bottle of Wine of Cardui you have secured a bottle of medicine which has given 1,500,000 suffering women health.

Why pay a specialist to tell you what is wrong with you and pay the price of a dozen bottles of Wine of Cardui before you secure any treatment at all?

Mrs. Wilson, with the experience she gives here, is indeed a specialist.

She has been saved from severe sickness, rescued from the operating table and restored to health—by Wine of Cardui.

No suffering woman could possibly do better than take her advice and try the Wine of Cardui treatment.

European Events Cabled by Our Regular Correspondent, World-Famous Head of House of Somerset

BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET. (Special Cable to The Telegram—Copyright, 1904, by the Hearst News Service.)

London, Oct. 22.—The recent death of Sir William Harcourt closes the career of the last of the great Victorian statesmen, the group of which Gladstone was the chief, who were opposed to Disraeli. Essentially was Sir William Vernon Harcourt a fighter.

He has been called "the last of the gladiators," and with him pass the great parliamentary traditions, for he came of an era before obstruction had been invented, and only once in the history of parliamentry debate was Sir William known to have lost the self-control and flatness which belonged to the politicians of his time.

The occasion was when, irritated beyond endurance by Lord Randolph Churchill, Lord Randolph related that he looked across the floor of the house, and said, "You little ass!" Lord Randolph never backward to take a challenge, called out, "You d—d fool!"

He said that Mr. Harcourt's face was a delightful study; that he rose several times, intending to call the speaker's attention to the expression, but gave it up in despair, when he remembered how unparliamentary his own language had been. The speaker afterward remarked that it was the most highly condensed debate that he had ever sat through.

One of my earliest recollections is of Sir William Harcourt coming to my father's house. I can still see the great figure of Titanic proportions and hear the genial laugh, and remember some of the excellent stories which made him so delightful a conversationalist. But that which has remained particularly bright in my memory is his intense devotion to his little boy.

Early left a widower, with one child, no mother could have exhibited a greater tenderness and affection than did this tall, busy statesman for his little "Lulu." And I can well remember now, every night he would leave the dinner table in order to go up to kiss the child good night.

Sir William was pre-eminently a practical politician, nor do I think that the development of modern philanthropy which he must have witnessed affected him very strongly, and yet unquestionably he was the only statesman who ever introduced a measure which was obviously on temperance lines, and he consequently met with a severe defeat in the election at Derby in 1895.

The great reform inaugurated by Sir William Harcourt was his epoch-making budget of 1894, which imposed the death duties which have been so severely criticised. It was a strong, democratic finance measure, which has imposed on great land owners a heavy burden, but one which undoubtedly was able to bear. It has been remarked since the death of Sir William Harcourt that his own estate will suffer as heavily as any, for he had just succeeded to the great family possessions at Nuneham, in Oxfordshire, and paid the death duties, and near his son will have a similar tax imposed upon him within a year.

It is impossible to forget the severe disappointment which Sir William underwent when on the resignation of Mr. Gladstone, the premiership fell to Lord Rosebery. No man has been behind him in the political arena, a character for more unflinching honesty of purpose and unwavering loyalty to his principles than Sir William Vernon Harcourt. No man is more regretted by his friends of every shade of politics, who do not lack sympathy with that gracious lady who was his most devoted companion throughout a long life.

Lady Harcourt was the widow of Mr. Ives and daughter of John Lothrop, of the well-known American historian. In the delightful garden at Malwood, so long the home of the Harcourts, there is one corner which is of especial interest, and that is the "Friendship Garden," where the many famous colleagues and well-known American historians have often had the pleasure of meeting her and delighting in her vivacious talk and courtly manners. She has recently given to the world the recollections of an octogenarian, and her memory takes her back to Count Nuis Philippe, the sack of the Tuilleries and the early days of the reign of Victoria.

One charming little anecdote she tells of the Princess Royal in 1849, afterward the Empress Frederick. It was at the time when Hamilton was shot at the queen, and the little girl observed, "After all, he was not such a very wicked man, for he did not intend to kill mamma, but only to be fed. It is, however, very shocking to shoot at mamma, as if she were a game, is it not?"

She answered, "We are going by the railroad this afternoon. I wonder whether any one will shoot at us," a painful reflection which I have cause to know has often been in the minds of the members of the royal family, for once in another occasion when the late queen was degrading a great public procession in London, a near relative of mine said to her: "You can have no grounds for fear, surrounded as you are, madam, by soldiers and police."

She answered, "Ah, you forget the upper jaw." Lady Bloomfield can talk pleasantly of the great Duke of Wellington, of Lord John Russell, of Madam Schumann and of the delightful Dean Stanley. She has some charming anecdotes of the great dancer, with whom she was well acquainted. Tagliani, who came of very poor parents, told her that she had difficulty in bringing herself to work sufficiently to learn her art. She was by nature very lazy and preferred spending her time with the laundress who lived next to her mother's house, where she was allowed to wash and iron clothes, rather than practice the steps for which she was afterward so famous.

When her success was, however, at last assured, she went to St. Petersburg, where she was much patronized by the Countess Nesselrode, wife of the chancellor. This lady was anxious that Tagliani should have the opportunity of seeing the elite of Russian society, but as it was possible to introduce her as an actress, she gave her the name of Countess —, and admitted her to that select circle. In the course of conversation one of the ladies present said: "The stage, 'No, always," said the Countess Nesselrode.

"Yes," replied her guest; "there are no exceptions." "Then," said the chancellor's wife, pointing to Tagliani, "suppose I were to tell you that that lady had been on the stage?" "I should simply not believe you," replied the other. "One has only to see Countess — to know that she is a perfect lady."

It is difficult to imagine, when you stand in Aldgate East that a Roman wall ran along the line from the tower northward to the Bow street magistrate for out a structure which was afterward known as the London wall.

Villas and orchards occupied the space. The river Thames ran between the green banks, and the Whitechapel High street was founded by a better dig. But we were forcibly reminded of the truth of this picture by the fact that some workmen, excavating a site not far from Aldgate Station, came upon a complete Roman house, with a dishlike cover and a mass of creamed bones.

Among the bones were three iron nails, which bore the marks of fire. These were probably the fastenings of the funeral pyre on which the dead man was cremated fifteen hundred years ago. "Strange were it if the spirit of the dead could return for a moment and see the densely populated streets, the foggy atmosphere and the ugly surroundings which now characterize East London, instead of waiting for the beautiful villas, the green slopes and the quiet river which made it one of the beautiful spots of the earth, when he was laid to rest."

OLD BUILDINGS OF ALL HALLOWS Absolute stilted and church being put to any better use than the rest hour which has been inaugurated in the old city building of All Hallows. If any one cares to cross London bridge at an early hour he will see numberless girls standing, waiting for the extra cars, and the girls are dressed in the latest fashion, and are dressed in the latest fashion, and are dressed in the latest fashion.

The morning trains are bringing a great sweep of life across the river, but it does not move—they are waiting until it is time to go to work. They can not afford the late train. They have been obliged to come by the very earliest, in order to secure a cheap ticket, and they wait on the bridge until the work shops and warehouses are open.

But a haven has been provided for the weary hundreds avail themselves. In the dim morning the doors are open, and within the old-fashioned pews of the church by the London Wall, between half-past six and nine o'clock, there is a congregation of young women. They are waiting for the start of the penny novelettes, which they are reading, or the click of knitting needles; but an innovation has now been made, and the splendid organ peals at 8 o'clock, and the organist plays for an hour an organist delights his hearers. Then a short service takes place, with a hymn. The girls are not asked to rise; they simply go on sewing or knitting while they sing.

It is often remarked to me, in those dim-morning hours Christ must be as near as at any service of praise or prayer, with a benediction on the benevolent and beautiful care which thus provides for some of the toilers of the world's greatest city.

PRESENT FOR LORD ROBERTS Fifty children born in Kimberly during the siege presented Lord Roberts in South Africa the other day with ten rough diamonds on his seventy-second birthday. Lord Roberts thanked his young donors with a good feeling.

The girl was singularly appropriate, for undoubtedly the war in South Africa will be known as the Diamond War, for the struggle appears to have served no other purpose than to increase the supply of diamonds and precious stones.

Whether it will ever add to the sum total of the happiness of the world or to the real aggrandizement of the English nation, will be known only to those who read the history that must yet be written in the years to come.

MRS. POTTER'S GOWNS SOLD Mrs. Brown Potter's emotional gowns have all been sold. The play which has been represented by the students in chignon, has proved a failure, and modes with meaning have retired into the background. There is already much complaint of the enormous extravagance which women are displaying in dress, but if every young lady is to express her extravagance of the past will be nothing in comparison with the folly of the future.

It may, however, add a new zest to the declining art of dancing the partner has been what is the characteristic of a girl by the expression of her gown.

IS MARRIAGE A BURDEN? The discussion as to the "Hardship Marriage" is still in full swing. The question as to whether marriage is a burden, as viewed in the eyes of men, an increasing burden, the weight of which they shun has, as I said last week, been discussed in the press by well known men and women. The pertinent question has now been asked: "Why, if marriage is a new life to widowers?"

The latest annual report of the registrar general for 1902 states that during that year 23,857 widowers were married in England and Wales, and in the previous year the marriages of widowers numbered 25,322. If marriage is so heavy a burden for a man to shoulder, it seems strange that many thousands of intelligent young men should continue to marry, but even if they should do so from ignorance of what the burden imposed upon them may mean, it is still more strange that those who have already experienced what matrimony really is, should seek again to meet its drawbacks and responsibilities.

TO SPEND AN HOUR It was resolved last week at a meeting of the Gloucester board of guardians that aged couples who are separated in English work houses should be allowed to spend an hour in each others company twice a week, if they wished to do so. An additional clause was inserted in the work house, who stated that when aged couples were admitted, they were asked whether they wished to be separated, or whether they were over sixty, they would like to live together. To this question, the majority, he said, answered no.

He inquired from one old man, who had been married fifty years, if he wished to stay with his wife? He had replied in the affirmative, but the wife who had a wooden leg, when asked if she would like to live with her husband, said, "No, the old scamp brought me to the work house, and I will not live with him."

I remember many years ago it used to be my custom to entertain these old couples on Sunday afternoon. They came from a great adjacent work house in London.

I have many times asked them whether they would not prefer being together through the week, and I am bound to say that their experience bears out the opinion of the master of the Gloucester work house, for they one and all said that they were happier as they were, although glad to meet each other on Sundays, and tell each other what had befallen them during the week. I had spent a great deal of commiseration on these people for their enforced separation, but since then I have taken rather a different view of the matter.

CHANGES IN LONDON Mr. Van Wyck, ex-mayor of New York, has just volunteered the reckless statement that "there has been little change in London during the last twenty-six years; that we possess no public parks such as those in Paris or in Berlin, and that there are no recreations except theaters and eating and drinking."

I do not know in what part of London the ex-mayor stayed, but I heard the other day of some worthy colonists who arrived from Australia, in order to spend three weeks in London.

Knowing nothing of the city, they went to a hotel in Stepney, and spent their time between Whitechapel and Bow, and then returned to Australia, saying they were disappointed with London.

It is true that the Mr. Van Wyck can have fallen into a like error, for I suppose that no city in Europe has been so transformed in the last twenty years as has London, possesses more splendid parks and open spaces, or greater places of recreation than the west end of our great capital, but our American friend describes it as "a miserable place of gloom and squalor."

The English people, however, are comforting themselves over these criticisms by the fact that so many come to London. Mr. Van Wyck chose to live in England rather than in New York, and therefore, that in spite of the brilliant sunshine of that beautiful American city, there must be some attraction which anchors many of America's richest citizens to gloomy old London.

Comparisons are always odious, but when the ex-mayor tells us that there is no poverty in New York, I almost wish that I could feel that his statement was true. But alas! Mr. Jacob Rills and others who have given their time and their thought to the betterment of the people living in the New York, have destroyed our belief in New York as an ideal city.

described the slump in recruiting to the hideous "York Pie" head piece. Although the conditions and the pay of Tommy Atkins have improved recently and there has been an increase in the numbers of unemployed, something has kept young men away from the army. The war department, however, is not going to give up the German style of head gear without a struggle.

Another experiment is to be made with the variation of a peaked hat, similar to that worn by officers. Officers and men, however, are not going to give up the opinion Tommy Atkins so highly values strongly favor a return to the field service cap, which enables Tommy Atkins to display his curl. It was serviceable and smart looking, and it is practically certain that it will again be adopted, though one section of the military authorities incline towards a blue campaign hat after American fashion, with a regimental badge on the top-urn brim.

People of all classes are having their miniatures painted in these days, since the king and queen revived the fashion. Their majesties have a fascinating collection of miniatures of all the members of their family, the royal children and even the household animals. These are all framed alike in plain gold frames and are taken wherever their majesties go. One of the favorite style of paintings is that of Cosway, and many a London belle is miniaturized in the style of that famous artist.

PLEASURE LOVING KING King Carlos of Portugal, who is to visit London, but even the sort of person one would associate with anything involving statesmanship or politics. He seems to people who do not know him well to be simply a pleasure loving man of wealth. He can, however, and does take a very active share in the government of his country. He is an enormous man, weighing well over sixteen stones, and innumerable stories are recorded of his great strength. Once while out driving on the outskirts of Lisbon he jumped over a fence, and killed a dog with a rifle bullet. He is an artist as well as a sportsman and one of his pictures gained a silver medal in Paris. As he continues to get stouter he has been ordered by his doctors not to eat much of the game that he enjoys, for his weight is wonderfully active in spite of his size and he is also a keen yachtsman. With either rifle, revolver, or shotgun he is reputed to be one of the best shots in Europe, and has often killed flying birds with a rifle bullet. He is an artist as well as a sportsman and one of his pictures gained a silver medal in Paris.

These pictures were those of Louis XVI, Marie Antoinette, the emperor of Austria, Count de Seze, who so nobly defied the unhappy king, and was tried by the revolutionists, and Countess de Seze.

Beside these they stole a golden medal given by Louis XVIII to Count de Seze, grandfather of the present count, and a number of famous jewels, which had belonged to kings and queens of France.

They left behind the valuable insignia of the orders of Annonciade and Saint Esprit, probably because Americans have no use for decorations.

It is in the very heart of Paris and stole at the Gare St. Lazare a number of registered mail bags en route from Southern France, Spain and Italy to the United States, Mexico and Havana.

As far as known none of the stolen articles have been sold, at least not to the dealers in the Rue de la Harpe, and all the capitals of Europe, as well as in New York, have been notified to be on the lookout.

FEARS TWO PERILS M. Edouard Lockroy is among those who live in a continuous fear of both the army and the American perils, and sees no other escape from this danger than by the foundation of a new country, the United States of Europe, but he fears that France will be wiped out or lost when that combination comes.

Germany, he thinks, is already pulling power and will make all Europe German. He thinks, in fact, that the Kaiser is already scheming in this direction. Russia will be crushed after the war with Japan, even if she comes out victorious in the end, and is already being hurried. Italy is also under the German thumb, one of the Kaiser's sons has been named Attila, and has learned the Hungarian language to be ready to occupy the Hungarian throne when Emperor Francis Joseph dies. The Scandinavian countries are even now turning to Germany for help of Russia, Denmark was robbed of half her territory by Prussia in 1864.

In Turkey German officers are drilling the army, and a German princess and sister of the future German kaiser will be queen of Spain, another will in time be queen of Greece, and a German prince is the consort of the queen of Holland.

France, M. Lockroy says, is beloved of all in Europe, but she will be swallowed up and Germanized when a United States of Europe will be formed under German hegemony—and all this because poor old Europe is threatened by the American perils on the west and an aggressive Japanese empire on the other side.

The gist of the whole article, which is clear to any one who will read between the lines, is: France ought to come to the assistance of Russia in the Far East, and that she finished, the two powers should proceed to curb Germany, and there are many here, especially in the army, who think the same.

KOCH GOES TO AFRICA The other night at 11 o'clock in the forenoon a man of slight build, wearing a shabby overcoat and a derby of rather antiquated shape, rang the bell at the gate of the Pasteur Institute.

On the card he handed the concierge, who was already at the point of sending him away, was printed "Professor Koch." Even the concierge knew the respect which the bearer of this name commands, and his whole manner changed as he recognized the first German who has ever been a member of the French Institute of Science. He expressed his regrets, however, that the famous professor had come unannounced, as not a single member of the staff was in, and so the modest German professor walked away again.

A few hours later all the scientists of the Pasteur Institute, led by Professor Metchnikoff, were searching for the German professor, who was at last found in a modest hotel, and carried in state to the institute, where he had to make a number of speeches in French, of which he did not understand a word, for two hours, an ordeal which he underwent with angelic patience, only to be transferred to a room in the Academy of Medicine, and finally to a dinner arranged in his honor.

In a few days the professor, who has resigned from his position as president of the Microbiological Institute of Berlin, will be on his way to the African part of German Africa, where he will undoubtedly feel much more at ease collecting deadly germs than he did when being lionized by his French brethren in science, for the institute, where he had no more modest man than the famous discoverer of the bacillus of tuberculosis.

Weekly News Review of the Great Eastern Empires of Europe, from Our Regular Berlin Correspondent

BY MALCOLM CLARKE (Special Cable to The Telegram—Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst News Service.)

Berlin Bureau of The Telegram. BERLIN, Oct. 22.—The facts brought out by the war in the Far East are causing serious misgivings here in more than one way.

It has been proven almost beyond a doubt that the great naval program mapped out by the government will have to be changed materially, and this will lead to hot debates in the Reichstag, where the opposition to Germany's enormous military expenses is stronger than ever.

All, or nearly all naval experts agree that the time of the heavily armored and heavily armed battleship is over, in favor of the nation possessing the largest number of swift torpedo and submarine boats, and this branch of the navy has been sadly neglected here, mainly, it is said, because the Kaiser personally has had no faith in submarines, while Germany's natural enemy, France, today possesses a formidable number of these swift engines of war, and is rapidly building more, keeping up a pace which Germany with her depleted treasury, cannot hope to follow.

It is, however, almost certain that an attempt will be made and that Germany will build no more battleships. The fact which is causing no little uneasiness in the German mind, knows that both Russia and France are in possession of exact plans of all the new vessels of the German navy, having bought them from M. Barke, a high official of the German navy, shipyards at Kiel, now under arrest for high treason.

On land the victories won by the Japanese over soldiers possessing such daunted courage as the Russian have shown that the tactics now employed in the German army are antiquated and useless and that tactics similar to those employed by Japan must be drilled into hundreds of thousands of German soldiers, who must be taught to forget all or nearly all they have ever learned.

For years there have been officers of the army who have raised their voices against the continued attacks of both infantry and cavalry in close formation, but even in this year's great maneuvers they were used in a way which means that many millions must be spent for fortifications, millions which the reichstag will never appropriate, it is easily understood that the kaiser is anything but pleased just now, even if he was not worried by many affairs.

RIGHT OF SUCCESSION The question of the right of succession to the throne of the little principality of Lippe, a state not quite as large as a high official of the German army, has led to disclosures which are most unpleasant to the kaiser, who undoubtedly wishes that he had never put his hands into the hornets' nest.

When to all this is added the fact that the combined land and sea maneuvers last month showed that the German coasts are absolutely open to the attack of an enemy possessing a strong navy, which means that many millions must be spent for fortifications, millions which the reichstag will never appropriate, it is easily understood that the kaiser is anything but pleased just now, even if he was not worried by many affairs.

The people of Lippe-Biesterfeld refused to recognize him, and Prince Ernest of Lippe-Biesterfeld was entitled to the regency.

Some time ago Prince Ernest died, and now the kaiser considered the matter for his brother-in-law, the prince of Lippe-Biesterfeld, who again rejected, and wanted Prince Leopold of Lippe to become their regent.

The kaiser sent a telegram to the prime minister of the diminutive state, and hinted that Leopold was not of sufficiently noble blood for the high office, one of his female ancestors, Freilrau Modeste von Unruh, who lived centuries ago, having had common blood in her veins.

It looked like a terrible blow to the people of Lippe-Biesterfeld, but some local historian, evidently not afraid of the risk of being sent to prison for lese majeste, began to look up for some local nobleman who could claim descent from the German emperor, and to the great delight of his partisans, found that one of her ancestors, Duke Christian August of Schleswig-Holstein, had married a Danish princess, a descendant of a Danish king in a love affair with a woman of common extraction.

One of the sons of Prince Christian August and the Danish countess was the father of the German emperor, and his own sons have a taint of ordinary red blood in their veins.

No matter what happens in Lippe, or who becomes the ruler of that comic opera state, the kaiser will never forget this terrible blow to his pride.

STRANGE RELIGIOUS SECT A strange religious sect has been founded at Annaberg, in the District of Erzgebirge, by the superstitious and ignorant working people who have come to believe that Christ has become incarnated in the person of a fair-haired, blue-eyed girl of fifteen.

The fact that this girl quoted scripture in her sleep was considered a miracle by the credulous, and it is now fully convinced of her mission herself, and often goes into a trance, during which she makes semi-biblical utterances.

welcomed as a martyr by her believers, who held a "censing meeting." A Berlin journalist who was present says that the audience was in a state of bordering on frenzy.

The girl fell into a trance and then strange voice said: "Peace be with you, I am Christ, Victor Victor, Johannes, Johannes." As she spoke all the hearers removed strange coverings, which they had placed upon their heads. The voice went on to say that it had chosen this poor girl to speak through because she was honest.

Then followed a strange jargon of religious phrases, and when the voice finished people were sobbing and writhing on the floor in religious ecstasy.

TO HAVE GOOD READING A committee has been formed here which might well be imitated in the United States where the dime novel flourishes as probably in no other country.

Under the presidency of Count von Cramm-Burgdorf, and numbering among its members many prominent German authors and professors, this committee will work to create wholesome and interesting literature for the masses.

Young authors will be encouraged to write good novels and poems, to be sold at a cost price by agents who will even visit the smallest hamlets, and in this way it is hoped that the taste of the people will be turned away from the blood-curdling and trashy literature which they now read.

OPERA AT MUNICH The usual great number of Americans who have been present at the Wagner operas at Munich this summer has caused the citizens of that city, who have greatly benefited by the many dollars which have rolled into their coffers to found a regular opera agency in the United States to advertise the operas.

An authorized agent, Ludwig Schnekler, has already left for St. Louis to boom up the undertaking, and even sell advance tickets for next season.

PUNISHED FOR ILL TREATING WORKINGMEN (Special Cable to The Telegram—Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst News Service.)

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 22.—The czar has severely reprimanded the chief of police of Lodz, a large manufacturing center in Poland, for using undue cruelty against workmen of that city, who had committed no crime but that of asking that justice be done to them.

A large number of workmen from the cotton and woolen factories had assembled before the house of the chief of police to ventilate their grievances, and suddenly they were furiously attacked by a squad of Cossacks.

A fierce battle ensued, in which the Cossacks used their swords freely. The workmen, however, had taken the precaution to arm themselves with revolvers and stones, and the Cossacks were received with such a shower of bullets and missiles that they were compelled to retire with several of their number wounded.

Later on they returned with a long steel chain, with which they encircled the mob, crushing 500 people together in a mangled mass. Scores of the demonstrators were seriously injured and had to be carried to hospitals. The number of the remainder were put under arrest.

All those arrested have now been set free at the order of the czar, and a number of them will sue the chief of police for damages.

It has been found that Chintown guides in San Francisco get up opium and other dens of vice of their own in Chinatowns and employ Chinese to occupy them so that there may be show places for the tourists.

Geese are driven to the great Prague fair with their feet encased in tar boots to prevent injury.

The best disinfectant of all is sunlight. It destroys by its very brightness all sorts of germs and at the same time helps the growth of plants and animal life. Doubtless all have noticed that mould grows during the night and in dark damp cellars. Bright sunlight quickly destroys germs, mould or other organisms. That is why it is best to let the sunlight into your houses for its purifying influence.

OUR LAY SERMON "There are social climbers, but wealth is as good a goal. I was a climber after wealth and everything it brings."

"Act I after happiness and all it brings." "Act II, 'The Climbers,' as presented at the Fort Worth opera house October 18 by Miss Amelia Bingham and her excellent company.

Perhaps The Telegram is violating some of the principles of the strictly orthodox in taking its text this morning from a play as presented by a theatrical company, but as a higher authority has said that sermons were to be found even in stones, perhaps our digression will be pardoned without the necessity of any further explanation.

"There are social climbers, but wealth is as good a goal. I was a climber after wealth and everything it brings." How truly much of the worldliness of the day is reflected in this quotation. How many of the human family do we meet every day, climbing after wealth and the things it brings? The world is full of them. You meet them in every nook and corner, all climbing after wealth as the one thing that is necessary for human happiness and contentment.

And yet the Good Book tells us it is easier for a camel to pass through the needle's eye than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven. In the present day of gilded commercialism we are practically all making a mad climb after wealth, believing that when he achieve the pinnacle of financial success all other things are possible. But there is where we commit grievous error. Great wealth but brings in its train added responsibilities, and there are thousands of men in this world today who have achieved financial success who would give all they possess if they could again be as they were before the burden was laid upon them. Many of them are mere physical wrecks, and that is not all. Many of them are moral wrecks as well.

Some men and women crave wealth for the power and standing it will give them. They believe if their private coffers are well lined with golden ducats they will become a power socially and otherwise, and men of lesser degree will bend the pregnant hinges of the knee in a very gratifying form of adulation. But this is not always true. It requires something better than wealth to give one social standing, although it must be admitted that great wealth is a strong incentive toward social recognition.

The man or woman who climbs after wealth under this kind of an inspiration is actuated by principles that are truly reprehensible. They are exhibiting a form of sordidness and selfishness repugnant to the teachings of the Bible and without favor in the eyes of the better class of the human family. Wealth is a great blessing when it is properly applied. But it is a curse when it assumes any other attitude. It should never be used for the main purposes for which it is generally employed, but should be used as God would have us handle the millions he may entrust to our keeping.

Many men spend their lives in climbing after wealth and everything it brings, only to find that when life is ebbing out as a result of their heroic efforts, that they can carry none of it to the other side. Friendless and poor they came into the world, and the exit must be in the same manner. The riches accumulated here do not constitute a circulating medium in the hereafter and the climber after wealth in this life often awakens to the fact that his life has been mispent and he should have been climbing after other things. The wealth he has climbed to must be left behind him for the posterity that no longer has to climb. In many instances it is dissipated much faster than it was accumulated, and is a positive curse to posterity for several generations.

The social climbers and the climbers after wealth are both the victims of misguided effort. True happiness is not found either in social or financial success. "And I after happiness and all it brings."

What is happiness? There are many persons who are climbing after happiness without knowing really what it is they seek. Since the world was first created people have been climbing after happi-

ADVICE TO FIRST VOTERS

Tomorrow, SILAS C. SWALLOW, candidate of the prohibition party for president, will set forth concisely and clearly his reasons why the young voter should ally himself with the prohibitionists. Mr. Swallow has long been a leader in the cause of prohibition. His letter, however, is not restricted to the liquor question. He presents therein other reforms that are being advocated by the party. It will be the first in the series of campaign letters.

ness, only to find there is not much true happiness to be found in this vale of tears. Perhaps the nearest approach to real happiness that can be found this side the grave is in promoting the happiness of others. It is certain that happiness can not be found in the frivolities of society, in business success, in the achievement of any earthly pursuit.

True happiness is only found in a clean and contrite heart that is full of love for its fellow man and inspired with confidence in the hereafter. All forms of earthly happiness are but transitory. They are fleeting and uncertain. The things that make us happy today cloy upon the palate tomorrow. The thing that we actually seek only comes when we have peace with God, live according to His holy ordinances and look beyond the things of this life. This happiness only comes to few in early life. We are all too busy climbing after wealth, social position and things that are of the earth, earthy, to climb to those sublime heights where true and eternal happiness is only to be found.

"There are social climbers, but wealth is as good a goal." The heart that can give expression to such a sentiment is truly a devotee at the shrine of Mammon. It can find nothing that is beautiful in life except that which is enshrined in the face of the almighty dollar. It cares for naught except the prestige to be attained from a stiff bank account.

And we are rapidly becoming a nation of Dollar Worshipers. There is a music in the jingle of the great American dollar more sublime to our ears than any strain of celestial music that could be wafted us from heaven's choir. Like foolish Israel of old, we have set up for ourselves a golden calf, and we are daily doing homage at its pedal extremities. And we must do better than this.

We need to do some climbing. We need to climb to such an eminence that we can look down and despise the things which we now adore, and turn from evils that now attend our footsteps with such dogged regularity. We must become bigger and broader in our conception of duty to our God, to our fellow man and to ourselves. We must climb down from the heights of our national iniquity and then climb anew for that happiness which comes from a consciousness of duty well performed.

SUCH IS FAME

The impending national election in the United States is attracting far more attention apparently in foreign countries than at home. The following interesting review of the situation is taken from a Hungarian newspaper:

"Theodore Roosevelt, the American president, has a new trial for the presidency. There is about to be an election in the United States, and Mark Hanna, a powerful man, will oppose him. 'It is difficult to understand clearly the American conditions in this country, but we learn upon investigation that before he became president, Roosevelt was a cowboy, and the cowboys, being the dominant party in the United States, elevated their companion to the presidency. After Roosevelt's election, the cowboys demanded the best offices, including two members of the cabinet, but Roosevelt ignored their demands, so they have decided to avenge themselves and defeat him for re-election.

"The cowboys wield a tremendous power in the United States west of New York City, and they have offered the presidency to Hanna. A delegation called on him at his palace in the state of Cleveland and tendered him the nomination. Hanna has never been a cowboy, but being ambitious, he has accepted the nomination, and it is thought he will be elected.

"We learn that Hanna will make his campaign on a wild mustang. He is an old man, but a daring and skillful rider. In his youth he carried off high honors as an equestrian, and he is decorated with numerous medals."

And such is fame. The Stratus One is known to the nations of the world as the cowboy president—a man elevated from the back of a bucking broncho to the presidential chair, and so ungrateful to his former cowboy companions that they have turned like the bruised worm, and tendered the position henceforth to Mark Hanna, who has long since gone to his future reward.

There is lots of ignorance in the world, and always will be. But how an alleged newspaper in an alleged civilized country can perpetrate such rot as the above surpasses all human understanding. It is amusing on account of its gross ignorance.

John J. Smith, a private in the United States army, serving in the hospital corps in New Jersey, is to be dismissed from the army upon the recommendation of General Grant, for having married a negro. Smith has written to the war department to know if there is any reason why he should not have married the coon, and has doubtless found out by this time that there was.

It is announced that the big life insurance companies have made a very radical change in questions relating to consumption. Parties applying for insurance now are not asked as to consumption in the family beyond the mother, sister and brothers, and there is another question as to whether or not there has ever been consumption in the residence occupied by the applicant. Apparently, this is the first official or practical recognition of the theory that consumption is contagious and not hereditary.

Gleanings From the ...Exchanges...

Ex-Governor Hogg's harmony talk reminds one of the old Indians. They smoked the pipe of peace as long as they were surrounded by an overpowering number of whites, but as soon as the latter were out of sight they went on the warpath.—Austin Statesman.

And why should Governor Hogg harmonize with his political enemies? The chief trouble in the situation appears to be that his opponents want to furnish all the harmony. In other words, they want hominy with the hog obliterated. It is but natural the big man should go on the war path under such conditions.

A big crowd should greet the congressional candidates Saturday afternoon, Colonel Mallett as a citizen of Cleburne stands as high as any man and Colonel Gillespie is the nominee of Johnson county the same as of Tarrant and Parker. Both deserve a fair hearing and Cleburne people always give fair play.—Cleburne Enterprise.

Gillespie is the democratic nominee for the entire congressional district, and it is the plain duty of every democrat in the district to give him an unqualified support.

"Weeping Jim" Davis has added thirty-six inches to the fall of his coat in order that the garment will trail on the sidewalk in his rear. This is for the benefit of democrats or republicans who are ambitious for a "go" on the stump.—Dallas Times-Herald.

Instead of a dare to tread on the tail of his coat, it is more probable that "Weeping Jim" only lengthened that garment in the hope of making a clean sweep for prohibition in the campaign he is conducting without opposition.

Cecil Lyon rises to remark that he has a check for $5,000, all drawn, signed and ready for delivery to the governor of Texas when that official shall have appointed a committee of two democrats and two republicans, with power to select a fifth member (James Stephen Hogg to be favored by the republicans members of the committee as that fifth man) to examine the accounts of the state, and when that committee has reported that those accounts are correct. Sounds good. We reckon Governor Lanham's bank account is just as good as $5,000 bigger.—Orange Tribune.

Colonel Lyon had better send that check back to Chairman Cortelyou for use in one of the doubtful states. There is no use in having good republican money thus tied up in democratic Texas when the outside need is so great.

Texas has become a hog-raising state, especially the northern portion of Texas has been successful in this line, and it has proved very profitable. The farmers who have turned their attention to packing hams have made much more of a success than those who have not put up the meat, but have sold their hogs to the packeries. Every farmer may be a packer as well as not, and if he is, he may reap as much profit as the meat trust, without being in the trust.—Denison Herald.

When Texas makes a good corn crop, such as was made this year, it never fails to stimulate the hog industry, and the man who has hog and hominy in the larder is in position to defy all the trusts in the world. When our people learn to live more at home there will be less complaint of the trusts, for the trusts can only impose on those who are consumers of their products.

Fort Worth is having a big time with the meat question these days. In that respect Fort Worth is like some individuals. They are troubled with the bread and meat question. In this case, however, Fort Worth's trouble is not exactly like the individual's. However, the Panther City is fast taking on the airs of a city—people are getting run over and the city is being bothered with the meat question and the like. Where's Dallas?—Terrell Transcript.

Dallas is located over in the Trinity bottom, about thirty miles east of Fort Worth, slapping her pocket and declaring she is the richest city in Texas. Having made her pile, Dallas is now satisfied and takes no note of the future. She is now rich and ready to retire from business.

If there were not so many tax dodgers in Texas, Governor Davis' very kind offer to lend the state half a million of the state funds of Arkansas that are now lying idle in the treasury of that state, would not have been made.—Texarkana Courier.

The next state legislature will doubtless take steps to smoke the tax dodgers out, and when this is properly done Texas will need no financial assistance from any source whatever.

Colonel Richard M. Wynne made a good speech at Dallas, but there are several aspirants for gubernatorial honors who believe that it came too late. The most appropriate time for indulging in plain political truths is when nominations for office are to be disposed of.—Dallas Times-Herald.

This is the same Richard who carried Grayson county for governor. He flew higher in the estimation of the voters than the Crane that fixed his pinions for a nest on the Colorado, but both quit before all their feathers were plucked. Richard would like to come again and now and then a quack is heard from the bird at the forks of the Trinity.—Sherman Democrat.

There is no scarcity of gubernatorial timber in Texas at this time. The only trouble seems to be that there is a disposition to expose it to the action of the elements too soon. Those men who are announcing their candidacy now are entirely too previous in the judgment of the average voter.

City Assessor Ben Melton says that Dallas is the richest city in the state, and he has the figures to prove it. Dallas is growing wonderfully, but almost unperceptibly, because there is nothing of the boom or mush-room growth about it. The increase is along substantial lines and is here for all time to come. Invest your money in Dallas real estate, young man, and you'll grow rich because you can't help yourself.—Dallas Times-Herald.

Dallas ought to be the richest city in the state, for the simple reason that the average citizen of that town never spends any coin except to gratify his personal desires. It carries it around in his sock, and an Andrew Carnegie will never be developed in Dallas. But talking about growth, just study the increase in taxable values in Fort Worth and Tarrant county if you want facts as to the most prosperous city and county in Texas. We lead the procession in that respect, as we generally do in all things.

The impression that under the Terrell law one must vote either for all or none of a certain party ticket is a big mistake. No former rights are denied the voter and he may now as before vote for one man from the republican ticket, another from the democratic ticket, another from the populist and the rest from the prohibition. He can vote for the national democratic ticket, the state prohibition ticket and the county republican ticket if he so desires, or he may vote for any one named or not named on any ticket. Absolutely no restraint is placed upon the voter nor has any of the freedom of the ballot as exercised for years been abridged or denied him.—Beaumont Journal.

The greatest trouble with the Terrell election law is its verbosity. The young voter will grow gray-headed before he can possibly master half of its provisions.

Hon. Frank Andrews, chairman of the state democratic executive committee, has given to the Texas press a statement in reply to the speech of ex-Governor Hogg at Dallas. Andrews says that he claims the right to keep his own political conscience, no matter in whose employ he may be, and hits the big ex-governor some pretty hard licks in regard to his past record.—Denton News.

No one denies to Mr. Andrews the right to keep his own political conscience. The kick that is being made is on account of a fear that he will try to unite the Southern Pacific conscience with that of the state democracy.

A political situation such as was presented at Dallas last week, when Governor Hogg, Colonel Dick Wynne and others threw hot shot into the democratic fire, is entirely unique in Texas. It marks the beginning of the fight against the congressional trust in Texas and gives an inkling of the political fight which is to come two years hence.—Beaumont Journal.

That Dallas meeting has given the press of the state much food for discussion and the people of the state many subjects for serious consideration. It may be well considered as the opening gun of a very warm fight two years hence, unless there is a marked change in existing conditions.

A young woman who thought she was losing her husband's affection went to a seventh daughter of seventh daughter for a love powder. The mystery woman told her: "Get a piece of raw beef, cut flat, about an inch thick. Slice an onion in two and rub the meat on both sides with it. Put on pepper and salt and toast it on each side over a red coal fire. Drop on it three lumps of butter and three springs of parsley, and get him to eat it." The young wife did so and her husband loved her ever after.—San Angelo Standard.

And she was a sensible young woman to thus recognize the best method of retaining the love of her domestic partner. The heart of the average man is generally believed to really be located low down in the stomach.

The bluff of the republicans regarding the democratic administration, as sprung by Chairman Lyon at Fort Worth Monday night, is most amusing.—Austin Statesman.

Chairman Lyon is never so amusing as when he attempts to be serious, and is only following one of the cardinal principles of his party in his little game of bluff. That $5,000 check was doubtless genuine, but it is not necessary for Texas democracy to bet Chairman Lyon that sum that it is honest.

There are a number of constitutional amendments to be voted upon at the November election, and the voters should post themselves as to their provisions in order to be able to judge them intelligently.—Fort Worth Telegram.

So they should—and Texas should pay to have the proposed amendments laid before the people through the newspapers.—Denison Herald.

Ordinarily, yes. But this year the great state of Texas has not enough spare change to flag a bread wagon, and the hole in the state treasury is still growing.

ELIHU ROOT BOUGHT A FARM TO OWN A TREE

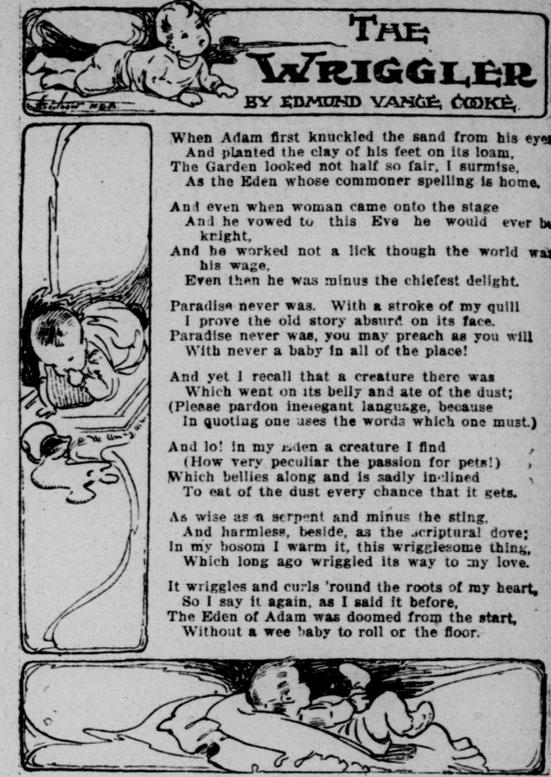

All the country knows Elihu Root, the lawyer, man of affairs, and cabinet officer, but there are less-known sides to his make-up which are, perhaps, more indicative of the man himself, and which are, too, more interesting for the very reason that they are less appreciated. For instance, he is enough of a sentimentalist to have bought a farm that he might own a certain tree.

He was born in Cabinet Hall, one of the buildings of Hamilton College, New York, where his father, Owen Root, was a professor. In his boyhood years the two used to take long walks together, and, time and again, on their homeward way, it was under a splendid hemlock on Kirkland Farm that they would rest. The hilltop commanded a magnificent view of the Oriskany Valley, across to the Adirondacks to the north, and often the elder of the pedestrians would say, as they started on again: "I wish I owned that tree."

In the years since there have been many changes at Hamilton and in the country round about, but the old hemlock has remained untouched—and the other day Elihu Root bought Kirkland Farm and the tree which, he declares, has long been a landmark in his life.

"WHEN, MR. READ, DO YOU WORK?"

Ople Read, the novelist, recently attended a press club reception given in honor of F. Hopkins-Smith. The author of "Colonel Carter of Cartersville" was surrounded by a group of women, who felt it a great privilege to come into the pres-

THE WRIGGLER BY EDWARD VANCE COKE

When Adam first knuckled the sand from his eyes And planted the clay of his feet on its loam, The Garden looked not half so fair, I surmise, As the Eden whose commoner spelling is home.

And even when woman came onto the stage And he vowed to this Eve he would ever be knight, And he worked not a lick though the world was his wage, Even then he was minus the chiefest delight.

Paradise never was. With a stroke of my quill I prove the old story absurd on its face, Paradise never was, you may preach as you will With never a baby in all of the place!

And yet I recall that a creature there was Which went on its belly and ate of the dust; (Please pardon inelegant language, because In quoting one uses the words which one must.)

And lo! in my Eden a creature I find (How very peculiar the passion for pets!) Which bellies along and is sadly inclined To eat of the dust every chance that it gets.

As wise as a serpent and minus the sting, And harmless, beside, as the scriptural dove; In my bosom I warm it, this wrigglesome thing, Which long ago wriggled its way to my love.

It wriggles and curls 'round the roots of my heart, So I say it again, as I said it before, The Eden of Adam was doomed from the start, Without a wee baby to roll or the floor.

No, I ain't a goin' to tell you what it's all about and who Cleft that sulen cloud above me so the sun could filter through; 'Taint nothin' of your business, no, sir, ain't nobody's wake but mine, And its wreaths are wove and twisted from the rose and columbine.

SAVED HIS LIFE

J. W. Davenport, Wings, Ky., writes June 14, 1902: "I want to tell you I believe Ballard's Snow Liniment saved my life. I was under the treatment of two doctors, and they told me one of my lungs was entirely gone, and the other badly affected. I also had a lump in my side. I don't think that I could have lived over two months longer. I was induced by a friend to try Ballard's Snow Liniment. The first application gave me great relief; two fifty-cent bottles cured me sound and well. It is a wonderful medicine and I recommend it to suffering humanity." 25c, 50c, $1.00. H. T.  Saturday matinee—The Burgomaster.
 Saturday night—The Burgomaster.

The past week has been a delightful one in theatrical circles. It opened

Bingham and her excellent company. After this came "Tried for Her Life," which is a play of the sensational order and pleases a certain class of theater goers, and the offering closed with "McFadden's Row of Flats" Friday.

This week offers three companies with six performances. There will ladies so it can be expected the house will be crowded on each occasion. The cooler weather now promised will call out the newest frocks. "Candida" is a comedy which no one cares to miss; Al. H. Wilson has long ago sung himself in many feminine hearts, and at the close of the week comes the "Burgomaster," which is a tuneful musical attraction, which includes among other things that delightful song "The Tale of the Kangaroo."

comes in for vigorous treatment at her hand and greatly to the amusement of the spectator.

A clever company, every member of which is said to be of proved worth in the character assigned, will present the play here. Lester Lonergan, widely known as an actor of distinction and talent, is cast as the youthful poet, Eugene Marchbanks.

AL. H. WILSON TELLS OF PRIVATE LIFE OF ACTOR FOLK

"Amuse ourselves? We people on the stage?" clever Al. Wilson said as he repeated the question.

"Pardon me for laughing," he apologized, "but that is such an unusual question, for, although we devote our lives to amusing other people, no one seems to think we need amusing ourselves."

A handsome big fellow, with appealing blue eyes is Mr. Al. Wilson, just the kind of a man to fit well into the role of young hero—"Metz Strobel" in "The Watch on the Rhine," who is bitterly persecuted through three acts of a play and marries the right girl and lives happy ever after in the fourth.

"I suppose to an outsider the life of an actor seems a gay existence, full of glitter and joy, but it isn't. We leave all that in the theater with the costumes and the stage settings."

"We have the greatest times when we are playing one-night stands. We get into town in the morning and usually leave after the performance at night, and we have to get things done in double quick time."

"In 'The Watch on the Rhine' company we are just like a big family, everything is so nice. If we get into a city where one member of the company has friends, we are all invited out. But the thing that we like to do best is to go to matinees, where another company is playing the city. We always make it a point to see any other company that is playing in the same city when we don't give a performance of our own. It does one so much good to compare one's own work with that of other members of our profession."

Al. H. Wilson in "The Watch on the Rhine" will be the attraction at Greenwall's opera house Tuesday matinee and night, October 25.

"THE BURGOMASTER"

A prima donna who has a romantic history is to be seen at Greenwall's opera house Saturday matinee and night, October 22, when W. P. Cullen's big production of "The Burgomaster" will be the attraction. She is a real German countess, Olga Regina, Countess von Hatzfeldt, and she is a first cousin of the Prince von Hatzfeldt, who married the daughter of the late Collis P. Huntington, the great railway magnate. The countess' father, Edmond, Count von Hatzfeldt, was forced to flee to this country on account of a duel in Germany, and went on the stage going to see Harry Beresford, the great fun-producer, who is soon to appear on our stage. The play, "Our New Man," is not only funny, but the fun is so clean and pure that the most fastidious need have no fear of being shocked thereby.

The Atlanta Constitution says: "Really, the Al. G. Fields' combination of greater minstrels at the Grand last night was so much better than anything of the kind that has strolled this way that there simply isn't anything to compare it with. After all, it's Christmas, the circus and the real minstrel show that makes the world go round—sort of oils up the dark places where folks seek shelter and gets the sunshine of life to working over time for the benefit of people who have to work for a living. Al. Field's show is better than the advance posters, something that never happened before. The costumes of the first part are the real silk and satin pictures, and they are no new they fairly smell of the costume makers. The stage settings are in keeping and the jokes are as new as the costumes."

F. C. Whitney's Opera Company, presenting "Dolly Varden," Stange & Edwards most successful comic opera, is unquestionably the most expensive musical organization that will be seen here in the city. The cast is composed entirely of artists of international reputation. Miss Maud Hollins, who appears in the title role, is both favorably known in New York and London and has heretofore refused to accept engagements in any other cities. She was especially engaged for Francis Wilson's production of "The Monks of Malabar," at the Knickerbocker theater, New York, three seasons ago, returning to London to fill engagements immediately after the termination of this engagement. The remainder of the cast is practically the same as last season.

In the company which will appear in "Peggy from Paris" are such well known artists as John Keefe, Josie Sadler, Grace Orr Myers, Jacques Kruger, Harold Crane, Alice Hageman, Florence Willard, Dan Baker, E. H. O'Connor and Arthur Deacon. "Peggy from Paris," as everybody knows, is the product of George Ade and William Lorraine. Mr. Ade, the famous humorist, wrote the book and lyrics; Mr. Lorraine the music. The musical comedy is under the management of Henry W. Savage, who, as playwrights well know, puts only the best into his compositions and productions.

Charles E. Hanford is still warmly interested in a national theater and expects after the excitement of the presidential year has subsided to induce some friends in congress to take the matter up for prompt and practical consideration.

"In Old Kentucky," with its merry little pickaninnies, its lovable mountain heroine, Madge Briery, its various realistic episodes and Queen Bess, the fleet-footed Kentucky thoroughbred that ever won The Ashland Oaks, will be along again shortly in delight theater-goers, young and old, of this city. The management promises the best company that has ever appeared here in the play, and the pickaninny contingent has been increased and many new and attractive features added for this season's tour, which, by the way, is the twelfth for this remarkable play, which, like Tenneyson's brook, bids fair to run on forever.

The other characters are admirable creations and deftly employed in the development of the comedy. Mr. Burgess, father-in-law of Morell, and an ignorant, worldly-minded, money-loving man, is a distinctive type who, in conjunction with Prosperine, Morell's typewriter—a sharp-tongued, pert maid of thirty—contributes a great deal to the mirth of the play. NOTED CLAIRVOYANT HERE

DR. PHILIP BRENTANO OF BERLIN, GERMANY, VISITS FORT WORTH. HIS WONDERFUL POWER BRINGS COMFORT AND HAPPINESS TO MANY—DUMBOUNDS THOSE WHO CALL ON HIM.

THE EXPONDER OF CLAIRVOYANCE, PSYCHIC INFLUENCES AND OCCULTISM REMAINS BUT A SHORT TIME IN FORT WORTH—IS AT THE SPEER FLATS.

Philip Brentano is recognized by the press, medical faculty and scientists generally of the east and Europe as the foremost and most able astrologer, psychic and mystic of two continents. In Dr. Brentano may be found a gentleman whose ability, power and earnestness enable him to satisfy both the curious and the seeker for advice.

He insists on telling the truth to all callers, not comforting some with honeyed sophistry and others by glittering tales of fortunes in store for them. But to each and all he carries the conviction of honesty and straight-forwardness not often found in this fickle world, likewise his ability to perform all he promises to perform. Indeed, he takes no money from any individual, expressing the slightest dissatisfaction, and there lies his strength. It is earnestly his purpose to fly from every shadow of humbuggery and not to deceive any of those who have placed confidence in his word.

Those who come to scoff may remain puzzled look on their faces, wondering insightfully. Perhaps you laugh at first, when you see the rather peculiar methods used by the professor in telling a fortune, but when he commences to talk and piles up fact after fact, which you know to be true, even to the smallest detail, your laugh dies away, and you gaze in amazement akin to awe at the mysterious man before you, as though he were some uncanny being fresh from another world. You sit chained to the chair with fascination while your past and future are laid bare before you. After answering the final question you are perplexed and abstractedly draw forth your purse, throwing an inquiring glance at Mr. Brentano. He smiles and asks you if you are satisfied, saying he never accepts payment until assured that a person is perfectly satisfied and that he believes he has received a fair return for his money.

If you are interested in the outcome of your affairs and desire advice on perplexing questions, you should not fail to improve this opportunity. If you are discouraged, unhappy, if everything seems to go wrong and you are unable to change the course of your affairs, you should see Brentano.

There are occult forces, stronger than will, ability and endeavor, that frequently cause the success of one and failure of others. Some call it luck. It may be lucky to have these forces with you, but it's not just an accident. "Luck," like every other effect, has a cause. Mr. Brentano has made a life's study of the forces and influences that rule the destiny of men and women. Magnetism, mental suggestion, the power to control by will of mind, to sway—that's luck. It's in every one. It's a power all possess, but few know how to use. Mr. Brentano develops success and happiness in love, marriage, divorce, all sorts of troubles, business, law suits, wills, deeds, investments, speculation, in fact, in a matter of human interest. It is alone what he can tell you, it is what he can do for you, that makes a visit to him worth while.

Were it not for the fact that secrecy must be exercised in his profession he could refer the skeptical to numerous well known citizens who have profited by his advice, and who have been made contented and happy by his readings of their past and future.

Like suggestion, now materially aiding the medical world in healing the sick, so does the legitimate art and science of his assistance assist all those in quest of knowledge of the future. The truth of Professor Brentano's assertions has been established beyond a reasonable doubt and he stands ready to leave the merit of his readings to a committee of unbiased, responsible persons. As he reveals to you thoughts hidden away among the deepest recesses of your heart, you sit spellbound, unable to grasp the situation until calmer moments possess you, when in awe and astonishment you exclaim: "How is it possible?"

Unlike impostors and pretenders, Professor Brentano takes no money in advance and positively refuses to accept any fee if you are not entirely satisfied. All business strictly confidential.

Mr. Brentano's fees are within the reach of most people, a consultation fee of two dollars being charged. He may be seen daily from 10 to 12 and from 2 to 6 o'clock, with exception of Sunday, when the morning hours only prevail.

His strictly private office is at the Speer Flats, corner of Fifth and Throckmorton streets, with entrance on Throckmorton.
