FLYING SQUADRON ENTERTAINED AT ELKS' ROOMS

Prominent Officers of Travelers' Protective Association National Organization Are Guests of Fort Worth Folk

The inclemency of the weather interfered to a great extent with the attendance at the informal reception tendered the members of the T. P. A. "Flying Squadron" at the Elks' quarters last night.

The toastmaster then introduced Horace C. Starr, of Indianapolis, the president of the National Travelers' Protective Association. Mr. Starr spoke of the welcome accorded his delegation and how they had been delightedly entertained here and the good work already accomplished.

Following Mr. Starr came Louis T. LaBeaume of St. Louis, the secretary and treasurer of the order since its organization. The gentleman told of the finances of the Travelers' Protective Association, and quoted some interesting statistics.

At the close of his short talk, the customary toast was given to the absent Elks. Speeches were made in conclusion by George Bennett of Dallas, an ex-president of the Texas division, Travelers' Protective Association; George Diehl of Fort Worth, the president of the state organization.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE The ORIGINAL remedy that "kills the Dandruff Germ."

GOING! GOING!! GONE!!! Herpicide Will Save It. Herpicide Will Save It. Too Late For Herpicide.

Not a Hair-Grower Newbro's Herpicide will not grow hair—nature does this—but by destroying the microscopic enemies of hair health the hair is bound to grow as nature intended; except in chronic baldness. It requires but a slight knowledge of scalp anatomy to know that the hair gets its nourishment direct from the hair-papilla. Therefore, the only rational treatment is to destroy the cause of the disease. Herpicide does this; it cures dandruff, stops falling hair and relieves itching. A delightful hair dressing. Gives extraordinary results. Try it.

had seen it, and the reason is it has been suppressed. The report of the investigation committee was not issued until after democratic office holders had been re-nominated and elected.

ASKS SOME QUESTIONS "The democratic party of Texas has not been honest with the people. It has not disclosed to you the prostitution of an officer. Not one man guilty of wrongdoing has ever been prosecuted or sent to the penitentiary. I desire Senator Hanger to answer these accusations if he can."

LOCAL OPTION LAW "From the passage of the local option law down to this very day there has not been a declaration of the democrats that would tend to develop any real interest of the state. We stand by the statement that the democratic administration is an endorsement of the prohibition movement, and this evidenced by the fact that the democratic party has the local option law on the statute books, and hasn't the grit to revoke it. The republicans declare for a law that another election on local option cannot be ordered within two years in case it is defeated at the first election on the proposition."

THE CONFEDERATE HOME "The democratic party has declared to be the friend of those who served the south in the rebellion, and statesmen men who had risked their all for a principle; men who walked through blood; men, who through an appropriation, provided a home for the indigent Confederates incapable of earning for themselves a living and protection. These men went to the Confederate home at Austin by the hundreds and have been badly treated by those in charge of that institution. And the facts have been kept from the public to this good day. Old men, when required by the rules and regulations of the home, to bathe, weak and decrepit, were tossed into a steaming bath, six or seven of them at a time in the same water. They would emerge from the bath choked and strangled by the filth. Another old veteran lying on his bed suffering from an old wound without proper medical attention, and this under the democratic administration to whom has been entrusted the care and keeping of these old men unable to care for themselves because of their infirmities.

Senator Hanger turned the point and thrust back by reading farther to the effect that agreements were broken and then queried "You put him out, did you?" Referring to the heavy vote once polled by Lon Barkley, he challenged them to a vote of no confidence today, only to be interrupted by a query from the audience as to a recent local democratic vote of diminutive proportions.

Mr. McLemore's crocodile tears shed on account of the Confederate Home were marvelous, he said. As the Orphans' Home matter, he said Governor Sayre had promptly made a change in superintendent upon report of the trouble. The matter was investigated by the grand jury. Why it made no report was a matter between them and God, and with which the governor has no right to interfere. The same applied to grand juries at Austin, which had been a republican city until four years ago, and where republicans sit upon every grand jury.

"The most striking thing about these where the orphans may be instructed in the proper course—a condition has prevailed that is reprehensible. "Mr. Robbins was required by law to deposit every cent of the state's money that came to him in the vaults of the state, and he had no right to deposit in the bank. When confronted with the question as to why he deposited in the bank, he said he didn't know anything about it. Robbins' first statement was that he had a right to deposit these checks for collection. I want to ask Mr. Hanger if he can tell this audience whose endorsements were on the back of these checks? All these things have occurred in recent years, and I want to ask you if it is right? If the people will allow the truths of these things to be suppressed?"

SENATOR W. A. HANGER. Senator Hanger, who had quietly been taking notes throughout McLemore's address with a pencil borrowed from Cecil Lyon, was greeted with prolonged applause when he rose to defend the charges made by the republicans and, as forecast in The Telegram of yesterday, make counter accusations.

He commenced with recounting the various reports of the famous $5,000 investigation offer, and quoting from the written offer and later reported expressions of Cecil Lyon as to the choice of the investigating committee, queried what the offer did mean, and if his opponents knew themselves what they meant.

"I have stated before," he said, "and I say it now, that the offer is a bluff, and was not made in good faith." Referring then to the preliminaries leading up to the meeting of last night, he declared that he accepted the Lyon offer, expecting to meet him, but that instead he met a meeting Lyon's speech, "that the man who made the charges against such men as Governor Lanham, Treasurer Robbins and others should appear himself and uphold them."

Referring to the charge of political oligarchy, he declared the republican affairs in the state were not represented by an oligarchy, but by a dynasty. Quoting from the morning paper incomplete report of the Lyon speech on non-enforcement of the trust law against labor organizations and the Sheriff's association, he stirred up the republican leader, who rose to a point of personal privilege and demanded of the reporter present if he had not declared he employed nothing but union labor.

Senator Hanger then elicited a laugh by his surprise that he should employ a class so constantly evading the law.

Reverting again to the investigation proposition, he again recounted the varying statements and declared it patent that they were ready to declare upon the acceptance of one proposition that was not the real offer. At first he admitted the proposition looked like bustiness, but he was convinced that such was not the case.

Turning to Cecil Lyon he declared "You did not mean what you said, or you would have stuck to your proposition, and would be able to declare it each time the same."

Referring to Lyon's introductory remarks charging that the republican speeches would not be fully reported by the press, Senator Hanger declared this a "lick" thing for the state chairman. He next recounted the record of the two republicans in the legislature and their voting for all the democratic measures passed, and then calling attention to his opponent's own residence, recounted the action of the democratic administration in behalf of the city of Galveston, the handling of immense amounts of relief funds by democratic officials and the entire faithfulness in the trust. Next he recalled the remission of taxes for Galveston by a democratic administration. "WORKING UNDER ORDERS. "But," he said, "I understand you do not mean what you say. In obedience to the commands from the great white throne at Washington, you are expected to do something and will have to look out for your hide after March 4, if you don't. You have to go about upon a campaign of slander throughout the fair country, as well as a prominent Elk, acted as chairman of ceremonies. He spoke briefly of the distinguished gentlemen present and how they had been received during the day. He also told of the increase in membership here, as a result of their visit, the number being increased nearly forty. He said Fort Worth should be proud to have the honor of first welcoming the "Flying Squadron" to the south, as this town was the first place the delegation had visited.

Then, declaring that he believed he had answered all the charges of maladministration, he took up the local option law, and asserted it a good measure, which might be subjected to certain changes but which should be maintained in its general import and purposes. With a final sketch of the Davis administration, he declared nothing could ever approach its disgraceful actions and declared the people of Texas would never submit to another republican rule.

McLEMORE'S RESPONSE. "Mr. McLemore in his response charged that the republican government could not answer the charges brought, but, like the democrats, like alcohol, killed the living and preserved the dead. He then corrected Senator Hanger on the number of years, and declared that from Chelsea, a republican town in Massachusetts, more money for the rehabilitation of the schools had been received than from the entire state of Texas. Referring to the educational funds, he quoted the testimony of a democratic county judge of offers and refusal and subsequent sale at an enormous premium.

Referring over the Davis administration by declaring that they had come by invitation to discuss live issues, he defended the bank charge made by Senator Hanger, declaring that although the man involved was a personal friend, he, as the United States attorney, had done his duty, and challenged the democrats to say as much. Coming back again at the bond issue, he declared: "Later on $150,000 of Jefferson county bonds were offered to the state at par, and were turned down. This is what the republicans come to. An official of the First National Bank of Weatherford called upon the governor after 9 o'clock at night to confer with him concerning these bonds. Next morning the state purchased the bonds, paying $7,500 premium. These are living issues. My friend in seeking to escape from charges against recent administrations has satisfied himself by defamation of something that occurred nearly forty years ago."

At the close of his speech there were frequent calls for W. H. Atwell, who was present, but he declined to speak.

Constipation causes poisonous gases to rise, and these are carried by the blood to every tissue of the body. Constipation weakens the muscles of the alimentary canal, and cathartics and purgatives only increase this diseased condition.

ter that should be carried off is almost sure to cause appendicitis, typhoid fever, piles, stomach, liver and kidney trouble as well as a hundred other deadly diseases. In fact, constipation is the forerunner of 75 per cent of the ills that humankind are heir to.

FORCING THE FIGHTING.

Something has happened to infuse new hope in the national democratic campaign committee, for it has been determined to close the present campaign in a pronounced whirlwind fashion. The determination to force the fighting is not the result of any spasmodic condition, but of deliberate intention to win, and has been brought about by the fruition of certain plans that have been slow to materialize.

It has been a well known fact that the eastern financial centers have been opposed to the election of Mr. Roosevelt, from the fact that they have believed his administration could but result in more or less turmoil and constant danger.

While they have been unfriendly to the president, they have not until recently believed there was any prospect of electing Judge Parker, and being satisfied in that direction, they have been sitting back and waiting for developments. The argument has been steadily advanced that there was no sense in sending good money after bad money.

There has been a keen feeling of apprehension that the policy of President Roosevelt would be detrimental to their interests. During the latter part of September there was a conference of these people in an effort to arrive at a conclusion as to what was best to do under the circumstances. As a result of that conference it was determined to send men into the doubtful states to ascertain the popular drift of affairs.

These men were sent with instructions to report not later than the middle of October, and it was agreed that if these reports indicated any probability of democratic success the Wall street gentlemen would fall in line and at once clamor into the democratic band wagon.

The reports made by the men sent on the tour of investigation have been made, and they are so favorable that Wall street has come to time with the necessary appropriations to make a hot fight in Indiana, West Virginia, New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and all the states in the east that were carried by Cleveland.

The republicans virtually concede the state of New York to the democrats. It is apparent that the republican candidate for governor is already hopelessly beaten, and the Roosevelt managers are trying to figure some plan whereby they can elect their man without the vote of that state.

The Parker strength in New York as already developed is believed to be ample to insure him the electoral vote of that state. Chairman Taggart has gone into Indiana to make sure of the situation there. Senator David B. Hill has passed up on the condition of affairs in that state and has assured his New York friends and co-workers that the outlook for democracy is very encouraging.

The result of Mr. Bryan's work among the Hoosiers has been very satisfactory. All parties agree to that proposition. Former Senator Smith says that New Jersey is absolutely sure for the democrats. Promises are made from the other Cleveland states that majorities will be forthcoming, and the republicans have awakened to the fact that a number of the western states they have been counting on are headed the other way.

ADVICE TO FIRST VOTERS Tomorrow EUGENE V DEBS, candidate of the socialist party for president, will, in the forceful style characteristic of him, make clear what the party of which he is the head stands for and why its principles should appeal to the rising generation of American citizens. Mr. Debs, as a leader in labor and political affairs and as an authority on sociological questions, occupies a position that gives weight to his opinions. It will be the third in the series of campaign letters.

Eugene V. Debs.

is going to sweep the country. All the pent-up enthusiasm is now to be turned loose, and a triumphal democracy, united and standing shoulder to shoulder, will force the fighting from Maine to California. The grand old party of the people has donned its fighting clothes, and that being the case, there is a small of victory already in the air. The indications are that Parker and Davis will be elected with a number of electoral votes to spare.

"IT DOESN'T PAY" Albert Fisher, whose career of crime has just ended in the electric chair at Columbus, O., left this brief but pregnant message for persons inclined to follow in his course: "Don't do it; it doesn't pay."

Fisher was qualified to give expert testimony on the fruits of a life of crime. He could speak with authority, because he had experienced crime in all its stages up to murder. He had run the whole gamut and found nothing good in it.

A little observation will prove to anybody of average intellect that what Fisher says is true. Who ever knew of a professional thief who was comfortably rich? Who ever knew of a confirmed criminal who enjoyed peace of mind—that wealth richer than money?

The successful criminal may get possession at times of large sums of money. But it slips through his fingers. Ill-got gains have wings. The criminal, like the gambler, may be rich today and poor tomorrow.

The criminal is always on the defensive. The hand of the law is ever reaching after him. He must submit to blackmail and he must help pals out of trouble. He may lead a dozen lives and there is no peace, no confidence in or sympathy with his fellowmen in any of them. He must hide and dodge, trying ever to get away from his real self.

Considering it purely as a business proposition, there is precious little profit in a life of crime. Nine out of ten professional criminals caught are without funds for their own defense. The criminal "reformed" and "retired" is always a pauper.

The man of crime takes the biggest risks for the smallest gains of any member of the human family. He undergoes more hardships and privations, more physical strain and more mental anxiety than any other man.

We pity the human beasts of burden who for paltry pay toil in deep mines and tunnels that any moment may become their graves. But such men manage to have homes and loved ones and the respect and sympathy of their neighbors. Such lives, pitiable as we commonly deem them, are fruitful and sweet compared with the lives of men who sneak ever in the shadow of the penitentiary or the gallows, whose small gains slip from them, who can have no fixed home and settled associations, whose purposes are out of harmony with humanity, and who have not the respect even of themselves.

No; crime doesn't pay. And nobody realizes it better than the old criminal himself who has gone through it all and comes to the end with empty hands and sick heart.

Cleanings From the Exchanges...

When ex-Governor Hogg undertook to persuade the Smith county delegation in the Houston convention not to vote for a railroad lobbyist for chairman of the state democratic executive committee, the delegation sat down on Hogg with a dull thud. Of course the democrats of Smith county nate to one are with Governor Hogg in this matter, but they didn't have free passes over the railroads, and stayed at home.—Tyler Courier.

Another illustration of the evil effects of the free pass. The people of Texas are with Governor Hogg in the fight he is making, and the election of a railway attorney as chairman of the state democratic executive committee is no evidence of weakness or lack of grim determination.

Roosevelt is perfectly safe in preparing for war on the isthmus. His bluff will go down there and he can add another chapter to his military record. By the way, too, the glory of the new chapter will be about on a par with the glory of the previous chapters.—San Antonio Gazette.

It does not make any difference with the Strenuous One, just so it is glory. He pines to go down into history as a man who did things, and he is going to run things his way utterly regardless of consequences.

We Texans rail against the high tariff because it robs the many for the benefit of the few, and yet support the Texas railway commission in the same sort of a performance.—Waco Times-Herald.

Friends of the Texas railway commission have all along labored under the impression that its maintenance prevented the few from robbing the many. Before it was inaugurated the people of this state were completely at the mercy of the railroads.

According to the report of the state commissioner of insurance, over nine million dollars was paid out last year by the people of Texas for various kinds of life and fire insurance over the amount paid to them for losses. Yet when a "kick" is made that the rate is entirely too high their agent forthwith hauls out statistics that have the appearance of being "doctored" and convinces you in just a little while that every single insurance company does business in the state honestly.

And the insurance trust has the people of this state just about as completely by the throat as it is possible for an octopus to get them. They maintain uniform systems of rates, and there is no such thing as bona fide competition.

Carrie Nation was in San Antonio a few days ago and made a hatchet play at a booze joint, but when the barkeep started after her with a bottle of gin-fizz she made tracks for another locality. Your Aunt Carrie never seeks trouble for herself. She is only bent on making it for the other fellow.—Fort Worth Telegram.

Notwithstanding the strenuous life Mrs. Nation leads, and the intemperance acts which have made her famous, she met with no violent treatment in San Antonio, such as she has so often received elsewhere. She came and went, she lectured, she did some things which from a man would have provoked a blow, nobody in San Antonio forgot the state was a woman; consequently, not an offensive word was spoken to her, but she was everywhere treated with courtesy. Not even the bottle of seltzer water was turned on her, but the proprietor of the saloon merely took her by the arm and gently led her from his place. It is an extreme provocation that causes the average San Antonian to forget his gallantry.—San Antonio Express.

We all know that San Antonio is just bubbling over with gentleness, hence her gallantry. That the saloon man was gentle with her stands to San Antonio's credit, for with all her faults, Carrie Nation is a woman, even if she does trot in the he-woman class.

Governor Hogg thinks that the saving of Texas is a bigger job than the saving of the nation. The ex-governor says he believes that the railroads of the state have it by the throat. The democratic candidates of the state have no opinion to express on the subject.—Texarkana Courier.

Perhaps the governor is a believer in the beauties of the old axiom that charity should begin at home.

The republican nominee has abandoned the idea of the full dinner pail, and is now endeavoring to convince the laboring man of America that he should be satisfied if his tin cup is full of coffee.—Beaumont Journal.

The republican party now makes no passing reference to the full dinner pail on account of the cost of the contents. The necessities of life are coming very high under the prevailing wave of republican prosperity.

In its issue of last Saturday the Wall Street Journal makes a savage assault on the New York Times, the New York World and the Brooklyn Eagle. The cause of the Wall Street organ's wrath are the charges, made by the three papers mentioned, that Chairman Cortelyou has made threats and pledges to get campaign funds out of big corporations having their headquarters in Wall street. It is perfectly natural that the Wall Street Journal should defend those who protect its benefactors.—El Paso Times.

If Chairman Cortelyou has not been engaged in frying the fat out of the big corporations, then appearances are very much against him. The heads of all the big trusts nearly have declared for his chief, and there must exist some community of interest that serves to bind them to their presidential choice.

THE YELLOW HOLLY

BY FERGUS HUME, AUTHOR OF "THE MYSTERY OF A HANSON CAB," ETC. Copyright, 1905, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

SYNOPSIS.

George Brendon attends social gathering of shabby London gentility at Mrs. Jersey's boarding house, with his friend Leonard Train, a boarder in the house. His object is to learn from Mrs. Jersey her supposed knowledge of his birth. Mrs. Jersey is mysteriously murdered during the night. Twigs of yellow holly which Brendon wore in his buttonhole (given him by his sweetheart Dorothy Ward) found by Train, beside cold body. Inquest reveals nothing. Train and Brendon had slept together and though Train can not reason out how Brendon had passed out of the room during the night (because Train had locked the door in a way that Brendon could not get out) he suspects Brendon guilty of the murder. Dorothy's mother, who hates Brendon and looks on his suit for Dorothy's hand with disfavor, speaks of yellow holly in Brendon's presence. Brendon claims he is grandson and heir to Lord Derrington, but the latter denies claims because of belief that Brendon's mother's marriage had never been recorded. Lola Voley, a music hall dancer, loves Brendon because she is promised her. Lola learns of Brendon's love for Dorothy and confesses that she has hired a detective, Bawdsey, to watch Brendon, because she, Lola, fears Brendon's success in proving his birth will draw him from her. At a dinner party given by Mrs. Ward, Derrington meets Brendon for first time, the latter thinking the former knows him not. Train is present and while Brendon and Derrington are testing each other Mrs. Ward draws Train's story of the night of the murder and Train's conclusion of Brendon's guilt and the story of finding of yellow holly at side of body. Train inadvertently connects Brendon with crime. Mrs. Ward is now satisfied. The guests did the hostess good night. Bawdsey goes to board with Miss Bull, who succeeded Mrs. Jersey as landlady. He secures rooms Leonard and Brendon occupied on a pretext. Tells fascinating tales of travel and adventure to Miss Bull. She likes him and shows him courtesy. Bawdsey requests Brendon to visit him at house. Brendon comes to a crime. Mrs. Ward, Lord Derrington, Dorothy and Lola Voley. Bawdsey tells of love for woman and having been hired by her to watch him. Secrets revealed to Brendon by Bawdsey. Tells Brendon he is apt to be arrested charged with crime, if he doesn't leave the country. Claims Lord Derrington and Mrs. Ward are both anxious to have him leave England.

Bawdsey tells Brendon how Mrs. Ward got information of the crime. Bawdsey accuses Brendon of being in Mrs. Jersey's room about the time of the crime. Brendon admits he was in the room at 12 o'clock. Bawdsey shows Brendon a secret passage way. A discussion follows of the murder of Brendon's father and of Mrs. Jersey, and it is thought the murder of both was done to keep secret of Brendon's birth. Brendon tells why he visited Mrs. Jersey to get truth of his parentage. Brendon decides to call on Lord Derrington. Brendon's father, Percy, is shown up and evidence of a letter showing of legitimacy of Brendon is shown.

One afternoon when a card was brought to Derrington he nearly jumped from his seat when he read the name of George Brendon. At first he was inclined to tear up the card and send the pieces out to the insolent young man who thus dared to trespass on his privacy. But on second thoughts he decided to accord him an interview. He knew that by this time Mr. Bawdsey must have informed George that his grandfather knew him as Brendon, and the old autocrat wished to see if George would behave as pluckily at their second interview as he had done at the first. Moreover, he could not forget the good looks and clever conversation of the young man. It would be absurd to say that Derrington's heart yearned over this unacknowledged twig of the family tree, for according to common report he had no heart. But he certainly felt an unwonted emotion when Brendon, tall and handsome, composed and ready for battle, stepped into the room. Derrington knew that the young man was ready for battle, for he saw the light of war in his eyes.

When the door was closed and the two were alone Derrington took his station on the hearth rug with an impassive expression of countenance. He waited for George to open the war of words, and after a polite greeting he waited in silence. George was not at all embarrassed. He knew perfectly well that he had a difficult task before him and did not choose to shrink it.

"I am sure you are not surprised to see me, Lord Derrington," said Brendon, with his eyes fixed on the old man's grim face.

"Not half so surprised as you were at seeing Bawdsey," said Derrington, not to be outdone in coolness.

George smiled. "I was not at all surprised at seeing the man," he said calmly. "It was my happy lot to rescue him from an accident, and it was my intention to call on him."

"For what reason?" asked Derrington, who could not help betraying astonishment in spite of his self control.

"You must excuse my not answering that question."

"Oh, certainly," replied Lord Derrington, with ironical politeness, "but you are not so diplomatic as I thought."

"Because I decline a reply?"

"Because you allow me to see that you are on good terms with the man I employ. A clever diplomatist would have allowed me to think that Bawdsey was hostile and so have used the man against me."

"There is no need for me to stoop to such crooked ways," said Brendon, with some scorn, "and I always find the truth tells in the long run."

Derrington sat down and leaned his elbows on the table. His temper was rising, as he was not accustomed to be treated in this offhand way. "Come, sir, let us understand one another. State the situation so as to clear the ground for a proper argument."

"Certainly," said George, with frigid politeness. "You know who I am, I understand."

"No, I don't. So far as I know you are George Brendon. I met you at Mrs. Ward's, and—"

"And were good enough to hold a long conversation with me," finished George smartly. "I see, sir, it is necessary for me to be explicit."

"It's the best course," rejoined Derrington, looking at him with hard eyes and secretly admiring his self control.

"Then I have to state that my name is George Vane, and that I am the son of Percy Vane and Rosina Lockwood."

"Indeed! What proof have you of this?"

"The evidence of my nurse, Jane Fraser, who attended to me when my father, your eldest son, was alive. The testimony of my former guardian, Mr. Ireland, who took charge of me after the death of my mother's father. Finally, my certificate of birth, which I will show you whenever you choose."

Derrington was confounded by this calm answer. He would have blustered, but George's politeness gave him no chance of losing his temper, and without fuel it would not blaze up. "You seem to be well provided with proofs," said he grimly. "Let us admit, for the sake of argument, that you are my grandson. But the marriage—"

"Ah, that is the difficult point! And it is unpleasant for me to talk of the subject. In justice to the memory of my mother I hold that there was a marriage."

to go. If you threaten me right to protect myself." "In what way?" "By telling you that if I am in a perilous position you are also."

"Do you mean to say that I murdered the woman?"

"By no means," said Brendon quickly. "I should not think of doing such a thing. But I do say you were in that house after 11."

"I was not," panted the old nobleman savagely, and he glared at his grandson with bloodshot eyes.

"You were," insisted Brendon. "There is no need to tell you how I got out of my bedroom unbeknown to Train, but I did. I came downstairs to see Mrs. Jersey at half past 11 or thereabouts. I crept down the stairs and saw you standing in the light of the hall lamp. You had on a fur coat, and I recognized you by your unusual height; also by the color of your coat. Some months before you wore that coat—it is a charet colored one trimmed with sable—at a race meeting. You were pointed out to me, and it the first time I had set eyes on it was you in the hall."

"Did you see my face?" asked Derrington.

"No. But the coat and the height and my knowledge that you were connected with Mrs. Jersey—"

"I wasn't connected with the jade!" flashed out Derrington. "She came to me years ago and said she could prove the marriage. I tried to get out of her the name of the church where it took place. She refused to give it and said if I did not pension her off she would go to your guardian, Ireland, and get him to help her to prove that you were legitimate. I hated your father, sir, and as to your mother—"

"No," cried Brendon, rising, "not a word against my mother."

"Only this, that she was not well born—the daughter of a music master, not the wife for my son."

"She was his wife, however. Leave my mother's name out of it and go on, sir. You say that Mrs. Jersey could have proved the marriage."

"Yes," growled Derrington, rather cowed by Brendon's manner. "I did not wish her to do so, for the reasons I have stated."

"Very unworthy reasons," said George.

Derrington looked as though he could have struck George. "Never mind that," said he, controlling his temper. "I thought that house from your mother's father—the music master," he sneered, "and gave it to Mrs. Jersey rent free. I also allowed her an annuity. She held her tongue for many years. Then she saw that confounded advertisement in the papers and threatened to tell you the truth on the chance of getting more money out of you when I was dead. I refused, and she then told me that she had written out a confession!"

"I thought as much," interrupted George. "But that has been stolen."

"By whom?"

"By the assassin."

"And who is the assassin?"

"I can't say. But if use is made of that confession either you or I will learn who killed Mrs. Jersey."

"Why you or I?"

"Because we alone can make use of the confession and pay money for it. The thing would be of no use to any one else. But I now understand Mrs. Jersey's possession of the house. Were you in it on that night?"

Derrington looked at Brendon and hesitated. Then in strange contradiction to his usual manner he turned away his face. "I decline to answer that question," he growled.

"But I saw you," persisted George. "You saw—There is nothing more to be said. Hold your tongue."

"Willingly," said George politely, "if you will silence Mrs. Ward."

"I have no influence with the woman."

"Oh, I think so. She wishes Dorothy to marry my cousin."

"Your cousin?"

"Can you deny the relationship?"

Derrington shirked the question by assenting to Brendon's request. "I may be able to make Mrs. Ward hold her tongue," he growled.

"I am quite sure she will do anything you tell her in the hope that you will approve of a match between my cousin and her daughter."

"And you wish me to approve?" sneered the old man.

"As to that, it matters little. Mrs. Ward wishes Dorothy to be Lady Derrington and to have your very excellent income. Whether she marries me or Vane, it comes to the same thing. I can't understand Mrs. Ward's dislike and mischief making, since that is the case."

"I can," snapped Derrington. "You are too clever for her, and Walter is a fool."

"Perhaps so. However, as I shall marry Dorothy it doesn't much matter."

"How can you marry her, situated as you are?"

"I shall be George Vane some day, sir, and then Dorothy will be my wife."

"I believe she will," muttered Derrington, looking at the firm face of the young man. "Humph! So you intend to look for the certificate of marriage?"

"No; for the confession of Mrs. Jersey. Afterward for the church which will be mentioned in that confession. The register will prove the marriage without the necessity of the certificate."

"How will you set to work to get that confession?"

George wrinkled his brows. "There is only one way, sir. I must find out who killed Mrs. Jersey. If you can help me—"

"I can't. I know no more who murdered the woman than you do."

"Yet you were in the house on that night."

A large Japanese python which died at the Museum of Natural History in Paris two years ago had refrained from eating for two years and nine months. It arrived at the museum in 1899, and was in the fullest health and strength. It was eight feet long, of brilliant coloring, enormous diameter and a singularly aggressive disposition. Its keepers, finding that it refused ordinary food, pressed every dainty upon it which was known to tickle the palate of reptiles—geese, ducks, sheep, hens—but it would have none of them. It passed away after a voluntary fast of two years and nine months.

The Lewis and Clarke centennial will celebrate the acquisition of the only territory possessed by the United States the title to which was obtained by money.

AMUSEMENTS

Heavy rain, a dark chilly night, bad under foot and with every appearance of becoming worse as the night advanced, was not a condition of weather which was calculated to inspire theater goers last night, and they all stayed at home—at least all but about a hundred—but those of the hundred who attended were well repaid for the trip through rain and the cold, were delightfully entertained for two hours, and followed the beautiful story which no doubt presents George Bernard Shaw's most brilliant and epigrammatic manner.

"Candida" deserves better attention, whether the night be dark and rainy or whether it be cold. "Candida" deserves a good house at all times.

Candida is the wife of the Rev. James Mavor Morell, a clergyman resident in the northeast suburb of London, and a man who, qualified for his position by a goodly amount of rhetorical ability, a fair share of average intelligence, and a generally agreeable and impressive personality, is comfortably successful in his work. His wife Candida is a woman whose strongest attribute is motherliness. She is only 28 years of age, but is endowed with that peculiar kindness and sweetness of disposition and that marked bigness of nature which distinguish women who are able to "mother" everybody and everything that comes into their sphere.

Morell has found a young poet, Eugene Marchbanks by name, who, a dreamer and a wild enthusiast of 18, has been misunderstood by his parents and family, and has virtually run away from home. Eugene becomes an intimate in Morell's family, and is, of course, mothered by Candida. The young fellow talking of poetry and soul conditions with this big hearted, big minded woman concludes that she is madly in love with her, and that she is happy with Morell. Eugene, in telling Morell of his devotion for Candida, and gives the clergyman to understand that he (Morell) is not making Candida's life what it should be.

Morell, terribly cut up over this confession and accusation, broods over the matter until he finds the complication by a compelling Candida to "choose" between him and Eugene. She, of course, "chooses" her husband, and incidentally makes a man of Eugene.

There are but six characters in the comedy, and these six present this keen humor and delightful pathos in a manner most creditable. Lester Lonergan is the moon-struck poet. He essays the character of the boy magnificently, and in his scenes with Morell he rises to the supreme heights of dramatic art. His speech is good, the lines which Shaw has written for the poet to say are beautifully worded, and Mr. Lonergan speaks them in a way that gives more force to the forcible ones, brings out the finest satire in the satirical, and presents the funniest humor of the humorous. David Murray is the clergyman, tall, fine looking, blustering, a "parson" of fine words as the poet calls him, and in the saying of those fine words he gives an expression to the relation which is at once attractive and entertaining.

Miss Alice Treat Hunt is a delightful little woman. She is of that sweet, innocent disposition which wins the heart of every one with whom she comes in contact, except those of her sex, and it is because she is so lovable that she does not have the esteem of her sisters. They are jealous of her. Miss Hunt looks and plays the part well. But it is at the close of the play that she has her best opportunity. After the husband has told her to choose between the two, she has a long speech which is filled with the sweetest counsel and advice, and the most pleasant thoughts and the purest purposes. This speech is the heart of the play. She sits before the fire and looking far off into the distance, she talks to the two men, the husband whom she loves, but who does not understand her, and the boy who loves her, and mistakes her motherly attention for a sweeter affection, and there she brings out the true character of sweet womanhood.

There is much to "Candida" and one can not see the play without being impressed.

AL H. WILSON
A feature of more than special interest, especially to music lovers, in the performance of Al H. Wilson, the celebrated comedian and "golden voice" singer, is his beautiful, tuneful and catchy melodies introduced by this clever singing comedian in "The Watch on the Rhine." Sidney R. Ellis' charming comedy, which comes to Greenwall's opera house tonight, which received its premiere last season under the management of Charles H. Yale and Sidney R. Ellis. Mr. Wilson will stage six new songs during the play, the success of each song being so strongly marked that the question as to which one is the best is purely a matter of personal opinion. There is the charming love ballad, "My German Rose," the beautiful heart story, "The Tea Kettle Song," the irresistible waltz song, "My Little Deutscher," "The Song of Home," which as its title indicates, appeals to every heart; "In Tyrol," a young especially fitted to Mr. Wilson's marvelous voice, and "When Parading," a bright and snappy march song of unusual attractiveness.

CURES WINTER COUGH
J. E. Gover, 101 N. Main St., Ottawa, Kan., writes: "Every fall it has been my wife's trouble to catch a severe cold, and therefore to cough all winter long. Last fall I got for her a bottle of Forehound Syrup. She used it and has been able to sleep soundly all night long. Whenever she catches a cold, she takes three doses, stops the cough, and she is able to get up and well." 25c. per bottle. H. T. Pangburn & Co.

The words of these successful melodies were written by Sidney R. Ellis and the music by Al H. Wilson, and once heard are never forgotten.

HUNTLEY'S SAVOY THEATER CO.
The stage of the Greenwall opera house will be occupied by J. H. Huntley's Savoy Theater Company of Atlantic City for three nights and three matinees, commencing Wednesday matinee, October 25. This company is direct from a three years' engagement at Mr. Huntley's own theater in Atlantic City, and is making its third annual four months' tour of the south, stopping at only the largest and most important cities. The only two cities visited this time between Atlantic City and Texas were Vicksburg and New Orleans, where the company has just finished a three weeks' engagement at the leading stock theater of that city, and its productions and players are unanimously pronounced by the New Orleans papers to be easily the equal of most companies in the high-priced houses. The company plays here Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, with a matinee each day, in the following repertoire: Wednesday matinee, "Neil Gwynne," Wednesday night, "Woman Against Man," Thursday matinee, "Inherited," Thursday night, "Cumberland 61," Friday matinee, "Camille," Friday night, "Gypsy Jack." Popular prices will prevail at all performances.

"THE BURGOMASTER"
That phenomenal musical comedy success, "The Burgomaster," under the direction of W. P. Cullen, will be seen at Greenwall's opera house Saturday, October 29, one night only. Mr. Cullen has made the handsomest production of "The Burgomaster" that has ever been seen on the road, and has re-costumed the piece throughout, at great expense, as the opera will be seen in San Francisco for the first time this season, and then will be taken right back to New York for a long run.

The cast is a notable one. It includes Oscar L. Pignam as the "Burgomaster," Charles Sharp, Oscar B. Ragland, Fred Bailey, R. J. Moye, A. W. Hutchins, Olga Von Hatzfeldt, Louise Brackett, Harriett Sheldon, Dorothy Rae, the Sisters Lockhart, Mae Eranklin and others. The chorus is an especially strong one. The sale of seats for this important musical production is now on.

COAST COUNTRY WEATHER FORECAST

Judge J. F. Cooper Has Made a Visit to Section Adjacent to the New Brownsville Railroad—Talks of Possibilities

HE IS MUCH PLEASSED Land Is Productive and Yield Will Be Handsome Return on Investment—Lands Held at Reasonable Figures and Good Chances for Settlers

Judge J. F. Cooper, who has just resigned as one of the seven judges of the supreme court of the Philippine Islands, has just returned from an extended trip over the country tributary to the St. Louis, Brownsville and Mexico railroad, which has recently been completed and extends from Robstown to Brownsville, 150 miles. The company, the judge says, is now working on an extension from Robstown to Bay City, Houston. The entire extension is now under contract and is to be finished as rapidly as possible. The graders are at work all along the line. Judge Cooper says it is understood that the Frisco company is back of the enterprise.

Since the country through which this road runs has opened up this artesian belt is accessible to travel. The artesian belt extends from Robstown to the north a distance of 100 miles south, and is probably fifty miles east, and west. Asked as to the productiveness of the country, Judge Cooper said: "The soil is a black sandy loam and is one of the finest sections of Texas I ever saw. In quality it is the equal of Collin, Grayson, Dallas or Tarrant counties. With irrigation its productiveness is wonderful and nearly every kind of a crop can be grown. It produces the celebrated Bermuda onion, which is raised in abundance, and in fact all sorts of garden products in great abundance, while cotton also will produce in some sections as much as one-half a bale to the acre, but the best weevil has made cotton-growing uncertain in that part of the state. However, it is making as much as one-third of a bale to the acre, even under present boll weevil conditions.

"Ribbon sugar cane grows luxuriantly in Florida, and the orange production, and with irrigation will equal the production of Cuba and the Hawaiian Islands. I saw in a number of localities Sicilian lemons as well as oranges growing on the Kennedy tract near Corpus Christi as fine as can be produced in the world, the only contingency being the danger in that part of Texas being about the same as exists in Florida. The orange state in 1886 and 1898, and aside from experimental production in a small way no special efforts are being made to raise either lemons or oranges. The limbs of the lemon trees I saw are loaded down with the fruit and would easily give a return of $1,000 to the acre.

"The growing of onions has been a great success in the Santa Gertrudes ranch. They are the Bermuda variety and are very productive. As to the profit in growing onions I have only to refer to the success recorded by two men who planted near Laredo which netted a profit of $12,000.

"Quite a number of people have already settled near Kingville within the last sixty days. The Kennedy tract, which has several hundred acres, and have crops of onions now growing. The acreage in onions around Kingville, although the country has just recently been opened up to settlement, will amount to several hundred acres. The asianian wells have a flow of from 150 to 300 gallons of water a minute, and it is estimated that each well will irrigate 100 acres of land. Water is retained by the construction of reservoirs which are constructed on the highest point. Dams thirty feet at the base and seven feet at the top and fourteen feet in depth are built. One dam on the Kennedy ranch is well stocked with black bass and the dams present a beautiful body of blue water, perfectly pure."

Judge Cooper reports that he saw a new species of grass growing in the Brownsville country which has just been introduced into Texas. It is known as "Parca" grass, and its experimental growing is under way on the King ranch. This grass produces six tons to the acre, and is a most valuable crop. The grass, he says, is nutritious and all kind of stock like it. The hay is fully equal to alfalfa.

Judge Cooper is very much in love with the country, and the climate is warmer than in this section of the state, and has advantages over other parts of Texas as a truck-producing country as the seasons are at least two to three weeks earlier, which offers the advantage of putting the products on the markets ahead of other sections of the state.

The lands are being sold at from $15 to $25 per acre, and Judge Cooper regards these figures quite reasonable, when the great advantages of the country are considered.

Messrs. Kieberg and Kennedy have both made large donations of lands to the St. Louis, Brownsville and Mexico railroad, and several townships have already been laid out and the country is being generally settled up and developed. Those who have settled around Kingville are men of means and enthusiasm and are pushing the development of the country. Quite a number of people from the state of California have located in that country, while several are prospecting with a view to locating. The Californians seen by Judge Cooper are pushing the development of the country with equal vigor and enthusiasm on account of the natural advantages it possesses.

"The day is cold, and dark, and dreary. It rains and the winds are never weary," etc.

Such is the weather that Fort Worth people had today and last night. Early last evening the wind blew as hard as any wind could blow, but as to the cause of its blowing not even the weather man in the tower of the federal building can explain. Some are of the opinion that it was caused by the vacuum created by the politicians holding their breath for the grand jury-jamming contest last night, and others contended that it was the socialists, who, although not permitted to take part in the affair of last evening, had started a little of the affair of their own in the afternoon. Merely a matter of conjecture, however.

Be it as it will, the wind blew like all bad winds do, and then it was followed by a regular typical Texas fall rain. The rain came down in torrents for a time and with every cessation during the night and this morning it seemed to get colder. As a result of this the clothing stores were besieged today with anxious purchasers looking for heavier underwear, the shoe stores have customers galore after boots and heavy shoes or rubbers, the coal and wood men have been made to move to get in the coal ordered several days ago and a period of activity is seen in all lines of business. The umbrella man is about doing a landoffice business and the merchant who has made intoeshees or slickers for sale can hardly wait on all of the trade.

The rain was a general one and reached almost all over this part of the state. Here it fell so hard and there was so much of it that the streets resemble the waterways of the East. The man with the sample of weather he gave last night and today was a little careless in mixing up the weather supply and went wrong on it. One must not blame that official of the government entirely for the conditions which have prevailed for some times all are inclined to make mistakes.

FORECAST
The forecast for Texas east of the one hundred meridian, issued at New Orleans, is as follows:
East Texas (north)—Tonight and Wednesday, fair; colder tonight, with frost; warmer Wednesday.
West Texas (south)—Tonight and Wednesday, fair, except showers on coast; colder tonight; frost in extreme north portion; warmer Wednesday in north portion.

WEATHER CONDITIONS
D. S. Landis issued the following statement of weather conditions this morning:
Strong anti-cyclonic conditions control the country from coast to coast, with an exception of minor "lows" in each of the equatorial of the compass, the northeast quarter having brisk winds, and snow storms, and the southeast having thunder storms and heavy rain, especially along the immediate gulf coast. Rain ranging from 1.20 at El Paso to 1.40 at San Antonio, with 4.00 inches and over in intermediate points, show the Texas rain belt, a reliable report. The rain did not extend into the Panhandle country, Amarillo being dry.

Killing frost occurred in Kansas, heavy frost in Georgia, and light frost in Illinois.
The cotton belt is generally cloudy, cool and rain threatening. Rain continues to fall at Corpus Christi, Fort Worth and Jacksonville.

Mrs. L. C. Glover, Vice Pres. Milwaukee, Wis., Business Woman's Association, is another one of the million women who have been restored to health by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: I was married for several years and no children blessed my home. The doctor said I had a complication of female troubles and I could not have any children unless I could be cured. He tried to cure me, but after experimenting for several months, my husband became disgusted, and one night when we noticed a testimonial of a woman who had been cured of similar trouble through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, he went out and bought a bottle for me. I used your medicine for three and one half months, improving steadily in health, and in twenty-two months a child came. I cannot fully express the joy and thankfulness that is in my heart. Our home is a different place now, as we have something to live for, and all the credit is due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Yours very sincerely, Mrs. L. C. GLOVER, 614 Grove St., Milwaukee, Wis." Vice President, Milwaukee Business Woman's Ass'n.

Women should not fail to profit by the experience of these two women; just as surely as they were cured of the troubles enumerated in their letters, just so certainly will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing women, and don't allow any druggist to sell you anything else in its place.

RAILROAD NEWS

From reports received at the railroad offices in this city the present rains extend over portions of the state in which the greatest benefit will be felt, and as they extend but a short distance into the unworked cotton area, comparatively little damage will result.

At the Texas and Pacific work has been received that the rainfall extends clear to the Pecos river without interruption and through the western part of the state it has been of the same steady soaking variety as that experienced in this city.

The Denver reports show rains of varying intensity as far north as Electric, a distance of about 140 miles. The rain to the north has not been of great intensity with the exception of a few points, and it is thought the cotton has suffered comparatively little. Wheat will be benefited to a great extent by the rains and the ranges, already in splendid condition, will be still further bettered.

CHILDRESS WELL

The Childress well being sunk by the Denver road is now being pushed downward again after a necessitated delay of several weeks due to a break at a depth of about 600 feet. At that point a drill broke, forcing a delay in the work until it could be removed, several hundred feet of rope also being left in the hole.

After considerable work it has been removed and the work of drilling commenced again. Although hopes of striking water at about 1,500 feet have been expressed, it is not believed that it will be struck by the crowding of the hole, judging from results of other wells in the neighborhood.

LAST EXCURSION

The last low rate excursion to this city over the Denver is announced for next Sunday from Amarillo and points south. Sunday excursions over this line to Fort Worth have always been well patronized in the past and it is expected that this one will prove no exception to the rule. It being argued on the contrary that it will even be a record breaker. Despite the decision of many eastern roads that the Sunday excursion business is not a paying one, it is constantly being found so in this section and there is little prospect of its discontinuance in the southwest for years to come.

This difference of advisability is due largely to local conditions. In the first place, the danger of accidents, enhanced in the case of the crowding of the roads is to a great extent eliminated.

TREATMENT OF PILES

Permanence of Cure the True Test. Many so-called pile remedies will afford the user slight temporary relief, and the majority of those afflicted do not expect more than this.

The average sufferer, after having tried every preparation recommended for the cure of piles, comes to the conclusion that there is no cure except by an operation, unless, rather than undergo this "last resort" he suffers on, resigned to the situation, so far as medicine is concerned. The attention of those interested is invited to the following experience: "After ten years of suffering from blind, bleeding and protruding piles, and after using every remedy I could hear of without any benefit, I finally bought a fifty-cent box of Pyramid Pile Cure, and used it with such good results that next a dollar box, which I finished up the job. That was nearly six years ago, and as far as piles is concerned I am cured, and have never felt a symptom of them since."

"Many others have used this remedy by my advice with the same results, and I always recommend it to sufferers with piles." C. H. Fotts, Burlington, Kan.

Testimony like this should convince the most skeptical the Pyramid Pile Cure not only cures, but cures to stay cured. It is in the form of a suppository, can be applied in the privacy of the home, directly to the parts affected, and does its work quickly and painlessly.

Druggists generally sell this famous remedy for fifty cents a package and sufferers are urged to buy a package now and give it a trial tonight. Accept no substitutes.

A little book describing the causes and cure of piles is published by the Pyramid Drug Company, Marshall, Mich., and same will be sent free to any address for the asking.

(Written for The Telegram by Enoch J. Mills, Coach Fort Worth University.)

The changes in the football rules during the last two years are:

First—The permitting of anyone who first touches the ball from the center, usually the quarterback, to run the ball, provided that the man with the ball shall cross the line of scrimmage at least five yards from where the ball was put into play.

Second—That the kicker, after a kick, cannot put his men on side nor himself secure the ball before it has been touched by an opponent.

Third—The side score upon has the choice of kicking off, by using the side making the score to kick off.

Fourth—That the linesman shall have and must exercise equal power with the umpire in certain instances of penalties.

Fifth—The requiring of six men on the scrimmage line at all times, each away with the old style of mass plays, yet by permitting five men behind the line, providing the fifth one be outside the end man, it is still possible to use tandem plays with quick formations.

Sixth—Changing the value of a field goal from five to four points makes it nearer equal, because it is now impossible for a team making one touchdown and a field goal to defeat a team making two touchdowns, although it is possible for the game to be a tie.

The change permitting the quarterback to run with the ball will now make heavier men in demand for this important position.

The difficulty now is to get a man who is large enough to run with the ball and at the same time agile and quick enough to fill acceptably the position of the former light and skillful quarterback. It requires a many-sided football player to play quarter. Again, the center must be more accurate than ever before in passing. In certain plays all of his passes may require a length of five yards, for any back may carry the ball directly on receiving it from him.

The change also imposes upon the referee an onerous and difficult duty as any on the football field, since he is to determine whether the ball has crossed the line of scrimmage five yards from where it was put into play.

The second change is a wholesome one, and does away with the evil for which it was intended, viz: preventing roughness with the kicker after a kick. The rules committee ascribed the rough tactics with the kicker to the fact that he could formerly put his men on side or secure the ball after a kick. But there were many instances where the opponents were taught to charge the fullback merely because he was a good player and it would be a great benefit to tire him out.

Where the opponents charge, they are and an exceedingly strong one. It is a good rule that allows the side score upon to say who shall kick off; but take the case of an evenly matched game, there the side which has just secured a hard-earned touchdown may be seriously handicapped by allowing the other side the choice of a kickoff or of receiving the ball. So this rule has its disadvantages as well as its advantages.

The changes in the rules encourage punting, end running and play in the open. The result is that the ends are now more important than ever before. They have more than ever to run-down on punts, to keep an eye for trick plays and to smash interference.

Heretofore the tackles were becoming more and more important. Mass plays were directed usually either directly inside or outside of them. And oftentimes the tackles were fully as large, if not larger, than the guards. Now much of the mass play is eliminated, and it comes up on the hard grind that was formerly the tackle's lot.

Here in Texas the change which gives the linesmen certain powers equal with the umpire may well be viewed with disapproval. The reason is that competent officials are not as plentiful as in the east. On a number of Saturdays there are several important games in one afternoon. Where before two officials had to be found, there will now have to be three for each game. It is probably true, that competent officials are not so scarce, but the captains and coaches seem to view with distrust for some reason or other all but two or three men with whom they are personally acquainted.

It would be remembered that the rules are not unchangeable, and that the rules committee is composed of men who thoroughly understand the game. They make such changes each season as seems feasible.

An interview with Coach Staggs, he said: "I am in favor of as few rules restricting play as possible, and like to see originality. I would like more opportunity for its development and evolution."

PARK AT POLYTECHNIC.

A long felt want is about to be realized at Polytechnic College. This want is none other than the establishment of a park around it. The park is to be used for the playing of games for which an admission is to be charged.

This morning the young men of the college placed an order for the lumber and work will be started on the building of the high fence at once, the weather permitting. It is expected to rush the work of completing the fence as rapidly as possible so as to have the park properly enclosed for the football games to be played this season at the college.

The first game to be played behind the new fence is the game with the team of Fort Worth University next Saturday. Following this game the team will play November 7 with the Grandview team, and on November 12 with the strong Stephenville team. The big game of the season is to be played with Fort Worth University November 24. The two teams lay aside each year all other games as of minor importance in comparison with this, the last game. Both of the Fort Worth schools are looking forward to this game as a hard-earned triumph.

Things its own way for a while in football circles.

NEGRO USES BREAD KNIFE TO SLAY ANOTHER

When Officers Arrest Him He Makes an Attempt to Cut Deputy Chief James Allen With Pocket Knife

A negro was arrested at the noon hour today by Officers Allen and Moss on a charge of assault to murder.

The man was employed at the Crystal restaurant on lower Main street, and became involved in a controversy with another negro who works at the same place. It is charged the man arrested grabbed up a large bread knife and chased the man about the place, and at last succeeded in catching him and cutting him several times on the head.

The man injured, name unknown, was so severely cut about the top of the head and lost blood so profusely that for a time it was almost impossible to staunch the flow. He was taken to the office of Dr. R. Chambers where the wounds were dressed. The man is in a bad shape, but will recover.

The assailant was arrested and taken to the city hall where he will be turned over to the county officials on a charge of assault to murder. When arrested by the officers he attempted to cut Assistant Chief Allen, who was eating dinner in the restaurant at that time. The officers in searching the man had neglected to find a knife which the fellow had about his person.

However, the coolness of a brother officer standing near saved Mr. Allen. Police are inclined to think the man arrested is insane and was made so by the provocation of the man on whom he committed the assault.

THE INTERMENT OF A COLLEGE JOURNAL

Staff of the Former Publication at Fort Worth University Gives the Last Issue Decent Burial

"Ashes to ashes, and dust to dust, If the faculty won't have you The devil must." With those words spoken by one of the student body of Fort Worth University at the noon hour Monday, was laid to rest in a grave prepared for it in a northwest corner of the campus, the University Unit, the college paper, which for nearly ten years has told the story of college life to the student body, the faculty and the many friends of the school.

Ten years ago the Unit first saw the light of day. It grew from an insignificant little monthly into a healthy sheet. Its support depended entirely on the faculty, the student body and the many friends of the school. This year when the university opened it was neglected and from time to time it pined away until yesterday it was decided by the staff that the object of literary love and former admiration had died and was really dead and for the love shown to it in former years should be accorded the honor of a respectable interment.

A small box was prepared for the last issue of the paper of the spring term, and putting a copy in the box the staff started to march with all solemnity at the noon hour to the prepared grave. Curious to know the cause of the parade the student body fell in behind and then still more curious to know the cause of the solemn procession, many of the faculty joined with the rest behind the student body. The former staff of the paper were all displaying mourning about their clothes and something remarkable and sorrowful which was very suggestive or sorrowful.

When the grave was reached one of the staff pronounced an eulogy on the deceased and told of its struggles and manifold troubles during the time of its existence. Concluding his remarks the ministerial coffin was lowered with tender hands to the prepared grave and the words spoken as given above.

The Unit has largely in the past depended on the faculty of the university for its support. In the year 1903 it had withdrawn support, for what reasons is not known, and the staff took this method of impressing the faculty with the fact that the Unit was in reality a dead one. Some are of the opinion that the year 1903 was a strong hint to the faculty that they had forgotten the paper's existence and now that it has been so forcibly impressed on them, will at once take steps to revive it, which was very suggestive or sorrowful.

COFFEE WAS IT People Slowly Learn the Facts "All my life I have been such a slave to coffee that the very aroma of it was enough to set my nerves quivering. I kept gradually losing my health, but I used to say 'nonsense,' it doesn't hurt me. Slowly I was forced to admit the truth and the final result was that my whole nervous force was shattered.

"My heart became weak and uncertain in its action and that frightened me. Finally my physician told me, about a year ago, that I must stop drinking coffee or I could never expect to be well again. I was in despair, for I had tried so many times nauseated me. Of course, I thought of Postum, but could hardly bring myself to give up the coffee. Finally I concluded that I owed it to myself to give Postum a trial. So I got a package and carefully followed the directions, and what a delicious, nourishing, rich drink it was. Do you know I found it very easy to shift from the coffee to Postum and not mind the change at all. Almost immediately after I made the change I found myself better and as the days went by I kept on improving. My nerves grew sound and steady, I slept well and felt strong and well balanced all the time. Now I am completely cured, with the old nervousness and sickness all gone. In every way I am well once more." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

It says to give up the drink that acts on some like a poison, for health is the greatest fortune one can have. "There's a reason why I found myself better and as the days went by I kept on improving. My nerves grew sound and steady, I slept well and felt strong and well balanced all the time. Now I am completely cured, with the old nervousness and sickness all gone. In every way I am well once more." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

LABEL GOODS ONLY IN COOPERATIVE STORE HERE

Union Men Will Charter Company and Open Establishment—One-Third of Stock Already Subscribed

Plans are under way and over one-third of the capital stock has already been subscribed for a co-operative store to be established in this city January 1.

The store will be run by the union men of the city. The movement for this store has only been taken up recently and the first official or semi-official announcement was made today, when the subscription rolls had reached the amount stated and assured the ultimate success of the project.

C. W. Woodman, speaking of the matter today, admitted that the store would shortly be put in operation, saying that with the completion of the subscriptions of stock a charter would be applied for, and directors and officers of the company elected.

The store will carry nothing but union label goods and will carry a complete line of these so that there can be no further excuse for violation of the union pledge in this respect.

So far as can be learned none of the trade organizations are officially interested in the new enterprise.

THE CONGRESS IS IN SESSION AT ST. LOUIS

Trans-Mississippi Organization Is Discussing Matters of Interest During Its Session in World's Fair City

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 25.—Eight hundred delegates to the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress assembled today in congress hall on the World's Fair grounds. During the sessions of the congress, which will continue through Saturday, matters of importance to residents of the Trans-Mississippi region will be discussed, such as irrigation, good roads, river navigation and interstate commerce laws.

The meeting was called to order by the chairman of the executive committee, Hon. Thomas Richardson of Portland, Ore. In a short introductory address Mr. Richardson presented the president of the congress, R. C. Kerens of St. Louis, who spoke at some length.

Among those present were leading mine owners, lumbermen, merchants, agriculturalists, railroad magnates and other representatives of the great industries of the region beyond the Mississippi. There were also in attendance from Washington city a number of representatives of the forestry, commerce and labor and other departments of the national government.

The opening proceedings today were largely of a formal nature. The visitors were formally welcomed by President Francis and by the chiefs of the agricultural, forestry and other departments of the World's Fair. There were greetings also on behalf of the state of Missouri and the city of St. Louis. The usual responses and appointment of committees took up the remainder of the initial session. At the subsequent sessions of the congress, which are to continue until the end of the week, there will be papers and discussions dealing with irrigation, rivers, waterways and harbors, isthmian canal, merchant marine, trade with Mexico, preservation of forests, exports and imports through gulf and Pacific ports, encouragement of home manufactures, department of mines and mining, trade with Canada and Alaska, good roads and drainage, sugar industry, etc. The congress will be addressed by a number of persons of wide public prominence.

THE BUSINESS MEN DEMAND GOOD CHARACTER

They Do Not Want to Employ Those Who Get Results Without Making the Proper Explanation

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—That a substantial valuation is placed upon character in the business world has been asserted by J. Henry Tregoe, of Baltimore, former president of the National Association of Credit Men, at the monthly meeting of the local association here today.

"The men with positions to give have abandoned their desire for shrewd men who can obtain good results without good explanations," he said. "Character is a modern commercial asset of rapidly increasing importance.

"The greatest evil the country is facing today is commercialism. There is a rabid, almost insane desire to make money fast. Young men thrown into the large cities without capital, possessed of the ambitions created in a good home, see the swirl of city life and attempt to get into it; to emulate the men of fast

FOR ANGLO-AMERICAN PEACE TREATY CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—To bring about the negotiation of a permanent Anglo-American treaty to provide for the settlement of all differences between the United States and Great Britain, has been the object of an important meeting of the International Arbitration Society of Chicago.

Dr. Edmund J. James, president of the University of Illinois, presided. Judge Jacob M. Dickinson, counsel for the United States in the Alaskan boundary case, proposed the adoption of a platform indicating the precise object of the society, and this was done. The resolution will be sent to the president, the secretary of state and chairman of the senate committee on foreign affairs. It was decided to call a conference at Chicago, later in the year, of representatives of municipalities, commercial, industrial, legal and philanthropic societies, and other organizations to adopt measures to bring about a permanent Anglo-American treaty.
