vain, cruel and deceitful. How do you know that I am her sister? And how did you come to learn my name?" "Lord Derrington told me, and it was told to him by Mr. Ireland."

"Your guardian." Miss Bull tapped her hand on the woodwork of her chair. "He recognized me when I called to see him on that day about the lease. But he promised to hold his tongue."

"He would have done so had he not been startled by meeting Mrs. Ward and recognizing in her the woman who had left the ball with my father."

"And Violet admitted this?" "No. She said that you had left the ball with my father. It was you who wore the blue domino and the holly sprig."

"Oh, I knew him before that. We were six months at Como and saw the general used to talk politics. Mr. Vane was always bringing us books and magazines, and we used to climb Mount Bisbino. What a delightful summer that was! I remember you then," she added, looking at George with interest. · "You were scarcely two years old-a dear, good, fair little fellow. I met you and the nurse sometimes and often carried you."

"Was the nurse's name Eliza Stokes?"

"No. It was-let me see, some Scotch name-Jane Fraser, I think." "Ab! Then Eliza Stokes was not at Como?"

"Yes. That was why I came to this house."

"Did you like her then?"

Miss Bull's eyes flashed. "She was another Violet. I hated her. Oh. how hated her! I found her through my sister mentioning that Lord Derring ton had given her this house, so I came here to board."

"But your sister knows nothing about you. She says you ran away and that it was supposed you were dead."

Miss Bull laughed bitterly. "My sister knows perfectly well that I live here, but it sults her to disown the relationship. It is my wish also, and for that reason I changed my name." "But if you hated Mrs. Jersey"-

"And he told you so at the masked ball?"

"Yes. There was to be a masked ball, and both Violet and I were anxious to go. We made a friend of Eliza, and she got us two blue dominos. That we might recognize one another we each wore a sprig of yellow holly.

My father was supposed to know nothing about the matter, but we told a young Oxford cousin of ours. He met us at the ball and afterward took Violet away. I found Mr. Vane, and we danced together. He did not know me at first, but afterward, when we went into a quiet room, I unmasked. He was vexed at first that I and Violet should come to the ball unattend-

"Did he speak of his first wife-of my mother?"

"Yes. He told me how dearly he had loved her." "Did he say where the marriage was "No." Miss Bull shook her head. "He was struck down on the parade when returning to the ballroom. It must have been after he saw my sister home."

"Do you think Mrs. Ward knows the truth?"

"She might. Perhaps some one followed, and Violet might have been mistaken for some other person. I know there was a married woman in San Remo deeply in love with Mr. Vane"-"What an attractive man he must have been!"

"Oh, he was the handsomest man in the world," cried Miss Bull, with genuine enthusiasm, "and so kind! No wonder Eliza Stokes loved him. But he loved no one but me-no one but me!"

Those who brought the cotton in are members of the Farmers' Union in the vicinity of Azle. They report that the for sale until the public sale takes place, the date of which has not as yet been set by the committee of the Farmers' Union. Those who brought their cotton here to offer it for sale did so with the consent of their local. The farmers needed a little ready cash and as they had figured on realizing it on the sale, which was postponed on account of the recent rains, they planned to sell here today just what was absolutely necessary to raise the little money they needed.

The highest offer which they received during the morning was 9.271/2c, but the selling committee which was organized after the farmers reached here did not think the amount enough and it immediately communicated with Arlington to

Asked as to the extent of the improvements Mr. Haines stated that the capacity of the present powerhouse at Handey would be increased just 50 per cent. this being necessary because of the rapidly increasing business of the company. The new addition to the powerhouse will Therrell and Mrs. Inez Whitley; D. Cowan involve about $60,000 and this with the improvements to be made in the park feet from his property. He has already Mrs. Mary Gilbert; W. R. Brown and will make a total expenditure of at least $100,000. Mr. Haines was not in position to say just what the park improvements would consist of, but that the place would be very much improved for the enjoyment of those who visit that resort during the summer months. The contracts for the new additions to the powerhouse have been let to William the hotel with her trunks. Besides these improvements, it is stated, not by the general manager, however, that the company proposes to double the tracks between Fort Worth and Handley by the opening of the park season next year. This will be a great benefit to the patrons of the company, besides making the travel between the two points much more enjoyable, as a faster schedule can be maintained without the least danger. There has been some talk of late that the Traction company also proposes to erect a summer hotel near the park. This,
