FOSTER'S WEATHER FORECAST

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY W. T. FOSTER

Special to The Telegram. WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent 5 to 9, warm wave 4 to 5, cool wave 7 to 11. Next disturbance will reach Pacific coast about 10, cross west of Rockies by close of 11, great central valleys 12 to 14, eastern states 15. Warm wave will cross west of Rockies about 10, great central valleys 12, eastern states 14. Cool wave will cross west of Rockies about 12, great central valleys 15, eastern states 17. This disturbance will bring one of the warm periods and the week clustering around 15 will average warmer than any other week of the month. Storms will not be severe, frosts and other weather features will not be of great intensity. It will be a typical Indian summer week on most parts of the continent. Fourth disturbance of November will reach Pacific coast about 15, cross west of Rockies by close of 16, great central valleys 17 to 19, eastern states 20. Warm wave will cross west of Rockies about 16, great central valleys 17, eastern states 18. Cool wave will cross west of Rockies about 18, great central valleys 20, eastern states 22. The typical hurricane season is over but this last described disturbance will bring severe storms on the continent not far from 18. Temperature will go to great extremes, high in front of this storm wave and very low following it and remainder of month will average colder than usual. A severe cold wave will reach meridian 90 not far from 20, a little earlier westward and a little later in the eastern states. Rains or snows according to latitude will be unusually heavy from 16 to 22. Immediately following date of this bulletin continental disturbances will become unusually severe and will be followed by a week or ten days of mild Indian summer. In July I published forecasts of eight periods of severe weather disturbances and gave dates near which these disturbances would reach their greatest intensity. Later I gave details. The forecasts were eminently successful, averaging 88 per cent good. A sample of these forecasts was published in August 26 bulletin and perfectly foretold the tropical hurricane and the great continental storms that occurred Oct. 19 to 21. OVATION TO DELMAR NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Major Delmar was tendered an enthusiastic reception by thousands of trotting enthusiasts this afternoon at the speedway, during the Road Drivers' Association's fall brushes. The trotting champion, with E. E. Smathers, his owner, in the wagon, received a huge basket of flowers in commemoration of his winning of the gold cup from Lou Dillon and his lowering the world's trotting record to 2:01 3/4.

CITY NEWS

Boys From Lone Star State Start Off Well With Chicago, But They Toyed With the Northerners But Short Time

SOCIETY OUT IN FORCE

Prominent Texas Folk Were There to Encourage Boys From Austin, But That Did Not Get Goal Kicks or Touchdowns

MARSHALL FIELD, CHICAGO, Nov. 5.—Texas society came to Chicago at the Chicago-Texas game this afternoon. Miss Grace Lanham, the beautiful daughter of Governor and Mrs. Lanham, was the center of attraction in the east bleachers. William H. Prather, president of the University of Texas, attended the game in company with his daughter, Miss Mary Prather. They occupied the box of President Harper in the east bleachers. D. E. Ford of Houston drove a coach party of ten to the contest. In the party were Mr. and Mrs. William Nicholson, Miss Nicholson, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ford, Mrs. M. Perlym, Mrs. F. L. Nelson, Mrs. Nola Pearson Underwood, all of Houston. Another party of young Texans were the guests of Coke Burns, son of Federal Judge Burns of Houston. J. A. Jackson Jr., half back on the 1902 Texas team; Seth Searcy, quarterback on last year's Texas eleven, and one hundred Texas students at the University of Chicago were visiting.

Eleven brawny Texans fought bravely for football honors against Staggs' maroons this afternoon, and went down to bitter defeat. They were no match for the University of Chicago team, which won the game by a score of 45 to 0. Drawn by the glamour of uncertainty, close to 3,000 persons went to the game to see the warriors from the Lone Star State meet for the first time a northern team. At the start of it looked as if the Texans were going to walk away with the game. Householder and Robinson, working together, tore through Chicago's line a few minutes after play began and Robinson got a forty-yard run before he was caught on Chicago's twenty-yard line. The maroons were clearly being outplayed and the rooters sent up frantic shouts of "hold 'em." The Texan spurt was short-lived, however, and when the maroons got steaded down the men from the Lone Star State had no further showing. As usual Eckersall, the maroon's right star, his kicking and punting being a revelation to the Texans. The line up:

Chicago. Positions. Texas. Speik..... left end Jones Tobin..... left tackle Scarborough and Baden..... left guard Marshall Gale and Hill..... center Kindly and Glasscock Terry..... right guard Parrish Watson and Boone..... right tackle. Prendergast Lee Maxwell and Woodhill, Blocher and Kennedy..... right end Ramsdall Eckersall, Maxwell, Magle & Yates quarterback Masterson. Spidelle..... left halfback Robinson Gray, Leason and Francis and Hittcock..... right halfback Watson Bezdek, Walker, Larson, Householder & Detray & Varnell fullback Hendrickson Touchdowns—Eckersall, Parry 2, Spidelle 2, Hittcock, Detray, Boone, Walker. Goals—Parry 5, Spidelle 2, Hittcock 3. Goal from field—Eckersall. Punt—Hackett, West Point. Umpire—Waldbridge, Cornell. Dead line man—Lieutenant Esterbrooke, Fort Sheridan.

PENNSYLVANIA 22, LAFAYETTE 0 PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 5.—The University of Pennsylvania celebrated the resumption of athletic relations with Lafayette after breaking off for six years by trouncing the latter today 22 to 0. Pennsylvania scored her points in the first half, sending most of her second team to play the second half. Lafayette started off like a winner, carrying the ball fifty-five yards before being held for downs. When Pennsylvania secured the ball they ran their opponents off the field, crossing the Lafayette line four times in the first thirty minutes.

KANSAS 24, NOTRE DAME 5 LAWRENCE, Kan., Nov. 5.—Kansas University defeated Notre Dame 24 to 5 this afternoon. The first half was hotly contested, but neither side scored. In the second half Kansas ploughed through the visitor's line with ease.

ILLINOIS 46, OHIO 0 COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 5.—Listless and apparently indifferent as to its fate, the Ohio state eleven met the Illinois boys here this afternoon and went down to defeat, 46 to 0. Only four times during the game was Ohio able to make first downs and from start to end only gained forty yards. Illinois' playing was the exact reverse. Spirit and fire marked every play. Wheeler of Illinois, the negro quarterback, played a star game, as did Rotherg, who made a sensational run of fifty yards for a touchdown. Scory, the freshman find of the O. S. U., played the game for the state.

CASE 22, OHIO MEDICAL 0 CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 5.—Case defeated Ohio Medicals, 22 to 0, this afternoon. The Medicals won the toss and chose the north goal. Orr kicked off forty yards and Farson returned it fifteen yards, where Case held it. Bradford blocked Means' punt and covered the ball. Orr's fifty-yard line. Ripper bucked the ball this distance for a touchdown. Orr falled goal. Six minutes later Baker went through tackle for another touchdown and Orr again falled goal.

NEBRASKA 17, IOWA 0 LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 5.—Iowa's university was no match for Nebraska today, the corn huskers winning handily, 17 to 0. The Hawkeyes touchdowns were of the fluke variety, her right end capturing the ball on a fumble by Nebraska and running 30 yards through a clear field for a touchdown.

HARVARD 6, DARTMOUTH 0 CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 5.—Nearly 35,000 persons saw Dartmouth play Harvard almost to a standstill on Soldiers' field this afternoon. It was the greatest crowd of the season and the contest they witnessed was of the whirlwind order. Both eleven fought like mad bulls and their efforts resulted in a tie of 0 to 0. Dartmouth claims a veritable victory, for she was outweighted man to man. The sturdy New Hampshire men ploughed through the opposing line for gain after gain and circled the ends for great distances. Harvard was out-punted and outplayed and like the game a week ago between Harvard and Pennsylvania, the crimson was sorrowfully weak.

YALE 22, BROWN 0 NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 5.—Brown was defeated this afternoon by Yale, 22 to 0. Brown was strong and played a fine game, but was not able to cope with either Yale's offensive or defensive work. The visitors had with them a slight streak of hard luck, due in part to the poor work of their center in passing back the ball for punts. On one of these attempts alone Yale gained possession of the ball, after Brown had lost thirty-three yards and carried the ball over for the first score. Colter's poor work saved Yale much hard scrimmage and valuable time in gaining the opening score. A feature of the work of the Yale team was the magnificent playing of Tom Shevlin.

SYRACUSE 144, MANHATTAN 0 SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 5.—Syracuse overwhelmed the Manhattan College eleven of New York this afternoon, 144 to 0. Syracuse greatly outplayed the visitors. The score is the largest rolled up by an eastern eleven this season.

PRINCETON 12, WEST POINT 6 WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 5.—The army team went down to defeat today at the hands of Princeton, 12 to 6. It was a hard fought battle from beginning to end. The weather was uncomfortably cold and toward the end of the game a drizzling rain set in. The crowd was the largest ever seen at a football game here. There were several army officers present, among them Lieutenant General Miles and Generals Brooks and Johnson; Governor Murphy of New Jersey and Mrs. Grover Cleveland were also present.

CORNELL 50, LEHIGH 5 ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 5.—After Cornell had scored 50 points against Lehigh in two thirty-minute halves this afternoon and just before time was called, the visitors secured a touchdown against the much surprised Ithacans.

VIRGINIA 5, POLYTECHNIC 0 RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 5.—The University of Virginia and Virginia Polytechnic Institute had their annual football game today in the presence of 7,000 people. Virginia won in the second half, when she scored 5 points to Technic's nothing.

GEORGETOWN 16, N. CAROLINA 0 NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 5.—The husky collegians from Georgetown defeated North Carolina on Lafayette field today, 16 to 0. All the scoring was done in the last half, the teams playing each other to a standstill in the first half. Carolina in the first half, lost their only chance to score.

WITTENBERG 68, MIAMI 0 SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, Nov. 5.—Miami was completely outclassed by Wittenberg today, who beat them 68 to 0.

ANNAPOLIS 20, PENNSYLVANIA 9 ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 5.—The Annapolis midshipmen redeemed themselves from the defeat administered by Swarthmore last Saturday by trouncing Pennsylvania State College, 20 to 9 today. The visitors played a plucky up-hill fight, but were unable to cope with the middies.

CARLISLE 28, URSNUS 0 CARLISLE, Pa., Nov. 5.—The Carlisle Indians rolled up a score of 28 against Ursinus' nothing today. The redskins fumbled carelessly and Ursinus was disappointed in not scoring. The teams had never played each other before. The Indians' goal was never in danger.

ARLINGTON 17, HIGH SCHOOL 0 The team of the Fort Worth high school met defeat at Arlington yesterday afternoon at the hands of the Carlisle Military academy team. The score was 17 to 0 and when the conditions are considered the score does not stand for very much at that. The Fort Worth players upon their return to the city last evening were decidedly out of humor and claimed that the team at Arlington did not give them fair treatment on or off the field. The Fort Worth players claim that the faculty of the school took part in the game with some of the heavy town boys and that they were so far outclassed in weight and older heads that they had no chance from the very start of the game. One of the players of the Fort Worth team was quite badly bruised up in one of the scrimmages and had his knee badly twisted. Several others among the high school players got the worst of the game, but none of the boys would have much to say about the matter last night and seemed to be anxious to keep it from the public.

LOCAL GRIDIRON NOTES

The members of the Fort Worth university team will go to Sherman to play the Austin college team at that place. Coach Mills has the team in the finest kind of shape and is willing to trust to his men and the fates to round out a good drubbing to the Sheremaites. The society game of the Elks and the entire Notes is to be played on next Saturday. Each team is putting in some good practice and expect to make the winning team say when the game is over that the victory was not an easily won affair. Many of the lady friends of the players on both teams are preparing to attend and to assist in cheering to gallant deeds with the pigskin their favorites.

Manager Pease of the Fort Worth university is scouring the state for a team to come here on Thanksgiving day to play the "varsity" team, as the resolution of the Polytechnic faculty has changed the plans for the day.

Since football has been taken from the privileges of sports at Polytechnic college the students have been organizing basket ball, tennis and other games to in a measure take the place of the much-missed game. These other sports are far less harmful and as much pleasure can be gotten from them.

It is asserted by a sculptor that the human foot is becoming smaller. The masculine foot of twenty centuries ago was about twelve inches long. The average man's foot of today is easily fitted with a No. 8 1/2 shoe, which is not more than 10-7-16 inches in length. Tom Watson now favors the public with the announcement that he does not expect to be elected. Certainly not Mr. Watson has only made his campaign in order to assist in the election of Theodore Roosevelt. He has never for one moment expected to be elected.

THE POPULAR SABLE FOX SET

Now is the time when the first chill winds of winter whistle their fore-warnings of the cold days to come that mildiethinks herself of those smart and fascinating little fur effects that usher in the winter season.

After the Imperial Russian sable, which is because of its cost personally fashionable, ermine is perhaps the reigning favorite. Once upon a time this was considered suitable more for evening than for daylight wear.

But there is a very distinct difference in the modes for the two occasions. Those for daytime appearances are wont to be of the plain, severe and untrimmed order. There are the little cravat and scarf effects, and the flat moleskin, gullies of trimming; or with, at the most, a touch or two of white chenille fringe. But for evening wear then the royal ermine is combined with chiffon and lace and ruffles galore; and just as frilly and fluffy an air as can be given to it is quite the correct thing.

In the small furs the petit gris, or gray squirrel, is a holdover from last season that promises to retain some measure of popularity. The styles in this are often touched up with a little ermine or ermine tails; and just this little touch of contrast gives, oh! such a smart effect to this inexpensive pelt. One sees this fur far more often in the dainty little accessory pieces than in the full garment. Indeed, its use for the latter purpose seems to be reserved for automobile wear solely.

Moleskin is another favorite of other days that has come into its own again. This little pelt is so tiny and so delicate that it takes quite an appreciable amount of work to fashion even a simple scarf. All of the patchwork designs work out well in this; and the pointed and overlapping shingle design—just what one sees so often on the roofs of country cottages—is considered smart and pretty in the extreme. Certain it is that this pattern does bring out delightfully all of the high lights and shadings of which this furry pelt is capable. Quite a favored combination—for combinations in furs are still smiled upon—is that of moleskin and ermine. A recent novelty shows a cape stole of the darker fur, with a collar that just covers the throat but does not encroach upon the chin, and a chemisette in ermine. The moleskin is applied in little bias pieces with the V point in the middle; and the plain ends are finished with a thick and deep fringe of gray chenille that exactly reproduces the tint of the gray fur. The muff is similarly fashioned; and the last touch of daintiness is achieved in the chapeau of ermine with a flat moleskin crown; and a long ostrich plume that shades from white in white—comes into a smoky gray is posed flat across the crown, the full curling ends falling on the hair in the back.

Chinchilla is another gray fur that more than holds its own in the passing modes. A good piece of chinchilla is by no means cheap; and the pelts are so tiny and so delicate that their manipulation is in itself quite a matter of some expense. The cheaper grades of this fur show quite a discouraging tendency to go all to pieces very early in their career; and hence, doubtless, its continued vogue. For the small accessories to the outdoor toilette this is much favored; and peleries, stoles, cravats and scarfs generally are made up in the plainest and severest of styles, as well as in the sumptuously gorgeous real laces and chiffon trimmings. Velvets of various tints are a much favored accessory with chinchilla, the soft tones of varying grays blending in delightfully with the novel ombre or shaded pile fabrics.

For what one might term the popular furs the fox pelts lead all the rest. These are quite inexpensive; and some new process of dyeing gives them all of the sable markings. The long-ended, stole broadening to a cape effect over the shoulders is greatly favored in the fox pelts; and a round pillow muff is the usual accompaniment.

THREE FURS IN VOGUE

Dainty Little Concepts In Neck Dressings.

Smart Set In Gray Squirrel.

For the late autumn and early winter days those smart little cravats and neck scarfs in any of the fashionable furs will lend a sufficiently seasonable air to the fall costume. The one illustrated is in the petit gris, as the Parisians call the gray squirrel, and consists of a lapet scarf which ties once around the throat, the ends being cleverly touched up with three little ermine tails. The muff is the familiar flat pouch pattern, with the little pelts running in a bias that meets in the center. No trimming is applied to the muff, the grain and markings of the fur and the bias pattern followed rendering such superfluous.

An Accepted Mode In Ermine.

Those fascinating neck and shoulder pieces find their best expression in ermine, and this season this white and expensive fur is seen with smart trimmings of silk cords and chenille fringes. The collar is a recent addition, this just coming comfortably around the throat, and not expected to reach to the chin. The cape part is pieced out with the addition of spreading scarf ends, that droop below the waist, and are further lengthened out with a cord and ball fringe. The muff is one of the long shapes, narrow at the top and rounding out at the bottom, and is trimmed with white chenille tassels, that fall from the narrowest portion of the top.

The Popular Sable Fox Set.

In popular furs the sable-dyed fox leads all the rest. The long, soft, fluffy fur proves universally becoming, and the range of coloring is such that every type and complexion can be adequately suited. The model illustrated shows one of the latest ideas in this style. The stole has a cape-fitted shoulder portion, the long ends characteristic of this style extend below the waistline, where they are finished each with a full brush tail. The little paws, with realistic claws, appear with the ermine, and the scarf is drawn together with silk cords, each further furnished with a brush tail. The muff is round and displays the sable markings of the fox fur to fascinating advantage.

SMART SET IN GRAY SQUIRREL

Three Furs In Vogue.

The combinations in furs, whereby two or more pelts are used in conjunction, continues remarkably good style. There is a very smart scarf in moleskin in the familiar patchwork pattern, the little pelts being pieced together so that they show all of the light and shade effects possible. The neck portion is shaped somewhat, and the ends are supposed to be knotted loosely around the throat. Just above the gray chenille fringe that forms a finish two little bias lines of ermine are inserted, thus forming the only color relief in the set. The muff is also of the moleskin, the overlapping shingle pattern being followed, and each shingle once being decorated with a tiny rosette. The round turban is in gray chinchilla, and has a long ombre or shaded ostrich plume, running the gamut of coloring from white to a brilliant parrot green, and with a little knot of Lierre lace at the side to soften the effect.

Where Ermine and Moleskin Meet.

There is a new shape in the popular stole this year in which there is a semi-high collar that protects the throat, and a chemisette, usually in some contrasting fur. The model in moleskin and ermine shows the soft gray pelt cleverly arranged in a bias design, the points meeting in the center. This forms the cape and stole proper, and the high collar and chemisette are filled in with ermine. The toque is of the white fur, this forming a border; while the crown is likewise of the fur, relieved with a full ostrich plume that droops its fluffy ends over the hair in the back. The muff is of the moleskin, plain and unrelieved.

In the Soft Gray of Chinchilla.

The soft gray chinchilla retains all of its vogue unabated, this largely, perhaps, because the good pelts are expensive, and the cheaper ones soon grow shabby and fall to pieces. The very chic set illustrated shows a pearl gray velvet toque with draped crown in this fascinating fur, relieved with a white and iridescent green quill. The stole follows the usual lines, being in cape lines over the shoulder and with the usual two long ends in front. These latter are finished with a chinchilla ball fringe, and the flat muff is similarly decorated. No hint of lace or ruffle of ribbon appears on this practical set, which is nevertheless dressy enough for evening wear.

THE DAINTY ACCESSORIES OF THE TOILET.

Speaking of those fascinating and airy trifles which Dame Fashion considers so necessary to the completion of the present-day toilet one is reminded of that famous London beauty of a season or two ago, of which it was said that in dress she was simplicity itself, but an artist in those little fixings that are the light and shade of a toilet. And she was a girl of slender means, too.

This is truly the era of the girl who possesses the knowledge of the needle, as our grandmothers were wont to term the art of sewing. All of those fascinating little trifles, of which the materials in themselves are the reverse of costly, cost such a discouraging amount when purchased all ready to wear in the smart shops, that it is a wonderful temptation to the girl who knows not how to sew to forge ahead and learn the craft without more ado.

For instance, there are those airy little trifles which the dainty Parisienne refers to as her "four de out"—literally, around the neck—which any girl can fashion for herself; by hand, if her time be of no importance, or with the oscillating stitch of the sewing machine, if she be in a hurry. The ready-made ones are all of them fashioned in the latter way, and seem none the worse for it.

The yoke, either round, square or pointed, is really the foundation pattern, and one can vary it to suit the taste. This is best in tulle or satin, and overlaid with the material for the little "fixing." Thus a smart one consists simply of some white gauze ribbon in the two-inch width, to which a fancy inch-wide canvas ribbon, gaily printed in colors, is whipped. The yoke and the long stole ends are simply covered with row upon row of this in ruffles, and the effect is one of billowy lightness.

Another smart and really useful one is in the new style wrap. This is somewhat on cape lines, although the back is shaped just like the middle back of the waist, and the fronts are similar. Over the shoulders the cape design is followed, the whole being cut out in black money-back taffetas and covered with the shirred one-seam crepe de chine—as the new double width is the fascinating weave have come to be known—the sleeve or cape parts over the shoulder hanging to the elbow being entirely of overlapping ruffles. A smart saah passes from the back part, and slipping under little guides, ties in the front with long ends, finished with a heavy jet tassel. This is something which the average girl can readily manage, and a novelty for which the exclusive stores are asking $25 and more.

Those exquisitely dainty jabots that are fashioned with fluffy wrist ruffles to match are an appropriate revival of the Directoire period. Every girl has yards and yards of lace lying by only awaiting an opportunity to take it out again and wear it in some fashionable fad or fixing. These are usually mounted upon either a very sheer batiste or else upon a mousseline de sole. Chiffon is too perishable and has not body enough to make a good foundation. The lace is ruffled along the edge and disposed in cascades for the jabot and the ruffles are simply two or three rows of the shirred edge laid on the foundation and sewn into place.

The smart girl already realizes that with the opportunity to buy that fascinating marabout at the trimming counter—they will usually order it if they have not got it in stock—opens the way for those little affairs of plisse chiffon edged with marabout that cost, oh! so much in Paris, and are simply an open avowal of extravagance for all but the wealthiest on this side of the water. However, buying the marabout, and then edging it with the marabout, the girl with nimble fingers can copy a good motif for about one-fourth of the store's price. Single, double and triple capes, with long stole ends appear in these, and a charming fad has one cape come to a deep point in the center of the back. Little ostrich tips are often used in a dainty and artistic way in those little evening effects, and the ostrich edging makes a charming conjunction with marabout. With a square decolletage to the evening gown there is a growing fancy for the use of the ostrich plume. Three little ones are often posed upon one shoulder, and three somewhat longer ones fall over the suggestion of a sleeve on the other side. Sometimes the entire decolletage will be framed in these fluffy fringes, and then a pompon for the hair, with an upstanding aigrette—this latter invariably in white—makes a charming accompaniment.

Smart Fall Walking Costume.

Crepe lines and good quality flocked tweeds are to be the most fashionable materials for outdoor costumes, and in order that the beauty of the fabric may be displayed to advantage a skirt or bodice will have to be gathered and arranged into full, rich folds. The newest shaped skirt for making up soft fabrics is in four pieces, two fronts and two backs. The upper part of the garment is cut exceptionally wide in order that the material may be arranged in full, rich folds all around. If preferred, the fullness could be arranged in knife-shape pleats over the hips and down the center of the back instead of being gathered into the waistband.

Very little trimming is being used on this winter's skirts, as the material is considered to be sufficiently attractive in itself. Crossway bands of the same are sometimes arranged round the lower part of the skirt at spaced intervals, but the majority of costumes intended for ordinary wear are made perfectly plain in order that they may be elaborated with bought collars or fancy ornaments, for very much is left to individual fancy as regards the decoration of a blouse or of a skirt. Loose-fitting flannel blouses are still very popular for morning wear. The front fullness is generally gathered on to a pointed yoke, the back is quite plain and shaped to the figure, and as all the newest materials are double width the blouse can be fastened at the back. If the material be less than 29 inches wide the opening will have to be in front or the latter can be cut out in two pieces and then joined up the center. A piece of silk embroidery or insertion can be sewn over this seam. All sleeves this fall are fuller, and to obtain the best results the sleeve of the dress material should be puffed out and sewed upon an underlining. However, for an ordinary flannel blouse the fullness can be gathered directly to the band of the cuff.

SHOULD PARENTS INTERFERE IN YOUTHFUL LOVE AFFAIRS?

Perhaps no question, sometime or other in the life of parents whose children have grown into adolescence, has been more warmly debated. It is, perhaps, equally true that no question can be put which will receive such varied answers and with so much feeling behind the replies. The elderly married couple can be safely urged to vote in favor of parental interference in youthful courtships, while, on the other hand, the love-lorn youth is equally relied upon to emphatically deny either the wisdom or the propriety of parental interference in affairs of the heart, and both are said to be correct—not at the same time, manifestly; yet under certain conditions parents are certainly justified in withholding their consent to an engagement, and endeavoring to break off their daughter's attachment, for instance, to an undesirable suitor, while in other cases they would do well to let matters take their course. Furthermore, unless parents are husbands in a love affair in a tactful and discreet manner, with every consideration for their child's feelings, they should certainly refrain from so doing.

Many parents make the mistake of using an authoritative tone when they wish to prevent their daughter marrying a man of whom they do not approve. They seem to demand obedience in such their right as fathers, and they are their daughter marry the man of her choice, in spite of all their objections, they generally refuse to recognize the union in any way and maintain an attitude of antagonism towards the young couple to the end of their days.

On account of this unhappy state of affairs the young lady left home and lived in lodgings for three or four months previous to her marriage. She is now happy and comfortable in the home which her husband has provided for her, but would be happier still if her parents would only become reconciled to the union. But they have never forgiven her, and never pay their daughter a visit, although they live in the same town, not two miles away. But parents sometimes err in the manner in which they interfere in marriage, young people often make a mistake in not seriously considering their advice and accepting it in the spirit in which it is offered. A girl must not consider that her parents are enemies to her happiness because they refuse to consent to her engagement to a man in whom she can see no fault. Parents do not, as a rule, advise a girl against this person or that merely out of spite or direct opposition to her wishes. They do so simply because their experience tells them that their daughter is taking a wrong step. Lovers must remember that parents have seen more of the dark and shady side of life than they have themselves. They have had their share of ups and downs, and their love for their children makes them endeavor that the path of the latter shall be smoother, that the stones over which they themselves stumbled shall be removed, so as to save the young people unpleasantness and regrets in after life.

Judge W. P. McLean Argues

Motion for New Trial in the

Mildred Clifton Case Before

Judge Dunklin

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE

He Presents Reasons Why It

Should Have Been Different

—New Trial for Eiland—Bob

Kennon Case Has Been Affirmed by Court of Appeals

A motion for a new trial in the Mildred Clifton murder case was argued before Judge Irby Dunklin of the Forty-eighth district court Saturday morning. Judge W. P. McLean, appearing for the defendant, County Attorney O. S. Lattimore represented the state's side of the hearing.

In addressing the court, Judge McLean said that his charge was a very lucid and full one except as to the manslaughter feature, which, in his opinion, should have been more explicit, with a full exposition as to the application of manslaughter, and claimed that there was no testimony from any witness to the effect that the defendant was laboring under a passion; that the element of malice was distinctly eliminated from among the party of young men who testified that they were present at the time of the difficulty; that there is objection to the charge, as it relates to manslaughter.

Judge McLean maintained that under the conditions surrounding the killing the offense could be nothing more than negligent homicide, either in the first or second degree, and no higher grade of crime. He said the charge of the trial court was wrong in the abstract, because the passion must be produced by the person who is killed; that if the defendant shot only the frighten any one the jury could not have found her guilty of manslaughter, but of negligent homicide.

The contention in brief of Judge McLean is that the degree of the crime is negligent homicide and not manslaughter, and holds that the court erred in not more fully exploiting the manslaughter feature of the case.

Judge Dunklin gave notice that he would render his opinion later. It will be recalled that Mildred Clifton was found guilty of the killing of Ab Patterson in this city several months ago in front of her place on lower Rusk street and was given a sentence of four years in the penitentiary.

It is more than likely that in case a new hearing is denied in the case it will be carried to the higher courts. The general opinion about the court house, however, is that Judge Dunklin will give the defendant another trial.

THE BOB KENNON CASE

The case of Bob Kennon against the state of Texas, appealed from this county to the court of criminal appeals at Austin, has been affirmed according to information received in this city yesterday by the attorneys for Kennon.

Kennon was tried on the charge of theft of cattle and convicted in the Forty-eighth district court, Judge Irby Dunklin presiding. He was sentenced to the state penitentiary for a term of four years.

The case was taken to the higher court and the decision settles the case. In closing its opinion, the criminal court held that the evidence shows a bold, deliberate taking by the appellant and his two confederates of four head of beef cattle from the pasture of the prosecuting witness, and that there is no semblance of defense offered by the testimony of appellant; therefore, the judgment of the trial court is affirmed.

It was stated Saturday afternoon that the attorneys for Kennon intended to institute habeas corpus proceedings, seeking to have their client released. Up to a late hour no such steps were taken, although they may be next Monday.

This case has been stubbornly fought by the defendant and has been in the district courts many months.

GIVEN A NEW TRIAL

C. E. Eiland, a man possibly 60 years of age, who has been in the county jail some time under a sentence of two years in the penitentiary, was yesterday granted a new hearing by Judge Mike E. Smith of the seventeenth district court, and released on a bond of $500.

The attorneys representing Eiland went before the court yesterday and asked for a new trial, alleging several reasons why their client should be accorded a second hearing, one of which was that the court erred in failing to charge the law of circumstantial evidence.

The defendant lives near Bedford, in this county, and a year ago went to the home of G. E. Phelps and, according to the testimony, fired into the house of Phelps, after which the two men exchanged several shots. No one was injured as a result of the shooting.

A DAMAGE SUIT FILED

James Welch yesterday filed a damage suit against the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad company, asking damages because the wife of the plaintiff was put off a train at Atoka, I. T. The petition of Welch avers that his wife bought a through ticket from Fort Worth to Kansas City in August last; that for some reason unknown to him the conductor of the train compelled her to buy another ticket, thus humiliating his wife and causing her great anguish, mortification, etc., for all of which damages in the sum of $5,000 are asked at the hands of the court.

SEVENTEENTH DISTRICT COURT

The jury in the damage case of R. E. McNulty vs. Swift & Co., returned a verdict awarding judgment for the plaintiff for $15 and as next friend for minor son, Charles, for $50.

Judge M. E. Smith last evening discharged the jury in the damage case of Claude Outland by next friend vs. Armour & Co.

The jury in the damage case of H. DeFee vs. the Cotton Belt railway company was also discharged by Judge Smith.

COURT OF CIVIL APPEALS

In the absence of Chief Justice Conner, who is out of the city, this court reserved most of its usual Saturday opinions until next opinion day.

The following were the proceedings in the court of civil appeals for the second supreme judicial district of Texas at Fort Worth.

Motions submitted: Texas and Pacific railway company vs. Whitaker et al., for

THE reign of the summer girl has passed and the mistress of the chafing dish is now queen of her social world. It is surprising to find how many friends the chafing dish girl has made over the summer. She is neither rich nor pretty. She gains her popularity in a scientific manner. Her science is based upon this discovery: "Feed 'em, and you've got 'em." It applies equally to men and women. Ask the chafing dish girl if it does not.

The chafing dish reception requires no great hall, no lavish display of flowers, china and foliage.

This well-earned popularity is cheap, too, in dollars and cents. The ammunition for the winter campaign costs far less than the accessories of the summer girl's outfit.

This innocent-looking friend catches in not an expensive luxury. Five dollars will purchase a good nickel chafing dish and $5 more will provide a 2 1/2 nickel tray, nickel fork and spoon with bone handles, nickel toaster, glass and an aluminum measuring cup, salt and pepper boxes and measuring spoon. To make an outfit even less expensive, a small pitcher can be substituted for the filler, and a polished wooden spoon and fork for the nickel ones.

A chafing dish is a species of a double boiler. It consists of four parts. The first part is the blazer or the pan in which the cooking is done. This is provided with a long handle. The second is the hot water pan, which corresponds to the lower part of the lower boiler. The third is the frame, and the last part the spirit lamp, provided with an asbestos wick and covered with wire gauze. The flame is regulated by means of metal slides, which open and shut, cutting off or letting on the flame, as it is desired.

The chafing dish should always rest upon a tray. A draught will sometimes cause a dangerous flare.

The filler is convenient when the lamp needs replenishing with alcohol. The hot water pan is the feature of the chafing dish, which is most important. The blazer should be set in the bath before eggs are added to any mixture; also when milk or cream is called for in the recipe, except in the making of a sauce.

To cook with a chafing dish successfully, everything must be ready beforehand and the work done noiselessly and gracefully. Fill the lamp and cover it. Have all seasonings measured out in a cup. Roll the butter into dainty balls, a spoonful in each ball.

Here are two elaborate chafing dish menus that can be served to five persons at a cost of $1.25. Five tablespoons of alcohol will supply heat for

THE ROOT OF THE MATTER

He Cured Himself of Serious Stomach Trouble, by Getting Down to First Principles.

A man of large affairs in one of our prominent eastern cities by too close attention to business, too little exercise and too many club dinners, finally began to pay nature's tax, levied in the form of chronic stomach trouble; the failure of his digestion brought about a nervous instability which made it impossible to apply himself to his daily business and finally deranging the kidneys and heart.

In his own words he says: "I consulted one physician after another and each one seemed to understand my case, but all the same they each failed to bring about the return of my former digestion, appetite and vigor. For two years I went from pillar to post, from one sanitarium to another. I gave up smoking, I quit coffee and even renounced my daily glass or two of beer, but without any marked improvement.

"Friends had often advised me to try a well known proprietary medicine, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and I had often perused the newspaper advertisements of the remedy but never took any stock in advertised medicines nor could believe a fifty-cent patent medicine would touch my case.

"To make a long story short I finally bought a couple of packages at the nearest drug store and took two or three tablets after each meal and occasionally a tablet between meals. I felt a new feeling of nausea or discomfort.

"I was surprised at the end of the first week to note a marked improvement in my appetite and general health and before the two packages were gone I was certain that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets was going to cure completely and they did not disappoint me. I can eat and sleep and enjoy my coffee and cigar and no one would suppose I had ever known the horrors of dyspepsia.

"Out of friendly curiosity I wrote to the proprietors of the remedy asking for information as to what the tablets contained and they replied that the principal ingredients were aseptic pepsin (government test), malt diastase and other natural digestives, which digest food regardless of the condition of the stomach.

"The root of the matter is this, the digestive elements contained in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest the food, give the overworked stomach a chance to recuperate and the nerves and whole system receive the nourishment which can only come from food; stimulants and nerve tonics never give real strength, they give a fictitious strength, invariably followed by reaction. Every drop of blood, every nerve and tissue is manufactured from our daily food, and if you can insure its prompt action and complete digestion by the regular use of so good and wholesome a remedy as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, you will have no need of nerve tonics and sanitariums.

Although Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been in the market only a few years, yet probably every drugstore in the United States, Canada and Great Britain now sells them and considers them the most popular and successful of any preparation for stomach trouble.

STATE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION
The State Library association is called to meet Friday, Nov. 18, at Houston in the Carnegie library building. All clubs that have contributed one dollar to the state library fund are entitled to membership and the delegate to the state federation should also be instructed to attend and represent at the association meeting.

This is important because the proposed law creating a state library commission which means so much to library work of Texas will be fully presented. It will be remembered that at the Fort Worth meeting, last November, the federation pledged itself to make state library work the sole legislative business until this bill was passed.

The officers of the association are William J. Frather of the Texas university, president; Mrs. J. C. Terrell of Fort Worth, first vice president; Benjamin Wyche, librarian of the San Antonio library, second vice president; Albert R. Read of El Paso Carnegie library, treasurer; Phineas L. Windsor, librarian of the State university, secretary.

ST. PAUL'S PIPE ORGAN
The completion of the pipe organ of St. Paul's is interesting to lovers of organ music, for Mrs. Jaccard, who will have charge of the organ for the congregational services, thinks it probable that the famous St. Louis organist and composer Robyn may be secured for the dedicatory services. No organist in America has a larger concert following, a number of our musicians having been his pupils or else have sung some of his famous songs. The Mendelssohn quartet will also be heard on that occasion, if rumor is to be believed.

TO GO TO HOUSTON
A large representation of local club women will go down to Houston for the meeting of the state federation. Not only all the clubs have delegates, but members of federated clubs will go as visitors and lookers on. Mrs. John Harrison is the delegate from the Wednesday club. Mrs. John M. Adams from the 23, Miss Spooners from the Euterpean. The city of Houston is known for its beautiful ideas of hospitality and praises of the Bayou City are already in the air.

MRS. SAUNDERS' HOUSE PARTY
The Fort Worth members of Mrs. Saunders' house party at the Texas building are telling with enthusiasm of the success of the week spent there with Mrs. Saunders. The popularity of the Texas building was proven anew and Mrs. Saunders and her assistants had opportunity of greeting with true Texas hospitality hundreds of callers, many of them from other states.

On Thursday afternoon a song recital was given, the musicians being two of Fort Worth's talented young singers, Miss May Samuels and Miss Cora Drake. For their accompaniment they had Mr. Ludolph of Marshall. This recital was attended by a large crowd, and the appreciation of our local talent was very pronounced.

Mrs. Saunders gave no full-dress receptions during the expedition, but preferred a simpler but none the less effective way of keeping the Texas building and the Texas people in public esteem.

While Texas carried off gold medals and medals of merit of so many different kinds, there will always remain a feeling of regret that something tangible could not, might not, have been awarded to Texas women for their social graces and successes as hostesses during these months. If something of the kind had been possible Fort Worth folks are quite positive Mrs. Saunders would have been adorned by the highest gift of the commissioners.

In all St. Louis papers were notices of the Texas building during the week Fort Worth was represented and Mrs. Saunders as hostess. The Republic and the Post-Dispatch on several occasions had compliments most cordial about the hospitality dispensed there as well as the musical abilities of our charming singers, Miss Samuels and Miss Drake.

Miss Helen Gould was a caller early Monday morning and again in the week returned with members of her party. Senator and Mrs. Fairbanks of Indiana were callers, too, though no doubt with Mrs. Saunders was the most interesting. WEDDINGS IN SOCIETY

KING-STEWART
The marriage of Miss Juni Stewart to Walter King, which took place last Wednesday evening, has been a matter of much gratification to their host of friends as both young people have lived since childhood in this city and love and esteem has been theirs in greatest measure. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents, Judge and

GOLDGRABER-GOLDSTICK
The marriage of Miss Ida Goldstick to Joseph Goldgraber last Sunday was of special interest to several hundred of their friends. The home, where the ceremony was performed, was thronged at an early hour and by 5 o'clock, when Rabbi Joseph Jasen stood in the arched doorway and the nuptial music announced the coming of the bridal party, there was not further standing room in the wedding suite.

The decorations were noticeable for their sumptuous beauty. White chrysanthemums were hung in festoons along the ceiling from all the chandeliers, mingling with generous wreaths of smilax. In the folding doors between the back parlor and the library was an open umbrella formed of white chrysanthemums, and it was under its emblem of beauty that the bride and groom stood during the dual ceremony, for after plighting their troth, according to the Reformed Jewish church, the contract was read by Rabbi Halpern of the Orthodox faith.

The wine glasses and the interchange of rings were eloquently offered and spoken for by Rabbi Jasen and Rabbi Halpern was no less earnest in the service he was called upon to perform.

The prenuptial music was first a song by Mrs. Compton, "All for You," then the European Events Cabled by Our Regular Correspondent, World-Famous Head of House of Somerset

BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET. (Special Cable to The Telegram—Copyright, 1904, by the Hearst News Service.)

LONDON Bureau of The Telegram. LONDON, Nov. 5.—One of the most gifted modern writers, John Oliver Hobbes, has recently been creating much consternation by her attacks upon the unwholesome tendency of current literature.

"Risky, smart, daring as the cherished words of a society as vain as it is shallow and heartless, a society whose god is gold, whose symbol is an evil-smelling motor car, and whose serious occupation is bridge. Cleanse the atmosphere," said the gifted writer, "and the erotic novel will vanish."

But it is chiefly against the literature that falls into the hands of young girls that Mrs. Craigie protests, and her antidote seems almost the strongest that could be devised. "In the way of wholesome literature for young girls," she said, "I would put Fielding into their hands."

"Tom Jones" to be read by girls, yet such is the advice which Mrs. Craigie has put forward. "I would place," she said, "Tom Jones in the hands of every girl on her 15th birthday."

The recommendation has been seriously criticized. "A wave of hysteria," said the author, "is passing over the women of this country now, which is simply appalling in its results. You men who lead busy lives do not know, you can form no idea of it. Where is it going to lead us? To the disaster of all that is beautiful in women and admirable in men."

The wilder our women become, the less vile shall we find our men. It is therefore not merely happiness for the time being which is wrecked by this hysterical wave, but national character is being undermined and a terrible future is being prepared for our children."

Fielding will act as a corrective of the erotic novels which are so ravenously devoured by young women. "There are hundreds of books today which you would find in every drawing room in almost every vicarage. Each is a masterpiece, placed in young girls' hands, and yet they are a thousand times more dangerous than 'Tom Jones' and 'Amelia.' Fielding does not make vice attractive. My experience is that girls find him dull, and all his frankness is a deadly bore with human follies in a large open-hearted, broad-minded, honest way. Jane Austen," said Mrs. Craigie, "and Fanny Burney would not be read by girls nowadays."

Her desire, she said, was to give a broad-minded, honest view of life. She goes so far as to say that she would not allow a young girl to read Thackeray, because he would give her narrow and mean ideas of humanity. "I would rather see her read," she said, "Trollope or Dumas."

Another gifted writer has simultaneously given her views on the same problem. Mrs. Stannard, whose literary name is well known to be John Strange Winter, has written a book which is intended to be read upon, because she has no daughters of her own. "I allow my daughters," said Mrs. Stannard, "to read anything and everything, for my own opinion is that if they are brought up on pure and wholesome lines they will not care for books that are pernicious." She is a free trade advocate in literature.

"Cultivate," she says, "in your children a love for fresh breezes, human books, but never forbid them to read anything. An inevitable result of forbidding a child to read a particular book will be to create a sense of injustice in the unformed mind."

Referring to the present day literature, which has been so severely condemned by Mrs. Craigie, Mrs. Stannard says: "Do not, please, ask me to defend such books; it passes my comprehension why people should write them, but with regard to their injurious effect upon a pure mind I think it is much to be desired that only pure literature should be read."

THE BEST PEACE MAKER. The day of the political hostesses seems to have set, for few of the great ladies of London can be brought up and have, therefore, all the more reason to regret the decease of Lady Tweedmouth, who, during the past years, has been a prominent figure in the liberal party. Lady Tweedmouth was one of a group of brilliant sisters, and she thoroughly understood the duties of a political salon.

She possessed unusual qualities of head and heart, and I have heard one of the great liberal leaders say that she was the best peace maker he had ever known, and, indeed, I do not know any woman in our time who has been more lamented and more missed than this charming and tactful lady.

Her sisters, Lady de Ramsey, Lady Sarah Wilson, Lady Howland, and Lady Wimborne, are all possessed of considerable talent. Lady Wimborne has come forward as the great champion of the Protestant party in the church of England, and even those who disagree with her tenets and methods admit her powers of organization and her enthusiasm. It is said that the young American Duchess of Marlborough is ambitious to take a political lead, and that their great London house, which has just been built, is to be the center of serious society.

OF VALUABLE SERVICE. No woman has given more valuable service to her generation than Miss Isaacs, a well-known private life as Mrs. Bishop, who died last week in her 74th year. As a girl she was remarkable for her inquiring mind, and having a small fortune of her own, when only 22 years of age she started on her travels.

side being a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, she was an honorary member of the Oriental Society. An expert photographer, she was able to illustrate a number of books, and her qualities of courage and endurance have equaled those of our greatest explorers.

"MY RECOLLECTIONS." "My Recollections," by Princess Catherine Radziwill, has just been published. It is a book that has been eagerly awaited. The princess' name has been known to the public for some time, but the volume is destined to prove a disappointment to the curious, who hoped that they might hear details of the story which connected the princess' name with that of Cecil Rhodes.

But discretion has possessed the author, although she constantly alludes to things that she "must not tell," and so writes of czars and kings and politicians. She ends with the death of the Empress Frederick.

The most successful portrait in the book is said to be that of the Empress Elizabeth. It is a picture of a woman, finally balked by the reticence of the writer. She adds, however, a final chapter on Cecil Rhodes, in which she endeavors to give a portrait of that greatest figure of the closing years of the last century. It may be, however, a consolation to those who are disappointed at the author's discretion to know that Princess Radziwill has promised a book dealing exclusively with the career of Mr. Rhodes.

SMETHING SINGULARLY TRAGIC. There is something singularly tragic in the recent death of the Princess of Asturias, not only because there is always a strangely pathetic tragedy in the life of those who are giving life to the world, but because her career had been a strange one.

Queen of Spain for a few months, until the birth of her posthumous brother, she married, in spite of the opposition of the king, a Spanish nobleman in 1870, the Prince Carlos of Bourbon. The marriage was unpopular, as the father of the prince had fought against the reigning dynasty in favor of Don Carlos; but the princess was in love, and determined to marry the man of her choice.

Her first child died in the November of the same year, and the little 3-year-old girl who survives his mother was yesterday, by official decree, appointed heir to the Spanish throne, with the title of the Princess of Asturias.

King George of Spain succeeded to his throne when he was 70 years old. He was remarkable as a brave soldier, who gave prominent help in the defeat of the French.

He received from King William the order "Pour le Merite," the highest military decoration in the gift of the Prussian crown. On retiring from the army he lived the life of a crown prince, who united to his military duty a devotion to music, painting and historical study.

Some years ago the East End of London was startled by the arrival of a poor man from the East End, who was that of poorest city, and whose devotion was unflagging and labor unending. He proved to be the youngest son of the king of Saxony, Prince Max, and a more devoted priest it would be impossible to find. It is interesting to know that he took strong views on the necessity of upholding the temperance cause in England, derived from his knowledge of the working classes, among whom he labored.

THE STANDARD OF NURSING. "What has impressed us most," said a French doctor when visiting the great London hospital in the fact that the enormous institution is supported by voluntary contributions, is the standard of nursing, not only here, but in every hospital that we have visited.

"England seems to be able to attract a higher and better educated class for the work than France, Berlin or Vienna. Our nurses in France were 'volunteers,' who, of course, have now been withdrawn from us. They were gentle and kind to the patients, but they were religious, and that sufficed to make it necessary, in the eyes of the government, for them to be withdrawn."

"We have now to educate a new supply of nurses, and we hope that they may attract the same class that you have. All your English nurses have the air of ladies, most of them are clever, many of them are beautiful. I make you my compliments."

Then proceeds the French doctor: "You seem to me to do much more than most of us for the comfort of the patients. I am not speaking of medical treatment, but in every ward there are fresh flowers, open fires, a few books and newspapers, all the air of bien-etre."

"In Vienna and Berlin the hospitals appear after this to be mere barracks; it is the same everywhere in the great city hospitals as well as in small hospitals, where it is easier."

"How many beds," he asked, "did you say there are in the London hospital?" "Over eight hundred," was the answer. "And supported by voluntary contributions?" he again added. "Mais c'est enorme."

The London hospital is certainly one of the most remarkable buildings of its kind in the world, and the last alterations which have been effected have given 500 more beds, and "the London" today stands as the newest feature of hospital work and development. The operations carried on in this hospital in the Finlay experiment have been in all ways satisfactory, but it is terrible to think that over 500 people are waiting to be treated for the dread disease of lupus, which is making deadly ravages upon them, and that the help that can just come because sufficient lamps can not be obtained to do the work.

At present these lamps are of enormous value, and only a few have been given. The greater number of those in use, however, have been contributed through the generosity of Queen Alexandra, who takes the most practical and deep interest in hospitals and hospital treatment.

BY PAUL VILLIERS. (Special Cable to The Telegram—Copyright, 1904, by the Hearst News Service.)

PARIS Bureau of The Telegram. PARIS, Nov. 5.—The wrath of the descendants of the old vikings in the little kingdom of Denmark is upon the heads of Baron Rothschild of this city and J. Herpont Morgan of New York, and the feelings of the Danes are not less hurt because a Danish born prince, King George of Greece, is to blame.

King George is accused of having disposed of two priceless Gobelins to a Parisian dealer in antiquities, who in turn has sold the one to Baron Rothschild and the other to an English agent who is said to be in the pay of Mr. Morgan, who, as well known, has men whose sole duty it is to look for valuable objects of art for the American financier's wonderful collection.

Some time ago the king of Greece, who, by the way, is one of the smartest business men of Europe, and who has personally invested his large fortune in valuable real estate in Paris, London, New York and Copenhagen, bought a palace in Copenhagen which for years had been the property of the noble family of the Counts de Bernstorff.

The aristocratic descendants of the Counts were financially embarrassed while the king had plenty of cash, so he got the palace for the mere bagatelle of $50,000, and with the palace went hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of art treasures and antique furniture.

The Bernstorffs had from time to time disposed of many valuable objects to dealers, so when the king bought the palace he almost immediately sold a part of the large palace for about as much as he had paid for the whole, and then the valuable Rococo furniture went piece by piece to dealers in this city.

The Danish press protested, but nothing was done and the king kept on selling. Some time ago a visitor missed the famous Gobelins and the whole Danish people nearly went into spasms of fury when it was found out that King George had sold them in this city for $200,000.

A Danish brewer, of immense wealth, has tried to induce Baron Rothschild to sell him the one Gobelin in his possession at his own price, as the brewer would like to present it to the Danish National Museum, but the baron is said to have refused, and if Mr. Morgan really got hold of the other the Danish museum will probably have to do without the Gobelin, unless some patriotic Dane succeeds in stealing them as Pope Nicholas' nose was stolen from the Italian cathedral.

KAISER A FRENCHMAN. A French historian, said to be the same man who recently discovered the pope to be of Polish descent, has proved, at least to his own satisfaction, that the Kaiser is a Frenchman, at least on the French side, and a descendant of the French ducal family of Guise.

Here is how he proves it. Through his mother, Victoria, wife of the late Kaiser Friedrich, the Kaiser descends from Duke Claude of Guise, whose daughter was married to Scotland. Her daughter, Mary, married James VI of Scotland, later known as James I. of England.

A daughter of this royal couple, Elizabeth, married Friedrich, Count of Pfalz. A lineal descendant of the Count became king of England under the name of George II, father of Queen Victoria, grandfater of Empress Friedrich and great-grandfather of the present Kaiser.

Quod erat demonstrandum! The war in the Far East is keeping the people of France in a state of anxiety and suspense. Not only are millions of French money invested in the Russian securities, but the ally of the czar there is no selling in France herself may become involved in war.

The recent firing by Russian men upon the Hull fishermen sent a thrill of horror through our veins, and was wholly imaginary in its origin.

INTERESTING LETTERS. These have just been found some very interesting letters of the late M. Waldeck Rousseau which throw an interesting light upon the gigantic Humboldt swindle.

M. Waldeck Rousseau. It will be remembered was the first man in France to suspect the swindle. He was engaged as advocate against the Humberts on behalf of the creditors of a suicide banker.

It appears that it was by pure chance that his suspicions were aroused, and not by anything in the case. But once suspicious he saw several points which confirmed him in his view.

He gives several instances of how his warnings were either disregarded or disbelieved.

When he became minister his attention was again drawn to the case by an advocate friend, who appeared against the Humberts.

thoughtlessly, and Mr. Meredith's suggestion would make matters even worse. "Personally I believe that it is the duty of the state to put restrictions on the marriage of those classes that might not be able to provide properly for their children."

SALVATION ARMY RECRUITS. Since a few days ago the Salvation Army counts among its recruits an English lady of very high degree, the Countess of Seaford having joined its ranks. The countess, who has founded the London Army Auxiliary League, said the other day to a London journalist who asked her what reasons had prompted her to enlist with General Booth:

"The Auxiliary League was formed for the convenience of persons like myself who are anxious to do all we can to help along this noble work. It is largely composed of people who are sufficiently in sympathy with the army in its efforts of reclaiming drunkards, rescuing the fallen and helping the sinful to give it their prayers, influence and money."

"Personally I am heart and soul with the army and its objects. It is run on very liberal lines and there is no red tape about it. I know a society man who has disguised himself as a tramp and been to many societies and into a casual ward to test the various means of helping the poor, and he says that he is convinced that the best help, the only real help, is given by the Salvation Army. Perhaps you will realize my opinions better when I tell you that I was once a regular member of it. That was when I was in New Zealand several years ago."

"I was not an officer, just a simple ordinary private, and subject to the same discipline as the rest. I used to parade the streets in the ordinary uniform to the music of the army band, sing hymns, speak from the pulpit and in halls and proved so valuable that several hundred of them are being made, and before the end of this month France will possess enough of these arms to offset the difference in numbers of infantry in the German and French armies, especially as the French field artillery is acknowledged to be far superior to the German."

Of course, the French navy is no match to that of Great Britain. The French navy is not so strong as the British, but on the other side, France has a flotilla of submarines which it is thought will counter-balance England's superior number of large vessels.

And thus armed to the teeth, France has been very desirous, praying that war may be averted at a time when the hatred of Germany has not disappeared and when the "entente cordiale" is growing stronger every day.

LONG DISTANCE HORSE RACES. It is to be hoped that we shall have seen the last of those cruel affairs which we still make a pretence of enjoying under the name of long distance horse races, for the recent Bordeaux to Paris race has created such an outcry that there are now very many here who will back up the authorities if they put forever an end to exhibitions of that kind.

The poor beasts had been ridden or driven 400 miles, the winner covering the distance in fifty hours, forty minutes.

The horse that won, Anatole, was harnessed to a sulky and presented a sight after traveling at a rate of sixteen miles an hour, deducting stops, that never before had been seen in the history of the ambitious efforts of the noble animal, and the driver narrowly escaped lynching.

The French people have lost taste for such exhibitions of brutality and far prefer a mild automobile race between useless millionaires, whose sufferings at least are self-inflicted, and who, according to many, are mentally far below that noble and much abused animal, the thoroughbred horse.

There have just been found some very interesting letters of the late M. Waldeck Rousseau which throw an interesting light upon the gigantic Humboldt swindle.

Foreign News Which Interests All America, by Ireland's Most Gifted Author, Seumas Mac Manus

BY SEUMAS MAC MANUS. (Special Cable to The Telegram. Copyright, 1904, by the W. R. Hearst News Service.)

Dublin Bureau of The Telegram. DUBLIN, Nov. 6.—Irishmen follow the Russo-Japanese clashing match with keen interest. Irishmen by nature are always very much alive to the scent of a scrimmage. Curiously, their sympathies are, in this case, on the side of the big fellow and the bully.

This is because England is the devil's ally. Irishmen would back the Japs if he turned against England. But such an opportunity, I suppose, will never arise. But, if by a little shifting of the kaleidoscope, Russia threw herself against England tomorrow, Ireland would choose her side without pausing to find with whom the devil is—and that side would not be England's.

Nine Englishmen out of ten would name this conduct of Ireland's part "treachery." Surprising is the number of people who think that the most plentiful thing among Englishmen is lack of humor. To me an Englishman is the most humorous creature, human or inhuman, on this ball of clay—especially when he gets upon the subject of Ireland's "treachery."

During the recent audacious bit of brigandage in Tibet I was very much amused to find the London editors turn up their eyes in horror at the "paralleled insolence" of Tibetans, "actually having the astounding audacity to attempt to dictate to our troops where they should pitch their camp," and again sickening with disgust at the "civil treatment" of the party of Tibetans, who, discovering brigands within their borders, attacked them.

TO REVISE DICTIONARY. I do not attach much credit to the rumor that Mr. Chamberlain has undertaken to revise the dictionary in accordance with the new needs of an imperial people.

But if he turns to such work as a solace after the general election I expect we shall find "insolence" set down as signifying "lack of respect among foreigners toward the invader of their country." And, "treachery—Attack by foreigners on the invader of their country—if the invader be England." Mr. Chamberlain's new dictionary, if the fates provide it, will make more popular reading than "God's Good Man."

DESERVES A THRASHING. Russia to my mind merits a sound thrashing. The bear has proved himself as over-bearing as ever did the bull. If England has her Ireland as an object lesson of tyranny for the world to shudder at, Russia has her Poland and her Finland.

A god of justice could not will otherwise than that the great tyrant should meet with terrible retribution. She is meeting such today, and the nation is passing through its agony. I should not like Japan to win out in the struggle. Neither can I feel else but grief for the thousands of poor brave Russian peasants that have poured out their life on their country's behalf.

But I think this terrible lesson will be the salutary for the vile autocracy of Russia, as was the Boer war for the jingoes and maffickers of England. Sobriety, reflection and a little added wisdom will result.

WHO WILL INTRODUCE HIM? There's trouble in every house, says the proverb, and some on the street. The particular trouble on the English mind at present is to know who will introduce in parliament Mr. Marks, newly elected M. P. for Kent. Mr. Marks is a man with a past—in the stocks and shares world.

It must not be thought that men with an unfragrant past behind them are unknown in the English parliament. But the unforgivable sin is permitting the law to take cognizance of a history that should be kept between oneself and the devil.

Kenealy, who was counsel for the infamous Tichbourne claimant, was elected to parliament afterward. He entered the house, and as he could not find the usual pair of sponsors, he marched up alone to the table to take the oath. He was refused, and about to be turned out marked "Not Known," when the generous John Bright got upon his feet and said that though he hated not the man, all he respected the member—and introduced him. It gave Kenealy gratification to puncture the dignity of the house by hanging his umbrella on the sacred mare.

CHRIS HEALY BURIED. A notable old journalist, Chris Healy, has just been buried in Dublin. He was more than half a century, and was in the middle of everything that was anything in the political life of the country. During the career of many Irish movements, the fact of his holding a surname in common with a leading Irish politician (Tim Healy) proved very useful to him once.

He was told off to report a great land league meeting down the country, at which Farnell himself was to speak. Chris Healy unfortunately missed the train that would have borne him to his destination in time, but being a man of resource, he did not return to his editor to beg for mercy. He went to Farnell himself, telegraphed an address, patched this wire to Charles Stewart Parnell at the place of meeting: "Intended" going down; unfortunately missed train; going by next train. Please postpone proceedings. Healy."

Farnell, himself, informed the committee that "Tim" Healy was coming by a later train and the meeting must be postponed until his arrival. The committee, overjoyed, were only too glad to accede. When the train was due, Farnell himself, all the other leading speakers with the committee, and bands, both brass and flute, marched to the railway station with flags flying and flutes tooting and drums beating to meet and greet the great parliamentary hampton.

When the train pulled up at the station the deputation ran frenzied up and down the carriages. Parnell seeing Chris Healy stop out, recognized that he was a Dublin reporter who had frequently observed at land league meetings, walked forward to him and said: "I beg your pardon, but did Healy travel by this train? We have held back our meeting awaiting him."

"Yes, Mr. Parnell," the modest reporter replied, "my name's Healy. It was very kind of you, indeed, to await me. For it would have been as much as my situation was worth if I had failed to get your speech."

Parnell was a deadly serious man, but he unexpectedly forgot to be grave this time for once in his life. "Tim" Healy's name is hardly heard nowadays in the Irish political world. He turned his back on politics when politics turned her back on him, and courted the law again. His enemies say, and many of his friends will not disagree, that he now casts covetous eyes on the bench; an indulgent government will be kind enough soon to help him up there. Tim's official organ, the Irish Daily Independent, after turning several political somersaults and turning its readers from it, was on the eve of "dissolving." But just recently it has been capitalized anew and is about to be reorganized as a half-penny daily.

It will take for its model the Harmsworth half-penny papers. Rumor says that Harmsworth himself is at the bottom of the new venture. He has recently been over in Dublin, and the object of his visit was believed to be the reorganization of the Independent.

Foreign News Which Will Interest All America, by Paul Lambeth, the Gifted Writer of London

BY PAUL LAMBETH. (Special Cable to The Telegram—Copyright, 1904, by the Hearst News Service.)

LONDON Bureau of The Telegram. LONDON, Nov. 5.—The Rev. Dr. Free, a prominent clergyman of this city, in a book on the east of London, suggests a new remedy to cure the East-Enders of the vice which they are cursed. "I should like to appeal to His Majesty, King Edward to come down and spend part of every year in the East End. It would be a great encouragement to the people. The palace of Greenwich is just across the river."

"If the king would live there for a while every year and come and walk the streets of Millwall now and then, I am certain it would have a splendid effect upon the East End people."

"Instead of sending missions here I want people to come and live in the East End. Then we could get things done. They would insist on improvements, and they would carry the people along with them."

Years ago men who owned works used to live here. Now they live out of town. The manufacturers in the Isle of Dogs live across the river on the hill at Blackheath. Everybody who can lives away from the East End. Even the school teachers live away, with the result that they do not know the children they have to teach. The East End has become a pariah, and this has put its stamp on his whole character.

He is reckless of the welfare of England. He cares nothing for London. He has no civic interest of any description. He will not move a finger to improve his surroundings. He does not care who rules him, so long as he is left alone. He does not care who looks after his children, so long as he is not bothered about them.

He is not merely indifferent to religion, as some suppose. Indeed, it would be hard to say, always with exceptions, what he is interested in apart from beer."

But we must remember before judging him that the fault lies not so much with him as with society, and society must redeem him.

TEN-YEAR MARRIAGES. Mr. Hall Cahane has joined in the chorus of people who have publicly condemned George Meredith's surprising suggestion of ten-year marriages.

In a speech which the famous novelist made at Douglass the other day he said: "If I did not know that Mr. Meredith had been a great student of human nature for many years I should feel tempted to conclude that he had spent his whole life not in the world, but in a bandbox of cotton-wool."

Soon after Fenimore Dayton became a reporter his city editor sent him to interview James Mountain. That famous financier was then approaching the zenith of his power over Wall street and Lombard street. It had just been announced that he had "absorbed" the Great Eastern and Western Railway system—of course, by methods which have made some men and some newspapers habitually speak of him as "the royal bandit." The city editor had two reasons for sending Dayton—first, because any other man on the staff would walk about for an hour and come back with the report that Mountain had refused to receive him, while Dayton would make an honest effort.

Dayton turned in at the Equitable building and went up to the floor occupied by Mountain, Ranger & Blakehill. He nodded to the attendant at the door of Mountain's own suite of offices, strolled tranquilly down the aisle between several rows of desks at which sat Mountain's personal clerks, and knocked at the glass door on which was printed "Mr. Mountain" in small gilt letters.

"Come!" It was an angry voice—Mountain's at its worst. Dayton opened the door. Mountain glanced up from the mass of papers before him. His red forehead became a network of wrinkles and his scant white eyebrows bristled. "And who are you?" he snarled.

"My name is Dayton—Fenimore Dayton," replied the reporter with a gracefully polite bow. "Mr. Mountain, I believe?"

It was impossible for Mr. Mountain altogether to resist the impulse to bow in return. Dayton's manner was compelling.

"And what the dev—what can I do for you?"

"I'm a reporter from the—"

"What!" roared Mountain, leaping to his feet in a purple, swollen-veined fury. "How dare you enter here?"

"But—why not?" Dayton looked surprised. "No one tried to stop me."

"Impudence!"

"Pardon me—not impudence." Dayton smiled agreeably. "Impudence is unsuccessful audacity. For example, if you had failed to get the Great Eastern and Western, they'd have said you were impudent to try. As it is, men call it audacity. Now, if I'd failed to get here—perhaps—"

Mountain listened with a grim smile. He saw in young Dayton the signs of a quality he especially admired—he couldn't help softening toward him, and he said, "Stand corrected," he said, gruffly. Then he laid his hand on the young man's shoulder and pointed toward the large room. "Do you see those clerks?" he demanded.

"I do," said Dayton.

"There are thirty-seven of them—and that big numbskull at the door makes thirty-eight. I employ those thirty-eight men to save me from—audacity such as yours. Yet here you are—in my private office! How do you explain it?"

Dayton laughed—his laugh was very contagious. "I don't know, I'm sure," he said. "Perhaps if they were the sort of men who could outwit me, they'd be doing my work and I'd be doing theirs."

Mountain's eyes smiled. The longer he looked at Dayton the more he liked it. "Sit down," he said in an ironic tone of mock resignation. "But be quick, and be careful not to irritate me with questions that are audacious. My digestion is poor, and therefore, my temper is not—that it might be."

That is the first recorded story of Dayton's "colossal cheek." Now for the last one—the one since which his "cheek" has been thought of and spoken of and admired and envied, as "Napoleonic daring."

He soon rose to be a notable special correspondent. One winter afternoon at a musicale in the studio of his friend, Brownlee the artist, he met a girl with whom he straightaway fell in love. She was Elsie Grant, the only daughter of Mrs. James Wickford Grant. She had spent most of her life abroad, and her mother was even then negotiating for an Italian prince who thought well of Elsie and also of her large dot. And then Dayton had come—and he was never the man to shy at obstacles.

He beguiled her mother into not seeing what was going on. He made love to her daughter in a straightforward way. To Elsie, who then could think only in terms of the Almanach de Gotha, it seemed the way of a Rudolph of Hapsburg issuing from his barren mountain farm in Switzerland to conquer men with his sword and women with his smile, and to found an empire. When the Grants went abroad in March he succeeded in getting a roving European commission from his newspaper and went in the same steamer. He put the issue squarely before her the day before they landed—he did not speak of love until she had given him the right, not only by encouraging him, but also by making it plain that she passionately wished to hear the words that lay behind his looks and tones. "Don't answer me now," he said. "I don't want you on impulse. You're going down into the country for a week. When you come up to London you will know."

He went on to London and began to cast about for something out of the ordinary to send his paper. In a Times report of a meeting of the Royal Society he found the hint he was seeking. The world-renowned philosopher and scientist, Lord Frampton (Hubert Foss) had addressed the society on "The Destiny of Democracy."

"I'll interview Foss," said he to Ivesh, the London correspondent of his paper. "Everybody in America knows his name. And what he'll say along those lines, will make a lot of talk over there just now."

"But—Ivesh was an Englishman, unused to and abhorrent of American ways—you can't do it, Mr. Dayton. Lord Frampton," with emphasis on the title, "is a very old man—almost 90. He lives as quietly as possible; sees no one. He wouldn't think of interviewing. He's very old fashioned, dislikes even our newspapers. And he's been a sort of recluse all his life."

"No harm in trying," said Dayton. "I'll just drop him a line." In the mail two mornings later came the answer. Dayton opened it in the presence of Ivesh. It was a printed slip which read: "Lord Frampton appreciates your courtesy. He regrets that age and the state of his health make it impossible for him personally to thank you."

"I thought so," said Ivesh, not concealing his delight at Dayton's discomfiture. "He sends that to everybody who tries to intrude upon him." Dayton mechanically turned the printed slip over. "What's this?" he said. There was written in a feeble, cramped hand.

My dear sir—I am lunching at the Athenaeum Club the day after tomorrow (Thursday) and shall be pleased to see you there afterward—at 3.

FRAMPTON Dayton thrust the note into his pocket, concealing his feeling of triumph. "I may cable what he says—if it's worth while. It might make a good feature for them on Sunday." And he went away.

"Well, I had arranged—in case you accepted and your mother wouldn't have it—that we should marry at the American consul general's. He's an old friend of mine and has promised to attend to everything for me. All we have to do is to let him know when we're coming. He's even got an American preacher at hand."

She laughed. "And when did you dare to do this?"

"Yesterday—as soon as I had your telegram. It wasn't daring, was it, to assume that you meant what your telegram implied?"

"Whatever it was or was not, I like it."

"I thought," he continued, "that we would better marry in some way that would leave her a chance to come round quietly afterward."

"Yes—that is better than going to Scotland," said Elsie, reflectively.

Dayton laughed. "And who dared to think out an elopement affair off to Scotland?" he said.

Elsie was still blushing when her mother came in. Dayton invited them to dinner and the theater and Mrs. Grant accepted.

II. At 8 the next morning, as Dayton had finished shaving and was going into his bath, there was a knock at the outer door of his sitting room.

"What is it?" he called.

"A gentleman to see you, sir," came through the door.

"Carpenter," he said to himself. Then to the servant: "Show him up, please. Bring him to the sitting room and tell him I will see him directly."

With this, he unlocked the outer door and went back through the bedroom into his bathroom. Soon he submitted to an interview. I am a very old man and in poor health. I permit no strangers to come near me. But something—perhaps in the note—I don't know—at any rate, I consented to receive this person at my club. He—or some one representing himself to be him—came, and we talked for about two hours. He was most agreeable—most intelligent—but he had been drinking—at least I feared so—I became nervous about the interview. He promised to bring me what he had written last night. As he did not, I came here this morning. I wish to recall the interview. I forbid the publication of a word from me. I shall hold you responsible, sir! It is an outrage! It is scandalous! I shall protest publicly, sir!"

"I have no excuse to offer, sir," said Dayton, humbly. "I can only throw myself on your mercy. But first let me say that your interview is safe—at least it has not been published, and will not be." Then he went on to confess the whole truth, holding back nothing—his love for a young American, the impossibility of keeping both engagements, and the impossibility of breaking either. "And I suppose, sir," he said in conclusion, "that Carpenter slipped away and took several drinks before seeing you and then kept on drinking afterward. In spite of his habits, sir, there isn't a man in the world more competent to get such an interview than Henry Carpenter."

"Hasn't he written on sociology?" inquired Lord Frampton. He had been interrupting Dayton's narrative with a descending series of exclamations, beginning with "Shocking!" and "Depraved!" and "Insolent!" and ending with such milder exclamations as "Most astonishing!" "Extraordinary!" "Surprising!"

"Yes," replied Dayton, eagerly entering the opening, and hurrying on to remind Lord Frampton of the titles and subjects of Carpenter's best known essays.

Lord Frampton was somewhat mollified. He said: "It is a disgraceful trick to play upon an old man, sir—but I've been young myself. You Americans! A wonderful people, sir, but—with a sudden twinkling in his eyes—"will you get the young lady?"

"I think so," said Dayton.

"I don't doubt it, if impudence is as effective with the ladies as it was when I was a young fellow." Lord Frampton chuckled.

"Would you mind if I showed you a photograph of her, sir?" asked Dayton shamelessly, using his bride-to-be as a pacifier of the old man's wrath. He brought the photograph—a fair-haired, clear-eyed girl with a resolute face looking straight out of the picture at you.

"A fine American type," said Lord Frampton. They talked for a few minutes of America, then Lord Frampton suddenly remembered his wrongs and was angry all over again. "I am very old," he said, peevishly. "This will shorten my life. And where, sir, is that associate of yours, this Carpenter?"

"We'll find him," said Dayton, and after he had hastily taken coffee and a roll, they set out for the far end of Pimlico. They found Carpenter's lodgings down a dismal alley in a house which, had it been built of wood instead of stone, would have been obliterated decades before. A pinched New England female face answered the knock at the door, to which the slattern in charge had directed them.

"What do you want?" said she in what is sometimes called the "pie and pickles" voice.

"Where is Mr. Carpenter?"

"That's what I'd like to know," Mrs. Carpenter answered. A few minutes talk made it clear that no news was to be got there. "We'll have to look for him," said Dayton, as if they were sure to find him. And on the way back to the Piccadilly-Strand district he tried to persuade Lord Frampton to go quietly to his club and wait.

here, Carpenter, where's that interview?" and kept on shaking him to prevent his lapsing into the stupor. "Pocket," mumbled Carpenter. "Iss a gran ol'man. Ol' Frampy passed't out hot. Gran ol' man. Frampy—"

"Ha!" Ol' Frampy clutched it, put on his eyeglasses and glanced over the pages. "Yes, this is it. I never expected to see it. Bless me, what a relief!"

Dayton gave Mrs. Carpenter a sovereign, "on account," he said, for lack of any other disguise of the charity, "and when he comes around tell him I want to see him."

Dayton and Lord Frampton hurried away.

"Where shall I set you down, sir?" said Dayton.

Lord Frampton gave the number of a private hotel in Dover street. They drove in silence for ten minutes, then the philosopher chuckled. Dayton glanced at him furtively. He had been devising a plan for approaching the subject of the interview—perhaps he could induce Lord Frampton to give up the note-book. When the old man chuckled again, he ventured to speak: "Will you forgive me, sir?"

"Forgive you, you young rascal? I oughtn't, but—it is certainly very ridiculous—how my friends, my readers all over the world, would laugh if they could know what I've been doing." He chuckled again.

"Then you'll come to the American Consulate on Monday at 10—to the wedding?"

"The spirit of adventure has got into my blood. Yes—I'll be there—if I don't die of the reaction."

"And that interview—"

"There—there! Not a word about that. I'll overlook it—"

"But I mean—it's a great impertinence to ask it—only—"

Lord Frampton turned in the cab and looked at Dayton's calm, earnest face in amazement. "You don't mean, my dear sir, that you are daring to ask me to—no, it's impossible—even you wouldn't dare!"

toddling back.

"Oh!" he said, and took Elsie to one side.

"If there should be—you know," he chuckled—"my name is Hubert, and haven't got any of my own."

Elsie blushed and he almost ran away, his old legs springing with ludicrous affectation of youth.

"How can I thank you?" said Dayton, as he put him in a cab.

"Thank me? How can I thank you! Send the old man heartily. Send the respectable friend of yours to me! Something may be done for him. Good bye! You Americans!"

"MY NAME IS HUBERT, AND I DON'T WANT ANY OF YOUR MONEY."

several New York newspaper men in the lounge. He asked them if they had seen Carpenter. "Just left him," said one. "He was bound for the Criterion." Dayton drove to the Criterion and began a search of the crowded rooms. He soon saw Carpenter wandering about the bar, noting each face as if he were looking for an acquaintance. His clothes, his very expression, proclaimed poverty and failure, and Dayton, knowing his habits, was particularly impressed by the weakness of his chin. But in spite of the air of "hard luck," Carpenter looked the gentleman, the man of superior intelligence. He greeted Dayton effusively, and as soon as the business was disclosed eagerly offered his services.

"There's only one difficulty—will Lord Frampton receive you when he is expecting me?"

"We'll have to take our chances on that," said Carpenter.

"But I never take chances if I can help it. I've been thinking—he doesn't know me and he doesn't know you. Why shouldn't you send in one of my cards—impersonate me?"

Carpenter's face brightened.

"Yes—that is the best plan," continued Dayton. "With your special knowledge you'll do the interview far better than I could. He'll really profit by the deception."

heard the outer door open and the servant showing his caller in. When he had bathed he returned to the bedroom—the portiere was drawn across the door into the sitting room. He could wait no longer. "I say, old man," he shouted, "did you get a good yarn?"

There was a sharp rustling, then silence. He went to the portiere and threw it back and stood in the doorway, his bathrobe half open, his face and neck red from the cold water, his hair tumbled. He was transfixed. Before him, gaping at him, sat an old man, a study in the black of broadcloth and the white of linen and skin, and wool-like hair and side whiskers. His head was wagging, and his mouth ajar as he stared stupidly at Dayton. He raised himself with the aid of a gold-headed cane and put up his eyeglass. "I must apologize to you," he quavered. "I'm so disturbed that I hardly know what I'm about this morning. I fancied I was in the rooms of a Mr. Fenimore Dayton."

"I'm Fenimore Dayton," said Dayton. And then a horrible thought flashed into his mind.

The old man's mouth had flown open again. "What?" he exclaimed. "Impossible!"

Dayton, all the blood in his body in his face, stood there, unable to speak or move. "Great heavens!" he thought, "what shall I do? What has Carpenter been up to?"

Lord Frampton passed his hand over his face. "Impossible!" he muttered. "Incredible!" And again he rubbed his face confusedly. "Tell me!" He looked strangely at Dayton. "Did you not have a talk with me at the Athenaeum Club yesterday in the afternoon?"

Dayton opened his mouth several times before he could articulate: "I did not—that is—"

"Then who was it? Where is he?" Lord Frampton looked angrily around. "I insist upon an explanation, sir!"

Monday Night—Gertrude Ewing Company.
 Tuesday Matinee and Night—Gertrude Ewing Company.
 Wednesday Matinee and Night—Al. G. Field's Minstrels.
 Thursday Night—"A Millionaire Tramp."
 Saturday Night and Matinee—Harry Beresford.

The past week has been a very pleasant one in dramatic affairs. The character of the plays has varied. It opened with "In Old Kentucky," "Black Patti Troubadours" followed, "A Hidden Crime" came next and "Human Hearts" was here Friday. Last night "The Little Homestead" closed the week.
 The Gertrude Ewing Company opens the coming week with three performances. Al. G. Field's Minstrels come next and "A Millionaire Tramp" and Harry Beresford are the others.

SCENE FROM AL G. FIELD'S MINSTREL

AL G. FIELD MINSTRELS
 Doc Quigley, the inimitable dancer of the Al G. Field Greater Minstrels, will appear this season in an act entitled "The Head Waiters." He will be assisted by the entire company and the skit is described as a satire on the impudence, self-consciousness and pomposity of the colored waiter. All the comedians will represent the rank and file of the autocrats of the dining room and Doc Quigley will assume the position of the head waiter. Of course at Greenwall's opera house soon, is claimed to be one of the best comedies on the road. The story of the play deals principally with the troubles and scrapes of the tramp, Jay Pierpont, though through the comedy there is a strain of sadness, the history of a wretched life, a fall from fine raiment to the rags and tatters that proclaim him to be nothing but a tramp, a turn from the association of refined people, drifting with the season. The play is a new one, and said to be thoroughly entertaining from start to finish.

Other countries have their outcasts and vagrants, but none of them have anything like the American tramp. He is an oddity and inimitable in his originality and nerve. The "Millionaire Tramp" is the king bee of them all. He'll hang out at Greenwall's opera house Thursday night, November 19.

HARRY BERESFORD
 Our comedy lovers are advised not to miss the opportunity of seeing Harry Beresford, who is billed to appear on our local stage in the near future in the new and delightful play, "Our New Man." No play of the stage today, it is said, has taxed the faculties of people more strongly than this great fun maker. In the title role Mr. Beresford has scored a complete triumph. With all its absurdities, its ridiculous climaxes, its humorous lines, the play is so clean and wholesome that even the most fastidious need not fear having their enjoyment marred in the slightest degree. The company with which Manager Coleman has surrounded his star is said to be one of the finest on the road, and the play one of the most satisfactorily presented in every way.

Harry Beresford, in "Our New Man," will appear at Greenwall's opera house Saturday matinee and night, November 12.

DRAMATIC NOTES
 Of the many strong scenes that go to

"Peggy from Paris," the musical comedy which was written by George Ade, the famous humorist, and is to be offered here by Henry W. Savage, contains striking and original characters who are delightfully amusing. Among the clever comedy portrayers are those of two animated Frenchmen, M. Homard and M. Folles-Bergere, members of the Franco-American League. These Frenchmen are in quest of Miss Fleurette Carmelle, who is "Peggy from Paris," to whom they wish to deliver an address of welcome. Throughout the piece and almost to the very end they play in pantomime.

"The Village Parson" is a drama constructed on possibilities, these being flaked with the fact that each part seems to have been written for the artist who is engaged to play it, so carefully has the company been selected. The play is considered one of the most powerful and interesting of the present day.

To do well the title role in that sterling old comedy, "Don Caesar de Bazan," is said to be the ambition of every actor who rises above the dead level of mediocrity. And well might it be, for a fellow of most excellent parts is this rollicking, ruined, but altogether lovable Don Caesar, and who can acceptably depict him need make no apology for undertaking in the realm of the legitimate. That Charles B. Hanford has met the test and this will give him an opportunity to introduce a new dance which in point of grotesqueness and difficulty of execution quite surpasses anything this comedian has done in the past.

 Field's Minstrels at Greenwall's opera house Wednesday matinee and night, November 9.
 It was "Uncle Dan" Emmett, with three companions, who sat cross-legged in the saloons on the Bowery more than forty years ago, and gave to the world the humor and the harmony of the semi-circle. Enveloped by rich hangings in variegated colors, and surrounded by frolicsome cupids, over whom 1,000 lights cast their rays, the semi-circle, with its humor and its melody, was again offered to the public.
 So far has Mr. Field progressed in minstrelsy that he has given a title to his first part. It is called "The Evolution of Minstrelsy," and depicts the straying minstrels of Homer's time, and the black faced minstrelmen created by Emmett. Snap and vigor marked the progression of the act.

SUNDAY

Sunday is the dullest day in the week to thousands of persons.

They look forward to it with pleasure and are glad when the day is over.

The average person sleeps late on Sunday morning. That frequently means headache. One rises listlessly and yawns into his clothes. He goes down to a late breakfast. His day has been spoiled before it begins.

After breakfast one starts in to "rest." There is the head of the family who, following breakfast, goes down town or to the postoffice for his mail. It will not do to let business go till Monday. And possibly he stays down town half the day.

At the house every one lounges through the sluggish hours, lolling in disillable. Then comes a heavy Sunday dinner for which one has no appetite. As the proverb says: "The slothful hideth his hand in his bosom; it grieveth him to bring it again to his mouth. After dinner comes a nap that does not refresh. Again the Sunday paper. There is no exercise in the open air. If it is winter sunshine and fresh air are shut out of the rooms.

Then comes ennui. Before the day is over each one is tired of his own laziness. The day has been one of inertness, possibly "blues," or discontent, loss of bodily spring and spirits.

There is a better way, if you will permit the suggestion.

Arise at the usual hour. Breathe deeply of the fresh air before breakfast. Dress and go to church. Walk to the church and back. Take your wife or mother or sister. You will go home to your Sunday dinner with a keen appetite. And when the children come from Sunday school there will be a fresh, glad company about the board. Homes ties will be the more closely knitted.

Do not change Sunday—designed for change and restfulness and God's service—into a lazy day.

OUR LAY SERMON

"That which God hath joined together, let no man put asunder."

This is the language of God's Holy Word, and yet, while men and women are being joined together every day in the name of God, men are kept busy putting them asunder. That looks very much like flying in the face of God does it not?

There certainly ought to be some remedy for this great evil that is assailing our country. There must be some method of impressing young people to look well before they leap into matrimony. There must be some way of smoothing over the difficulties even after they have arisen, and there must be some plan by which men and women can be made to appreciate the sacredness of the marriage ceremony. There must also be a method of discouraging these proceedings by measures which will prevent persons divorced from marrying again. If that was done, the prospect of a long life of celibacy ahead would doubtless cause many to stop and ponder before they sought it.

The ease with which marriage contracts may now be annulled and new ties of the same kind formed, is acting as something of a stimulus in promoting divorces. Conditions should be such that it would operate the other way.

It is a shameful reflection on American manhood that the women they swear to love and provide for, have to appeal to the courts for relief from their mistreatment. It is an equally shameful reflection on American womanhood that it has to undergo the same experience. It is a shame on our lawmakers that divorces are so easy to obtain, and there must be a more healthy sentiment awakened along this line, or our great national disgrace will soon be the talk of the civilized world.

"That which God has joined together, let no man put asunder." Let us cut out the divorce evil and settle down as staid and respectable married folk.

Senator George F. Edmunds of Vermont says: "We have seen this great Christian United States deprive the Filipinos of the liberty that they, by sword and gun, were trying to obtain from Spain, and, against their will, we are seeing the United States endeavor to promote Christianity among the natives of the Philippines. We are seeing the United States dismember a sister republic—Panama—for the sake of a canal. England in its present invasion of Tibet, is almost emulating our example in Panama." That sounds like rank republican treason, but Senator Edmunds has long been a shining light in the republican party.

Those members of the Farmers' Union who have agreed to bring their cotton to Fort Worth for sale will find they have done the proper thing when they sit down and figure on the net result of their action. Fort Worth wants to handle all the cotton that is produced in her trade territory, and for that reason can be depended upon to pay the highest market price.

Two Missouri girls recently desired to walk with the same young man, and agreed to settle the matter of precedence by an appeal to personal combat. For a few minutes the air was full of hair-pulling, mud and striped hose, and then one of the young women proudly walked off, the victor of a hard fought field. When it comes to settling a delicate point of this kind the Missouri girl can always be depended upon to show you.

Herbert W. Bowen who handled the Venezuelan situation so well at the time when complications existed with Germany and England, is said to be slated for appointment as ambassador to Mexico in the event that Roosevelt is elected. If such is the case it means farewell to the cherished ambition of Mr. James G. Lowden of Abilene, who has been toying with the same boom since he received the republican nomination for governor of Texas.

every day of our lives. Many young people marry in haste to repent at leisure, but that is no justification of the laxity of our divorce laws. If a man deliberately throws himself in the path of a rapidly moving train and is killed, we can not attach any blame to the train or its crew. We can and do pity the man for having been led to commit the rash act, but we are powerless to give him any relief from its consequences.

According to the official statistics, there were more than 60,000 divorces granted in the United States every year, and the number is increasing every year. It seems that under our present lax system of granting these legal annullments of the conjugal tie, that the divorce courts are sought on the slightest provocation, decrees obtained, and often the divorced parties are remarried in a very short time. In California a wife sought divorce from her spouse on the ground that he beat her cow. In the city of Chicago another woman cried for legal separation on the ground that her hedge lord had a very bad breath. And so the thing goes, amusing one with the allegations urged, but also creating alarm over the tendency that exists to seek separation on such flimsy pretenses.

These applications for a severance of the ties that bind and gail come from people in every walk of life, from the multi-millionaire to the negro woman who looks after the family laundry. In the upper and middle classes it is perhaps the most prevalent, and it is increasing to such an extent as to have almost assumed the proportions of a national scandal. Husbands tire of the society and charms of the women they have sworn in the presence of Almighty God to love, honor and protect "until death do us part," and wives tire of the attentions of the men they have pledged in the sight of Almighty God to "love, honor and obey," and fly to the divorce court for relief. Nine times out of ten there is nothing in the situation that is intolerable. It is simply an exhibition of petulance, and a desire for change—a morbid desire often, growing out of the unpleasant side of married life.

It is doubtful if there are many perfect unions made in this life, for humanity is far from being perfect. Husbands and wives usually have some little experiences that are not altogether idyllic, and there are displays of temper that are out of place. But it is better to kiss and make up than it is to fly into court and seek a legal separation. There is rarely any kind of crisis that arises in the married life that can not be overcome by a proper effort. There are few situations that can arise between husband and wife that can not be adjusted without appealing to the law. The parties concerned must learn to bear the faults and frailties of the other, and overcome in kindness the propensity to do wrong. It may be that there are conditions hard to get around, but the parties took the chances on that kind of thing when they plighted their troth, and if they have made a hard bed there should be no alternative but to lie upon it. It is of their own making.

There are a few situations that arise in life where a severance of the marital tie seems justifiable. But they are so clothed in tragedy and so wrapped in despair that they fortunately come but seldom. The great state of South Carolina recognizes no legal cause for divorce, and such a thing as that is not possible in that state. To all outward appearances husbands and wives are getting along in that state perhaps better than in others where separation by law is possible. That seems to be a sensible view to take of the situation, and other states should emulate the South Carolina example.

"That which God hath joined together, let no man put asunder."

Tom Watson says he will organize the Jefferson democrats after the election, and as Mr. Bryan is also scheduled to do some reorganizing of the real democracy, it only remains for some genius to undertake the job of making the two constitutional republics publicans. If these little matters can all be satisfactorily arranged the political stunts that are to be four years hence ought to be real interesting.

Trey Woodson, secretary of the national democratic executive committee, says that all the doubtful states will be democratic next Tuesday, and if he would only assure us that all the republican states would be in the event that Roosevelt is elected, the campaign is closed. Pretending to support the democratic ticket, its columns are full of rot predicting the defeat of its party.

American railway builders are compelled to pay $5 a ton for the steel trust for the same while the same article is sold to go to foreign countries at $18 and $20. Mr. J.P. Morgan is the head of the steel trust, and it is no wonder that he is standing pat for a national administration that permits him to thus plunder the American people.

The Kansas City Star says that President Roosevelt firmly punched cattle, and is not yet too old to effectually punch the beef trust. All of which may be true, but the impression prevails that Chairman Cortelyou has done all the punching that has been administered to the beef trust, and it has been of a financial nature.

Pension Commissioner Ware says that pensions are being paid to the American soldiers as a due, and not as a gift. Down in this neck of the woods the impression has prevailed that they were being distributed as a matter of graft, and it would be hard to convince our people to the contrary.

The New York Herald is doing some political stunts these times which clearly indicate it has not yet found a place where it is satisfied to rest until the campaign is closed. Pretending to support the democratic ticket, its columns are full of rot predicting the defeat of its party.

Occasionally I hear a farmer complain of hard times. The last one I heard kicking was a blank sight "righter" than the times and it required about all his strength to keep him from falling off his wagon. In his wagon he had six big, fat, greasy sides of Chicago bacon. I know that man well, and I know that there were enough corns raised on his wood and pasture last year to fatten fifty of the biggest hogs in Texas. Do you wonder that times in this state grow a trifle tight, when a man who lives here hires another man in Missouri or Kansas to raise his meat?—K. Lamity's Harpoon.

Don't blame the poor fellow, for he is a populist and don't know any better. He was not a farmer. He is only a member of the earth, with no mission in life except to cuss the government and howl about hard times, without realizing that men of his type are largely responsible for the conditions of which they complain.

Mr. Cortelyou accomplished, according to law, "a diligent investigation" into the organization, conduct and management of certain great corporations known as the trusts, and they contributed hugely to his campaign fund. Is this the "trust-busting" Mr. Roosevelt promised?—Houston Chronicle.

Certainly. It has been a trust-busting campaign so far as Mr. Cortelyou is concerned. He has tried to put the trusts all out of business by absorbing their surplus for campaign purposes. The new cabinet portfolio was doubtless created for the sole purpose of perpetuating the republican party in power.

Douglass is perhaps better known to the masses than the democratic nominee for the presidency, and all on account of his business advertising. He may not be elected but the returns from his additional advertising will largely exceed what his salary would be as governor.

It has shown that the people of Southwest Texas have a high appreciation of the International fair and that they may be depended on to make it a greater success as the years go by, and it is convincing proof that under more fortuitous circumstances, such as are to be expected in the future, the highest aims of the association may be attained.—San Antonio Express.

The Texas experience with fairs has not been such as to bring much joy to the hearts of the promoters of these enterprises. There is always something that happens to shorten the financial end of these undertakings.

A New England paper is throwing fits because a baby girl was born there recently which weighed seven-teen pounds, and it claims that this is the heaviest birth record in the annals of history. Our New England contemporary should come off Texas, has produced a twenty-two pound baby girl. Great is Texas! Now what do you think? A foreign liar has it that medical history says that a twenty-four pound baby girl was born in some country with an outlandish name, at some time not mentioned. Keeping strictly to the truth, we still yell, Great is Texas! Hunt your hole, New Englander.—Texarkana Courier.

Texas babies are just as big, just as sweet and just as plentiful as in any other state in the union. And the Texas girl baby is so lovable that there is never a time in her life when she is not just about the sweetest ever.

That man in Indiana who locked himself in the studio of a pretty artist whom he had never seen before and after four hours came out with a contract that she would marry him before Thanksgiving day, will get along all right. He was landed in jail for the time being, but it's easy money he'll wind up by marrying the woman, and if she is wise she will investigate his case.—Beaumont Journal.

If she is wise she will have nothing more to do with him. The man who will thus take advantage of a woman and compel her to do things under duress is either a lunatic or something infinitely worse. That kind of wooing might be proper in darkest Africa, but it is out of place in civilized America.

A new form of marriage is practiced by an east Texas justice of the peace. Chairman Andrews can only expect vigorous criticism so long as he attempts to serve two masters. The Southern Pacific railway and Texas democracy can be persuaded to join hands and enter into an amicable community of interests plan.—Fort Worth Telegram.

That remark is as unjust as it is unworthy of such a paper as The Telegram. Chairman Andrews has said that he will allow nothing to come between him and his duty to the democratic party of Texas, and as an honorable man he is entitled to belief. Governor Hogg, who is The Telegram's patron saint, says he believes Mr. Andrews. Can't The Telegram be as fair as its leader? An effort to stir up class prejudices is dangerous to the best interests of the state, and should be discouraged.—San Antonio Express.

Has not Mr. Andrews confessed that he has not been above appearing at Austin in the guise of a lobbyist for his patron company? Is not a man usually judged by the character of the company he keeps? The Telegram has nothing against Mr. Andrews, for personally, he is a fine fellow. But we do contend that his election as chairman of the state democratic executive committee was a great mistake.

El Paso county will have a very quiet election next week. The entire democratic ticket, with one exception will be elected. All indications point to the election of Mr. Sharp, the republican nominee, to the legislature.—El Paso Times.

Down in this part of the state it has been generally believed that El Paso was a democratic county. Why is a republican to be elected to the state legislature from that district?

Suffrage is necessarily governed by law, and if the law is not complied with, then the citizen is deprived of voting until he qualifies by complying with the law, whether the requirement is a poll tax, registration or something else. A man from every standpoint of decency ought to pay his poll tax anyhow. The poll tax is not the price of suffrage, but a duty to the state required by law. The temporary loss of the ballot is merely a penalty for neglecting a duty to the state, and the penalty is imposed until a man purges himself by fulfilling a duty which he owes to his state.—Houston Chronicle.

The man who does not think enough of himself to pay his poll tax, or who has no higher regard for the duties of citizenship than to neglect to do so, is not entitled to exercise the right of suffrage. If the price was prohibitory the situation would be difficult, but it is within the reach of all.

Strange as it may sound, there are Democrats of the dyed-in-the-wool type who are going to vote for the republican candidates for president and vice president, because they believe that a panic is near at hand and they wish the party that brings it about to bear the odium of it. They say they do not wish to see the democratic party handicapped again as it was during Cleveland's administration and be made the scape goat for the sins of the republican party.—Texarkana Courier.

Such men are not democrats, but mag-wumps. They vote according to what they believe is their own personal interest, when the cardinal principle of democracy is the greatest good for the greatest number.

The Yaokum, Texas, canning factory, which was closed down this season on account of the tomato supply being exhausted, reports success beyond expectation. During the season 60,000 cans were put up, amounting to five carloads. This is the first season the factory has been in existence. The truck farmers are enthusiastic and intend to plant greater quantities next year.—Kerens Tribune.

The people of Texas are gradually learning that many of the things they have been accustomed to buy in other states can be produced at home much better and cheaper than the imported article. That is why the canning factories all over the state are proving so successful.

How The Russian-Japanese War Could be Settled

(By Alexander Ular, Editor in Chief of the French Revue de Revues.)

She Cannot Describe Him, But Pounces Upon Eligible Men Whom She Imagines Will Take the Place

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 5.—Kate Miller, middle aged and mannish in her demeanor, whose home is a little smoke-begrimed hut along the Mt. Job road, in Lawrence township, where she has lived alone, except for a cow, several pigs and a flock of chickens, for many years, has been fooled again. She has been a grass widow for fifteen years, but lately decided that Frank Marella, an Italian foreman, was her long-lost husband in disguise. She had him arrested for desertion and non-support. Today he was released on a writ of habeas corpus and brought before Judge Smith, before whom seventeen people swore an alibi for Marella, and the court released him.

The court directed that the plaintiff introduce her evidence of identification, whereupon Mrs. Miller produced a faded photograph of herself and "Andy" Polshnitz, taken on their wedding day. But the picture of her "man" looked no more like Marella than the man in the moon does. Then Judge Smith did some interrogating. In the fifteen years that have elapsed Mrs. Miller forgot just how her husband wore his hair, what sort of mustache he had, and about everything else that might establish a man's individuality.

When Marella and his witnesses were called they proved conclusively that Marella had been in this country only three years, and, therefore, could not have married the woman fifteen years ago.

HORSE RATES REDUCED Notice was received by horse commission men here yesterday from General Freight Agent Sargent of the Texas and Pacific Railroad that a reduction had been made in the rates on horses and mules from Texas points to points in the southern states. This means much to the horse market of Fort Worth, for it gives dealers a rate that puts them on a level with other markets.

The reduction is such that a car of horses or mules can be shipped from Fort Worth to New Orleans or intermediate points at a saving of $20 or more, as against prices now charged.

From Waskom to Shreveport the rate will be made 5 cents per 100 pounds. Heretofore, to ship a car of horses from Waskom to Shreveport, a distance of twenty-one miles, cost $12.50. Under the new rate the charge will be $12.50.

The reduction is effective Sunday, November 6.

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 5.—In one sense of the term the members of the Ringling circus company, people of Austin and visitors now in the city constituted a "mutual admiration society." The almost uncountable throngs of people on the sidewalks watched the magnificent parade as it passed down Congress avenue with profound admiration, and as each chariot, cage and vehicle in the procession passed the gate to the capital campus, the drivers and occupants turned their admiring eyes toward the state house and feasted their eyes on the ground structures as they passed.

Quite a number of the circus people became more demonstrative and doffed their hats and saluted the building thus expressing by gesture their great admiration.

One of the ladies, on horseback waved her handkerchief and kissed her hand, as a means of signifying her appreciation of the great granite building.

A CURIOUS GIRL OPENS LETTERS FOR GOSSIP

JAPANESE REGIMENT AT REST AFTER A SUCCESSFUL DAY'S FIGHT

The Third regiment, Second Japanese army, bivouacking after the fight of Anshanchan. They have reared their small tents for the night, after having driven the Russians out of this position. The constant pressure upon the Japanese soldier in the field is well shown in this picture, for here, even while taking his much-needed rest, he is compelled to sleep with his cartridge belt on and his knapsack at his side. The corn husks seen in the foreground are used to firm the soldiers' bedding.

BRINGING IN THE JAPANESE WOUNDED AT LIAO YANG

Japanese members of the Red Cross corps bringing in the wounded from the Liao-Yang battlefield to the Red Cross hospital at Liao-Yang. The hospital is improvised from the railroad station, and is shown in the background of the picture. The wounded are carried on rude bamboo litters. Writhing in their agony, torn by shot and shell, they were laid in long rows on the floor of the railroad depot until that piece was filled. Then the less seriously injured were placed in tents adjacent.

WATER PURIFIES ITSELF (Dr. Giuseppe Cao, in the Giornale della Reale Societa Italiana d'Igiena, Milan. Translated and condensed for public opinion.) That the water of lakes and rivers even though infected with immense quantities of refuse material, is purified spontaneously and after a certain time is freed from all infection and returns to its pristine condition, is now no longer disputed. What factors cause this purification, what part must be attributed to each, and what is the mechanism of the action of each? The self-purification of water is much more easily accomplished when the foreign matter is broken up into small particles, this being determined by the velocity of the current, the condition of the bed of the river or lake, etc. When the particles are very small the molecular cohesion with the water is all the greater, while the separation of the matter multiplies the surface of contact of the particles with the liquid mass; the surface for the nutrition of bacteria is also increased, these bacteria assuming the office of demolition of the foreign matter. A great number of the bacteria, according to the researches of Kruger and Fryskland, are dragged to the bottom by the precipitation of the solid matter, in this way sedimentation playing an important role in the purification of water.

While it may be admitted that sedimentation is the principal factor in purification in sluggish streams, in a swift current the velocity itself is a purifying agent, carrying away all particles of matter, which could cause infection. Also sunlight and temperature have an important role. It has been seen that bacteria may be destroyed in the water by sunlight, even at a depth of three feet, while temperature has a very important influence, there being much fewer bacteria in the water in the winter than in the summer. Many organisms have an action on bacteria of putrid fermentation, namely, protozoa, molluscs, crustaceans, etc. In the work of destruction plants are also concerned, the cryptogams, the algae, etc. All of these organisms

Pepsin Syrup Company, Chicago, Ill., May 13, 1904. Monticello, Ill. Gentlemen—I wish to express my appreciation of your most valuable remedy, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as I suffered for years with constipation and tried all of the different pills on the market; but a club friend recommended your remedy, which I hesitated at first to take, as I had begun to believe there was no cure for constipation, but I am happy to say that after taking three of the large bottles I am entirely cured, and I heartily indorse Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin to people who are affected as I was. Very truly yours, MRS. EMMA P. DRAKE, 325 Evanston Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

ANYBODY WITH 50 CENTS CAN TEST A BOTTLE. It may take but one bottle, or a half-dozen to cure; it depends upon the nature of the illness. But one bottle usually brings relief. There never was a case of stomach or bowel trouble that was not benefited by the use of DR. CALDWELL'S (Laxative) SYRUP PEPSIN when taken as directed. The "careless hour" is when we neglect to provide for future health. Dr. Caldwell's (Laxative) Syrup Pepsin insures health and comfort for life. For the Baby, Mother, Robust Man and Invalid—The Famous Family Remedy. AT ALL DRUGGISTS—50c. AND $1.00.

A CURIOUS GIRL OPENS LETTERS FOR GOSSIP

She Was the Postmaster and Wanted to See What Was Inside the Mail Which Came to the Office

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Fully 1,000 undelivered letters in the Lincolneville post-office have caused the indictment of Miss Grace L. Decker, the pretty young postmistress.

Lincolneville, while in the city of New York, is practically farther from the center of business than Philadelphia.

Among Lincolneville's citizens are a number of foreigners who eagerly look forward to letters from home. These letters ceased to come and the good folk began to think they had been forgotten.

Inspector Thomas Fuller was sent to Lincolneville. The inspector found, he says, that in every nook and corner of the office letters were tucked away. Some of them had been opened and roughly resealed. Others had been opened and not resealed. An investigation showed that nothing had been taken from a single letter and that the person who had opened them was simply curious and wanted to know the town gossip.

"But soon after I began to take Wine of Cardui I could see that I was beginning to get back my strength." That is the comment Mrs. Seymour makes. If you are sick you can take Wine of Cardui and secure health and strength. If other medicines and other treatment have failed, that will make no difference. Few women have taken Wine of Cardui at first. By far the greater number of Wine of Cardui cures are women who could not secure relief elsewhere. Women who take Wine of Cardui at first have very little to tell of suffering. There is nothing to tell because Wine of Cardui cures them quickly. All druggists sell $1.00 bottles of Wine of Cardui. Nearly all women need also a 25c. package of Theford's Black Draught. No. 48 Straight St., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. I am pleased to endorse Wine of Cardui as I found it so beneficial to restore my strength after my baby was born. I could not seem to get well enough to be up and able to do my work, and as I had been in bed for six weeks this was rather serious, but soon after I began to use Wine of Cardui I could see that I was beginning to get back my strength. In another week I was able to sit up most of the day and in a month I was able to be up and do most of my work. I think it is splendid medicine for a woman and can certainly give it highest praise. Mrs. M. Seymour, 48 Straight St., Grand Rapids, Mich. Treasurer, Woman's Industrial League.

Pain in the Head Is a danger signal, warning you that the brain nerves are exhausted—irritated, and are undergoing an unnatural strain. Frequent and prolonged attacks of pain weaken the generative power of the nerve cells of the brain, and lead to loss of memory, melancholy, spasms, epilepsy, and frequently insanity. When the brain nerves are weakened they are unable to supply sufficient nerve force to the nerves that control the lungs, heart, stomach and other organs, and these organs are thus robbed of energy, and unable to meet the demands upon them, and they get sick. Stop the head pains with Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, and the influence upon your general health will be greater than you can realize. "I want to tell you how thankful I am for Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. From a child I have been subject to such headaches, and never found any lasting relief until I received a sample of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills while in Geneva, six years ago. By taking one I usually throw off my pain, so I can go about my home duties." MRS. ALMA GATES, R. F. D. No. 4, Geneva, Ohio. Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that your first package will benefit. If it fails he will return your money. 25 doses, 25 cents. Never sold in bulk. We could publish several hundred such letters:

Parents wishing to give their boys and girls a business education would do well to place them with the Nelson and Draughon Business College. This school is patronized by the best people of Fort Worth and of the south. Respectfully, Thos. J. Powell, Mayor.

Any one wishing a business education I gladly refer them to the Nelson and Draughon Business College, corner Sixth and Main streets, Fort Worth, as being the best institution for a young man to obtain a business education. R. F. Milam, County Judge Tarrant County.

I can honestly say that I believe that the Nelson and Draughon Business College has no superior and but few equals in the south. Wishing you the success you merit, I am, very truly yours, C. C. Manly, Bookkeeper for Swift Packing Co.

Fort Worth, Texas, Sept. 20, 1904.—Prof. J. W. Draughon, President Nelson and Draughon Business College: Dear Sir—After examining your "Practical Accountant and Commercial Law," it gives me great pleasure to state that it is the clearest, most concise and most logical delineation of bookkeeping I have ever seen.

I feel called upon to confess that until I read your book I was of the opinion that a course of bookkeeping in a business college did not fit a person to fill a position as an accountant in the business world, same being based on the idea that practice and not theory is the sole requirement; but I am now thoroughly convinced to "Commercial Education." No man with even ordinary intelligence could fall as a bookkeeper after he has mastered the system contained in your valuable book.

Wishing you unbounded success, I am, yours very respectfully,

Jno. E. Homan

Secretary Texas Anchor Fence Co.

$5 hundred and thirty-seven million bushels of wheat is our average wheat crop, one-fifth the whole world's output—enough wheat, made into bread, to provide one and one-third loaves for every inhabitant of the United States daily for a year; enough wheat, made into loaves a foot long, to girdle the earth.

THE "HILL" CROWD The young "Hill" crowd enjoyed a party with Miss Phoebe Connell Friday evening and had a lot of fun guessing the contents of the bag that was passed among them. The bag was just an ordinary shopping bag and what the article was had to be learned from feeling it through the material. Miss Emma Beggs got a box of candy and another box went to Sidney Harrison for guessing best what the bag contained. Those present were Misses Emma Beggs, Allie Bell Browne, Nellie Vickery, Mary Trigg, Helen Cowan, Mabel Shelton, Goldie King and Florence Bell; Edine Harrison, Herbert Wellington, Avery Hudson, Walter Connell, Allen Connell, Giles Connell, Watt Reynolds, Dan Trigg and Sanford Webb.

MRS. SAM HENDERSON Everybody is envying Mrs. Sam Henderson her charming guest from Sherman, Miss Andrews, and in order that a few of her friends might share the pleasure of meeting her she had them out for an all-day party, giving them the delectable luncheon at 1 o'clock and then setting them around whist tables for the afternoon.

There were no contests at luncheon and no prizes for the games but a happy day a treat for everybody, hostess, guest of honor and home girls. Those present were Misses Edrington, Binyon, Latimer, Lucille and Bess White, Mesdames Craddock, Allison, J. M. Collins and Henry Williams.

THE SANS PARIEL The Sans Pariel would not be the popular club if it is if the members were not alive to the value of fun. Last Friday evening they gave their second "tacky" party, and next year they have one that is laughed about yet. The Friday night wedding march; violin, Miss Hattie Weltman, and piano, Mrs. H. Brann. Of the bride's party, the first to enter the rooms were the maid of honor, Miss Isabel Goldstein of Dallas, and M. Goldstick, the bride's brother. Following them were the bride's uncle and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Rosen. Then came the groom and the bride's mother. The two flower children, Alma Gordon and Ephraim Rosen, preceded the bride and her father.

After the ceremony and congratulations the company were invited to the home of Mr. Rosen, where the wedding banquet was served, and a banquet it was most truly, the tables, at which 500 guests were seated, being loaded with every delicacy that could be asked for.

Mr. Goldstick read the dozens of telegrams that poured in from every quarter of the country, Dallas, Beaumont, Houston, New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Chester, Pa., Chicago, Duluth, Minn., Syracuse, N. Y., St. Louis, Minneapolis and other points.

Then came the speeches, H. Gernsbacher acting as toastmaster, and responses being made by Hahn Jansen, Messrs. Simon and Arthur Brann.

While the bride was preparing for the journey north music was furnished by several of the guests. Mrs. Brann, Mrs. Compton and Miss Weltman rendered musical selections, as Mr. and Mrs. Goldgraber left for the station.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of white embroidered chiffon over taffeta, with plissé shirring for foot finishing and a bertha of Honiton and bodice decoration. The veil was fastened with lilies of the valley and the bridal bouquet was of long-stemmed white roses.

The young ladies of the house party were Mesdames Blanche Friedman, Essie Freefield, Dora Sturman, Dora Levy, Hattie Weltman and Ray Goldstein of Dallas. These received the guests at the door and exercised charming care for everybody during the evening.

The presents filled the upper floor of the home and were extremely handsome. The Jewish Women's Council sent a silver loving cup in token of their appreciation of the bride's generous donation of her great musical gifts to their service whenever called upon.

Mr. and Mrs. Goldgraber will spend their honeymoon in St. Louis, and upon their return will be at home at 313 Henderson street.

MISS HORTENSE MARTIN Miss Hortense Martin gave a welcome luncheon Friday that was almost as sweet as the flowers, the guests and the hostess. Carnations were used as place favors and bouquets, as well as for dining-room and table decorations. Seven courses were served to Misses Lucille and Bess White, Allie Laner, Edrington, Newlin, James of Texarkana, Bess Ellis, Edwina Crittenden and Bess McLean.

DAUGHTERS OF REVOLUTION The local chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, held the largest meeting of the season Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Warren V. Galbreath. Every room of the reception suite showed the taste of this gifted hostess and daughter, and the guests knew not which to first praise, the welcome extended in this first large entertainment by the Mary Isham Keith chapter or the beauty and taste of the home wherein it was held. The Dutch dining-room especially delighted as did the reception room, where the American flag and other evidence of patriotism challenged every loyal daughter for a token of appreciation.

The receiving line was composed of Mrs. Galbreath, Mrs. W. T. Scott, the local regent, and Mrs. Sallie Polk Hyman, the vice regent.

Others in the house party, distributed in the hall, dining-room and tea-room, were Mesdames Charles W. Childress, Crenshaw, E. D. Capps, A. J. Roe, R. W. Flournoy, Silas King, Matlock, Bostick, Kane, Dickinson, Flato, Roberts, Andrews, George Bennett, Dorr Cobb, W. H. Cobb, Robert Harris, Misses Edrington, Bostick and Beall. Mrs. Cobb and Miss Beall held the ribbons that formed a red, white and blue division between the parlor and the dining-room. The dining-table had over it as chief decoration a liberty bell of white tulle, the famous crack being represented by a band of red ribbon. The bell was lined with red, white and blue flowers. Mrs. Roe and Mrs. Bennett turned the tea.
