General Stoessel Has Permission From the Czar to Capitulate Rather Than Allow Massacre in the Streets

CHINESE REPORT IT SO

Say the Three Letters From Besieged Fortress Were With an Idea That Czar Would Grant Him Leave to Honorably Surrender

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Advice from Chefoo reports that according to inside information obtained by influential Chinese, General Stoessel, commanding the Port Arthur garrison, has received conditional permission from the czar to surrender in the last extremity.

The report, which appears to emanate from a fairly reliable source, is that the czar has granted a strong and significant side light upon a phase of the siege which has hitherto attracted little attention. The three letters sent by General Stoessel, in which he announced that Port Arthur would be his grave, two of which were addressed to the czar and one to a high Russian official, have frequently raised the question as to the wisdom of a course which would lead to the annihilation, not in open battle, but in street carnage, of a large body of brave men, who, having done their utmost to win a lost cause, are deserving of a better fate. In explanation of General Stoessel's frequent assertions that he and his men would rather die than capitulate, the Chinese report states that the three letters were sent by the commander for the express purpose of eliciting from the czar an indication at least if not openly granting permission to surrender when it becomes absolutely certain that the alternative of surrendering or being cut down in the streets was inevitable. The Chinese report asserts that the czar after waiting nearly three months, hoping against hope that success might reach the fortress before it was too late, has now informed the commander that after the last stand outside of the main fortress, surrender will no longer be considered dishonorable by him. The Chinese informant insists that this source of news is absolutely dependable and that the capitulation is now only a matter of days, pending upon the time when the Japanese decide to make the final move.

PREDICTS THE FALL

HOBOKEN, N. J., Nov. 12.—The stars positively predict the fall of Port Arthur on the 16th or 17th inst. Great storms, cold waves, frost and snowfall will occur in the United States on these dates as well.

REFUSES TO ACCEPT IT

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 12.—King Oscar refuses to accept the resignation of Von Lagerheim, minister of foreign affairs. His majesty is playing a strong hand against the disunionist agitation. Private donations to the Gotoborobus famine fund in this city amount to $5,000 kroner ($17,420).

TREATY APPROVED

PARIS, Nov. 12.—The Anglo-French colonial treaty was ratified by the Chamber of Deputies by a vote of 443 to 105. Previous to taking the vote a resolution condemning the treaty was passed, approving the course of Foreign Minister Delcasse.

TWO DUELS FOUGHT FOLLOWING INSULT

PARIS, Nov. 12.—Two duels growing out of the assault on War Minister Andre by Deputy Gabriel Deyton in the chamber of deputies November 4, were fought today. Lieutenant Andre, son of the minister, met Count Delarochetoul, a deputy. Swords were used and Lieutenant Andre was slightly wounded. Elsewhere in the suburb of M. Deyton fought Captain Calte, representing General Andre. Two shots with pistols were exchanged but neither combatant was injured.

COUSIN OF FAIRBANKS

DENISON, Texas, Nov. 12.—Colonel J. J. Fairbanks, immigration agent of the United States, is cousin to Vice President-elect Fairbanks. Colonel Fairbanks will be a candidate for postmaster of this city. He has a strong pull with State Chairman Cecil Lyon.

RANKS ARE REINFORCED

ROME, Nov. 12.—The military publishes a dispatch from Mukden stating that the gaps in the Russian army south of Mukden have been filled with reinforcements and that over 200,000 conscripts will be engaged in the next battle. The paper also publishes a rumor to the effect that a setena of Cossacks have been cut off and massacred by Chuchuses.

THIS MAN SAYS HE SAW A BATTLE

BERLIN, Nov. 12.—It is ridiculous to assert that no Japanese torpedo boats attacked the Russian fleet, writes from Tangier, a German wireless telegraph engineer who witnessed what he styled a "battle" between the North Sea on board the Russian Volunteer fleet steamer Oriol. "The day before the attack," he says, "two balloons were seen and when the squadron met the Russian steamer it was found that the torpedo boats were prepared to attack. When the Kamschatka signaled that torpedo boats had attacked the Oriol steamed to its assistance and in company with ten torpedo boats, steered against the squadron. They could only be beaten off when two had been sunk. "This and other stories have so perplexed the German public that it begins to think some foundation must exist for the Russian version.

PARIS, Nov. 12.—At the Japanese ministry here, the Hague peace circular is discussed in a manner widely differing from the reception accorded it at the Russian embassy. Dr. Moseno, the Japanese minister, is cheerful over the prospects for the idea. He sees nothing inconsistent in Japan's sending delegates to the conference while the war is still raging. The Russian embassy, on the other hand, is silent and adverse to indicate its opinion of the message in any way until it hears news from St. Petersburg.

INDIANAPOLIS

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 12.—K. V. Millard, who is now making his home in this city, has been for several years studying the archeology of Egypt. For the last year until his return to this country he was engaged in making excavations at various places on the Nile, especially at Gizeh, in the neighborhood of the great pyramid of Cheops.

NO MORE SPEECHES BY THE "CRAZY COUNT"

BERLIN, Nov. 12.—The career of Count Puckler, the anti-Semite agitator, as a public speaker came to an abrupt end yesterday when the police informed him that he would not be permitted to make another address. The count says he will carry the matter to the court. The action of the police is based upon expert opinion to the effect that the count is of unsound mind. Hence his appearance as a public speaker is construed as a danger to the state.

TSING TAU, Nov. 12.—The British steamer Thaler of the Douglas line has been purchased by Germans, residents of Tsing Tau, and has been given a German register. She is now here loading for Port Arthur.

FIRE DEPARTMENT OFFICERS

ABILENE, Texas, Nov. 12.—The Abilene fire department elected the following officers at the regular meeting last night: Morgan Weaver, president; T. W. Bloodsee, vice president; D. B. Jacks, secretary-treasurer; J. J. Clinton, chief; D. Miller, first assistant chief; Joe Millapp, second assistant chief; Rev. L. A. Schu-born, chaplain; W. D. Littler, surgeon.

CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—Fire broke out about 11:30 tonight in the clothing store of Browning, King & Co., one of the largest and most ready-made clothing firms in Chicago and owning branches in several other cities.

At this hour (midnight) the fire has run through most of the six-story building and is threatening the immense stores of Montgomery Ward & Co., which is near the burning building. The Browning-King store is stocked with goods from top to bottom and the loss doubtless will exceed $100,000.

TRAINS COLLIDE

Fast Mail on the Oregon Short Line Meets a Freight Train and Locomotives Are Completely Demolished

SEVERAL ARE KILLED

Death List Will Be Eighteen When Final Count Is Taken and Others Will Be Crippled for Life—Passengers and Train Crew Fight Fire

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Nov. 12.—The wreck on the Oregon Short Line branch the Union Pacific at Azusa, six miles to the east of Granger, Wyo., early this morning, in which westbound passenger No. 3, known as the fast mail, and an eastbound freight met in a head-on collision, is the most disastrous that has ever occurred on any road in Wyoming.

At least a dozen lost their lives, four more are missing and are probably dead, and a half dozen more dangerously injured, while more than a dozen suffered bruises.

The first reports of the calamity which told of the death of four or five men and the injury of as many more were bad, but when details began to come to light the people of the state were horror-stricken at the awful loss of life and destruction of property. The following is a list of the dead:

- JAMES FREW, Hooper, Utah.
- CHARLES MCNEIL, private, company K, Thirteenth United States cavalry, New York to the Philippines.
- B. TUCKER, Hunterstown, Ind.
- WILLIAM COMSTOCK, Bloomington, Neb., fireman of the fast mail.
- ROY CHAMBERLAIN, Evanston, Wyo., chief secretary to Senator Clark.
- M. SHERMAN, Cheyenne, Wyo., railway mail clerk.
- S. S. EPPERSON, Green River, Wyo., car repairer.
- WILLIAM MURRAY, Evanston, Wyo., engineer of the fast mail.
- JOHN REDMOND, Evanston, Wyo., conductor of the freight.
- BENJ. ECCLES, Evanston, Wyo., engineer of the freight.

Two trainmen and four or five passengers are reported missing. They are believed to be under the wreckage, which is piled thirty feet high. The list of those who were seriously injured follows:

- J. P. Winstock, Cheyenne, express messenger, arm crushed, will probably die before morning.
- John Stagg, Evanston, Wyo., fireman of the freight, body crushed and legs mangled; can not recover.
- Frank Nolan, Cheyenne, Wyo., mail clerk, head and chest crushed and ear torn off; has an even chance.
- Fred Wilson, Kansas City, Mo., hips crushed; will probably die.
- Emmet Wilcoxon, Shelby, Iowa, arms mashed.
- Theodore Ellis, Missouri Valley, Iowa, head burned.

Conservative estimates place the fatalities that will result at eighteen, but no less than ten will be crippled for life if they recover. The collision occurred between No. 3, the westbound fast mail, and the eastbound freight train. No. 3 had orders to run an hour and thirty minutes late and was bowling along at the rate of forty-five miles an hour, when rounding a sharp curve at the foot of the hill the headlight of the freight shot like a flash into sight. There was no time for the engine crews to jump or even to apply the air, for almost before the human mind could think the two big masses of steel and iron crashed together with an awful impact. The huge locomotives were literally ground to shapeless masses of scrap, burying the engine crews under their weight in a twinkling. The telescoped mail and baggage car, coach and several refrigerator cars piled on top of the demolished engines and the whole pile soon caught fire.

The passengers were mostly asleep and totally unconscious of their great danger until the crash came. They were thrown from their seats and berths and buried under the wreckage. They were thrown into a panic and the cries of the

GENERAL KUROKI'S REPORTED TO BE DEAD FROM WOUNDS

General Kuroki, reported dead, was the first of Japan's great military commanders to take the field. He commanded the Japanese army with a famous fighter, his recent exploits had added lustre to a great reputation. He was 61 years of age and was born in the province of Satsuma. He springs from a warrior class and was trained for the army from infancy. During the Jap-Chinese war he led one of the divisions that took Wei-Hai-Wel after a brilliant battle.

YALE WINS IT

Bulldogs Prove Too Much for the Tigers and Great Game Goes Down in History to the Credit of New Haven Boys

IT WAS A CLEAN CONTEST

Best of Feeling Prevails Between Historic Rivals Who Have Been Fighting It Out on the Gridiron for the Past Thirty Years

PRINCETON, N. J.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 12.—Yale won the annual match with Princeton on Osborne field this afternoon by the decisive score of 22 to 0. The defeat was a sad disappointment to Princeton's die-hard loyal supporters, who journeyed back to their alma mater to see the Tiger down the Bull Dog, as was expected after the Orange and Black victory over West Point.

Old graduates began to arrive early Friday morning and every train thereafter brought contributions of Princeton supporters, while pretty girls and their chaperones began to throng the campus early this morning. The stands began to fill by 12:30 o'clock this afternoon and a steady line was passing the gates until 3 o'clock. It was a pretty sight. Yale occupied the west stand and the mammoth east stand was filled with Princeton adherents. Neither brought a hand to the field. Yale entered first and was greeted with prolonged cheers by the New Haven contingent and short cheers from the Princeton stand. The courtesy was returned on the appearance of the Tigers soon afterward.

The teams ran through their signals for a few minutes and the punters limbered up. Captain Fouke won the toss and chose the south end. At the beginning of the game it looked as though Princeton were having her own way and the Tiger stands were uproarious. The tide soon changed, however. The ball was sea-sawed up and down until Yale got to Princeton's forty-two yard line and went over the line by plunging, mostly outside standard and bloomer. The game was not spectacular like that at New Haven last year. There was no Dewitt to make magic runs and kick scores. Henry Davis yet did wonderful end work and Princeton sorely missed them. Miller's long punts were repeatedly run back for good recoveries by Shellin. Neal consistently overtook the ball. Crawford nailed the runner almost invariably within fifteen feet of where the punt was caught. The right of the teams were pretty evenly matched. Bloomer, Hogan, Stannard and Cooney fighting along for an even game in both defense and offense. Bloomer was the greatest ground gainer for Yale, while Leavenworth also advanced the ball effectively for short runs, his brilliant run of thirty-five yards culminating in Yale's first score. Leavenworth scored the second touchdown.

MAN HUNT CONTINUES

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Nov. 12.—Ed Jackson, slayer of Sheriff Daniels of Fayette county, together with his two brothers, all desperate outlaws, are tonight still at large. Citizens of Montgomery and vicinity, four to five hundred strong, are still vigilant and today, notwithstanding there has been an incessant rainfall, these determined natives have been traversing the mountain region hoping to get sight of the Jacksons and make them answer for the heinous crime committed at Montgomery on Thursday.

SALVAGE COMPANY TO BE LOCATED HERE

AUSTIN, Nov. 12.—The American Salvage company of Fort Worth was chartered today; capital stock $20,000. E. L. Bowman, John Laughlin and Al Neiman, incorporators.

Mr. Neiman will make his headquarters in this city assuming charge of the southwestern business of the company, which also operates in other sections of the country.

The company will carry on sales for establishments, taking entire charge of their stores and stocks during that time. Mr. Neiman has already conducted a number of most successful sales in this state.

SPELLING AS WAS LEARNED BY SPOONTS

Local Attorney Discusses the Methods of His Boyhood Days, at the Teachers' Institute This Morning

The teachers of the Fort Worth public schools and the parents of many of the students attended the institute held in the high school yesterday morning. Previous to the opening of the grade meeting was held from 9 to 10 o'clock and then followed the meeting in the chapel.
The program, as published in Friday's Telegram, was carried out with slight variation. After a roll call of the teachers and the reading of the minutes of the last monthly meeting a vocal solo by W. J. Estes was heard. The gentleman has a rich clear voice and so captivated those present that he was compelled to respond to an encore.

CURED CONSUMPTION
Mrs. B. W. Evans, Clearwater, Kan., writes: "My husband lay sick for three months. The doctors said that he had quick consumption. We procured a bottle of Ballard's Horehound Syrup, and it cured him. That was six years ago. Since then we have always kept a bottle in the house. We can not do without it. For coughs and colds it has no equal." 25c, 50c, $1.00. Sold by H. T. Pangburn & Co.

Following the singer, Colonel Isaac Brown, the noted naturalist on birds and bees delivered an interesting talk which was instructive to all. Most of those present had no idea that birds and bees were such interesting little creatures, but had to admit that they certainly were by the time Colonel Brown concluded his short talk.
One of the most beautiful parts of the exercises was the singing by a number of little girls from the Sixth ward school under the direction of Miss Evans, the instructor in music for all the schools. The children ranging in age from six to eight years, sang two songs, "One Bright Autumn Day" and "The Life of a Wax Doll." The singing was greatly appreciated and was an apt illustration of the merits of teaching singing in the public schools.
Several enjoyable talks were made on trips to the World's Fair and what had been seen while there. These were followed by a talk on "Old Fashioned Spelling" by M. A. Spoonst, who in his school days did not have the advantages that the present generation is enjoying in educational facilities, but who, nevertheless, is still inclined to believe that the old style of teaching spelling is the proper way. He didn't hesitate to tell those present and showed them how he and the children of his boyhood days had learned their A B C's.
Mr. Spoonst told of the daily spelling school and the pride a boy or girl was entitled to have, if they were able to outstep the rest of the school. He said that the way all the studies were taught today was on the plan for continual studying and not as in the early days when a person had but a few months to attend school in all the years of their lives. The system of today would not be the kind to develop a Lincoln or a Clay.
Taking the time when he was first introduced to the alphabet and showing the progress and style of teaching spelling in the earlier days, Mr. Spoonst made an interesting talk. He told how they were taught to spell from the book and then by heart. How they were taught to pronounce the words by spelling syllable after syllable until the words had been completed and then pronounced as a whole. He further stated that when the classes were lined up along the walls and the spelling contests took place it was to many the most pleasant time of all school life. To be at the head of the class and to win the prize at the end of the month was an inspiration for the pupils to strive. They studied spelling at home and in the school room with a vim, but now the pleasures of the school room have disappeared for the football field baseball. There is no longer any desire of the students to excel in spelling and in many cases in the other studies. In those days spelling gave all a desire to excel, but according to the gentleman that time has really passed away.

The speaker deplored the fact that not more attention was given to this very useful and mind developing study and wished the present system of studying could be taken back again to the time when he was a boy. He wished the boys and girls could again be taught to be interested in spelling as they were in this time and the present system of schooling could be changed, as the present system is one of crowded schools, short hours, and rushed work, where in the long run the children do not have as substantial a basis for the better development of the mind, as formerly. Mr. Spoonst told of the old blue back speller and the hours he would spend in school and how he, like all the rest of the old time students, would work hard to secure the coveted monthly prize. The talk was one of more than usual interest and pleased all.
Superintendent Hogz commented on the talk and showed why such conditions could not prevail at the present time in a few brief remarks.
The meeting was closed with an instrumental solo on the piano by Miss Bibb.
Those not of the teaching force of the public schools of the city who attended the meeting pronounced it of more than usual interest and will make it a point to attend the next monthly meeting.

THE COUNTY TEACHERS
The county teachers' institute held in the rooms of the county clerk yesterday afternoon was not very largely attended by teachers from the county precincts. This was explained by Superintendent Moore from the fact that many of the teachers in the rural districts were compelled to hold school Saturday because they had dismissed school on Tuesday in order that the election might be held in the school building. Another reason for the small attendance was the cool weather. However, those who were on hand enjoyed a good meeting and a number of important subjects were discussed.
George D. Ramsey and several members of the institute discussed the topic, "Regulation and Influence a Trustee Should Bear to the School."
"Current Events" was the subject discussed by W. A. Barr of Birdville, while J. I. Greves of Kennedale spoke on the subject of "Colonial Literature."
O. S. Lattimore was down on the program for an address, but being detained at Waco on legal business his number was dispensed with.
The next meeting will be held at Arlington, and will be a joint one with the teachers of this and Dallas counties. The date will be December 10—Friday and Saturday.
Superintendent Moore stated that the program for this joint meeting will be arranged soon and he expects to see one of the largest gatherings of teachers in the history of this and Dallas counties. He says that an effort is to be made to induce several of the leading educators in the state to be at the Arlington meeting.

IN THE COURTS

An important will case came up yesterday in the court of civil appeals and was by Associate Justice Ocie Speer reversed and remanded.
The style of the case was A. J. Scoggin vs. S. P. Hardwicke et al., and was appealed from the district court of Taylor county.
On December 20, 1902, S. P. Hardwicke and wife filed in the county court of Taylor county their application for the probate of an instrument purporting to be the will and testament of Mrs. Louesa Merrill, wife of the deceased A. J. Scoggin. The will reads as follows:
"In the name of God, Amen! I write this my last will. I will to H. M. Maskev fifteen hundred dollars and two of my W. E. Rayner notes and my J. L. Haskew note. All the rest of my notes and my land and everything else I own I will to Mrs. M. C. Hardwicke for her own use. I want S. P. Hardwicke to attend to this when I am dead. But he must charge nothing. I write and will this my last will."
"MRS. LOUESA MERRILL."
The brother and sister of Mrs. Merrill, who are heirs-at-law of the deceased, contested the application of defendants in error upon a sworn plea charging that the instrument above was not genuine, that Mrs. Louesa Merrill did not write said purported will or any part of it; that she did not sign the instrument, and that it was not written or signed by any one for her or at her request or knowledge or consent.
The case was tried in both the county and district courts of Taylor county, and judgment was entered admitting the will to probate as the last will and testament of Mrs. Louesa Merrill, deceased.
A. J. Scoggin appealed to the court of civil appeals, which held that certain testimony going to show that the deceased had penned her own will was not admissible, and that the testimony was too indefinite and uncertain as to bear on the matter upon the issue of testamentary intention.
The amount involved in the above case is about $40,000.

THE EAVES CASE
A motion was filed in the district court Saturday by attorneys for W. R. Eaves, asking the court to suspend sentence and set aside the verdict and judgment rendered on October 21, and grant a new trial on the following grounds:
Because of offense for which the defendant stands indicted in this court and upon which he was tried, committed and sentenced, if an offense at all, is an offense against the statutes of the United States and within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States district court of the Northern district of Texas, and not within the jurisdiction of this court. For the reason that the evidence showed on the trial of this cause in this court that at the time of the alleged offense the defendant was the assistant cashier of the Citizens' National bank at Arlington, Texas, an institution doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the United States, that if any of the property alleged in the indictment to have been embezzled by the defendant, was in fact embezzled, the same was the property of the said Citizens' National bank, an offense directly under the laws of the United States and punishable by article 5209 of the revised statutes of the United States, which brings the offense, if any, within the exclusive jurisdiction of the courts of the United States.

FORTY-EIGHTH DISTRICT COURT
The debt case of Domic Dow et al. vs. Jibron Naggar, which had been on trial Friday and Saturday, was concluded late last evening.
PROBATE MATTERS
The application for guardianship in the estate of Robert Platt, minor, was granted and David Platt was made guardian, with bond in the sum of $2,500.
J. H. Dickey was made guardian in the Nellie Dickey estate.
The will of James Mooney was admitted to probate. Mrs. Margaret Mooney was named as executrix, with a $2,000 bond.
Application to sell real estate in the estate of Z. M. Smith was granted.

MARRIAGE LICENSES
The following marriage licenses were issued by county clerk Saturday:
Charles E. Wall and Miss R. Kukill; Fred Hilber and Miss Cora Coke; Max King and Miss Cora Jordan; W. C. McPherson and Miss Eula Kelly.
VITAL STATISTICS
The following births were reported to the county clerk Saturday:
To Mr. and Mrs. Pat Doyle of North Fort Worth, a girl; to Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Melton of Glenwood, a boy.
Deaths—Mrs. Rush Matthews Ratliff, aged 27 years, of Fort Worth, November 9, of consumption.

ABOUT THE SHERIFF'S OFFICE
Sheriff John T. Honea has gone to Greenville after Alvarado Red, wanted here on a charge of burglary.
Deputy Sheriff Marcum left Saturday for Moore county to take charge of a prisoner and escort him to Fort Worth, where he will be turned over to Penitentiary Agent Luther.
City Marshal Douglass of Arlington brought a negro to Fort Worth Saturday and jailed him. He is charged with boarding a freight car.
A NEGRO ARRESTED
George Goodlow, a negro, was arrested for burglarizing a room at the Worth hotel Saturday and lodged in jail. The arrest was made by Police Officer George. The negro was taken before Justice of the Peace Rowland, where he waived examination and his bond set at $750.
NAOMAH COUNCIL
At the tea given by Naomah council, Degree of Pocahontas, last week a commission was received from the great council, making Mrs. Sarah A. Hoyt one of the local members, a deputy grand sachem. The adoption of Mrs. Belle Parks of Denison into the council also marked the meeting, which was well attended and marked by much enthusiasm.

MAGNIFICENT HOTEL FOR THE DRUNKARDS
(Special Cable to The Telegram—Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)
KIEFF, Nov. 12.—This city has become a real paradise for drunkards through the charity of the merchant Vassili Levadoff, himself a reformed drunkard, who has built a magnificent hotel for tipplers and who employs ten men to go about the streets day and night and drive to the unique hotel all whom they find intoxicated.
Here the toppers are given comfortable beds, a Russian bath and an appropriate breakfast when they sober up. Drunkenness in Russia has increased at an alarming rate since the war broke out, especially in the provincial capitals.
On Sundays and holidays the police stations are so full of persons found helpless in the streets from drink that separate quarters have had to be hired.
In Saratop an enormous building has been opened for giving a night's shelter to persons who are too drunk* to find their way home or to give their addresses to the police.

THE TEXAS BAPTISTS ELECT BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Report on the Liquor Question Is Submitted and Recommends an Unrelenting Fight on the Traffic

WACO, Texas, Nov. 12.—Today was a busy one in the Baptist general convention of Texas. The board of directors was elected as follows: D. J. Smythe, of Grandview, C. F. Greenwood of Hillsboro, C. C. Slaughter, C. H. Briggs, A. W. Hall, J. F. Boone and George W. McDaniel of Dallas, L. R. Scarborough of Abilene, B. F. Riley of Houston, J. W. Stephens of Austin, B. H. Dement, Jeff D. Ray of Waco, E. E. King of McKinney, W. A. Scales of Mount Pleasant, George M. McCall of Beaumont, O. J. Hair of San Antonio, John T. Wofford of Cuero, B. F. Jenkins of Greenville, W. S. Splawn of Bonham, O. S. Lattimore of Fort Worth, O. J. Watts and J. B. Riddle of Honey Grove, W. P. Pledgar of Henderson, W. A. Poole of Mansfield, R. T. Hanks of Stamford, W. E. Hudson of San Marcos, Giles Carroll of Fort Worth, Dr. A. S. Montgomery of Tyler.

RAILROAD NEWS

Beginning with tonight the Santa Fe will start from Fort Worth to Galveston and return two sleepers from trains Nos. 17 and 18. The sleeper service will be the first on these trains for the season and they are to be of the standard Pullman pattern.

J. H. Young, the third trick dispatcher of the Rio Grande division of the Texas and Pacific, resumed his duties last night after an absence of three weeks at the World's Fair and in Illinois.

Restlessness still continued in the Frisco and the vice president of the system next fell victim to the curse of Cain and started for Chicago.

Even his exodus, however, would not satisfy the voracious appetite of the gods and another vice president was demanded as a sacrifice. Volunteers were called for and Vice President Pickering of the Rock Island was offered in the pyre with due libations going the Amarillo route to the Windy City.

Local railroad scientists readily explain the present situation. The lode stone of the north, drawing the mariner's compass always in the same direction, they declare is now being rivaled by a railroad magnet (not magnetic) which, with still more irresistible force, is drawing the brains and sinews of the Texas roads in the same direction as the compass drawer. This lode stone has been dubbed by modern rail scientists a cattle hearing, and Judge Cowan is explained to have been the first to feel the effects of the drawing power, in turn becoming imbued with the drawing power and dragging after him the other particles as a piece of iron drawn to the magnet assumes to itself the properties of the original and draws in its train a retinue of close followers.

FEW EQUIPMENT LOSSES While many of the local roads suffered heavily from the recent flood conditions, causing treasury depressions that caused wrinkles, nearly all the roads have escaped so far this year with exceedingly light equipment losses and losses from injuries to other companies rolling stock upon local lines.

BEST LINIMENT ON EARTH Heat D. Baldwin, superintendent city water works, Shullsburg, Wis., writes: 'I have tried many kinds of liniment, but I have never received much benefit until I used Ballard's Snow Liniment for rheumatism and pains. I think it the best liniment on earth.' 25c, 50c, $1.00. Sold by H. T. Pangburn & Co.

from the company insuring such property. As the regulation provides for the payment of losses as low as $100, the fact that no claims for reimbursement upon the part of the insurance companies shows accurately the practical freedom from loss. This is attributed largely to the high efficiency of the men engaged in handling freight in this section and also to the stringent regulations regarding tramps and hoboes.

CHEAP RATES AUTHORIZED The Rock Island will sell cheap rate tickets to Dallas November 21, for Thanksgiving festival, and November 25 on account of Ben Hur.

HOMESEEEKERS' EXCURSIONS Announcement is made that purchasers of homeseekers' excursion tickets to Texas from northern and eastern territory will be allowed stopovers in both directions within final limit.

PAY TO ORDER Treasurer A. R. Howard of the International and Great Northern Railway Company has issued a circular to the effect that hereafter pay checks of the company are to be made payable to order, instead of bearer.

NOTES AND PERSONALS Trainmaster Sebre of the Rock Island was in Dallas yesterday investigating a slight freight accident.

THANKSGIVING DAY LOCAL TEAM TO PLAY BALL

Fort Worth University and the Elks Will Have a Try at Gridiron Honors on the Day of Season's Close

The game of the year will be played Thanksgiving day between the Elks Giants the best of the city football teams, and the Fort Worth University. The Elks are showing a development and team spirit never before noticed among the club teams, while the University has by a wonderful combination of pluck and brains taken rank as one of the formidable teams of the state. Neither team has been scored on more than once, even though beaten.

TEXAS 40, OKLAHOMA 10
AUSTIN, Nov. 12.—Texas defeated Oklahoma this afternoon on "varsity gridiron" in a rather tame game by the score of 40 to 10. During which Texas players rarely figured on the defensive. Those who witnessed the contest are of the opinion that Texas should have prevented the visitors from scoring even one touchdown. The visitors were a fairly good team, but were outclassed by the "varsity" and played uphill from the start. The first half shows five touchdowns and two goals. Oklahoma scored its ten in this half and Texas landed 17. The balance of the Texas score were made in the second half. A fair-sized crowd witnessed the contest.

MICHIGAN 22, CHICAGO 12
ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 12.—Outweighed many pounds to the player and inferior in condition, the university of Chicago football eleven went down to defeat before the onslaughts of the mighty force of Yost in the game that virtually settled the western championship this afternoon. Stubbornly and gallantly the Maroons fought against the overwhelming odds, but all to little avail, the final score standing 22 to 12. The contest was a magnificent struggle to watch and though Michigan always seemed to have the better of it, the Chicago boys stayed with them to the end. Michigan could rarely burst their way to a touchdown and when holding against gains from their opponents they were almost equally invincible. Yet they were made to know that an effort had been gone through every time Chicago was bettered in any way.

While Chicago was using several substitutes after a short time of play, Michigan kept going with the line-up remaining with which they faced the maroons upon the first whistle. Not a single substitute was called until within the three minutes within the end of the play, which in itself speaks volumes as to the condition of the team. The feature playing of both eleven was strong team work and without prominent individual plays except in one instance in the latter part of the first half when the spectacular maroon player Eckersall made a remarkable punt. He booted the ball clear over the heads of several and the ball rolled over the Michigan goal line a punt of ninety yards. This seemed to imbue the Chicago players with invincible enthusiasm, for a tie and they tore Michigan's line into shreds while it lasted. Michigan rooters yelled "Hold them," before the maroons utilized the latter gathered its shattered line and did hold them.

SEAWANEE 18, TULANE 0
NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 12.—Over 2,000 people witnessed Seawanee defeat Tulane in one of the fastest games ever seen here by a score of 18 to 0. Neither side scored in the first half, but in the second Seawanee surprised the spectators by a series of lightning plays and scored their eighteen points before time was called. In the first half Seawanee kicked off to Tulane's ten-yard line. Tulane then drove the ball eighty-two yards, losing then on downs on Seawanee's eighteen-yard line. This and the consistent playing of Seawanee were the features.

OHIO MEDICS 6, WASHINGTON 6
COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 12.—At Nell Park the Ohio Medical eleven surprised Washington and Jefferson University this afternoon and the home roster, also by a score of 6 to 6. The honors were almost evenly divided in offensive work. At the beginning of the second half the score was 6 to 0 in favor of Washington and Jefferson. The "Doctors" began rooting frantically and the Tigers made a punt that landed the ball behind the goal posts.

OSBERLIN 4, OHIO STATE 2
OSBERLIN, Ohio, Nov. 12.—Osberlin wrestled the state inter-collegiate championship from the rivals—the Carlisle Indians—a crushing defeat, winning by a score of 18 to 0. It was feared that the Indians would cross the line, but it was never in danger. Only once was the ball within ten yards of the goal line, and then Shelby punt it to midfield, cutting off all hope of a score by the redskins. Ten minutes after play started Pennsylvania got the ball in midfield and by straight line plunging carried it down the field until Lamson was pushed over for a touchdown. Reynolds kicked the goal. An exchange of punts gained Pennsylvania possession of the ball on the 55-yard line and ten minutes later it was quickly advanced again. A 15-yard run by Stevenson and a 25-yard sprint by Reynolds carried it within a yard of the goal line and Zeitler was shoved through center for a touchdown. Reynolds again kicked the goal. The same pair made a similar play in the second half and made possible the third touchdown, Lamson carrying the ball over the line and Reynolds booted the ball. A thousand students with a sprinkling of Indian maids cheered the Indians.

KANSAS DEFEATS WASHINGTON
ST. LOUIS, Nov. 12.—Kansas university defeated Washington university this afternoon in a hard fought game in the stadium. Both touchdowns were earned mostly by good line bucking. In the second half much punting was done by both sides. Fowler kicked the goal on the 50-yard line by use of Kansas, the hard goal by Pooler and the fine work of Donald, left tackle.

COLUMBIA 12, CORNELL 6
NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Columbia wound up her football season today with a victory over Cornell at American League park, the score being 12 to 6. During the first half neither side scored and the play of both teams was poor, particularly in the kicking department. At the season's end Columbia outplayed the up-state team, while Cornell was surprisingly weak. The game altogether was almost devoid of features. In the second half Thorp scored the first point by securing a touchdown on a fumble by Bird, but Metzenbich failed to kick a goal. By clever rushes through tackle, Halliday made a touchdown for Cornell a few minutes later and kicked a goal. This gave the visitors the lead for the balance of the game. Cornell scored two points on a safety. Later on Duell was pushed over for a touchdown and Metzenbich again failed to kick a goal. This left the score 12 to 6 in Columbia's favor. The game ended with the ball on Cornell's 25-yard line.

TIGERS WIN GUNSHOOT
PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 12.—The Tigers won the inter-collegiate gun shoot here today by a score of 81, with Harvard close behind with 19. The best Stutsman of Princeton made the bird individual score, breaking 44 out of a possible 50. Because of a high wind no large scores were made.

HARVARD 28, HOLY CROSS 5
CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 12.—Harvard won over the crippled Holy Cross in the Stadium today 28 to 5. The victory was foregone and is no particular surprise to the crimson. The best man Holy Cross had were all on the injured list, while Harvard played her best team in all but two respects. Holy Cross despite her crippled condition, won a 25 yard run by Sperry in the second half, and in the second half the season to do the trick. Several times she held the crimson for downs and ploughed through the Harvard line for gain after gain and circled the ends for 25 yards at a time. Both teams were frequently penalized for off side play. Harvard being the chief offender. On a fumble by Sperry in mid-field, McManus, of Holy Cross, recovered the ball and dashed down the field for a touchdown, but Reed was unable to kick the goal.

WESLEYAN 13, TRINITY 6
HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 12.—In the annual game between Wesleyan and Trinity here this afternoon Wesleyan outplayed the Hartford men and won 13 to 6. Trinity was outweighted by her opponents who played an excellent game and scored easily. The sensational play of the game was an 80-yard run by Morgan, scoring a touchdown for Trinity.

HASKELL INDIANS 14, NEBRASKA 6
KANSAS CITY, Nov. 12.—The Haskell Indians wrestled the Missouri valley championship from the Nebraska cornhuskers on the gridiron today, the red men winning 14 to 6. Houser's two field goals gave the Indians a long lead in the first half, which Nebraska could not overcome, although the cornhuskers outplayed their opponents in the final half. Nebraska was weakened by the absence of Captain Benedict and her plunging halfback, Welter. The Indians displayed desperate defense when their goal line was endangered, the cornhuskers being held for down three times within five yards of a touchdown.

DAVARTH 15, AMHERST 4
HARTFORD, N. H., Nov. 12.—The Davarth team won the football today. In the first half the Amherst boys held the Dartmouth giants down to one touchdown and scored a goal from the field. In the second half the Dartmouth boys made two touchdowns and kept the visitors from scoring, the game resulting Dartmouth 15 and Amherst 4.

out-playing them at every point of the game. Iowa started the game with four substitutes in the line and sent for other men as fast as any of the regulars became the least bit tired, but in spite of this the team continued to roll up scores against their opponents. The feature of the game was the playing of the few of Iowa regulars that were in the game and the tackling of Bleamaster of Ginnell. The final score was Iowa 69, Ginnell 0. This is the largest score ever made against Ginnell by Iowa.

NORTHWESTERN 12, ILLINOIS 6
EVANSTON, Ill., Nov. 12.—The score, Northwestern 12, Illinois 6. The result shows accurately the quality of the two teams that met here today. The score tells the story of one of the most brilliant games of football the Methodist institution has ever won. The whole rejuvenation of the Northwestern team was hammered into submission and Chicago eleven three weeks ago is shown in the two touchdowns to one it scored against the down-state eleven that a week later held the maroon to a tie. There were three great features to the game, one Methodist won, neither of which had to do with the score, for all came in the first half which ended in the double though Northwestern was claiming two points for what they called a safety, but which the referee held was a "touchback." Of the three brilliant achievements, two were by the Illinois and one the most brilliant of all by Rothgeb, the Mighty Illini right end. What the former captain of the Illinois team did was to carry the ball under the nose of the Chicago line, hard charging line for 44 yards against the best defense Northwestern could make. He did not make the distance by one brilliant run, but by a series of carding plays in all of which he kept the Illinois line by his way through the whole Northwestern line for gains of from 1 to 8 yards. No other western player has such an achievement to his credit.

AN AQUEDUCT
AQUEDUCT, N. Y., Nov. 12.—Three favorites and three outsiders won today. Crammins and Phillips won two races each. The Edgemere Stakes were won by the odds-on Dolly Spunker. The easily by the odds-on Dolly Spunker. The weather was good and the track slow. Summary: First race—Six furlongs: Atwood, 105 (Phillips), 12 to 1, won; Assension, 111 (Burns), 18 to 5, second; Monet, 112 (Gannon), 5 to 1, third. Time, 1:28.3. Rose, 107 (Crammins), 15 to 1, won; Jerris, C. Mimosa, Collector Jessup, Ed Tu Brute, Ammie Worth and Ben Mac'D'Hui also ran. Second race—One mile: Thistleheart, 123 (Gimmins), even, won; Prince Salsalim, 99 (Schilling), 7 to 1, second; Lankford, 105 (Harrison), 15 to 1, third. Time—1:42.5. Out of Reach, Sir Shep, Bouvier, Juvenal Maxim, Hatchet and Prince Ching also ran. Third race—Five furlongs: Juvenara, 102 (Crimmins), 6 to 1, won; Workman, 107 (Shaw), 6 to 1, second; Uncas, 107 (Burns), 6 to 1, third. Time—1:01.4.5. Brush-up, Danseuse, Monocorder, Fox, Confessor, Blue Coat, Operasue, Esterre and The Seer also ran. Fourth race—One mile and an eighth: Dolly Spunker, 113 (Phillips), 1 to 9, won; Ostrich, 113 (Shaw), 9 to 1, second; Seymour, 115 (Odum), 8 to 1, third. Time—1:57.3.5. Three started.

MINNESOTA 28, WISCONSIN 0
MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 12.—Fighting gamely but greatly outclassed the University of Wisconsin football eleven, the performance of the football eleven of Minnesota this afternoon by the overwhelming score of 28 to 0. As a result of this brilliant victory there is joy in the camp of the kopphers tonight because they succeeded in equaling the performance of the Michigan men against the badgers. Vanderbilt and Wrabetz, who played the halves for Curtis' team were repeatedly sent against the Minnesota line, but they found it as strong as a stone wall and only on a few occasions were they able to make good.

WEST POINT 41, NEW YORK 0
WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 12.—West Point defeated the New York University eleven today, 41 to 0. The New Yorkers put up a good fight and played pluckily until the end, making but one change in the line-up. Support was ragged.

SYRACUSE 39, LEHIGH 4
SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 12.—Lehigh was defeated by Syracuse University here today, 39 to 4. Syracuse scored first with a goal from the field, after falling in an attempt to score the goal line. Lehigh kicked a field goal in the second half.

JEFFERSON 22, FRANKLIN 0
LANCASTER, Pa., Nov. 12.—The football team of the Jefferson Medical College administered an unexpected defeat to the eleven of Franklin and Marshall this afternoon, the score being 22 to 0.

YALE FRESHMEN 16, HARVARD FRESHMEN 0
NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 12.—Yale's freshmen team distinguished itself this afternoon by defeating the Harvard freshmen by 16 to 0. It was a brilliant ending to a rather disappointing season for the freshmen, for up to the time they faced Princeton one week ago, they had not scored a single point. The defeat of Harvard came as a great surprise. It breaks a continuous string of Harvard victories, extending over five and six years, and is the third victory won by Yale since the freshmen first met. Both teams played excellent football. If hard luck can be counted a factor, it operated against Harvard twice, she was within striking distance of Yale's goal only to lose the ball and be then thrown far back into the center of the field. Both teams were strong on offensive and at times neither one was able to stop the attacks of the other. The line, Linn eleven, and in the second half of the season to do the trick. Several times she held the crimson for downs and ploughed through the Harvard line for gain after gain and circled the ends for 25 yards at a time. Both teams were frequently penalized for off side play. Harvard being the chief offender. On a fumble by Sperry in mid-field, McManus, of Holy Cross, recovered the ball and dashed down the field for a touchdown, but Reed was unable to kick the goal.

MUTES 5, MARYSVILLE 0
MARYSVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 12.—The Tennessee Deaf and Dumb school with its strong team beat Marysville College eleven this afternoon 5 to 0.

PURDUE 27, INDIANA 0
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 12.—Purdue defeated Indiana here today in a well played game by a score of 27 to 0. Trinity in the game of the former company, in his petition to the council, states that his company is willing to respect the franchise granted the terminal company by the city, which permits other railroads using the line if necessary. A fee for the proposition to the city, the short line is the protest of W. C. Kimbrough, a Dallas citizen, who claims that he gave a bonus of $25 to the terminal company when it was first organized and that many other citizens gave various amounts of money with the idea that railroad would be used jointly by all railroad companies that cared to enter the city over the terminal line. Mr. Kimbrough has supplemented his first protest with a printed brief explaining his objections to the merger at length.

TO ABSORB TERMINAL
DALLAS, Nov. 12.—The St. Louis Southwestern desires to absorb the Dallas Terminal railway and Union Depot company for the purpose of "facilitating" its business. It was seen that the former company, in his petition to the council, states that his company is willing to respect the franchise granted the terminal company by the city, which permits other railroads using the line if necessary. A fee for the proposition to the city, the short line is the protest of W. C. Kimbrough, a Dallas citizen, who claims that he gave a bonus of $25 to the terminal company when it was first organized and that many other citizens gave various amounts of money with the idea that railroad would be used jointly by all railroad companies that cared to enter the city over the terminal line. Mr. Kimbrough has supplemented his first protest with a printed brief explaining his objections to the merger at length.

ROCK ISLAND STATEMENT
DALLAS, Nov. 11.—Auditor Gillespie is still at work on the Rock Island statement, making small corrections in names and amounts as fast as they are reported. To him a list of some of the signatures not being plain enough, several errors appeared in the published statement of amounts contributed to the Rock Island fund by the citizens of Dallas. His advice has been received by the committee yet as to when the remittance will be received for distribution among the donors, but it is thought that it will be received within the course of a few days.

ONLY AGAINST SOCIALISM
ROME, Nov. 12.—Catholic deputies lately elected to parliament sent the pope a profession of their devotion and allegiance. The Vatican now answers that the prohibition of Catholic, to make statements, still obtains, the pope objecting to the creation of a

MR. PARRY TALKS OF THE SOCIALIST VOTE
INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 12.—D. M. Parry, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, declared today that the large increase in the socialist vote did not surprise him in the least. Mr. Parry said that he had been watching the movement closely and was convinced several months ago that the socialist vote would show great gains throughout the country. He ascribed the increase of the vote to the realization of the part of the trades unionists that the force method of raising wages was a thing of the past, owing to the development of the employers' movement; that others voted the socialist ticket as a protest against the manner in which the small investor had been treated by certain corporations; that the socialists have been carrying on a very extensive propaganda work in the last four years and that the personal magnetism of Mr. Debs also had something to do with the large socialist figures. Mr. Parry says that there must be sound economic education along broad national lines to offset the heresies of socialism and that there must be certain reforms in the administration of corporate properties by which the general public can be invited to become shareholders in the large corporations with a feeling of perfect security that their interests will be protected. Unless these two things are accomplished, Mr. Parry is of the opinion that the socialist vote will continue in importance.

THE MARKETS

The most noticeable feature of the week has been the decrease in the receipts as compared with the total of last week and the week before. During the first of the week receipts were very light, and packers were compelled to concede an advance. The supply has consisted of several strings of good fleshy steers, and quite a few common to good feeding steers. In the stuff the greater portion has ranged from canners to medium grades, with a fair supply of good cows and heifers.

Early in the week packers were getting less of medium to good killing steers than were wanted, but yesterday and today the demand has been very weak, and prices 10 to 15 cents per hundred lower. The demand for all grades of feeders has been good, and prices are fully steady. Feeders have paid as high as $3.40 per hundred for steers, but the bulk of medium to good kinds has ranged around $2.85 per hundred. Light to medium weights are quotable at $2.25 to $2.75 per hundred.

There is no change in the sheep market and very few are coming to this market, and packers are forced to make most of their mutton from Kansas City. Good fat wethers are selling from $2.75 to $3.00 per hundred, fat ewes $2.50 to $2.75, lambs $1 to $5, stockers $2.50 to $2.75 per hundred.

Table with columns: No., Ave. Price, No., Ave. Price. Rows include STEERS, COWS, BULLS, CALVES, HOGS, PIGS.

COTTON NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Cotton opened steady at an advance of 3 to 5 points, which was rather better than due on the cables. The weather was more or less unsettled, but nothing was reported to alarm shorts particularly and while there was some buying from this account, it seemed to come chiefly from the usual week-end motives. Wire houses with southwestern connections had a few buying orders. On the other hand Wall street sold moderately and there was scattering liquidation. Altogether trading was quiet with fluctuations narrow and irregular. Prices sold off a little from the best but the general tone was steady. Futures closed steady. Spots dull; middling unlands 10.25; middling gulf 10.50. Sales 35 bales. Estimated receipts at the ports today 53,000 bales, against 46,471 last week, and 64,473 last year; for the week 330,000 bales, against 381,909 last week and 447,897 last year.

LIVERPOOL COTTON (By Private Wire to M. H. Thomas & Co.) LIVERPOOL, Nov. 12.—The spot cotton market was quiet, with a good business. Spots were quoted at 5.42d for middling, June 5.60d, heavy 5.70d, 57,100 bales all American. Yesterday's close: Middling 5.42d. Sales 7,000 bales. No receipts. Tone steady.

GRAIN CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 12.—Diminishing receipts of wheat was the principal influence in the market during the greater part of the day, but the trade was largely of a scolding character and sales were few and far between. There was a place. That was a mere taking of profits on the long side. Bears were too timid in view of the reduction in the receipts to venture much on the short side. December closed without change and May at 1/2c decline. Corn could not resist the effect of such fine weather for furthering the marketing of the new grain and was closed at about 1/2c decline. Oats were firm 1/2c higher and provisions evolved a streak of bullishness from an unpropitious beginning.

CHICAGO GRAIN AND PROVISIONS (By Private Wire to M. H. Thomas & Co.) CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—The grain and provision markets ranged in price today as follows:

Table with columns: Wheat, Corn, Oats, Pork, Lard, Ribs. Rows include various grades and prices for each commodity.

RHODES-HAVERY FURNITURE COMPANY Third and Houston W. C. HATHAWAY, Manager Fort Worth, Tex.

It was naturally inferred that reduced receipts were the result of the diminishing supplies. Liverpool quotations were a trifle higher and Paris a trifle lower. Both Kansas City and Duluth advised of heavy sales of cash wheat since yesterday's close. The market resumed its original strength and became very strong. December closed at $1.14 3/8 to $1.14 1/2, after selling as high as $1.14 3/4 and as low as $1.14. The range of May was from $1.12 3/4 to $1.14 1/2, closing at $1.14.

Strictly fresh firsts, city packed, cases included, 21 1/2c, extras 23 1/2c.

STOCKS NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The stock market today was strong and active, with many new features developing on the bull side. Notwithstanding the immense profit taking which went on, prices averaged higher or showed only trifling net losses. The decrease in surplus reserve reported by the banks was offset in the eyes of most observers by the gratifying fact of the large reduction in loans. The publication of the statement had no influence on prices. The recessions which took place in the final dealings were no larger than might have followed a natural reaction from the excited operations of the first hour. In the railroad list, the most sensational feature was the rise of over 3 per cent in Illinois Central, in which the dealings were larger than in a long time. Atlantic Coast Line rose nearly 5 per cent on rumors of "Arlon-cutting."

LIVERPOOL GRAIN CABLE (By Private Wire to M. H. Thomas & Co.) LIVERPOOL, Nov. 12.—The following changes were noted in the corn and wheat markets today: The wheat market closed unchanged to 1/4d up, with corn 1/4d to 1/2d up.

NEW YORK BANK STATEMENT (By Private Wire to M. H. Thomas & Co.) NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The following bank statement was issued today: Reserve, decrease $1,217,550. Less U. S. decrease 1,212,900. Loans, decrease 14,789,600. Special, decrease 4,741,100. Legal, decrease 3,568,600. Deposits, decrease 28,102,400. Circulation, decrease 271,600.

ST. LOUIS PROVISIONS ST. LOUIS, Nov. 12.—Flour, quiet, about steady. INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION The fifth annual convention of the International Live Stock Exposition will be held at Chicago from November 25 to December 3 and while there is little interest, seemingly, displayed here among stockmen, it is believed that Texas will be fairly well represented in the way of exhibits.

NEW YORK MONEY NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Close: Money on call nominal, no loans. Time loans steady. 60 days 3 1/4 to 3 1/2 per cent, 90 days and six months 3 1/2 per cent.

COPPER BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 12.—Coppers boiled again today, the transactions equaling, if not exceeding those of any Saturday in the history of the exchange. At the opening brokers tumbled all over each other in the efforts to fill orders and the excitement did not cease for a minute throughout the session. Amalgamated opened up 1-4c to 7/16c but lost 1/8c at the close to 7 1/2-15c. Calumet and Hecla jumped 15 points to 65 1/2, closing at 65 1/2. Copper Range, Centennial and Bingham all made new high records, but lost fractionally from the highest toward the close on realizing. Osceola lost 1/2. Old Dominion 3-4; Mohawk 3/4 and Isle Royale 2. Calumet gained 10; Copper Range 1 1-4 and Parrott and U. S. Mining 1/2 each. Close: Amalgamated 7 1/2; Anaconda 27 3/8; Bingham 38; Calumet 65; Centennial 31 7-8; Copper Range 71; Isle Royale 32 1-4; Mass. Mining 3 3-4; Mohawk 55 1/2; Old Dominion 27 1-4; Osceola 85; Parrott 31; Tamarack 139; U. S. Mining 25; Utah 44.

COMING TO TEXAS AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 11.—The Interstate Live Stock Association of New York is seeking admission into Texas. J. J. Harris, the state agent, was in the state house today conferring with the interstate department in reference to the terms. If the Interstate is admitted, its business headquarters will be located in the city of Dallas.

TEXAS STILL WINS In the awards for southern breeding cattle at the World's Fair Thursday, Texas again received honors far in excess of any other section of the country. In the Hereford class it was about a stand-off between Texas and Indian Territory. Campbell Russell of Hereford, I. T., receiving seven blue ribbons, while Lee Brothers of San Angelo got six. In the Shorthorn breeding classes, the Texans did not let the exhibitors from Tennessee and Indian Territory go away with a single prize. The situation resolved itself into a contest between Texas breeders. David Harrell of Liberty Hill received first prizes on aged bull, yearling bull and junior heifers and on senior heifer calves.

COST OF MULES The officer in charge of an exhibit made by the quartermaster's department of the United States Army, at St. Louis, says that the records of his department show that the average cost per head of pack mules to the government in 1898 was $22.83, since which time it has gradually increased. The average price paid by the government for that class of animals during the first six months of 1904 was $18.95. While the price paid for the draft mule in 1898 was $9.74 per head, during the first six months of 1904 they brought, on an average, $16.55. This officer is of the opinion that good draft mules will bring next year $200, while pack mules cannot be had for less than $130 each. In this connection the government buys more mules in Missouri than in any other state. What few it does not secure in that state it buys in Kentucky, Tennessee and Texas.

NOTICE TO SHIPPERS All members of the Texas Cattle Raisers' Association, when selling cattle for market, whether in large or small droves, are requested to notify all inspectors at all yards, as the cattle will be held up if they do not do so. This will save a great amount of trouble. H. C. BABB, Inspector Fort Worth Stock Yards.

THE MIDLAND COUNTRY Henry M. Half reports good rains out in the Midland country. He says: "We had rain out there the latter part of last week. In fact, it was raining when I left here. Nobody is overstocked, and we are waiting for prices to turn upward in the market before shipping anything. There is nothing going to market off the Texas and Pacific now, but the country up in quite a respectable number. Values are a little more quiet in Missouri. This is as it should be, you know, for the best calves in Texas are bred there. F. A. Nave and B. E. Kyle of Attica, Ind., will receive a lot of calves

REPORTS THAT HAVE BEEN RECEIVED BY CAPT. LYTLE, secretary of the Texas Cattle Raisers' Association, from the association inspectors in different sections of the country in Texas, Kansas, Colorado and the territories indicate that the conditions on the ranges and among the cattle are very flattering. Captain Lytle states that it has been a long while since the range as a general proposition have been as fine as reports now seem to indicate. Recent rains have put new life in the grass which has been revived. It was feared that a cold snap might kill the grass, but this has been averted and as a result grazing during the winter months will be fine. From only two or three sections of the cattle country come reports that grass is not as good as it might be, but even in these localities there will be plenty of grazing for all immediate necessities.

CATTLEMEN STATE THAT IT IS THEIR OPINION that cattle will get through the present winter in first class shape and that they will be ready for an early spring market. It is also believed that spring prices will be very much better than they have been for a year or two past. Indications point to better times for the stockmen of Texas during the year 1905. They have gone through a year of great depression so far as prices are concerned, but not in years have general conditions of the ranges been better than they are at the present time.

RICH COUNTRY Texan Who Owns Placer Mines in Alaska Tells of the Wealth Which Is Being Produced There Every Season

NO LAWLESSNESS NOW People Enjoy Up-to-date Methods of Living and It Is Much Cheaper Than Formerly—Season Is Closed Now for Transportation

"The richness of the placer mines in the Alaskan field is going to astonish the whole world within the next few years," said S. B. Shephard of Nome, Alaska, who is in the city for a few days.

Mr. Shephard was asked last night regarding the output of the Nome country for this year. He replied that the output of gold would be $4,000,000, while the output of the entire country tributary to Nome will be as much as $6,000,000.

Mr. Shephard states that he looks for great results during the coming year. Men with means have become interested in that country and have introduced the hydraulic system of reducing the finds which have been and are still being made.

Conditions in Alaska have settled down to a legitimate basis, says Mr. Shephard, and there is very little speculation left. Those who are now in that country are pushing the development of their claims and making big money.

Mr. Shephard, during the early period of that mining camp, was appointed commissioner by President McKinley, and dismissed for justice for several months until the country became civilized, when he sent in his resignation and retired to a business and private life.

CUTS DOWN REPRESENTATION AUSTIN, Nov. 12.—As a result of the election last Tuesday Travis county's representation in the state democratic convention at the next election has been cut down to only eight voters, a loss of five votes from that of 1902. This is due to a light vote polled at the last election, being no contests. Representation in the county convention has been correspondingly decreased. The total vote cast for Lanham in this county was 2,523 and 670 for the republican candidate. This is a great decrease from the vote of 1902.

MARYLAND IS DIVIDED BALTIMORE, Nov. 12.—The official canvass of the state was completed today except in one county, which will not change the result. The democrats have elected seven electors and the republicans one. The republican candidate elected is Charles Bonapart, who was special counsel for the government in the post office frauds. His vote was 108,166, while the highest democrat got 108,268. The lowest republican vote was 105,328.

THREE BEAUTIES WITH "THE FORBIDDEN LAND."

Monday Night—"The Forbidden Land."
Wednesday Matinee and Night—"The Village Parson."
Thursday Night—North Brothers, Comedians.
Friday Matinee and Night—North Brothers.
Saturday Matinee and Night—North Brothers.

While the Al. G. Field Minstrels this season is bigger and better than ever and the production during the week past was the star event of the offering for six days, yet Harry Beresford must not be overlooked in the discussion of attractions, because the Beresford attraction is a good one. The Field's Minstrels drew a packed house and every one was pleased with the performance. The Grtridge Ewing Company had crowded houses Monday and Tuesday. The "Millionaire Trump" did not do much Thursday, but a large and appreciative audience greeted Mr. Beresford. His comedy is a good one and is the vehicle for much of interest, presenting amusing situations and conflicting conditions, which keep the interest of all who attend.

The coming week has for its first offering the "Forbidden Land" and those who have read of Tibet and who know of the long run this piece has had will be interested in the production. Coming next is the "Village Parson" for a night and matinee, and then will be the North Brothers, comedians, for three nights and two matinees.

"THE FORBIDDEN LAND"

With an almost all-star cast, an exceptionally capable and pretty chorus, a magnificent production, a cleverly written story and a musical setting that contains innumerable catchy airs, there is little reason to wonder at the enormous success that has rewarded the new Tibetan comic opera. "The Forbidden Land" which is announced as tomorrow Monday night's attraction at the Greenwall theater.

After a successful all-summer run in Chicago this opera went to St. Louis, where it duplicated its Chicago success, and were it not for other engagements it could run there for months, so emphatic was its reception and artistic conquest. Following this came Kansas City, Memphis, New Orleans, in each of which the same verdict was rendered. "The best opera seen in years." The secret of this phenomenal success lies in the fact that this comic opera is a comic opera in every sense of the word. Consistently constructed, humorously depicted, melodiously embellished and interpreted by a cast of players whose sole aim seem to be to "drive dull care away," in addition to this add the novel fact that this is the first theatrical offering, either dramatic or lyric, in which the quaint customs, odd rites and mystical surroundings of the Tibetans have been faithfully and vividly portrayed and then you have the answer.

The story deals with the adventures of a party of American tourists, who, in traveling through the Himalayas, get lost from their fellow travelers, and aimlessly straying across the Bramaputra river, land into Tibet. "The Forbidden Land," and are there captured by the Lhasa guards, taken to the cloud-capped capital of Lhasa to meet the Barca Tarjum, who consigns them to the Tarjums jail, there to be executed at sunset. By a cleverly conceived comic opera arrangement the party are saved at the proper time and all ends happily. All this is told in Guy F. Stealy's happiest vein, who has eclipsed his former successful effort of "The Storks" and established a record in "The Forbidden Land" that places him in the foremost rank of successful librettists.

Frederic Chapin has set this theme in a most tuneful environment. His melodies of "My Lhasa Maid," "Touring Round," "Three Maids and a Man," "Oh, Pity Me," and fifteen others are the most whistleable heard in years, in fact the music has now reached the street organ stage, which attests most significantly to the merit of the catchiness of the music. Conspicuously prominent in the cast are Gus Meinburg, who last season made such a big hit in "The Storks," who is cast as Dr. Klotz, a German inventor. This creation is of a higher order of German characterization than has heretofore been disclosed in comic opera, and in the delineations of the esthetic doctor Mr. Weinburg has made the success of his career.

Alma Youlin, the statuesque prima donna of last season's "The Storks," is also with this company in a prominent role. W. H. Clarke, William Cameron, Joseph A. Phillips, Hugh Flaherty, Adams, Mamie Ryan and Ethel Johnson are also much in evidence. The chorus is said to be the best voiced, most accomplished, daintiest and prettiest bevy of girls identified with any company traveling.

"THE VILLAGE PARSON"

"The Village Parson," which had a successful run in the east, and previously scored a hit in England, will be presented at Greenwall's opera house Wednesday matinee and night, November 16. The play is intensely dramatic in action, and there are many thrilling climaxes. The plot of the play is as follows:
Felix Gordon, a lawyer, learns that the wife of the Rev. Tom Godley has inherited a fortune, of which she is ignorant, and he plots with a dissolute brother of his, named Bud, to secure possession of the inheritance. The lawyer falsely accuses Mrs. Godley of undue friendship for Bud. An old pal of Bud's threatens to reveal the plot and is killed by Bud. Gordon identifies the body as that of his brother and charges the parson with the murder, and he is compelled to flee to avoid arrest. With the assistance of Andy, the general man of all work around the parsonage, the parson escapes from the officers and is next heard from the Mardi Gras in New Orleans, seven years later, after various vicissitudes. The wife is also in the Crescent City with her little blind daughter, endeavoring to eke out a scanty existence. The husband and wife meet during the progress of the carnival and are observed by Gordon, who recognizes the parson and points him out to the officer of the law as a fugitive from justice. Further identification is necessary, however, but the wife refuses to acknowledge that she has ever seen him before, and thus defeats Gordon's plan. The next act shows husband and wife living in adjoining quarters in a small quarter of New Orleans, where the little child, in wandering through the halls, accidentally enters the parson's apartment, just as he is about to commit suicide. The voice of the child recalls him to the world, and he takes her in his arms, just at the moment the wife enters searching for her. They are reunited and the last act shows the beautiful home, of which they have been defrauded so long and all the tangles are straightened out and the guilty one punished. Special scenic efforts serve to set off the production, and a thoroughly competent company is engaged in its presentation.

NORTH BROS. COMEDIANS

A first-class company, with a superb ladies' orchestra, good plays, special scenery and elegant stage settings are the features of the North Bros. comedians, which is the attraction booked to appear at Greenwall's opera house for three nights, commencing next Thursday night, Nov. 17, matinee Friday and Saturday. This organization comes here highly praised by press and public. The opening play will be a four-act sensational comedy, "A Hand of Man," in which the entire company will appear. One lady is admitted free with each paid 50 cent ticket purchased before 6 p. m. Thursday. The prices will be 10c, 20c and 30c. The sale of seats is now open at the box office.

DRAMATIC NOTES

The original production of "Ben Hur," which is to be presented at the Dallas opera house the week of Nov. 28, is best described by the words "magnificent and massive." The manner in which Klaw & Erlanger have staged the play has aroused the interest of two continents and commanded the attention of the rulers of the world.

"Ben Hur" is a sermon in varied speech, illustrated by art and music. Its trend of suggestion is forward and upward. The curtain rises on the three wise men in the desert and the flaming star of Bethlehem in the men's hands raised in awe and reverence as they group about their camels. The dreamy waste of aridity is wonderfully impressive. Then comes the brilliantly colored picture of the housetops of Jerusalem, the terrace of the palace of Herod. Next is one of the greatest scenes in the play—the dimly lighted interior of the Roman galleys, the muscular, grim-visaged slaves tugging in rhythmic motion at the oars, then the wreck, showing Ben Hur and his captain struggling in the waves. The scene changes to the home of Simonides, a moment later comes the vision of the silt grove of Daphne, with the temple reared to the god Apollo; Roman maidens dance joyously in this scene, but the central figure is Ben Hur, the soldier, stern and unrelenting.

Lots of pretty girls, sweet, catchy music, a gorgeous display of gowns of the present day's latest creations and the various stage accessories to match, a raging riot of rapid repartee and side-splitting scenes and comic sights is something like what is claimed for the new musical farce by Frank Dumont called "Happy Hooligan."

The story of "The Virginian," as dramatized from Owen Wister's novel, works strange things upon the Puritan consciences of Molly Wood, the hero's sweetheart. This New England girl pits her prejudices against the Virginian's western instincts and there is a battle royal between her ways and his. But destiny proves the master of them both. The hero "kills his man" in true cowboy fashion and love makes the Puritan girl thank heaven for it.

"The Silver Slipper" this season will in every way be considerably larger than it was last.

Stuart Hyatt, who has one of the leading male roles in the new musical comedy, "The Jewel of Art," by Frederic Ranken and Ludwig Englander, was especially selected for the part by Manager Slocum on account of his experience and versatility. Mr. Hyatt was brought to this country by Charles Frohman to play his original part of the Grand Vizier in the English musical comedy of "The Rose of Persia."

NORTH FORT WORTH ROSEN HEIGHTS STOCK YARDS

Nash Furniture Company.

A meeting has been arranged for today between the members of the water committee of North Fort Worth and Louis Blank who offered at Friday night's meeting of the city council to construct a water system for the city. When seen yesterday by The Telegram representative, Mr. Blank explained more fully the nature of the offer he will make to the city. As stated he will construct the plant, dig the wells, etc., requiring the city to lay only the mains. The city will be charged for water for fire purposes, but not at the ratio of the number of plugs but upon the meter system alone. This is considered quite an advantage. At the end of five years the city may take the system by paying the cost of construction less a reasonable percentage for wear and tear and at the end of ten years they may acquire the system, purchasing merely the water tank.

Mr. Blank stated that after the committee submitted to him the requirements of the city he would make such a proposition as he was able. Water rates to consumers he declared would be less than in Fort Worth.

Mr. Blank, who was connected with the old packing house, once before offered to supply a water system in North Fort Worth and it is stated that at that time the project fell through because he was unwilling to agree to furnish sufficient water for the use of the packing houses.

THE TUESDAY CLUB

The Tuesday Club met in regular session at the home of Mrs. J. F. Williams. There was only a small attendance but the meeting was very enjoyable. There was a short literary and musical program. Several new members were received. The next meeting will be held on November 22, at the home of Mrs. F. S. Brooks.

Those present at the last meeting were Mesdames Moody, Brooks, Eastham, Chase, Williams, Knight, Reynolds, Misses Ways and Williams.

EPWORTH LEAGUE

A literary society was organized at the Rosen Heights Methodist church, under the auspices of the Epworth League Friday night.

The following officers were elected: President, S. O. Lovejoy; chaplain, William Charbonneau; vice president, W. B. Lovejoy; attorney, Mrs. Sloan; secretary, Marguerite Hensley; treasurer, Blanche Martin.

The next meeting will be held on Friday night, November 18, at the Rosen Heights church.

NOTES AND PERSONALS

SMALL EXPENSE IS SWORN BY THE CANDIDATES

"It is remarkable the small expense accounts successful candidates are now making affidavit to since the election is over," said a gentleman to The Telegram yesterday.

Under the provisions of the Terrell law candidates are compelled to make out an itemized account of moneys spent during the candidacy of each person, which must be sworn to before a notary and then presented to the county court. Thus far but few candidates in the recent election have complied with the law in this respect. However, those who have filed their affidavits show an extraordinary small expense account, which is in marked contrast with similar accounts before the Terrell law went into effect.

"This law has saved many a poor devil dollars," said a successful candidate, "and I'm more than delighted with it."

R. E. Doyle, who was elected constable of precinct No. 4, (Keller and Smithfield) made affidavit yesterday that the expense of his candidacy was $5 all told. This is only $3.50 more than it cost Judge Rockout of Dallas county to be elected and $15 less than Governor Lanham's expense in being re-elected.

From what is learned the candidates have been getting off pretty light this campaign when it is considered that two or more years ago it usually required the first term of any official to "even up" on election expenses. In fact, this has been the case in Tarrant county and similar conditions have prevailed all over the state until the Terrell law went into effect.

GERMAN JEWS WILL ENDEAVOR TO BE OF HELP

They Will Try to Turn the Departing Hebrews to Italy, Where They Will Better the Country

LONDON, Nov. 12.—The Warsaw Courier says that the association of German Jews intends to open a central bureau in Warsaw, with branches in St. Petersburg and Lemberg, Galicia, for the protection of Jewish emigrants. The promoters of the plan insist that the Jews are not only driven from Russia, but that after they have been given notice to leave their departure is made difficult by officials, who are inspired by the belief that it is their duty to make a Hebrew's life miserable on every possible occasion. Such treatment the association desires to prevent and its members say that Prince Sviatopolski-Mirski, the minister of the interior, has promised them his sincere aid. Another object of the bureau is to direct immigration to Italy, where there are at present only 40,000 Jews. Intending immigrants will be taught Italian and the committee in charge of the organization insists that Italy's economic resources is so rapid that it will enable the country to invite immigration to that country on account of the wholesale emigration of the past twenty years.

LABOR NOTES

San Antonio is the only city in the state that will contest with Fort Worth the honor of having the 1905 convention of the American Federation of Labor, the other cities having agreed to help Fort Worth secure the meeting, thus bringing it to Texas. At the regular meeting of the Trades Assembly Thursday night nine of the local unions agreed to send a certain number of telegrams daily to the representatives of their crafts in the convention urging the claims of Fort Worth. The committee recently appointed to aid from this city will also work actively and the Trades Assembly will also keep in constant communication with the convention. Hope is gradually increasing in the securing of the convention and if there is a failure it will not be for lack of efforts upon the part of the local union men.

COTTON PARADE

If present plans are followed, next Tuesday afternoon will witness a cotton parade in this city, the members of the Farmers' Union having planned to pass through here Tuesday afternoon on the Board of Trade and through the business section.

As on the occasion of the previous sale they will congregate along the road and pass through this city in a body, going up Main street and the business section. It has been estimated that the cotton offered at this time will aggregate from $25,000 to $50,000 worth, comprising a large part of the holdings of the members of the Tarrant county organization.

Still another sale will be held later and a number of the farmers who were here during the week expressed a desire that matters could be arranged that the sale would be in this city.

NOTES

Lem Husted left for Dallas during the week. He will go from there to El Paso in the interest of the proposed liquor law and will then go direct to San Francisco for the meeting of the American Federation of Labor.

Perry Brooks, a member of the district board of the mine workers, was in the city this week.

CATHOLICS PASS THROUGH HERE TODAY

Pilgrims to Rome From Republic of Mexico Will Celebrate Mass at Hillsboro This Morning

The special train bearing the Catholic pilgrims from the City of Mexico to Rome, Italy, will pass through Fort Worth today. The office of the Mission, Kansas and Texas in this city received advice late yesterday afternoon to the effect that the party would celebrate mass at Hillsboro, instead of at Dallas, owing to the hour of arrival.

A SURE THING

It is said that nothing is sure except death and taxes, but that is not altogether true. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption is a sure cure for all lung and throat troubles. Thousands can testify to that. Mrs. C. B. VanMetre of Shepherdstown, W. V., says: "I had a severe case of Bronchitis and for a year tried everything I heard of, but got no relief. Then I cured me absolutely." It's infallible for Croup, Whooping Cough, Grip, Pneumonia and Consumption. Try it. It's guaranteed by Matt B. Blanton & Co., Reeves' Pharmacy and W. J. Fisher, druggists. Trial bottles free. Regular sizes 50c and $1.

WHAT THE MINISTER SAYS

Is Most Convincing. "I thought I would write you what Pyramid File Cure has done for me. I had a most aggravated case of bleeding piles; indeed I bled every day and had to go to stool. One fifty cent box cured me. I feel like a new man. I have recommended it to others as being the most wonderful remedy known. It is indeed a great blessing to suffering humanity. You are at liberty to use the lot for as long as you wish. I hope it may do good." Rev. J. Carr, 355 No. Holbrook St., Danville, Va. Clergymen (like all professional men who lead sedentary lives) are especially addicted to piles, in various forms, and are continually looking for a remedy which will give relief, with little or no idea of obtaining a cure. Recognizing this fact, Rev. Mr. Carr consents to the use of his name in order that other sufferers may know there is a cure called Pyramid File Cure, which is sold by druggists everywhere for the low price of fifty cents a package, and which will bring about for every one afflicted with piles, the same beneficial results as in his own case. Be careful to accept no substitutes, and remember that there is no remedy "just as good." A little book describing the causes and cure of piles is published by Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., and will be sent free for the asking. All sufferers are advised to write for it as it contains valuable information on the subject of piles.

There are about one hundred prominent Catholics of the republic on the train, which consists of a baggage car, the Elks and three sleepers. The train will be stopped at Hillsboro as long as two hours if necessary, and every attention and courtesy possible is being extended by the railroad officials. Several railway representatives are aboard the train. The party will take the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern from St. Louis for New York, and will sail for Europe to visit the pope immediately upon arrival at New York.

It was thought Friday morning that the schedule of the special train would throw the party into Fort Worth for mass this morning, but the party will not reach this part of the state until the morning is far advanced, and it was decided to celebrate mass at Hillsboro.

ELKS WIN FROM ENTRE NOUS IN FOOTBALL

Many Ladies Attend the Contest to Cheer Their Favorites—Only Score Is Made in the Second Half

One of the most stylish crowds of the season witnessed the football game yesterday afternoon between the Elks and the Entre Nous. The lady friends and admirers of the players of both teams were out in force and aided in the cheering and rooting for their favorite players. The teams of the Elks and the Entre Nous put up a splendid game of football, which was well played and hard fought throughout, the Elks having a shade the better of the argument.

The game was called at 4:30 o'clock. The Elks kicked to the Elks five yard line. The Elks returned the ball five yards, after making five yards once the Elks were held for downs, the ball going over. Ball changed hands twice and fumbles and then the Elks were penalized for an offside play. Neither side seemed able to gain and an exchange of punts took place, the Elks making several good gains, but they were held on the forty-yard line and punted to the Entre Nous ten-yard line, they immediately kicked to the forty-yard line. Elks fumbled, Entre Nous getting the ball on their own forty-yard line. After two downs they kicked to the Elks fifty-yard line. Elks fumbled and Entre Nous recovered the ball, but fumbled it on the first down. The Elks rushed to the ball and making fifteen yards, then lost ten yards, then gained twelve yards, the ball then going to the Entre Nous, who bucked the ball down to the Elks forty-yard line. The Elks then carried the ball by a series of rapid rushes to the Entre Nous forty-yard line. Entre Nous kicked to the middle of the field, the Elks advanced the ball twenty yards before they were forced to punt the catch, and were interfered with, and the Elks were penalized fifteen yards for interfering with the catch. The half ended with the ball in the center of the field.

Second Half—The Elks kicked off the ball going out of bounds, was again kicked off to the five-yard line and returned twenty yards, then they advanced the ball ten yards. The Entre Nous covered a fumble on the twenty-five yard line. The Entre Nous then punted twenty-five yards, Entre Nous were then penalized five yards for an offside play. The Elks advanced to the twenty-five yard line, where they were held for downs. The Entre Nous kicked to the Elks twenty-five yard line, the ball going out of bounds. Elks were soon forced to kick the ball going across the goal line. It was then brought out to the twenty-five yard line and kicked to the middle of the field. The Elks then started down the field, making good gains in rapid succession, and it seemed a sure touchdown, but when within two and a half yards of the goal the Elks' back missed the signal and Liston was thrown with a loss of three yards. On the third down the Elks pushed the ball to within one yard of the goal line, it was then Entre Nous' ball on their own one-yard line. They kicked out on first down. The Elks making a fair catch on the eighteen-yard line. Phillips then made a place kick, scoring 4 points, the only score of the game. The Elks then kicked off to the Entre Nous, who by hard playing advanced twenty-five yards. Then the Elks' ball began rapid rushes, which carried the ball to the Entre Nous fifteen-yard line. Here the game was called on account of darkness.

The Elks outweighed the Entre Nous at fifteen pounds to the man, but their team work was not so good. They did, however, have some players who were stars. The game was marked

FIRST WAGER IS PROMPTLY PAID R. S. Duer Wheels a Contractor Along Main Street to Pay a Freak Election Bet

The first freak election bet in this city was paid late Friday night when a contractor of the city enjoyed a wheelbarrow ride from the Texas and Pacific station to the court house and back propelled by the loser of the wager.

The winner of the bet was G. B. Blue, a contracting plasterer, and the loser was R. S. Duer, who had been deluded into backing Parker to win at the polls.

According to the terms of the wager the loser was faithfully decorated with ribbons as he played steed for his successful opponent. He was game to the core, however, and trudged the entire two miles at the head of a constantly increasing crowd, which numbered at least three hundred by the time he reached the finish.

Both the winner and the loser were made the subject of continued raillery by the crowd which accompanied them, which took in a good humor, declaring themselves as pleased to participate in the event.

"I made the bet and I had to pay it," said Mr. Duer would say in regard to the affair.

THE LAST WILL OF LATE ARCHBISHOP

CINCINNATI, Nov. 12.—The will of the late Archbishop William Henry Elder was probated today. Of his personal estate, estimated at $5,000, he leaves $200 for masses for the repose of his soul and for "the repose of other poor souls in purgatory." This is to be distributed among the priests of needy missions of his diocese. He also leaves $200 to be distributed in alms to the poor of his diocese. He cancels a debt of several hundred dollars due from a nephew, John Scott, for the purchase of a farm near DeSoto, Mo. He names Fathers John M. Mackey, John B. Murray, William B. Sibley and John A. Albrink as executors without bond. As Reverend Albrink and Rev. Sibley have died, he drew a codicil naming Rev. John Schoenhof and Rev. Francis X. Dutton as their successors. To the executors he leaves in fee simple the remainder of his estate.

He provides that there shall be no expensive funeral and that his coffin shall be as plain as possible. There shall be no silver mountings or silken trimmings. The vast properties which he held in trust for the church he bequeaths to Archbishop Henry Moeller in trust for the same purpose. This is done in the codicil as the original will was drawn March 21, 1900, before the most Rev. Moeller was chosen coadjutor archbishop. Archbishop Elder left $10,000 insurance.

Put on Ayer's and be proud of your hair. A little pride is a good thing. Then why be contented with thin, scraggly hair? Faded, gray hair? Put on Ayer's Hair Vigor and have long, thick hair; beautiful hair, without a single gray line in it. Keep young. Have a little pride. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

which is not mentioned in his will and which goes as the policies indicate, but that disposition is not developed in the court proceedings. The will probated today is the last one, the archbishop having drawn two or three in previous years.

A STUDENT SHOTS WHEN HAZING IS ATTEMPTED

He Has Been Knocking the Wisconsin Team and the Boys Were About to Put Him in the Lake

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 12.—Because a crowd of loyal Wisconsin supporters attempted to haze him, Walter Mason, a freshman in the School of Commerce and son of the city editor of the Boston Globe, shot A. E. Brunner, a sophomore from Chicago at 7 p. m.

The shooting happened in the house of Mrs. Mills, where third University students take their meals. Mason had been "knocking" the football team all season and tonight after supper said in a loud voice: "I'm glad Minnesota won. Wisconsin is not worth a bad penny." "Look out," cried an enraged student, "we will put you in the lake." "You can't do it; you've threatened that too many times. To hell with Wisconsin!"

The rest of the students withdrew from the dining room and quickly organized to punish the traitor. Webb of Superior and Captain Perry Stroud of the University regiment were appointed to wait outside for Mason and lead the gang in hustling him to the lake. When Mason left the room C. Kirkpatrick grabbed him from behind.

"He's just the kind of a fellow that will shoot," cried Stroud. "Hold his arms."

"Leave me go or I'll shoot you," and with that Mason fired two shots, one penetrating the foot of Grunert. The shooting is the culmination of a long standing grudge which the students bear Mason.

Mr. Hanford's record as a producer of the best dramatic works is one which speaks for him the esteem of every patron of the theater, for he has presented the best plays that the English language has produced in a manner not only to satisfy the student but to command popular appreciation because of scenic magnificence and every syllable of dialogue.

Thorverton church, Devon, England, was recently used in a store house for whisky which had been taken from the village inn during a fire.

ALIENS MUST BE EXAMINED FOR DISEASE

Immigration Agents on the Mexican Border Have Instructions to Stop All Who Have Infection

Immigration inspectors for the United States government in those states near the Mexican border have received very positive instructions from Commissioner General Frank P. Sargent of the bureau of immigration, who has just returned to Washington after a trip of the entire country, to the effect that all immigrants entering the country over the Mexican border shall submit to a very stringent medical examination.

Heretofore medical examinations have been conducted in cases where the subject was plainly suffering from some disease. The new order is to compel every bunch of alien Mexicans, Syrians or Arabs who cross the border to first submit to an examination. The reason for this new order is that it has recently been discovered that a class of people who are coming into the United States from Mexico are afflicted with a disease of the scalp and the eyes, which are extremely infectious, and that the government is making an effort to stop the spread of the disease.

The diseases are of an European origin, but have been brought into Mexico by the Syrians, Turks and Arabs who were turned down at the New York port on account of their affliction. They then found their way into the United States through Mexico and have thus infected many Mexicans. One of the provisions of the immigration laws is that aliens coming into the country must be free from any infectious diseases, such as will endanger the health of the public or render the aliens public charges, this order easily becomes effective. On account of the prevalence of two diseases, known as trachoma and favus of the scalp and eye, which are being brought into the country by aliens, it has been found necessary to issue this order. Immigrants are hereafter to be corralled on the border and made to submit to the medical examinations.

Mexicans on account of the fact that they are not considered aliens to the extent that they must pay a head tax to enter the country like other foreigners are nevertheless required to go through this examination. Immigrant inspectors in the inland cities in the southwest have been notified to be on the lookout for any of these aliens and if not showing the proper papers as to the medical examination they are to be arrested and deported. Immigration Inspector W. H. Robb of this city has received orders to that effect.

All Humors

Are impure matters which the skin, liver, kidneys and other organs cannot take care of without help, there is such an accumulation of them. They litter the whole system. Pimples, boils, eczema and other eruptions, loss of appetite, that tired feeling, bilious turns, fits of indigestion, dull headaches and many other troubles are due to them.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Remove all humors, overcome all their effects, strengthen, tone and invigorate the whole system.

"I had salt rheum on my hands so that I could not work. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and it drove out the humor. I continued its use till the sores disappeared." Mrs. I. A. BROWN, Rumford Falls, Me.

the school, teachers and the other details as well.

If the plan is carried out the children will attend the public schools of the city, as they do at the present time, but every week day afternoon from 4 to 6 they will attend the Hebrew school, where they will be taught the language, ethics and history of the Jews.

It is expected that some of the movers of this new school will get together in the near future and arrange to interest both the orthodox and unorthodox Jews of Fort Worth in the school plan, which is not to conflict with the public schools or the children's attendance there.

GIVES A PENSION TO PROFESSOR'S WIDOW

(Special Cable to The Telegram—Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)
COPENHAGEN, Nov. 12.—King Christian has today signed a special law whereby the widow of the late Professor Niels Finzen is allowed an honorary pension of 5,000 kroner, about $1,000, a year. The demand for a pension for Mrs. Finzen was made by the minister of education, and went through both chambers of the Danish rigsdag without a dissenting vote, although the widow of even the highest government official is never entitled to a pension of more than one-third of the amount.

The Danish people are exceedingly grateful to the kaiser, who personally started a monument fund to erect a statue to Professor Finzen in this city, a fund to which how all the crowned heads of Europe have contributed. Although the late Professor Finzen had made considerable money since he first discovered his famous light cure, he gave nearly all away to hospitals and charitable institutions, and if he had not a year ago received one of the Nobel prizes he would have left his widow absolutely penniless.

THE COTTON MILLS

HILLSBORO, Texas, Nov. 12.—The Hillsboro cotton mills will start up again in two or three weeks. A new company has been organized, all local capitalists. They have procured a charter and the capital stock, all paid in, amounts to $90,000. The following directors have been elected: A. L. Smith, E. M. Turner, A. J. Thompson, T. G. Hawkins, George Carmichael, T. E. Tompkinson and J. O. Moon.

HILLSBORO, Texas, Nov. 12.—There is a wood famine here. Cord wood is selling at $5 a cord and stove wood at $4 to $10 a cord. Farmers have been too busy with cotton and corn to haul wood to town.

LABOR TROUBLE MAY BE VERY SERIOUS

Outcome of the Fight of Chicago Delegates in the American Federation Is Awaited With Interest

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—Serious trouble in labor circles is threatened as a consequence of the order separating the Chicago Labor Union from the American Federation of Labor.

Secretary Edward Nickels of the Chicago Federation said tonight: "We believe in home rule. Whether the Chicago Federation of Labor has a charter from the American Federation or not, it will still continue to be the central labor body in Chicago. The refusal to obey the orders of President Gompers was unanimous and I believe the locals of international bodies will not retract."

When it is remembered that the Chicago Federation has at present jurisdiction over nearly 140,000 union men in Chicago and vicinity the extent of the trouble may be realized. The expulsion of the Chicago body from the parent federation was brought about by the United Association of Plumbers and Steam Fitters and the International Printing Pressmen's Union, acting for Pressmen's local No. 57. Both these bodies were in the retired "regular" by the Boston convention and the local federation was given until November 1 to seat them. Instead of doing this, the local labor leaders recognized delegates from Franklin Union No. 4 and from the Steam Fitters' Union affiliated with an outside organization known as the "National Association of Steam Fitters." The Franklinites had been waging a vicious strike since October 4, 1903, and the rank and file of the federation hailed them and refused to recognize their rivals. The steam fitters also had perfected a strong organization in Chicago and to unseat their delegates would have started international disruption in Chicago's own body. The matter is expected to precipitate a lively fight in San Francisco convention of the federation next week. If the Chicago delegates are refused seats in the convention every local union deciding to stand by them must withdraw from the parent body or bodies. Should they not do so, the revolutionists would have a hard fight for separate existence with the socialist federation and the American Federation fighting them from opposite points. In event that the Chicagoans manage to carry the day at San Francisco it will mean for the whole country a new alignment on the lines of industrialism instead of trades autonomy, labor fights being waged as a warfare that affects not only the one trade, but all trades on the principle of united we stand, divided we fall.

No torture to that of a rheumatic. Prescription No. 251, by Elmer & Amend, quickest relief of all. E. F. SCHMIDT, Houston, Texas, Sole Agent.

PERRY'S FRIENDS BELIEVE HE IS INNOCENT

Detective Superintendent Says He Knows the Man Who Is Guilty of the Car Works Fire

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—Owing to the illness of Morietz Rosenthal, one of the attorneys for the defense, the arson case was continued today. It will be resumed Monday.

The prosecution surprised the defense by having on hand several witnesses who had not figured in the case previously. One of these was Bernard A. Eckhart, formerly a director in Perry's bank. Just what the prosecution expects to prove by his testimony is kept a guarded secret by the prosecutors. His knowledge in the facts of the case, he, however, believed to pertain to the financial end.

Attorney Pearson for the state today made the declaration that no matter what the outcome of the preliminary hearing the evidence against Perry will be presented to the grand jury.

Perry's friends still declare for his entire innocence and tonight the superintendent of a detective agency which is working in his behalf since the arson charges were made declared: "I know the man who in his proper physical person touched the match to the fuses and set fire to the plant of the Chicago Car and Locomotive Company in Hegewisch. My men have him shadowed night and day. There is no escape for him. I am waiting for the word to arrest him. When the order comes I can turn him over at a moment's notice."

SONS OF VETERANS TO MEET THIS AFTERNOON

The meeting this afternoon at 4 o'clock of Confederate Veterans will be a very important one, as it will determine whether the camp will disband or not.

It was announced at last Sunday's session that this matter would be considered, and it is expected the largest attendance in many weeks will be recorded.

The entertainment committee has arranged an interesting program for this afternoon which will be as follows: Vocal duet, Miss Moorland and Mr. Pease; reading, Forest Bedford; piano solo, Miss Eubanks; reading, Karl Gillham; song, Miss Davidson.

A cordial invitation is extended the public to be present. All sons are especially asked to be present on this meeting.

MORE HELP IS NEEDED FOR POSTOFFICE

Nine Carriers on the South Side Are Unable to Handle the Mail Matter for the Population

That Fort Worth is growing, none can doubt, but that it is growing even faster than the government can keep up with its growth is something very much out of the ordinary. This fact has been brought very plainly to the attention of the government in the last six months by requests for mail carriers.

On the south side of the city at the present time are nine mail carriers. This force from time to time has been added to until the present force reached that number. Now the conditions there have so materially changed by the many new houses and the increase of population that the local postoffice department finds that the force of nine carriers is inadequate to handle the increase in the number of government patrons of the free delivery service and a request has been prepared to forward to the postoffice department at Washington making requisition for an increase on the south side of two additional carriers to give the people the necessary service.

If the department at Washington sees fit to grant the request it must be done at once, or from the almost unprecedented growth, if it keeps up, there will be additional requests for more carriers. At the present time the regular nine carriers have been unable to handle all the business and in many cases it has been found expedient to call in some of the substitutes to handle the surplus mail.

Should the department grant the request for the extra two carriers the entire south side is to be redistributed and new routes arranged so as to have the mail handled with greater speed and confine each carrier to less territory while he is to have as many patrons for the distribution of mail.

The request for the extra carriers is to be sent this week.

SMALL BOY KILLS A BUCK WITH RIFLE

DENISON, Texas, Nov. 12.—Eddie Ross, aged 8 years, performed a remarkable hunting feat Thursday. The boy lives with his foster-parents near Yuba, I. T. Ross was left in camp on the Blue river. His father with a pack of hounds jumped a large buck, which ran directly to the tent and stopped for a moment. The boy, who was provided with a Savage rifle, fired and broke the buck's neck. It fell dead in its tracks.

VESTIBULE LAWS IN EFFECT TUESDAY

Local Companies Are Arranging to Provide the Proper Rolling Stock for the Winter Months

On next Tuesday, the state regulation calling for vestibules on all street cars becomes effective and the local lines promise to be ready for the observance of the law without exception.

For several weeks a number of the cars thus equipped in conformity with the law have been in operation and as both companies have been working their shops to the utmost capacity to suitably provide winter cars heretofore unequipped in that fashion, it is highly improbable that a single unvestibuled car will be seen here or in North Fort Worth from Tuesday until March 15, when the regulation becomes ineffective until the succeeding November 15.

The Rosen line already has a number of vestibuled cars in operation as well as the Northern Texas Traction Company, while the new convertible cars of the Rosen line, described in The Telegram of Thursday, are also provided with the necessary vestibules. The use of the vestibules has proven a great boon to the motorman who formerly had a chilly task during the winter, running a north bound car in the face of a brisk northern being declared by some a worse task than joining a north pole expedition.

The law requiring the vestibules was one fathered by the joint labor executive board before the twenty-eighth legislature and was passed by that body, becoming a law without the governor's signature. An exception to the regulation is made in the case of excursionists visiting a city, in which cases special unvestibuled or summer cars may be run to meet the emergency.

A SPECIAL SCHOOL IS NOW PROPOSED

The study of the Hebrew language, Hebrew ethics and the history of the children of Israel will receive a great impetus in Fort Worth, if the plans of members of some of the Jewish societies here and especially those of the Hebrew Relief society and the Ahavath Zion are carried out.

It is proposed by prominent members of these orders to hold a meeting in the near future to consider the suggestion of establishing a school here for the study of the Hebrew language, where the children may acquire a knowledge of the history of their race and of their fathers' language.

Plans which have been suggested, although the matter is still in an embryonic state, are to secure a suitable building for the temporary quarters of

At a large card party the day after the election a group of women overheard one of their friends inquire who had been elected president of the United States. They thereupon fell to discussing the election, as women sometimes do.

"If I were a man, I would want that woman for my wife," said one. "Fancy after hearing all sorts of men talk positively concerning things they know nothing about and reading the political fulminations in the papers, written by men who, if they know what they are writing about, prefer to keep what they know to themselves and give what they do not know to the public; fancy, I repeat it, the blissful comfort and joy of coming to a home presided over by a woman who has to go to a card party twenty-four hours after a national election to find out that Theodore has been elected president!"

they even went so far as to call her names. But she is a wise old woman in spite of her disuse of the family hickory, and finally decided to send for the boys and to tell them to go ahead and do as they pleased. She wouldn't say a word to see she had raised such a lot of boys.

What Sulphur Does

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium Sulphide and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health; sulphur acts directly on the liver, and excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

lick and not big enough to let alone to think it out for himself? A wise teacher of such a boy or the wise parent of such a boy sometimes decides to let him have his own way in the disputed question. If the boy has the making of a sure-enough man he will find out that his way is not the best way, and the humiliation of having proved himself wrong will be a whip with which he will send himself into dutiful walks ever after. I have seen teachers and parents try this method and there is no better for some dispositions. It beats all the nagging and lectures and punishments ever put together.

"Ma Democracy tried this system on her obstreperous children. All the world knows the result. It remains to be seen whether the failure to make good will or will not be a self-teaching experience out of which will grow a disposition to mind Ma the next time she speaks.

"I am inclined to think the experiment will be a failure. Every one of these impetuous little fellows who boasts of being a good hater? Then do you not wonder why anybody ever gets the hate habit so bad? To most of us it seems such a useless waste of time, there is so much else to do.

For the girl who is still in her early teens, a charming "dress-up" blouse is made of beige blue crepe. It is buttoned in the back and the round yoke is formed from five heavy shirtings. The deep cuffs and the high collar are made of Valenciennes lace insertion, the seams of which are dotted with dainty French knots of the blue. A band of Persian embroidery, in delicate pink, dull blue, light lavender and canary yellow gives a charming touch to the front of the blouse. The bodice is most effective worn with a simple tailored suit.

"Now, eight years ago a bunch of good men got mad about what they could not help and the only outlet they had for their feelings was to go to hating somebody. These men were known as gold democrats, and what they got mad about I am sure I have forgotten, but mad they got, and then went right away to hating. Unkind folks have accused them of having the 'it' bee in their craniums, but I do not believe that. But when a lot of plain farmers and unheard of nobodies in convention assembled chose to disregard the wishes of this bunch they got so mad they are not over it yet. They started in on a long term hating engagement, with Bryan their chief target.

"Undoubtedly Bryan is not the wisest man that ever happened, but few will question his faculty of divining with keenest intuition the undercurrent of thought or convictions, possibly half formed, maybe never uttered, of the great mass of common folk. In this particular he is akin to genius. Then, too, he has made and held friends, two qualities of leadership that have made him a power. Hating him has not diminished that power.

"Have you ever watched the careers of these people who boast of being good haters? What do you find life brings them? Are they happy people? What is their influence in the community? What kind and how many friends do they have? Are these friends loyal? What services and comradeships do they secure? What tokens of honor and esteem and respect and confidence is bestowed upon them?

Women's Fine Suits and Coats!

Hundreds of Suits and Coats, exclusively our own in style, are ready for tomorrow's selling. We have had good stocks before, but never until now so complete a showing. It means that you want exclusive suits, whether you pay $10.00 or $50.00; it means your neighbor can come here, too, and not wear your suit out; it means that what is here today is gone tomorrow; and the variety, changing always, is as wide and varied as yesterday. But underneath it all are the fine materials, splendid tailoring, fine linings—and our guarantee that every stitch is as good as can be made.

Evening Coats The most serviceable of course are of black, broadcloth or silk, lined with black or white. Those who do not care for black will find a host of pretty wraps in soft tan or champagne, and white—the evening color par excellence—either of broadcloth or silk, touched off with a bit of pale colored velvet about the throat, beautiful soft colored buttons, rich silky effects, little capes, straps and stitchings; prices are $22.50 up to $42.50

Tourist Coats $16.50 This loose and comfortable style in Coats for women is becoming more popular every day. In this model you get style, but not at the expense of comfort. Special tomorrow is a Tourist Coat in covert cloth or a pretty olive green mixture, in three-quarter or 50-inch lengths, half-fitted, inverted plait, or straight, strapped backs; close-fitting; mannish collar or collarless; regular coat sleeves; very stylish and very good $16.50

The Archaic Period This archaic period has left two important events of help to literature—the art of writing and the first propagation of Buddhism. The first work we can refer to was a historical one by Prince Shotoku, but as it is written in Chinese it is properly speaking no part of Japanese literature. The oldest relics of genuine literature of Japan are a series of songs. These songs are associated with some historical or quasi historical events but their merit as literature is small. The prose writing of the archaic epoch are preserved to us in prayers to the deities of the Shinto religion.

The Classical Period The "Classical" period lasted from 800 to 1186. The literature of that time shows that the ruling classes became indolent and luxurious. There was a great laxity of morals which is mirrored in the works of this age. They had become effeminate and pleasure-loving, yet cultured and refined. The native literature of this time may be described by one word as "belles lettres." The lower classes of people do not as yet share in literary work. It is remarkable that a large part of the best of Japanese literature has been produced by women. This was no doubt partly due to the absorption of the masculine intellect in Chinese studies and to the contempt of the stronger sex for such frivolous pursuits as the DOINGS OF THE CLUBS Mrs. Brann's Paper The following scholarly paper on Japanese literature was read by Mrs. H. Brann at a recent meeting of the Current Literature Club. By a unanimous vote of the club its publication was requested in 'The Telegram'.

There is so little known about Japanese literature that it is exceedingly difficult for the amateur to attempt an article about it. What Greece and Rome have been to Europe—a model and an educator—China has been to Japan, and the other eastern countries. There is no part of the Japanese life which does not bear relation to Chinese influence. But the independence of the Japanese character has never allowed them to be mere imitators, be it in literature, art, politics or religion. They always stamp their own individuality upon their work.

I have never yet seen one of the typical good haters whose life was not a failure of course, according to my view of failure.

"Do we not instinctively shrink from the good hater? For have we not, after all, found human nature weak, rather than wicked, and more inclined on the whole to good deeds than bad.

"Men do what they should not, We disapprove. Men seek to injure us. We are indignant. Then after a bit we ourselves do something that on second thought appalls us. We had not intended it as it turned out. And we get out our conscience scales and do a little private weighing. Then we think of those other people for whom we have been judges. Nothing like a pair of conscience scales to kill the hate germ.

"No man was ever such a hater but somewhere there was a man who could outlast him. And the last man will turn the trick like a waffle iron applying a nice brown roast to the hater who thought to get an early morning start. The gold democrats lit a good-sized fire of hate. It should have been enough to have lasted until Gabriel's horn reminded of a looked forward to reunion. But instead, its blaziers clanders blew all over the country and started innumerable fires in localities supposed to be asbestos curtailed.

"Would it not be queer if at the door of Saint Peter were to ask us, 'Have you been a good hater?' And some who have thought it was quite distinguished to roll union wage scale at hating would say 'Yes.'"

Then take the other gate. The haters are all down there at the pit roasting each other. They are having a lively time, but they are used to it.

COMING SOCIAL EVENTS The Kindergarten Association will be the recipient of the proceeds of a soiree musical under the direction of Mrs. H. Brann. The date has not yet been announced but will be some time during this month. A number of prominent musicians will assist Mrs. Brann, Professor Lamb and Mrs. Ducker having already announced their willingness to join in this good work. Mrs. Theodore Mack, gifted reader, will also contribute numbers.

There will be an entertainment at the residence of Mrs. Freefield, 710 West Belknap street, tomorrow afternoon by the Council of Jewish Women. A fine program has been prepared and the afternoon promises to be very enjoyable.

The Woman's Auxiliary to the R. M. S. will be the guests of Mrs. Beadle and Mrs. Davis at an evening party next Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Davis, 415 Lipscomb.

It is merely an announcement that the Imperials will give a full dress pink domino party in their club rooms on Thanksgiving eve and that the reader is perusing the invitation thereto.

Not a guest will be admitted to the club rooms that evening unless pink dominoed, and presenting the pink invitation. Even the chaperons will be required to come incognito. There will be handsome decorations and an excellent orchestra. Do you wonder the invitees are smiling?

Mrs. Nona Leach will have charge of the program for the meeting of the Sons of Confederate Veterans this afternoon. The numbers for the occasion will be as follows: Vocal duet, Miss Mary Moore and Mr. Pease; reading, Mr. Bedford; piano, Miss Eubanks; reading, Carl Gillson; song, Miss Davidson.

Mrs. Ennis W. Taylor will be the hostess of the West Side Social Club Tuesday afternoon, play beginning at 2 o'clock. This will be the first meeting of the season of this popular club.

Though enormously indebted to China it has nevertheless remained a true index of the national character. It is the literature of a brave, courteous, light hearted, pleasure loving people.

Sentimental rather than passionate, witty and humorous, but not profound; ingenious and inventive, but hardly capable of high intellectual achievement.

The first historical fact to be gleaned from the legendary stories which have been preserved to us in the ancient Japanese annals is an invasion of the central part of the country, already settled by men of Japanese race. Their leader, who is recognized as the first mikado, established his capital in the province of Yamato, a few centuries before the Christian epoch. It was then that the first substantial progress was made in literature and the arts.

With the establishment of the capital at Nara an evidence was made of the advance of civilization. Learning, by which in Japan is, or rather was, meant the study of the Chinese master pieces of antiquity, made great progress. It was then that schools were established and we heard of the first university (about 662-671). This was for the benefit of the official classes only and it was many centuries later that education reached the common people. The first written book which has come down to us in the Japanese is the "Records of Ancient Matters." While this book is quite valuable for research into the mythology, manners and language of early Japan it is a very poor literary product.

Japanese poetry is mostly confined to lyrics and what may be called epigrams. War songs, strange to say, are almost wholly absent. The mechanism of Japanese verse is simple in the extreme and has no rhyme.

writing of poetry, and romance. But still there was another cause. Unlike the other eastern nations the Japanese did not keep their women in subjection and seclusion. Feminine chieftains are frequently mentioned, and the country styled the "Queen Country." It is this which gives their literary work an air of freedom and originality and no doubt partly accounts for its gentle and domestic character.

About 900 A. D. the mikado instructed a committee to make a collection of the best pieces produced in the last 150 years. It is known as the kokushin (poems, ancient and modern), and contains over 1,100 poems, arranged under the headings of spring, summer, autumn, winter, felicitations, partings, journeys, love, sorrow and miscellaneous.

Much of the poetry of this time was the outcome of political tournaments at which themes were proposed to the competitors by judges, who examined each phrase and word with the minutest care before pronouncing their verdict. As might be expected, this rendered the productions artificial, but for perfection of form the poems of this time stand unrivaled.

The next work of importance was written about two centuries later by Tsurayuki and to this day enjoys the reputation of being the ne plus ultra of elegance in style. These works are: The preface to the Kokinshu "Tasan Nikka," which is a diary of his travels after having served his term in the province. It contains no exciting adventures or romantic situations, but it describes in most fascinating manner the ordinary life of a traveler in Japan at the time when it was written. It has been followed by many imitations, but has had no equal.

We now come to two works which by common consent mark the highest point the Japanese literature has attained. The Goryu Monogatary and the Makura Zoshi, both of them written by women. The latter is a novel and bears unmistakable testimony that the author moved in the best circles of her time. There is a pleasing legend which tells that the author retired from court life to the temple at the southern end of Lake Biwa, there to devote the remainder of her life to literature and religion.

Murasaki Shikuba, the author of the first, was the creator of the prose epic of real life. She gives us a vivid picture of life and society of that time at Kioto, such as we possess, for no other country at the same period. These works were followed by some of minor value, which I will omit.

THE BUDDHIST WORKS
The next literature period was maintained by the Buddhist works. The variety of wealth and power and the uncertainty of things form the constant refrain of their memorializations. The contributions of women are insignificant and a less refined spirit is discernible. The newer literature reflects the more warlike temper of the times of which it is a product. The Gempel Seisuki is the first historical work of literary pretensions in Japan.

This work soon found an imitation, but the author is unknown. Kamo Chomei was the poet of distinction of the thirteenth century. His best work is a record of his own experiences. Several diaries and journals of travel have come down to us from the Kamukara period. The poetry of this time deserves mention chiefly as an indication that culture was not wholly neglected.

The work of Chikafusa, about the middle of the thirteenth century, is the history of the true succession of the divine monarchs. By his own countrymen Chikafusa has been much praised.

The next work of historical value was the "Tahieiki" or Record of the Great Peace. It is a strange name for the history of one of the most disturbed periods that Japan ever passed through. Its author is Kotomata. He commends all resources of Chinese and Japanese rhetoric but is very inaccurate in matters of dates, etc.

One of the most delightful books of Japanese creation is a collection of sketches and essays. The author is Kenko-Boshi, boshi being an honorary title, like reverend. He was of high birth and his writings show an intimate acquaintance with the ways and customs of the imperial palace. His essays read like the conversation of a polished man of the world and have that appearance of simplicity and ease of expression which is in reality the result of consummate art.

The manufacture of Tanka proceeded, as usual, during these periods of Japanese history, but the contributions are of too inferior merit for mention. A great interest, however, belongs to a new development of the poetic art, namely, the No or lyrical drama.

Like the ancient Greek tragedies the early drama in Japan was closely associated with religion. Its immediate parent was the Kayura, a patomimic dance which is performed to this day.

The beginning of the No date from the fourteenth century. They were at first purely religious performances intended to propitiate the chief duties and were acted exclusively in connection with their shrines.

It is a noteworthy circumstance that a manager of one of the No theaters at Nara attracted the notice of the ruling Shogun, who, for the sake of his art, took him into his immediate service and thus gave him a social position. From that time forward the No were under the special patronage of the Shoguns.

The collection of No coming down to our time contains 235 dramas, the great majority of which belong to the fifteenth century.

In the No, next after religion comes poetry. They are not exactly poems, but they contain many lyrical passages. The authors of the No do not pride themselves on originality. Plagiarism, it may be remarked, is hardly recognized as an offence by the Japanese.

The No are not classical poems; still they are not without charm. They embrace within their scope a world of legendary lore and of religious sentiment. After the sixteenth century the No ceased to be written. As dramas the No have little value. There is no action to speak of, and dramatic propriety and effect are hardly thought of.

For the last two hundred years Yedo has been to Japan for literature what London is to the United Kingdom, or Paris to France. It is noticeable that authors no longer addressed themselves exclusively to a cultured class, but to the people generally. And not only are the humbler classes better educated, they are more prosperous in every way, and books are purchased as well as read. Printing which, in Japan, dates from the eighth century, is common.

FOR EVIL AND FOR GOOD
But the popularization of literature during the Yedo period worked for evil as well as for good. Many wholesome moral and religious treatises were brought within reach of the nation generally, and knowledge was greatly extended. On the other hand, the average level of taste and refinement was distinctly lowered.

Compared with the classical period, the Yedo literature is infinitely more voluminous. It embraces history, biography, poetry, the drama, essays, sermons, fiction of various kinds and travels, and a huge mass of scientific works. Yet it is a sad falling off in point of form. It shows the most glaring faults, such as extravagance, false sentiment, defiance of physical and moral probabilities, intolerable platitudes and improbable adventures. There is no want of ability, and plenty of genuine wit and humor are discernible, but disciplined imagination and consistent method are sadly lacking.

The position of women generally was very different in the Yedo period from that it had been in earlier times. Chinese notions of their absolute subjection made great progress. Women were now rarely heard of in public life and disappeared completely from the world of literature. The Japanese of the ancient classical period

AN OBJECT LESSON

IN A RESTAURANT

A physician puts the query: Have you never noticed in any large restaurant at lunch or dinner time the large number of hearty, vigorous old men at the tables; men whose ages run from sixty to eighty years; many of them bald and all perhaps gray, but none of them feeble or senile?

Perhaps the spectacle is so common as to have escaped your observation or comment, but nevertheless it is an object lesson which means something.

If you will notice what these hearty old fellows are eating, you will observe that they are not munching bran crackers, nor gingerly picking their way through a menu card of new fangled health foods; on the contrary they seem to prefer a juicy roast of beef, a properly turned loin of mutton, and even the deadly broiled lobster is not altogether ignored.

The point of all this is that a vigorous old age depends upon good digestion and plenty of wholesome food and not upon dieting and an endeavor to live upon bran crackers and health foods. There is a certain class of food cranks who seem to believe that meat, coffee and many other good things are rank poisons, but these cadaverous sickly looking individuals are a walking condemnation of their own theories.

In matter in a nutshell is that if the stomach secretes the natural digestive juices in sufficient quantity, any wholesome food will be promptly digested; if the stomach does not do so, certain foods cause distress, one of them being the Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal will remove all difficulty, because they supply just what every weak stomach lacks, pepsin, hydro-chloric acid, diastase and nux.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do not act upon the bowels and in fact are not strictly a medicine, as they act almost entirely upon the food eaten, digesting it thoroughly and thus giving the stomach a much needed rest and an appetite for the next meal.

Of people who travel, nine out of ten use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, knowing them to be perfectly safe to use at any time and also having found out by experience that they are a safeguard against indigestion in any form, and eating as they have to, at all hours and all kinds of food, the traveling public for years have pinned their faith to Stuart's Tablets.

All druggists sell them at 50 cents for full-sized packages and any druggist from Maine to California, if his opinion were asked, will say that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the most popular and successful remedy for any stomach trouble.

appeal more strongly to our sympathies.

A RACE FOR KNOWLEDGE

It is difficult to give an idea of the race for knowledge which possessed the Japanese people during the eighteenth century. The Shoguns encouraged learning by every means in their power. They founded libraries and colleges and were liberal with their favors to all eminent scholars.

Tsamayashi, the fifth Shogun, was passionately fond of learning. He surrounded himself with scholars and spent most of his time in study. It was in his time that Yedo began to take prominence as a literary center. High schools were established for the teaching of the classics, history and composition. Nor were the people neglected. Nearly every temple had a school attached to it, where the children of the people were instructed in reading, writing and arithmetic.

Passing over a number of scholars deservedly remembered by their countrymen, we come to Kallara Yekken, who was a voluminous writer and produced over 100 different works. His sole object was to benefit his countrymen. No Japanese books are more easy of comprehension than his. He was a man of excellent morality and the service he rendered to his country by his teachings can hardly be overestimated. One volume he devotes to the education of women.

The most distinguished of Kangakusha was undoubtedly Araki Hakuseki. He has left an autobiography, a very rare kind of literature in Japan. It was not written for publication, but for the information of his own descendants, that they might not have the same dissatisfaction he himself experienced of knowing little about their ancestors. This autobiography was written in 1706 after Hakuseki had retired from public life. Next to this autobiography his most important work was the "Tokushi Yovon." It gives for the first time a general view of Japanese history and showing the connection of events in a way never previously attempted. His strong interest in foreign affairs is evidenced by a collection of forms of diplomatic intercourse.

He died in 1725 in his sixty-ninth year. His life shows that in Japan at this time a career was open for talent. He owed little to any one but himself. It was sheer worth, force of character and intellect which raised him to the unique position of influence which he held. His works number over 300.

Mino Kiuso was distinguished from his earliest years by a love of learning. When Hakuseki retired from public life, Kiuso to some extent took his place as adviser to the Shogunate.

He is best remembered by a work of his old age. It contains unsparring denunciations of Buddhism, superstition and herey. He does not propound to the world original ideas, but in him as in Hakuseki, the inner spirit and temper which is fostered in Japan is seen at its best. Some ideals are wanting—forgiveness of one's enemies is not to be found there, nor a consideration for the weak and women, but a noble enthusiasm for lofty ideals and high achievements with a scorn of meanness. Loyalty to friends, devotion to duty and a contempt for cowardice and dishonesty are their un-failing characteristics.

A DIFFERENT DEVELOPMENT
Concurrent with the movement described, another and very different development of literature was going on in Japan—fiction, the drama and a new kind of poetry known as Halkai. But while the Kanayakusha wrote mainly for the Sammarbars, the writers of romances, plays and Halkai addressed themselves for the first time in Japanese history to the people. Their public consisted more especially of the populace of the three great cities of Yedo, Kioto and Osaka.

In Japan as in China, the traders occupy a very low place, both morally and socially. Since the people had learned to read there was a want for popular literature. One of the earliest romances was the "Makugu Monogatary."

Ibara Salkuru was the founder of popular writing in Japan. He gave to the world a number of tales, novels, sketches of contemporary life and manners, which are very humorous. The immoral tendency of his works was denounced even in his own day.

To the fiction of the seventeenth century belong a number of children's tales which retain their popularity to this day. The most prominent figure in the history of the Japanese drama is Chikamatsu Monzaemon. He is the creator of the Japanese drama. He was a fertile writer. His plays are classified as historical plays and dramas of life and manners. He is credited with the authorship of 100 plays. His countrymen admire him without reserve and compare him with Shakespeare.

The poetry of the seventeenth century was known by the name of Halkai. The most famous disciple of this kind of literature was Matsura Basto. He was a diligent student of the Buddhist doctrines and was also an artist. Kioku—literally "mad poetry"—is a common and vulgar variety of Tanka. There is an absolute freedom in respect to language and subject. Kioku must be funny, that is all.

IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY
The pursuit of Chinese studies reached its height in the eighteenth century. In its early years distinguished men of letters lived and wrote. They had numerous successors, but "that which flourishes must also decay." After the philosophers came the sophists. Toward the end of the century all philosophical teaching was prohibited by the reigning shogun.

At the beginning of the eighteenth century a kind of novellizing craze appeared. The works of this time are novels, tales and sketches. Even when the title is a harmless one, the reader, after a few pages, is pretty sure to find an unsavory topic. Two of the best known authors of this time, together produced no less than 150 novels.

With all their faults, however, they are true representatives of their time and fill an important place in the history of Japanese literature.

The eighteenth century was the flourishing period of the Japanese popular drama. Since the beginning of the nineteenth century the writing of dramas has almost entirely ceased.

It seems to have been the usual practice at this time for playwrights to work together. One of the best known works is an historical play of five acts, the names of four authors appearing on the title page. A priest was the chief pioneer of the revived study of old literature. His greatest work is in twenty volumes. The title of his books means "A Selection of Spare Timber, Oil and Wax." Koda-Adzuma maro followed as a student of Japanese antiquity and the old classical literature. He presented to the government a memorial in which he protested vigorously against the exclusive study of Chinese and urged the establishment of the cultivation of the Japanese language and literature at Kioto.

The most influential of Koda's pupils was Mabuchi. He formed a school which produced many famous men. One of his pupils described the parent of the study of antiquity. "It was he," he adds, "with whom began learning which consists in devoting oneself to the examination of the ancient language and thought with a mind wholly detached from Chinese professions."

The student was a purist in style. He has left numerous commentaries and other works of research, indispensable even now to the student of the older Japanese language. He was also a writer of Tanka. One of the most remarkable men whom Japan has produced was Motoori Nongana. Stories are told of his youth, of his great yearning for wisdom. By profession he was a physician, but in addition to his quite eminent medical practice he was engaged in collecting material for his great commentary on the Kojiki and giving instructions to hundreds of pupils. Motoori was a prolific writer. He wrote fifty-five distinct works in over 130 volumes. His fame as a writer rests chiefly on his Kojiki-den, a commentary on the Kojiki.

THE ROMANTIC NOVEL
Santa Klodin was the first Japanese author to introduce the romantic novel, pure and simple. When young he disliked books. He had the reputation of a shrewd and successful man of business. One of the few Japanese authors whose fame has penetrated to Europe is Kiokuta-Bakin. In his own country he has no rival. Through influence Bakin obtained a position at a bookseller's. He was too fond of the pen to become a good business man. At the age of 70 he became almost blind. His pen was never at rest and the rapidly with which he composed may be inferred from the circumstance related by himself that one of his novels was completed in a fortnight. He is said to have written 290 works.

He is described as upright, but obstinate and an unusual man. Even Klodin, to whom he owed so much, could not get on with him. Bakin's writings prove him to be a man of great learning, intimately acquainted with the history, religion and literature both of Japan and China. His style is flowing and elegant. It is honorable to him that his works are free from all indecency of language and invariably moral in their tendency. He has little or no humor. His moral ideals are of the common conventional type of his day and country. The ennobling influence of a pure love and all the more delicate shades of feeling are wholly neglected by him. The best known of Bakin's contemporaries is Riutea Tanchiko (1783-1842). He was in early life an artist. He is best known for his romantic novels, but he also published stories in dramatic form, which were only meant for reading, not for the stage. His writings are marred by unreal sentiment and artificial rules of conduct, yet they contain many interesting glimpses of manners and customs of a state of society which has now passed away. Shikitei Samba was a native of Yedo and belonged to the trading class. He was a prolific writer. His first work was written in his 19th year. Two only of his works are remembered now. Jijunsha Iku, who died in 1831, was of a very eccentric character. His greatest work occupies a similar position in Japan to that of the "Pickwick Papers" in this country and is beyond question the most humorous and entertaining book in the Japanese language. In this book there is no suggestion of serious thought or feeling, all is broad, frequently even farcical humor. Its great drawback is that it is unrelieved by more serious matter. There can be no greater contrast than that between Iku and the romantic

The Medicine Mother Used.

Wine of Cardui has stood the test of time. It has cured the grandmothers, mothers, sisters and daughters of two generations. It cured women seventy-five years ago. It is curing women today of such troubles as disordered periods, bearing down pain, indigestion of the parts, nervousness and weakness of all kinds peculiar to the sex.

Wine of Cardui smoothes the path of girlhood, preventing severe trouble at the coming of womanhood, by correctly establishing the function so necessary to womanly health. As an emmenagogue it is the support of a woman through life, preparing her for the ordeal of childbirth and ensuring her a quick recovery of her strength which is necessary to motherhood. Wine of Cardui taken periodically will dispel attacks of weakness, and at the time when her health is menaced at the change of life it will ensure a healthy old age.

Wine of Cardui

This great tonic for women is within the reach of every sufferer. There is no expense of a specialist attached to the treatment. Secure a dollar bottle from your druggist today and you can get the same grateful relief that over 1,500,000 other suffering women have secured. Your druggist will sell you the same medicine that has been curing grandmothers, mothers, sisters and daughters for seventy-five years.

Here are a few of the 1,500,000 cured women who owe health and in some instances life itself to Wine of Cardui. Reading this list should induce every sufferer to take Wine of Cardui.

European Events Cabled by Our Regular Correspondent, World-Famous Head of House of Somerset

BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET (Special Cable to The Telegram, Copyright, 1904, by the Hearst News Service.)

LONDON, Nov. 12.—I am among the many who rejoice at the Primate's visit to the States, because I believe that all such international understanding agreements that family life which should exist between England and America. "I am glad to see the Primate for all that has passed," said the archbishop cheerfully, as he landed at Liverpool this week.

It is impossible to believe the many stories that come to use from across the water. We disregard them as diligently as do our American friends much of the gossip that reaches them from England. Among the latest stories of New York, we have been told, that a dog dinner has found favor. A wealthy woman entertains the members of society at a fashionable resort in honor of the birthday of her pet dog, the table being decorated with flowers, and the candles with red shades, and each dog placed in a high chair and served with cutlets, sausages and other dainties, by five butlers, assisted by the fair owners. I have been assured that those who have utterly repudiated the story, can not believe that any woman are capable of such fatuous folly.

It is not to be believed that sensible people could so insult an animal as to take it completely out of its natural surroundings, and put it in a position at once so ridiculous and unreal. Why not give dog dinners to human beings, and place the plate on the ground at various intervals, in order that men and women may not themselves become dogs? It would be just as sensible. If, however, such a fete has ever been organized, it is only a symptom of the terrible decadence brought about by the irrepressible possession of riches. The proper disposal of the money that is given among the most important studies given to those who are likely to require such tuition. Should such entertainments as dog dinners take place in Utopia, wise folks could still point out their inappropriateness and absurdity, but when they are said to be given in a city where there are thousands who never know what it is to have a full meal, in the "city of homes where the grim shadow of poverty falls across the hearts of the poor, it becomes not foolish, but criminal.

SUBJECT OF BREATHING I am delighted to find that the subject of breathing is being systematically brought to the front, and that earnest and able demonstrators showing how wonderful an effect the proper taking of breath may have not only upon the spoken and the singing voice, but upon general health.

F. M. Alexander, an Australian ecologist, who has studied this matter the study of many years, is convinced that the chief cause of the physical deterioration of the people in England, and also of half their illness, is the method of breathing. The average man, he believes, imagines that to take a long breath is necessary to suck in the air by the mouth, thereby increasing the atmospheric pressure on the lungs. Mr. Alexander holds that this pressure should be brought down to a minimum, and that the mouth should be closed whenever it is possible, and that the nasal passages should be dilated to the full extent. From the little experience that I have I am convinced that he is right, and that the ordinary method of breathing may be thoracic—that is, that the chest box must be expanded, without drawing in any breath by suction. In so-called physical culture, Mr. Alexander says, a man who develops a great chest means a man who is immensely improved in health, but unless the man knows how to breathe the thorax remains rigid, and he is exposed to all attacks from the air. "I have studied," he continued, "the Maoris at close quarters for twenty months, and I find that they are the most perfect breathers in the world. The squaws of the North American Indian tribes hold their children's lips in order to train them to breathe through the nasal passages. Mr. Alexander has been studying the fact that you rarely see them with their mouths shut, and consequently that they never breathe through their noses. Their lungs, therefore, are never inflated, and consequently their blood circulates poorly.

FLUENCE NIGHTINGALE Just fifty years ago this week Florence Nightingale and her band of thirty-eight nurses set forth on their mission to the Crimea. The immediate result of her action was that the hospital at Scutari, which Sir William Russell wrote, "The sick appear to be tended by the sick, and the dying by the dying," became, as he said, "a model of all a hospital should be." It is difficult to believe now the amount of criticism which that brave woman incurred, the cheap wit which leveled at her, and her nurses, the paltry ribes that they "had gone out among the soldiers to look for husbands," and the half-hearted support with which they met, even among those who ought to have been their champions. It was Longfellow who gave Miss Nightingale the name by which she will be always remembered. "The Lady with the Lamp," he called her, in memory of the long nights, when, lamp in hand, she passed along the Scutari wards. Through the years during which she has labored with work she has strenuously avoided publicity, and few realize that her presence is still among us, save from the fact that whenever a development in hospital nursing occurs, and whenever the art is made more perfect, some reference is made to her who would speak to one and another, nod and smile to many more, but she could not do it to all, you know, for we live by the hundreds, but we could kiss her shadow as it fell and lay our heads on her pillow again content."

Florence Nightingale has not only been a pioneer of hospital work, she has been one of those who have led the women of the world, and has shown them that "the frivolous work of foolish idleness" is a disgrace rather than an attribute of the sex. To Florence Nightingale, as to every woman, there was a moment in her career, which made for her failure or her success, and that moment came to her the day she entered the door of the barrack hospital at Scutari, for it tested her courage and to the uttermost. On the other side of the courtyard were men lying, closely packed together, surgical and cholera cases huddled side by side. Several days had elapsed since the last battle, but the men had not had their wounds dressed, and the fractured limbs were not set. There were no beds, no vessels for water or utensils of any sort. Men were lying in uniforms stiff with blood, and the dreadful den was in a state of dirt which defies description. "There was no floor, no roof of any kind," wrote Miss Nightingale, "and only empty wine or beer bottles for candle sticks." The men lying on the floor were tormented with vermin, and their limbs attacked by rats. Miss Nightingale counted six dead bodies, and the windows in a state of decomposition. No provisions, no kitchen utensils, no sanitation.

This was the condition of things with which the lady in chief and her nurses were confronted. Scarcely had she begun to establish order when the battle of Inkermann commenced, and the wounded were brought back to Scutari. Had she failed, the whole work which she had undertaken would have been wrecked for the future. She had to look beyond the exigencies of the hour to the time that was coming, and organize such a system of nursing as would make the scenes which she had witnessed impossible. "And then it was," says a recent biographer of Miss Nightingale, "that she was lifted into such supreme position." This heroic woman was often within the range of the guns, and was severely stricken with fever, but on the 8th of August, 1855, she returned to her home, closely veiled, and entered her father's house by the back door. The old man, however, was the first to discover who the stranger was.

Today, when every hour brings to us news of battles more hideous than anything witnessed by Florence Nightingale, we can but pray that the hospital horrors have been arrested through her action, and that the story that we have to take to heart from this century of the commencement of her work seems to be that, as a beautiful young woman, dreaming dreams of her future, it was not an ideal of happiness or of enjoyment or of comfort that she saw before her, but rather a deep resolve to supplant the terrible system of nursing then in vogue, which was the commencement of the career of the heroine of the Crimean War. As I cross the street and see the ominous signs of the newspapers, "Dying into War," the dark days of the fifties are recalled, and the one bright spot of that terrible history, is the birth of the Red Cross work.

Foreign News Which Interests All America, by Ireland's Most Gifted Author, Seumus Mac Manus

DUBLIN, Nov. 12.—A worthy monument to Tom Moore, the Irish poet, soon to be erected in Dublin. The Irish Freeman and the Freeman's Journal have already collected $2,000 toward the object. Moore has got a very shabby autograph erected to him, hidden away in a side street in the Irish capital.

The new movement will find a place in O'Connell street, formerly Sackville street, one of the finest streets in Europe. The grandfather of the present cardinal, Merry del Val, presented Tom Moore to President Jefferson at Washington one hundred years ago. The president receiving him in costume, comprising slippers and Connamara stockings. And Tom Moore was astonished to find the president in the same homely dress at a formal levee.

Tom had been used to meet many a little lordling here who had scorned to shake hands with a man in such garb. As enemies whispered that Tom dearly loved a lord—President Jefferson most equally given his gentle sense a shock.

Tom had, and still has, enemies. Many good Irishmen adore him. Many other Irishmen think he was a drawing room patriot. It is difficult to decide which he was; but he never found the hearts of the Irish people as did poor, unfortunate Clarence Mangan, an avowed enemy of the English, and far and away the greatest poet Ireland has known since she adopted English speech.

Poor King George of Saxony spent a long and worried life discovering for himself what he might have purchased in a twinkling, and memorized Shakespeare for a shilling, and memorized the grave most sweetly pillow a king's head.

BY PAUL VILLIERS (Special Cable to The Telegram, Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst News Service.)

PARIS, Nov. 12.—In spite of all official denials, the fact still remains that Pope Pius X. is far from being out of danger. Already at the time of his succession to the chair of St. Peter, Cardinal Sarro's heart troubled him constantly, and his physicians ordered him to beware of excitement and to keep exceedingly quiet.

Since that time the life of His Holiness has been nothing but a chain of excitement and worry, and this has undermined his strength. To a man as intensely human as the present Pope it would have been impossible to look at the great events which were then passing since the triple crown of St. Peter was placed on his head as a cool observer.

The bitter struggle between church and state in France, the expulsion from that country of all religious orders first filled his heart with grief, but because the church had less power and influence, for this Pope Pius X. knows the life, but because he loves France, loves the always loyal and religious French peasantry, which he knew would have done everything to keep the charitable sisters and monks in their midst, and the continued strained relations with the Quirinal, which he had hoped to end, have caused him many a sleepless night.

The many divorces in Catholic royal and noble families, and especially the divorce of Prince and Princess Waldenburg, whom he himself had married to her husband while he was still a cardinal, all these things have been poison to Pope Pius, who was told to avoid feeling anything excitement and worry.

And, as the crying and alluring war between Russia and Japan, the terrible loss of life, the heart-rending reports of the sufferings of tens of thousands of wounded left to die alone unnoticed, their wounds festering, their minds in mental agonies before the horrors of the war were to die without the last rites of the church.

Probably no man has suffered more mental anguish during the last seven months than Pope Pius, whose heart went out to all these people, though powerless to stop the war. For weeks before the attack came, which came very near robbing the Roman Catholic church of its head, Pope Pius, I am told, spent hours each day in devotedly praying for the dead and beseeching God to show him a way to put an end to this ungodly carnage.

Quietly, he is said to have used all his influence with the rulers of Europe, to make them interfere, but again and again he was disappointed, and then came the sickness which it took all his physicians to conquer, and the danger of which is not nearly past. Pope Pius is better, that is true, and he might grow well again, if he would follow the orders of his physicians, but this he does not. Against their advice he remained in Rome throughout the tropical heat of last summer, and now he has once more taken up the routine of his life.

At 5 o'clock in the morning he is called by his valet Sitta, but as a rule His Holiness is already out of bed and dressed when Sitta enters his bedroom. At 6 o'clock he attends mass in the oratorium next to his bedroom and afterwards his first breakfast, consisting of a cup of coffee and a slice of white bread or a couple of German Zwiebacks.

After that he takes a walk in the garden, accompanied only by his private secretary. He has remained upon the horsemen who always followed his predecessor, and their horses have been sold.

Having returned from his walk he composes and perbably reads and answers every letter sent to him, no matter how trivial its contents. His dinner is the simplest possible and scarcely ever costs more than 1 franc (20 cents). His only luxury is a glass of the excellent wine kept in the cellars of the Vatican.

PRICE OF SKELETONS The war between Russia and Japan has had a very noticeable effect on the price of human skeletons, which went down considerably even during the Boer war.

The trade in skeletons is of considerable importance in this city, and as soon as the war broke out in the Far East numerous agents of dealers left Europe for the East, and the first to arrive at Marseilles with great shipments of all that is left of the Russian-Japanese heroes, who had well deserved a better fate than to be used as ornaments in the dens of medical students.

HISTORY OF CHURCH AND STATE It is announced from Rome that Cardinal Merry del Val, with a number of Roman prelates, is working on a large history on the relations between the papacy and the state, and the object of it is to show first why and how the concordat was concluded, and by the official documents to prove that the rules laid down have always been rigidly observed by the Holy See.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—The people of England are more convinced than ever that King Edward is as near the ideal king as it is possible for a human being to be, and that but for him England would probably today be involved in a war with Russia.

The recent Hull incident aroused such a storm of indignation throughout the kingdom that the but for the diplomacy and personal influence of King Edward the way of bitter hatred against Russia would probably have brought about the most tremendous war in the history of the world; a war in which all the powers of Europe would sooner or later have become involved.

STAMP COLLECTOR Nearly all royal persons, from the czar of Russia to the king of Siam, have their peculiar hobby. The Prince of Wales has been an enthusiastic stamp collector ever since he was a boy in knickerbockers, and now he is a recognized authority on the subject.

Besides his unique collection of stamps he has a very interesting collection of posters, many of which have been especially printed for him in miniature to paste into a book.

The Princess of Wales's hobby is simple but charming. In a dainty vellum-bound volume she keeps the first words spoken by her children, as well as their many quaint sayings.

The King and queen both keep books containing the names of the places which they have visited, taken by themselves. Very characteristic is the Kaiser's collection—a whole library of scrapbooks containing all the newspaper clippings about himself which have ever appeared.

The Kaiser has a beautiful collection of hundreds of fans, including a fan made from the feathers of a grouse shot by the Kaiser soon after their engagement.

The most quaint collection of all is the king of Siam's collection of matchbox labels, which he started several years ago while visiting England. Soon after he began collecting he happened to be walking incognito down Piccadilly when he saw some one on the top of a bus throw away a matchbox.

Thinking it might be one that he did not possess, the king, to the horror of his adjutant, who accompanied him, dashed on the middle of the street to pick up the treasure.

A policeman, thinking from the excitement of the adjutant, that some one had been killed, stopped the traffic. For a few moments the greatest excitement prevailed, but smiling with the matchbox in his hand.

enormous value is on the way here from the Emperor of China. STRINGENT MEASURES After a full of many months the German authorities have once more resorted to the most stringent measures to repress the large party of the emigration of Alsace Lorraine, which still remains loyal to France.

As it has been noticed that the younger generation—that is to say, children of French parents—are even more attached to France and the French language, all teachers in public have been given orders to punish severely all children who are found during the French language during lessons or at play and to report them to the department of education, which then severely reprimands the parents.

The persecution of all French is even driven so far that special government detectives have been present in the Catholic churches during the last Sundays to see that the priest did not pronounce the Latin in the French manner, which is quite different from the German pronunciation of that ancient language.

These pamphlets have found their way even into the palace of the czar, and foreshadow, in the opinion of many people, a revolution which will place in the world a man who has never seen or even heard of.

OXFENFORD, HORSEMAN

BY
Clara Gaillard Byrnes

"THOSE CLOTHES ARE ALL RIGHT, YOU LOOK LIKE A LITTLE SWELL IN 'EM."

By CLARA GAILLARD BYRNES.

(Copyright by S. S. McClure Company.)

To use Oxenford's expression, Mary was choice. She had always loved what was serene and pure and dainty since the days when she wore socks and a big frilled hat and accompanied "Honest John" Petrie in his daily spin over Macomb's Dam. Honest John was not above stopping at various roadhouses for various whiskeys, and he loudly boasted that he could leave the child outside to hold the lines. She was not afraid, by God!

Oxenford's first glimpse of her was in front of one of these roadhouses. There was little of her visible except her gorgeous hat, and the two small, steady hands that guided Honest John's trotters round and round the grassy circle. It was a winter afternoon and the horses refused to stand.

Honest John drove out to see Oxenford's father, to whom he was well known as a recklessly successful plunger on the turf. Sometimes he brought Mary. She was 6 and young Oxenford nearly 20, but she suited him exactly, even then. He used to carry her out to see the colts. She never croup nor gabbled, nor seemed conscious of her ultra gorgeous clothes. Just as she kept sweet in spite of the elaborate finery with which Honest John overloaded her, so she kept her odd little personality aloof from the coarseness and fever of the sporting world into which Honest John had dragged her.

When she was 16, Honest John crippled himself by injudicious plunging, and want of money relieved Mary of the incubus of his choice in dress. She took to the clean-cut styles that her soul loved, and Oxenford was smitten with painful delight in this new aspect of her.

"You've hit it this time, Mary," he said, after serious consideration of her appearance. "Those clothes are all right. You look like a little swell in 'em."

Mary was very fond of Oxenford, and, pleased with his unreserved approbation, she hastened to confide a great project to him. Dad was down on his luck, and she was afraid he was a steady loser. She loved to study things, and she wanted to be able to do something for herself, something nice. She wanted to go to the normal school. She wanted to be a teacher.

Oxenford looked soberly at her. He had very different ideas for her, but they had to stand for a little.

"What do you want me to do?" he asked.

Mary wanted him to put in a word with her father. Honest John laughed at her. That his little girl should meditate such flights was absurd, something to be denied, with roars of Homeric laughter.

"Give him a tip-on the quiet," said Mary, falling into the vernacular of her earnestness. "Tell him you're on the inside, and you know I'm stuck on it, and I won't give it up."

Oxenford put it that way to Honest John, and Mary went to the normal school.

When Mary graduated Oxenford sent her the biggest floral horseshoe money could buy. Mary was appalled when she beheld it towering on her desk, but her white-gowned classmates fortunately did not understand its significance, and thought her a whimsical little thing.

If Honest John had had his way, Mary would not have been wearing that unassuming little white dress. Mary's father! How was he to tell her that he had stopped for Honest John and found him in no condition to come to Mary's commencement!

Mary found Oxenford, when the assembly broke up, leaning against a doorway, big and silent, in an unusually gorgeous waistcoat. She had left a group of classmates and classmates' brothers to go to him, and accepted his stumbling explanation about her father, with a quivering mouth.

It was not the last hurt Honest John was to cause her, for he plucked on recklessly, sinking lower and lower, until finally he put a bullet through his head in a fit of drunken melancholia.

ROSY AND HAZEL'S, SHE FELLS UPON THE NOTHBOOK.

he said; "perhaps eight or nine hundred." It was a worthy lie, but it was no use. Mary looked at him with bitter reproach.

"I know of twenty-five hundred he owed you, myself," she said, "because he told me."

"He paid it," protested Oxenford, sullenly.

"I ain't out a thou', Honest, Mary! 'Five thou', more likely," said Mary. "You've got to take the horse, Oxie."

"What horse?" growled Oxenford. He was at a loss for the next move, if Mary insisted on considering herself in his debt. The bigness of mind that lifted him out of commonness made it impossible for him to force his love on her when she was handicapped by this ugly legacy. His knee was fond of him, but his large humility led him to see nothing in this but the survival of her old childish fondness for the great fellow who had carried her about, her cheek against his stiff red curls.

"The Western horse. He's a two-year-old," Mary explained. "Dad told thousands on him, but he's overtrained. I think he's a good one."

"I'll take him and train him for you," said Oxenford, beginning to get interested.

"You are to take him and keep him," said Mary, fiercely. "I never want to see or hear of a horse again. I hate racing and everything connected with it."

Oxenford winced. He found it easy to forgive her outburst, but it cut him. "I've tried to sell him, but they say he's no good," said Mary, forlornly. "I can't get anything for him."

"Well, I'll tell you what I will do," said Oxenford, brightening. "I'll take a half interest in him and run him that way."

"Oh, no," objected Mary. "I couldn't do that."

Oxenford misunderstood her and flushed uncomfortably. "I forgot you were so down on racing," said he. "Of course you wouldn't want to be dragged into it."

"It isn't that," Mary explained remorsefully. "Only I want to square things. Oxie, and you may lose on this deal. Henry Graves says Flittermouse will never be anything but an old selling-plater."

"Selling-plater himself!" said Oxenford, hotly. "Tried to get the horse from you for about three hundred, didn't he?"

"Yes," Mary confessed. "Well, show Graves a thing or two," Oxenford said, grimly. "If you want to give me half of Flittermouse."

Mary sat in thought for some minutes. "I don't see any other way out," she said.

"All right, partner," said Oxenford cheerfully. "We'll pull enough out of our first race to make us square."

But Flittermouse lost his first race. Mary, that sedate and dainty little lady, burst forth from her schoolroom when the last of the wicked small boys she had been keeping in had clumped out. Rosy and Hazel, she fell upon the newsboy who was shrieking the sporting extra under her schoolroom window. She crushed the paper between her hands and tossed it aside after one glance down the column. She and Oxenford were heavy losers.

"OXIE," SHE SAID, STARING AT HIM, YOU'RE SORRY FOR ME!"

two girls she knew. They were nice girls. One was big and brown and handsome, a stenographer to some important political man; the other a kindergartner, a wisp of a creature, elfish and humorous. They came in and entertained Oxenford, but the good opinion they had previously entertained of him died. It is not easy to make small talk with a big man who watches the door and scowls. Finally Mary made her appearance, and they escaped gladly. She took her seat by the table, with a business-like air, and looked across it at Oxenford.

"Hard luck, wasn't it?" she said cheerfully, though her small features were disfigured with much crying. "I've been trying to figure out our losses, and I think I've got it straight. She flattened out her little account-book preparatory to reading items to Oxenford. But he moved over to the table and rested his arm upon it.

"You stop right there, Mary," he said. "It's my loss, whatever it is. There isn't anything to speak of. It was my judgment in pulling him in that race when he wasn't fit. I wanted to push him, when I ought to have waited, and you ain't going to lose by my blunders."

He did not meet Mary's eyes, which was unfortunate, as he might have learned something to his advantage. When he looked at her, she was figuring stubbornly in the red-covered notebook.

"Did you hear me?" he persisted. "Mary pushed the book from her and sat up very straight."

"Oxie," she said deliberately. "I know your game. Partners if we win, but if we lose you stand to pay. Well, I don't play it that way."

"Don't you believe what I say?" demanded Oxenford, with righteous heat. Mary studied him a few minutes with a curious smile.

"Never mind what I believe," said she. "Is that horse any good at all?"

"He's sure to win later on," said Oxenford, with conviction.

"Well, then," said Mary, "you've either got to take my half of him, or let me pay you that money."

"You're awfully afraid I'm going to do a little for you," Oxenford said with a sullenness so foreign to him that Mary stared in silence. She was looking very little and tired, but Oxenford plunged on savagely. "What's a few thou' if you cared anything, you wouldn't mind. I know you don't care for me or my horses. I never had the cheek to think you'd care, though you always were such a bully little pal. But I've had enough of this. Square with me!" And he laughed. "What good's money and horses to me, if I see you worrying yourself sick, and I can't stop it?"

He stopped, and Mary, as if released, got to her feet. But she held to the back of the chair, for her knees were shaking.

"All right then, you do," said Oxenford, and added with some bitterness. "It's a wonder you don't ask me to put in a bill for training. Good night, Mary; I'll keep you informed about the horse. And if you want me—"

"I shan't," Mary said, with dignity. "If you want me," Oxenford repeated, stubbornly, "you'll have to send for me." And he went, without more leave-taking.

Oxenford went to England. Mary subscribed to an English sporting paper, which was scarcely relevant to the career of Flittermouse, for that ornament of the turf remained on this side, and continued to lose races.

At last luck turned and Flittermouse won a race and a modest purse. Mary fluttered the check jubilantly before her friends.

"But, Mary," Miss Hutchins said, with some reproach. "I thought you were going to sell the horse."

Mary set her little jaw. "Not yet," she said; "I'm not square with Oxie yet. He wouldn't touch a cent of the money if I sold Flittermouse, but this way he has to take his share."

As a matter of fact, she had thrown paper. She sighed and pushed it from her.

"Want to hear the news?" asked the little kindergartner. She loathed the sheet with all her Puritanical little soul. To read about the contaminating columns of its sporting notes required on her part the extreme of devotion, but she plunged in gallantly.

"Oh!" she said, in a surprised voice, and stopped half way down a column. She was not lacking in a certain delicate malice.

"Go on," snapped Mary. The few paragraphs were to the effect that Mr. James Oxenford, the well-known American turfman, was about to sail out his English stable and return to America. It went on to elaborate some slurs at his expense.

"Of course it isn't true," said Miss Hutchins, soothingly, for Mary was in a white rage before the finish. "True!" said Mary. "True!" And she laughed. "You don't know Oxie. Except Colonel Frayne, he's the best sport I ever knew. Go on, Dickie."

Dickie finished the article. It closed with a statement that Mr. Oxenford's retirement was perhaps due to the fact that he was crippled by recent heavy losses.

Mary plucked off her bandage and blinked at them like a sick kitten. "Well," she said, "I'm going to write one letter before I go blind." And she started rather uncertainly for the sitting room, in spite of a thunder gust of protest.

"Dear Oxie," she wrote; "they say you're a heavy loser. I wish you hadn't gone over there. I haven't touched the 'Quentin' money, and I want you to do something for me. I want you to take it, for it really never was mine. You know that I owe it to you. Please, please, Oxie, don't send this check back to me. Yours, Mary."

"How dare those people say such things about you!" Oxenford reached New York on the day when Flittermouse was to have his try for the Greenwich sweepstakes. But Oxenford was not thinking of Flittermouse as he made his way uptown. When he reached the landing outside the flat, he almost fell over Miss Hutchins. She was talking in a low tone to an old man of a distinctly sporting type. Oxenford recognized Con Dalaney, who had been Honest John's driver for years. He put his hand on the old man's shoulder.

"Hello, Con," he said, heartily. "Come to see Miss Mary?"

"Yes, sir. That is, I have to tell her—"

Con stammered with such trouble in his face that Miss Hutchins hastened to explain. "It's that wretched Flittermouse," she said, indignantly. "They say there's something wrong with him, and he can't race."

Oxenford remembered then and understood. "Too bad, but it can't be helped. You needn't wait, Con; I'll tell Miss Mary."

Old Con hesitated. He knew very little outside of horses, but he was devoted to Mary, and somehow the idea was fixed in his old head that Miss Mary was worrying over what she owed Mr. Oxenford. Con knew something of Honest John's affairs.

"Mr. Oxenford," he muttered. Oxenford turned on him, and under his surprised look Con found his words with difficulty. "You won't push Miss Mary for the money," he said. "The horse ain't done yet, sir."

"You old fool!" said Oxenford, but not unkindly. "Get out!" and waited for Miss Hutchins to lead the way into the flat.

But that young woman faced him desperately, her face almost tragic under the tiny gas jet that flickered on the stairway.

"I don't believe she'll see you, Mr. Oxenford."

"Why not?" asked Oxenford, quietly. "Did she find out Miss Murray wrote to me?"

"Yes," Miss Hutchins admitted, somewhat startled by the presence of this big quiet horseman.

"Dickie's curate made her tell Mary last night."

Oxenford did not damn Dickie's curate, but his expression spoke for them. There were tears in Miss Hutchins' dark eyes.

"If Flittermouse wins this race, she says she is going to take the money and go off somewhere. She never wants to see any of us again."

"How about me?" asked Oxenford, thoughtfully. "He was not sorry that Flittermouse had a bad foot."

"She says she can never face you again. She doesn't want you to think she's a whimpering little blind beggar."

Oxenford did not smile even at that, for he could imagine Mary's misery. "But I've got to see her, you know," he said, frowning. "Tell her, Con, and Miss Hutchins did, regardless of the clamor of a Presbyterian conscience. Presently Oxenford, waiting in the little sitting-room, heard Mary moving through the hall. She came very slowly and Oxenford had time to think up what he intended to say. It had not occurred to him that she was feeling her way along the hall until she entered and then he saw that her eyes were bandaged.

"Well?" she said. "Well, Con?" and because there was an oppressive silence, Oxenford could see her shrink in expectation of something unpleasant to come, and longed to simplify matters by taking her in his arms and telling her a few plain truths. Yet little and half blind and hard up, Mary was Mary and had to be treated accordingly. She felt her way quite close to him and gripped his coat sleeve.

"Don't tell me he lost, Con," she said.

"No," muttered Oxenford. "No, but he can't run."

At his voice Mary grew rigid for a moment. Then she reached up very deliberately and ran her small fingers across his face.

"Oh, it's you, Oxie," she said, and raised her hands to her eyes as if to push up the bandage. But Oxenford caught her wrist.

"Don't do that," he said, in alarm. "You'll hurt your eyes."

"I want to look at you, Oxie," Mary said, simply.

"What!" said Oxenford. "Then

WIDOW GETS DAMAGES IF HUSBAND SUICIDES

(Special Cable to The Telegram—Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) VIENNA, Nov. 12.—The Austrian court of appeals has just reached a decision which has aroused great interest in legal circles here, by declaring that a widow is entitled to damages from persons who are morally responsible for her husband's suicide.

The defendants in the case were two men who had persuaded a friend that his wife was unfaithful to him. This, they told the court, they did as a joke, but the man took it so seriously to heart that he went home and hanged himself, leaving a letter giving the reason for his suicide. In the lower court the widow lost her case, but on appeal the court ordered the two men to pay her a monthly pension as long as she lived, on the ground that they had caused the suicide of her husband by psychic influences which had unbalanced his mind.

TWO GIRLS SAVE LIFE IN BLACK SEA STORM

(Special Cable to The Telegram—Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) BUCHAREST, Nov. 12.—During a great storm which has raged over the Black Sea for nearly a week two Jewish girls performed an act of unexampled heroism.

During the height of the gale a small coasting schooner was driven ashore near Kastovazea, some distance north of Rustendji. A tremendous sea dashed over the wreck, carrying away both masts and two out of the crew of six. The villagers having nothing but a small boat were afraid to go to the rescue, and watched helplessly while the breakers tore over the survivors. Finally an old bedridden Jew named Jais, hearing the news, declared that he would make an attempt at saving the lives of the sailors if it cost him his life, but in attempting to launch the lifeboat he was knocked down by a wave and stunned.

His two daughters then resolved to go to the rescue. Though foiled again and again by the sea, they at last succeeded in dragging the boat through the surf and rowed bravely toward the doomed vessel.

The boat was soon under the schooner's lee. One by one the exhausted sailors dropped in and the frail craft started for land. The two brave girls and the men they had saved succeeded in reaching the shore.

Queen Elizabeth of Roumania intends to personally decorate the two modern Grace Darlings for their heroic deed.

ALLEGED DOCTOR IS NOW UNDER ARREST

(Special Cable to The Telegram—Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.) RIGA, Nov. 12.—A sensation has been caused here by the arrest of one of the most prominent but also most eccentric physicians of the city, Dr. Rodkevitch, who is charged with causing grievous bodily harm to a young girl, daughter of a family of the high aristocracy.

Dr. Rodkevitch had an enormous practice and acquired a large fortune by his novel methods of treatment. He used, during later years absolutely no drugs, but claimed to cure all complaints by incantations.

Lunacy he treated by making the patient drink water in which papers inscribed with prayers had been dropped. His fame spread so far that a Count Emdsky, who owns a large estate near Minsk, sent his daughter, who was suffering from melancholia, to the doctor for treatment. Rodkevitch first nearly suffocated the girl by filling her room with the fumes of burning "holy paper," and then beat her mercilessly with a "magic wand." One of her nurses finally interfered and telephoned for the police, who found the girl nearly dead.

The North Eastern Railway Company of England is experimenting with small motor freight cars in the agricultural districts. They distribute fertilizing materials and cattle feed to the farmers and return with farm produce, to be shipped by rail.

CONSTIPATION

Health is absolutely impossible, if constipation be present. Many serious cases of liver and kidney complaint have sprung from neglected constipation. Such a deplorable condition is unnecessary. There is a cure for it. Herbine will speedily remedy matters. C. A. Lindsay, P. M., Bronson, Fla., writes, February 12, 1902: "Having tried Herbine, I find it a fine medicine for constipation." 50c bottle. Sold by H. T. Fangburn & Co.

FORT WORTH'S OPPORTUNITY There is some agitation of the matter of holding some kind of a festival in this city next spring, in an effort to induce a large number of people to come to Fort Worth and partake of our hospitality and business opportunities. The spirit of the suggestion is eminently proper, but the method is all wrong, and while the Telegram has no desire to cast any kind of a damper on the festival idea, it would respectfully suggest that in the annual fat stock show held in this city every spring there exists an opportunity for Fort Worth to have something that will be of real value to every portion of Texas.

The fat stock show is to be held here in March, and the Cattle Raisers' Association of Texas is to hold its annual meeting here at the same time. It occurs to The Telegram that the proper thing to do is to go to work on an effort to make these two occasions such red letter events that they will bring thousands of people here from every portion of the Lone Star state. Organize the situation so that we can have about ten days of business and festivity. Let the fat stock show follow the gentlemen's meeting, and the season of festivity be coincident with the fat stock show. If it is deemed wise to provide some kind of carnival attractions as an adjunct of the fat stock show, let us provide them, and go into the proposition with the old Fort Worth spirit that has never been content to lie down for anything or anybody in Texas.

In the fat stock show Fort Worth has a nucleus that should be built to annually until it is made what it should be—the greatest event of the kind in the entire southwest. It can be made of more permanent value to Fort Worth and Texas than any fair that is held in the state, and it is passing strange that the consciousness of that fact has not already dawned upon our people. The opportunity is ours if we will but embrace it.

The Telegram respectfully suggests that we take hold of the fat stock show and the gentlemen's meeting as the occasion for making one great big effort to provide something that will be of more benefit than the Dallas idea of simply catching and bumping the heads of a few suckers. Fort Worth is not built on those kind of lines.

OUR LAY SERMON "Judge not, and ye shall not be judged; condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned; forgive, and ye shall be forgiven."—Luke 6:37.

This old world of ours is very much given to the practice of judging. In fact, we all set ourselves up as just judges on the very slightest provocation. We are ever ready to ascribe wrong motives to others in all that they do, but rarely do we confess that we are inspired by other than the belief that our actions are eminently proper. We are quick to see the fault in another and indulge in criticism that often almost reaches the point of vituperation, but we can not see our own faults as others see them. It was a realization of that fact that prompted Bobbie Burns, the sweet Scottish singer, to indite that famous expression, "Oh, wad some power the giffle gie us, to see ourselves as others see us." Bobbie had the sentiment down to a fine point, and that he failed to make personal application of it is one of the things that must ever stand out to his discredit.

It is a difficult matter for us to see ourselves as others see us. It is a difficult matter for the individual to take such a penetrating squint at what goes to make up his or her bundle of conceit and do full justice to the occasion. When we come to consider our faults and numerous frailties, we are always ready to connect them with some mitigating circumstance. The thing may be wrong in itself, and if it is perpetuated by another it is almost heinous. But the mere fact that we did it raises it to the point where it is respectable in our eyes, even if very questionable. We are too quick to justify our own selfish indulgences and too prone to condemn others for the very same thing. We may begin the act of judgment by knowing nods and decorous whispers, but the fact of our judgment and our condemnation is soon made known. The whisper may be uttered in the softest manner possible, it may not be intended for general circulation, but sooner or later it finds the greatest publicity.

Many a business has been wrecked and many a character ruined as a direct result of but one soft whisper. Gentle reader, are you whispering any person's business or character to death? You may answer the interrogatory with an emphatic shake of your head, and deep down in your heart you may not have any consciousness that you are guilty, but the chances are that you are as guilty as Cain. You may not intend to thus murder the business or character of another, but if you have the whispering habit, you can not escape the consequences.

The fact that this form of judgment and condemnation is so universally expressed, in a sly sibilant whisper but adds to its deadly effect. It could not be breathed in a more virulent or fatal manner than to whisper it in the willing ear of some associate. The recipient of your confidence immediately assumes that the information imparted is so important or so salacious that it would not bear repeating aloud, so it is transmitted to another in the same mysterious manner, and as it travels it gathers both in weight and momentum. Finally the crisis comes in the affairs of the party that has thus been whispered to death, and people wonder what it was that could have precipitated such a condition of affairs.

A man may start out in this world with the intention of executing some great work, his heart inspired by his noble purpose, and his energies stimulated only by a sincere love for his fellow man, but there are few who can view his efforts without imputing to him motives of a selfish nature. Being naturally bad at heart ourselves, we can not conceive how it is possible that any individual can be inspired by the proper kind of motives. He may make his start, but we will bring his efforts to naught if possible by our insidious whispers and intimations of sordid and personal interests that we profess to believe are about to be subserved.

We do not stop to figure on the fact that God tells us as we judge so may we expect to be judged. If we backbite and find fault with our neighbor, we may confidently expect to receive our pay in the same kind of coin. We are too much engrossed in an effort to pull down the other fellow's house to realize that our own domicile is in great danger. We whisper him and his enterprise to death, and thereby make our calling and election sure to reap as we have sown. It is a great scheme, and a just scheme. What we do for the other fellow we may expect to have done to us.

"Forgive, and ye shall be forgiven." This thing of forgiveness is a very hard proposition. There is just enough of the old Adam in all of us to desire to get even. If an injury is done us we can not view it in any other light than an imposition which demands in lieu of the other cheek a blow straight from the shoulder. We had rather go on through life, bearing bitter malice in our hearts and a sense of our own deep wrong, than to extend the hand of forgiveness and forget an incident that is too often not worth remembering. To err is human, to forgive divine. There is a sufficiency of humanity about us to induce us to err, but we are painfully short on divinity. The happiest heart in America today is the one that bears no malice. But such hearts, like angels' visits, are few and far between. Many people who pray to God with much vehemence often wonder why it is that their prayers are unanswered. They forget that sentence in one of the first prayers they ever uttered, which says, "Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us." They go to God with a lie in their hearts and would claim God's forgiveness without having gained forgiveness to one who may have trespassed against them.

Jesus Christ, Himself, set the world its most glorious example in the matter of forgiveness. When the bitterness of death itself was even upon Him, His gentle heart breathed that sublime request, "Father, forgive them. They know not what they do." Certainly, our Lord and Master was subjected to as desperate straits and as agonizing death as mortal can ever be subjected to. He knew this, but even when He was suffering from all the degradation that could have possibly been heaped upon Him, His heart went out to His persecutors, and He prayed for their forgiveness.

It was the divinity of Christ that prompted Him to do this. Had He been of the earth earthy, He would have asked that these people be punished to the very limit for the terrible wrongs they had inflicted. That is what we would have done under the circumstances, but it would have been contrary to God's teachings.

"Forgive, and ye shall be forgiven." And through all the dust and gloom of defeat, when the democratic heart is bowed with the load that has been heaped upon it, the face of William J. Bryan yet looms up as the Moses who is to lead the party out of the bull rushes. The next campaign will be as full of radicalism as an egg is of meat. It may mean another great defeat, but Bryanism will dominate the next democratic national campaign.

A Kansas City man was divorced from his wife a few days ago and married another. His first wife went to his new home, ran number two away, prepared a good supper and took charge of the premises. The husband accepted the new situation with becoming resignation, and his new marriage annulled and remarried the woman he could not shake. And still there are some people who believe that virtue does not have its own reward.

Lobbyists will be as thick as ever at Austin during the meeting of the next state legislature, and there will be some carried to the state capital to be ground to a fine edge. The indications already point to the fact that the third house will be well represented, and our friends, the railways, will also be found doing business very industriously at the same old stand.

The civil service commission at Washington has promulgated a new rule debarbing conspives from serving in government employ where they will come in contact with the public. It is said new rule will be made particularly applicable to postoffices, and hereafter no appointments will be made where the physical examination reveals the presence of tuberculosis.

The oldest building in the Indian Territory is the old fort at Fort Gibson. It has been occupied continuously since 1823, and has harbored many notable in its time. Robert E. Lee, Jefferson Davis, Albert Sidney Johnston, and General Braxton Bragg are among the number who have sat before its spacious fireplace.

The report that Mr. Bryan, Hearst and others would at once proceed with the work of organizing a new political party, was vigorously denied. There is no necessity for organizing a new party. Democracy may be badly disgraced, but the grand old party of the people is still in the ring.

The attendance at the World's Fair is showing to show a very falling off, and this may be accepted as an indication that the public has just about enjoyed a sufficiency of the great exposition. Railways are all beginning to cut out their special train service.

The fact that the railway companies have finally agreed to replace that Hill street bridge has caused many expressions of approval from the people. It is to be hoped that the work of construction will be rapidly pushed, and there will be no further occasion for complaint.

If the democratic party is a southern party and can carry no state in the union outside of the south, then democracy might as well do honor to southern statesmen in conferring the honor of a presidential nomination in the future.

Senator Chauncey Depew says that he has rarely met Booker T. Washington's equal, but the remark should not be construed into an admission of any coolness between the senator and President Roosevelt. The two gentlemen are on the very best of terms.

A prominent English physician disputes the assertion that there is no use for the vermiform appendix. He says it plays a very important part in the digestive apparatus. Take care of your appendix, for you may yet need it in your business.

Judge Parker expresses himself as very grateful to the democratic party for the honor it intended to confer upon him, but he doubts it has reference to Dave Hill. Judging from the result the democratic

ONE TRAVELER'S SONG

My every hour of life is so complete! Like joyous spring that bubbles over—ful! My soul spills happiness around my feet, And all my days hold love unspeakable. It is so sweet to live, to breathe God's air, So sweet to feel the sunshine on my face! I wonder that within a world so fair, A single woe could find a hiding place. I have so much for which to thankful be, There is the light, the sun, the wild bird's song; The perfume of the countless blooms I see, The summer days so perfect and so long. And yet these are not half of what is mine. Of what is mine the while I love and live, For greater still the power to confine— Within my breast life's sweet symphony.

There are no bars to bind me and forbid My buoyant life to flutter and expand; No crevasse in my soul where nature hid To cheerfulness a constant reprimand. There is no mirror there with darkened face, To cast a lurid shadowed aftermath; But gazing out with vision clear and wide, My eyes behold a white and shining path.

The way my feet came over to this day Is level, no harsh slope or steep ascent; And o'er its length the broken sunbeams lay. Their hearts against rare pebbles of content. Sometime the dark browed days have never deep. Along the meadows where my roadway wound; I have come on with heart that constant hoped, And seeking pleasure I so much have found.

There are no markers rising up behind, No pale-eyed ghosts against the sky outlined. No, nothing but the glow of joyous life. No pools along the wayside bed that grew Out of a storm of tears and settled there. A tribute to the bitterness I knew; No fragment of dead, unanswered prayer.

Thrilled with life's rapture I have sung aloud, And when I see the multitude so sad, I want to cry unto the grieving crowd That all along the way I have been glad. Now the broad plain that stretches to the gates Of Edinburg shines like a golden strand. At whose far end a well lived life creates An entrance into God's great Uppland. VERNIE LAWSON.

Cleanings From the Exchanges...

Money is easy and plentiful just now and the average person should take advantage of the opportunity and lay aside as many dollars as possible for use when misfortune overtake him. It is folly to squander one's money on everything that he may fancy.—Italy News.

The fact that money is easy and plentiful should not be an incentive to spend it. The man who is lavish in his expenditures finds the easiest thing about money is the celerity with which it disappears.

"Above all strike down this infernal six-shooter practice," said Governor Hogg in a speech the other day. "The man who carries a six-shooter has aim on somebody's life. He may not have his victim selected, but he has murder in his breast. When you put him in jail you prevent a murder." There is a Hog amendment that is worth hearty indorsement. Take that pistol out of the coward's pocket and it will save the lives of more decent and better men. Make the penalty one that he will fear beside a fine. Let him see the penitentiary staring him in the face and the pistol totter will desert.—Orange Tribune.

And Governor Hogg never spoke a truer truth than that uttered when he took that shot at the pistol carrier. There are too many six-shooters ready to do business on slight provocation in Texas, and an effective remedy must be provided.

Cebu should begin to cultivate the Farmers' Union. It is one of the pillars of the union—in fact one of the purposes for which the organization was projected—to purchase in combination and large quantities. One Farmers' Union near Hillsboro went out to purchase flour one day last week, and being attracted to Grandview, made a purchase amounting to 20,000 pounds at that place. The farmers are adopting modern business methods and the town that wants their trade has got to go out after it.—Chicago Enterprise.

And Fort Worth should do the same thing. The farmers should be made to understand that our business men are in hearty accord with the objects of their organization, and are ready to meet them a little more than half way on any proposition.

The Honorable James Wilson may now return to his seeds and plants in the agricultural department at Washington. He is better even as an expert bugologist than he is in saying harsh things about the people of practically one-half of the United States, just because they don't happen to agree with him politically.—Denison Herald.

Secretary Wilson is a partisan republican and occupies his present position by virtue of that fact. He may say all that if Japan is to retain her place among the nations of the world, a religion is necessary, and of all religions they estimate Christianity to be the best. That Christianity is necessary to sustain strength and purify the life of the nation.

The total number of Christians of all denominations in Japan is less than 200,000 in a population of 45,000,000, and yet the spiritual and moral influence is more than 100 times its numerical strength.

The proportion of charitable, philanthropic and educational institutions established by Christian missions and native Christians in Japan is as three to one of those of Buddhism and Shintoism.

The only college for the higher education of women in the empire was established less than five years ago by a Christian Japanese minister. Marquis Ito said a short time ago: "The only true civilization is that which rests on Christian principles, the mean things concerning the south he chooses to, and in return we can at least think unutterable things about Secretary Wilson. One of the first duties the next legislature will take pleasure in performing will be to make the Terrell election law look like 30 cents by trimming it off a bit. When the legislature gets through with that very expensive luxury it will resemble a Panhandle town after a cyclone has struck it.—Mineral Wells Index. The legislature will unquestionably try to perfect the law by eliminating some of its bunglesome features, and this will afford an opportunity for the enemies of the measure to get in their work. It will look worse than 30 cents when they get through with it, unless proper precautions are exercised. War correspondents intimate that General Stoesell and his men are depressed. Men who have been penned up in a beleaguered city for ten months, who have lived in a flame of fire and a rain of shot and shell should be hilarious just to please the correspondents and the readers of the newspapers. There are 60,000 families in Japan who are depressed, too, and with good cause. Loved ones fell in the wild charges on the Russian forts which wall the doomed city of Port Arthur.—Dallas Times-Herald. There is ample justification for both Russian and Japanese depression. The war god is exacting a heavy toll from both nations, and women and children in both countries are mourning for the loved ones who will never return. Dr. Charles A. Shepard, who has been a successful tea grower on his plantation in South Carolina for a number of years, says tea raising is no new thing in this country, for in the old days a French priest planted tea on the banks of the Ashley river. But owing to the difference in the cost of labor the United States can not compete with the Orient in low-grade or cheap teas. "It will pay us," he says, "to produce only that of the highest quality and which brings a high price in market. The tea grown on my place in South Carolina compares with the best that is imported from eastern lands." It may be recalled that the agricultural department was at one time very much interested in the cultivation of tea in Texas, but very little has been heard of the ventures lately. It would be pleasing to know that tea growing in Texas has been as successful as in South Carolina and there is no reason why it should not be.—San Antonio Express. It is being gradually developed that just about anything grown in any other state can be produced successfully in Texas. We are just beginning to learn a few of the things we can do—just getting into our fighting clothes. Of the one hundred and fifty thousand negroes in Texas of the voting age, fully one hundred and twenty-five thousand were debarrd from voting yesterday because of failure to pay poll tax. A vast army of white citizens were also excluded

THE YELLOW PERIL

By REV. JOHN McKIM, D. D., Bishop of Tokio. I do not believe that there is any Yellow Peril in Japan.

Japan has thrown her lot, once for all, with Occidental civilization and it is impossible for her to go back. Four days before I left Japan, the prime minister, Count Katsura, sent for me and said:

"I hear you are going to America very soon, and as you have been living in Japan nearly twenty-five years and are acquainted with us and the many changes that have taken place in that time, I hope you will do what you can to correct one or two mistaken impressions that have appeared in American newspapers. One is the so-called 'Yellow Peril.'"

Count Katsura went on: "We are not of the same color as Americans and Europeans. We are as God made us, but our hearts are as white as those of Americans and Europeans. "Four years ago, when the foreign diplomats and Chinese Christians were in danger at Peking from the Boxers, the Japanese troops marched shoulder to shoulder with the soldiers of Europe and America to their relief.

"Our educational system is based on that of America. Civil and religious liberties are guaranteed by the imperial constitution to all people living in Japan, whether native or foreign. Many of our leading men in the army, the navy and in civil service are Christians.

"There are thirteen Christian members in the imperial diet, and the speaker of the last house, elected by the diet, Katakao Kenkichi, was an earnest Christian man. There are, by the way, out of 370 only thirteen of whom were Christians, and yet they elected this man their speaker, and his election was confirmed by the emperor. There are also Christians among the judges; Christians among the professors in the Imperial University.

"When war was declared some people thought it would be a war between paganism and Christianity, and between white and yellow.

"The prime minister and the minister for home affairs directed the leaders of Shintoism and Buddhism to instruct their followers that this was not a war of religion or of race, and that as the constitution guaranteed religious liberty to all, not one should be interfered with because of his belief.

The bishop in the Russian church has been in Tokio ever since the beginning of the war and is as free and safe from personal injury as if he was in St. Petersburg.

I have visited since last February many towns, varying in distance from fifty to 600 miles from Tokio and have been treated with the same courtesy as is given me in Boston. There has been sympathy, confidence and friendship between Japan and America for fifty years, forming a triple court which cannot easily be broken. It was the persistent, but kindly pressure of Commodore Perry which persuaded the Japanese to sign the treaty of 1854 which brought her into the committee of the nations of the West.

I consider, therefore, that we, as Americans, have a great responsibility to the Japanese. It is acknowledged by the leading statesmen and educators in Japan that there has been a decided decadence in manners and morals among their people during the last forty years. The whole system of ethics has lost much of the power it formerly had and there is unquestioned decline in the power of Shintoism and Buddhism to impart a healthy moral tone to the rising generations.

Count Okuma, one of the greatest statesmen and educators of the day, and Marquis Ito, the late prime minister, who is sometimes called the father of the constitution of Japan, have both, in public utterances, asserted that if Japan is to retain her place among the nations of the world, a religion is necessary, and of all religions they estimate Christianity to be the best. That Christianity is necessary to sustain strength and purify the life of the nation.

The proportion of charitable, philanthropic and educational institutions established by Christian missions and native Christians in Japan is as three to one of those of Buddhism and Shintoism.

The only college for the higher education of women in the empire was established less than five years ago by a Christian Japanese minister. Marquis Ito said a short time ago: "The only true civilization is that which rests on Christian principles, and consequently, as Japan must attain her civilization on these principles, these young men who receive Christian education will be the main factors in the development of future Japan."

Count Okuma, in an address to university students, used this very significant language: "We may say that, although as a nation Japan has benefited materially by the adoption of foreign methods and institutions, our moral progress has been by no means satisfactory. In fact, it is a question whether as a people we have not lost moral fibre as a result of the many new influences to which we have been subjected. The efforts which Christians are making in applying to the country a high standard of conduct are welcomed by all right thinking people. "As you all read the Bible you may think it antiquated, out of date. The words it contains may so appear, but the noble life which it holds up to admiration is something that never will be out of date, however more the world may progress. Live and preach this life and you will supply to the nation just what it needs at the present juncture."

A former member of the cabinet, speaking on this subject, said: "No matter how large an army or navy we may have, unless we have righteousness at the foundation of our national existence we shall fall short of success. I do not hesitate to say that we must rely on religion for our highest welfare, and when I look about me to see upon what religion we can best rely I am convinced that the religion of Christ is the one most full of strength and promise for the nation."

Does this sound very much like "Yellow Peril?" JOHN McKIM, Bishop of Tokio.

THE SOCIAL SEASON

school of novelists. He is a realistic writer in the good as well as the bad sense of the word.

THE SENTIMENT BOOK
All students of Japanese literature are familiar with the "Sentiment Book," a kind of novel which flourished most in the third and fourth decades of the nineteenth century.

The best known writer of this class of story died in 1841, imprisoned in his own house, for publishing works detrimental to public morals.

The great service rendered by him and his fellow composers was to recall the attention of writers and readers of fiction to human nature as the proper subject of the novelist's pen.

The first newspaper in Japan describing this name was published in Tokio by a Scotchman named Blaik about 1872. At the end of 1894, in spite of vigorous censorship no fewer than 814 different newspapers and magazines existed.

From about 1880, when translations of European novels began to appear, Japanese literature showed few signs of foreign influence. The first novel translated into the Japanese language was "Ernest Maltravers," which had a profound sensation and was soon followed by translations of Dumas, Rider Haggard and Jules Verne, "Telmaque and Robinson Crusoe" (commended for its excellent moral teaching), have also been translated.

Although Yuzo was the principal promoter of this new movement, in his "Shosui Katage" (Types of Students) he has given an example of a realistic novel. It is well written and has some humorous sketches, but has little plot or dramatic incidents. He has also tried his hand at drama.

The political novel is represented by Ludo Nansui, who belongs to the progressive party in politics and social science, and his pages brim with allusions to things European. He notes Shakespeare and is familiar with Dumas, Gladstone, Lytton, Dickens, Scott and the old Japanese authors.

"The Ladies of New Style" is a good example of his works. It is a novel of the nature, which in Tokio shall have advanced in all western civilization and boast of wharves, docks, trawneys and factories.

Yamada Taketara, a contemporary, is famous for his endeavors of simplifying the grammatical forms and rules. He has produced a number of works written on this principle. His stories are described as "cleverly written and well drawn."

Yinbo is a blind story teller of Tokio whose novels are first delivered in spoken dramatic form and then in writing by his pupils. Some of his plots are said to be taken from the French. His language is simple and easy.

One of the most popular and voluminous novelists of the day is Ozaki Tokutaro. He is said to be an admirer of Emile Zola.

Koda Naryuk has imagination and lofty aims, a fine flow of language, never descending to vulgarity. But his works lack action and his speeches are terribly lengthy. His best work is an historical novel of the civil wars.

CONDITIONS ARE FAVORABLE
The conditions of the present day are more favorable than those of any previous period to the growth of good poetry in Japan. The abnormal life has received a great stimulus from the introduction of European, especially English, ideas. The first to recognize the advantage which the Japanese poet might derive from European models is Tanyama Masakazu, a professor of the Imperial University. His "Poetry of New Form" marks an epoch in the history of poetry in Japan. Finding the ancient classical language inadequate to the expression of new ideas he frankly adopted the ordinary written language of the day, which hitherto had been only used for popular poetry of the humblest pretensions.

In his "Poetry of New Form" are contained nineteen poems, only five of which are original, the remainder being translations from English poets—Campbell, Tennyson, Gray, Longfellow, Shakespeare and Kingsley.

The last two or three years have produced a considerable quantity of verse, more or less in the new form, which reveal some promising features. The process of absorbing new ideas which has mainly occupied the Japanese nation during the last thirty years shows that important results may be expected in the near future.

COUNCIL OF JEWISH
A large number of interested hearers were present at the home of Mrs. L. It was an open meeting and besides the members of the council Miss Goldberg's audience was composed of those who know of her gifts

The American Farmer the Best in the World.
The American farmer is the greatest man in the world to-day because he is master of the soil—he is gaining in intelligence quite as rapidly as his products are increasing in magnitude. Our recent combings of capital in the United States measured in money have enormous, yet such figures sink into insignificance when compared to the money, brain and brawn invested in agricultural industries. For instance, the farmers of Minnesota and Dakota have received $20,000,000 for their products in a single year. The farmer knows what Nature will bring forth for him from his experience in the past. He knows if certain seeds are planted and properly cared for that Nature will take proper action, and in the same way you are master of your own destiny.

Providing your blood is in good order, it only needs a little effort on your own part to keep healthy and strong—rid your body of the poisons that accumulate, and your system is ready to ward off the attack of the germs of disease. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes rich red blood by increasing the number of red blood corpuscles. There is no alcohol in this great tonic to shrivele up the red blood corpuscles. As an alternative extract, made only of herbs and roots it goes about its duty in nature's way. It stimulates the liver into proper action, and feeds the worn-out nerves, stomach and heart on pure blood. Used for over a third of a century it has sold more largely than any other blood medicine in the United States. More bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery are sold to-day than ever before.

That is a true test of its medicinal value after thirty-eight years of deserved popularity.

Dr. Pierce's "Medical Adviser" sent on a trial of stamps to pay for mailing only. Send at once to the publisher for book in paper covers, or 31 stamps for cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Mrs. Mary O. Hahn, one of the leaders of Chicago's social circles, writes:

For two years I have been troubled with biliousness, caused by inactivity of the liver. I had dizzy spells at times, pains across my back, and a tired heavy feeling, with loss of appetite and nervousness. Our family physician prescribed some liver tablets which certainly did not help me in the least. I took Apollinaris and other mineral waters, but my complexion became more yellow and my general health worse. Reading over one of your little booklets I decided to give Dr. Caldwell's (Laxative) Syrup Pepsin a trial and am so glad that I did. One bottle did more for me than $10.00 worth of other remedies. I knew at once I had the right remedy. I kept taking it for several weeks, when I considered myself completely cured. My skin is white and smooth as a baby's, and I feel in excellent health and spirits, thanks to your Syrup Pepsin.

as speaker and organizer. Her address told of the work done in many cities and many lands. "The council," says Miss Goldberg, "is to be an auxiliary to the synagogue. If for philanthropy alone there would be no need of it. Philanthropic work had been before the council was and had been well done. If for education still there would be no need for school books and all the aids to learning were on every hand. But its mission was to put these good works in harmony with the spiritual side of life to join them with religion."

Miss Goldberg then outlined work for the local council in aiding Rabbi Jasin and in preparing for the next triennial meeting of the council.

Miss Goldberg's address scintillated with epigrams, one being on the benefit of conventions. "It brings together the woman who thinks too little with the woman who thinks too much for their mutual benefit."

COMMERCIAL CLUB
A dance at the Commercial club is always eagerly anticipated by the club girls and on Tuesday evening one was held realizing their pleasant enjoyment. Marshal Spoons lead the german with Mrs. Taylor of Texarkana, the other dancers being Misses Stripling, McLean, Greenwald, Larimer, Van Zandt, Hunter, Deall, Taylor, Ellis, Pendleton, Schuber, Francisco, McLean, Adams, Miller, Edelman, Fouts, Gahagan and Goree.

THE IMPERIALS
As the dancers left the Imperial hall Thursday evening everybody told Robert May what a pleasant evening it had been. Mr. May is energetic in providing the weekly Thursday dances and the young folk are more than appreciative.

Among those present were Misses Allie Mallard, Edna Pendleton, Lucille Griffin, Wheeler, Edna Mae Lewis, Mary Dingee, Minnie Williams, Florence Goetz, Eva Mae Scott, Elizabeth Gardner, Beal Oxsheer and Anne Binyon; Messrs. THE KERAMIC CLUB
The members of the Ceramic Club were out in full force last Thursday working with zeal in the studio of the director, Mrs. Sharon, on the Christmas holidays turning attention to gifts and ornamentation. A lemonade pitcher, a complete dinner set, salad bowls and a large tankard were noted in the hands of the members.

As so many people have been making inquiries about the club and its workings, Mrs. Sharon has consented to open her studio containing the work being done to any and all visitors every Friday afternoon from 2 to 5. Any one interested in any form of china painting will be very welcome.

THE OLIVES
The Olives played cards with Mrs. J. J. Parker last Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Swann winning the prize, a handsome plate. Those who were unlucky contestants were Mesdames Jere Van Zandt, Hubbard, Terrell, Martin, Triplett, Hunt, Davis, Smith, Stanley, Miller, West, Nalton, Cooper, Robinson and Van Gelson; Misses Roy, Swann, Drake, Oatner, Shugart, Pennington and Vickery.

Miss Drake will be the next hostess.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY
The Woman's Auxiliary of the Railway Mail Clerks met with Mrs. Frank Hubert Thursday afternoon, eleven answering to roll call. There were also three visitors and Mrs. Snowden of Denton. One new member was enrolled, Mrs. M. D. Haddock. After the program and current events, there was quite an interesting contest on "Fowls." The contest cards were letter souvenirs done in water colors by Mrs. S. W. Ray, one of the members.

Mrs. G. W. Ratliff was the fortunate possessor of a china, salad bowl. A two-course luncheon was served, chicken salad, cheese straws, olives and chocolate and cake.

The next meeting will be held in the evening of Nov. 17 with Mrs. W. A. Davis, 415 Lipscomb street, presiding. The evening reception for the ladies and their husbands.

INGLEWOOD CLUB
The Inglewood club met with Mrs. O. O. Hedgesworth Wednesday afternoon. Roll call was answered from 25. After the regular order of business was concluded a contest was prepared. The answers were names of trees. There being a tie between Mrs. Wares and Mrs. Arbacher on first prize, the former withdrew in favor of the guest. While the hostess was preparing dainty refreshments Miss Freda Miller rendered some very classical music. Members present were Mesdames Wares, Terhune, Harrison, Hollingsworth, Hinchey, Bennett, Hartman, Dandy, Payne. Guests were Miss Freda Miller, Mrs. La Mountain, Mrs. Arbacher and Mrs. London.

Before members left for their homes they were presented and Mrs. Pendleton, the royal entertainer.

Miss Samuels will be the hostess this week.

DAUGHTERS OF REVOLUTION
The monthly meeting of the Daughters of the American Revolution was held last Thursday afternoon with Mrs. E. D. Camp, Mrs. Galbreath, Mrs. Dickinson and Miss Beal being joint hostesses. The chapter has inaugurated "at homes" as meeting places, adding a bit of sociality to the routine of business. A business discussion of some length was followed by a puzzle game, a bunch of carnations being given to Mrs. Kane, who worked it out first. Refreshments were served later.

THE MONDAY BOOK CLUB
The Monday Book club gave their meeting last week to a symposium of views and impressions of the St. Louis exposition. The president, Miss McLean, led in the discussion, which showed hearty approval of exhibitions in general and that of St. Louis in particular. One member said: "There are no seas in the aggregate things one would have to travel to many countries, being in that particular a saving of time and money."

Said another: "They present opportunities of comparing the best ideas of workmen along all lines, especially in the mechanical arts."

In the discussion the idea was advanced that exhibitions would be improved if the state buildings were eliminated and if anything like the St. Louis fair it would be better to combine the varied industries, liberal arts and manufacturers' building; these being really repetitions of ideas. By such changes much money would be saved in construction and the physical strength of visitors be better conserved.

A THURSDAY AFFAIR

SOCIAL HAPPENINGS
LADIES OF THE CHURCH
Mesdames Sam J. Lawrence, Bessie Gordon, Harry Adams, V. S. Wardlaw, Clifton and McCart were the hostesses of a pleasant afternoon tea for the benefit of the aid society of the First Presbyterian church, Thursday. Songs by Mrs. Groom, Mrs. Cummings and Miss Preuit were musical features specially admired. Nectar and tea was served by Misses Millican, Dunlap, Russell, Bostick, Lyles and Fry.
MISS MAGIE PRICE
Mrs. W. R. Grady and Mrs. J. J. Reimers were the guests of honor at an afternoon with cards Wednesday, the hostess being Miss Margie Price, who entertained at the home of her mother, Mrs. Couthorn, 815 Lamar street. A number of choice cut flowers were used as decorations and an appetizing luncheon was served at the close of the game.
The players were Mesdames J. J. Reimers, W. R. Grady, Eversberg, Oswald Wilson, Misses Ellis, Murdoch, Taylor, Speers, Mayfield, Crandell and Ashby.
ALL SAINTS' HOSPITAL LADIES
The All Saints' Hospital Association has a neat sum to put in the treasury as the result of the tea given in the parlors of the Hotel Worth last Thursday afternoon. At this tea it was announced that the association had made arrangements to complete the hospital building and that it would not be long until the hospital would be ready for use. This was news of such import that it gladdened the hearts of every visitor for the earnest efforts of these ladies to establish a charity hospital for the poor.
The ladies receiving Thursday afternoon were Mesdames Beggs, Davis, Chamberlain, White, Bevans, Hyman and Matlock; Misses Connell, Sparrow, Vickery, Hosmer, Lewis and Mattison.
After drinking the tea and partaking of other refreshments the guests met Miss Emma Beggs and Miss Joe Marie Anderson armed with the most beautiful cut chrysanthemums and for a small consideration the young ladies were persuaded to part with them.

MRS. R. E. L. MILLER
More than a hundred ladies interested in the good work of the Kindergarten Association availed themselves of enjoying the tea given by Mrs. R. E. L. Miller last Tuesday afternoon in her home on Washington avenue. While sipping the fragrant tea there were many opportunities for viewing the cozy and artistic home of the hostess. Mrs. Miller stood in the hall with her mother, Mrs. Ligon, and with her mother, Mrs. Ligon, and Mrs. Stannery met the guests at the door and in the dining room they received the tea from Misses Swayne and Spoons. A tidy sum was realized for the kindergarten cause.
MRS. JOSEPH M. LOGAN
Miss Lulu Keeser of Clarksville, Tenn., was the guest of honor at a large and elaborate card party Thursday afternoon, given by Mrs. Joseph M. Logan. The autumn season was the theme of decorations and bridge whist was the game played. The score cards were oak leaves of water color paper, ornamented with landscape studies and all through the house sprays of autumn leaves were hung against the curtains and as festoons from the walls, while chrysanthemums of white and yellow were massed in jardiniere and in
