

PURE FOOD CAMPAIGN

Collector of Customs at New York Is Enforcing Law Regarding Importation of Manufactured Articles

WILL ANALYZE THEM ALL

No Product Will Be Allowed to Come Into the Country Until Government Chemists Have Passed on the Purity of the Ingredients

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Collector of Customs Stranahan at the port of New York has assumed the aggressive for the government in its attitude toward the enforcement of the pure food law, with special reference to the labeling of all imported products with the formula noting the use of coloring or preserving substances of whatever kind, such as sulphate of copper, boracic acid, glucose, etc. That the authorities have decided to show no more leniency toward importers and foreign manufacturers failing to comply with the law is evidenced by the fact that a large quantity of "egg white"—a pasty preparation used extensively by bakers and confectioners, found to contain a dangerous amount of boracic acid—was ordered transhipped to France.

At the same time importers generally were notified that hereafter the policy of the government would be to force the transshipment to the original point of shipment of all goods brought here without proper labels. This was the first intimation the importers had received that radical measures were to be resorted to at once to enforce the law. They quickly sought cover by cabling the manufacturers in Europe to hold up further shipments indefinitely.

From official sources it is learned that hereafter little or no attention is to be paid to the analysis furnished by importers themselves or those attested by officials of other governments; that is, no labels are to be passed until after a sample of the goods has been analyzed by the bureau of chemistry of the department of agriculture.

Several large consignments of cherries preserved in glucose or "grape sugar" will be ordered returned to the manufacturer for proper labeling probably today and the practice of allowing importers to remove a portion of a shipment under penalty bond is to be discontinued for the present.

WOODMEN WANT THEM REMOVED
SAN ANGELO, Texas, Nov. 22.—Considerable uneasiness is being manifested here by the Woodmen lodge and many individuals regarding danger from consumption. The lodge is vigorously agitating the matter and wants the Watt camp for consumptives removed from where it now stands on the river above town. Beside adopting resolutions and getting reports from doctors, the camp is taking the matter up with the Business Club and council.

READY FOR A TRIAL
BOSTON, Nov. 22.—The new United States cruiser Pennsylvania arrived in Boston harbor today for New York for her official trial trip over the Cape Ann course. The Pennsylvania, like her sister ships, the West Virginia and Colorado, must obtain an average speed of 18 knots for four consecutive hours in order to reach the contract requirements. A meeting of the government trial board is called for today to decide upon the time of the trial and to make other necessary arrangements.

Them Thanksgiving Pies

We've started on warmed-up ends for several weeks, Although our oven's been plum full of stuff. For Mary—that's my wife—has an idea A feast is just about ten times enough.

And so she's baked and brewed and minced and beat. My! all the fixin's she has mixed and chopped! If Gaw'ner Jones had changed and chose next week I b'lieve she would a-cooked until she dropped.

The pies, of course, are the big job to make: There's cranb'ry, pum'kins, apples, custard, creams, Squashes and minces, cherry an' some more; There ain't no end to pie-stuffs, so it seems.

The chicken pie's in the oven now, The little gooseb'ry tart's hid away.

The pantry letters on the biggest squash Read plain: "Nineteen-ought four, Thanksgiving Day."

For now, at last, the time to eat has come. Bill's family's here, and Sister, Jane's and Sil's! They've seen the pantry shelves, but do their best. They'll never clear away that load of pies.

An' so to-morrow we'll be eating pies, Liketwise a long day after that, I fear; An' when I think how dry the last ones git I'm glad the Lord ain't thanked but once a year.

Not that I'm blamin' Mary, understand. She must do like the rest, of course. 'Tain't wise To fight the fashions. Yes, sir, I expect I'm proud as the is of them rows of pies.

A BOMB EXPLODES

Home of Prominent Lawyer of Omaha Is Wrecked by Explosive Placed on the Front Porch at Night

INMATES ARE UNHURT

Elmer E. Thomas Has Been Active in the Prosecution of Saloon Men on the Midnight and Sunday Closing Laws—No Clue to Perpetrator

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 22.—The home of Elmer E. Thomas, a prominent lawyer of this city and attorney for the Civic Federation, was badly wrecked by a bomb played on the front porch at 2 o'clock this morning. Mr. Thomas and his family were in the house at the time and he considers it miraculous that none of them were injured.

Mrs. Thomas was awakened about 2 o'clock by a noise on the front porch and aroused her husband, believing that burglars were trying to enter the house. Mr. Thomas began an investigation and discovered a fire on the front porch. He picked up a large rug and attempted to smother the flames, with a terrific explosion occurred. Although but a few feet from the missile he escaped injury. The front wall of the house was blown in, doors were shattered and an immense hole torn in the ground. The interior of the building is a wreck.

A squad of police were on the scene in a short time, but no clue to the perpetrators of the deed could be found. The man evidently made a hasty escape after setting the fuse which exploded the bomb. Mr. Thomas saw no one leaving the premises. The explosion was heard for three miles.

Attorney Thomas has been active for some time in the prosecution of saloon keepers charged with a violation of the Slocum law, which provides for midnight and Sunday closing of saloons. He also has been acting for the Civic Federation in the habeas corpus proceedings by which Thomas Dennison has sought to avoid being taken to Iowa in connection with the $75,000 Pollock diamond robbery. To these circumstances Mr. Thomas alluded to the Associated Press he attributed this attack on his home.

MOVING FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Nov. 22.—Santa Fe officials are here looking into the establishing of a line of refrigerator cars to haul vegetables and fruit from these western towns along the Santa Fe's San Angelo branch. The Santa Fe people are doing much for the development and assistance of the country out here and the people have hopes of big things for West Texas.

STUDENT FALLS IN THE GYM AT CORNELL

Frederick Schmidt Is Badly Injured—While Conscious He Is Totally Paralyzed by the Accident

IITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 22.—Frederick E. Schmidt, a student in Cornell University, has suffered a most peculiar and possibly fatal accident. He was performing on the parallel bars in the gymnasium when he fell, striking the back of his head and neck on the floor with great force. Although no bone was broken and he remained perfectly conscious, he lost the power of speech and was completely paralyzed.

After being removed to the infirmary, where he now lies, Schmidt partly recovered his speaking faculty, but is still totally paralyzed. Physicians say that if he survives the accident it is doubtful that he will ever recover control of his nervous system.

OPIE READ CHARACTER DEAD
NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 22.—John M. (Bud) Dillon, the old time and wide-federate soldier's home near this city, aged 71. He was a friend of Opie Read and the southern author made use of him as a character in several of his books.

PEW SENDS HOT STUFF FROM PANAMA

The moment it was given out at Washington last month that Secretary Taft would go to Panama, the Newspaper Enterprise Association, of which The Telegram is a member, rushed Marlen E. Pew, manager of the New York bureau, to the straits on the first ship. Mr. Pew has been over every foot of the canal zone and has talked with natives, officials, Americans, army men, contractors and bunco-steerers. He has learned what Secretary Taft will find out when he gets there. It is true, unbiased and fresh from the scene of the trouble.

The Telegram will Wednesday, November 23, publish the first of a series of articles on this subject from Mr. Pew, and they will follow from day to day.

USING THE MAIL TO DE FRAUD THOSE WHO ANSWER

Chicago Man Agrees to Teach Signals to Clients and Then Get Them Positions on the Railroads

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Many complaints made to the Chicago post-office concerning the use of the United States mails fraudulently have resulted in the arrest of Charles Sturtz. A number of complaints from various parts of the country will probably appear to prosecute him.

Charles E. Eberling of Maynard, Iowa, alleged that he received a letter from Sturtz. Eberling said he was informed that for $3 he would be taught the various signals and information necessary to become a fireman and for an additional $10 he would be given a position. He paid the money, but failed to secure the position, and finally asked the postal authorities to investigate the case.

McILHENNY A WITNESS IN THE IMPEACHMENT

DALLAS, Texas, Nov. 22.—S. E. McIlhenny of the Oriental hotel has been called to Washington, D. C., to testify in the impeachment proceedings against United States Judge Swayne of Florida. It is presumed Mr. McIlhenny will testify in regard to the defendant's account at the hotel while he stopped here four years ago.

A SIGNAL MAN IS KILLED IN SUBWAY

He Was Caught by the Third Rail Arm, and the Accident Caused a Panic Among the Passengers

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—A peculiar accident in the subway, which resulted in the instant death of William H. McMillin, a signal man, has caused great excitement among the passengers aboard an express train who, for a few minutes, believed that the train was on fire and tried to escape. McMillin had been adjusting a signal when the train rushed upon him. The third rail arm on the first car threw him down and he was instantly killed. His clothing caught the emergency trigger, threw off the current and set the air brakes on the whole train, which stopped very suddenly. The cars jammed together by the sudden impact and an iron gate fell to the third rail, causing a short circuit. Blue flames shot up around the cars and frightened the passengers almost out of their wits, but the guards remained coolly at their posts, refusing to open the doors, and in a few moments the scare died out.

Mr. Waggoman--Don't cut anything out. Chief Rea--I told the reporter, he asked me who suggested it should lay Mr. Potts off, I told him no one suggested it. Mr. Henderson says he told him the same thing; there was no suggestion only I laid him off.

Mr. Henderson--He asked me who suggested it. Mr. Rea--Mr. Henderson suggested it and Mr. Potts suggested it.

Mr. Henderson--I think the reporter misunderstood me; I understood him to ask me if I suggested to you (Chief Rea) to lay Potts off, and I said no.

Chief Rea--I had laid him off when I called Mr. Henderson up and told him. Mr. Waggoman--I think you ought to publish that just as it is. I move to adjourn.

Mr. Henderson--We better exonerate Mr. Potts. Mr. Waggoman--There is nothing against him; we might as well instruct Mr. Rea to put him back to work.

Mr. Scott--I would like to state, in behalf of Mr. Potts, that we much prefer that Mr. Honea be brought here.

Mr. Waggoman--Have to go out and bring him here. Mr. Scott--You have notified him?

Mr. Rea--He promised that he would be here and I have phoned and phoned all around this morning trying to get him.

Mr. Henderson--As far as I am concerned I am perfectly willing to take Mr. McLean's statement.

Mr. McLean--Those are the facts that occurred and nobody disputes them even if Mr. Honea was here he could not say anything to the contrary; I take it that he would not.

Mr. Henderson--Then we will adjourn and instruct Chief Rea to put Mr. Potts back to work.

Mr. Waggoman--I tried to persuade you not to go. Mr. Waggoman--That was the construction Mr. Honea put on it; I did not put any such construction as that on it myself; in fact it didn't make any impression on me to amount to anything; I have had Mr. Potts to salute me that way a hundred times, and other things that a hundred halloo at us that night as we went up and down the street; we were out nearly all night.

By Walter Scott--You don't know who this was hollered to you? A--No, I don't know. There was either two or three men there besides Mr. Potts; my impression was at the time that it was Mr. Potts, but I didn't attach any importance to it at all. Had I seen Mr. Potts I would have asked him to go with me as freely as I did Honea; and if I had known when Mr. Potts left Chief Rea going to find any gambling I would have asked him to go along with me, but...

Mr. Waggoman--Something in regard to city officers trying to persuade them not to go up stairs? Mr. Shearer--I won't say they were the exact words; they were substantially to the words.

Mr. Powell--That is the impression he made on you? Mr. Waggoman--Some police officer? Mr. Shearer--He didn't say "city police officer," but "city officer."

Mr. Waggoman--Some "city officer" tried to persuade him from going up there and raiding that gambling place. Mr. McLean--We were counting the money in the back of the office at the Delaware hotel and this young man (the reporter) came in, and Honea was talking a good deal about what we had done; there seemed to be a little crowd there; and I said something about I would not talk too much, something of that kind, and then he took Honea out.

Mr. Shearer--You remember the remark he made about the man that tried to stop you? Mr. McLean--I remember Honea saying something of that kind; I said "I would not say anything about it if I was you."

Mr. Shearer--The reason I tackled Mr. Honea was he would be more likely to give up. Mr. Powell--That was the newspaper instinct.

Mr. McLean--I had been looking for Honea for some time; the way I came to be looking for Honea, I got a telephone message from the north side about burning a nigger over there--my brother, Dr. McLean, phoned me--I phoned around for Honea, went down to the stable, I hunted for him, and he came out of the Worth hotel; he had been back in the back shop getting a shave. That is how I came to be with him.

Mr. Waggoman--Mr. Honea has been notified and subpoenaed and he has not come, and I move that the charges against Mr. Potts be dropped.

Mr. Scott--You interrupting?--One question in view of the rumors. When you got to the back of the stairway entrance to go up to this gambling hall, did anybody precede you immediately going up?

Mr. McLean--No, sir. Mr. Scott--When you got to the steps was the stairway clear? Mr. McLean--Yes, sir.

Mr. Scott--Did you hear any report about somebody sending a negro up in front of you and Mr. Honea? Mr. McLean--No; there was nothing of the kind; the only fellow that was hit was a fellow trying to run out of the gambling room--he had everybody after him--I knocked this fellow back in the room; he tried to run out.

FOR HUMANE LAWS

W. V. Dexter of Houston, president of the state federation of humane societies, has drafted thirteen bills which will be presented and urged before the next session of the state legislature...

To prevent the unnatural and barbarous practice of docking horses. To regulate branding and dehorning of cattle.

To prohibit bull fighting, real or show; also, to prohibit cattle roping for public amusement.

To prohibit vivisection in any form, especially in public schools. To prohibit the shooting of live birds by gun clubs.

To regulate the method of killing animals by butchers and at packing houses. To establish a reformatory and industrial school for boys in each congressional district.

To establish an institution in north, east, south and west Texas, and also in central Texas, for homeless children. To enact a law giving humane societies the power to rescue infants and children from immoral and cruel parents...

To legalize the establishment of juvenile courts that boy criminals may be tried and upon conviction sent to state reformatory schools, instead of to the penitentiary.

To enact a more rigorous law upon the killing of insect-eating birds, and the slaughter of birds of plumage. To revise and make more rigid the law regulating the sale of cocaine and morphine.

There is no question but that the tendency in Texas in the past has been too strongly in the direction of taking too little cognizance of matters of this kind, and as a result we have a reputation of not measuring up to the usual standard of civilization.

When the author of the Terrell election law forgot to comply with its requirements and subjected himself to the liability of a penalty of $200 it would seem that some justification for others who may have failed to measure up to the standard.

There is a great deal of talk concerning regret that is felt generally over the re-orientation of Sen. Cockrell of Missouri, but it is not experienced to any great extent by the republicans who have been waiting about thirty years for his old shams.

Late reports from Tokyo say that the Russian reports of Kuroki's death are absurd, and it is probably but another case of the wish being father to the thought.

Railroad Commissioner Mayfield seems to have some very radical views when it comes to dealing with offending railways, but there is enough conservatism about the man to prevent him from going too far.

There is hardly a town west of Cisco that is not living in expectation of one or more railways in the near future. If all the roads are built in that section now existing on paper they are going to become almost a public nuisance.

American imports to the Dominion of Canada for the first nine months of this year amounted to $103,000,000, a very gratifying increase over those of last year.

Prince von Hohenlohe-Oehringen is the latest scion of royalty to visit the United States, and our people would feel better over his presence if he had come incognito and left that dreadful name behind him.

The German foreign office has authorized an official denial that he is anything the matter with the kaiser's throat.

The practice of vivisection should not be allowed except in extreme cases, and it is proper to stop the shooting of live birds by the various gun clubs. The fact that substitutes are often adopted is a strong argument why substitutes should always be in order. The methods employed in the butchering of animals intended for human consumption should be properly safeguarded.

The state already has an institution of that kind at Gatesville, where the bad boys can be taken care of for many years yet. Boys under a certain age are already sent to this institution instead of to the penitentiary.

This is to be congratulated on his evidence of activity on the part of her humanitarians, for it shows that the hearts of her people are getting in the right place. Texans have always been noted for their large heartedness.

There is a great work for these humane societies to do in Texas and throughout the southwest, and it is gratifying to note that they are now preparing to move off in the right direction by having state laws passed to correct many existing evils.

It seems that interference on the part of Uncle Sam was all that prevented another revolution in Panama. It does not require the vision of a seer to distinguish the fact that just a wee bit down the corridors of time there stands the plain specter of annexation.

President Roosevelt has offered Senator Cockrell his choice of appointment on either the Panama canal commission or the interstate commerce commission.

Candidate Higgins, who was elected governor of New York by the republicans, modestly confessed that his campaign expenses were considerably in excess of what his total salary will be during the time he serves as governor.

A Glasgow learned professor says that the quick lunch is the greatest health destroyer of the age, and thinks that the remedy lies in teaching the people how to chew in the public schools.

SYNOPSIS Gaston is a city of the plains, an infant among cities as to size, but old in age. The tale is of the days of the Mormon's march westward.

The pursuer took the road again, rather unhelpfully. There were a dozen places where Ormsby might have taken his charges.

He was no more than fashionably late at the Van Brock house, and fortunately he was able to reckon his self among the chosen few for whom Miss Portia's door swung open.

There was a little tang of bitterness in her laugh. "You remind me of the time when I went home from school—oh, years and years ago.

"See how you misjudge me!" he protested. "My errand here tonight is purely charitable. Which brings me back to Ormsby; did you say you could tell me where to look for him?"

"He is in the smoking room with five or six other tobacco misanthropes. What do you want of him?"

"I want to say two words in his ear; after which I shall vanish and make room for my better."

Miss Van Brock was gazing steadfastly at the impassioned face lighted by the piano candles.

"In a way—yes," he confessed. She rose and stood beside him—a bewitching figure of a woman who knew her part in the human comedy and played it well.

"Is it wise, David?" she asked softly. "I am not denying the possibilities; you might come between them if you should try—I'm rather afraid you could. But you mustn't, you know; it's too late.

He drew apart from her, frowning. "If I should say that I don't fully understand what you mean?" he rejoined.

"I should retort by saying something extremely uncomplimentary about your lack of perspicacity," she cut in maliciously.

"I beg pardon," he said, stiffly. "You are laboring under an entirely wrong impression. What I have to say to Mr. Brookes Ormsby does not remotely concern the matter you touch upon.

"As if I didn't know!" she countered. "You merely reminded me of the other thing. But if it is only a business secret, you may as well tell me all about it at first hands.

Now David Kent was growing impatient. Down in the inner depths of him he was persuaded that Ormsby might have difficulty in inducing Mrs. Brentwood to sell her Western Pacific stock even at an advance; might require time, at least.

"Forgive me if I tell Ormsby first," he pleaded. "Afterward, if you care to know, you shall."

er's confidante and loyal partisan, taking the place as a daughter might of the ambitious young wife and mother, who had set her heart on seeing the Van Brock name on the roll of the United States senate.

"No, I can't remember it; I doubt if I shall ever remember it unless you can remind me by telling me why you are so desperately anxious to find Mr. Ormsby."

"I wonder if you hold everybody up like this," he laughed. "But I don't mind telling you. Western Pacific preferred has gone to fifty-eight and a half."

"An Mr. Ormsby has some to sell? I wish I had. Do you know what I'd do?" She drew closer and laid a hand on his arm.

"On general principles, I suppose; so should I, and for the same reason. But have I succeeded in reminding you of that thing you were going to tell me?"

"Not wholly; only partly. You said this matter of Mr. Ormsby's concerned Miss Brentwood—in a way—didn't you?"

"You will have your pound of flesh entire, won't you? The stock is fresh, and her mother's and sister's. I want Ormsby to persuade them to sell. They'll listen to him. That is all; all the all."

"Of course!" she said airily. "How simple of me not to have been able to add it up without your help. I saw the quotations in the evening paper; and I know, better, perhaps, than you do, the need for haste. Must you go now?"

"No; I'm trying to remember. Oh, yes; I have it now. Wasn't some one telling me that you are interested in house bill twenty-nine?"

"I was interested in it," he admitted, correcting the present to the past tense. "But after it went to the house committee on judiciary you left it to more skillful, or perhaps we'd better say, to less scrupulous hands?"

"I believe you are a witch. Is there anything you don't know?" "Plenty of things. For example, I don't know exactly how much it cost our good friends of the 'vested interests' to have that bill mislaid in the committee room. But I do know they made a very foolish bargain."

"Beyond all doubt a most demoralizing bargain, which, to say the best of it, was only a choice between two evils. But why foolish?"

"Because—well, because mislaid things have a way of turning up unexpectedly, you know, and—"

"Tell me what you mean in one word, Miss Van Brock. Don't those fellows intend to stay bought?" She smiled pityingly.

"You are very young, Mr. David—or very honest. Supposing those fellows, as you dub the honorable members of the committee on judiciary, had a little plan of their own; a plan suggested by the readiness of certain of their opponents to rush into price; with statements which might derange things?"

"That is right; we are only supposing, you must remember. We may suppose their idea was to let the excitement about the amended bill die down; to let people generally, and one fiercely honest young corporation attorney in particular, have time to forget there was such a thing as house bill twenty-nine. And in such a suppositional case, how much they would be surprised, and how they would laugh in their sleeves, if some one came along and paid them handsome money for doing precisely what they meant to do."

"Why, yes; they all came to take leave just a few moments after you left me. I thought of telling Mr. Ormsby you were looking for him, but you shut me off so snippily—"

"Really? I am complimented. But if you must, you must, I suppose. I had something to tell you—something of importance; but I can't remember what it was now. I never can remember things in the hurry of leave-takings."

As we have intimated, Kent had hitherto found Miss Portia's confidences exceedingly helpful in a business way, and he hesitated. "Tell me," he begged.

"I wonder if you hold everybody up like this," he laughed. "But I don't mind telling you. Western Pacific preferred has gone to fifty-eight and a half."

"An Mr. Ormsby has some to sell? I wish I had. Do you know what I'd do?" She drew closer and laid a hand on his arm.

hardly have time to obstruct it arousing public sentiment through the newspapers." David Kent shook the light touch of her hand from his arm and set his teeth hard upon a word hot from the furnace of righteous indignation.

"No, David; I didn't do that," she said, speaking to his inmost thought. "If there had been anything you could do—the smallest shadow of a chance for you—I should have sent you flying at the first word. But there wasn't; it was all too well arranged."

CHAPTER VII. THE SENTIMENTALISTS. Kent's time from Alameda Square to the capitol was the quickest a flogged cab-horse could make, but he might have spared the horse and saved the double fee.

"They've taken a fall out of us," was the brusque reply. "House bill twenty-nine was reported by the committee on judiciary and rushed through after you left. Somebody engineered it to the paring of a fingernail; bare quorum to act; members who might have filibustered weeded out, on one pretext or another, to a man; pages all excused, and nobody here with the privilege of the floor. It was as neat a piece of gag work as I ever hope to see if I live to be a hundred."

"Well, I suppose that settles it definitely; at least until we can test its constitutionality in the courts," he said.

"Harnwicke thought not, being of the opinion that the vested interests would never say die until they were quite dead. As assistant counsel for the Overland Short Line, he was in some sense the dean of the corps of observation, and could speak with authority."

"There is one chance left for us this side of the courts," he went on; "and now I think of it, you are the man to say how much of a chance it is. The bill still lacks the governor's signature."

"It is his own measure. I have proof positive that he and Meigs and Hendricks drafted it. And all this fine-haired engineering tonight was his or Meigs."

"Of course; we all know that. But we don't know the particular object yet. Do they need the new law in their business as a source of revenue? Or do they want to be hired to kill it? In other words, does Bucks want a lump sum for a veto? You know the man better than any of us."

"By Jove!" said Kent. "Do you mean to say you would buy the governor of a state?"

"Harnwicke turned a cold eye on his companion as they strode along. He was of the square-set, plain-spoken, aggressive type—a finished product of the modern school of business lawyers."

"I don't understand that you are raising the question of ethics at this stage of the game, do I?" "Kent fired up a little.

"And if I am?" he retorted. "I should say you had missed your calling. It is hardly a question of business—or rather of self-preservation. We needn't mince matters among our selves. If Bucks is for sale, we buy him."

"There isn't any doubt about his purchasability. But I confess I don't quite see how you will go about it."

"Never mind that part of it; just leave the ways and means with those of us who have ripper experience—and fewer hamperings, perhaps—than you have. Your share in it is to tell us how big a bid we must make. As I say, you know the man."

David Kent was silent for the striding of half a square. The New England conscience dies hard, and while it lives it is given to drawing sharp lines on all the boundaries of culpability. Kent ended by taking the matter in debate violently out of the domain of ethics and standing it upon the ground of expediency.

"It will cost too much. You would have to bid high—not to overcome his scruples, for he has none; but to satisfy his greed—which is abnormal. And, besides, he has his pose to defend. If he can see his way clear to a harvest of extortions under the law, he will probably turn you down—and will make it hot for you later on in the name of outraged virtue."

"Harnwicke's laugh was cynical. "He and his little clique don't own the earth in fee simple. Perhaps we shall be able to make them grasp that idea before we are through with them. We have had this fight on in other states. Would ten thousand be likely to satisfy him?"

"No," said Kent. "If you would add another cipher, it might." "A hundred thousand is a pot of money. I take it for granted the Western Pacific will stand its pro-rata?" "The New England conscience bucked again, and Kent his first open protest against the methods of the demoralizers.

"I am not in a position to say; I should advise against it. Unofficially, I think I can speak for Loring and the Boston people. We are not more saintly than other folk, perhaps; and we are not in the railroad business for health or pleasure. But if fancy of the advisory board would draw the line at bribing the governor—at any rate, I hope it would."

JAMES H. ADMORE FOUND DEAD IN HIS BED

He Was a Union Veteran and a Member of International Typographical Union—Wife and Daughter Survive

James H. Admore, aged 60 years, a Union veteran who is on a furlough from the western branch of the national soldiers' home in Kansas, and a member of the International Typographical Union, was found dead in bed about 6 o'clock yesterday evening at his boarding house on East Front street.

Mr. Admore formerly lived in Fort Worth and years ago he worked on the old Gazette as a printer. He was known to the printers as "Dad" Admore. During the civil war he was a member of the Sixty-fifth regiment of Indiana infantry, Home Company O. He was married and at the time of his death his wife and daughter, Miss Ray, were at Mineral Wells. He also has a brother, J. V. Admore, at Kingfisher, Ok.

Justice John L. Terrill held an inquest and decided that death was from heart failure. Undertaker L. P. Robertson took the remains in charge and will prepare them for burial. President James Hays Quarles and Secretary C. H. Smith of the Fort Worth Typographical Union, took the matter in charge. Mrs. Admore was notified of the sudden death of her husband and advised that she would arrive here this afternoon with her daughter from Mineral Wells. The brother at Kingfisher was also notified.

chance of an election than the nominee. The majority of our committeemen, upon whom the selection of the day for the primaries rest, are, in fact, not representatives of the people, as they are usually elected by a packed convention, convened upon short notice and at a most inconvenient hour for voters to assemble. The city charter states that all popular elections shall be called by the council and in the event of failure to do so on their part, then by the mayor, twenty days notice of which shall be given through the public press, giving the names of offices for which officers are to be elected, etc. No mention is made of placing the matter in the hands of men, many of whom are not representatives of the people, who have the power of closing the doors to all would-be candidates three and a half months before the election. If it is a fact, as is stated, that the nominee at the city primary is equivalent to an election, it is not surprising that the committee desire to have the voice of the people expressed at the election, why should they call a primary election for the selection of candidates in December, 1904, for an election to take place in April, 1905, leaving an interval of space of three and a half months which goes for naught, instead of leaving at least three months of this time for men to make up their minds whether they wish to make the race or not.

The facts are, when an election is spoken of as approaching, our wise and smooth committeemen cast about to see whom they favor for office, and then busy themselves about calling a primary election at the earliest possible moment even including a clause of command for you to support such and such a nominee at the regular election, hoping thereby to corral, as it were, the vote of the people for their favorite candidate, thereby diverting the very object for which democracy stands.

That the star of democracy is waning! that the underlying principles of our government are swaying to and fro and the supporters of these principles are turning a deaf ear to the appeals of these so-called leaders, are due to such practices. L. M. WHITSITT.

PRESIDENT IS PRAISED

William Capps, Chairman of Democratic County Committee, Makes Statement Concerning the President

HE ENDORSES POLICY

Does Not Believe He Uses Big Stick Except in Defense of His Country—Applauds the Policy Followed in Regard to Panama Canal

Chairman Capps of the county executive committee is quoted for certain strong statements endorsing President Roosevelt. These statements were confirmed this morning, declaring they were his sentiments.

A portion of these statements is as follows:

"I believe in President Roosevelt because he is a man of fearless action and honest impulses. The whole American people have never been wrong at one time. I, for one, am tired of policies of retrogression, hampering and imaginary ghosts. I believe that down in the public press, the people of Tarrant county believe that President Roosevelt is a man, every inch, every ounce of him. I believe that they regard him as honest, courageous, fearless and honorable. He threw off the effete snobbery of the east after his residence on a ranch in the Dakotas. He demonstrated that his heart is in the west and in the south when he came to Texas to organize the famous Rough Riders regiment. I contend that when a man selects a country to fight with and to make a reputation for himself he has the highest confidence in the men he selects. Roosevelt has shown this fact.

"I never took much stock in Roosevelt jumping his own country, or to his in his power to do so. He is too much of a man to wreak vengeance on a portion of the country from whence came his mother and his mother's people for generations. It is a dirty bird that will befall his own nest, and no one who has ever studied Roosevelt's character or has observed his temperament will believe for one moment that the president belongs to that class of beings who would defile those from whom he received life, especially without grievous cause and especially when there is no cause.

"I am not one of those who believe that Roosevelt flourishes the big stick except in defense of his country, or to let the world know that being an American means that wherever he is he has the whole power of this country behind him to guarantee that in the pursuit of happiness anywhere as desired he acts with the sword of the laws of the world. Roosevelt does something, and he generally does something that reflects credit on the American nation, himself and will cause posterity to honor him for his actions.

"Roosevelt is a unique character, just as the American character is unique. He typifies the modern American perhaps as no other man in public life today typifies it. He is the composite of the many-sided individuals that comprise this nation. A native of the east, he is a product of the west. Born amid luxury, he has endured the hardships of the plains. A deep student of the affairs of yesterday, he has a firm grasp on the affairs of today and tomorrow. He has cleansed public service wherever he has come in contact with it. Made president by a most distressing accident, his elevation has been seconded by an overwhelming expression of popular sentiment.

"I am one of those who indorse his action in the Panama canal matter. He solved that problem just as Alexander solved the riddle of the trouble-hundred years nor stop and consider that men who fought in the days of the crusaders would have done, but he acted as the great mass of the American people would have him do. I am further one of those who believe that the plan made on this canal matter is the greatest statesmanship. Talk about Roosevelt's motives being other than for the best of America and you brand the Americans as a race of fools. He was not inspired by a desire to stir up internecine strife between the isthmians but by a desire to have a ditch dug across the isthmus, and the ditch is now in a fair way to be dug.

"I am further one of those who believe that Roosevelt is an enemy of the trusts. I believe that he will wage a relentless and a successful fight against illegal combinations of capital for the restraint of trade of the enforcement of the character of the man. When he made his fight on the Northern Securities Company he fought the head of the trust-breeding institutions of America. He was fearless in all fight and he will continue fearless all along the line. I have only one suggestion that I would like to make to the president. I would like to see him appoint Thomas Lawson of Boston secretary of commerce and labor. With Lawson's intimate knowledge of the

"I saw so much in the papers about the wonderful cures effected by Pyramid Pile Cure, I determined to give it a trial. I used many pills, remedies, and by the time I had used the last 'pyramid' I was entirely cured; in four days after I began to use the 'pyramids' all inflammation was gone. I was perfectly easy all the time, the excessive discharge stopped at once, and stools became easy and gentle.

"I was unable to get my own firewood for four months, and half the time when I could walk at all I had to walk half bent. I used many pills, remedies, salves and ointments, all to no effect until I used one fifty-cent box of Pyramid Pile Cure and was cured.

CHRISTMAS HOLIDAY RATES TO THE SOUTHEAST

On account of the holidays the low rate of one fare plus $2 for the round trip has been authorized from all points in Texas to all points within the territory east of the Mississippi river and south of Memphis, Tenn.; Somerset, Ky.; Bristol, Tenn.; and the northern state line of North Carolina. Round trip tickets will be sold December 20, 21, 22 and 26, with limit thirty days from date of sale. This very liberal and unusual combination of such a low rate with such a long limit offers excellent opportunity for a visit to the old southern homes at the most opportune time.

The Queen and Crescent Route offers for this occasion the choice of two routes: Via New Orleans or via Shreveport and Vicksburg. It forms the short line to most of the territory involved, and has the quickest and most convenient schedules, and its equipment is thoroughly new and modern. With through coaches and sleeping cars of the latest type and dining cars serving all meals, route on the line a carte plan, the journey over its rails becomes in itself a vacation's chief charm.

HIGH PRICES FOR EGGS CONFRONT HOUSEWIVES

Commission Men Say There Is a Corner on Cold Storage and That Hen Fruit Is Much Dearer Now

Commission men in Fort Worth state that the highest price ever known for eggs is in sight for this winter and before the "lay" of the hen is known again next spring housewives will have paid up to or nearly 50 cents a dozen. The fact that a corner practically exists in storage eggs and that these were secured at the highest prices ever paid is the basis of their figuring.

During the spring and summer when eggs usually go less than 10 to 12 cents a dozen, the price has never gone lower than 15 cents in Fort Worth, with one or two exceptions, and has held most of the time at 18 cents up to 30 cents a dozen.

Brief periods of high prices have heretofore been known, but never before has the long continued high price been maintained in Texas.

During the latter part of March and April and early May, when storage men usually buy eggs at lowest prices, there were none bought for less than 15 cents, and the majority of eggs now in storage were bought at even a higher price than that. Several of the large packing concerns of Chicago and Kansas City are said to have taken all the eggs offered all over the country and to have spent in less than one week over $1,000,000. These figures at the present time are practically in control of the market and it is likely that they will not unload at any low figure.

One Fort Worth commission man remarked to The Telegram that the highest price ever paid for eggs will be along about January or February, when the storage eggs will be drawn upon for the supply, and the firms that control the market will be almost able to dictate the price eggs will bring and to control the market.

Very few eggs are on the retail market now and they are eagerly grasped at 30 cents a dozen. Many eggs were bought here this summer and put in cold storage for future use.

A Broken Tribe

[Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure.]
In May, 1858, when Colonel Saunders was sent into the Big Wichita mountains of Texas with 200 men and artillery to open a military road, the Comanche Indians were at the zenith of their power as a tribe. Their chief was Eagle Feather, and he boasted that he could defeat any force sent against him.

Five days after the soldiers set out on their march the Comanches to the number of 500 met them on the Chico river, and the soldiers took possession of a plateau and prepared for battle. Eagle Feather, assisted by a white renegade soldier, planned for a grand charge of his lancers that should insure victory at once.

At a given signal his whole body of warriors charged. It began when his first line had approached within half a mile of the soldiers making ready; and the ground was clear of all obstruction and as level as a floor. The Comanches knew nothing of the presence of the artillery until it opened fire. After a single round of grape the guns were silent and gave place to the muskets. The charge was checked and the slaughter something terrible. Fifty-three warriors and seventy ponies were left behind when the force drew off and returned to the spot where the big chief had posted himself to watch and direct. He was screaming with rage and chagrin when his broken ranks retreated upon him.

When the lines were formed again every warrior was in them, and the chief placed himself at their head. Such warriors as had been dismounted advanced on foot, and some of the wounded were tied on their horses.

Again the soldiers waited until the yelling horde had come to close quarters, and again artillery and musketry belched forth a murderous fire. It was a lesson no tribe of Indians ever forgot. In five minutes every warrior who could get away had retreated, leaving the ground heaped with dead and dying.

Colonel Saunders watched the movements of the red men closely and anxiously, and he soon discovered a new plan of attack.

It could be made on foot, and the lances would be abandoned for rifles. There was a ravine about a mile to the east of the soldiers' position, and a portion of the Indians would be certain to advance under cover of that, while others would advance from the west and south. The fieldpieces were planted to cover points where a rush might be expected, and the lines were aligned anew. Three kegs of powder were taken down the ravine and deposited among the rocks as torpedoes, and everything was ready by noon.

It was half an hour later when the Comanches divided into three commands and moved to the attack. The renegade had taught them how to march on foot, and they came on almost with the step of infantry. In five minutes the fight was raging hotly on all sides, and as the Indians began to work up the ravine their fire began to do considerable damage. They concentrated it on the artillery, and Saunders soon had five or six men killed or wounded.

There was no rush on the part of the redskins. Their plan was rather to make a long fight of it. There was constant fighting for over three hours, both sides having more or less shelter. The white men proved to be the best shots, even though armed only with muskets, and by and by the Indians got tired of their waiting game.

It was finally seen that a large body of them was gathering in the ravine, and it was easy to see that the object was a rush. One of the guns was turned upon them, and when the shell with which it was charged exploded it exploded two of the kegs of powder. How many were killed and wounded none could say, because the explosion hurled down the high banks and filled the ravine for a hundred feet.

The calamity in the ravine ended the attack on the part of the Indians, and Saunders at once assumed the aggressive. He opened on the herd of ponies left just out of rifle shot and with two discharges of the guns scattered it. When the redskins attempted to bunch in any considerable number he opened on them with shell, and such ponies as galloped within musket range were brought down by the soldiers.

Eagle Feather had more than enough before the sun went down. Once he rallied his warriors as if for a last desperate charge, but they were so thoroughly whipped that they refused to charge. As darkness fell he began his retreat over the prairie, and he made no halt until reaching his village, a hundred miles away.

None of the Indian dead was removed, and only a few of the wounded were taken away. Two years later, when peace came, Eagle Feather acknowledged his losses, and he had the figures down close. Of his ponies he lost all but a hundred. Of his warriors he reached home with less than 200. They were the flower of his fighting men left behind, and had his loss taken in only the war ponies it would have been a severe blow. Enough lances and rifles were picked up to load a wagon, and they were the best weapons of their kind.

The direct results were bad enough for the tribe, but discussions soon followed to make matters worse. Eagle Feather was deposed and became a renegade, and the tribe divided into three or four factions and never united again. The Kiowas and Apaches took advantage of the split to make war, and in the course of a few years a tribe which had ranked as the richest and most powerful in the west was scattered and broken and no longer had a name. M. QUAD.

CATTLE ON MORNING
SAN ANGELO, Texas, Nov. 21.—Fat cattle shipments continue to go forward. Cattlemen claim that Fort Worth is the best market they can find unless their stuff is in fine condition, but that for fat stuff they can get better prices at northern markets. However, it is noted that all shipments to St. Louis read, "With Fort Worth privilege." Joe Montague shipped three cars yesterday to Fort Worth and Martin & Lawton shipped three cars last cows to Fort Worth.

Nan Patterson in Court A Study of the Accused Girl

(Written for The Telegram by Katherine Laskie, Special Correspondent of the Newspaper Enterprise Association.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Nan Patterson before the bar of justice is seemingly as sure of her innocence as she has been during the long weary months of her impatient waiting in the Tombs.

When her big blue eyes are lifted to the serious golden-shielded ones of Judge Davis it is with the anxious expression that he could never believe her guilty of the hideous crime with which she had so long been charged.

Her round, girlish face, untraced with lines of deep emotion, proclaims that she knows that each tale she tells believes in her and in her innocence.

The girl, who walks to the prisoner's dock with the air of one going to a marriage altar, has strong belief in herself and in her powers. She shows it in many ways. It is expressed in her voice, in the way she holds her head, in every gesture. Her worldly experience, despite her few years of 23, is large, and she knows what wins men. She looks at them directly, frankly, and asserts her innocence in every look. She has never feared them, and she does not now.

There is nothing of regret or humility in the manner of Nan Patterson, and her bearing in court is the same as it was when pleading a huge audience of pleasure seekers, instead of a small selected one composed largely of judicial minds. She believes that she was the victim of a cruel circumstance, that Dame Fate dealt bitterly with her on that fair June morning when "Caesar" Young was driving to the Europe-bound ship and to his death, and never for one instant is her bearing other than that of a woman who believes that others feel the same as she does.

Each morning she follows with rustling skirts the blue-coated officer to the bar. The dozens upon dozens of curious eyes do not seem to disconcert her, for Nan Patterson has long been accustomed to being the central figure. She slightly bows her brown-haired head in the direction of Judge Davis, but there is no fear in her eyes for the severe looking jurist. Then she turns to her counsel and offers her gloved hand as though at some formal social occasion. Attorney Abraham Levy greets her ever with the same serious kindness, and after she has smiled her gratitude for the chair that Daniel O'Reilly places for her, she turns her eyes upon the men who are to give or take her life.

The restlessness that has been a characteristic doubtless since the birth of Nan Patterson is given outward expression by the movement of her hands. These are never quiet. She brushes her great masses of warm brown hair back from the side of her face, then lets the same hand listlessly for a brief second, only to gently touch the white ruche at her throat. She folds these hands lightly upon one another, but even when the jurors are asked if they have a prejudice against a death sentence they never once are fiercely brought together.

In a girlish way she shudderingly dropped her head upon her breast when the grinning skeleton was brought into the room, but an almost merry look immediately came into her eye at what she doubtless considered her silly foolishness. It was the horror of this bony vision that appeared the uppermost thought in the girlish mind of Nan Patterson from the time that she learned that the bullet's course would be thus described, and one of the questions she asked at the end of the first day in court was:

"Will I have to see that skeleton? I don't want to look at it, and I don't see what it is for anyway; every one knows I didn't do it."

That there could be a question of her conduct in the minds of the twelve evidently had not entered into her thoughts, for the day that the trial was begun she packed everything but the toilet articles that she daily needed, ready for the prison's doors to be opened to her.

"I am ready to go the moment they say I can," she smilingly announced when returning to the Tombs after the case was finally begun, "and this means the last time I shall pack them here."

"I am going to go right home to Washington by the first train that starts after they let me out, and I will never leave there again. One never knows until they are in trouble what good friends their parents are. I have had a lot of friends and they have been good to me and a number of them still are, but it's your parents that stand by you when you are in trouble and daddy has been so good to me ever since they locked me up."

A great deal has been said lately about the magnificence of the wardrobe of Nan

Patterson, and the numerous dresses that have been prepared for her appearance in court. It has even been hinted that she was to dress the part elaborately, and that a change of costume was to be frequently made.

She has each day come in the same somber black gown, and the truth is it is the only winter frock she has, and it was made at the suggestion of her attorney, Mr. O'Reilly.

Until a fortnight before the trial was begun, and despite the sharp frosty days, Nan was still wearing the summer skirts and shirt waists that were brought to her soon after her imprisonment in the Tombs. The broad-brimmed black straw hat that was pictured over and over again at the time that fatal cab ride occurred, was the only headpiece she had in jail until a milliner was sent for last week and the result is the handsome black velvet hat that each day is seen in court.

This is large, with a rolling brim, and the velvet is crushed upon the crown. A huge pompadour of black ostrich tips is at one side of the hat, and a full flowing veil of Brussels net is draped over her face and tied loosely in the back. The dress that she wears is of soft nun's veiling, and is made in the prevailing mode. It escapes the ground in walking, and the full round skirt has a deep shirred flounce to the knees. The waist has a yoke of silk embroidery, and the somber mourning air is relieved, and yet intensified, by the tiny ruche of white that is at her throat. That she has prepared for an immediate departure is visibly depicted in the heavy winter coat that she each day carries into court.

In two ways only is there a noticeable difference in Nan Patterson since the days of early summer. She walks into court with the same bravado, as on the first occasion, and while she is the same girlish figure, yet, there is a slight difference. She is a trifle stouter now than then, and several shades paler, but the latter is never from fear. She is used to the open air and plenty of free exercise, and in her pallor her long imprisonment shows. But even this can not take from her the beauty that has won men's hearts from her earliest days, and which will continue to win them until the end.

Nan Patterson is of the distinctly soft and clinging feminine type. Everything about her is soft—her deep blue eyes, her small white hands, and her delicate skin. Her face is round, the cheeks being filled, and while the bloom is temporarily from them it will soon return as of yore. Her hair is beautiful in texture, color, and quantity, and is massed high on her well-carried head. When her hands are ungloved a small circlet of gold upon the marriage finger shows that Nan has never quite forsown the husband that she wed when a school girl of scarce 15.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—In an address before a large audience at Cooper Union, President J. G. Schurman of Cornell University has declared that those who wish to preserve the republic should beware of any tendency toward the growth of military spirit.

"Government must be," he said, "an institution under the law and there is a great lesson for us in the study of Rome's history from the year B. C. 133 to the establishment of the empire. No nation can long endure without some high moral and political ideal. Our nation, for example, has endured for over a century and made for itself an honorable place in the political history of the world, because it stands for the principles embodied in the Declaration of Independence.

"Government is of the people, by the people and for the people is something for which every member of a commonwealth may live, and, if necessary, something for which a citizen may die, but take away that ideal and leave nothing behind but tolerable prosperity, heavy taxation, a big standing army and despot over all as absolute as any Oriental despot, and, as in the case of the Roman empire, the nation will fall into decay and gradually disappear."

"It is the duty of all good citizens to work for peace, to assume that we are living in a world of peace, to recognize that our is an age of peaceful industrialism."

Prescription No. 2851, by Elmer & Amend, will not cure all complaints, but it will cure rheumatism.

LONGEST CORTEGE SINCE THAT OF HENRY CLAY

Late W. C. P. Breckenridge.
Floral Tribute from Caleb Powers

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 21.—The funeral of Colonel W. C. P. Breckenridge held today was the largest since the funeral of Henry Clay and Senator Beck. Leading citizens from all over the Blue Grass region, and lawyers and professional men of other cities were present. All the local civic bodies, Confederate comrades, the Fayette county bar and other bodies to which he belonged, attended in a body, and formed into a procession which escorted the body to the cemetery.

Services were held in the First Presbyterian church, of which he has been a member for over a quarter of a century. City offices and all business houses suspended business during the funeral hours.

One of the most attractive and costly floral designs was sent by Caleb Powers, charged with the Goebel murder, who is in jail in Louisville. Colonel Breckenridge had made a vigorous fight in Powers' behalf, and did much editorial utterances to procure for him an unbiased jury.

Some astonishment is being expressed because the czar, who so distrusts the Finns in their own country, appoints so many to responsible positions in the fighting service. His minister of marine, Admiral Avellan, is, of course, of Finnish origin. So is Admiral Wrenius, who was recently given an important command.

General Grippenberg, another Finn, comes of a family that fought for Charles XII, and Gustavus III, is to be the colleague and equal of Kuropatkin if he does not supersede him.

A committee of five was appointed to report the sense of the body after adjournment. The morning session was adjourned at 12:30 to reassemble at 2 o'clock when the discussion will be resumed.

There were several ladies present at the meeting. The conference will be brought to a close this afternoon.

The Rothschilds still seem to live in fear of the old riotous days of the commune, and it is said that the houses of the family are full of secret safes and closets.

Baron Alphonse has a big collection of art objects, and many of the specimens are kept in safes in the walls, which are opened occasionally to show their treasures, but always kept locked when some of the family are not in the house.

William H. Greenfell, M. P., now prominent as a tariff reformer, has played many parts, though still quite a young man. He is the beau ideal of British athleticism, having distinguished himself at polo, as a cricketer, as a pedestrian, as a mountain climber and as hunter of big game. He has climbed the Alps, shot in the Rockies and the Himalayas, swam twice across Niagara and was stroke of a racing eight that crossed the English channel.

The directors of the Agricultural bank of Bulgaria will soon decide upon the quantity of agricultural machines and implements which it will be necessary to purchase for next year.

THOMAS A. EDISON, the inventor, in mapping out the problems of the body after adjournment, first place to the necessity of fighting the bacteria which give us our diseases. Next to the actual bacteria of disease, the mosquitoes and flies are the most dangerous enemies of man. The mosquito with its bite injects into our veins malaria, yellow fever, and other fatal malarial diseases. The fly, with its sticky feet, collects the invisible germs of disease, spreads them over our food and poisons us with typhoid, cholera and other plagues of the human race.

Dr. Pierce, the eminent physician of Buffalo, N. Y., says, "If each person will consider his system as an army of men which he controls as a general, and will see to its proper provisioning and that it has plenty of ammunition in the shape of good red blood, he will be able to overcome the enemy in these germs of disease." Every healthy man has five million red blood corpuscles to every square millimeter of blood. The best tonic for increasing the red blood corpuscles and building up healthy tissue is no doubt Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This medicine has been on the market for over a third of a century and numbers its cures by the thousands.

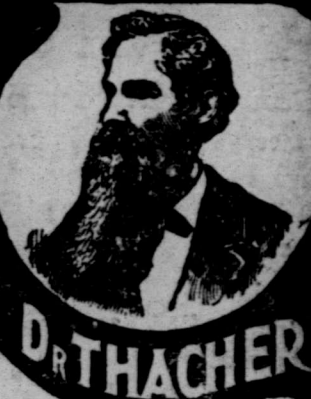

Many popular patent medicines or tonics are made up largely of alcohol and will shrink the corpuscles of the blood and make them weaker for resistance. What is needed is an alterative extract, like Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, made of roots and herbs, without the use of alcohol, that will assist the stomach in assimilating or taking from the food such elements as are required for the blood, also an alterative that will assist the activity of the liver and cause it to throw off the poisons in the blood. When we have accomplished this we have put the system in a fortified condition so strong that it can repel the germs of disease which we find everywhere—in the street-cars, the shops, the factories, the bedrooms, wherever many people congregate, or where sunlight and good air do not penetrate.

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood and lungs.

Neglected constipation means headache, heart-burn, sour stomach, foul taste in the mouth, biliousness, pimples, and palpitation of the heart. Constipation is promptly cured by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. One for mild cases, otherwise two.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE AND DIABETES!

Have their origin in an Inactive or Disordered Liver. The most stealthy and fatal diseases confronting medical science, claiming more victims, annually, than war and famine combined. A puffiness under the eyes, paleness and scanty or too copious urine mark the beginning of Bright's Disease. When the liver is diseased, the kidneys in their effort to perform double work become affected. A simple "liver regulator" will not cure Kidney disease, for although it corrects the first cause, the Kidneys are still affected. A Kidney remedy will not do it, because the source of the disease is not reached. A cure is a remedy combining both, and because it removes the cause and at the same time cures the Kidneys. It is the only preparation now on the market that actually cures. Weakness in the small of the back, pains in loins and groins, numbness of the thighs, high colored or scalding urine, milky or bloody urine, frequent desire to urinate, nausea, vomiting, colic, constipation, hot and cold flashes, furred or unnaturally red tongue. These are the symptoms of diseased Kidneys—don't neglect them.

You Get Up

In the morning tired, languid, and frequently with a headache that is almost unbearable. You have been nervous, restless and sleepless night after night, and gloomy and irritable during the day. This nervous exhaustion affects the heart, lungs and other organs that depend upon the nerves for motive power. Then the stomach fails to digest the food; the heart action is weak, and circulation poor, and the kidneys and liver inactive.

What you need is not a stomach, head, kidney or liver medicine, but Dr. Miles' Nervine to soothe and feed the nerves and build nerve tissue.

"My wife was subject to severe mental strain, which resulted in nervous prostration. The first symptoms were uncontrollable crying and melancholy spells, which increased to such an extent that for over a year she would have a spell every day of from four to six hours duration. She required the constant attention of her physician and attendants. She suffered great pain and anguish. The best physicians attending her could give no relief, and she finally became almost of unsound mind. As a last resort I began giving her Dr. Miles' Nervine, and lo! she was cured. She is now as healthy and vigorous as ever, and she is gaining in health and strength."

"THE LITTLE THANKSGIVING MOTHER"

INSPECTS MILK

City Physician Chambers and Assistants Stop Every Dairy Wagon This Morning and Take Samples

EARLY MORNING WORK

City Physician in Person, His Assistant Dr. Mullennix, and Inspectors, Stop All Milkmen and Get Samples Which Are Now Being Examined

The milk carried in the cans of nearly every wagon entering the city of Fort Worth and offered for sale to the general public by dairymen was at an early hour this morning sampled by Dr. Rufus Chambers, the city health officer, and his assistants, under sections 65 and 66 of the revised health ordinances of the city of Fort Worth, adopted May 4, 1904. Samples were taken by the health department and put into small eight-ounce bottles. Then the bottles were all taken to the office of Dr. Chambers, where today the milk is being properly and thoroughly analyzed to see if that offered for sale is pure, wholesome and free from adulteration. The meeting of the inspectors by the milkmen at an early hour this morning was a great surprise to all, as the matter had been planned with the utmost secrecy and some of them have probably been caught when they had no desire to be.

As each wagon was stopped on the various roads entering the city limits and samples requested from each can carried in the wagon, the drivers were at a loss to understand what it all meant, but when the inspectors told them of the authority there was but little opposition. Samples were taken from each can and put in small bottles. On a label pasted to the bottle was placed the name of the owner of the wagon, the place the milk came from and the name of the driver and number of the wagon. Each wagon was given a number, and a certificate that the wagon had been inspected on November 22, this morning, so as to release the wagon from a second inspection should another inspector run across them.

The men conducting the inspection were Dr. R. Chambers, who met the wagons on the roads entering the city from Glenwood and the southeastern part of the city; Dr. A. J. Mullennix, the assistant city health officer, met the wagons on the roads from the south and southeast; C. C. McMichael, a city health inspector, guarded roads entering from the northeast and the North Side, and Ben Shipp, another city health inspector, took care of the wagons coming into the city from the southwestern roads. In this way all the roads into the city were handled and not a can or wagon was missed. Samples were gotten of all cans of milk in the wagons.

After the time had passed for all the dairymen who peddle milk in the morning hours to have entered the city from all sides the men went to the office of Dr. Chambers, Fifteenth and Main streets, and left the samples. A' of today a lactometer has been used in testing the milk and in ascertaining the amount of specific gravity each sample contains and whether the dealers have fully complied with the laws in regard to the sale of pure and unadulterated milk. This was done for the sake of protecting the public health in regard to the using of impure milk. After the specific gravity of the milk had been ascertained then the milk was placed under a powerful microscope and analyzed for ingredients which would be detrimental to the health of those using it. The result of the inspection of the city health department regarding the milk sold in the city is being withheld and will not be given to the public until those who have been guilty of violation of the two ordinances regarding the sale of milk have been attended to. Dr. Chambers was seen at his office shortly after dinner today, busy with his assistant, Dr. Mullennix, in taking care of the milk samples. He refused to make any statements as to who had been guilty of selling milk not fit for consumption by the public.

THE CITY LAW

The two sections under which the work was carried on are given for the benefit of the general public and their edification as follows:

Section 65. If any person shall sell the flesh of any animal dying otherwise than by slaughter, or slaughtered when diseased, or shall sell any kind of diseased, corrupted or unwholesome substance, whether food or drink, or whoever shall sell or offer to sell, or expose for sale within said city, any tainted, unhealthy or unwholesome meat or other substance for food, or whoever shall sell, offer to sell or keep or expose for sale within this city any impure or unhealthy ice, or who shall sell or offer to sell within this city any milk produced from any sick or diseased cow or milk which has been adulterated in any way by water or otherwise, or any liquid pretended to be milk which has been so compounded to resemble milk, but which in fact is made out of some other substance and is not milk, or milk (except buttermilk) which has a specific gravity of less than 1.0290 or more than 1.0530 lactometer degrees, and which contains more than 88 per cent water and less than 12 per cent of milk solids and less than 3 per cent of fats shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and fined in any sum not less than $25 nor more than $100.

Section 66. It shall be the duty of the city physician at any time he may see proper to examine any and all meats sold in the city, and at any time to examine any milk which may be for sale, and any party or parties refusing to allow the city physician at any time to examine meats or milk which he or they have for sale shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and fined in any sum not more than $25.

COMPLAINTS OF MILK

Dr. Chambers when asked by The Telegram why the investigation had been started, stated that many complaints had come to him regarding the adulteration of milk and that even physicians of the city had reported to their belief that many persons had been injured and made sick by the use of impure milk. Other citizens, not members of the medical profession, have also made similar reports and the city health officer deemed it was time to start a rigid inspection of the milk, the same as that which has been done of meats and other foods sold in the city. The officer is determined to ascertain if impure foodstuffs or milk is being sold to the innocent users of it and if so, he is also determined to bring such unscrupulous persons to the fullest prosecution of the law and to see that all laws of the state and the ordinances of the city are observed regarding them.

SOMETHING OF MILK

While at work among the bottles with the microscope and lactometer the doctor was asked to tell something of milk. He gave the following explanation of the fluid and told how it was handled.

"The globules in the milk of Jerseys and Guernseys are larger than those in the milk of Shorthorns and Holsteins. As the milking period of a cow increases, they become smaller and much more numerous. If a drop of milk, freshly drawn from the udder is viewed under a microscope, the globules will appear evenly distributed over the field. (Fig. 1) After the milk has stood a while they will group themselves in little bunches. (Fig. 2)

"If they are at the right temperature to be sticky, they will run together when agitated and may become visible to the naked eye as butter granules. This is the explanation of what takes place in churning.

"The globules are measured by means of a little scale in the eyepiece of a microscope. The lines on this scale mark off the field of the microscope, and the little globules falling between the lines can be measured. In Fig. 1 the lines are actually 1-4,000 of an inch apart and it will be seen that some large globules entirely or more than fill the space between two lines, while other ones rise about one-third or one-fourth of a space. These globules then vary from 1-4,000 to 1,16,000 of an inch in diameter.

"By adding a known quantity of water to milk, the globules of fat can be counted by using the microscope. It has been found that a single drop of milk contains from 50,000,000 to 150,000,000 of globules.

"These are lighter than the serum in which they float, and so rise to the top of the fluid, forming cream. The large globules naturally rise first, and the smallest ones rise almost last. Heating and agitating causing the globules to run together in groups, hastens cream rising.

"Pasteurizing milk breaks up the groups of globules, and hence the cream rises slower on pasteurized than unpasteurized milk. This also occurs when milk is run through a centrifugal separator, and for the same reason, separator cream appears thinner than cream raised by the gravity method of the same percentage of fat."

CARE OF MILK AT HOME

Dr. Chambers was then asked if he thought pure milk could be delivered to a family hotel or restaurant and become affected afterward. He said:

"I believe that the care milk receives after reaching the consumer has much to do with its quality. I have observed that the following rules are applicable in taking care of it in the household:

"The first matter of importance is that milk shall be kept at a uniformly low temperature from the moment it is received until it is used, preferably at about 40 degrees F. No milk can be properly kept without the use of ice.

"It is never safe to open milk or cream and, after removing part of it, leave the jar uncovered, expose the milk in open pitchers, or return any that has been exposed in pitchers again to the original jar.

"It is never well to keep milk or cream that has once been opened, in a refrigerator that contains other foods.

"It is never wise to expose any milk or cream to the usual air of the kitchen, the pantry or the nursery except for such time as is necessary to obtain what is needed for immediate use.

"It is very unwise to put milk into any vessel or pitcher that has been washed in dish water and wiped with a kitchen cloth. Vessels to be employed for milk should be boiled in clean water and left for use unwiped, with the mouths turned down, and in a clean place.

"It is best and safest to use milk or cream at meal times from the original bottle in which it is received.

"Never cook or boil milk, especially with cereals, in a vessel used for general purposes, but set aside a special vessel, and boil it in clean water before using for cooking milk."

Meeting in the Office of Dr. R. Chambers to Discuss Meat Inspection and the Establishment of a Public Abattoir

TWO CITIES COMBINING

Officials of Fort Worth and North Fort Worth Working in Conjunction—Dr. H. D. Paxson, Gives Valuable Information

A meeting of those interested in a meat inspection ordinance applicable to Fort Worth and North Fort Worth as well as held at the office of Dr. R. Chambers, Fifteenth and Main street, last evening to properly discuss the matter and to listen to any suggestions anyone might wish to make relative to the subject.

The meeting was attended by Dr. H. D. Paxson, government official in charge of the bureau of animal industry at the packing houses; Dr. M. E. Gilmore, health officer; T. Valentine, city attorney; Aldermen W. A. Arthur, S. D. Shannon and J. J. Lydon, of North Fort Worth, and Alderman W. R. Parker of the health committee of the city council; Dr. R. Chambers, city health officer; City Attorney Orrick, Health Inspector C. C. McMichael, and Messrs. Fred Ropke and G. S. Miller, butchers of Fort Worth.

The meeting was informally called to order by Judge Parker, who asked that Dr. Paxson, the government expert, tell something about municipal meat inspection as carried on in the various cities of the country, as well as the inspection of the government representative. Dr. Paxson told of the formation of the bureau of animal industry inspection and showed by the enumeration of many diseases how the government took care of the meats. He told how animals were affected and what disposition was made of unfit cattle before killing and the carcasses after the slaughter. He showed by tags and labels the right methods employed by the government in protecting the public against unwholesome meats.

Dr. Paxson was asked regarding the suggestion of a plan for municipal inspection relative to Fort Worth and North Fort Worth. He cited cases of cities like Montgomery, Ala., and New Orleans as two cities having solved the question of municipal inspection of meats. He told what he knew of these cities. Dr. Paxson also suggested that the two cities here join together in the establishment of a slaughter house at a convenient point for all and make of it a model little packing house. Here the killing of cattle and hogs, he suggested, could be done for the casing and those portions of the animals which are usually thrown away by the small butcher. At this plant there would be every advantage of sanitary conditions and with a competent inspector in charge, the plant would be a success and the meat inspection question one no longer of perplexity, but of solution. Dr. Paxson told briefly of the system in vogue in the state of Montana in cities of 5,000 population or over.

City Attorney Orrick promised to write to several points for further information regarding meat ordinances of other cities where the plan had been out successfully and told those present that he wished more time. Following the talk of Dr. Paxson, which was one showing beyond all doubt that the gentleman was competent to discuss the subjects of meat and inspection, questions were asked by those present regarding how to provide to have government assistance, establishing a public slaughter house and the many minor details covered in the talk. Each in turn was answered speedily and satisfactorily by the expert.

Matters of interest to the cities of Fort Worth and North Fort Worth, in regard to the proper handling of contagious diseases during the winter was touched on by some of those present, but nothing was done in the matter. The meeting adjourned shortly before 10 o'clock. A session from 8:30 o'clock, all present feeling satisfied that the time spent at the meeting had been profitable and that although North Fort Worth and North Fort Worth were but little nearer to a proper meat inspection ordinance yet all had a light thrown on the matter by Dr. Paxson.

HOG CHOLERA CURED

Burnetts Creek, Ind.
Dear Sir—Five years ago I was in the employ of Mr. J. D. Richardson, Lafayette, Ind., as his barn foreman, when he took the agency for your remedies in that place. I had the sale and use of them and became very well acquainted with them. I have never found their equal for man or beast. Some fine hogs that I was feeding took the cholera. I gave them Sloan's Liniment and did not lose a hog. Some were so bad they would not drink sweet milk and I was compelled to drench them. I have tried it at every opportunity since and always find it O. K. I recommended it to my neighbors last fall and they have not lost a hog since using it.
Yours truly,
A. P. WILLIAMS.

GOVERNMENT TO SEND SEED TO PEOPLE

Annual Distribution Is Now in Progress and Senators and Representatives Are Busy

The annual distribution of seed, made under the direction of congress, has begun. Tarrant county residents are receiving the usual supply. Samples will reach the constituency of every member of congress. Last year $270,000 was expended. This year the cost will reach nearly $300,000.

This year a new plan has been introduced in the distribution of the seed. The country has been divided into six districts, and seeds and plants particularly adapted to each of these districts are being distributed where they will do the most good. It has frequently been the case that seeds have been sent to a territory where, in the nature of things, there was not the slightest chance of results.

This year each senator, representative and delegate in congress is privileged to have 14,000 packages of miscellaneous vegetable seed to his credit. He also has 500 packages of flower seed, and congressmen with a city constituency will be permitted to trade off vegetable for flower seed. Seventy packages of cotton seed, each package containing one peck will be sent to each cotton growing district. The tobacco districts have been allotted 110 packages of tobacco, each containing five papers. Each senator and representative has thirty packages of lawn grass seed. Sorghum and beet sugar seed have been given out in liberal quantities, but is to be sent only to the districts in which it can be grown. Bulbs are allotted in twenty boxes, containing seven bulbs each. There will be sent out ten packages of strawberry plants, with fifteen plants in each. Each member will also have eight packages of grape vines, with fine vines in each package. No trees are to be distributed this year.

In 1900 the department sent out 14,738,868 packages of seed. The output this year will be about 50,000,000 packages. The cost has risen from $4.45 per 1,000 in 1901 to $5 per 1,000 in 1904.

DANCING GIRLS, SEEN WITH "THE JEWEL OF ASIA"

Heralded as an international wonder, and promising much in the entertainment line, "Peggy From Paris" arrived here yesterday for a matinee and gave a second performance last night. The patronage of each occasion was very good, and during the action of a prologue and two acts these who attended watched for the delightful entertaining powers of Peggy. But if Peggy does not take elsewhere better than she does here, she will re-check her baggage for Paris and will return there to delight the home folk and will not risk a second tour through this section of the country. There are redeeming features to the attraction, however. The chorus girls are pretty, and dancing, and they are handsomely costumed. The men in the chorus are fine looking, they dress well and their clothes fit them. All of the chorus can sing—in fact the singing of the chorus is the only music in the attraction. Then there is Josie Sadler. She has the art of the German maid, and she is really good—in fact too good for the crowd she is training with. The janitor, whom ever he might be, the program does not disclose, is all right, but in this performance he leads the bunch, and leads them in a canter. His whistling stunt is good, his dancing and singing entertain, and the manner in which he hands out the vernacular of the street is truly pleasing.

Mark Sullivan, as Cicero Grampis, is not attractive in person or attire, his voice does not please nor does it harmonize with the surroundings. He has a gold tooth which shows plainly in the calcium, and mars the effect to some extent. It dazzles the light.

As to Peggy, Well, as presented by Eulalie Jensen, she is tall, pretty and well dressed. Her costumes are handsome in the extreme, but Peggy as presented by Eulalie Jensen cannot sing nor can she dance. She is awkward when she tries to dance, and after several attempts at gathering her skirts, during which time she catches her feet in the ruffles she manages to make a display of lace, lingerie and hosiery to the delight of the fellows on the front row. But she is not a dancer. The singing of the principals fell flat.

This, in brief, is Peggy from Paris as Peggy was seen at Greenwall's.

"HAPPY HOOLIGAN"

The remarkably successful musical farce, "Happy Hooligan," written by Frank Dumont from ideas suggested by Fred Oppen's clever caricatures in the illustrated comic weeklies, is announced to be presented in this city at Greenwall's opera house tonight. This realistic comedy character is at once recognized as being true to life while exaggerated sufficiently to be exceedingly laughable and the disastrous incidents, scenes and situations keep the audience stirred to the highest pitch of hilarity by the rib-ticking complications and happenings of riotous fun that are crowded into the forthcoming attraction. The principal characters are impersonated by John Price, Frank McNish, Ruby Raymond, etc., and the chorus has every kind of girl in it—tall girl, short girl, plump girl, blonde, brunette and Titan locks; nimble, blase, ingenuite and heavy girl.

HELPING MOTHER BUY THE THANKSGIVING TURK

gorgeous stage settings that extravagant producers of comic operas and musical comedies have ever devised.

"The Jewel of Asia" comes to Greenwall's opera house Wednesday matinee and night, November 23.

AN EVENT OF THE SEASON

It is a somewhat trite prediction to say that any theatrical entertainment will be "the event of the season." This phrase has become so long established a favorite that it does not carry the weight which it ought to when applied to an attraction of genuine and exceptional merit. The record of unvarying enthusiasm which Charles B. Hanford has established this season is conclusive evidence that his productions are among the very best that deserve to be so heralded. Mr. Hanford has surrounded himself with a company that surpasses any that he has yet organized, if the unanimous opinion of the reviewers may be credited. His leading lady, Miss Dronah, has established herself as a favorite with all who have seen her performances, and she has received such generous approval that her appearance here may be awaited with confident anticipation. Mr. Hanford is a positive and reliable factor in the season's entertainment, and the assurance that he brings a company of the highest merit, with scenery and costumes whose richness and abundance assure a metropolitan production in the most liberal sense of the phrase, will be gladly accepted by those who have heretofore tested the Hanford guarantee, and always with satisfactory results.

Mr. Hanford will present "Don Cagnier De Bazar" at Greenwall's opera house Thursday (Thanksgiving) matinee, Nov. 24, and Thursday night, "Othello."

A Solemn Duty.

A solemn duty which we owe society, our children and ourselves is that nothing which can be done to assist nature at that time when our wives are to become mothers should be left undone. Of all the countless details to be observed at such a time, no single one is of more importance than the bodily welfare of the expectant mother; she must not experience undue suffering through any lack of effort on our part.

THANKSGIVING

Thanksgiving day, the one great holiday set aside to commemorate no event; to mark no new epoch in history; to celebrate no victory; to praise no hero, but set aside by a body of sturdy Christians to pour forth to their Maker their heartfelt thanks for preservation in a foreign land has grown until today, from shore to shore and from the inland lakes to the gulf the American people pour forth its praise to the Great God.

In 1621, the day of first thanksgiving was observed, having been set aside by Governor Bradford of the Plymouth colony as a day for prayer and praise after the first harvest securing the colonists from starvation and the ultimate growth of their enterprise.

So deeply have the American people since that time realized their causes for thanksgiving that the custom of a few hardy souls spread in an ever-increasing circle, gathering in first the New England settlers, then others of the colonies and then spreading as rapidly as the path of civilization.

In turn each of the states took up the practice and their governors followed in the footsteps of Governor Bradford, calling the attention of the people to the causes for thanksgiving and setting apart a special day for the event. In 1863, the day was first set aside by presidential proclamation, and since that time the call for thanksgiving has been issued yearly from the White House, and has met response from every quarter.

No rule exists for the setting apart of the day, but the fourth Thursday in November has been chosen upon each occasion, this day being now so generally recognized as the proper one that it would require a reckless man to disregard the settled custom.

THANKSGIVING SERVICES

In addition to the Thanksgiving services announced in The Telegram of last Sunday, at the Broadway Presbyterian church, a harvest home and Thanksgiving service will be held at St. Andrew's Parish house at 10 a. m. There will be appropriate music, with an address suited to the occasion. Fruit of the earth will constitute the decorations. These should be sent Wednesday from 2 to 4 p. m. After the service these offerings will be distributed among the needy of the city.

The Julia Jackson chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, have issued invitations to a number of veterans of R. E. Lee camp, No. 158, United Confederate Veterans, to a Thanksgiving dinner at the R. E. Lee camp room Thursday night at 7.30 o'clock.

A Thanksgiving dinner will be given under the auspices of Keystone chapter No. 3, Order of the Eastern Star, proceeds to go as a Christmas present to the children and widows at Masonic home. Mrs. Amelia Huvelle, grand matron of the state, has been invited to be present and a reception in her honor will be held.

No additional football games have yet been announced, those between the Entre Nous and the Sans Parole, and the Elks and the Fort Worth University, however, promising sufficient entertainment along this line.

THINGS FOR THANKSGIVING

That Thanksgiving is approaching none fail to remember. Many of the special holiday food offerings are beginning to appear on the Fort Worth markets.

In the fruit line several novelties have already appeared. One is the English hot-house grown Muscat grapes. They are the white variety and the bunches are large and tempting. This is really the first season of their introduction to the city, and only two merchants could be found who had them today or expected them by Thanksgiving. The grapes are very expensive and cost not much less than $1.50 a pound. The bunches weigh from one to two pounds apiece.

Italian chestnuts are attracting attention. The large imported variety costs 25 cents a pound. They are becoming a favorite ingredient for turkey dressing and are used in numerous other ways. Some of the stores offer them preserved in vanilla syrup as a confection, called French marrons. When exposed to the air they crystallize and are excellent for making puddings. The branded chestnuts also make a delicious luxury.

Game is in greater demand now than ever before this season. Some fine plump birds are arriving. Prices on these continues high. Quail retail for 50 cents apiece and a pair of prairie chickens commands $2.50. Mallard ducks dressed cost 55 cents, and teal ducks 40 cents apiece; but this game is mighty scarce.

Poultry is more plentiful this week. Prices are more reasonable in some instances. Pine hen turkeys may be had for 15 cents a pound. The other values are practically unchanged.

PRICES OF VEGETABLES

The beautiful bright colors of the winter varieties of vegetables attract attention in every store where such goods are kept. There is quite a list of offerings. Some prices are high. Green and wax beans cost 15 cents a quart. Fresh California tomatoes 20 cents a pound; large, firm, white heads of Illinois cauliflower, 15 to 25 cents a head; large purple egg plant, California grown, 5 to 20 cents apiece; tender hot-house mushrooms, 75 cents a pound, and very few on the market; beets, carrots, turnips, radishes, kohlrabi, oyster plant and green onions, two and three bunches 5 cents; chives, celery, endive, beets, curly leaf lettuce, sage, water cress and sweet savory, 5 cents a bunch; dwarf celery, 10 cents a bunch; celery root, 10 cents apiece; Savoy cabbage, 5 cents a head; red pickling cabbage, 10 cents apiece; new garlic, 3 cents a pound; Boston market head lettuce, 10 cents a head; red globe onions, 30 cents a peck; white onions, 25 to 50 cents apiece; Florida oranges, ripe Mediterranean sweets, 45 to 60 cents a peck; Jamaica tangerines, 25 cents a dozen; figs, including California layer, California pulled and imported Smyrna varieties, 25 cents a pound; Japanese persimmons, 25 cents a dozen.

That about concludes the good things on the market for Thanksgiving dinner, and from it the good house wife should be able to secure many tempting delicacies of the season.

Thanksgiving Dinner

BY CYNTHIA GRAY.
 The Thanksgiving dinner to be a success should be given at the regular hour and should be as simple as possible. The following is a sufficiently elaborate menu:

 Turkey, Mashed Potato, Gravy,
 Squash, Celery, Jelly,
 Light Bread, Cranberries,
 Fig Pudding, Coffee,
 Nuts, Raisins.

If soup is desired, serve before the turkey hot bouillon in cups. When desiring to serve a relish before the turkey, serve oyster cocktails.

A simple salad is a celery and apple salad. Bits of jelly make any salad attractive.

For those who find pudding too heavy for the Thanksgiving dessert, ice cream or cherry ice will be found delicious. Serve with the less plain cake. Cream cake is good as dessert.

Here are some Thanksgiving recipes:

Celery and Apple Salad—Cut equal quantities of crisp white celery and tart apples into small dice, season with a French dressing and serve on individual salad plates, in lettuce leaves, with bits of tart jelly.

French Salad Dressing—The proportion of three tablespoons of olive oil to one of vinegar is a good one, adding one-fourth of a tablespoon of pepper and one-half teaspoon of salt. Pour the vinegar mixed with the salt and pepper over the salad, and add the oil last.

Oyster Cocktail—Place four or five small fresh oysters in tall punch glasses, add a dash of cayenne and a pinch of salt to each glass, a few drops of lemon juice and Worcestershire sauce and a little fresh horseradish; then fill each glass up with tomato catsup. To be appetizing these should be well chilled before serving.

Spiced Cranberries—Simmer in one cup water for half an hour two tablespoons ground cinnamon, one tablespoon ground cloves and one-half tablespoon ground allspice (tie spices in a bag). Add the spice water to seven pounds cranberries, three and a half pounds sugar and two cups cider vinegar. Set on back of range and cook slowly until as thick as marmalade. Put up in tumblers, cover with paraffin and set away in a cool place.

Cranberry Sherbet—Add to two cups cranberry juice one pint water, one pint powdered sugar, the juice of two lemons and one tablespoon gelatine softened in one-half cup cold water and dissolved over hot water. Strain and freeze to a mush.

To Prepare the Cranberry Juice—Cook two quarts of cranberries in ten quarts of water until soft. Drain in a jelly bag for twelve hours. Measure the juice, place over fire, let come to the boiling point, skim and add one-half as much sugar as there is juice. Boil for five minutes, bottle and seal. Recipe can be divided.

Here is another menu:

- Oyster Soup.
- Roast Turkey.
- Cranberry Sauce.
- Giblet Gravy.
- Mashed Potatoes.
- Creamed Onions.
- Sweet Potatoes.
- Tomato Jelly Salad.
- Pumpkin Pie.
- Cheese Wafers.
- Frozen Chocolate Pudding.

Fruits.
 Escalloped Sweet Potatoes with Mushrooms—Slice eight cold boiled sweet potatoes into a buttered baking dish, arranging them in alternate layers with small button mushrooms; season each layer with butter, a small amount of butter, a teaspoon of tomato catsup, a saltspoon salt, a pinch powdered mace and a little chopped parsley. When the dish is filled within an inch of top, pour in gradually a coffee-cup rich cream, cover the top with brown breadcrumbs and bake thirty minutes in moderate oven.

Sweet Potato Patties: Boil half a dozen sweet potatoes, peel and mash very smooth, adding half a cupful of thick cream, a scant teaspoon salt, a saltspoon paprika and a tablespoon powdered sugar. Cut a sheet of rich pie crust (that has been rolled out very thin) into small squares; place a tablespoon of the prepared sweet potatoes in the center of each, turn over in triangles, and crimping around the edges with the tines of a silver fork. Brush over the tops with a little milk and powdered sugar and bake twenty minutes in a hot oven. Serve on a folded napkin, garnished with sliced celery.

Frozen Chocolate Pudding—Mix half a cup sugar with six ounces grated chocolate. Pour over this one cup boiling water and stir until thick and smooth, then let get cold. Stir into it three cups cream whipped to a dry stiff froth. Turn into a fancy mold and pack in ice and salt for four hours. Serve with canned strawberry sauce.

 BY CYNTHIA GREY.
 The Thanksgiving dinner is usually a family dinner and is sometimes given in honor of a bride in the family. A clever hostess once planned her centerpiece with this in view. The work was as artistic as it was unique and beautiful. It consisted of five squashes, cut and shaped like wooden shoes. The hollows of the slippers were filled with fruit and flowers. The heels were placed together and the toes turned out to form a star.

The vegetable centerpiece is always good for Thanksgiving. A great green cabbage, with knots of purple violets peeping from here and there among the leaves, makes a beautiful table ornament. Cabbages with common flowers are also attractive. Red geraniums, pink geraniums and pink begonias are pretty with cabbage greenery.

Parsley can be used in a variety of methods. It is pretty showered from the chandelier over a table holding a big pumpkin, scooped out and filled with yellow flowers with sprigs of parsley.

Highly polished apples with grapes make pretty centerpieces. And fruits are as suitable for Thanksgiving as are vegetables and fall flowers.

Grasses give a dainty touch to the vegetable and fruit centerpiece. If a rod quickly brown the skin; then it should be allowed to cook gradually to a more moderate heat. Roast slowly, allowing twenty minutes to a pound of fowl. Baste frequently with the following: One pint of water, one tablespoon each of butter and drippings.

STUFFING
 Ordinary bread stuffing, though old-fashioned, is liked best by most people. Take toasted bread, from which crusts have been removed, shred it finely. Crusts will be supported by a mound of apples, and college pennants will ornament this base of fruit.

One mother who is teaching her child can be hung from the chandelier a flat pumpkin top supported by the rod makes a pretty holder for several candles. The table is pretty lighted with candles.

One housewife, whose grown sons are enthusiastic football players, is planning to surprise them with a football centerpiece. The ball will be an oblong pumpkin painted in college colors. This ball will be supported by a mound of apples, and college pennants will ornament this base of fruit.

melting butter, 1 finely chopped onion, several stalks chopped celery, 2 well-beaten eggs and salt and pepper to taste. Many add sage, finely powdered.

GRAVY
 Half the success of the turkey depends upon the gravy. Thoroughly wash heart, gizzard and liver, put them into a pot with 1 1/2 pints of cold water, simmer until tender and about half the water remains. Strain meat out of water and chop it fine. Again turn it into the water, add a little of the drippings from the baked turkey, season with salt and pepper, thicken with flour and water paste until the gravy is as thick as good thick cream.

SERVING AND CARVING
 Place the roasted turkey on a large platter, cut and remove the trussing threads and garnish with sprigs of fresh parsley. When the platter is placed on the table the breast of the fowl should be at the left hand of the carver. Care should be exercised that the carving knife is in good condition and a small platter should be placed near at hand where the disjointed legs and wings may be laid while the breast is being carved.

Insert fork at E (Fig. 2). First cut off the wings C - D and the legs A - B. Disjoint these and place them on the extra platter.

Then slice the breast downward, as indicated by dotted lines F - E and H - G. The wish bone lies in the direction of the dotted line from E to I, and chicken is removed after the white meat of the breast has been cut away. When serving, place a piece of white and one of dark meat on each plate with a portion of the stuffing, which is removed with a table or serving spoon at the incision at the point marked E.

planning to set in the middle of the table a colonial hat shaped from cardboard, filled with flowers and festooned with a garland of flowers. She is also using American flags upon the table and about the room.

THANKSGIVING ODE

(Written for The Telegram by Captain Charles H. Pettit.)

For Nation's wealth,
 Father above,
 Author of love,
 We bend the suppliant knee,
 We give thee thanks
 From all our ranks
 With hearts both glad and free;
 We tribute bring
 Thy praises sing
 Today in sweetest song,
 For life, for health,
 For Nation's wealth,
 For love continued long.

With reverence deep
 This day we keep
 At bidding of our chief,
 Give us today,
 We humbly pray
 Thy sunshine without grief,
 Attune our hearts
 To do their parts
 'Lest we forget thy love,
 Thy mercy show
 Us here below

"Ancient of Days,"
 To thee be praise
 Thanksgiving loud and long,
 For toll's surcease
 For Country's peace
 Hallelujah be our song,
 We bless and praise
 Thy wondrous ways
 From mountain top to sea,
 Thy holy name
 Be sung with fame
 Through all eternity.

Thanksgiving Turkey

BY CYNTHIA GREY.

The first Thanksgiving day in America was followed by a week of feasting. In preparation for this the men went in search of game and the women busied themselves in the kitchens. The men roamed the hillsides of wild turkeys. The turkey has since that time been the king of the Thanksgiving feast, just as he was king of the first feast, two and a half centuries ago.

At that time knowledge of the fowling piece was a more consequence than knowledge of the fowl. Today the housewife must be thoroughly informed of the merits and demerits of turkedom if she buys wisely for the annual day of feasting.

BUYING

Buy a hen turkey rather than a gobbler; let her be just fat enough to be plump, with firm, white flesh. If the fowl is young the breast bone will spring under the thumb and the legs will be free from scales. If buying alive, kill by stroke against the head strong enough to draw blood, but that does not cut the head from the body. Hang up by feet and let the blood drip. Strip off feathers while bird is warm, and when the blood stops dripping hang the fowl where it is cool until time to dress it. The turkey should be killed and dressed at least twenty-four hours before eating. If buying dead, a dry pickled bird is always best.

PREPARING

To prepare the turkey, singe fine feathers by holding and turning over a lighted paper. Wash in cold water, wipe dry with a soft cloth, pull out any pin feathers remaining. Take off the feet at the leg joint. Split the skin at the neck and draw out the crop and windpipe. Turn the bird on its back, cut a slit from the breast to the rump, and carefully draw out entrails; from these take the heart, gizzard and liver. These are good in the gravy. Wash and dry the turkey again.

TRUSSING

Fill the inside with stuffing, sew up the slits with coarse, clean white thread. Draw the skin down over the ends of the leg bones and tie them to the rump. Press the legs close to the sides of the turkey and with a long needle sew through the fowl and legs, holding them to the sides. Draw the skin over the neck and tie it there. The turkey is then ready for the baking pan. (See Fig. 1.)

BAKING

When the turkey is put into the oven, the even should be just hot enough to

General Freight Agent McCabe of the Rock Island stated this morning that the meeting held in Dallas yesterday of freight officials had nothing whatever to do with Texas cotton rates. The meeting was merely one of Oklahoma officials, he declared, and that he was present merely by invitation.

The matter discussed he stated was Oklahoma cotton shipments, the question of Atlantic ports and the gulf ports at New Orleans and at Galveston being thoroughly gone over. Reports of the meeting, admitted to be unofficial, stated that the Rock Island was objecting to cutting of rates to Galveston to fill cargoes and other methods drawing from the Rock Island-Frisco New Orleans shipments, which it felt would force them to either build to Galveston or secure the abolishment of the 2-cent insurance, differential to Atlantic ports.

Those present at the meeting yesterday were, in addition to Mr. McCabe, General Freight Agent J. S. Hershey of the Santa Fe and A. C. Ponda, his chief clerk; General Freight Agent J. W. Allen of the Katy and Ed Briggs, his chief clerk; C. B. Hart, division freight agent of the Rock Island at Oklahoma City; Assistant General Freight Agent S. H. Johnson of the Rock Island at Little Rock, Commercial Agent Roy Terry of the Frisco, Chief Clerk O'Malley and City Soliciting Freight Agent H. E. Crookston, and C. W. Root, chief clerk in the division freight office of the Santa Fe.

Will the anniversary of the entry of the Rock Island into Dallas witness the return of the bonus raised by the citizens to pay the extra cost of securing the right of way? is the question now being generally discussed in railroad circles. The anniversary occurs on the last day of this month, and repeated rumors of the return of the money have been made and printed. Member of the Dallas committee have even gone so far as to plan the redistribution of the fund.

With these conditions existing, official statement, however, is lacking. Vice President Hovey committing himself no further than to say that he had asked the committee to whom vouchers should be made in the event of return. When pressed he refused to state definitely that the money would be returned. Railroads generally felt, however, that the return will be made and as an anniversary gift.

A good holiday traffic is being looked for by the local roads, despite the belief of some officials that the World's Fair business will detract from the Christmas trade. Chief Clerk Nourse of the Frisco general passenger office is one of the optimistic officials, and believes the fair traffic will not be felt, the travel to the southeastern states being altogether separate. Whether it is expected to play a large part in the matter, good weather preceding the holidays being always a sure forecast of good business.

General Attorney Yeakum of the Frisco has gone to Austin to attend the hearing in the case of the Grand Jury. Little interest is being manifested locally, the action in the Denver case, however, being taken as a favorable straw. It is predicted here that another hearing will be held next month before final decision.

A good amount of homeseeker business was done today by the local roads on the regular homeseekers' day. City Agent Tipton of the International and Great Northern reports a party of homeseekers taken through from Itasca to San Jose, Cal.

City and Passenger Agent Zurn of the Texas and Pacific was in Dallas this morning. Traveling Passenger Agent Hughes of the Texas and Pacific was here yesterday afternoon. W. W. Miller, trainmaster of the Katy, with headquarters at Denison, is in the city today. General Freight Agent Sterley of the Denver returned this morning from a trip up that line. W. F. Schmidt, foreign freight agent of the Missouri Pacific, is here today from Chicago headquarters.

CLUB WOMEN DO HOROR TO THE VISITOR

Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker, President of the General Federation, is Entertained at a Reception. Fort Worth club women were all a-flutter yesterday because of the presence in town of Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker of Colorado, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and of the reception tendered her at the Hotel Worth in the afternoon by the Woman's Wednesday Club.

Mrs. Decker while in the city was the guest of Mrs. John Waples. In entertaining Mrs. Decker the Woman's Wednesday Club opened their reception to all local club women and their friends. In consequence the parlors of the hotel were thronged with a brilliant assemblage of representatives of club and social life. Mrs. Decker is a handsome woman, magnetic on her feet addressing an audience or in warm sincere hand clasp all who come within a radius of her personality to share her interest and hopes and prophecy for the future of women, especially club women.

Her address to the women of Fort Worth was along exclusively womanly lines, the duties of motherhood and the wider broader duties of universal womanhood. To fulfill these duties the clubs should aim for its members civility, philanthropy and all altruistic obligations. In conversation after the address Mrs. Decker spoke further on woman's work in the woman's clubs are for the cultivation or advancement or improvement of woman as an individual the club movement will die, because that view of the club is purely selfish and for all of human nature's weaknesses, selfishness ever brings failure, whether to the individual or to an organization of individuals.

"But club work is growing with wonderful results because no association of women can ever be purely selfish. To feel for others, to labor for others, to share with a visitor from New York; "It is true that the club must be pledged to high and unselfish aims. But it is also true that the club must never lose sight of the social side of club life. The duties of the home, and they are beautiful duties as we know, may become dreary drudgery from sheer monotony. The club must bring to the lives of duty-bound women the brightness of social contact, the charm of beautiful friendships, the inspiration that comes from thought expressed in papers or conversation or the study of literature, history or art. The social part of club life is just as important as the altruistic spirit. Rather is it an expression of that spirit."

Mrs. E. V. Turner of Dallas, president of the State Federation, was also present and made a sprightly talk on the bonds between Texas and Colorado, as well as an earnest outline of the work of the Texas Federation, especially on the 11-hour movement and an industrial school for boys. During the afternoon Mrs. Morton rendered a violin solo with accompaniment by Mrs. Collins, and Miss Lanier a vocal solo, Miss Tomlinson accompanying. Both were heartily applauded.

After the addresses the tea was turned in the parlors by Mesdames Craddock, Ben Martin, Henry Williams and Andrews and served by Misses Waples, McLean, Newlin, Samuels and Larimer. The members of the Wednesday Club prominent in the receiving line were Mesdames Conroy, chairman of the entertainment committee, and D. T. Bomar, F. D. Thompson, J. C. Terrell, W. A. Adams, J. G. Waples, J. P. King, M. A. Spoons, W. C. Stripling and M. M. Barnes.

The death of John White Jr., the 2-year-old son of John White and wife, died last night at the residence of his parents, 701 South Main street. Funeral services were held from the residence at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, interment being made in Oakwood cemetery.

SENDING JAPS BACK SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 22.—Two hundred and fifty-one Japanese arrived from the St. Louis fair today in charge of an immigration inspector and a strong guard. They were immediately transferred from Oakland Mole to the steamer Ceptic, which sails Saturday, for transportation to China. State of Ohio, City of Toledo, ss. Lucas County. Frank J. Former Teacher of This City Has Spent Six Years in the Klondike Country and Comes Back on a Visit. From the drudgery of a Fort Worth public school room to the ice locked treasure vaults of Alaska has been the experience of Mrs. Maggie Hoge, several years ago one of the popular and efficient teachers in the Fort Worth high school. Mrs. Hoge is now in Fort Worth looking after her real estate interests and is amazed at the changes six years have wrought. Of her experiences in Alaska, where she spends her summers with her brother, one of the owners of the Treadwell mine and other valuable claims, she is more than enthusiastic. She speaks of the future of this northern country as being beyond the dream of any man to forecast. "Southern Alaska is yet to be explored. One strike has been made in the southern section that will attract from the Pacific coast alone 15,000 people next summer. I have lived in Portland and Seattle with my brother and sister for the past six years, joining them immediately after the death of my husband. I spent a winter in the government service in Dawson six years ago, going with my brother, who was one of the first to venture into the far north prospecting. His claims have all proved valuable and he spends the summer months on the Canadian side ever since. "The opening for women would not be believed even if I could tell them. Women enter every business occupation there and teachers get sometimes more than ten dollars a day. One little woman from Seattle who had been holding a clerical position opened a boarding house and in three years cleared $9,000. "While in the government employ in Dawson I got some practical work in assaying and while in Frisco, where I am going from here, I will take work in the laboratory so that when I go back into the territory with my brother I will be prepared to do actual practical prospecting. "Conditions are changing rapidly and Alaska has more college men to its population than any part of the country I have ever visited. Some of course do not accomplish much, but the most of them are finding these opportunities for success that they would live and work a lifetime in the states for and then only partially accomplish."

Mrs. Hoge has great praise for the Portland exposition. She says that many of the choicest and most interesting exhibits at St. Louis will not be sent back to the countries from which they came, but will be shipped at once to Portland at the close of the St. Louis exposition. Mrs. Hoge has just come from the St. Louis fair and is on her way to San Francisco, where she will be several weeks. Her brother will go next spring to China and she contemplates accompanying him on that trip also. Her son is in New York, having entered school there this fall for a five years' course in mining and engineering.

Two more elections will be required in North Fort Worth to complete arrangements for its schools voted Saturday to be maintained separately from those of the county. Under the usual course of procedure, the city council will canvass the returns of the recent election declaring the result of the election officially for reference to the department of education at Austin. It will be then necessary for the county judge to call an election for the purpose of electing seven school trustees for the city. Following this election another will be necessary to fix the amount of school tax and unless a combination with this election is made a still further one may be necessary to decide the question of issuing bonds for the erection of additional school buildings. After the first election of school trustees, elections for them will be held every two years, only a partially new board being elected each time. No candidates have yet announced themselves for the school board positions.

The entertainment given at the city hall last night for the benefit of the North Fort Worth Baptist church was well attended. A box social will be given at the Diamond Hill school house Thanksgiving day night. The coming lecture of Bishop David H. Moore, D. D. of the Methodist Episcopal church, Nov. 29, was announced in last evening's Telegram. The lecture will be at the city hall. Bishop Moore has for years lived in Shanghai and was an eye witness of the naval battle of Chemulpo, Korea, at the beginning of the present Russian-Japanese war. He will deliver his famous lecture at the city hall at 8:30 p. m. on the date. The bishop's residence in the Far East and his supervision of the missions of his church throughout the east especially embracing Japan and Korea gave him special advantages and then while in Chemulpo was an eye witness to the now famous battle, especially qualifies him for an interesting hour on the "Battle of Chemulpo." It is not expected to make a charge at the university under whose auspices it is given is anxious that all of the citizens shall enjoy this treat with them. It is hoped that Bishop Luther B. Wilson, D. D., of Baltimore, will be in the city on this date as he will be en route to hold the Texas conference about that time.

THE VESSEL YET ASHORE NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The steamship Sicilia Prince is still ashore today on the sand bar at Long Beach, the attempt made at high tide early today to pull her off having been unsuccessful. Lightering the vessel followed by emptying the water ballast and the removal of coal. It is hoped the attempts to pull her off at high water tonight will meet with success. An attempt is to be made by the British war department to raise a second battalions of the Irish Guards. It is expected to be successful as the first battalion now has several companies in excess of the establishment.

CURED CONSUMPTION Mrs. B. W. Evans, Clearwater, Kan., writes: "My husband lay sick for three months. The doctors said that he had quick consumption. We procured a bottle of Ballard's Horehound Syrup, and it cured him. That was six years ago. Since then we have always kept a bottle in the house. We can not do without it. For coughs and colds it has no equal." 25c. 50c. $1.00. Sold by H. T. Pangburn & Co.
