

IN MANCHURIA BY DOUGLAS STORY.

to gauge the capacity of his officers. He commands an army of veterans, and the leaders are men of very actual experience.

(Copyright, 1905, by the Newspaper Enterprise Association.)

MUKDEN, Jan. 15.—After the battle of the Sha-ho the weather very rapidly took on a winter aspect, the cold increased in intensity, until now the thermometer registers 20 degrees below zero.

Movement there can be little, because if either force moved twenty yards from its present position it would require dynamite to excavate a new dwelling place, while military works are impossible.

In these weeks of inactivity Kuropatkin is troubling little about reinforcements. Every additional man is an additional burden upon the departments of housing, clothing and provisioning.

For six months of the war our guns were outranged and outnumbered by those of the Japanese. When the spring campaign commences our artillery should equal in number and efficiency of fire that of the enemy.

Up to the end of the campaign of 1904, the Japanese showed greater mobility with their artillery, and superior capacity to concentrate their fire.

The horses stand the cold remarkably well. Born and bred on the steppes, or on the plateaus of Siberia, they shake their coats in derision at temperatures which would kill the mounts of Germany or Great Britain.

The morale of the troops has suffered little, if at all, by their period of inactivity. The men were driven to the last stage of physical exhaustion by the events of September and October, and three months of leisure have merely served to bring them back to something like tone again.

When the battle begins once more, Kuropatkin will have a force in a very different condition of organization to that with which he finished the first campaign.

To begin with, he now exercises absolutely supreme command. He no longer has to assume two responsibilities, to consider two conflicting plans of campaign. He depends upon himself alone, is alone responsible for the good or evil attained by his army.

Kuropatkin, also, has had opportunity to gauge the capacity of his officers. He commands an army of veterans, and the leaders are men of very actual experience.

Mitcheenko has proved a pillar of strength throughout the war, and assuredly Kuropatkin is well advised to place his faith in him now.

The greatest sufferers from winter are the Chinese. Like all resident populations in a war-stricken area, they have been rotated from their homes by the combatants, their harvests have been spoiled, their means of livelihood removed from them.

WISCONSIN RAILROAD LAW THEIR MODEL FOR SENATORSHIP

Wisconsin Legislators Look to Southwest for Traffic Regulation Ideas

SWEEPING BILL PLANNED

Commission Appointed by the Governor Will Have Almost Unlimited Powers

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 4.—Railroad commission bills incorporating the views of Governor La Follette and other administration leaders are in preparation and will be introduced soon, as the men chiefly interested are drafting the measures.

There is no concealment in the expressions secured from leading administration members that the Texas railway commission law, if not entirely copied in all essentials, will constitute the basis for the proposed Wisconsin law.

By others it is claimed that the proposed bill will be a composite framed upon provisions contained in the laws of practically all the states where railway commissions have been authorized.

TO BE APPOINTED BY GOVERNOR

The Texas law that will serve as the basis of the proposed administration measure provides that three persons be appointed by the governor and the legislature in session the appointments shall be confirmed by the senate.

HAS POWER TO FIX ALL RATES

The commission has the power to classify and subdivide all freight and to fix a rate for each classification and division, and the classification shall be the same for all railroads.

MAY APPEAL APPELLATE COURT

The right of appeal from the decision is given, but jurisdiction to try the appeal is limited to the county wherein is located the state capitol, and to the appellate court.

PRESIDENT WANTS MARRIAGE STATISTICS

Calls Attention of Congress, to Fact That no figures have been collected since 1896

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The president has sent a message to congress recommending legislation authorizing the director of the census to secure and publish statistics on marriage and divorce covering the period from 1880 to the present.

CONGRESS WANTS GARFIELD REPORT

Result of Investigations at the Packing Centers Still Being Withheld

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The bill made connection between the delayed report of Commissioner Garfield on the beef trust and the secret current movements of the White House and the attorney general as to further action against the beef trust are the warrant for the statement that if the report is not sent to congress in a few days, congress will inquire the causes of the delay.

It is known that members of congress who were loaded with facts showing violations of the beef trust against the trust have called on Commissioner Garfield.

It is known also that specific cases were actually called to the attention of Mr. Garfield in the speech of Representative Martin of South Dakota, a republican, when he offered his resolution of inquiry in the house on March 13.

It is regarded of tremendous importance that at the very time Mr. Martin had this information the injunction was in force against the beef trust.

Representative Martin said today that he had no criticism to make of Commissioner Garfield or the fact that the report had not been sent to congress.

It is a fact after the Martin speech and the matter in his speech went to Mr. Garfield, the commissioner sent agents out into the territory described in the allegations made by Mr. Martin.

HAVANA, Feb. 4.—The United States, on behalf of American Cotton Manufacturers' Association, has protested against the ruling of the Cuban treasury department regarding ineffective President McKinley's order of March 18, 1901, giving admittance to Cuba at preferential rates on cotton fabrics of certain weight and width manufactured by American looms.

FEELS BITTER TOWARD KERENS

The senior Niedringhaus proved that he would not be equal to such a commission by his indiscreet comments at the capitol in conversation with several members of congress he blurted out, "It will be either Tom Niedringhaus for senator or nobody."

HOW CAN A GIRL SALUTE THE FLAG

Question Baffled President Roosevelt and Military Authorities Differ

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Falling to have her inquiry as to how a girl ought to salute the American colors satisfactorily answered by the President, Miss Helen Beach of No. 99 Newman avenue, Bayonne, N. J., may have the question settled by some of the men in the army and navy.

"Please, Mr. President, will you tell me the proper manner in which a girl should salute the flag?"

"My dear child, if you were a boy and asked me this question I could answer it by telling you to raise your hat and then drop your arm to your side, but just how a girl should salute really I cannot say."

"I would suggest placing the right hand across the breast, the head at the same time being slightly lowered."

foasted in the United States allege undue requirements of proof of the place of origin of the coffee. The general complaint is that the Cuban customs requirements are unfair to United States interests, notwithstanding that the workings of reciprocity while involving highly favorable to Cuba are not particularly so to the United States with the interests of Europeans.

STATEHOOD NOTE COMES UP FEB. 7

Generally Predicted Oklahoma and Indian Territory Will Be Admitted as One

ARIZONA STILL IN DOUBT

Amendment Joining It With New Mexico Not Likely to Swing Majority

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—After a fight which lasted through the first part of two congressional sessions the senate agreed to vote on statehood for the territories. The vote will be in open session on the request of Senator Beveridge, and the date was fixed for Tuesday, Feb. 7.

"I feel quite confident that Oklahoma and Indian Territory will be admitted to statehood at this session of congress. I am not so certain as to the fate of some of the amendments."

Both propositions are in doubt. The situation is most peculiar. It will be more radical amendments changing important features of the bill. But these same senators, of whom Long of Kansas is one, will on a final vote support the bill in any form in which it is presented.

WOULD SAVE NEW MEXICO

All the democratic senators, thirty-three in number, will support the Patterson amendment, striking out all references to Arizona and thus admitting New Mexico as a separate state.

THE ENEMY'S RE-ENFORCEMENT

Why don't you shell that grove, Captain Birney?" cried the general angrily, riding up to a battery that was receiving a heavy fire without replying.

"General," stammered the captain, "do you—must I—fire into that grove?" The general glared at the officer and half drew his sword, then, sheathing it, hissed: "Do you want me to cut you down for mutiny? Have you lost your head through cowardice or are you afraid of hurting the Yankees?"

Birney seized the lanyard of one of his guns and pulled it so fiercely as to break it. The shot was a signal for every gun in the battery to open fire, and a storm of shells went crashing through the trees.

"Now move your guns forward," said the general, "and give it to them."

Birney, with a life in death expression, advanced his battery, stopping occasionally to empty his guns, till at last the fire from the grove ceased altogether. The general continued beside Birney, directing the operations in person, and now ordered him to take his battery through an open gate along a carriage way past a large dwelling with colonial pillars in its front and place them on the crest of a slope, looking toward the valley, where the Federals were in evidence.

As soon as this was done the commander turned to Birney and said sharply: "Go to the rear under arrest."

"General," replied the young officer, sheathing his sword, "I crave your permission to first go into the house yonder."

"What for?" "To see if the inmates are alive." "The inmates? What are they to you?"

"The world. There I was born. There less than a year ago I was married. It is not a week since I received word from my wife that she had in that very house just been delivered of a son. General, for God's sake let me go in and see if I have killed my wife and child."

The general stared at the young captain for a moment, then threw himself from his horse, and the two hurried into the house. They found desolation. There was neither sound of footsteps nor voice. But hark! The cry of an infant. With a common impulse they started forward, Birney leading the way, to a door, through which they passed to the cellar.

On a wicker lounge lay a young woman, her face white as ashes, her eyes closed. Standing beside her was a white haired man holding a tumbler, while kneeling an elderly lady fanned the invalid or the dead, none knew which. At the head of the couch stood a negro mammy rocking in her arms a baby and soothing it with soft words.

In a fury of tears the young husband and father, pointing to the livid woman, exclaimed: "This, general, is what has induced you to brand me as a coward. You have forced me to fire on my wife, who but a few days ago had endured the pains of childbirth—on an innocent babe. You have ordered me to the rear under arrest. Here is my sword; take it. I have no further use for it. I will never draw it again. I wish to God I had disobeyed your order and you had cloven my skull."

The general seized the young man's hand and whispered hoarsely: "Boy, it wasn't I. It was war—grim, murderous, horrible war—war not for Christians, for funds; not for a fair world, for hell."

At the moment there was a cry from the babe. The mother heard it and opened her eyes. There came a lightning of the white face as she recognized her husband. Then the lids fell again.

A heavy tread was heard on the floor above, and a voice asked for the general. An officer's face appeared at the head of the stairway. "General," he said, "the Second brigade is being cut to pieces. They need re-enforcements."

"Never mind the Second brigade. They are men. Ride, quick, and bring a surgeon—for a woman."

The general turned to the group. Birney was kneeling beside his wife, begging her to open her eyes again—to live for his sake. She raised her lids languidly and tried to put her arms around his neck, but they would have fallen limp had he not clasped them for her. The old lady took the babe from its nurse and placed it with its father and mother. The old soldier stood by with bowed head, vainly endeavoring to keep the moisture from his eyes.

Then he turned to attend to sterner duties. The next morning the southern forces withdrew from the field and moved seaward. The young wife and mother was so far recovered that Birney, though permitted by the general to remain with her, stuck by his command.

The general could never be brought to look complacently upon his having ordered a husband and father to fire on his wife and newborn babe. He wished to make reparation and at the same time refrain from laying bare so delicate a situation. His deliberations resulted in publishing the following order:

The gallant conduct of Lieutenant Clarence Birney in driving the enemy from the Birney homestead, he having to face a re-enforcement, requiring courage of the highest order, afforded an example of perfect soldiery never before witnessed by the commanding general.

Meanwhile the "re-enforcement" was not troubling himself about the general's order. He slept fifteen hours a day and when awake was principally interested in pulling on a bottle.

CZAR NICHOLAS II.

RUSSIA'S CZAR IS A PUPPET ON THRONE OF TERRIBLE POWER

Nicholas II, czar of Russia—most talked of in the world to-day. What is he? What is his nature? What are the salient points of his character? What are his possibilities? Here is Nicholas, pictured in a few words: Small of stature, moderately strong physically, affectionate, kind-hearted, desirous to do good in the world, weak-spirited, lacking in will power, dragged hither and thither by his relatives and his ministers, a tool—a shrinking, vacillating figurehead upon a throne of awful power. Nicholas was born May 12, 1868, the eldest son of Emperor Alexander III, who died in 1894. Nicholas becoming czar at the age of 26. More than ten years he has reigned, with but one desire in his heart—to make his people happy—yet these ten years have brought misery, persecution and war. The reason for this apparently strange state of affairs lies simply in the fact that though Nicholas is the ruler of Russia, the Russian bureaucracy is the ruler of Nicholas. This bureaucracy is composed of the nobles of the realm, and it may be best compared to a body of keepers or jailers, whose voice in the government of Russia is far greater than the emperor's. When the czar desires information on any matter of interest in his country, he has none but official sources at his disposal. All his knowledge of his people, their sorrows and their needs, must filter to him through a mass of lies, trickery and pollution, which render it far worse than useless by the time it reaches the unhappy monarch. The ruler of 130,000,000 subjects is virtually a prisoner in his own palace. He is as much under police supervision and control as an arrested suspect in any of St. Petersburg's jails. Every letter, every communication addressed to the czar is opened and read before it reaches him. If its contents do not meet with the approval of the all-powerful "officials" who represent the nobles, the document is destroyed. The czar knows this. BUT HE IS POWERLESS to help himself. Once he sent a trusted favorite on an important mission in the interior. The czar wanted to know the real truth, and he told his emissary to write to another trusted friend of the czar's in St. Petersburg, using ordinary note paper and small envelopes. The emissary wrote many letters to the man in St. Petersburg, of which just six ever reached their destination, and they had doubtless been opened and read. And that is why the poor, unhappy little emperor, loving his people—loving the Finns and Jews, and wishing to ameliorate the terrible miseries under which they have been crushed—must pose to the world AS A CRUEL TYRANT, allowing his soldiers to murder and pillage, depriving people of national and personal liberty, defending his life and his power by the slaughter of priests, women and children in the streets of his capital city. Unquestionably there is no man in Russia so horror-stricken over the awful slaughter of Jan. 22 as Nicholas. Doubtless he has wept, in the silence of his chamber, at the murder of his "children"—for such he calls the Russian people. But he is well-nigh as powerful as a fly in a spider's web. Without the aid and consent of the nobles he can do next to nothing—can scarcely issue the slightest order. During the last year, while Nicholas has been talking most earnestly for reform, personal liberty has been abridged in a dozen ways throughout his empire. RIGHTS OF FREE MEN have been curtailed in every direction. And the czar has not even been consulted. The "bureaucracy issues its orders to the police, who are second in power only to the nobles, and the emperor must stand and look on. Sometimes, in spite of the nobles, one of the czar's measures comes to the front; the world hears that he favors international peace, that he has called a Hague conference, that he deprecates the Kishineff massacres, that he favors reforms in Finland. And these proclamations will come reports of how Russia's military strength is being increased as never before, how Japan has been forced into war, how orders have been given for further persecution of the Jews, how Finland has been crushed further into the dust. The nobles have allowed Nicholas to have his say for a moment, just to show, apparently, how powerless he is by forcing him to pursue a course exactly opposite to the one he has indicated. Poor Nicholas! Small wonder that he "lost his nerve" long ago—that he broods, and mourns, and writes morbid poetry! A well-meaning puppet, cursed by the evil deeds of his masters—Nicholas II.

PRECIOUS TIME We Waste Too Much Time on Non-Essentials

The exact width of his hat brim, the precise shade of his tie and the substitution of one soup in place of another, or of boiled potatoes for baked, have been matters of importance enough to occupy a man's mind for several unhappy hours. The entire domestic life of more than one family is marred, if not virtually ruined, by this insistence upon "non-essentials." It is necessary in a trial balance to be exact to a penny; it is important to adjust machinery to a nicety and one unimportant item which enters into daily existence is the cause of many a life failure. It is well to be orderly and neat; it is well to have promptness at meals; it is well to be careful in the choice of colors and to be tasteful in apparel and to consider the menu worthy of attention. But there are a score of insignificant items every day occurring in the routine of life to which most of us pay too much attention and in which we waste precious vitality. Watch yourself on the next occasion when you become irritated, nervous or out of focus with the lines of mental harmony, and see if the cause of your un-happiness is really important enough to excuse it! "Life is too short to waste on the non-essentials!"

Cleanings From the Exchanges

The democratic legislature of Texas refuses to recognize the authority of the democratic state convention and ignores the platform demands. The boys want railroad passes and propose to hang on to 'em, and they have just killed the anti-nepotism bill in committee. Pride goeth before a fall, as some of our festive statesmen at Austin are sure to learn. The hold-over senators can laugh at platform demands awhile, but their turn will come later.—Abilene Reporter. It is thus that the members of the state legislature are beginning to hear from the boys in the forks of the creek, and if they are wise they will hearken to the dangers that lie in overlooking the expressed will of the people. The Fort Worth Telegram says that the newspapers of Texas are in most cases far ahead of those in any other southern state, and in many instances ahead of the localities in which they are printed. The Telegram might have said that they are ahead of the northern papers, too, for as a rule they are. It is doubtful if the papers of any state in the union surpass those of Texas.—Brownwood Bulletin. The Telegram will go further still and assert without fear of successful contradiction that Texas papers as a whole are the peers of those published in any state in the union. There is nothing the matter with the Texas press except that in the majority of instances it is not properly appreciated at home.

DEEP TRUST AT DENVER DENVER, Feb. 4.—The heads of the beef trust deny that there is a trust, but the trust movement in Denver to make war on the butchers who refuse to buy from it goes on just the same. A. F. Flood of 1025 Fifteenth street—one of the not-in-the-trust market men—says that the fight is being started to force a number of the local retailers to buy from the trust at prices higher than they can buy from the local packing houses. The Swift company is being used to make war on the local men, but all the members of the trust are in it, and the Swift depot, near Fifteenth and Arapahoe streets, conducted by J. D. Miller, gets its supplies from Armour, Swift and the others indiscriminately. One of the tricks of the combination was played recently, when the trust depot, with considerable flourish of trumpets, gave a dozen sides of beef for distribution among the charitable institutions of the city. To a trust which draws down $25,000,000 a year in railway preferences the matter of a dozen sides of beef was a trifle. The trust could afford to give away many carloads of beef if it could strike down the Denver packing houses and force the people of the west to buy meat at trust prices. If a trust monopoly could be established in this market the public would pay bills big enough to enable the combination to pose every month as an institution animated with charity for the deserving and needy. But the people would pay for the charity. During the past week the trust packing houses of Omaha made a raid on the Denver stock yards, with a view to hampering the supply of the local packers. One lot only of cattle, numbering 500 head, was captured and shipped to Omaha, and the records show other large purchases. The trust would like to re-establish the old conditions, when cattle bought here were shipped east and slaughtered, and western meat consumers paid freight both ways, besides a monopoly profit on the meat. In this game of destroying the source of supply, however, two can play, so says Manager Cliff of the Western Packing Company. If the trust buys all the cattle in Denver, his company will buy their supply in Kansas City and Omaha. The triumph of the eastern packers would mean a hard blow to Denver industries. Besides the investment represented in the local houses, some 2,000 men are employed here.

TEXAS BUYS MEXICAN RANCH The Cabullona ranch of Sonora, Mexico, has been sold to George W. Linger, of Texas. Charles Fernald, the Chicago stockman, and A. H. McKay, who formerly held a controlling interest, retire, placing the control of the big ranch in the hands of Mr. Linger, a practical man and who intends adding materially to the acreage on the range, which has ample feed and water for a herd of 3,000 head. The transaction was closed at Cananea one last week, at which time a meeting of the board of directors of the company was held. NEW MEXICO LOSSES According to reports published in the papers of New Mexico, the heavy snows in the northern part of that territory

SENSATIONS AS A MEXICAN CANINE IS OF FEARS. The juvenile court bill killed at Austin last week was not the measure that has been endorsed by the leading peace officers of the state. That measure is yet to be considered, and its friends have strong hopes of its passage. The declarations made by State Treasurer Robbins on the subject of nepotism naturally force the keen observer to conclude that Mr. Robbins must have read Governor Lanham's message to the state legislature on the same subject. A St. Louis negress jumped in the Mississippi river while under the influence of cocaine, imagining she was a butterfly. The policeman who pulled her out finally convinced her that she was only a very wet coon. It is said that the feeling in Western Europe over the disturbances in Russia is that although tyranny is temporarily triumphant in that unhappy country, the government of the czar is certain to be ultimately overthrown. Within the past year serious charges have been preferred against three members of the United States senate, and it is a little bit significant that no democrat is located among them. The governor of Kansas accuses the chaplain of the lower house at Washington with having stolen his prayer. If it is a good prayer no apparent harm has been done. While the Russian bear is having trouble at home, the soldiers of the mikado are getting busy and affording him some renewed active entertainment in Manchuria. And now congress is proposing to investigate the steel trust. If this investigating idea continues the time may come when none of our great trusts will be safe. The fires of freedom may have started to burn in Russia, but at this distance there appears to have been more smoke than fire. Fort Worth not only has the best water of any other Texas city, but she is going after an additional supply of the same variety.

CROSBY COUNTY CONDITIONS Speaking of conditions in Crosby county, J. J. Matthews says: "The cattlemen of Crosby county have sustained no losses this winter up to the present time, and they are not likely to, as they are well provided with feed. We are not overstocked at any place, as the cows are eating up the stubble of their last fall, and will go through in good shape." ESTABLISH DIPPING VATS SAN ANGELO, Texas, Feb. 4.—J. G. Cooper, T. J. Clegg and Newsome & Sterling City, just two miles west of Water Valley, and on the quarantine line. The capacity of the same will be 600 to 1,000 cattle per day. CURIOUS CONDENSATIONS According to a calculation every man of the German expeditionary force in South-west Africa costs the government 28 marks per day, which equals about $2,500 per annum. A German statistician says that the entire cost of the Boer war for England worked out at 14 shillings per man per day. A New York postal clerk has been attending to a number of lost express packages for the past three years and buying bags which looked as if they might contain things of value in the hope of some day making a rich haul. Recently he paid $4 for an old trunk and found $30,000 worth of railroad bonds in it. The Paris automobile show this year is the largest and most important that has ever been held. Ten years ago, at the first exhibition of this kind, there were only sixty exhibitors; this year there are over 800—so many that there was not room for them all in the Grand Palais, large as it is, and it has been found necessary to place nearly 200 exhibits in the conservatories which were built for the exposition of 1900. The first vessel launched under the Cuban flag took the water at Belfast a few days ago. She was christened Regina and is about 250 feet in length, with gross tonnage of 1,300. She has been specially designed to carry molasses in bulk between ports on the Cuban coast.

PUBLIC IS AROUSED The public is aroused to a knowledge of the curative merits of that great medicinal tonic, Electric Bitters, for sick stomach, liver and kidneys. Mary H. Walters, of 546 St. Clair avenue, Columbus, Ohio, writes: "For several months I was given up to die. I had fever and ague, my nerves were wrecked, I could not sleep, and my stomach was so weak from useless doctors' drugs that I could not eat. Soon after beginning to take Electric Bitters I obtained relief, and in a short time I was entirely cured." Guaranteed at W. S. Fisher, Reeves Pharmacy and N. S. Blanton & Co., Price 50c.

 ARTHUR DEANE, BARITONE
 HARRISON W. BENNETT, BASSO

Henry W. Savage's celebrated English Grand Opera Company will make its first bow to Fort Worth music lovers at Greenwall's opera house Friday and Saturday evenings and at a matinee on Saturday Feb. 10 and 11, in a repertory of operas that constitutes a most attractive lyric program. Four superb masterpieces are to be sung, beginning with Wagner's greatest work, "Tannhauser," that is to be the opening bill Friday night. The merit of Mr. Savage's all-American voiced organization no longer needs comment.

Its success during the past nine years is unprecedented in the American musical world. Each season the company displays higher artistic achievement. Manager Savage now has to his record eighty-one productions of grand opera, selected from all schools, having given over 4,000 performances and given them in so attractive a manner that the general music-loving public has responded with patronage sufficient to support the ambitious enterprise.

In great measure this may be due to the fact that notwithstanding the expense of such a company the operas are given at prices within the reach of all. This bestows on the scheme an educational value that is taken advantage of by all who are interested in musical culture as well as by the every-day theater-goer. When "Tannhauser" and "Lohengrin" and other exacting and heavy grand operas can be made so attractive that they furnish entertainment to those who one time were prone to consider the music drama "over their heads," it is easy to understand that Mr. Savage will attract all classes of music lovers. There has been a heavy demand for seats from out of town.

RATES ON ALL RAILROADS

The opening performance Friday night will give the first opportunity to hear Wagner's "Tannhauser" in English. Mr. Savage has the only American production of the two greatest works of the German master, "Lohengrin" and "Tannhauser."

"Lohengrin" is to be sung at the Dallas opera house Wednesday evening, Feb. 8, and both these operas will bring out large and enthusiastic audiences in the respective cities. The production of "Tannhauser" by the Savage company is a fine tribute to the versatility of American singers, who, unlike their foreign-voiced cousins, have demonstrated their ability to give excellent performances in operas from all schools. The management urges opera patrons to be in their seats promptly at 8 o'clock when Wagnerian Conductor Schenck will begin the overture. This immortal composition is one of the chief beauties of the opera. It contains the musical story of the "Pillgrims' Chorus," the great "Tannhauser March," the minstrel concert, Wolfram's "O Star of Eve" and Elizabeth's "Prayer." Gertrude Rennyson will have her favorite role of Elizabeth, and Kate Sherwood will be the Venus. Wagnerian Tenor Wegener will have the title role. The entire cast is as follows:

- Lohengrin.....Harrison Bennett
  - Elizabeth.....William Wegener
  - Tannhauser.....Charles Henderson
  - Wolfram.....Arthur Deane
  - Venus.....Kate Sherwood
  - Conductor.....Mr. Schenck
- Bizet's "Carmen" will be selected for the Saturday matinee, with the magnetic Marion Ivell portraying the cigarette girl of Seville. Miss Ivell is gifted with a glorious contralto, and has all the youth, beauty and graces that go to make a fascinating Carmen. Her Carmen has been a positive sensation the past two seasons. This will probably be her last season in America for a number of years. Next year Miss Ivell is expected to make her Paris debut in the role. The cast will be arranged as follows:

- Don Jose.....William Wegener
- Escamillo.....Arthur Deane
- Il Dancaire.....A. H. Busby
- Remendado.....Francis J. Boyle
- Morales.....Thos. David Richards
- Michaela.....Gertrude Rennyson
- Frasquita.....Elizabeth V. Wall
- Mercedes.....Rita Harrington
- Carmen.....Marion Ivell
- Conductor.....Mr. Emanuel

The double bill announced for the farewell performance Saturday night will be another desirable performance from the fact that it will afford an opportunity to hear the full singing strength of the company on one program. Mascagni's loved "Cavalleria Rusticana," with its world-famed intermezzo, will be under the musical direction of Mr. Schenck, while Leoncavallo's tragic "Pagliacci," with its superb baritone prologue and passionate harmonies, will be conducted by Cavalier N. B. Emanuel. The casts will be arranged as follows:

- Santuzza.....Jean Lane Brooks
  - Lola.....Elizabeth V. Wall
  - Turiddu.....Reginald Roberts
  - Alfio.....Arthur Deane
  - Lucia.....Rita Harrington
  - Nedda.....Rita Newman
  - Canio.....Joseph F. Sheehan
  - Tonio.....Winfred Goff
  - Beppe.....Mr. Barron
  - Sylvio.....Thos. David Richards
  - First Pleasant.....Stephen Jungman
  - Second Pleasant.....Richard Jones
  - Conductor.....Mr. Emanuel
- Seats and boxes will be placed on sale Tuesday morning, prices ranging from three dollars to fifty cents. Mail orders accompanied by remittance and stamped envelope filled in the order receipt after sale opens. A large number of orders have already been received from out of town, and opera patrons desiring to attend their favorite operas should be on hand early.

DEADLY POISON IN WALL PAPER

Subtle Effects of Arsenic Seldom Suspected Until It Is Too Late
 OFTEN IN DRESS GOODS
 Playing Cards Also Found to Often Contain Quantities of Arsenic

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 4.—One of the most subtle methods of taking human life little known to the general public is that recognized by the laws of Massachusetts in establishing a limit to the amount of arsenic that may be used in wall papers and fabrics. It has been found that these articles, as well as others, such as playing cards and materials used in furnishing the home, are injurious in that they either set up a continual cumulative irritation by throwing off arsenical particles, as in dress goods, which poison is absorbed by the pores of the skin, or by the formation of volatile compounds that are breathed and set up serious poisoning of the system; the neglect to remove the sources of infection eventually undermines the health and the subject succumbs.

The experts of the department of agriculture "are fully convinced from data which has been published that volatile compounds of arsenic can be set free from wall papers and therefore that cases of poisoning by this class of substances are due both to the formation of volatile compounds and to the actual dusting off of arsenic into the aid of dwelling places or to either of these causes."

GIVES A DOZEN INSTANCES

The authors of the government pamphlet "Arsenic in Papers and Fabrics" are so thoroughly convinced by the data they have collected that arsenical poisoning from papers and fabrics is of common occurrence that they only quote a few dozen cases out of the many hundreds that have come to their notice, devoting a large part of the space to the results of analysis of wall papers sold on the American market. The analyses were carried out by H. J. Warner, assistant chemist, bureau of chemistry, and the collaboration by J. K. Haywood, chief, insecticide and agricultural water laboratory. The cases cited are astonishing. The patients, sometimes individuals in a house, at other times whole families, and occasionally inmates of whole institutions, develop organic disturbances after being treated first for one thing and then another, without relief, and constantly growing worse, with symptoms aggravated, the trouble is finally located in the wall paper or in the similarly impossible source of infection.

The patient complains of pains in the eyes, nose and different parts of the body, restless nights and a feeling of lassitude and depression in the day, with dyspepsia in one form or another.

PARIS GREEN IN WALL PAPER

The case is cited of a physician who had suffered for several years from occasional attacks of gastric and intestinal disturbance, attended with fever and inability to do either mental or physical work. During a period of house-cleaning the walls of his office, which were covered with a handsome green velvet paper, were swept down with a broom. The doctor, who was an observant individual, noticed a dark green powder on the floor along the walls among the sweeping, which, upon analysis, was found to be "almost pure paris green."

A paperhanger was sent for to remove the paper and "after working a few hours he was seized with all the symptoms of acute arsenical poisoning and was obliged to desist. Another who took his place to finish the job suffered the same way on the following day. It was discovered that at some former time the ceiling had been covered with paris green and subsequently a coat of another color had been laid over it.

The servant who attempted to wash this was confined to his bed for three days with cramps and acute intestinal trouble. Finally the two members of the doctor's household, who had taken considerable interest in what was being done, were attacked with similar symptoms and he himself had one of his old familiar attacks. Since he had had none of his old trouble.

ARSENIC IN NURSES' GOWNS

Another case occurred in a Massachusetts infant asylum, where the wholesale arsenical poisoning of the children and nurses was traced to some blue dresses adopted as a uniform by the nurses. Much of the arsenic was found to be loose in the cloth. The authorities had the dresses thoroughly washed, thinking thereby to eliminate the poison, but upon their resumption by the nurses there was another outbreak of alarming symptoms among the babies, so that the dresses had to be discarded. Since then the trouble has entirely disappeared.

Ten years ago the use of arsenic in colored wall papers and house furnishings was common. Some official tests in Massachusetts at that time showed that one-third of the papers examined contained more or less of the poison and the proportion of arsenical house furnishings, prints and grange-houses was as great or greater. Silks and woollens were comparatively free.

As a result the legislature of Massachusetts enacted a law limiting the amount of arsenic in papers and woven fabrics other than dress goods to 10 grains to the square yard and the amount in dress goods and articles of dress to 50 grains to each square yard, or just one-tenth as much as is allowed in wall papers, owing to the liability of fabrics coming into intimate contact with the body.

PUBLIC WARNED OF DANGER

Recently there has been a popular agitation in England in regard to arsenical beer and the department of agriculture, recognizing the great importance of the question, has made a representative collection of goods purchasable in the open market in Washington, with the idea of warning the public of their danger. The Massachusetts law has been quite effective in raising the standard of wall paper throughout the country.

Green is by no means the only arsenic tinted paper, as some of the most heavily loaded papers are the reds and browns and in fabrics blues and blacks are often the most dangerous. As showing what can be done, one line of wall papers by an American manufacturer was examined, which embraced the whole field of labor and was found to contain not a trace of arsenic or any of its compounds.

English manufacturers are the most flagrant disregarders of public health in the matter. It is surprising that the most expensive papers, as well as the cheap ones, contain arsenic in the coloring. The improvement in dress goods during the last decade has been marked, but nevertheless 11 per cent of the dresses sold contain enough arsenic to be injurious to health. Of forty-one samples of stockings examined 39 per cent contained more than the prescribed maximum of 1 grain to the square yard; 61 per cent contained determinable amounts and less than 3 per cent none. Carpets are one of the most dangerous sources of arsenic poisoning. Furs and fur rugs are often extremely dangerous.

Some people have the taking-cold habit
 The old cold goes; a new one quickly comes. It's the story of a weak throat, weak lungs, a tendency to consumption. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral breaks up the taking-cold habit. It strengthens, soothes, heals. Consult your doctor about this.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—I have never lost the habit as I almost daily pass the great dome of St. Paul's, amid the hurry and bustle of the city, to pause for a moment and look at the beauty of that great cathedral, which seems to stand as a monument of the everlasting peace in the midst of the restlessness of mankind.

Three years ago the Moorish envoy to England, on special service, was taken to see what he called "the great mosque." He had already been shown most of the sights of the metropolis and had evinced no emotion. He came from the wide desert, what was the city to him? A mass of streets, which would seem further than the end of the buildings, and owing to the climate, often not so far.

He showed visible signs of boredom when the cathedral attendant gave him the usual wearisome description of the height of the dome, the dimensions of the nave, and the marvels of the whispering gallery, but the al-de-de-camp who was told off to attend upon the great man was wiser. He took him to the very height of the cathedral, above the dome, above the gold gallery, up and up, until only the ball and the cross were above them.

By chance the day happened to be clear, no haze hung over London, and the great city lay like a map. Here the Moor paused, and motioned to those around him to leave him alone. He spent the next quarter of an hour looking down upon the outstretched panorama, and when the suite rejoined him they found this prince of the desert, who had thus seen London, muttering, as he groped his way down the dark steps, as though dazed, "Allah, oh Allah, we are as the dust beneath their feet."

SNOBBERY IN REVIVALS The walls of London are placarded with the announcement of the great mission to be held here by Dr. Torrey and Mr. Alexander. All who believe in the vital principles of Christianity must wish well to such an enterprise, even though they may not agree with the methods and opinions of the revivalists, and will echo the words of our bishop, who recently said: "I am thankful for any man who can lead multitudes to Christ."

But there is a feature about the arrangements which I cannot but regret, and that is, if I may venture so to call it, an element of snobbery. Headlines are to be found constantly in the papers as to the awakening of society, and today we have a paragraph in one of London's leading newspapers, in which we are told that "titled revivalists are to attend a house call," and a list is given of those who have undertaken this duty, commencing with a countess and ending with a baroness's wife.

Now, it seems to me a preposterous thing to make use of such sordid weapons in such a cause. No doubt Mrs. Leo Hunter or Mrs. Two-Shoes, living in little houses off some larger thoroughfare, will welcome the personal visit of a countess, and possibly someone to attend a meeting in order to repay her ladyship for the trouble of the call.

There is, however, only one countess, but two dowager countesses are enlisted, so Suburbia will probably have to put up with the earl's daughters, or "honorable," and anything further to dignify the spirit of Christianity? Christ did not choose His emissaries from among the ruling classes, but sent out a few fishermen. If we are really to believe that these American men, who come from a republic where there is no aristocracy, and who belong to a religion which has certainly placed them at discount, we expect to see them resting on the power of the Spirit, rather than upon the influence of the peerage, and were this so, I should not fear for the result of their work.

The trouble is that modern Christians are so afraid of early methods, but when simplicity predominated, and that true poverty of spirit, which after all inspired apostle, confessor and early father, we shall arrive at something which will be probably more powerful than anything that has yet been devised by such twentieth century methods.

The great revival in Wales, which is occupying the minds of the religious and the irreligious alike, came at any rate without organization, an evidence to me of the truth of Christ's words, that "the wind bloweth where it listeth, and ye hear the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, nor whither it goeth."

MARIE CORELLI AFTER CARNEGIE Marie Corelli, the novelist, has made a fierce attack upon Andrew Carnegie, with regard to his part in the riots at the steel works, which took place at Homestead, Pa., U. S. A.

Thomas Graham has written warmly to defend his friend and former employer, stating that he had no part or lot in the disastrous business, and laying the whole blame upon H. C. Frick, who arranged that the Carnegie strike should be met by this lamentable manner. "At the time referred to," he adds, "Mr. Carnegie was taking a quiet holiday in Scotland, and had left the absolute control of the works in the hands of his partner, and was in no way responsible for the action taken."

This Woman Owes $15,000,000 is now in her 50th year. She is a sister of the reigning prince of Isembourg and Budingen. Twice has she been married and twice divorced. After her legal separation from Prince Adalbert of Isembourg, she married Robert, baron de Pagenhard. The princess at this time had a great fortune. She began a reckless squandering of her money and soon her wealth vanished.

Then began the borrowing operations. The money lenders loaned freely, for there was not the slightest breath of suspicion at this time that the princess had reached the end of her resources. She indulged in such extravaganzas as giving banquets to 100 guests on 150 successive evenings. She traveled on special trains and owned a yacht.

In 1899 the princess and her husband engaged in violent quarrels, due to the fact that their creditors had begun to press them for their claims, and each put the blame upon the other for their plight. A divorce was agreed upon. The baron obtained the decree, the princess agreeing to give him an allowance of $1,125 a year. The mother kept the children. The allowance was soon suspended, and the baron married a wealthy woman of Baden-Baden.

The princess continued to borrow money wherever she could obtain it and her life was one continuous struggle with her creditors. When the storm was about to break over her head several years ago, her relatives offered to pay her an annuity of $2,500 a year if she would agree to leave Germany. She was glad to accept, and of late years she has been a familiar figure at the watering places of England and Belgium. At the English race tracks she gambled freely. At one time she failed in a hotel enterprise at a summer resort. Recently she has again been living extravagantly.

ADVICE FROM MADAME MARCHESI No woman has done a greater service in the world of music than Madame Marchesi, the teacher of Melba, Calve, Eames, Gerster and scores of other women with beautiful voices, from every country under the sun.

Today, at the age of seventy-six, Madame Marchesi holds a position which few women have attained. In the early days of her career, she recognized in her voice defects which she had to overcome, and in conquering her own difficulties she saw clearly the method by which she could help other singers to overcome theirs. Like many another, her success has been won through adversity. Her father, while she was still young, lost his money, and had to be content with a change of fortune she would probably have been living in the quiet city of Frankfurt, and many of the voices which have delighted the world would have remained unheard.

The wedding was one of the smartest ever held in London, and it was considered that he had a great political future. Both Mr. and Mrs. Rubie are terribly distressed over the affair and will shortly leave for the country, with their children.

LETTERS IN LONDON The new Countess of Suffolk (Miss Daisy Leiter) and her sister, Mrs. Colin Campbell, were almost mobbed in Sloane street a few days ago. They had come out shopping and both were in the highest spirits, when they were recognized by some of the hunting set in Leicesrshire, who had also come up for a day's shopping. The latter pounced upon the two brides and overwhelmed them with congratulations. Then other friends came, and finally people who were not friends at all began to collect, and the whisper went round that the "Letter brides were on view."

BELIEVE IN EVIL EYE The people of Italy are a superstitious lot, even those who have received some education. The belief is spreading throughout the country that Prime Minister Giolitti will lead the country into ruin, that he will provoke a war with Austria, and that he is a "jetta tore," which means that he has an evil eye, which brings misfortune to everybody who comes in contact with him.

ARISTOCRACY MUST PAY CASH The British aristocracy are finding it an increasingly difficult matter to supply themselves with luxuries, or even necessities of credit. The majority of London tradesmen decline to run long accounts even with well-known people. The Countess of Westmoreland quite recently entered a noted Bond street shop and after ordering a large amount of shawl underwear was politely informed that she must pay cash for it. No amount of coaxing on the lady's part would persuade the establishment into allowing the Countess credit, and she had finally to leave without the goods she had chosen.

REAL PHILANTHROPY The proprietors of the large stores say that hundreds of girls have been saved by this practical and novel form of real philanthropy.

ONCE when at a certain solemn occasion it was thought advisable for him to pardon a number of offenders as an act of special mercy he said in a tone of disgust to the minister: "Well, if it has to be done, pick out a few men sentenced to death for having defended their honor, sword or pistol in hand, and I will set them free. As for the others, let them swallow their medicine. My time is too valuable to be wasted on criminals."
