WOMAN AGED 90 TRAVELS ALONE
One of Long-Lived Family Comes to Texas From Denver—Glenwood News
Having traveled from Denver, Colo., alone at the age of 90 years, Mrs. J. McMullen reached Glenwood Friday, where she is visiting her granddaughter, Mrs. B. Ehrenstein, 113 Vickery boulevard. Four years ago Mrs. McMullen made a similar trip to this city and it is now her intention to make her home in Texas. Mrs. McMullen is one of a family of five children, all of whom are living above the age of 75 years. The oldest of the family is a sister, living in Illinois at the age of 97 years, three brothers ranging in age from 75 to that of Mrs. McMullen, being the other members of the family. Mrs. McMullen has been living in Illinois, but before coming to this city visited relatives in Denver. Although slightly fatigued by her long trip, Mrs. McMullen appears to suffer no ill effects and speaks lightly of her venture.

GLENWOOD NOTES
A special program has been prepared for a membership service at the Glenwood Methodist church tonight at 7:30 o'clock. Born to Henry Storer and wife of 391 Edwards street, a girl. Mrs. E. R. Brown has gone to Cleburne to visit Mrs. M. L. Hatcher. Miss Effie Shaw has been called to Dallas by the serious illness of her grand mother living there. ATTENTION SONS On account of memorial exercises in the parent camp, the Sons held no meeting last Sunday, but business of importance will come before the camp at 3:30 this evening. There will be the election of officers and delegates, and the proper resolutions concerning the death of John L. Reagan. All sons are specially requested to be present at this meeting. WM. R. BOOTH, ALICE EVE ROBINSON, Commanders, Acting Secretary. Y. M. C. A. Meetings Today Business men interested in the Y. M. C. A. building canvass are to meet today at the board of trade at 3:30 to plan for the closing week's canvass. The employed men will meet at 2:30 o'clock at the same place. The size of the building will be determined after this week's work and the erection will be begun as soon as possible to complete plans.

This paper prints a great deal of reading matter of special interest to women; but it may never hope to make such matter as interesting or important to them as the store advertising. Look this morning's Telegram over carefully

MANDAMUS FILED AGAINST JUDGE
Attorneys Take Threatened Step to Force Acceptance of Liquor Dealer's Bond
Attorneys for Mike Cassidy Saturday filed mandamus proceedings in the Seventeenth judicial district court to compel County Judge R. F. Milam to approve a liquor bond which he refused to do some days ago when it was presented to him for his signature. Judge Milam gives as a reason for his refusal to approve the bond that the Sunday laws have not been properly observed at the places covered by the bond and that he has decided to follow this system in every case that comes to his knowledge. The mandamus petition recites that Mike Cassidy complains that the county judge refuses to sign his bond, which is executed according to the statutes in the sum of $5,000; that he is lawfully engaged in the saloon business; and that his application is made under the terms of the law.

der, divorce. Guy Crow against A. B. Wharton, damages for personal injuries. Rosa Kenny against Frisco, personal injuries. E. McIntire against John A. M. Thrasher et al., to remove cloud from title. Grace Robbins et al. against I. N. Stewart, to remove cloud from title. FOR SUNDAY SELLING In Justice Charles T. Rowland's court Frank Akers was convicted on a charge of Sunday selling. He was fined $30. DAMAGES ASKED FOR AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT A. B. Wharton Sued by Father of Boy, for Injuries Alleged to Be Due to Fast Running The father of Guy Crow, a minor, has brought suit against A. B. Wharton for damages in the sum of $1,000 for alleged injuries inflicted upon Guy Crow; that on Oct. 12, 1904, the boy was a messenger in the service of the Western Union Telegraph company and it is alleged was run into by an automobile owned by Mr. Wharton and badly injured, his wheel being demolished. The petition alleges that the automobile was running at a speed of twenty miles an hour, in violation of the city ordinance. POSTPONED HEARING Application for a new trial in Joe

Wolf's case was postponed Saturday for one week, this action being ordered by Special Judge Burnes on request of County Attorney J. D. McLean. He gave as a reason that no court stenographer was available. Wolf was recently given forty years in the penitentiary for alleged robbery by the use of firearms. AUSTRIANS SEIZED FOR RUSSIAN ARMY Special Cable to The Telegram. (Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.) VIENNA, March 11.—The Austrian ambassador at St. Petersburg has lodged a complaint with the Russian authorities against the arrest and forcing into the Russian army of Austrian subjects who accidentally or for some reason or other have crossed the Russian frontier. Only a few days ago an Austrian workman, who was engaged to a Russian girl, and who had entered Russia to make arrangements for his marriage, was arrested as a Russian deserter and knouted by the Cossacks when he tried to resist. In two days he found himself in Russian uniform on board a train bound for Manchuria. The police even insulted his sweetheart by offering to pay her $100 for every Austrian or German subject she could entice into the country. Why suffer with headache, constipation, stomach, kidney and liver troubles, when Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea will cure you? No money wanted unless you are cured. Be extra, Tea or Tablets. GENERAL PEERS ISSUES FINAL TRACT IN SERIES COVERING TWENTY YEARS
Volume a Month Issued by Famous Texan, Converted at Ago of 61
HIS EYESIGHT FAILS HIM
General J. M. Peers, known not only throughout Texas, but the whole country and many foreign lands, as the tract man, has issued his last volume. Through the falling of his eyes, after issuing a tract a month for a period of twenty years, he has abandoned the work. These tracts, which have been spread broadcast throughout the country, have been published by General Peers at his own expense and given away to all wanting them. Monthly issues have frequently consisted of 10,000 copies. General Peers, who looks hale and hearty despite his eighty years, says that he hopes his trouble with his eyes is only temporary and that with renewed strength

REHEARING ASKED IN LEADING CASE
Former Decision Gives State Courts Jurisdiction Over Interstate Shipments
Motion for a rehearing of the case of the Abilene Cotton Oil Company vs. the Texas and Pacific Railway Company vs. the Texas and Pacific Railway Company, involving the control of state courts over interstate shipments, has been filed in the court of civil appeals. On Feb. 25 the court handed down a decision holding the state courts did have jurisdiction under the common law. The respective attorneys for the appellants in the cases of Chicago, Rock Island and Texas Railway Company et al. vs. Sullins, and Comer et al. vs. Byars, were cited to appear before this court on March 24 and show causes why a fine of $50 should not be assessed against them for failure to return papers to the court in said causes. Other proceedings in the court Saturday were as follows: Motions submitted—Robertson & Co. vs. Lewis, to affirm on certificate; Morris vs. Brown, for rehearing; Chicago Rock Island and Gulf Railway Company vs. Halsell

(two cases), for leave to file appellant's briefs; Wattenbarger vs. Judges, for rehearing; Texas Central Railroad Company vs. Box, for rehearing; Texas Central Railroad Company vs. Suggs, for rehearing. Motions overruled—Burnett vs. Pope et al. for rehearing; Kelly vs. Northern Texas Traction Company, to set aside submission and for mandamus; Taber et al. vs. State of Texas, for rehearing; Robertson & Co. vs. Lewis, to affirm on certificate; Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe Railway Company vs. Kapp, for rehearing; Texas and Pacific Railway Company vs. Tracey, for rehearing. Motions granted—Chicago, Rock Island and Texas Railway Company et al. vs. Halsell (two cases), for leave to file appellant's briefs; Kelly vs. Northern Texas Traction Company, for rehearing; Texas and Pacific Railway Company vs. Devall, to affirm on certificate. Cases affirmed—Texas and Pacific Railway Company vs. Goldsmith, from Midland county; Texas and Pacific Railway Company vs. Everett, from Nolan county; Texas and Pacific Railway Company vs. Arnett et al., from Mitchell county; Texas and Pacific Railway Company vs. Polk, from Fisher county; Texas and Pacific Coal Company vs. Wren, from Eastland county. Affirmed in part and reversed and remanded in part—Texas and Pacific Railway Company vs. Lang, from Mitchell county. Reversed and remanded—Texas and Pacific Railway Company vs. Hemphill, from Parker county. Reversed and dismissed—Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company vs. Waddell Bros. et al., from Midland county. The case of Texas and Pacific Railway Company vs. T. J. Payne, from Mitchell

Beware of Cheap Imitations!
Boards of Fire Underwriters favor this particular one by using it in their own homes. Will not freeze, lump or spoil. We take pleasure in advising you of the satisfactory use of one of your extinguishers today. We had quite a hot fire in one of our pickers, smoke was issuing fiercely from the dust room when first noticed. The contents of one tube was thrown into the machine while running, though about half of it was spilled, never reaching the fire. The fire in the machine and dust room was quickly extinguished without the use of water or other extinguishers. A few minutes' stop was necessary only to take out the cotton damaged by fire. Please send us chemical to refill one tube, and oblige, CORSICANA COTTON FACTORY, Corsicana, Texas.

Kaiser to Visit Sicily

Has rented hotel at Taormina—Prince Eitel Friedrich Recovering from illness

Special Cable to The Telegram. (Copyright, 1934, by the Hearst News Service.)

BERLIN, March 11.—"The people of the United States, strong republicans though they are, often show their republican feelings in a rather peculiar manner, and those who can afford it never miss an opportunity to bask in the sun of royalty," writes a Berlin paper today.

"It has always been the height of ambition of all daughters of rich Americans to be presented at the English court, but of late the kaiser also comes in for a strong part of their devotion."

"Hardly had it become known that the kaiser had rented the hotel at Taormina, in Sicily, for the month before telegrams began to pour in from scores of Americans, who expressed a desire to be near the emperor during that time, and the hotel owners are going to reap such a harvest of dollars as they have never seen before.

"Fabulous prices are being asked for even the smallest rooms in hotels and boarding houses, but nobody now there is hardly a room to be had within two miles of Taormina. It is, however, not thought that the Americans will get much out of the money they have spent, as it is the kaiser's intention to receive no strangers while abroad, and he will be closely guarded as long as he stays in Sicily.

It is now definitely settled that he will leave here on March 23, accompanied by his family, a number of court officials and forty servants. On Wednesday of this week he will go to Wilhelmshafen to be present when the new recruits take the oath, and it is expected that he will make a speech on that occasion.

While at Wilhelmshafen the kaiser will make his headquarters on board the battleship Kaiser Wilhelm II, which has been connected by direct wire with the central telegraph office in this city.

Prince Eitel Friedrich, for whose sake the Mediterranean trip was planned, is rapidly recovering from his illness, though he still looks very pale and thin. It is possible that he will have to remain in Sicily to recuperate when the rest of the imperial family returns to Berlin to the wedding of the crown prince.

The third son of the kaiser, Prince Adalbert, who has just been promoted to the rank of a first lieutenant in the navy, will arrive in Sicily at the end of this month after his long cruise to the far east.

AN EASY WAY

To Keep Well

It is easy to keep well if we would only observe each day a few simple rules of health.

The all important thing is to keep the stomach right, and to do this it is not necessary to diet or to follow a set rule or bill of fare. Such pampering simply makes a capricious appetite and a feeling that certain favorite articles of food must be avoided.

Professor Weichold gives pretty good advice on this subject; he says: "I am 68 years old and have never had a serious illness, and at the same time my life has been largely an indoor one, but I early discovered that the way to keep healthy was to keep a healthy stomach, not by eating bran crackers or dieting of any sort; on the contrary I always eat what my appetite craves, but daily for the past eight years I have made it a practice to take one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal and I attribute my robust health for a man of my age to the regular daily use of Stuart's Tablets."

My physician first advised me to use them because he said they were perfectly harmless and were not a secret patent medicine, but contained only the natural digestives, pepsone and diastase, and after using them a few weeks I have never ceased to thank him for his advice.

I honestly believe the habit of taking Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after meals is the real health habit, because they use brings health to the sick and all who preserves health to the well and strong."

Men and women past 50 years of age need a safe digestive after meals to insure a perfect digestion and to ward off disease, and the safest, best known and most widely used is Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They are found in every well regulated household from Maine to California and in Great Britain are rapidly pushing their way into popular favor.

All druggists sell Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, full sized packages at 50 cents, and for a weak stomach a 50-cent package will often do $50 worth of good.

BROOKER TO LEAD THE REPUBLICANS

Connecticut Man Slated to the Chairmanship, Succeeding Cortelyou

WASHINGTON, March 11.—Charles F. Brooker of Ansonia, Conn., will likely be the new head of the republican committee. It is likely that Brooker will announce his nomination as vice chairman as soon as he receives a response to a tender, which it is understood has been made.

The filling of the vacancy by the retiree in the head of the committee by the retirement of Mr. Cortelyou has been the most puzzling one that has confronted the republican managers for many years. This has been brought about through the conflicting interests that are striving for the whip hand in the great presidential race in 1908.

If a member of the national committee is placed at its head it will be a victory for Vice President Fairbanks, and will mean that President Roosevelt is to retain absolute control of the party march. Harris New of Indianapolis, one of Mr. Fairbanks' chief lieutenants, but now arrayed against the distinguished Idianman, has brought powerful influences to bear to land the prize, but he ran against the opposition of the vice president, and according to the understanding, has made it impossible for the president to act in accord with his own wishes. Mr. New is the wealthiest man in his state and a power in financial circles in the east, director of the New York, New Haven and Hartford, is identified with the political interest in the east and in the last campaign had charge of the New England territory. He stands as close to Chairman Cortelyou as he does to the Wall street interests, who were in close touch with the workings of the republican headquarters last summer, and all are clear that he was the instrument whereby the financial interests insured President Roosevelt as a safe candidate.

ST. LOUIS BROWNS DEFEAT GIANTS

Limited Number of Fans See Close Game, Ending in Score of 2 to 1

Special to The Telegram. DALLAS, Texas, March 11.—The St. Louis Browns (Vets.) and the Dallas Giants played nine innings of a very good quality of ball Saturday afternoon in an hour and five minutes, before a small, but very demonstrative audience. The final score was 2 to 1 in favor of the visitors. The game was much better than the fans expected, and was certainly deserving of a larger crowd.

Harry Abner, the Boy Wonder, was on the slab for the home team. Yesterday's was the first game he has pitched this season. He has just recovered from an attack of the grippe and is not in the best of form, but showed up remarkably well. The visitors swatted the ball at times, but were unable to bunt their hits. The fielding of the Giants was perfect, and but for the exception of one dumb play, which was wholly due to a heavy diamond, there would have been no flaw to find in the fielding of the locals. The Browns had two spots in the bad column, one made by Rockefeller and the other by Henry. Both errors were of the rank variety.

"Wee Willie" Sudhoff for the Browns pitched a splendid game, although he has not yet yielded into his playing form. The locals were given an opportunity to score in the ninth inning, but in all other leagues, regardless of the class, had plenty of trouble as a result.

A new player was in the ranks of the Giants yesterday. After a close inspection first-inning determined that he was one of Gardner's braves. The cause for the necessity of a careful observation to determine as to the identity of the stranger was due to several conditions. First, in general appearance he resembles a "mud" pitcher, and secondly, his uniform was made up of scraps of garments of other days. The pants were of dark navy blue flannel, the blouse of disappearing gray, with red perspiration marks here and there, and in front of the shoulders an off-odor cap completed the uniform. The profane gab that not being able to always sometimes tell by the toga of the game was demonstrated before the game had ended. The individual in question was Jutz of the Indians. He has been signed by Gardner as a utility man, and from his performance yesterday it is dollars to doughnuts he will deliver the goods in neatly done up packages at the hour required. Jutz came up to the bat for the first time in the second inning, and with a man on first, Johnson delivered the horsehead down against center field fence, where Messrs. Frisk and Van Zandt did hurry-up scramble for it, but the man on first scored and Jutz completed his winning over of the fans in the next inning by making a beautiful double play, assisted by Captain Ury.

The Giants will tackle the Colts this afternoon, and it is considered more than likely that they will be able to take the youngsters into camp. The game will be called at 2:45 p. m.

THE MIKADO—"I sure will have to go hire a press agent myself."

28, and the entire time since then has been taken up in the trial of the same. A large number of witnesses were summoned, some of whom resided in Henderson and Rusk counties, while the great majority came from Anderson county.

The trial has attracted much attention and each day since the trial began the criminal district court room was crowded with interested spectators.

CHILD-WIFE TRAFFIC DISGRACES ILLINOIS DECLARES EDUCATOR

CHICAGO, Ill., March 11.—Traffic in child-wives in Chicago is a startling fact brought to light by Superintendent Lester Bodine of the compulsory education department of the board of education, who has made an exhaustive investigation of the department of marriage licenses. He says the laws are inexcusably lax and permit children to be sold into matrimonial slavery by conscienceless parents.

His investigation shows that the habit of marrying children wives has increased alarmingly in the last few years; that it no longer is confined to the Italians, who lead the traditions of Italy as an excuse, but has spread among other nationalities, until it has become a social menace, which, he says, should be met by stringent legislation enacted at once. In the past two years 361 girls in Chicago of illegal age have been married. The ages of these girls ranged from 14 to 16. No proof of age was submitted in any instance, except the affidavit filed by the applicant for license—who generally was the prospective bridegroom. Superintendent Bodine found it was a common practice for men of the peasant class to come from foreign provinces of Italy and Sicily and give their 12, 13 and 14-year-old daughters in marriage in consideration of money enough to pay the passage of the entire family across the sea.

"Trouble sometimes creeps into the importation of the child-wife," said Superintendent Bodine. "I located one instance in which the girl refused to marry the man who had bargained for her. The man had paid the price of the family's transportation to Chicago. The possibility of a false affidavit practice under Illinois marriage laws is far greater than it was under the old child labor law. Matrimony, involving household duties and motherhood, is the worst sort of slavery for a child who is from 14 to 16 years of age."

"Parents formerly made false affidavits to secure work for their daughters in factories. That abuse was checked by the new factory law, but under the present marriage law they are not required to file any statement or proof of their 14-year-old daughter's age when they want to deliver her into matrimony."

"They simply sign consent, and the prospective bridegroom or applicant files an affidavit that the child is a certain age. The marriage law should be amended absolutely to prohibit the marriage of any girl under 18 years of age and stop this shameful practice of professional harlotting of their daughters into marriage before they are out of short dresses. Impostors pose as parents in runaway matches.

"I have recommended to the legislative committee of the Child Saving League to urge the amendment of the state law to that no girl under 18 years of age may marry, even though she have the consent of her parents. Under the present statute it seems as easy to secure a marriage license as a dog license."

The marriage law of Illinois provides that the legal age for matrimony is 21 years for males and 18 for females. Those under legal age may be married upon consent of their parents.

EX-SENATOR MASON ILL

Suffering from Blood Poisoning As Result of Accident. CHICAGO, Ill., March 11.—Ex-United States Senator William E. Mason is seriously ill at his home on Washington Boulevard, and while his condition is much improved today, there are still grave fears for his entire recovery. Mr. Mason was first taken ill early in January. The day following Governor Dineen's inauguration he left for New York and at the depot a fellow passenger let a heavy grip fall on his foot, breaking the skin. The next day, according to the doctors, blood poisoning set in and in Washington he was laid up nearly two weeks with a high fever.

NEGRO ARRESTED ON CRUELTY CHARGE

Accused of Beating Horse—Fireman Feed Animal—Owner Released on Bond. On a charge of cruelty beating a horse, Mack Thompson, an old negro, was arrested by Officer Bilderback Saturday afternoon. After the negro's arrest, two of the firemen at the central station, seeing his condition as it was hatched in front of the city hall, gave the horse hay and oats.

According to the statements of Officer Bilderback, the horse was so weak that it was unable to pull both driver and wagon to the police station. The officer forced the negro to walk.

On giving bond the negro was released.

NOBBY STYLES IN SPRING MILLINERY

NEW YORK MILLINERY & SUPPLY CO

THE CHAPEAUX OF THE SPRINGTIME

With the coming of spring comes also the first of the spring hats, and ever and always do they bring with them their own welcome.

Mere men may rage and the comic papers poke fun at the woman and her insistent interest in her spring hat; but if they would but realize that in many instances her spring hat or her Easter bonnet—in many communities they are identical, they are the one and the same thing—is but her outward and visible expression of her gladness that the spring has come again; that "the flowers have appeared on the earth" (as well as upon her bonnet, one hears some man creature interject) and that "the time of the singing of birds is come."

And speaking of birds, assuredly it would seem as though everybody in any way connected with the millinery trade, even remotely, had joined the Audubon Society, for there is a marked lack of birds and feathered effects upon the new hats. Flowers there are, and in abundance, too; but stuffed birds are conspicuously lacking. Those artificial wings that are so smart upon the tailored hats, designed to be worn with the woolen suits, are most approved this season, when they take shapes that would defy any naturalist or ornithologist to define or classify. Certain it is that nothing that ever flew wore such wings; and so the most ardent and enthusiastic protector of our little feathered friends may keep right up to date in the matter of millinery, with a very calm and serene conscience indeed. In no wise heed her principles of protection and her passion for fashion and fashionable effects clash; for once both are in full accord and in sweet harmony.

The most conspicuous feature of the new hats is their very evident effort to strike some new, original and individual note. There is far less of slavish, exact copying done to-day than ever before. If it is only in an extra twist, an added bow or a deeper bend, in each and every possible way does one hat strive to outstrip its fellows in the matter of originality of style.

Those flat plateau shapes which come in such delightful and artistic combinations of coloring are far and away at once the simplest and the most stylish means to the desired end of originality. They do say that those plateaus are of Chinese make, and are imported here at a very small cost. Be that as it may, whatever their origin, they are welcome.

Usually they are of rice straw, the upper side in one color and the other in some contrasting tint. The Parisian fancy for brown and white in combination—one that has gone far to replace the old-time and long-tried standby of the magpie contrast, black and white—shows up exquisitely in these; and with the prominence of the brown family in all of their many and varying tints, those brown and white plateaus will find most enthusiastic purchasers.

Other combinations are in two shades of green, very light and dark; white with green, with raspberry or with rose pink; with several shades of blue, from turquoise to sapphire, and all of the novel violet tints. But white in combination with any tint that will prove becoming or harmonize with the costume is to be preferred to any other combination.

There is a bandeau that sets comfortably to the shape of the head, and this is perhaps the most important art of the chapeau. It is deep or shallow, as desired, but it is invariably velvet covered. Upon this little skeleton the plateau is mounted, the edge having been well wired so that it will retain all of the clever bends and twists that are tried upon it by the nimble fingers of the milliner. But little trimming is required for these; indeed, one might almost say that the less said about trimming these novel shapes the better, for their cachet lies solely in the way the plateau is mounted upon the bandeau. After that a band of ribbon velvet, a huge and puffy chon of tulle or a fluffy bow of velvet is all that is required. Sometimes a long and thick ostrich plume is posed on the plateau when the hat is intended for dressy occasions, and then only a fancy end to the quill, with a wisp or two of malines upon the bandeau is all that will be necessary to make it conform with the very latest model. Here is where the girl who is blessed with "the knack of the fingers," as the French so cleverly and expressively term it, can score and score heavily.

For it is but a matter of an afternoon's amusement for her to make her plateau hat, and evolve something original and distinctive from the flat table shape of straw, a bunch of milliners' wire and a velvet-covered bandeau.

But while the plateau and its many and various modes and methods of shaping itself into a hat command considerable attention, there are still others in the field that are no less interesting.

In the very latest shapes that Paris sends us the crowns are so diversified in style that they may be said to determine the shape and the style of the hat. There is the high and rather square crown, which typifies the modes of the Directoire, a style which will set comfortably to the shape of the head either with or without a bandeau, as may be decided to prove most becoming. Then there is the little conical or cone-shaped crown, which simply demands that a bandeau be interposed, for the crown itself is too small to fit any head without some other assistance. And last, but by no means least, in its many appearances, there is the broad low crown, something of a drum shape, which goes with pretty nearly every shape and style of brim, and looks equally well with all of them.

The straw shapes—for pretty nearly all of the new hats employ straw—are mounted upon a wire frame, and are themselves wired cleverly, so that they may be bent and twisted into whatever other shape and just the exact angle that will prove most becoming to the fair face beneath. There is but one rule to be followed, and that is that the hat must cling close to the head in the back, and this obtains whether the coiffure be high or low, whether the hair be drawn up into a coronet on the top of the head, or dressed with a Madonna parting in front and a low coil upon the nape of the neck.

The sides are altogether a matter of taste or of individual preference. They may be wired and bent into the close and snug marquis outline, or they may flare broadly upward or outward. A very piquant effect may be attained with the left side turned up after the Gainsborough style, but with the brim pinched into pleats, so as to avoid the somewhat classical stiffness of that style, while the other side is treated in exactly the opposite manner. The girl whose irregularity of feature is one of her chiefest charms can add this to her already well-filled bag of tricks of dress and manner, and triumph accordingly. But she of classical features, faultlessly regular, would better beware those broken lines and irregular effects, for they will but mar the beauty of her classical outline of feature.

The fronts, all of them, project over the face, and so well wired are the shapes that one can buy in the shops all ready to trim that the matter of their most becoming angle can readily be decided upon. Everything, from the smallest torpedo to the largest and fluffiest of picture hats, all of them, are required to project somewhat in front, be it ever so slightly.

Some of the newest hats that the Fifth avenue milliners are showing are so delightfully fashioned, both as to shape and trimming, that they will be appropriate for wear with any costume, from a tailor-made or shirtwaist suit of velvet or silk to the gown of chiffon velvet or the new double-width crepe de chine. They set off the plainest as well as the dressiest frock to perfection, and for the girl who purchases but one hat at the beginning of the season this mode is a treasure.

There is no set style or shape in these; just whatever happens to be becoming is selected. The trimming usually consists of velvet ribbon, broad and rich, and disposed to the best advantage both of pile and color. A softening touch is added in the little wisp of tulle that sets against the hair; and perhaps the full and fluffy rosette of velvet ribbon loops shows a twist or two of the softening material cleverly intermingled.

The girl who follows the cult of needlework—and her name is legion in these days—will hail with joy the hand-embroidered linen hat. True enough, we had a specimen or two of them in the late summer of last year; but then they were shirtwaist hats solely; they did not aspire to the airs and the dignity of a dress hat. Now, however, they have gone up several steps in the milliner's scale, and are to be seen made up in all of the most fascinating shapes that ever were invented. One in pale green linen is sensibly made over a featherbone frame, so that it may be sent either to the cleaner's or the less expensive laundress, and be restored to all of its pristine beauty whenever it begins to show soil. The pale green linen is firm in texture and of round thread. The embroidery follows the popular broderie anglaise design, "punching holes after a pattern just to sew them up again," was a small boy's description of his sister's efforts in this direction. The edges are buttonholed, and needless to say each piece is cut to shape so that it fits the frame without ripple or wrinkle.

A thick wreath of brown-eyed Susan in all of their soft natural coloring, and the dark green geranium leaves, with their brown markings, tone in well with the pale green linen and yellowish lace, and a very piquant touch is added in the round bow of black velvet ribbon that is tacked at the left side. The bow is attached to the flower wreath, so that the trimming may be removed in a moment and replaced as quickly when the aid of the laundress is required to freshen the hat.

BRAZOS CHANNEL TO BE IMPROVED

Congressman Henry Says War Department Will Investigate Conditions

Special to The Telegram. WACO, Tex., March 11.—Congressman R. L. Henry, who has just returned from Washington, talked interestingly of the status of the Brazos river improvement when asked as to the matter, and predicted that the project would be put through within a comparatively short time. Among other things he said: "The status of the Brazos river project is as follows:

"In 1900 Captain Riche of the corps of engineers made a detailed survey of the river and reported in favor of its improvement. His report called for eighteen locks and dams, which would give from eight to twelve months navigation in the year from the mouth of the Brazos to Waco. He estimated that the cost would be $3,000,000. Since this survey was made there has been only one river and harbors bill passed by congress. In that bill provision was made for improving the river from Velasco to Old Washington, a distance of 253 miles, without locks and dams. About $50,000 of the amount provided for in that bill remains unexpended at this time, but the engineers are busily engaged in the work of finishing that part of the river. "After consultation with competent engineers we concluded that we could get along with four or six months' navigation in the year and a less number of locks and dams than eighteen. The present river and harbors bill, which has just passed congress, contains a provision directing the secretary of war to have another examination of the river made, with a view of ascertaining whether four or six months' navigation can be obtained by 'open channel work' from Old Washington to Waco, or by a less number of locks and dams than eighteen, and if such navigation can be secured by 'open channel work' $75,000 is appropriated in the bill. To be expended on the river, or if four or six months' navigation can be secured by nine locks and dams, in that event the $75,000 is to be immediately expended on the river from Old Washington to Waco. The 'open channel work' is meant to cut away the overhanging timbers, cleaning out snags and dredging the river, building spur dikes, planting willows along the river bank and other methods. "It will be remembered that Professor Hurwood, when he made his admirable report, stated that the river could be improved from Waco to its mouth for about $250,000 by 'open channel work.' Still, under the present bill in the bill, if we fall on this phase of the case we are handed to the lock and dam proposition again, and if the engineer reports that four months' navigation can be secured with nine locks and dams then the government will begin work on the proposition, and it becomes recognized and will soon become an accomplished fact. Competent engineers have assured me that six or eight months' navigation can be secured from Old Washington to Waco by the construction of six locks and dams, then how much stronger the case is for us when provision is made for nine locks and dams if we can secure as much as four months' navigation. The war department will sometime this spring send a committee to the board here to make an examination of the river and submit its report. "In addition to the $75,000 already mentioned, we have secured a large amount for the improvement of the Brazos, $25,000 additional from Richmond to Old Washington. Adding these sums together gives us a considerable amount for our river from its mouth to Waco. "The question stated plainly now is, can the river be improved so as to give us four months' navigation by a system of locks and dams? If it can, the project is assured. If it cannot, we must fall back on the river without locks and dams. The simplest and strongest light before the war department, and if we cannot succeed under the present surroundings, we must inevitably fall. I have no doubt of our success now, and for that matter, on this proposition. However, should the board refuse to recommend the method of 'open channel work' or refuse to recommend a less number of locks and dams than eighteen we can still go back to Captain Riche's report and stand up for it, and ask for the improvement of the river according to plans submitted by him.

INAUGURATION ELABORATE
"Yes, Roosevelt's inauguration was a very elaborate affair, everything was conducted on a brilliant scale and I think the decorations were superior to anything that I have ever seen. The grand stands and seats along the avenue were built out of splendid material, were gorgeously decorated and artistically painted. Just like permanent buildings. I think more money was spent in preparing for this inauguration than ever before; the ball was the most elaborate affair they have ever had. I listened to the president's inaugural address, and while I could not agree with him on everything, I must say that he made a magnificent speech and tried to make the 100,000 people hear him, and I think probably one-fourth could have heard him. "The session of congress just closed did nothing except the usual routine work, passing the supply bills. We put through several measures in the house that failed in the senate, notably the bill increasing the powers of the Interstate Commerce commission. "The republican house, where they had control of all the machinery, preferred articles of impeachment against a Federal judge—a republican—Judge Charles Swayne, but unfortunately the republican senate saw proper to acquit him. However, it was gratifying to know that on several charges at last five or six republican senators voted in favor of conviction. There is one thing certain, and that is the action of the republican house will have the wholesome effect of deterring for many years Federal judges, who are so disposed, and it will perhaps be a long time before another judge undertakes to carry on the affairs of his court as Judge Swayne has. The impeachment was a solemn proceeding in the house and in the senate and one that the American people will not soon forget. "Roosevelt is taking a great interest; in his forthcoming visit to Texas. He thinks a great deal of the state and of her citizens, always showing them marked attention whenever they call upon him."

MALEK'S MANNER

Young, Yet Famous, Bohemian Pianist Becomes Completely Absorbed in His Art

Ottokar Malek, whose appearance in Fort Worth is announced for March 30, is an artist of peculiarly attractive personality. Richly endowed with the poetic temperament, there is nothing eccentric or flamboyant either in his appearance or in his style of playing. Yet the individuality of both is strongly marked. Especially remarkable is his combination of ease and freedom in playing, with perfect mastery of the instrument.

Malek attracts at once, and the first pleasing impression is not effaced by the showy affectation which mars the personal appearance of so many great musicians. Seated at the piano, he becomes wholly absorbed in his art. His pale, serious face gives no indication of the tremendous energy expended on difficult passages. He plays apparently without any effort, hardly leaning this way or that, his long arms seeming all sufficient to reach any part of the keyboard.

One little personal touch shows how thoroughly Malek is wrapped up in his art. He must feel himself untrammelled in any way at the keyboard, and so he wears no suspenders, which might hamper the free movement of his arms, no stiff bosomed shirt, which might impede the swift sweep of his arms over the keys; no wide cuffs, which might obstruct the free play of his wrists.

The poetical nature of Malek, which breathes from his pale, melancholy countenance, is revealed in the way in which, at the close of a number, he loves to sit still for a moment while he allows the cadences which his fingers have called into being to ring out like those produced by a trumpet. Then, when they die away, Malek comes out of his dreamy reverie.

Malek is popular not by reason of tricks of manner or the eccentricities of the long-haired artist. By the way, Malek's hair does not differ from ordinary people's.

His popularity is due, it must be admitted, to some extent to his spirituelle and interesting personality, but far more to the fact that he has both technique and inspiration, and thus moves both the knowing and unknowing ones. He plays the popular classics as they are rarely played, and is beside the sort of pianist women rave over, for he is as romantic as he is skilled in the technic of piano playing.

Yet Malek, though he has scored triumphs that place him with the highest musical geniuses, is but 23 years of age. As a pianist he takes the rank which his compatriots, Kubelik and Koellin, hold as violinists. Before coming to the United States, Malek and Kubelik appeared in European concert programs with the name of the former starred, while that of Kubelik stood in small type.

Though rendering all the masters with poetical feeling and perfect interpretation, it is as a Chopin player that Malek succeeds best in enrapturing his audience. In playing Chopin he seems to be sympathetic to an unusual degree, and it re-

THE ADVENTURE OF THE PRIORY SCHOOL

Fifth Story of the Series—The Return of Sherlock Holmes—By A. Conan Doyle

WE HAVE had some dramatic entrances and exits upon our small stage at Baker street, but I can not recollect anything more sudden and startling than the first appearance of Dr. Thorneycroft Huxtable, M.A., Ph.D., etc. His card, which seemed too small to carry the weight of his academic distinctions, preceded him by a few seconds, and then he entered himself—so large, so pompous and so dignified that he was the very embodiment of self-possession and solidity. And yet his first action, when the door had closed behind him, was to stagger against the table, whence he slipped down upon the floor, and there was that majestic figure prostrate and insensible upon our bearskin hearthrug.

We had sprung to our feet, and for a few moments we stared in silent amazement at this ponderous piece of wreckage, which told of some sudden and fatal storm far out on the ocean of life. Then Holmes hurried with a cushion for his head, and I with brandy for his lips. The heavy, white face was seamed with lines of trouble, the hanging pouches under the closed eyes were leaden in color, the loose mouth drooped dolorously at the corners, the rolling chins were unshaven. Collar and shirt bore the grime of a long journey, and the hair bristled unkempt from the well-shaped head. It was a sorely stricken man who lay before us.

"What is it, Watson?" asked Holmes.

"Absolute exhaustion—possibly mere hunger and fatigue," said I, with my finger on the thready pulse, where the stream of life trickled thin and small.

"Return ticket from Mackleton, in the north of England," said Holmes, drawing it from the watch pocket. "It is not 12 o'clock yet. He has certainly been an early starter."

The puckered eyelids had begun to quiver, and now a pair of vacant, gray eyes looked up at us. An instant later the man scrambled on to his feet, his face crimson with shame.

"Forgive this weakness, Mr. Holmes, I have been a little overwrought. Thank you, if I might have a glass of milk and a biscuit, I have no doubt that I should be better. I came personally, Mr. Holmes, in order to insure that you would return with me. I feared that no telegram would convince you of the absolute urgency of the case."

"When you are quite restored—"

"I am quite well again. I can not imagine how I came to be so weak. I wish you, Mr. Holmes, to come to Mackleton with me by the next train."

My friend shook his head.

"My colleague, Dr. Watson, could tell you that we are very busy at present. I am retained in this case of the Ferrers Documents, and the Abernethy murder is coming up for trial. Only a very important issue could call me from London at present."

"Important!" Our visitor threw up his hands. "Have you heard nothing of the abduction of the only son of the Duke of Holderness?"

"What! the late Cabinet Minister?"

"Exactly. We had tried to keep it out of the papers, but there was some rumor in the Globe last night. I thought it might have reached your ears."

Holmes shot out his long, thin arm and picked out Volume "H" in his encyclopedia of reference.

"Holderness, 613 Duke, K.G., P.C.—half the alphabet! Baron Beverley, Earl of Corstly, 1890. Married Edith, daughter of Sir Charles Appledore, 1888. Heir and only child, Lord Saltire. Owns about two hundred and fifty thousand acres. Minerals in Lancashire and Wales. Address: Carlton House Terrace; Holderness Hall, Hallamshire; Carston Castle, Bangor, Wales. Lord of the Admiralty, 1872; Chief Secretary of State for— Well, well, this man is certainly one of the greatest subjects of the Crown!"

"The greatest and perhaps the wealthiest. I am aware, Mr. Holmes, that you take a very high line in professional matters, and that you are prepared to work for the work's sake. I may tell you, however, that his Grace has already intimated that a check for five thousand pounds will be handed over to the person who can tell him where his son is, and another thousand to him who can name the man or men who have taken him."

"It is a princely offer," said Holmes. "Watson, I think that we shall accompany Dr. Huxtable back to the north of England. And now, Dr. Huxtable, when you have presumed that milk, you will kindly tell me what has happened, when it happened, how it happened, and, finally, what Dr. Thorneycroft Huxtable, of the Priory School, near Mackleton, has to do with the matter, and why he comes three days after an event—the state of your chin gives the date—to ask for my humble services."

Our visitor had consumed his milk and biscuits. The light had come back to his eyes and the color to his cheeks, as he set himself with great vigor and lucidity to explain the situation.

"I must inform you, gentlemen, that the Priory is a preparatory school, of which I am the founder and principal. Huxtable's Sidights on Horace" may possibly recall my name to your memories. The Priory is, without exception, the best and most select preparatory school in England. Lord Leverstoke, the Earl of Blackwater, Sir Cathcart Soames—they all have entrusted their sons to me. But I felt that my school had reached its zenith when, three weeks ago, the Duke of Holderness, sent Mr. James Wilder, his secretary, with the intimation that young Lord Saltire, ten years old, his only son and heir, was about to be committed to my charge. Little did I think that this would be the prelude to the most crushing misfortune of my life.

"On May 1 the boy arrived, that being the beginning of the summer term. He was a charming youth, and he soon fell into our ways. I may tell you—I trust that I am not indiscreet, but half-confidences are absurd in such a case—that he was not entirely happy at home. It is an open secret that the Duke's married life had not been a peaceful one, and the matter had ended in a separation by mutual consent, the Duchess taking up residence in the south of France. This had occurred very shortly before, and the boy's sympathies are known to have been strongly with his mother. He moped after her departure from Holderness Hall, and it was for this reason that the Duke desired to send him to my establishment. In a fortnight the boy was quite at home with us, and was apparently absolutely happy."

"He was last seen on the night of May 13th—that is, the night of last Monday. His room was on the second floor, in which two boys were sleeping. These boys saw and heard nothing, so that it is certain that young Saltire did not pass out that way. His window was open, and there is a stout ivy plant leading to the ground. We could trace no footmarks below, but I am sure that this is the only possible exit."

His absence was discovered at 7 o'clock on Tuesday morning. His bed had been slept in. He had dressed himself fully, before going off, in his usual school suit of black Eton jacket and dark gray trousers. There were no signs that any one had entered the room, and it is quite certain that anything in the nature of cries or a struggle would have been heard, since Caudley, the elder boy in the inner room, is a very light sleeper.

When Lord Saltire's disappearance was discovered, I at once called a roll of the whole establishment—boys, masters and servants. It was then that we ascertained that Lord Saltire had not been alone in his flight. Heidegger, the German master, was missing. His room was on the second floor, at the farther end of the building, facing the same way as Lord Saltire's. His bed had also been slept in, but he had apparently gone away partly dressed, since his shirt and socks were lying on the floor. He had undoubtedly let himself down by the ivy, for we could see the marks of his feet where he had landed on the lawn. His bicycle was kept in a small shed beside this lawn, and it was also gone.

"He had been with me for two years, and came with the best references, but he was a silent, morose man, not very popular either with masters or boys. No trace could be found of the fugitives, and now, on Thursday morning, we are as ignorant as we were on Tuesday. Inquiry was, of course, made at once at Holderness Hall. It is only a few miles away, and we imagined that, in some sudden attack of homesickness, he had gone back to his father, but nothing had been heard of him. The Duke is greatly agitated, and, as to me, you have seen yourselves the state of nervous prostration to which the suspense and the responsibility have reduced me. Mr. Holmes, if ever you put forward your full powers, I implore you to do so now, for never in your life could you have a case which is more worthy of you."

Sherlock Holmes had listened with the utmost intentness to the statement of the unhappy schoolmaster. His drawn brows and the deep furrow between them showed that he needed no exhortation to concentrate all his attention upon a problem which, apart from the tremendous interests involved, must appeal so directly to his love of the complex and the unusual. He now drew out his notebook, and jotted down one or two memoranda.

"You have been very remiss in not coming to me sooner," said he, severely. "You start me on my investigation with a very serious handicap. It is inconceivable, for example, that this ivy and this lawn would have yielded nothing to an expert observer."

"I am not to blame, Mr. Holmes. His Grace was extremely desirous to avoid public scandal. He was afraid of his family unhappiness being spread before the world. He has a deep horror of anything of the kind."

"But there has been some official investigation?"

"Yes, sir, and it has proved most disappointing. An apparition, also, was at once obtained, since a boy and a young man were reported to have been seen leaving a neighboring station by an early train. Only last night we had news that the couple had been hunted down in Liverpool, and they prove to have no connection whatever in the matter in hand. Then it was that in my despair and disappointment, after a sleepless night, I came straight to you by the early train."

"I suppose the local investigation was relaxed while this false clue was being followed up?"

"It was entirely dropped."

"So that three days have been wasted. The affair has been most deplorably handled."

"I feel it, and admit it."

"And yet the problem should be capable of ultimate solution. I shall be very happy to look into it. Have you been able to trace any connection between the missing boy and this German master?"

"None at all."

"Was he in the master's class?"

"No, he never exchanged a word with him, so far as I know."

"That is certainly very singular. Had the boy a bicycle?"

"No."

"Was any other bicycle missing?"

"No."

"Is that certain?"

"Quite."

"Well, now, you do not mean to seriously suggest that this German rode off upon a bicycle in the dead of the night, bearing the boy in his arms?"

"Certainly not."

"Then what is the theory in your mind?"

"The bicycle may have been a blind. It may have been hidden somewhere, and the pair gone off on foot."

"Quite so, but it seems rather an absurd blind, does it not? Were there other bicycles in this shed?"

"Several."

"Would he not have hidden a couple, had he desired to give the idea that they had gone off upon them?"

"I suppose he would."

"Of course he would. The blind theory won't do. But the incident is an admirable starting point for an investigation. After all, a bicycle is not a very thing to conceal or destroy. One other question. Did anyone call to see the boy on the day before he disappeared?"

"No."

"Did he get any letters?"

"Yes, one letter."

"From whom?"

"From his father."

"Do you open the boys' letters?"

"No."

"How do you know it was from his father?"

"The coat of arms was on the envelope, and it was addressed in the Duke's peculiar stiff hand. Besides, the Duke remembered having written."

"When had he a letter before that?"

"Not for several days."

"Had he ever one from France?"

"No, never."

"You see the point of my questions, of course. Either the boy was carried off by force or he went of his own free will. In the latter case, you would expect that some prompting from outside would be needed to make so young a lad do such a thing. If he has had no visitors, that prompting must have come in letters; hence I try to find out who were his correspondents."

"I fear I can not help you much. His only correspondent, so far as I know, was his own father."

"Who wrote to him on the very day of his disappearance. Were the relations between father and son very friendly?"

"His Grace is never very friendly with anyone. He is completely immersed in large public questions, and is rather inaccessible to all ordinary emotions. But he was always kind to the boy in his own way."

"But the sympathies of the latter were with the mother?"

"Yes."

"Did he say so?"

"No."

"The Duke, then?"

"Good heavens, no!"

"Then how could you know?"

"I have had some confidential talks with Mr. James Wilder, his Grace's secretary. It was he who gave me this information about Lord Saltire's feelings."

"I see. By the way, that last letter of the Duke's—was it found in the boy's room after he was gone?"

"No, he had taken it with him. I think, Mr. Holmes, it is time that we were leaving for Eton."

"I will order a four-wheeler. In a quarter of an hour we shall be at your service. If you are telegraphing home, Mr. Huxtable, in your neighborhood to imagine that the inquiry is still going on in Liverpool, or wherever else that red herring led your pack. In the meantime I will do a little quiet work at your own doors, and perhaps the scent is not so cold but that two old hounds like Watson and myself may get a sniff of it."

"That evening found us in the cold, bracing atmosphere of the Peak country, in which Dr. Huxtable's famous school is situated. It was already dark when we reached it. A card was lying on the hall table, and the butler whispered something to his master, who turned to us with agitation in every heavy feature.

"The Duke is here," said he. "The Duke and Mr. Wilder are in the study. Come, gentlemen, and I will introduce you."

I was, of course, familiar with the pictures of the famous statesman, but the man himself was very different from his representation. He was a tall and stately person, scrupulously dressed, with a drawn, thin face, and a nose which was grotesquely curved and long. His complexion was of a dead pallor, which was more startling by contrast with a long, swimming beard of vivid red, which flowed down over his white waistcoat, with his watch chain gleaming through its fringe. Such was the stately presence who looked stonily at us from the center of Dr. Huxtable's hearthrug. Beside him stood a very young man, whom I understood to be Wilder, the private secretary. He was small, nervous, alert, with intelligent, light-blue eyes and mobile features. It was he who at once, in an incisive and positive tone, opened the conversation.

"I called this morning, Dr. Huxtable, too late to prevent you from starting for London. I learned that your object was to invite Mr. Sherlock Holmes to undertake the conduct of this case. His Grace is surprised, Dr. Huxtable, that you should have taken such a step without consulting him."

"When I learned that the police had failed—"

"His Grace is by no means convinced that the police have failed."

"But surely, Mr. Wilder—"

"You are well aware, Dr. Huxtable, that his Grace is particularly anxious to avoid all public scandal. He prefers to take as few people as possible into his confidence."

"The matter can be easily remedied," said the brow-beaten doctor. "Mr. Sherlock Holmes can return to London by the morning train."

"Hardly that doctor, hardly that," said Holmes in his blandest voice. "This northern air is invigorating and pleasant, so I propose to spend a few days upon your moor, and to occupy my mind as best I may. Whether I have the shelter of your roof or of the village inn is, of course, for you to decide."

I could see that the unfortunate doctor was in the last stage of indecision, from which he was rescued by the deep, sonorous voice of the red-bearded Duke, which boomed out like a dinner-gong.

"I agree with Mr. Wilder, Dr. Huxtable, that you would have done wisely to consult me. But since Mr. Holmes has already been taken into your confidence, it would indeed be absurd that we should not avail ourselves of his services. Far from going to the inn, Mr. Holmes, I should be pleased if you would come and stay with me at Holderness Hall."

"I thank your Grace. For the purpose of my investigation, I think that it would be wiser for me to remain at the scene of the mystery."

"Just as you like, Mr. Holmes. Any information which Mr. Wilder or I can give you is, of course, at your disposal."

"It will probably be necessary for me to see you at the Hall," said Holmes. "I would only ask you now, sir, whether you have formed any explanation in your own mind as to the mysterious disappearance of your son?"

"No, sir, I have not."

"Excuse me if I allude to that which is painful to you, but I have no alternative. Do you think that the Duchess had anything to do with the matter?"

"The great minister snower perceptible hesitation.

"I do not think so," he said, at last.

"The other most obvious explanation is that the child has been kidnapped for the purpose of levying ransom. You have not had any demand of that sort?"

"No, sir."

"One more question, your Grace. I understand that you wrote to your son upon the day when this incident occurred."

"No, I wrote upon the day before."

"Exactly. But he received it on that day?"

"Yes."

"Was there anything in your letter which might have unbalanced him or induced him to take such a step?"

"No, sir, certainly not."

"Did you post that letter yourself?"

"The nobleman's reply was interrupted by his secretary, who broke in with some heat.

"His Grace is not in the habit of posting letters himself," said he. "This letter was laid with others upon the study table, and I myself put them in the post-bag."

"You are sure this was among them?"

"Yes, I observed it."

"How many letters did your Grace write that day?"

"Twenty or thirty. I have a large correspondence. But surely this is somewhat irrelevant?"

"Not entirely," said Holmes.

"For my own part," the Duke continued, "I have advised the police to turn their attention to the south of France. I have already said that I do not believe that the Duchess would encourage so monstrous an action, but the lad had the most wrong-headed opinions, and it is possible that he may have fled to her, aided and abetted by this German. I think, Dr. Huxtable, that we will now return to the Hall."

I could see that there were other questions which Holmes would have wished to put, but the nobleman's abrupt manner showed that the interview was at an end. It was evident that to his intensely aristocratic nature this discussion of his intimate family affairs was most abhorrent, and that he feared lest every fresh question would throw a fiercer light into the discreetly shadowed corners of his dual history.

When the nobleman and his secretary had left, my friend flung himself at once with characteristic eagerness into the investigation.

The boy's chamber was carefully examined and yielded nothing save the absolute conviction that he could have escaped. The German master's room and effects gave no further clue. In his case a trailer of ivy had given way under his weight, and we saw by the light of a lantern the mark on the lawn where his heels had come down. That one dent in the short, green grass was the only material witness left of this inexplicable nocturnal flight.

Sherlock Holmes left the house alone, and only returned after eleven. He had obtained a large Ordnance map of the neighborhood, and this he brought into my room, where he laid it out on the bed, and, having balanced the lamp in the middle of it, he began to smoke over it, and occasionally to point out objects of interest with the reeking amber of his pipe.

"This case grows upon me, Watson," said he. "There are decidedly some points of interest in connection with it. In this early stage, I want you to realize those geographical features which may have a good deal to do with our investigation."

"Look at this map. This dark square is the Priory school. I'll put a pin in it. Now, this line is the main road. You see that it runs east and west past the school, and you also see that there is no side road for a mile either way. If these two folks passed away by road, it was this road."

"Exactly."

"By a singular and happy chance, we are able to some extent to check what passed along this road during the night in question. At this point, where my pipe is now resting, a county constable was on duty from twelve to six. It is, as you perceive, the first cross-road on the east side. This man declares that he was not absent from his post for an instant, and he is positive that neither boy nor man could have gone that way unseen. I have spoken with this policeman tonight, and he appears to me to be a perfectly reliable person. There is an inn here, the Red Bull, the landlady of which was ill. She had sent to Mackleton for a doctor, but he did not arrive until morning, being absent at another case. The inn people at the inn were alert all night, awaiting his coming, and one or the other of them seems to have continually had an eye upon the road. They declare that no one passed. If their evidence is good, then we are fortunate enough to be able to block the west, and also to be able

Millinery, Tailored Suits & Coats

Monday and Tuesday, March Thirteen and Fourteen

This will be the first Complete Exhibit for the Coming Season—An Exposition of New Styles in Practical, Fashionable Spring Hats, with all the effusiveness of style and elegance of design that European Milliners and our own skilled designers have produced

You will learn more about new styles in half an hour in this department than by anything else you might do. The cases are filled with bright new hats; not limited to elegant trimmed styles, but ready-to-trim, and the smart street hats.

The new shapes are decidedly different in style.. The Tricorne, the Continental, the Marquise, the Napoleon; these are all variations on the same theme in millinery—the knocked-in and tip-tilted shape... This is the style that will be the dress hat of the season.

BREAKFAST—A MOVEABLE FEAST

By Margaret Sangster

Each grown person who comes in turn, may serve himself or herself, and afterward, with little trouble, put by the dishes used. No reason exists that compels a woman to do all the dish-washing...

"My mother" was the crushing reply, "washed her butter-bowl on Thursday morning at half-past ten, and so do I."

My housekeeping friends have a fancy that work cannot go on unless, or until, breakfast be out of the way. Does not something depend on the kind and manner of breakfast?

Why should the work be always done at the same precise moment, in the same precise way? Why should you not occasionally let it go, and paint your bouillon cups, or read your new book, or embroider your centerpieces?

the dictum of common sense to the restless demon, misnamed a conscience, that is forever stirring in the depths of the housekeeper's heart.

This is the third of a series of articles which Mrs. Sangster is writing for THE SUNDAY TELEGRAM. The next article of the series will appear Sunday March 19.
