LONDON, May 28.—The fact that for over twenty days no news bearing on the naval situation has been admitted to be sent from Tokyo by the Japanese government is looked upon as the most ominous feature of the whole situation.

Naval and military men are at a loss to imagine the strange reticence of the Tokyo authorities, and the opinion is gaining ground that all is not well with the Japanese fleet, although there is very little doubt of Togo's ultimate triumph
in the battle, which all observers are convinced has, or is being fought in the Korean straits.

LONDON, May 27.—The attention of all the naval experts is now centered upon the Korean straits, where the Russian and Japanese fleets are believed to be on the verge of their long-looked-for meeting, if the battle, which will decide the result of the war, has not already begun.
Opinions differ as to whether the whole Russian fleet has really sailed from Shanghai in the direction of Tsushima Islands, where Admiral Togo is believed to be waiting at the strategic center of the naval fighting zone for the coming of the enemy, whom he is supposed to have induced by cunning measures to come to the spot where he is best prepared to take up the range of battle and decide once and for all the mastery of the eastern sea.

Hong Kong advices, however, report a fleet of forty-five ships, among them being battleships, cruisers, torpedo boat destroyers, a hospital ship and several supply vessels, as being headed in the direction of the straits. This report is further confirmed by official advices from Tokyo to the effect that the combined squadrons of Rojestevsky and Nebogatoff have been sighted in the straits.
As yet no intimation has been received from any source as to the location or disposition of the Japanese fleet, but it is surmised by British experts who have been close observers of the tactics employed by Japanese admirals since the beginning of the war, that Togo has deliberately chosen his battle ground and will, in all probability be found to have taken his stand at the head of the Broughton and Kermadec canals just north of the Tsushima Islands, which are approximately in the center of the Korean strait and about sixty miles from the Japanese naval base at Sasebo.

Those who dissent from this opinion hold out the suggestion that Togo may still be located in the vicinity of Formosa and that the Russian vessels which slipped by that point, stopping at Shanghai and then continuing on their way north, may be only a portion of the Russian fleet made up of the coast defense vessels, lighter cruisers, torpedo boats and colliers; while the real fighting vessels, the battleships, armored cruisers and the more formidable of the protected cruisers, have engaged Togo's attention to the southward along the coast of the Bashi or Balingang straits and into the open Pacific, hoping to reach Vladivostok or Petropavlovsk, going through either the Tsugar or Lappo-rous straits.

Advices from St. Petersburg are to the effect that the news of the great fight is anxiously awaited by the Russian admiralty and it is believed that Rojestevsky has again succeeded in mystifying the Japanese commander by his deliberate reticence. It does not appear to be definitely known whether he has divided his fleet or gone with his entire squadron by the inside route through the Formosa and Korean straits to his northern destination. The belief seems to prevail in St. Petersburg that Rojestevsky will deliberately seek a fight with Togo before trying to enter Vladivostok.
It is believed here, however, that before many hours have passed news will have been received as to whether Togo is located at Sasebo and if he is it may be that the battle has already begun and the first news will, as in the case of the meeting between Admiral Kamara and the Vladivostok squadron, relate to the outcome of the battle.

BATTLE MAY SETTLE
NAVAL ARGUMENT

U. S. Naval Experts Waiting Results Before Deciding Plans for New Warships

WASHINGTON, May 27.—The chiefs of the navy department bureaus are watching with the keenest interest the result of the naval battle which seems imminent in the Korean straits. Upon the results shown in this most Titanic of all struggles for the mastery of the sea, will grow very largely the armament of the battleships authorized at the recent session of congress and those which may be authorized in the future. The naval construction board is divided into two fractions on this question. One favors the elimination from the main batteries of battleships of guns below ten inch, they claiming that the four, five, six, seven,
eight and ten-inch guns are of no practical advantage to a battleship; that naval fighting in the future will be done at long range, and that the vessel which is best equipped with ten-inch guns or above depending for defense against torpedo craft upon rapid fire guns, three inches or less in diameter, will be more effective. They want, therefore, the new battleships to have main batteries of ten twelve-inch guns each.

The other officers still believe that the eight-inch gun is an effective weapon for battleships and point to the fact in the battle of Santiago, practically all the execution of the Spanish ships being done by guns of this caliber. They claim, further, that while the theory of holding an enemy at a distance and smashing him with heavy projectiles is a very pretty one, it will not always work out in practice. In a general engagement it is always possible that a battleship or armored cruiser may be disabled and it would become necessary for the squadron or fleet to get to close quarters with the enemy in order to protect the crippled and permit it to escape. Then the eight-inch gun would come in handy.
The others claim that with the increased range of torpedo it is necessary to have a heavier rapid fire gun than the three-inch in order to afford proper protection against the line of attacking submarines. It is hoped and believed that when the Russian and Japanese fleets get together that reports of the fighting will shed some light on this vexed question, so that it will be possible to formulate an ideal battery for battleships and armored cruisers. It is also hoped that something definite can be learned as to the effectiveness of the submarine torpedo boats and of the limitations of the torpedo in a general engagement.

KOREAN STRAITS
MAY PROVE TRAP

Washington Naval Officials Think Admiral Rojestevsky Is Swallowing Togo's Bait

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Officials of the state and the navy departments are most interested in the news that the Russian fleet has been definitely located off Tsushima, bound north as if intending to threat their way through the straits of Korea. The navy department is gaining ground at any moment and are making bets as to what the Russian admiral will do.
The fact that movements of the wily Japanese have been screened from the public during the last two weeks leads naval experts to think Togo has some trap laid and they believe that Rojestevsky is rushing headlong into it.
Coinciding with the fighting of the Russians comes the news from Tokyo that the Korean straits have been closed to commerce. This is done to screen from the enemy the plans of the Japanese and to prevent them and other nations from getting knowledge of their tactics until the battle is over.
It is the opinion of the experts here
that the Japanese will catch the Russians in the narrow straits where their great number of ships will cause them to be encumbered to themselves and where the smaller Japanese navy can have them at their mercy and pick them off at leisure, once they are within the straits.
It is believed that Togo has closed the northern entrance to the straits and has hidden half of his force southeast of the southern entrance, his idea being to close in after the Russians when they enter the straits, then to bring them between two fleets and two hostile shores, the latter probably bristling with heavy batteries. It is also believed here that for the Russians to attempt to get through the straits of Korea is paramount to suicide.

A high official of the state department spoke at yesterday explaining the situation to some of his friends. He contended that the Russians would attempt the passage of the straits, reaching out the Japanese would have nearly seven hundred miles of sailing to do and in the end might be bottled in at Vladivostok, thus repeating the Port Arthur affair.

JAP DEFEAT RUMOR
CAN'T BE CONFIRMED

All News from Tokio Carefully Censored and Real Facts Are Concealed

SHANGHAI, May 27.—A report has just been received here that five battleships, three cruisers and seven destroyers, believed to be Russian, were seen this afternoon in the eastern channel of the Korean straits. The news is being censored and it cannot be learned whether more than this number of Russian warships have fallen in that direction, but the impression here is that Rojestevsky's entire fleet has sailed north and that the Japanese are trying to meet them.
Late tonight a report was circulated to the effect that the fleets had already met and that the Japanese had suffered a crushing defeat. No details, however, were given in the report, which is supposed to be an authoritative source.
All news from Tokio bearing on the movements of either fleet shows plain evidence of the work of the censor and this fact leads to the report that a Russian victory may really be true, as the Japanese, although they have been reticent
when a victory had been gained by them.
It is possible, however, that the censoring of news dispatches and ordinary ca-blegrams may be an account of the battle not yet having been fought to a definite conclusion.

EXPECT ENGAGEMENT
NEAR FT. SASSEBO

Russian Admiralty Has No Fresh News
from Rojestevsky's Naval Squadron

ST. PETERSBURG, May 27.—At the admiralty office tonight no news was given in regard to the latest developments in the Korean naval situation, but an air of anxious expectancy is not only among the officials that indicates how seriously the situation is regarded. It was stated by an official in close touch with the admiralty as follows:
Latest advices were to the effect that Rojestevsky's entire fleet was either in the Korean straits or on its way there,
and that the office had no definite information as to the location of the Japanese fleet of any part of it, but that it was supposed to have retired from the Pescadore to the main naval station at Fort Sassebo and that it was expected that Rojestevsky's progress would be disputed in that vicinity, if the strength of his fleet did not deter the Japanese admiral from risking an open engagement.
It was also stated that extraordinary efforts are being made to hasten the work on the new vessels to be sent from Cronstadt to the Far East. That no matter what the result of the present battle, if one is really on, further reinforcements will be sent east at the earliest possible moment.

MRS. ROGERS TO HANG FOR MURDER

Vermont Supreme Court Holds Woman Was Sane When She Killed Husband

ACCOMPLICE 16 YEARS OLD

Used Chloroform, Rope and Nearby Brook, to Accomplish Purpose

MONTPELIER, Vt., May 27.—The supreme court today denied the petition of Mary Rogers for a new trial and the condemned woman must hang on next Friday.

The petition was denied on the ground that no new evidence was produced to show that the woman was of unsound mind and unable to distinguish right from wrong at the time of the murder. The affidavits by Oakes, Lavell and Flynn, prison guards, to the effect that Leon Perham, the woman's self-confessed accomplice, admitted to them that he fled at the trial, were given no weight and the court further discredited the certificates of the physicians as to the woman's mental condition at the time of the murder.

It was held that her actions and statements just prior to and after she killed her husband showed her to be in full possession of her mental faculties.
The court held that there is no doubt that Mrs. Rogers at the time of the homicide, had the mental ability to distinguish right or wrong to fully comprehend the nature of the act she committed and sufficient will power to enable her to refrain from committing the crime. It was decided she was liberally willing to commit the murder and executed her will. The petition was therefore dismissed.

Mrs. Rogers is in jail at Windsor.
The preparations for her hanging interrupted by her reprieve on February 3, last, the day set for execution, will be immediately resumed.

For the first time in twenty years a woman is to die on the gallows in the state of Vermont. The eyes of all New England are upon Mrs. Mary A. Rogers, who has been in prison for more than two years for the murder of her husband, Leon Perham, in 1889.

The fight for the life of Mary Rogers has been going on for over a year and a half.
A wave of sentimental opposition to the hanging recently spread all over the United States, and Governor Bell of Vermont received an appeal of fifty letters a day asking him to interfere and to save the state the "disgrace of hanging a woman." But Governor Bell was firm in his refusal to interfere.
But there is none of this sympathy for Mrs. Rogers in the state of Vermont. From one end to the other there is a universal cry for vengeance, and had the question of her life been submitted to a vote in the state, it would have been defeated by an overwhelming majority. The women of Vermont practically banded together to insist that no mercy be shown Mrs. Rogers, and when her case came before the legislature, a strong was the power of the women's influence that the members of the legislature did not dare to commute her sentence.

Mrs. Rogers' crime was the murder of her husband, Marcus Rogers, at Bennington, Vt., August 31, 1893. This was not the first attempt that had been made on the husband's life. Mrs.
Rogers was married at the age of 18
and tired of her husband some three years after her marriage. At the time of the murder, she was living apart from Rogers, and for some time her name had been connected with that of a man in Bennington. It was said she wanted to marry him, and brooded over the fact that her husband was a bar to the marriage.

On August 29, 1893, Mrs. Rogers, then living in Bennington, sent a note to her husband in Hoosick Falls, asking him to come to Bennington the next night, as she wanted to see him. The following night, about 9 o'clock, Mrs.
Rogers met her husband in Bennington square. The two walked up the road about a quarter of a mile, to the banks of a little stream, which flows
nearly through the center of Bennington.
When they arrived there both sat down on the bank of the brook.
They had been there but a short time
when Leon Perham, a 16-year-old boy whose family Mrs. Rogers was boarding, came across the fields to the brook, with a rope in his hand.
He was expected by Mrs. Rogers and his coming was part of a pre-arranged plan. Young Perham had been there but a few moments when Mrs. Rogers suggested a "little game." She laid a wager with Perham that he could not tie her hands with the rope so that she could not release them. Perham wound the rope about Mrs. Rogers' hands, but she slipped it off easily.
Then she said to her husband, "See if you can do that, Mark." Rogers consented, and Perham wound the rope around Rogers' wrists. Mrs. Rogers whispered to Perham: "Tie him tight, Leon."

As soon as the knot was tied Rogers endeavored to slip it off, but with no success as his wife had had.
Finally Mrs. Rogers put her arm around his neck, drew his head down
in her lap, kissed him and whispered:
"I know you couldn't get away, Mark."
Then she drew from her waist a bottle of chloroform and, spilling it on a handkerchief, pressed it against her husband's face. "A little perfume I bought for you, Mark," she said. The dull and stupid Rogers never comprehended the game. When he realized that he was sinking into unconsciousness, he started to make a struggle.
Mrs. Rogers suddenly changed her tactics. "Jump on him, Leon," she said, and

JOHANN HOCH'S
HOPES DASHED

Attorney Tells Him There Are No Philanthropists Interested in His Case

CHICAGO, Ill., May 27.—The elation of Johann Hoch over the fact that a couple of real estate philanthropists had decided to pay for the writing of the records in his case received a jar today. Attorney Pletke, who defended Hoch, declared that the assurances made by Attorney A.
D. Green were without foundation.
This brings out a condition of warfare between counsel for the little German and adds new zest to the waning interest in his welfare. Hoch does not share the assertion of his former counsel. He believes in the assurances of Green, who firmly declares that friends of the convicted man will pay for the record in his case so it may be taken to the supreme court.

Preliminary arguments on the motion for a new trial in Hoch's case will be heard by Judge Kersten next Saturday.
Attorney Pletke took the record of the case to West Baden with him and will prepare his argument while resting.

young Perham sprang up and put his whole weight on Rogers' chest. Half stupefied by the chloroform, Rogers could offer but little resistance.

In about five minutes the man was completely under the influence of the drug. Then Mrs. Rogers, calling to Perham to help her, took up the body and threw it into the brook.

Before she went home, she tried to effectually mask her part in the affair.
She took a piece of paper and wrote a note, purporting to come from her husband, saying he was tired of life
and had determined to commit suicide.
Then she wound the note up with the ingenious conclusion, "Do not blame my wife, Mary Rogers, for this, as she had nothing to do with it."

Mrs. Rogers signed her husband's name to the note, pinned it on his hat and hung it on a tree. Then she and Perham went away. But at 6 o'clock the next morning Mrs. Rogers appeared at the police station in Bennington, weeping and wailing, and begging that they send some officers with her to search for her husband, who she feared, had committed suicide. She was met by the officers who knew Mrs. Rogers and also knew that she had not been living with her husband for about two years, and had not been seen with him, they wondered why she should be so solicitous at this time.

But Mrs. Rogers begged for the aid of the police and finally the city marshal gave her a couple of officers to go and search for the missing Rogers.
Mrs. Rogers suggested that they look along the brook because she thought it was a likely place for her husband to commit suicide.

Hardly had the officers arrived at the brook than they found the body of Rogers. His hands were tied behind his back, just as Perham had tied them. When Mrs. Rogers saw the body she indulged in a passionate outburst of grief. She threw herself upon the body and kept asking: "Why did he do it? Why did he do it?"

The moment the officers saw the man's hands tied behind his back the whole plot stood revealed to them.
Perham and Mrs. Rogers were convicted, the former being sentenced to life imprisonment, while Mrs. Rogers was sentenced to be hanged on the first Friday in February, 1905.

After her arrest Mrs. Rogers also confessed to the murder of her 9-months-old baby.

In her confession, made after she knew she must die on the gallows, she told the story about Mrs. Rogers' baby because she was desperate, penniless
and the child was ill and had no medicine. Besides, she said, she feared the child would grow up to be a murderer, like herself.

Immigration Agent Sails for Holland, Germany and Belgium

NEW YORK, May 27.—The south is in the field for immigrants in earnest and several states are taking active steps to turn at least some portion of the immigrants of the fertile fields of the southern states. In the recent Southern Industrial Parliament held in Washington
this question of replacing the negro labor with whites was apparently the keynote.
A significant item of news in this connection was the sailing for Rotterdam of J. C. Wynarten of South Carolina, who goes abroad for the purpose of inducing immigrants to go to that state.

Before his departure Mr. Wynarten said that he purposes going through Germany, Holland and Belgium to preach the advantages of the south in general and of South Carolina in particular, as a place
where industrious men with a knowledge of farming and small capital can get best results. The negro, he said, was becoming more dissatisfied and unreliable as a laborer and it is being realized more and more all the time that there will never
be a full development of agricultural possibilities of that section until the land
is occupied and tilled by small white
farmers. There are, he said, thousands
of acres of land throughout the south
which can be procured for a song and
which can be made as productive as any
in the country by proper fertilization and cultivation. Other southern states are following in the footsteps of South Carolina and organizations in New York have promised their aid in giving the south its
share of the incoming foreign population.

In the same line of the announcement
just made that the Atlantic Coast Land
group of railroads which cover all of the southeastern and south central states has decided to enlarge its land and to devote
a much greater share of its attention to
the encouragement of immigration, both
from abroad and from north and western states.

The Atlantic Coast itself, the Louisville and Nashville and the Nashville, Chat-tahooga and St. Louis roads will enlarge their immigration bureaus and smaller subsidiary lines will employ competent agents to exploit the advantages of the South, the Seaboard Air Line, the Illinois Central, the Frisco and the Southern Pacific are all enlarging their endeavors
in this line of work.

GOVERNOR TO TAKE REST

Special to The Telegram.
AUSTIN, Texas, May 27.—Governor Lanham announced today that he would

where he will spend some time recuperating. He will also visit his old home at Weatherford before returning to Austin.

CHINESE BOYCOTT
THREATENS SOUTH

Oriental May Bar Cotton Products to Retaliate for Exclusion Act

WASHINGTON, May 27.—The threatened boycott by the Chinese merchants of American goods until important modifications are made in the Chinese exclusion act, is a live question with the administration now, and is growing constantly in importance.

Already the merchants and manufacturers who are most directly interested are bringing pressure to bear on the administration and on members of congress to secure a satisfactory settlement of this question, which threatens to cut seriously into our growing trade with the far east. The feeling in favor of modification is at present stronger in the south than elsewhere and this for two reasons.
In the first place, the southern manufacturers make a product peculiarly fitted for the Chinese market. They declare that they already are feeling the effect of the boycott and that if it is continued and grows as it gives promise of doing, that it will seriously cripple the growing cotton manufacturing business in the southern states, and in some instances at least will drive some industrial enterprises which are now flourishing, into bankruptcy.

Another reason is that the southern farmers, particularly along the coast, are seriously considering the Chinese as a substitute for the negroes in the cane and rice fields. They, or at least a good many of them, would be glad to see the restrictions entirely removed from Chinese immigration. It can be said, however, that a feeling in favor of modification of the exclusion act is not confined to the south in general and of South Carolina in particular, as a place
where industrious men with a knowledge of farming and small capital can get
best results. The negro, he said, was becoming more dissatisfied and unreliable as a
laborer and it is being realized more and
be a full development of agricultural possibilities of that section until the land
is occupied and tilled by small white
farmers. There are, he said, thousands
of acres of land throughout the south
which can be procured for a song and
which can be made as productive as any
in the country by proper fertilization and
cultivation. Other southern states are
following in the footsteps of South Carolina and organizations in New York have
promised their aid in giving the south its
share of the incoming foreign population.

In the same line of the announcement
just made that the Atlantic Coast Land
group of railroads which cover all of the
southeastern and south central states has decided to enlarge its land and to devote
a much greater share of its attention to
the encouragement of immigration, both
states.

MRS. JAMES POTTER
AGAIN ON FEET

American Friends Come to Aid of London
Actress-Manager

NEW YORK, May 27.—Intimate friends of Mrs. James Brown Potter, the actress, received word from London today that American connections supposed to be the Sullmans, had come to her aid, and that she was once again in a sound financial condition. The report stated that all her debts accrued through an unfortunate theatrical venture had been settled.

The actress, who went to London a few years ago, met with great success and created a sensation. Of late, however, plays which have cost her thousands of dollars to produce, have not proved successful and seriously injured her financially.
Gowns which cost thousands, which she had especially made to appear in, and plays, were confiscated to pay creditors.

DAY OF RIOTS IN CHICAGO STRIKE

Chicago Situation Beyond the Control of Nearly 8000
Police and Deputies

RIVAL LEADERS GO EAST

Employers' Lawyers Will Hold Conference With Express Company Head

CHICAGO, Ill., May 27.—With peace as far away as ever, the day's campaign strike today reached its fiftieth day, attended by more violence than has marked it for some time. There were riots of consequence in the lumber districts and many smaller affrays occurred in other parts of town. More men were hurt, more men were arrested and more men were out of employment today than upon any day for a week past.

Levy Mayer, chief counsel for the employers, went to New York today to confer with United States Senator Thomas
C. Platt, president of the express company, which corporation has taken the lead in the opposition to the strikers.
James Berry, a prominent labor leader, also went east. While a settlement of the strike seems to be miles distant, plans were laid today in Chicago for a continuation of a meeting of delegates from all the labor unions in the city, the meeting to be held tomorrow night in Bryclay's Hall. This assembly will decide upon the best way in which to uphold the strike. The possibility of a break in the ranks of the strikers was eliminated today when President Shea in conference with the executive board of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, received a report to the effect that the Associated Building Trades Council of Cook county, which organization had been said to have withdrawn its moral and financial support to the strike, had in reality determined to align itself with the strikers.

It was decided that President Shea should continue to manage the strike, that he shall be in constant touch with the members of the executive board, who shall take a more active part in the campaign than they have hitherto done. While these plans were in course of formulation
the report that Sir Thomas Lipton, whose Chicago interests are heavily involved in the strike, might be chosen as a mediator of arbitration, gained currency. Levy Mayer before leaving for New York announced that he would countenance any recession on the part of the employers from the position they have held. Neither Sir Thomas Lipton nor any one else is looked upon as strong enough at this juncture to dominate the situation without the consent of the interests of which Mr. Mayer is the spokesman. The employers' attitude was stated plainly by President Shea, who said that the Twentieth Century Limited, said:

"Do not raise any hopes in the breasts of the express drivers. To do so would be utterly unfair and disappointing to them. Within a few hours after my arrival in New York there will, however,
be a strenuous change in the strike situation."

The departure of Mr. Mayer from the employers in a condition from which they sought redress through Victor Sincere of their association. They complained that they were unable to send out the wagons under the escort of negro policemen. The Police O'Neil refused to accept more negroes as members of the emergency squad. The white policemen had their hands full today. Although all the police magistrates imposed heavy fines upon rioters brought before them the rioting increased. The armed forces of 7,650 men, police and deputy sheriffs, was unable to prevent strike sympathizers from smacking strike-breakers. There were numerous battles between the opposing elements and for the first time since the strike began women were prominent in the disturbances. Riots, rocks, clubs and revolvers were brought into play in scores of riots. The passes through the streets of the wagons of the prescribed "Employers' Teaming Company" was marked by a succession of fights. The strike-breakers were waylaid and beaten; others were driven from their wagons. The police, whose patience had been worn thin by weeks of nerve straining work, used their revolvers without hesitation, but seemingly with but little effect, upon the constantly increasing mob from early morning until after midnight.

SEVERAL INJURED IN GRAND-STAND CRASH

Special to The Telegram.
WACO, Texas, May 27.—Inquiry yesterday developed the fact that several persons were hurt by the collapse of a section of temporary grand stand at the Country Circus entertainment Thursday night. For the benefit of the Y. M. C. A.
Mrs. H. L. Hargrave had her collar bone broken and several others were severely bruised, among them being Dr. H. C.
Black, Miss Kyle Pace, Miss Flanagan,
Miss Fay Elliott, Guy Taylor, Will Laird.
The accident happened at the close of the second act.

U. S. JUDGE PASTES
WALL PAPER COMBINE

Declares Continental Company of New York Illegal Organization to Restrain Trade

CINCINNATI, Ohio, May 27.—Judge A.
C. Thompson of the United States court in a decision handed down today declared that the Continental Wall Paper Company of New York is an illegal combine operated to restrict trade. The decision grew out of a suit filed by the combine against a local concern, Louis Vergtson & Co., for alleged breach of contract. In a cross petition the defendants charged that the combine was illegal and made a claim for heavy damages, alleging their business had been injured by unfair means. After a hearing on demurrer the judge held the combine illegal, but denied the Vergt claim for damages.

YOAKUM TO MEET DAVIDSON HERE

Heads of Frisco Will Be in Fort Worth Today for an Important Conference

President B. F. Yoakum of the Frisco board is expected to reach Fort Worth today or Monday. It is possible that President A. J. Davidson of the same system may accompany Mr. Yoakum. The object of their coming cannot now be positively learned, but it is believed that it is for the purpose of considering matters regarding the proposed extensions in Texas.

Captain Thomas West, connected with the legal department of the company in the state, said when seen that he was not advised as to the business which brings the two heads of the system to Fort Worth.

It has been published in Texas that President Davidson has positively announced that the Frisco has decided on an extension from Brady to Waco, 100 miles, but President Davidson denies in an interview that any such decision has been reached as yet. He further says that no positive plans have been reached.

When the Frisco arrives at a conclusion it will be to the effect, says Mr. Davidson, that the extension will be constructed through to San Antonio from Brady.

MORTON'S DESTINATION

Believed Now He Will Not Rejoin Santa Fe

Santa Fe officials state that Paul Morton, when he leaves the office of secretary of the navy, will not return to the official family of the Santa Fe.

However, President Ripley says that if Mr. Morton does come back to the company it will be to fill the office of second vice president, and not the president's position.

The statement practically settles the question of the future movements of Mr. Morton, as he will not accept a subordinate place on the official list of the Santa Fe.

RAINS RETARD TRAVEL

Serious Washouts Follow Continued Heavy Precipitation

Vice President and General Superintendent Pickinger of the Frisco said today that the recent heavy rains have caused considerable damage to the tracks of the company on the Red river division between Carrollton and Salina, necessitating the work of large forces of laborers to make the necessary repairs.

Other lines report that the rains have washed considerable of the roadbed away, but that travel has not been materially interrupted. Schedules, however, are not strictly adhered to, the companies preferring to regard the safety of travelers rather than to maintain schedules.

NO MOTOR CARS

Reported Innovation on Frisco not Immediately Contemplated

There is a report that the Frisco system has under consideration the putting on of motor cars between Fort Worth and Denton, but when seen Saturday Vice President and General Superintendent Pickinger said that he knew nothing of the rumor, but admitted that these cars would no doubt come in general use on railroads eventually.

It is also understood that the Frisco expects to use these cars between Fort Gibson and Muskogee, a distance of about one or ten miles. Motor cars are soon to be used on the Illinois Central between Chicago and Rock Island, Ill. The Illinois Central is being driven to this innovation in order to protect its business, which is being cut into by the suburb interurban system that operates between the two points.

BIG BOND ISSUE

Railroad to Raise $55,000,000 for Improvements

An issue of $55,000,000 is soon to be made by the Eastern Illinois line of the Frisco. A meeting of the stockholders will be held June 29 to take action on this matter. Of the total authorization, $4,620,000 are to be used in retiring the bonded indebtedness under existing mortgages. The balance is to be used for the construction of extensions and improvements to the property, for providing additional equipment, etc.

The company will also be authorized to make expenditures for the acquisition of additional and connecting railway properties and railroad bridges.

GALVESTON EXCURSION

The Houston and Texas Central will run a popular-priced excursion from Fort Worth to Galveston June 8 for the purpose of carrying those who desire to attend the great regatta which takes place there from June 8 to 10, inclusive. The rate for the round trip from this city will be $1.85. There will be several new attractions for the occasion, among them a decorated auto boat, besides parades and races and bathing, sailing and fishing.

NEW SLEEPING CAR SERVICE

Two new sleeping car services are to be inaugurated out of Texas to Colorado June 4 by the Santa Fe and the Denver roads. The former will leave Galveston at 7:10 a. m. for Houston at 9:20 p. m. and arrive in Fort Worth the following morning. The train will reach Colorado Springs the next day at noon and Denver at 3:15. The Denver road will on the above date extend its sleeping car service from Fort Worth to Galveston, via the Houston and Texas Central. The train will leave Galveston at 7:05 and Houston at 9:20 p. m., and Fort Worth the next day at 9:45 a. m. It will arrive at Colorado Springs at 12:55 p. m. and Denver 3:15.

IN THE COURTS

LUCKY J. WILDER

Lucky J. Wilder, the negro charged with killing Jack Wilson, also colored, Saturday morning at the northeast corner of Fifth and Houston streets, was taken before Justice of the Peace Charles T. Rowland at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon to be given an examining trial. The defendant waived the hearing and was remanded to jail without bail.

Monday the grand jury will investigate the killing.

Justice Rowland has not rendered his verdict as coroner and will not do so until he has heard further testimony, some of which was taken late Saturday afternoon. Dean Bell, on the witness stand, said that he was standing near the corner of Fifth and Houston streets when the shooting occurred and saw the negro fall to the sidewalk and a negro woman run.

It developed Saturday afternoon that a pistol similar to that with which the killing was done was bought from Pawnbroker Brodkey during Friday.

RETRIAL FOR VAN

Case First Tried in 1902 to Be Reheard by Courts

Jeff Van alias Jeff Vance, who was on May 31, 1902, convicted of the murder of Police Officer Andy J. Grimes and sentenced to hang, and whose case was reversed and remanded by the court of criminal appeals at Tyler, will be given another trial Monday, May 29, in the Forty-eighth district court.

Vance was indicted May 17, 1902. The case went to trial May 27 and was ended May 31.

An amended motion for a new trial was overruled by Judge Irby Dunklin June 24. It went to the criminal court August 15, and was up for more than a year before an opinion was handed down reversing the decision of the lower court. The grounds for the reversal were, with other reasons, a conflict in the testimony of certain witnesses.

The "Force" of Herpicide.

Even the first application of Newbro's Herpicide (THE ORIGINAL REMEDY THAT "KILLS THE DANDRUFF GERM.") shows the hair-saving and satisfying "force" that is in it. This "force" is the sum of two characteristics that are united in no other hair remedy.

Herpicide has the ABILITY to destroy the dandruff microbe, and the QUALITY to delight those who wish a dainty hair dressing. It holds the secret of popularity and pleases every one who is discriminating enough to have a preference. It is not sticky. It will not stain the hair.

The curative effect of Herpicide is sometimes little short of marvelous, for after the dandruff germ is destroyed, and kept out of the scalp, the hair is bound to grow as nature intended. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

"GROWTH OF NEW HAIR."
I have used three bottles of Newbro's Herpicide with very good effect. At the time I began using it most of my hair had come out, and I have now discovered a nice growth of new hair. (Signed)
E. T. BAIRD.
Birmingham, Ala.

"CLEANSING AND SOOTHING."
I have used Herpicide according to directions and am delighted with the cleansing and soothing effect. I shall always use and recommend it. (Signed)

ABOUT BOOKS!
BY J. MONTGOMERY BROWN

"Lady Penelope," by Morley Roberts, illustrated by Arthur William Brown, L. C. Page & Co.
Lady Penelope Brading was 21, lovely as Aphrodite, and a millionaire with castles all over England, besides a chateau in France and a palazzo in Venice. Totally lacking in a sense of humor, her beautiful seriousness was refreshing as logic in a sermon.
She read the Times, the Athenaeum and works by the late Mr. Drummond. She used Sandow's exercises and cold water, and had decided views against vaccination. In short, she was the most delightful person in England and had ideas.
Naturally there was a lively scramble of suitors for such a rare prize. We read only of eight, but there must have been more. However that may be, Penelope declared she loved no one, while confessing to a kindly feeling for each of the eight, or the herde, as Aunt Titania, Duchess of Goring, styled them.
Mr. Roberts has written a clever and amusing fantasy, that would, however, be vastly more readable if it had been cut down one-half.

LITERARY CHAT
Nearly forty years ago James de Mill's humorous story of travel and adventure in Europe called "The Dodge Club," was published in Harper's Magazine, and ten years later the world was still laughing at the "book." It seems now that repeated inquiries for the Dodge Club, long out of print, have led the publishers to determine upon issuing a new edition of the book. The Dodge Club tells the adventures of a number of Americans who are veiled together in Italy, and banded together to dodge the exactions from which travelers in that land usually suffer. The humor of the thing is of the best, and the illustrations, which are to be reproduced in the new edition, were in keeping with the text. It will be interesting to see how a new generation of readers will take a book that amused their parents and grandparents.
John Lane, the Bodley Mead, 67 Fifth Avenue, issues a little paper-bound book of thirty pages, entitled Sir Caspar Purdon Clarke, Kt., A Personal Note. The little book is a sketch of the new director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, reprinted with additions from the International Studio of April, 1905. A portrait of the new director, showing him, a typical Englishman of the upper middle class, forms the frontispiece of the pamphlet.
F. S. Martin, whose pleasant and sympathetic book called "The Luxury of Children and Other Luxuries" (Harper's) has had so marked a success, will shortly issue a volume of stories dealing with aspects of that more or less agreeable thing—courtship. The initial story, "The thing—courtship," gives title to Courtship of a Careful Man. Mr. Martin's characters are mostly New Yorkers or their near neighbors.
Gilbert Chesterton's new volume of short stories is to be called "The Club of Queer Trades." To this club only those who have found odd ways of earning their bread are eligible.
"A Mosaic Essay on the Subject of Love" is to be issued shortly by Paul Elder & Co. of San Francisco. This volume is to be uniform with previous issues on "Friendship," "Happiness," "Nature" and "Success," a series that has proved popular. An interesting frontispiece gives distinction to the new volume.
THOREAU, THE PROPHET OF NATURE
In a thoughtful article in The Outlook Hamilton W. Mabie thus sums up Thoreau's influence:
"Thoreau was not the first American to live out-of-doors, but he was the first to make out-of-doors living a profession, and to open the way to a new kind of writing. His egotism, his assumption of individual ownership in nature, have helped to found a school and to create a cult; but his spirit has diffused itself through American life, and he must be counted among the permanent influences in that life. He opened a world of experience which is one of the great refuges from the tyranny of work and wealth, from which flow restoring streams of health, vitality and joy. His defects of temperament are lost in his agile and virile idealism, and the best report of his life is to be found in his parable: "I long ago lost a hound, a bay horse and a turtle dove, and am still on their trail. Many are the travelers I have spoken concerning them, describing their tracks, and what calls they answered to. I have met one or two who have heard the hound, and the tramp of the horse, and even seen the dove disappear behind a cloud; and they seemed as anxious to recover them as if they had lost them themselves."

ONION CROP WILL YIELD $1,000,000

Gives New Source of Wealth to Farmers of Southwestern Texas

Special to The Telegram.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, May 27.—There is a prospective clash between Mayor-elect Callaghan and his council on the one hand and the board of police and fire commissioners on the other over control of the fire and police departments.

Mayor Callaghan is unwilling to abide by the charter provision creating the commission and has announced that he will appoint his own policemen and firemen.

The commission will be in control of the property owned by the two departments, as it will continue in office temporarily. But Mayor Callaghan may refuse to pay the commission's men and pay men of his own appointing. If he does this and the courts decide in favor of the commission, the city will have to pay the salaries of both sets of officers.

It is conservatively estimated that the onion crop of southwest Texas will be worth $1,000,000, and it is only about half a crop at that. This means a great deal to a section that five years ago didn't have anything to sell except long-horn steers.

This section has had so much rain this spring that crops are all in fine condition. This applies especially to corn and all forage crops. There is very little cotton in this immediate section, as the farmers have quit feeding the boll weevil.

The carnival association has been casting up accounts and finds that the carnival held in April, notwithstanding the inclement weather at the outset, was financially a success. It is practically assured that there will be a carnival next spring, although a definite decision has not been reached.

Bexar county has put into effect the law providing for a county auditor. W. N. Wiggins, an expert accountant of this city, is now appointed to the position and he is now engaged in formulating a system of auditing. The officials of this county expect the auditor to save a good deal of money for the people in the course of the year.

The county is also preparing to carry out the law permitting county money to be deposited in the bank paying the highest interest. Bids have been advertised for the county money. Bexar county will have an average of probably $50,000 on deposit and this means that the county will derive a neat little sum, which has heretofore been lost. Another good thing that will result from the law is that it will keep the banks out of politics. Heretofore banks have been in the habit of backing rival candidates for treasurer, the reward of the winning bank being the county's deposit.

The public schools of San Antonio have closed for the term and about 8,000 children have been turned loose for the summer vacation. Nearly all the twenty-six private schools in the city have also closed. The terms in both public and private schools have been generally successful. The feature of the term in the public schools was the inauguration of school gardening as a permanent part of the curriculum. A scientific gardener from Illinois is in charge of it. Gardening is a part of the general scheme of manual training in the public schools which now includes sewing, cooking, general care of the house and woodwork.

If you are troubled with dizziness, headache, indigestion, constipation, Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea will make you well and keep you well. If it fails, get your money back. That's fair. 25 cents. J. P. BRASHEAR.

HANDLEY TRUCK MEN PLAN ORGANIZATION

Special to The Telegram.

HANDLEY, Texas, May 27.—F. V. Evans, district lecturer and organizer of the Farmers' Union, was here today, making preliminary arrangements looking to the organization of a truck growers' association at this place.

A meeting will be held in the school building next Saturday evening to perfect the organization.

Our farmers are very busy in earnest in regard to this matter, and 24 men have been selected to be among the best in north Texas, for the growing of all kinds of truck. Handley expects to become a leading truck market and shipping point within a few years.

The farmers of this vicinity have been taking advantage of the summer between showers during the past week, are making nice progress in cleaning the crops all of which had suffered more or less, on account of the incessant rains.

The largest crowd of the season is making merry at Lake Erie today. Among the several picnic parties were the faculty and pupils of Daughman's Business College of Fort Worth, and the Baptist Sunday schools of Dallas.

CITIZENS HOLD CENSUS A JOKE

Declare Department Estimate Showing Decrease Is an Absurdity

Announcement of the census bureau that the population of the city of Fort Worth underwent a decrease of 232 from 1903, to June, 1904, shown in The Telegram by publication Saturday of estimated figures at each period, has caused widespread surprise and indignation in the city.

Taking into consideration the business activity of the city during the time mentioned and the actual increase in population numbering into the thousands, the absurdity of saying that the city's population in 1904 was less than in 1903, is really too ridiculous to be discussed as one citizen has expressed it.

H. Gernsbacher said Saturday night: "Anyone with average intelligence would know that Fort Worth has increased marvelously in the last two years. I am at a loss to know what basis of figuring the census bureau look to arrive at the conclusion that the population in 1904 was 232 less than 1903."

"It is ridiculous," said Stuart Harrison, "absolutely without foundation and too absurd for discussion."

E. W. Temple was equally strong in his denunciation of the loose methods of the census bureau and the carelessness in announcing figures so unjust to the city.

On every hand similar expressions were heard from citizens who keep in touch with the city and its growth.

SCHOLASTIC FIGURES

Further evidence of the rate at which the city is growing is furnished by the scholastic censuses being prepared in the various wards, the first of which was printed in The Telegram of Saturday.

Principal Paschal of the Fifth ward announces that the enrollment this year is 814 pupils as compared with 753 of the year previous. This shows an increase of sixty-one pupils.

At the Third ward the increase is fifty-four pupils, the enrollment this year being 422, against 368 of last year.

Figures announced from the Second ward show the attendance this scholastic year to be 460.

The First ward enrollment this year is also 460.

In the Fourth ward to the present time the figures show 450, with a portion of the district yet to be covered. As announced in The Telegram of Saturday, the Eighth ward census shows 530, an increase of an even hundred.

MANY CATTLE ARE READY FOR MARKET

Range Near San Angelo in Good Condition and Heavy Movement Will Begin Soon

SAN ANGELO, Texas, May 27.—The range is now in splendid condition and there will be a lot of fat cattle to go out to market next month. It is expected that the shipments of fat range stuff to market during the months of June and July will excel all previous records, providing, of course, that the market holds up. As the market as at present the cattlemen can get a fair price for their stuff and with so many fat cows in the country, there will be heavy shipments to the markets.

J. W. Johnson has leased his six ranch on Dove creek to J. W. Smith of Lamport. This is one of the finest ranches in the country and was, when it was the headquarters ranch of the old Half Circle Six Ranch Company the biggest ranch in this section.

Six Martin bought of Lindemann & Bushner, eighty steers, ones, twos and threes, at private terms.

M. H. Lane sold to Mr. Booth of San Antonio 100 fat cows at private terms.

John Mason delivered this week the largest lot of steers ever sold to J. W. Smith on the Dove creek ranch owned by Mr. Smith, and will be produced there for full price.

John Pendergast bought 100 head of grade steers and 200 head of cows from the same source as above.

HEAVY RAINS IN CHICKASAW NATION

Much Track Washed Away, Bottom Lands Flooded and Crops Seriously Damaged

Special to The Telegram. ARDMORE, I. T., May 27.—The heaviest rains in years have fallen over Chickasaw nation the past week. Two and one half inches fell here this morning. The Canadian, Washita and Red rivers are higher than since the big flood of 1898. Part of Lexington is reported under water.

Eight hundred feet of Santa Fe track on the Santa Fe's branch from Pauls Valley to Shawnee is reported washed away at Iroquois, the first station east of Pauls Valley. Several hundred feet on the main line of the Santa Fe near Pauls were also washed away. At Mayville, on the Lindsay branch of the Santa Fe, two hundred feet of track are under water and may go. All the bottom land crops in this portion of Indian Territory are ruined.

At Colbert several buildings were blown down this morning, with no loss of life. At Leola, in the southeastern portion of the Chickasaw nation, W. S. Hodges' general merchandise store in which was located the postoffice, was demolished by wind today.

BRECKINRIDGE TO RETAIN HIS OFFICE

Assigned From Daws Commission Because of Difference With Roosevelt

Special to The Telegram. WASHINGTON, May 27.—Colonel C. B. Breckinridge, who recently tendered his resignation as a member of the Daws commission because of the ruling of the president in the Delaware claim case, will not retire from the commission until July 1.

Notice to this effect was received at the agency here today. Secretary Hitchcock made a personal appeal to Mr. Breckinridge to remain with the commission until it expires, which will be at the close of the fiscal year June 30, and he consented to remain. While Mr. Breckinridge resigned because of differences with President Roosevelt, he and the president are the best of personal friends, and it is understood that in his communication to Mr. Breckinridge asking him to continue as a member of the commission, Secretary Hitchcock stated it was the president's wish.

SHAREHOLDERS WIN FIDELITY FUND CASE

Decision of Judge Calhoun at Austin Appealed to Higher Court

Special to The Telegram. AUSTIN, Texas, May 27.—The holders of certificates in the Fidelity Funding Company of San Francisco et al won out today in the case of Sam Hirschfeld against the company, which has been on trial for the past three days in the Fifty-third district court. Judge Calhoun, before whom the case was tried, today overruled the motion of

Loyalty to Father in Prison May Lead to Severing Marriage Ties

(Copyright, 1905, by W. R. Hearst) NEW YORK, May 27.—Recent photograph of Mrs. Robert L. Armit, the favorite daughter of "Al" Adams, the "Polley King," who made millions of dollars out of the policy game in New York. Mrs. Armit is suing for divorce from her husband, who is a wealthy mining operator in Mexico. One of the chief reasons for the separation was Mrs. Armit's intense loyalty to her father when he was sent to Sing Sing prison, which brought about a disagreement between husband and wife.

The defendants to vacate the receivership, which was the whole question at issue. He also overruled the defendant's motion to strike out the plea of intervention made by many of the holders of the certificates.

The defendants immediately gave notice of appeal to the court of civil appeals for the Third supreme judicial district. In the event that the action of Judge Calhoun is sustained in the higher courts a master in chancery will be appointed and a distribution of the assets made. It was learned from one of the attorneys for the plaintiffs that a distribution of $1-1 per cent probably would be made.

Valley Creek Ranch Sold

ABILENE, Texas, May 27.—J. E. Chandler sold his Valley Creek ranch on yesterday to Messrs. H. O. Wooten and W. G. Swenson, capitalists of this city. The price paid was $60,000. Mr. Chandler retaining use of the ranch the balance of this year. The ranch is located on Valley creek, thirty-five miles southeast of this city, and consists of twelve or fifteen sections of land, about 1,600 acres in cultivation and having, perhaps, a dozen houses upon it. The cattle and horses on the ranch do not go in the deal—only the land.

Messrs. Bynum & Muir, through whom the deal was made, say it is the intention of the new owners to cut the ranch up into small farms and put it upon the market. This is about the last large ranch property to be abandoned to the "man with the hoe" in this section, and it is the largest made in some years.

STATE DEFICIT $611,087

Special to The Telegram. AUSTIN, Texas, May 27.—State Treasurer Robbins this afternoon issued another call for registered warrants. The call includes all numbers up to and including $1,001 and aggregates $93,558, leaving the deficit $255,087. The delinquency warrants in round numbers is $376,000, which makes the total deficit $611,087.

NEW BOOKS ON LIBRARY SHELVES

Some Valuable Additions in History, Science and Fiction

A list of new books recently added to the Carnegie library has been prepared by Mrs. Charles Scheuber, librarian. It discloses some valuable additions in works relating to history and science, as well as some new standard fiction and books of a miscellaneous character.

Among the historical works are noted two more volumes to Cambridge's "Modern History"; Curry's "Civil History of the Government of the Confederate States"; Morris' "Wellington, Soldier and Statesman"; Reddaway's "Frederick the Great and the Rise of Prussia"; and D. G. Wooten's "Complete History of Texas."

Among the scientific works are: "Darwinism in Morals" and Ernest Haeckel's "Wonders of Life." The fiction list contains some valuable additions, notably Mrs. Humphrey Ward's "Marriages of William Ashe," Edna Philipotts' "The Secret Woman," Mrs. Rohlf's "The Millionaire Baby" and C. N. and A. M. Williamson's "The Princess Passes."

A number of works relating to such varied subjects as the Russo-Japanese war, amateur photography, contemporary history, modern literature and religious essays are included. Among the miscellaneous works Thomas Nelson's page, "The Negro," Jacob A. Riis' "Theodore Roosevelt, the Citizen and Lincoln Stephens," "Shame of the Cities," probably will be much in demand.

The list in full is as follows: Abbott, H. G.—Pseud, Modern photography.

AT THE BUSY CORNER MONDAY

You can make more money by reading this ad carefully and taking advantage of the underpriced merchandise, Monday, than you can save the next thirty days. You don't have to economize much if you trade in this busy little store. We sell the best, the newest and the latest, at about the price of cheap stuff in most stores. How can we do it? Because our expenses are about one-tenth that of most any store in town. It takes profits to pay a big expense account, and big profits at that. Small expense account, small profits—this is our fix exactly. This has been our motto from the start. Volume of business is what we are after. Keep on the move—move in the new, move out the new. Goods don't have time to get old in this busy store. The price is the whole secret. Quick sales and small profits—that's the way it's done here. THESE FOR MONDAY:

Cattle Raisers Fight Traitors In Their Own Ranks Warmly

DENVER, Col., May 20.—That half a dozen of the largest cattle shippers of the United States are receiving rebates and have received them for months from the various railroads, and that this accounts for their testimony before the senate committee on railway rate investigation, is the direct charge made by members of the Cattle Raisers Interstate executive committee and of the American Stock Growers' Association.

Last Friday Secretary Fred P. Johnson of both of these organizations, received a telegram from Senator Stephen B. Elkins of the senate committee, setting May 22 as the date when representatives of the live stock industry might appear before the committee and give evidence as to the high and almost prohibitive freight rates in existence in the West.

The next day Secretary Johnson and the other officers of the Stock Growers' Association were surprised to find that two of the most prominent stockmen of Nebraska had already appeared before the committee and had given evidence absolutely in favor of the present conditions, and asking on behalf of themselves and the cattlemen of the west, that they be not empowered to fix and regulate rates.

These two men were T. B. Hord, one of the largest cattlemen of western Nebraska, and Peter Jansen, one of the most prominent sheepmen of the state. For years Mr. Hord, so the members of the American Cattle Growers' Association say, has been one of the leaders in the revolt against the unfair and unjust methods of the railroads. Mr. Jansen has taken so prominent a part in the fight that when the American Cattle Growers' Association held its last convention here a week ago he was the only candidate against Murdo MacKenzie for the presidency.

IN POWER OF RAILROADS
 "Both of these men are very heavy shippers," Secretary Johnson said, "and they are absolutely in the power of the railroads. For that reason I do not believe they have deserted us, but they were

DIAMOND SCROLL FOR PRINCESS MARGARET

American's Gift Will Be Most Beautiful Received By Swedish Prince's Bride
 LONDON, May 27.—The most beautiful of the most valuable wedding presents which Princess Margaret of Connaught will receive will be from an American. Antony Drexel is presenting the bride with a wonderful neck ornament, which has been specially designed and carried out in brilliant diamonds by M. Boucheron, the famous Parisian jeweler. The ornament, which is all the rage just now, both in Paris and London, consists of a scroll work of diamonds in a floral design, which is worn at the throat and tapers toward the back of the neck. It is said that it can be worn on the dress or as a small tiara for the hair.

Special to The Telegram.
 MUSKOGEE, I. T., May 27.—Miss Irene King of Missouri; Miss Mattie Ivey of Texas; Miss Elizabeth Claborn of Tennessee; Miss Cordelia Erwin of Kentucky; and Miss Fannie S. Brown of Georgia, were selected missionaries to the Orient by the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions here today.

The conference adjourns Tuesday morning and tomorrow the six new missionaries will give a farewell meeting at the First Methodist church. The annual sermon will be preached tomorrow morning by Dr. W. R. Lambeth, one of the secretaries of the board.

HUNGARIANS BORDER ON REVOLUTION

Commerce and Industry Suffering From Deadlock Between Government and Opposition
 BERLIN, May 27.—According to the latest dispatches from Budapest, the disposition of Hungary is now in a state bordering on open revolution. The opposition press openly advises its readers to refuse to pay taxes.
 Everywhere there is the greatest indignation because of the total failure of Count Julius Andrássy's mission to Vienna. The count has given the executive committee of the opposing party a detailed report of his audience at the Hofburg at Vienna and this was the last straw. He stated how he had been forced to give up his attempt to effect a reconciliation because the aged emperor absolutely refused to make even the smallest concession and made him understand that during his life he would never consent to make Hungarian the official language in the Hungarian army.

Constitution and Bylaws of American Association

For the information of stockmen who are anxious to know the plan of organization adopted for the American Stock Growers' Association, the constitution and by-laws adopted by the convention on Wednesday is published in full, as follows:

CONSTITUTION
Article 1
 The name of this organization shall be the American Stock Growers' Association.
Article 2
 The objects of this association are:
 First. To secure to shippers the establishment and maintenance of just, fair, reasonable and equitable rates of freight and other charges and prompt and efficient service, and to that end to press before the congress of the United States proper measures to amend the act to regulate commerce; that the interstate commerce commission shall have the power when it finds a rate charge or practice to be unjust, unfair, unreasonable, or otherwise unlawful, to fix and substitute therefor a rate charge or practice which is just, fair and reasonable, and, for the purpose of enforcing such laws as do or may secure fair rates and good service to prosecute all such proceedings as shall be necessary to that end, after exhausting all reasonable means to secure voluntary adjustment of the same by the railroads.
 Second. To promote the general interest of the live stock business by endeavoring to secure and to enforce reasonable sanitary or other regulations pertaining to the movement of live stock as provided by law or the department of agriculture, and to secure such amendments to the law or regulations as may be reasonable and necessary.
 Third. To secure to live stock men the widest, best and most competitive markets possible for their product, and to this end to prevent combination and monopolies, and to secure such regulations by national and state laws as will best secure an open, fair and unrestricted market; and to promote the extension of our trade with foreign countries in live stock and its products so as to give us access to the markets of the world.
 Fourth. To represent and promote the live stock interest in all matters of common concern, with the object of fairly securing the enjoyment of all our rights and privileges and in doing so to make the wrong of a general nature against each of us the concern of us all.
 The membership of this association shall be upon the basis of individual membership of persons, firms and companies engaged in producing or maturing live stock, but the executive committee shall be authorized on a two-third vote of all its members to admit to co-operate or qualified membership, on such terms as it deems fair and proper, live stock organizations, official or otherwise, with such representation as may seem proper; provided, however, that the control of this association shall remain with its individual membership.
Article 4
 The admission to this association shall be five dollars ($5.00), payable upon presentation of application for membership. The annual dues shall be $5.00 as a minimum. The owners, shipper or feeder of from 500 to 1,000 head of cattle shall pay $10.00 annual dues; of from 1,000 to 2,500 head of cattle, $20.00; of from 2,500 to 5,000 head of cattle, $30.00; of from 5,000 to 10,000 head of cattle, $40.00; of over 10,000 head of cattle, $50.00. The owner or feeder of sheep shall pay as follows: 2,000 to 5,000 head $10.00; 5,000 to 10,000 head, $20.00; 10,000 to 20,000, $30.00; 20,000 to 30,000, $40.00; over 30,000, $50.00.
Article 5
 The permanent office of the association shall be located at Denver.
Article 6
 The officers of the association shall be a president, a vice president, secretary and treasurer. The president and vice presidents shall be elected at the annual convention each year. Immediately after his election, the president shall appoint an executive committee of thirty members, said appointment to be confirmed by the convention. The executive committee shall appoint a secretary and treasurer, and shall have supervision and control of the funds of the association, and also have complete charge over all the affairs and conduct the business of the association, all officers of the association to be ex-officio of this committee.
Article 7
 The deliberations of the convention of this association shall be governed by Robert's Rules of Order, and all amendments to this constitution shall be presented to the annual meeting in writing. Any change in the constitution may be made upon a two-third vote of the members present and voting, provided that any proposed change in the constitution shall be first submitted to the executive committee, and they shall report thereon to the convention.
BY-LAWS
Section 1. The duties of the president shall be to preside at all meetings of the association and executive committee, fill all vacancies and see that the by-laws, rules and regulations are faithfully executed, and perform such other duties as may be required of him, as well as such as may be necessary to secure the best interests of this association, not herein otherwise provided for.
Section 2. The vice president, in the absence of the president, shall perform the duties of the latter, and in case the vice president shall be absent, the second vice president shall preside.
Section 3. In debate before the convention no member shall be allowed to occupy more than five minutes upon any one subject, but this time limit can be extended by a vote of the convention. The president will be required to enforce such rule.
Section 4. The duties of the secretary shall be to keep accurate minutes of the transactions of the association. He shall keep a correct account of all moneys received and pay the same over to the treasurer. He shall write and send all communications for the association and transact such other business pertaining to the office as he may be directed to do by the association or executive committee. He shall deliver to his successor all books, papers and other property in his possession belonging to the association, and perform such other duties as may be required of him under the direction of the president or the executive committee.
Section 5. The secretary, when authorized to do so, shall draw warrants upon the treasurer for the payment of all bills, and make a full report of all transactions of his office at each annual session, or at such other times as the executive committee may direct.
Section 6. It shall be the duty of the treasurer to give a bond such as the executive committee may require, and the expense of such bond shall be defrayed by the association; to receive all moneys collected by the secretary belonging to the association, to pass his receipt therefor, keep correct accounts of the same, and report minutely, in connection with the secretary, the financial condition of the association at each stated meeting, and to make disbursements of the funds of the association as heretofore provided.
Section 7. The executive committee shall meet at the call of the president, or upon the request of any five members thereof, at such time and place as designated in the call; seven members shall constitute a quorum.
Section 8. This association shall hold an annual meeting at the place determined upon by the convention and upon a date to be fixed by a majority vote of the executive committee.
Section 9. Any change in the by-laws may be made in the same manner as in the constitution by a majority vote of the members present and voting.
Section 10. All applications for membership in this association shall be forwarded to the secretary in writing, together with the membership fee as prescribed by the constitution.
Section 11. All resolutions must first be referred to a committee for its action and report thereon to the convention, except when otherwise directed by the convention.
Section 12. In addressing the convention each delegate will announce his name to the president and shall not speak upon any subject until the president shall have recognized him by name.
Section 13. All papers read before the convention must be left with the secretary after being read.
Section 14. The order of business at the annual meeting of the association shall be as follows:
 Called to order by the president.
 Report of membership by the secretary.
 Roll call.
 Annual address of the president.
 Report of the executive committee.
 Introduction and reference of resolutions.
 Consideration of resolutions.
 Consideration of papers.
 General business.
 Election of officers and appointment and confirmation of executive committee for ensuing year.
 Selection of next place of meeting.
 Adjournment.
 This order of business can be suspended by vote of the convention.

ALICE ROOSEVELT LOSES ON WOTAN

President's Daughter Fails to Pick Winner in Kensington Steeplechase

GRAVESEND RACE TRACK, New York, May 27.—A good thing was put through on the Kensington steeplechase handicap when Candling, owned by Hank Williams and heavily backed by the western crowd at the track and in the Cincinnati and Pittsburg pool rooms, came in a winner in a romp, beating Jim Newman, the 13 to 5 favorite.

The main event, the Peakness Stakes, went to the 12 to 5 favorite, Cairngorm, but Bohemia came so strong at the half, backers of Cairngorm held their breath.

In the third race, Knapp, by a hustling ride, brought in Kingsor, the heavily played 4 to 1 choice for first, by a good margin over Newton Bennington's Jerry Warberg.

Houray, the 9 to 5 favorite, won the fifth for maiden two-year-olds at five furlongs, in a veritable romp. It was a great improvement over his last race.

Sam Hildreth, the noted western trainer, who was set down for fighting with John E. Madden in 1895 at Morris Park with the premises of the race course, was re-instated today by the stewards.

Second race—Steeplechase, two miles: Candling, 13 (Vietch), 9 to 1, won; Jim Newman, 14 (Ray), 3 to 1, second; Rube, 18 (Rodrock), 1 to 1, third. Time, 3:57.

Third race—Five furlongs: Kingsor, 107 (W. Knapp), 9 to 2, won; Jerry Weinberg, 107 (O'Neill), 9 to 2, second; Nostromo, 167 (Crimmins), 9 to 1, third. Time, 1:02 1-4.

Fourth race—The Peakness Stakes, mile and seventy yards: Cairngorm, 114 (W. Davis), 2 to 1, won; Klamasha, 104 (Hildebrandt), 8 to 1, second; Coy Maid, 109 (W. Knapp), 9 to 1, third. Time, 1:45.

Fifth race—Five furlongs: Houray, 194 (O'Neill), 7 to 1, won; Rust, 97 (J. Kelly), 17 to 1, second; Retropaw, 105 (Martin), 20 to 1, third. Time, 1:02 2-5.

Sixth race—Mile and a furlong: Kehallan, 94 (Miller), 5 to 1, won; The Southerner, 106 (O'Neill), 11 to 5, second; Oricholox, 104 (Martin), 8 to 1, third. Time, 1:54.

Seventh race—Mile and one-eighth: Tongador, 1 to 6, won; First Born, 10 to 1, second; Fallahen, 12 to 1, third. Time—1:59.

Eighth race—Mile and one-sixteenth: Sir Ralph, 7 to 1, won; Mistiss, 7 to 2, second; Nichambler, 4 to 1, third. Time—1:45.

Ninth race—Four and a half furlongs: Lady Carol, 108 (Black), 12 to 1, won; Prominence, 102 (Truebel), 9 to 5, second; Vic Kinney, 105 (Taylor), 25 to 1, third. Time—0:54 3-4.

TENTH RACE—Mile and quarter: Club Members' handicap: Aurovair, 114 (Olliphant), 7 to 5, won; The Cook, 93 (Seder), 10 to 1, second; Lubin, 107 (L. Williams), 6 to 1, third. Time, 2:07.

Eleventh race—Six furlongs: Vanness, 110 (Domnick), 5 to 2, won; Red Leaf, 93 (Sewell), 3 to 1, second; Martin, 102 (Schaffner), 20 to 1, third. Time, 1:15.

Twelfth race—Mile and one-sixteenth: Blennenworth, 107 (Olliphant), 11 to 1, won; Action, 111 (Domnick), 16 to 5, second; Joe Lesser, 109 (Folcht), 9 to 5, third. Time, 1:43 2-5.

Thirteenth race—Mile and three-eighths: Canyon, 108 (Domnick), 9 to 1, won; Cottillon, 85 (Shade), 15 to 1, second; Bravery, 89 (Schaffner), 4 to 1, third. Time, 2:17.

FOURTEENTH RACE—Mile and quarter: Club Members' handicap: Aurovair, 114 (Olliphant), 7 to 5, won; The Cook, 93 (Seder), 10 to 1, second; Lubin, 107 (L. Williams), 6 to 1, third. Time, 2:07.

CORNELL WINS IN FIELD ATHLETICS

World's Half Mile and Pole Vault Records Broken—Yale Is Second

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 27.—Cornell's victory by a margin of 2 1/2 points and the breaking of two world's records were the features of the thirtieth intercollegiate track and field championships held on Franklin field this afternoon.

Both of the new records went to the Yale athletes. Parsons won the half-mile in one minute, fifty-six and four-fifths seconds faster than the old figures held jointly by himself and Van Hollister of Harvard and W. Dray, a sterling young freshman performer, cleared the bar in the pole vault at eleven feet ten and a half inches.

The quarter mile gave the 8,000 spectators something to cheer for. After setting a heart-breaking pace for 200 yards, Dives of Harvard, international champion, was forced to give way to Hyman, the Quaker star, who galloped to the tape at a terrific clip, leading Dives by two yards in the very creditable time of forty-nine and two-fifths seconds, within one-fifth of a second of the record.

A Lawn Sale Unequaled!

And will go down in the history of Fort Worth as the best value giving ever before attempted
We know what we say is positively true for two reasons which we give below:

AUCTION—You have heard us offering auction goods for sale lately, and doubtless the lay member may be somewhat puzzled to know how staple Wash Goods, Lawns, White Goods, Percales, etc., should be sold at auction. It is this way: The past spring has been very backward and cold all over the land. Especially has the sale of such goods been backward in the North. Mills and jobbing houses were still loaded with goods which they had every reason to expect would be sold. May 1 was their limit to wait, and in the early May the slaughter began. One jobbing house offered for sale at slaughter prices a full million dollars' worth, another a lesser amount, and another and another. Then the mills threw their products into the auction. Not only their surplus but their entire and most desirable fabrics, including all their newest styles, were sold at panic prices. Now, who was to buy these goods that were going to the song of the bidder? Why, the retailers of the land, who were open for and could handle the goods, not the merchant who had bought his goods in January and February, enough and more than enough to carry him over the entire summer. He could take no more on even at the most tempting prices—but the merchant who is always ready to pick up a good thing and on the alert to show the newest styles, has the capacity to handle and is not lumbered up with old goods bought early. A sale of this kind, a season like this, is a game played right into his hand. We are happy to say that we have been in position to buy more than forty thousand yards of summer dress goods at prices never before heard of and at much less than the goods cost to make. Almost half have already been sold, and it now looks as if our purchases might profitably have been double what they were.

PHILADELPHIA MAYOR WINS SPECTACULAR GAS FIGHT

Effort to Force 75-Year Lease of Lighting Contract Is Finally Abandoned

CITY EXECUTIVE NOW POPULAR HERO
Is Given Ovation by Citizens When Announcement of Victory Is Made

MAYOR JOHN WEAVER.

BY WILLIAM HESTOR.
PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 27.—Civic honesty has triumphed. The gas deal was suddenly shelved this afternoon at the end of a two hour confab between "Boss" Durham and Thomas Dolan, president of the United Gas Improvement Company, to which the city's gas plant was to be handed over for seventy-five years. Dolan wrote a letter to the presidents of select and common councils formally withdrawing the proposition and that is the end of the job. The surrender of the gang is complete. The mayor's victory is crushing and far-reaching. In five days from being the most negative official that ever held office under a municipality he has become foremost among the mayors of great American cities. Single handed, he attacked an organization of 29,000 office-holders completely pulled and ruled by an absolute autocrat—perhaps the most powerful political organization ever built up in the history of American politics; and, after five days of bitter fighting the autocratic head of that organization today runs up the white flag. Durham's lines were broken in a dozen places, his lieutenants were deserting him in groups and political assassination stared him in the face. With an eye on the future he surrendered. Philadelphia is wild with joy. Ringing cheers greeted the announcement of the surrender all over the town. An hour after the lease was withdrawn the mayor alighted from his automobile in front of the Union League where he was to review the parade of a local military organization. A great cheer went up as Weaver's well known face and form were recognized. The crowd surged around him and for five minutes the popular chief executive was swallowed up in a roaring mob of 10,000 who slapped him on the back, shook his hand, waved hats and handkerchiefs and raced in a mad frenzy of joy.

CHEERS FOR MAYOR
"Bully boy, John!" they shouted. "Hurrah for Weaver, now that they are down, jump on them." "No mercy, John, run the rascals out."
Weaver was so overwhelmed by the ovation that he looked frightened.
"That's all right," some one shouted, "you are among your friends."
The mayor burst out laughing and slowly the police got him out of the crowd and escorted him to the balcony of the league club where his appearance was the signal for another cheer.

WHAT THE FIGHT WAS ABOUT
The fight now was between the mayor, John Weaver, backed by the aroused people, and the gang of grafters which rules the city, supported by the United Gas Improvement Company.
The people marched upon the council and demanded that the gas works be not sold to the gas trust. The people supposed the council was their representative. The council disillusioned them promptly. The council was elected, not by the people, but by the grafters. It being the representative of the grafters, it did the bidding of its masters. The mayor then became the champion of the people, and removed city officials right and left. As these city officials control some 30,000 political jobs, and as the men who hold these jobs have much influence on the council, the mayor hopes to force them to do, through fear, what they will not do for honor, and that is save the gas plant from the trust.
The council proposed to lease the plant to the trust for 75 years, and the lease fixed the price of gas at $1 per thousand for 25 years, and at lesser sums, the lowest only 80 cents, for the balance of the term.

There were repeated calls for a speech, but he shook his head negatively and retired from view until the procession arrived. In an interview this afternoon Mayor Weaver said:
"I regard this as a splendid victory for the people, the credit belongs to them. It shows that civic spirit still exists with all its old time force and can triumph over any evil if it is only properly extended. I cannot discuss the political effect of this victory. The future must be left to develop itself."
There is wild rejoicing in Philadelphia tonight. Mass meetings called to protest against the lease have been turned into meetings of thanksgiving and congratulation, bonfires have been lighted all over town and the sky is alight with exploding fireworks. It is a fitting climax to a most remarkable series of manifestations of public sentiment. Philadelphia for the past five days has been a seething cauldron.

Not in its history had the city been more stirred up. Now that the end has been reached it may be said safely that there has been periods during the anti-gas league agitation when Philadelphia was seriously on the verge of actual riot and bloodshed. Had the plan to force the lease through over the mayor's veto next Thursday no one can tell what the result would have been. But that is all past now and yet the political effect has come.

SAVED CITY $80,000,000
"The little mayor" (they say it in a glorifying sense here) "has saved the city from being plundered of $80,000,000 and has whipped the gang." The first rumbling of the crash was heard in the appointments of Potter and Acker to succeed Smith and Costello. There seems to be little doubt but that the mayor will win out in the end. In fact, rumors were afloat that it is the plan of the mayor to build up a machine of his own now that would be strictly in accordance with the history of Philadelphia politics. But in the hour of this victory the people believe the mayor read the Dolan letter through and then after consultation with his legal advisers, agreed to the withdrawal of the ordinance which has been in his hands ever since it passed the council.

Mr. Dolan, in his letter, makes a brief argument with figures to prove what a splendid thing the lease would have been for Philadelphia. He adds:
DEFEATED LEADER TALKS
"This proposition, with all business propositions in which the public is involved, was, of course, a proper subject for public consideration and decision. Instead of the proposition being discussed as a business one from the standpoint of facts open to those who dared to investigate and discuss the subject, there has been little talk of public consideration and decision. The manner in which the whole subject has been treated induces this company to believe that the controversy is opposed to any extension of the gas lease on any terms. This being so, this company is unwilling to accept the ordinance which has been passed or to enter into any contract whatever with the city looking to any variation of the terms of the present lease. The United Gas Improvement Company, therefore, begs respectfully to advise councils that for the reason stated above, should the pending ordinance become a law, it will not accept it."
Durham, when seen this afternoon, said:
"I have no statement to make." Nobody is giving much thought to the future yet, but it is generally conceded in political circles the gang surrendered today in order to save what still remains of the organization. A grand conference of the members is to be held in Atlantic City tomorrow, at which plans for the future are to be discussed. State leaders as well as city leaders will participate in this conference. They understand that the fight is to still go on. Weaver still has two years to serve and the plan will be to hamper him as much as possible. On Wednesday argument will be heard on the legality of the appointments of Potter and Acker to succeed Smith and Costello. There seems to be little doubt but that the mayor will win out in the end. In fact, rumors were afloat that it is the plan of the mayor to build up a machine of his own now that would be

THE TAX ROLLS TO CLOSE

Time for the rendition of property for county taxes will end Wednesday of this week and County Assessor and Collector W. L. Sweet announces that the provisions of the law requiring certification to the grand jury of all persons failing to make returns will be rigidly observed. A new departure has been made by Mr. Sweet this year, the law pertaining to the question being placed upon the back of each notification slip. A similar plan has also been adopted by the city office.

MUSKOGEE VETERANS AGAIN ORGANIZED

Will Send Delegation to Coming Confederate Reunion in Louisville, Ky.
Special to The Telegram.
MUSKOGEE, I. T., May 27.—The veterans of the Confederate army reorganized the Muskogee bivouac Saturday with eighteen members and re-elected Colonel D. M. Wisdom commander of the bivouac. General William Gentry, commanding the Indian Territory division, placed arrangements for the trip to Louisville for the annual reunion in the hands of Captain B. G. Slaughter.
The meeting was at the city hall and was well attended. General Porter was chairman of the meeting and after stating the object of the meeting the bivouac was formally organized. Colonel Wisdom was commander of the bivouac when it went out of existence some time ago, and though he was too ill to attend the meeting, his old comrades honored him by again placing him at the head of the organization.
It was stated at the meeting that the ladies would furnish the members with certificates for them to fill out, and when they have proven their records the ladies will present them with the Confederate cross of honor. Another meeting will be held at the city hall next Saturday, when a delegate to the reunion at Louisville will be selected.

SCHREINER CONCERT WAS MUCH ENJOYED

The violin recital by pupils of Jacob Schreiner on Wednesday evening, May 24, was a triumph for both teacher and pupils. Remarkable progress was noted in the work of Misses Sam Montgomery, Sara Yeates, Stephens, Davenport and Gillespie, as well as Master Philip Lopp. The Handel "Largo," played by fourteen young ladies in unison, every bow, every tone seeming so exactly as one, that the listener might have imagined it was one wonderful instrument.
Outside of the beauty of such a performance, the remarkable amount of superior training and good musicianship required for such an unusual accomplishment is a source of gratification to the friends of the pupils.

Storm Along Rock Island

At the general passenger office of the Rock Island Saturday evening news was received of the rain and wind storm in the country along the lines of the company in Oklahoma and Indian Territory. While the extent of the damage done is not yet known, it was learned that the rain washed out considerable track between Fort Cobb and Mangum, west of Anadarko, and also between Addington and Chickasha.

Taft Discusses Delegated Powers

Says Congress Can Properly Clothe Commission With Rate-Fixing Authority

CINCINNATI, Ohio, May 27.—"The Delegation of Delegated Powers" was the subject of an address delivered this afternoon by Secretary Taft at the commencement of the Cincinnati Law School, of which he was formerly the dean. In discussing the authority of congress to delegate its powers to commissions, he said:
"Thus it is said that the function of fixing the rates of railways and other common carriers and of regulating the operation of them is one which requires the constant attention of a board always in session and which the legislature as a body meeting two or three months in a year could never discharge. In such a case it is assumed that the framers and the adopters of the constitution intended that the legislature should delegate this function to a smaller body created under a law of its own, whose duties should be limited to the necessities of the situation."
"The act is said to be invalid, because, instead of establishing reasonable maximum rates of charges, it is supposed to delegate the power to establish such rates to the railroad and warehouse commissioners and authorize them to make schedules of rates for railroad companies are not invalid."
"The legislature may authorize others to do things which it might properly but cannot conveniently or advantageously do itself."

NOBODY WANTS TO HAUL U. S. FREIGHT

Government Officials in Quandary Over Transportation to Manila
WASHINGTON, May 27.—The war department is in a quandary over the failure to obtain bids for the transportation of freight from Pacific coast ports to Manila.
Last year the Pacific Steamship Company made satisfactory low rates for carrying government freight to Manila. This afforded some of the critics of the army transport system an admirable opportunity to make comparisons of cost to the detriment of the army transportation of freight and passengers.
Lately the Pacific liners found it impossible to take a cargo to Manila and one of the transports held in ordinary was placed on the active list for the transportation purpose.
With the failure in steamship companies to send a bid to Washington it is quite evident that they desire to place the government on the same footing as commercial shippers.

Cattle Movement Light

General Live Stock Agent Galbreath of the Katy reports that the movement of cattle at this time is very light. He says he does not look for much improvement on present conditions for some time to come.
According to the annual report of the Volunteers of America, of whom Ballington Booth is the leader, the congregations at the 35,000 services during the year within the volunteers' halls and buildings reached 1,060,955 persons.

Old Paper Found
James M. Palmer of 1314 Rusk street, North Fort Worth, has discovered among a number of papers left with him by his grandmother in 1840 a paper published in Kingston, Ulster county, New York, containing an account of the burial of George Washington, whose death occurred Dec. 14, 1799. Kingston, then a mere hamlet, has now grown to a city of 20,000 population.
Mr. Palmer was born in New Port, N. Y., in 1821, coming to Texas in 1876 and North Fort Worth in 1902. The paper was among family documents gathered in New York.
KAISER SELECTS REFORM DELEGATES
Conference at Rome to Be Attended by Representatives of the leading Nations
BERLIN, May 27.—To represent Germany at the coming international convention of social reformists at Rome, the kaiser has named Councillor of State Haase, Dr. Roosioke, Prince Schoonach, Carlotta and Baron von Soden, representing the four most prominent associations in Germany. The convention opens tomorrow and delegates will be in attendance representing Germany, Austria-Hungary, the United States, England, France, Russia, Argentine, Bulgaria, Belgium, China, Cuba, Denmark, Roumania, Sweden, Norway and Turkey. The number of delegates will be nearly two hundred and great practical results are expected from the work of the convention. According to a dispatch received here from Rome, King Victor Emmanuel has followed the preparations for the convention with keenest interest and may be present at the opening tomorrow. The delegates will be invited to a state banquet before leaving Rome.
There are more new buildings going up in Fort Worth today than in any other Texas city. Fort Worth is growing so fast that no census estimator is able to keep up with the increase in her population.

CONGRESSMEN FROM MANY STATES PUBLICLY ENDORSE PE-RU-NA.

Hon. G. W. Smith, member of Congress from Illinois, writes from Murphysboro: "I take pleasure in testifying to the merits of Peruna. I have taken one bottle for my catarrh and I feel very much benefited. To those who are afflicted with catarrh and in need of a good tonic, I take pleasure in recommending Peruna."

Hon. David Meekison, ex-member of Congress from Ohio, writes from Napoleon: "I have used several bottles of Peruna and I feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head. I feel encouraged to believe that if I use it a short time longer I will be fully able to eradicate the disease of thirty years' standing."

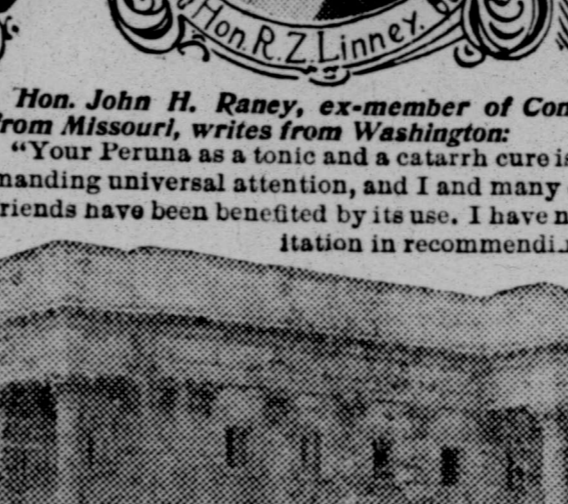

Hon. E. J. Turner, ex-member of Congress, from Kansas, writes from the Pacific Bldg., Washington, D. C., as follows: "Our Peruna is a great medical composition and should command the gratitude of all persons suffering from catarrh."

Hon. John H. Wilson, member of Congress, from Kentucky, writes from Barboursville: "After an experience in the use of Peruna as a remedy for catarrh as well as an invigorating tonic, as developed by the relief experienced by a large number of my personal friends and acquaintances, I have no hesitation in giving it my emphatic praise and recommendation."

Hon. Romulus Z. Linney, ex-member of Congress, from North Carolina, writes from Washington: "My private secretary has been using Peruna for several weeks and I wish to testify as to its great value and merits in cases of catarrh. He had as bad a case as I ever saw, and since he has taken one bottle he seems like a different man. His system was very much run down, and at times he could not work at all, but ever since his first bottle he has been building up. I don't think any man who is under a nervous strain should be without it."

Hon. John H. Raney, ex-member of Congress from Missouri, writes from Washington: "Your Peruna is a tonic and a catarrh cure is commanding universal attention, and I and many of my friends have been benefited by its use. I have no hesitation in recommending it."

A Popular Remedy. The popularity of Peruna as a remedy for coughs, colds and catarrh among the United States senators and congressmen has been the talk and astonishment of the whole country. Endorsed by Army and Navy. A Diplomat and consuls, representatives of the army and navy, prominent figures in many departments of the federal government have given unhesitating endorsement to the prompt and permanent relief afforded by Peruna in all cases of catarrhal diseases.

homes are supplied with it and the other members of the family take it. All Classes Use Peruna. Thus it is that the highest nomes in the land, the dwelling places of the most famous, have become the stronghold of Peruna as well as the millions of more modest homes of the middle classes.

Universally Endorsed. This is the only possible explanation of the fact that Peruna has received a universal endorsement, such as no other remedy has ever received. Peruna Excellent For Catarrhal Complaints. Hon. Geo. H. Latham, ex-member of Congress from West Virginia, writes: "After using it, I have no hesitation in certifying to the excellence of Peruna for all catarrhal complaints."

gress from Virginia, writes from the National Hotel, Washington, D. C.: "I was advised to use Peruna, and find it an excellent tonic, also a good remedy for coughs and colds." Hon. J. F. Wilson, ex-delegate to Congress from Arizona, writes from Washington, D. C., as follows: "I have used Peruna in my family and with satisfactory results."

from Nebraska, writes from Washington, D. C.: "I cheerfully recommend Peruna as a healthful tonic and a successful remedy for catarrh in its various forms." Other congressmen who have used and endorsed Peruna are, as follows: Hon. B. F. Rice, ex-U. S. Senator from Arkansas. Hon. L. P. Featherstone, ex-congressman from Texas. Hon. John M. McDonald, ex-member of Congress from Maryland. Hon. Robert W. Davis, member of Congress from Florida. Hon. C. W. Butts, ex-member of Congress from North Dakota. Hon. Willis Sweet, ex-member of Congress from Idaho. Hon. J. H. Bankhead, ex-member of Congress from Alabama.

On Tuesday evening after the services Mrs. George Reynolds entertained with a luncheon for the guests she was entertaining. The decorations of the distinguished body, Dr. Sampson of the Theological Seminary was the guest of honor, others present being Dr. Painter of Charlottesville, Va.; Dr. Setzer, North Carolina; Dr. and Mrs. Lyons of Louisville, Ky.; Dr. and Mrs. French, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. C. at Gainesville last week. But no one was regretting the gentleman's absence. They had with them other men who did not share the critic's views. There were addresses of welcome, one from Gainesville's mayor, J. T. Leonard, who believed in women's clubs and does not hesitate to say so. He openly asks them to come to the assistance of municipal officers in bringing moral pressure to bear upon laggards in civic duty. He wants their help in creating and beautifying the public parks, those breathing spots for cities and adornments for all communities. He wants the help of the club women in aiding officers in cleaning and keeping clear sidewalks, in clearing up alleys and turning vacant lots into gardens for the poor or education of the energetic boys and girls.

The reports of the clubs came from twenty-two delegates. From towns up the line, from Stephenville to the Frisco, from Colorado City and Cisco on the Texas and Pacific and from Stamford out in the Plains country, came enthusiastic word of things attempted and done; libraries established, school grounds beautified, the literary life strengthened and the social relations closed. The Wichita Falls Club has a member in a Polish Jew, who sings to them the songs of her people, and tells them stories of actual knowledge and experience of the conditions read and heard of, but not always realized by the fortunate residents of this prosperous land.

Glenn, who sang a duet Tuesday night and Mrs. C. H. Smith and Miss Buckner during the Wednesday sessions. These numbers convinced that Gainesville possesses musical talent that compares favorably with that of any city in Texas. Mrs. Smith's voice is a beautifully trained mezzo with great sympathy as well as power. Miss Buckner's contralto is of a quality seldom heard on or off the stage, rich, vibrant not in the least throaty and with a certain timbre that nature alone bestows. The little girl has several years of her teens still to count. All who hear her think at once of what the future should hold for her.

Swayne the club prize. Mrs. Triplett was given a point lace collar. A salad luncheon with dainty triumphs of the kitchen was served to Mesdames Wray, Moffett, Entekren, Roselle, Malcolm Brown, Bowtie, Harrison, Lyons, Glen Walker, Kern, Wright, Miller, James Anderson, Swayne, J. D. Mitchell, J. J. Parker, John Burke, John Winter, Hubbard, Ball, Stanley, Wynne, Triplett, Davis, Swann, F. K. Gwynne, Ivan Gwynne, Martin, Parker, Klieber Jennings, Randol, Terrell, Misses Martin, McCart, Markle, Littlejohn, McCarthy, Oxsheer, Connell and Swayne.

More than a hundred guests enjoyed the hospitality of the Country Club for the weekly dinner-dance last Thursday. This was the opening festivity of the season at the club and from now on Thursday evenings will be "open house" for the club members and their guests, for whose pleasure there will be epicurean dinner menus to be followed by music of the orchestra and dancing for the dancing folk.

Miss Bess Rintelman entertained the W. A. G. last Friday afternoon with what Mrs. Rozelle won the guest prize, a Shakespearian statuette; Miss Murdock the club prize, a cut glass perfume bottle. Miss Yalanchingham won the souvenir, a pompadour fan.

There are several things the Hon. ex-President Grover Cleveland might have learned had he been in attendance at the meeting of the club women at Gainesville last week. He would have found out that although the Texas club woman has heard what he thinks of her, she bears it with admirable fortitude. He would have also been made acquainted with her knowledge of him and would have learned that her fortitude was sustained by an opinion of him that lacked somewhat of the favor animating the members of his own household. The Texas club woman feels that what she thinks of such critics as ex-presidents and presidents offsets any opinion they may have of her, and goes on her way undisturbed. Her club claims her devoted loyalty and the good works of the club movement receives her uninterrupted aid. And most important of all the ex-president would have learned that the husband of the Texas club woman thinks that she is right. He encourages her in her activities and agrees that his home could not be better ordered and that his wife is the clearest and most generous of womenkind; that stupidity, narrow gossip and all uncharitableness is wanting, and that he is an unusually lucky man.

But altruistic themes by no means exhausted the entertainment afforded. There were a number of musical contributions that added charms of melody to the various sessions. A pianist from Weatherford, Miss Pattle Adams, set the blood to tingling with her brilliant selections from Chopin and Liszt, played with a technical distinction that is seldom noted in the younger musicians. Miss Adams should become an artist. Her achievements already are most unusual. The Gainesville numbers were contributed by Miss Buckner and Mr.

EVENTS OF THE WEEK Last Monday afternoon Mrs. Sharon entertained informally for a few friends, among them being the ladies whose assistance in her art reception recently made it such a brilliant social success. The ladies present last Monday were Mesdames J. J. Nunnally, F. D. Boyd, A. J. Roe, W. G. Newby, C. W. Conroy, E. H. Lowe, J. C. Terrell, S. B. Cante, Stuart Harrison, H. W. Williams, F. L. Jaccard, John Vaggoner and William Reeves. Misses Hogsett, Davidson and Saunders.

Miss Payton Gwynne entertained the Olives last Thursday afternoon, six-hand high-five being favored as diversion. Mrs. Miller received a hand-somely embroidered center piece for good luck and playing, and Miss

ORIENT SURVEYORS TO START WORK

Will Run Line to San Angelo—Fifty Thousand Dollars Bonus Has Been Raised SAN ANGELO, Texas, May 27.—The Orient party of surveyors camped south of San Angelo began work yesterday, having received telegraphic orders to go ahead, as the San Angelo bonus was completed. The party includes eighteen persons and is in charge of Chief Engineer Millington. They now give out their purpose, which is to locate and run the main line through from here south to Spofford Junction. The Orient contract, guaranteeing that the bonus would be paid the Orient when built in here, was signed by practically all the substantial minded men of San Angelo, 107 men in all, representing property to the value of several millions, and was mailed Thursday evening to the Orient officials. The contract guarantees the payment of the bonus of $50,000.

WOULD SETTLE DISPUTE

The late Maurice Barrymore, camping one summer in the Maine woods, made up one of a party of men who sought diversion one night in a nearby village at a performance of "Hamlet" by a barn-storming star. He was the one actor in the party, and was alone in maintaining an attitude of serious calm during and after a performance so bad that memory stretched back to the days of Count Johannes to find an equal. His companions gaped and laughed throughout the play. On their way back to camp, one said to Barrymore: "Cheer up, old boy! It was all funny that we may not call the 'wasted.'" "Wasted!" exclaimed Barrymore. "Why, I am convinced tonight's performance, had we the opportunity, make the test, could be used forever the Shakespeare-Bacon controversy. Wasted! No indeed!" His serious, solemn men led to companions asking an explanation. "Could we," said Barrymore, "Shakespeare's grave tonight, we would find, if he wrote the plays, that body had turned completely over."

MARGARET SANGSTER'S DEPARTMENT SCHOOL GIRLS HAVE THEIR TROUBLES

BY MARGARET SANGSTER. (Copyright, 1905, by Joseph B. Bowles.) This talk is for you, Dorothy, or Eleanor, or Katherine. It is not meant for your older sister who goes to college, nor for your cousin Jean, who came out just after Easter, and goes to parties. You are a school girl, and you are told every day by grown people that you are living your happiest days. Father and mother say so, and of course they must be right; they always are, but you have doubts. There are times when you would very gladly change places with girls who don't go to school, if only you could.

For school life has its shadow as well as its sunshine. In your school there are cliques. There are girls who get together and keep together, and shut others out. You cannot define or explain it, but it is as if a magic circle were drawn around a particular set, and the girls within it were divided by an immense distance from the other girls. Often there is one girl who is your admiration, whom you prefer to every one else, a girl so pretty, so lovable, that you are contented to be near her, and breathe the same air, but she never sees you; she is not in your set at all. Girls may recite in the same classes, have the same teachers; if at boarding school occupy adjoining rooms, yet never cross the unseen and imaginary line that separates one set from another.

Teachers disapprove of cliques and try to break them up, and mothers protest against them, but every school has one or more, with the Ins and the Outs at silent warfare, or haughtily indifferent to each other. The situation is a trying one, and the tendency to cliques a great pity. It promotes envy and jealousy, both bad traits in character. Wherever there is a girl who is a born leader, she has her followers. She has her caprices, too. Like a queen she condescends or she stands aloof. If you love the tones of her voice, and like the way her hair curls, and admire her dimples, and think her hats and boots perfect, you are hurt that she never sees you, and that you are not one of those who compose her little court. I know about this, girls. I have beheld the little drama enacted many a time, and I am sorry for poor Bessie who longs in vain that Queen Isabel should notice her, so sorry that there have been days when I would have been glad to shake Miss Isabel and set her free from her proud complacency. Queens should not trample on their subjects.

Another reason for uneasiness at school may be summed up in a single word—clothes. School girls should dress very simply. I am not sure that a uniform would not be a good solution of some school problems; just a blouse and a skirt, with gymnasium shoes and cap. There ought to be no great difference in the dress of girls who are about on a plane in their work. But once in awhile a girl's mother has fads, or is eccentric, and sends her little daughter to school dressed in an odd or conspicuous fashion.

at school, don't you? School is a world of its own. The new scholar feels this, and it takes her some little time to find out the laws and regulations that govern it. Always take pains to set her at ease. You were there first, and you know the code.

I was very much vexed when I was myself a schoolgirl, when an older friend put lightly aside my regret at leaving one school and going to another in a distant town.

"I have to leave my friends," I said, with eyes that the tears dimmed. "Oh, never mind, you'll soon find others just as good."

Others just as good! Every girl knows how foolishly vain was this consolation. I did find others, of course, but they were not just as good, in one sense for they had to begin and build up from the foundations. The sweetest thing about old friends, and it is as true at 14 as at 40, that they know lots of things without being told. You and they have grown together into a complete understanding that cannot be built in one day.

Girls, there is this about school sunshine, too, that makes it very satisfying. Books are unfolded for you. You are setting hold of new ideas. You are learning the joy of mastery over tough subjects. Nothing is finer than having a tussle with algebra or Latin or physics, and coming out on the other side, a conqueror. I am not sure that any joy surpasses this. The old concrete problem, the irregular verb, the secret that flies out of your sight like a bird, to catch hold of them, to keep them fast, to know that they are yours forever, to find your mind obeying your will, this is triumph, this is glory, this is joy.

More about it another time!

I propose in the coming series to take up a number of subjects that school girls will find practical. Perhaps I can give you a lift over some new place. I want to help you, if I can.

GERMANS TO HARNESS THE RIVER RHINE

(Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.)

DRESDEN, May 27.—A number of prominent manufacturers in the Harz mountain district have decided to call in an American engineer familiar with turbines, similar to those in activity at Niagara, to build a turbine plant turning into power the many water falls of the surrounding mountains.

The idea of utilizing water power is growing among German manufacturers, but, as in the United States, it is opposed by many, who object to the destruction of the beauty of nature. A plan to build a great turbine plant near Schaffhausen, at the Falls of the Rhine, has just stranded for this reason.

TYROLEAN FIREMEN THREATEN TO STRIKE

(Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.)

INNSBRUCK, May 27.—The united firemen of Tyrol are threatening to strike. Delegates representing the firemen of all towns are arriving here for a conference which is to decide upon the adoption of uniform demands, the principal of which will be one for a salary to be paid by the state in addition to the very meager wages they are receiving from the municipalities.

In case of a strike the firemen, when called out, will only do their duty when human lives are in danger, but will refuse to put out fires merely to save property.

Everybody is anxiously waiting to see what action the authorities will take.

ARIZONA CATTLE MOVEMENT

The movement of cattle from Arizona is reported light at this time on account of the generally favorable range conditions prevailing. A report from Bisbee to the Stockman-Journal says: Stock shipments from the country are reported to be running a trifle lighter than was expected at the opening of the season a couple of weeks ago. No reason is assigned, though it is presumed that the very meager wages they are receiving from the municipalities are contented to hold their cattle until the fall.

The largest shipments so far have been from Hereford. Up to the beginning of the week 125 carloads had been shipped from that point. This will close the shipments from there for the immediate present. Columbus will make some heavy shipments on the 25th, when several trainloads will be sent out.

Stockmen in the country tributary to Douglas made some heavy shipments on the 14th, 15th and 16th. For those dates one hundred cars had been ordered.

NEW STEER RATION

The Texas experiment station has been conducting an experiment with a new feeding ration for steers, the net result of which is furnished the Stockman-Journal from Chicago, and is as follows: A killing test on a bunch of steers was made a few days ago in which an entirely new feeding ration was used. The steers came from La Salle county, Texas, and were owned by T. J. Coleman, and were fed at the Texas experiment station at Bryan. The steers were given a ration of cotton seed meal and prickly pear. There were 20 head of steers in the lot, and they were fed 100 days, in which time they showed an average daily gain per head of about two pounds. But after killing it was discovered that the meat was lacking in firmness. Four pounds of meal and 100 pounds of burned prickly pear daily to each steer was the ration. Two and so ino passad 4912

F. M. Cockrell, Jr., son of ex-Senator Cockrell, is the inventor of a sugar cane cutter that promises to revolutionize the sugar planting industry of the south and at the same time to make its inventor a millionaire. His machine will do the work of more than a hundred men. It cuts, strips and tops the cane and is pronounced by experts who have seen it in operation a wonderful machine, that will mean as much to the sugar cane industry as did the cotton gin to the cotton business.

Join the New Piano Club

A $325.00 Hoffman Piano for $262.00

$10 at joining, immediate delivery of Piano, further payments at rate of $1.50 per week. A feature of this piano business is the forming of clubs whereby we buy sixty pianos of one make, in this case it is to further introduce the Hoffman piano. We get the utmost price concession and name an easy payment to members who enter. We have never made so good a deal; never saved so much. Good reason for it, we bought the stock on hand to further introduce this leading make of piano to Fort Worth music lovers.

It is precisely the same piano, case, action, finish and everything, that we will sell for $325 after this club offer ends. If it were not for our club plan, we nor any other house could afford to buy for cash sixty pianos of one make, even at a concession of price. The club idea centralizes attention to one store, to one piano, making it possible the prompt sale of a large number of pianos right on the floor, for we will not solicit members on the outside.

The Hoffman Piano is a fine, big upright piano, endorsed by the most critical experts in the country. It has a big, full, round, sweet tone that seems to sustain the voice in singing. The tone is pure and wonderfully resonant because of the immense size of the scale. It vies with a grand piano as to power of tone.

Every Hoffman piano is warranted for ten years, and if the instrument develops a defect it will be replaced with a new one free of charge.

What is a Ross and Heyer Piano Club? A concerted effort to buy and sell sixty pianos of a good make and style at a saving of cost and expense. A club concentrates attention on one thing and rivets a large share of the selling, for the time being, to that one thing, so it justifies us in buying sixty of a model at one time for instant cash.

A sixty buying in pianos brings the utmost economy. This economy and the lessened expense of selling justifies our naming an unusually low price. In a word, a Ross and Heyer piano club is co-operation merchandising, of the highest type, profitable to us through large selling and lessened expense; profitable to the club members through very easy terms and at very much lessened price.

No soliciting. Come in to see us. That expense of hunting you up is saved to you.

WANTS CATTLEMEN TO FORM A TRUST

R. S. Freedman of New York Talks of Proposed New Organization

R. S. Freedman of New York city was in Fort Worth Friday on business in connection with the proposed International Cattlemen's Association, which he claims will place the control of the cattle industry in the hands of the stockmen.

"The work this association will undertake to do has never been attempted before," said Mr. Freedman. "The fundamental principle of the association will be the application of a system to the individual cattlemen's business grouped together as a whole."

"The great packers' combine has succeeded in obtaining control of the situation from the fact that it operated on a systematic basis. This system costs the packers a great sum of money, but it pays well in the end for the investment. Go where you will, you will find a representative of some one of the great packers, in some cases it is merely a plain cowboy who is under the impression that he is getting a little better price for his cattle by acting as an agent of the company to whom he expects to sell. This cowman is supposed to tell the packer, or still another agent of the packer who will send the information immediately to the head of the concern, how many cattle there is in the country at a certain time, and the condition they may happen to be in, and when the owner expects to ship. Now the cowman does not think that he is injuring his fellow stockman, nor would he be, if he were the only one that was doing this class of work. But he is not all over the country these same reports are pouring in to the individual packers, and from these points they go straight to the head of the trust. Taken all together, the packers are then informed just how many cattle may be expected in a given time, and how many might be obtained if a false in the market should occur."

"This is the result of system. The packers were the first to organize and use it, they have been the first to reap the benefit from it. There is no one to destroy this system, it has a foundation that cannot be undermined. The only thing that can be done is to fight system with system. There is not a cowman on the plains but can tell you what is done when a fierce prairie fire is bearing down upon his home which is surrounded by the inflammable grass. He goes out and starts another fire, which in time becomes a second prairie fire, but traveling in directly the opposite direction. When the second fire is met by the first, it is beaten at its own game. This is exactly the same principle that the International Cattlemen's Association will use to counteract the effect of the great system now in operation by the packers' combine. The plan of the organization is to secure as far as possible every cattlemen in the United States, by buying the tens on the number of cattle owned by the member. As soon as the organization is completed it will open offices at every packing center in the United States, not only in the centers, but wherever there is a packing house, there will be found a branch of the association, which will keep a perfect tab on what the other fellow is doing. This association will know in so far as possible, just how many cattle are in the possession of the packers, how much dressed meat they may have on hand, in other words, the association will know what the demand for dressed meat will be next week, it will know how many head the packers will have to buy before they will be able to fill that demand or shut down their plants. In addition to the above, this association will know just how many marketable cattle belonging to members of the association that they may be ready to ship, and who has them. With this information, the association will be in a position to make the market price on the cattle, and when they have made that price, the members will be instructed to ship their stock in the quantities needed. This will make a greater trust than now exists, but it will be controlled by the stockmen, they will be in possession of the lines, and drive instead of being led. Now there is just so many cattle that will be marketed within the next twelve months. Every head placed on the market will be bought and made into beef. The market fluctuates only because the packers take advantage of the ignorance of the cowman who does not know how many head the packers have on hand, and consequently how many they must buy. If these cows have been shipped to the stock yards, they cannot afford to hold out and wait, as the expenses would be too great. The packer knows this. But supposing the packers would have to agree to take so many head at a certain price agreed upon in advance, then there would be no waiting in the yards. The packers must have the cattle or they cannot run. They have money invested, and cannot afford to wait as well as the cattlemen, if only the cattlemen could wait together and know when to wait. This the International Cattlemen's Association will know when to do, and will inform its members. Only the best men will be used to fill the offices in the association. Men that are experienced sufficiently that the system will move on under the direction of able generals, as that is the only way we could ever hope to down a trust so perfect as that of the packers of the United States."

MAN'S UNREASONABLENESS is often as great as woman's. But Thos. S. Austin, Manager of the "Republican" of Leavenworth, Ind., was not unreasonable, when he refused to allow the doctor to operate on his wife for female trouble. "Instead," he says, "we concluded to try Electric Bitters. My wife was then so sick she could hardly leave her bed, and five (5) physicians had failed to relieve her. After taking Electric Bitters she was perfectly cured, and can now perform all her household duties." Guaranteed by W. J. Fisher's, Reeves' Pharmacy and M. S. Blanton & Co.'s drug stores. Price 50c.

OUR LAY SERMON

"I believe religion is a good thing and I would like to be a member of some church, but there are too many blanketed hypocrites in the different church organizations."

This is a remark that was made to the writer out in West Texas once by one of the leading cattlemen of that section. We were discussing the moral status of the community at the time and the fact that there seemed to be considerable religious excitement and enthusiasm among the people.

"I believe religion is a good thing and I would like to be a member of some church, but there are too many blanketed hypocrites in the different church organizations."

There are too many people who profess to be Christians who are not what they seem. That is a pretty broad assertion, and may be challenged by some conscientious follower of the Master who feels aggrieved.

There are many of us who seek the amen corner and groan out a sanctimonious expression of piety and devotion when our hearts are filled with other things and we are scheming for some plan to successfully do the other fellow.

Our religion is that of the dress parade order. We assume it with the advent of the Sabbath morning and lay it aside with the passing of the Sabbath day.

It makes no difference to us that there is sickness and sorrow on every side of us during every day of the week.

It makes no difference to us that there is sickness and sorrow on every side of us during every day of the week.

Immediately put us down on the living tablets of their memory as editing hypocrites—as professed followers of the Almighty God only when we have a point to gain from a display of our religious enthusiasm.

It is things of this kind that are keeping much really valuable and desirable material out of the church. The principle of judging may be and doubtless is wrong, for the Good Book expressly tells us that we are not to judge others lest we be judged ourselves.

Many Texans are beginning to think that Texas should have at least one great senator in the national legislature. And we have recently heard of the wish expressed that Hog should be sent to Washington.

When that amendment to the constitution comes before the people, which has for its object the placing of a regular salary of members of the legislature, the people will take especial pride in giving it a kick that will resemble Maud in its fierceness and strenuousness.

There are plenty of real Christians in the world. There are both men and women whose lives have been thoroughly consecrated to the Master's cause, and who go about the Master's work every day of their lives.

Every indication is that the cotton acreage of Texas has been reduced this year. Reduced whether by man or nature matters little. The fact that it has been reduced presents the matter of most interest to the cotton grower, in that it

There is too much of the canting hypocrisy about all of us. We are too willing that the left hand shall know what the right hand is doing. We must learn to take more of our religion into our homes and into our places of business.

Governor Lanham is to enjoy a vacation on his ranch in Palo Pinto county for a short time, and after his experience with the state legislature he is entitled to a brief respite from the cares of state.

The potato crop is said to be a complete failure over in Northeast Texas, and roasting ear time is going to come late this season on account of the backward spring.

Candidates for congress are getting so thick down in the Houston district that it is feared there will be no voters left to exercise the right of suffrage.

Governor Lanham has approved the state banking law and permitted the new Terrell election law to become a law without his approval.

The national administration people are now beginning to talk about "moderate railway regulation and control."

The beef trust investigation at Chicago has already cost the federal government the very snug sum of $125,000 and no indictments have yet been returned against the packers.

The Bowen-Loomis engagement at Washington seems to be about as barren of actual results as an average beef trust investigation. But Minister Bowen still claims to be loaded.

GLEANINGS FROM EXCHANGES

Play ball and the world is with you; sulk and you sulk alone, for this old earth has need of worth, it has troubles enough of its own.—Denison Herald.

The world cares nothing for our troubles, and gives us nothing but the marble heart when we pour them into the public ear. The world has no time for any one but the man who does things.

SOMETHING ABOUT PSYCHIC PHENOMENA

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1905 by American-Journal-Examiner.
DURING the last few months the American press has devoted more space than usual to the discussion of spiritism and the claims of Spiritualists.

My opinion in this matter and upon the entire subject has been asked by many correspondents.
I agree with a famous judge of the Supreme Court, who remarked to me that proofs of the existence of the mind of man after death was the most important matter in the whole world.

I have never seen Mrs. Piper or Mrs. Pepper, both noted "psychics," or mediums. But I have seen hundreds of others of various kinds of demonstrations, and I have studied the subject for at least twenty years.

It is interesting to find such men as Bishop Samuel Fallows, Minot Savage, Heber Newton, Dr. Funk and Edgar M. Webster, a prominent physician of Chicago, all acknowledging a belief in the sometimes communication of the living with the dead, or rather the embodied with the disembodied souls.

There are as many classes in the worlds beyond as there are here, only there a soul's position is decided by its spiritual growth while here, and not by any material standards. It is rare indeed that a medium who gives over her individuality and self-control to the free use of the spirit worlds, receives, or long retains, a hold upon the higher class of spirits.

There are two methods of investigating this subject. One is subjective and destructive; the other is constructive and leads to mastery.
For any man to declare today that there is no such thing as mastery and absolute knowledge of these subjects is as much an evidence of blind ignorance as was the attitude of those who persecuted Galileo for declaring the earth moved.

As Florence Huntley has said in speaking of his book on the subject: "Hypnotism is one of the greatest psychological crimes. It is a crime to grab a man by the throat and thus force him to do your bidding. Is it not a greater crime to grasp a man by the soul and do likewise? Hypnotism is a crime against the intelligent soul of man, and deprives it of the inalienable rights invested by nature."

Many remarkable messages and a number of wonderful prophecies, afterward verified, have come to me from time to time; yet on scores of occasions have I been told the thing I was silently desiring would occur, which did not prove to be the fact. A round of the famous mediums at one period of my life brought me the assurance from all but one that a certain event I hoped for would transpire. It proved nothing but mind reading, and the event never did transpire.

I would earnestly advise anyone who is not in robust physical condition and not in the possession of a strong will, a clear reasoning brain, and a well balanced mind, to keep away from psychic phenomena.
During a time of very active investigation I learned the important fact that my own sense of personal responsibility and my will power were both being lessened by frequenting these places. I was unconsciously leaning upon predictions or being discouraged by the absence of them.

Added to this came the knowledge that it is of vital importance to keep our minds wholesome, our brains occupied, our bodies strong and healthy and our desires clean and normal, if we would escape obsession by unseen spirits and earth-bound souls, and if we would earn immortal life in a high plane. Many degenerate, if not all, half the insane, and many invalids are seen in the vision of obsession.

Dr. Edgar Webster of Chicago, has already graduated from the school of psychic wisdom, which enables him to deal scientifically with phases of spiritual phenomena. He is one of the knowers, who has reached his knowledge, as all real knowledge must be reached, but slow and patient endeavor, self-control, self-denial and study.

To scoff at what we do not understand is to brand ourselves vulgar as well as ignorant.
A violent wind storm which traveled over Berks county some time back saw fit to take with it an old shed wherein a certain blacksmith was wont to ply his trade.

"What argument is that fellow using—the one who introduced the 2-cent bill?" asked the railroad president.
"Oh, the same old argument, that it's an outrage to have to pay 3 cents a mile."

NEWS FROM ALL OVER EUROPE CABLED TO THE TELEGRAM

NO LOVE LEFT BETWEEN CZAR AND THE KAISER

German Emperor Displeased at Contracts Let to American Manufacturer and Gift of Liberty to the Poles

BY MALCOLM CLARKE. (Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.)

BERLIN, May 27.—That the kaiser no longer has the same feeling of friendship for Russia and the czar as formerly is plain to everybody and those near him say that he feels that his change of feeling is perfectly justified.

According to the kaiser's views Russia has not shown due appreciation of all the favors shown her by Germany since the beginning of the war. First of all, the czar has favored Charles M. Schwab with large orders for armor and guns which the kaiser thinks ought to have gone to the Krupp works in which he is interested, but even more keenly than this he resents the freedom the czar has already granted and the promises of even more freedom he has given his Polish subjects at a time when Germany is putting the screws harder than ever on the Poles in Posen and Silesia.

The way was paved for a better understanding between Russia and Poland by a recent meeting of party Polish and fifty Russian liberals, who adopted a resolution in which was expressed the demand for an autonomic Polish parliament.

The Polish delegates assured that, granted this, their countrymen would become loyal Russian subjects, ready to contribute their share toward the defense and expenses of the Russian empire. A high official at the meeting had an audience with Czar Nicholas, who promised to fulfill the wishes of the delegates as soon as circumstances would make it possible, that is to say, as soon as he could do so without having it appear that he had been frightened into submission by the acts of the Polish terrorists.

The effect of this imperial promise will soon become apparent, and it is safe to say that the days of violent deeds in Warsaw and other Polish cities are over, although there will, of course, be a small party of irreconcilables whom nothing short of anarchy will satisfy. But these will lack the support of the Polish people. This prospect of a tranquil and satisfied Russian Poland does not, however, please the kaiser, who is more determined than ever to crush the anti-German spirit of his Polish subjects, who are now apt to become even more troublesome when comparing their lot with that of their brethren across the frontier.

A high diplomat who is known for his intimate knowledge of the sentiments in German court circles has made a statement concerning the kaiser's visit to Tangle, which has greatly embarrassed Emperor William, because of the position the kaiser, who is more determined than ever to crush the anti-German spirit of his Polish subjects, who are now apt to become even more troublesome when comparing their lot with that of their brethren across the frontier.

The diplomat in question, who is connected with the Russian legation and whose identity is well known here, although his name has not been mentioned in the press, said when interviewed by a French journalist:

"One must indeed be blind not to have seen that Germany had intended to seize the first opportunity to show herself disagreeable to France, whose friend and ally, Russia, because of her precarious position in the Far East, was temporarily prevented from taking any part in European politics."

No one indeed who knows anything about German politics was ignorant of this, though, on the other hand, no one knew how the kaiser would choose to start a quarrel with France. During the month of December last year, however, it was known in diplomatic circles that, during a conference with an ambassador from one of the powers of the triple alliance Emperor William said: "Now the moment has come to humiliate France."

Several German ministers, among them the minister of war, General von Elnen, pronounced words to the same effect, and these words both of the kaiser and the members of the cabinet, were repeated so often and so openly by a bureaucracy which is known for its discipline, careful reticence and fear of offending its master that no one could doubt of their genuineness.

Before humiliating France Emperor William awaited the defeat at Mukden and then, satisfied that the ally of France was powerless for some time, he went to Tangle. The plans he carried out had indeed been formed as far back as 1897, and he had waited for the proper moment to carry them out with Machiavellian patience.

Russia had drawn away from the German frontier, not so much her soldiers, for there are still plenty of troops in Poland, as her rapid-fire guns and especially her ammunition. There are indeed at the present moment more than 5,000 shells in the magazines in Poland and that number is not sufficient for one modern battle. Thus the kaiser deemed the moment had come to humiliate France, first to achieve a success which would lend glory to his dynasty and get the necessary majority in the Reichstag to pass a law providing for an increase of the German navy.

The agrarians had been won over by the conclusion of commercial treaties and the pangermanists were pleased by the visit to Tangle and the naval program is popular in Germany since England has hinted that the English navy might well come to the assistance of France in case of a Franco-German conflict.

An amusing incident took place in the theater at Halle, in Saxony, the other night during the performance of "Fiesco." A spellbound audience was following the pathetic scenes with palpating hearts when the illusion was destroyed by a terrific snoring in one of the front rows of the orchestra. Cries of indignation were heard from all sides: "Throw him out! Shake him up!"

The sleeper, however, went on snoring so violently that at last the lights were turned on and it was discovered that the snorer was the chief of police, who slept with clenched fists and open mouth and shamefacedly sneaked out, cheered by the whole audience.

ITALIAN WOMEN LEAD IN BEAUTY

Marquis de Castellane Says Feminine Loveliness Should Make Men Devout

BY MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE. (Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.)

PARIS, May 27.—It must be admitted that when the Italian women start out to be beautiful there is nobody like them in all the world, and it is particularly in the circles that this astonishing beauty is noticeable.

I have just had an exceptional opportunity to judge with my own eyes the fact which I have just started in that magnificent hippodrome at the foot of the Italian hills, amidst the antique columns and the ruins of towers, where the umbrellas pinea cast their shadows and the horse races are held to which all good Romans, whatever their social station, consider it their duty to attend. I saw while there seated together in the same stand a concourse of altogether incomparable women. In the first place there were the three Bruschi sisters, Madame Bezzari, Madame Albonin and Madame Mazzolini, equalling the three graces in the rhythm of their movements and the softness of their glances.

Then there was Countess Pantofano, the glorious Florentine, who would have served as a model for Michael Angelo had she lived in his day. The celebrated Marquise Montagliari was also there, renowned as much for her inexhaustible charity as for the regularity of her features, and finally there were two sisters-in-law, both Sicilians, Princess Trobia and Countess Florio, such superb creatures that upon seeing them one is tempted to go down on one's knees and give thanks to God for having created such beauty. I speak the truth when I say that a country which can produce such marvels as these need envy no other.

I must not leave the subject of Italy without touching d'Annunzio, that celebrated writer who in himself personifies Italian genius. You should know that before becoming a great novelist, he was a great hero of romance. He began his romantic career at the age of 20, when he abducted the daughter of the Duke of Galese, and made her his wife by whom he has had two children. At the age of 39 he inspired the greatest actress of Italy, not to say the whole world, with a mad passion. At 35 he separated from Duse in a sensational fashion after she had more than once borne the brunt of his extravagances and paraded his youthful glory throughout Europe. He is now 38 and is about to be naturalized a French citizen and he has just married a first wife (a step which as an Italian subject he cannot take) in order to marry the daughter of the Marquis di Rudini.

To say these vagaries of his have been good advertisements for d'Annunzio in the French society is not true. The Italian strongly disapprove of his behavior, and he is not at all lauded to the skies at home as he is abroad. D'Annunzio belongs to the race of the great Italians of the middle ages, the Medicis, the Borghis and the Michavellis; everything about him is large, even his vices; he cannot do anything small.

During the three days which the king of England recently spent in Paris he lunched privately three times with friends, and each of them belong by right of birth to the finest flower of the aristocracy. Madame Standish, the Marquis de Breteuil and the Marquis de Jaucourt are incontestably the leaders of the highest French society.

This action on the part of King Edward has caused considerable comment. His desire seems to have been to show a particular deference to the oldest European nobility, and at the same time it is noticeable that he has shown a graceful tact and political intuition at a moment when the relations of France and Germany are inclined to be strained over the question of Morocco. His majesty has given our modern and somewhat hasty politicians a little lesson which is both clever and apropos.

As I have mentioned Madame Standish, I owe it to my fair readers to tell them that it is to this particular friend of Queen Alexandra that they owe the fashion of wearing closely set strings of precious stones held together by cross bars around the throat, a fashion which began in France and was afterwards introduced by other countries, but which had its origin in the royal dressing room.

The queen, who was then Princess of Wales and in the full bloom of her beauty, had nevertheless something on her throat which she wished to hide. Hence the fashion in dress which she adopted, a necklace for women. A fashion which was taken up and popularized by Madame Standish, who bore the reputation at that time of being the most stylish of our women. It is some times on little things like these that the friendships of kings are founded.

Young Count de Mun, last son of the Countess Jeanne de Mun, nee Princess de Beauveau, is about to wed Mademoiselle de Montesquou, whose mother was a Des Cars, and whose father was admiral of the French navy. This union, which seems the most natural in the world, between people of the same social standing, has given rise to a great deal of gossip. As Mademoiselle de Montesquou is one of the foremost heiresses of France, it was expected that she would make an altogether exceptional match. Now society, that is French society, which has a mania for marrying people off according to its notions regardless of their own sentiments, is furious that it should not have been consulted in the present case. Mademoiselle de Montesquou is descended in a direct line from d'Artagnan, one of the three musketeers rendered famous by Alexandre Dumas; Count de Mun is nephew of the great orator by that name. When they are married they can spend their leisure moments in turning over the leaves of some history of France. They will find that the names of their families are writ large upon its pages.

The so-called liberality of the emperor of Russia has not taken this subject into account. Therefore, if I happened to be a Russian I could pray to Jesus, Buddha or Confucius as much as I pleased so long as I did not inherit any property from any one. A lovely government that, and one which is so worthy of every mark of gratitude!

BERLIN, May 27.—This picture shows the new uniforms which are to be adopted in the German army, as both the Boer and the Russo-Japanese war has conclusively proved that the present blue uniforms of the German soldiers make them too conspicuous targets for the fire of the enemy.

WINDSOR PLANNING GAY FESTIVITIES

Coming of King Alfonso and Approaching Marriage of Swedish Crown Prince Cause Unusual Preparations

BY PAUL LAMBETH. (Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.)

LONDON, May 27.—The townspeople of Windsor accustomed as they are to royal comings and goings are in a state of excitement over the festivities which will mark the arrival of King Alfonso of Spain, the marriage of Princess Margaret of Connaught to Prince Olaf of Norway and Sweden, and the usual Ascot race ball and functions.

For the past week the coachmen, grooms and outriders in the royal stables have been holding "dress rehearsals" of processions daily, and the Windsor people have watched them with intense amusement. King Edward has of late added considerably to his already large number of horses, and many of the new arrivals are young and unaccustomed to state ceremonials.

In order to thoroughly "break them in" and make them used to a great deal of noise, both music and cheers, a small army of the wives and relatives of Windsor boys and girls, to say nothing of the wives and relatives of the men in the royal stables, can be seen every day standing at the top of the castle hill cheering and yelling, waving vivid flags, beating tin cans and blowing blazes on penny trumpets.

This "dress rehearsal" usually results in several grooms and outriders being bolted with or unseated, but this only adds to the general enjoyment of the crowds.

The approaching betrothal of the Princess Patricia of Connaught to King Alfonso of Spain grows stronger daily, and now every one is wondering why Prince Eitel, the kaiser's second and most popular son, has been paying a private visit to the Duchess of Albany at Claremont. Prince Eitel paid several visits in the neighborhood on horseback, and made great friends with Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck.

The Earl and Countess of Donoughmore (nee Eleanor Grace) took a long time to decide on a name for their infant daughter. The countess was in favor of giving the child one of the names belonging to her sisters, but the earl insisted on something really Irish and finally decided on the very pretty names of Doreen Claire, so the infant will be known as Lady Doreen Hely-Hutchinson.

The christening took place at a small church in Mayfair. Miss Gladys Grace, the pretty seventeen-year-old daughter of Mr. Michael P. Grace, of Battle Abbey, and aunt of the infant, stood as godmother, and Mr. Jay Phipps, who is now in America, was represented by proxy as the godfather. Lady Norah Hely-Hutchinson, the early of Donoughmore's handsome sister, was the second godmother.

The Countess of Donoughmore and the baby are now at Deal, a very quiet seaside resort, but she will return shortly to Chesterfield Gardens, Mayfair for the season. The date for the marriage of Miss Amy Phipps and the Hon. Ivor Giest has not yet been definitely decided, but the wedding will take place in London toward the end of June.

FRENCHMAN SEES YELLOW PERIL IN PHILIPPINES

Governor of Indo-China Declares Japanese Will Look South Should They Win in Struggle With Russians

BY PAUL VILLIERS. (Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.)

PARIS, May 27.—In a speech made at the recent opening of the new railroad from Hanoi to Vinh, M. Bean the governor of French Indo-China, strongly denounced the French press, which sees the ghost of the yellow peril walking everywhere and which already sees the colony lost to France and under the control of Japan.

Governor Bean, in the first place, does not think that Japan, if she emerges victorious from the present conflict, will direct her next attack against France but considers it far more possible to drive the Germans out of the part of China which they now hold, or still more likely that she will tackle the United States in the Philippines.

While the native population of Cochinchina is perfectly satisfied under French rule, the Philippines hate the Americans and hope that some day the Japanese will come to their assistance. Furthermore there are no fortifications of any importance anywhere in the Philippines, while both Germany and France are prepared to put up a strong defence in case of an attack, having built forts on all points of strategic importance.

"The French press, of a certain part of it," the governor said, "is worrying over imaginary dangers, and I cannot too strongly emphasize that there is no cause for fear."

No matter how strong reasons there are for criticizing our naval administration the fact remains that the French navy is the second in the world and that ought to reassure those who always live in fear of coming disasters.

"Let us, therefore, cease warning against the yellow peril every day. France is powerful, and let us not fear to say so aloud."

"French Indo-China is well able to defend herself against any enemy. For years we have prepared for any emergencies. The army of the colony has been greatly increased during recent years, and our fortifications are impregnable. Our naval defense has long been strengthened and the French squadron in the Far East is composed of the most modern types of battleships and cruisers."

"Our next move will be to fortify the coast of Kamranh Bay, which has figured so conspicuously in the papers of the world since Admiral Rojestvensky made it a rendezvous for his squadron."

"In a recent press dispatch it was stated that the Russian admiral had expressed his surprise that France has not created a French Hong Kong at Kamranh."

"If Rojestvensky has really made much, he was not informed of the true facts, which are those that the French government has long thought of building a far eastern Toulon there."

"A squadron launched at Kamranh can command the Chinese sea. The port there is one of the safest and best protected in the east, and permits the evolution of a squadron with bases as was often shown while the Baltic squadron was there, and it is easily reached overland via the railroad to Lou Blang."

KING PETER'S LIFE IN DANGER

Believed in Vienna He May Eventually Meet Alexander's Fate

(Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.)

VIENNA, May 27.—According to a letter received from Belgrade by a merchant in this city, whose firm has a branch in the Serbian capital, King Peter is growing daily more unpopular among the officers of his army, both those who conspired against the late King Alexander and those who would have interfered with the plans of the assassins.

Plots against the present king have repeatedly been nipped in the bud, and the general impression is that the rule of King Peter may not last another year.

The Landgrave of Heese is so enamored of England and more especially London that he is now looking for a permanent home in the metropolis. His Royal Highness is becoming known as "The Standing Dish," as every new hostess who is anxious to meet Royalty of some sort contrives to meet the Landgrave at a friend's house and ask him later on to her own functions.

The Landgrave who is almost blind, has on the average a dozen invitations to dinner a week and although he cannot accept them all, he has often been known to ask one of his hostesses whom he has been compelled to refuse, if she will kindly ask him on another night, which he himself fixes.

Thus the Landgrave who he is firmly established in London will secure free meals all through the season. He is a really accomplished pianist, and it is difficult to persuade him to leave the instrument when he is once settled on the piano stool.

Mrs. James McDonald was the first American he met in London, and she has more than once shown his appreciation of her hospitality by entertaining her at the "return dinners" which he occasionally gives at the smart restaurants.

From letters received by the Church Missionary Society from Japan, it seems that the severe trial through which the island empire is passing is finding expression in greater earnestness in the performance of heathen rites.

According to the figures compiled by the Publishers Weekly, the number of new novels and volumes of stories published in the United States in 1904 was 1,007, nearly 200 more than were recorded in 1903. The number of new editions of fiction published in the same period was 814.

SAYS GAMBLING WRECKS HOMES

Rev. I. Z. T. Morris Reports Decrease in Calls for Aid, Since Recent Crusade

Rev. I. Z. T. Morris, superintendent of the Children's Home Society and City Mission, in reporting the work needed at the present in providing homes for abandoned families, announces that a decided decrease in cases of this sort is being experienced since the closing of gambling houses in the city.

"The greatest problem I have is the good woman whose husband has deserted her leaving her with two or three children and not even furniture to enable her to keep them in a house. I can find a woman with one child a home. But with two children no one can place them."

"There is a woman now whose parents were respectable people and who gave their children a good training. Her husband had a good trade and made a good living, but unfortunately fell into the gambling habit and soon lost his position. In a short time he saw the condition he had brought his family to and thought the best way out of his trouble was to go away. She is here with her three children, almost alone in the world and no one to aid her. Being a good woman she had rather die than give up her children. And this is the last thing she ought to have to do."

"This is not an exceptional case. If you will ask the mayor, the city marshal, county judge and the railroad officials you will find that it is almost a daily thing to have cases of this kind."

"There is a place for everybody in our country and if one only finds that place it would bring relief to many. One great relief would be a home where the worthy, respectable class of poor people could go temporarily until permanent provision could be made for them. I have been wanting such a home, but the men who have money have so many other calls on them they do not think they can help now. It does seem a great deal for one person to do. Is there not one person who

BOSTON MILLIONAIRE IS AFTER OLDFIELD

H. L. BOWDEN.

BOWDEN'S RACING MACHINE, "THE FLYING DUTCHMAN."

Herbert L. Bowden, the Boston millionaire automobile enthusiast, who holds the world's straightaway mile record with his double sixty Mercedes, is determined that his chauffeur, Charles Basle, shall wrest from Oldfield the title of monarch of the yellow oval. To this end, Bowden has entered a Mercedes ninety in the Brighton Beach events. Basle has a track mark close to 53 seconds and has the nerve and ability to make Oldfield do his best, when his big German car is working right.

has a plot of ground or a few acres near the city they can donate to this work? Then will not some one buy the material and another one employ the men to build it? We have a number of men in the city able to do this thing. We do not need this as a permanent home, but as a detention home for a few days.

WHAT CITY PUPILS WOULD LOSE WERE SCHOOL TERM CUT

Trigonometry, Chemistry, Geology and Zoology Advanced Year Studies

PETITION IS CIRCULATED

Appointment of committees to circulate for signatures the resolutions passed at the recent city hall meeting called by the school children protesting against the shortening of the school term proposed had not been made Saturday afternoon.

It is understood, however, that the resolutions will be circulated during this week that they may be presented to the school board at the regular meeting June 5.

The tenth and eleventh grades proposed to be cut down are arranged as follows, according to the yearly manual of the schools:

Second term: Plane geometry, Latin (Cicero, three orations), geology (Tarr), civics (Peterson), physics, manual training (for boys), cooking (for girls).

English course—First term: Plane geometry, commercial law (Lyons), rhetoric, general history, physics and manual training and cooking.

Second term: Plane geometry, zoology (Packard), geology, civics, physics and manual training and cooking.

ELEVENTH GRADE Latin Course—First term: Solid geometry (Wentworth), Latin (Aeneid of Virgil), History of English Literature (Pancost), review of arithmetic, chemistry (Remsen), manual training (for boys), domestic science (for girls).

Second term: Plane trigonometry, mechanical drawing, History of American Literature, review English grammar and U. S. history, chemistry, manual training (for boys), and domestic science (for girls).

English Course—First term: Solid geometry, mechanical drawing (Cross), History of English Literature, review arithmetic, chemistry and manual training and domestic science.

Second term: Plane trigonometry, mechanical drawing, History of American Literature, review English grammar and United States history, chemistry (Remsen), manual training and domestic science.

New School for San Angelo

SAN ANGELO, Texas, May 27.—San Angelo will build a new central high school building during the summer vacation. The new building is to be of brick or stone, probably brick, and will cost between $15,000 and $20,000. Oscar Ruffin is the architect and has drawn the plans up ready for bids. Bids will be asked for from Fort Worth and other cities' contractors. The building will be a handsome one.

A HELP TO HEALTH Sick women cannot get well of themselves. They need a help to health. This help must be in the shape of medicine that is especially adapted to female organs, nerves and constitution. The best medicine, dear women, that you can take, when you are sick, is Wine of Cardui For all female diseases. You can depend upon it as upon a tried friend, for by its use, millions have been helped to health, and it will help you as it has helped them. For all the fearful effects of female weakness, such as backache, dragging pains, lame hips, dizziness, headache, nausea, menstrual irregularities, falling of the womb, nervousness, and for pains of every kind and degree, Wine of Cardui is a master remedy. It will cure you. Try it. Sold at every drug store in $1.00 bottles.

POET LAUREATE HAS HARD JOB

Literary Women Now After Alfred Austin for Browning Memorial Speech

BY SEUMAS MACMANUS. (Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.)

Special Cable to The Telegram. DUBLIN, May 27.—The families of Edward Rex and his nephew William, if not a little more than kin, are anyhow decidedly less than kind—to each other, presently. The other day the English periodicals were telling us that the interests of England and Germany clashed not, and that both countries must, according to all the laws of logic, be the best of friends.

The German press then went upon the neck of the English, crying "Tis so, 'Tis so, and nothing can us sever." Now, Admiral Fitzgerald, who is evidently a bit of a humorist in his way, has shown that it is the stern duty of England to cut Germany's throat as expeditiously as possible without showing too indecent haste; and instantly Germany—as is natural enough for one who expects to hear about a "sit gait"—goes upon the rampage.

The spontaneity, and the unanimity of this popular outburst in Germany is making England feel uncomfortable in her boots. The English press is nervously trying its best to reassure Germany, but it is not doing very well. The observing onlooker cannot fail to see that despite all statecraft can do between the two sisters, a wiggling match cannot much longer be postponed.

Poet Laureate Alfred Austin has been putting his pitch-fork into a bee hive. In unveiling a monument to Elizabeth Barrett Browning he in an unguarded moment told his belief that women poets, specially those who succeed—Mrs. Browning, were very small potatoes.

Next day a myriad of women poets were grabbing for his coat-tails that streamed behind him as he flew. Mrs. Nora Hopper Chesson pitched into him to the extent of a column in the Daily News, maliciously quoting some of his own "poetry," reminding him of the verse in which he declared that the British flag shall wave "inflexible as fate"—a kind of Brummagen up-to-date, copyrighted—of Brummagen up-to-date, copyrighted.

The best Irish bulls have ever been made in England, and the poet laureate means to see to it that during his life anyhow, the English brand upon the animal stamp him as the real stuff.

Mrs. Chesson, who is herself an Irish-English poet of distinction, instances many women poets of the present, or very recent, days, whom she thinks it is not sacrilegious to mention in the same breath with Mrs. Browning.

She says the poet laureate has evidently forgotten Christina Rossetti. Among other recent women poets of note, she gives the name of Catherine Tynan, Morrice Watson, Louise Imogen Guiney, Alice Meynell, Madam Darmesteter, Ethna Carbery, Alice Milligan, Dora Sigerson. It will be noted that the majority of these women poets are Irish—in fact Irish-American.

Mrs. Chesson says that "in form many of these ladies far surpasses Mrs. Browning, of whom Oscar Wilde said she would have rhymed man with table. Edgar Allan Poe also strongly denounced her rhymes."

The poet laureate, since he has become poet laureate, has had the ill-luck seldom to open his mouth, but he put his foot in it. His sixty pounds a year, but Malisey should really not be begrudged the good man. He earns his wages sore.

If there is on this side the pond any more abused man than a poet laureate it is an Irish chief secretary. I think the explanation in both cases is that when the crown exercise the most scrupulous exactness in discovering the man best fitted to fill each post, and then take good care not to appoint him.

Walter Long, the new Irish chief secretary, is already providing amusement for the nation. He made a speech to the members of a hunt club in Belfast the other day—a political speech—no other kind is ever made in Ireland—in which he said, "I am now a considerable time in

LAW WILL CAUSE BANKING BOOM

Measure Passed by Last Legislature to Be Basis for 100 New Institutions

Special to The Telegram. AUSTIN, Texas, May 27.—The governor approved of the state banking bill will enable the people of Texas to engage in a spell of deep breathing.

No measure ever enacted by a Texas legislature has excited more interest. Every day since the special session passed the bill and adjourned, the head of every state department has been flooded with letters inquiring as to its status, and whether or not the governor would approve.

Of course no definite information could be imparted on the subject until yesterday.

From the interest manifested it is safe to say that during the next twelve months there will be one hundred state banks organized and in full business in Texas.

W. J. Clay, commissioner of agriculture, insurance, statistics and history, is made bank commissioner under the law, who has the appointment of state bank examiners, and although the bill only became a law yesterday, he has on file the applications of more than thirty persons who would like to fill this position.

Colonel Clay will not make this appointment for some time, possibly not until September. The law does not become effective until that time, and then Colonel Clay wishes to inform himself thoroughly as to the peculiar fitness of the applicant, and thereby avoid any mistake as to the qualifications of his appointee.

The attorney general received yesterday the following letter from Ford & Berry, a law firm of Bryan, which as set forth, involves a matter of public interest:

"We have been employed by the executor of the last will and testament of G. W. Harrington, deceased, late of Brazos county, to have said will probated. We note in said will that among other beneficiaries named the sum of $2,000 is bequeathed to the old soldiers' home at Austin.

"We have filed the will for probate, and are advised that there will be a desperate effort made to prevent the same from being probated. We have no doubt in the world but that the said will is genuine and it bears no marks of irregularity. We are further confident that we will be able to probate the will."

Judge Claude Pollard, assistant attorney general, to whom this letter was referred, left for Bryan last night to look after the state's interest in the matter of this important bequest.

Colonel Harrington, the testator, died near Millican last year. He was a bachelor and a wealthy Brazos cotton planter. He possessed great love for the lost cause, and held the Confederate soldiers in high esteem.

BRENHAM TO HAVE NEW BANK. Trav. Dashiell, who was here yesterday from Brenham, where he had been visiting friends for several days, said there was a well organized movement in that good city to organize a state bank under the provisions of the act passed by the last legislature.

Henry K. Harrison, former cashier of the First National Bank of Brenham, and James Giddings, bookkeeper were leading in the enterprise.

Mr. Dashiell said the capital stock of the new bank had been fixed at $50,000, and the above named gentleman

LEFT $2,000 TO CONFEDERATE HOME. The attorney general received yesterday the following letter from Ford & Berry, a law firm of Bryan, which as set forth, involves a matter of public interest:

BANKERS CONDEMN HITCHCOCK'S COURSE

MUSKOGEE, I. T., May 27.—The Oklahoma-Indian Territory Bankers' Association passed resolutions condemning Secretary Hitchcock's administration of territorial affairs, declaring for single statehood and calling upon President Roosevelt to aid in the passage of a statehood bill. The resolutions came up after the election of officers, A. J. McCandless of Perry, O. T., being elected president.

BIRD S. McGUIRE, delegate to congress from Oklahoma, addressed the convention, urging the bankers to use their influence for statehood as the means to secure protective banking laws for the territory.

Danderine GREW THIS HAIR AND WE CAN PROVE IT. MISS MARMARA HENRY, CHICAGO. Miss Henry says: "Before I began using Danderine my hair was falling out in great handfuls, and I am pleased to say that Danderine not only stopped it at once, but has made my hair grow more than twice as long as it ever was." MISS SELMA HASSELL, CHICAGO. Miss Hassel says: "My hair would not reach below my waist when I began using your Danderine. It was also faded and splitting at the ends. Now it is over 34 feet longer than it ever was and it has regained its original rich blond color. I used the tonic about four months all together." MISS MARIANA HENRY, CHICAGO. Miss Henry says: "Before I began using Danderine my hair was falling out in great handfuls, and I am pleased to say that Danderine not only stopped it at once, but has made my hair grow more than twice as long as it ever was." FLORENCE RUSSELL, CHICAGO. Florence Russell says: "Since it has become generally known that Danderine causes hair to grow just as abundantly on the heads of children as it does those of mature persons, many truly marvelous cases are coming to our notice. Little Miss Russell, whose photograph appears above, is certainly one of the remarkable ones. Her beautiful hair is over thirty inches long and her mother says that 'DANDERINE GAVE EVERY BIT OF IT.'" DANDERINE is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, fertilizing and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful. IT IS THE NATURAL FOOD OF THE HAIR, SCIENTIFICALLY CHARGED WITH NEW AND GENUINE LIFE-PRODUCING ESSENCES UNHAIRED BY OTHER MAKERS OF HAIR TONIC. NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle FREE. To show how quickly Danderine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to anyone who sends this advertisement to the Knowlton Danderine Co., Chicago, with their name and address and ten cents in silver or stamps to pay postage.

The Cars of Service. A machine that will do what the Oldsmobile Standard 7 h. p. Runabouts are doing in racing across the Continent, over simply horrible roads—mud, water, clay and sand—is good enough for anybody. It excels every other runabout in serviceability, reliability, simplicity in construction and durability. "Old Scout" and "Old Steady" could never have got past Omaha if they were not built right. The price is by far the lowest for such wonderful and essential automobile qualities. Have our agent demonstrate this car to you. 20 H. P. TOURING CAR. In our Oldsmobile 20 h. p. Two-Cylinder Touring Car we built every better than we thought—for it accomplishes things beyond our expectations. It goes up hills on high speed that many $4,000 cars cannot climb, it takes sandy, clay and muddy roads beautifully—for there is really 24-horse power in its reliable Oldsmobile Motors though we claim but 20. Easy riding, roomy, beautifully finished—think of all this for such a little price. Olds Motor Works Detroit, Mich. MOBILE. Agents: Fort Worth & Dallas Auto Co.

A TEBEAU TRICK OF THE OLD SCHOOL

In one of the last games the old Cleveland club played at Pittsburg, the score at the beginning of the ninth was 1 to 1 in favor of Tebeau's team. The 7,500 spectators were on their feet when in the Pirates' half, with one out, Donovan doubled. The next man was called safe on McKean's low throw. Tebeau protested, while the crowd danced with delight.
Feinting to roll the ball back to Cuppy, whose back was toward him, Tebeau started for the plate, apparently to have it out with Hurst.
Donovan had a big lead off third and, noticing "Nig's inattention to the ball, started for the plate. When about twenty feet from home Tebeau tossed the ball—which he had concealed in his glove—to Zimmer.
"Maybe the batter ain't out, but you be!" yelled Tebeau in a voice that could be heard above all the din.
The things the spectators imagine are happening on the diamond and the things that do happen are often as unlike as olive oil and tobacco sauce.
Umpire "Jack" Sheridan, called "balls" and "strikes" in one of the great 10-inning 2 to 1 battles between Joss and Cy Young, but he couldn't please the crowd.
After the game, Young, Joss and Sheridan met down town.
"Didn't I miss a strike on you today?" Sheridan asked Joss.

"I should say not," remarked the Stat. "You umpired a perfect game when I was in the box. I thought you gave Young the worst of one decision."
"Guess I did," said Sherry; "that third ball I called when Flick was at bat."
"No, you were right," remarked "Cy," "it was outside."
And this was the two pitchers' opinion of the umpiring over which the spectators had worried themselves into a frenzy.
Pitcher Lee Viau, with Cleveland for several seasons, was an in-and-outer, twirling a mastery game one day and probably very amateurish one the next time he was in the box. But with the grand stand full of pretty girls, Viau, who was then the Apollo of the game was at his best.
In one fierce battle with Anson's team, the score in the ninth was Cleveland 4, Chicago 3. A Chicago runner was on third, two out and Anson up.
When the second strike was called on "Pop" all the girls clapped their hands and shouted, "Strike him out, Lee!"
"Who told you that you were a ladies' man?" snarled Anson.
Viau wound one around the big fellow's neck before replying.
"Three strikes!" yelled the umpire.
"Now," said Viau, "I'll answer your question. The same fellow that told you that you could hit."
"The outfield catches that the people in the grand stand think are wonderful and the catches that the players know are really wonderful are no more alike than molasses and quicksilver," said Willie Keeler the other day.

"In one game I played I went back to the fence for one hit high above my head, and caught it over my shoulder while going at such speed that I banged into the fence. The cheering was tremendous, but it wasn't a difficult catch at all, for the ball kept in the air.
A moment later a low one came whizzing over second. I darted in for it as fast as I could go, but had to take a long, flying plunge to keep the ball from touching the ground. I got it about six inches above the grass. I slid along for ten or fifteen feet. It was fifty times a more difficult catch than the other, but I never got a hand."
"The same thing is true of infield plays," said Elberfeld. "I ran over to second one day in Philadelphia to take a throw from the catcher. A mosquito flew in my right eye as I started, and, reaching second, I turned my back on the ball and threw out my right hand to keep the runner from spiking me. The ball from the catcher lodged in my finger tips, the runner ran plump into it, and the umpire called him out. You should have heard the cheers—for an accidental play for which I deserved no credit."
"Later, with the bases full and right-handed batters coming, I went in, played about fifteen feet from the pitcher, and by stopping two cannon balls caught two men at the plate and the third batter in first, but the crowd couldn't see anything in that to applaud."
"One strike," yelled Silk O'Laughlin when Chesbro put a fast one over the plate for Jesse Burkett in one of the games at St. Louis.
"Why was it a strike? It was away high!" called McAleer from the bench, as Jack's arm was swung back for the next delivery.
"Wait, Chesbro," said O'Laughlin, lifting his left hand. Then turning to the Browns' bench, Silk bawled:
"Do you really want to know why that was a strike?"
"I sure do," replied McAleer.
"Well, sir, that was a strike because the arbitrator said it was a strike. Play ball!"
Returning to his home in Ashland, Pa., after a season's experience as manager of Chris Von der Ahe's old team, Tim Hurst became reminiscent.
"It was a real good job," said Hurst. "My Mondays were devoted to telling the St. Louis sporting editors how I would win the pennant next season, and my Tuesdays to denying to the club owners that I'd ever made any such claims. Wednesdays I'd explain to the newspapers why we weren't winning any games, and Thursdays I would be fighting with Chris to keep him from firing the players all the money they had coming to them.
"On Fridays I would generally go out and get the terms of pitchers that no batter could hit."
"And on Saturdays?"
"On Saturdays I'd spend the day signing batters who could hit any kind of pitching."
Cleveland opened the season at Cincinnati the year Bobby Wallace became a fixture at third base. The first game was won by the Reds in a great 2 to 1 battle, but the next day, with Powell in the box, Tebeau's team obtained sweet revenge. In this game the work of Wallace at third was perhaps the most spectacular ever seen at that corner of the diamond in Cincinnati or anywhere else. Despite the intense rivalry between the

The Harvard varsity eight, which meets Yale, on the Charles river, has been chosen from something like two hundred candidates by Coach Wray, Harvard's first professional rowing coach. The Cambridge school was the last of the big universities to acknowledge the necessity for professional coaches in the different sports and did so when defeated year after year, owing to the ever-changing policy which followed the system of graduate coaching.

two cities Bobby was accorded a tumultuous ovation.
At 1 o'clock that night, after all the ball players were in bed and asleep, a delegation of sporting editors lined up in front of Captain Tebeau's room. One of them beat on the door.
"What is it?" asked Tebeau drowsily.
"Telegram from Cleveland says Robison has ordered you to release Wallace."
There was a sound from within of a man getting into his day clothes and then the door opened.
"Release Wallace?" repeated Patsy, whose eyes were still half closed. "What for? I wouldn't trade him for the whole Cincinnati team."
"For highway robbery," one of the baseball editors ventured. "He took three grounders today that belonged to Powell, two from Ed McKean and two more that smacked of burglary and larceny."
By this time Patsy was wide awake. "You fellows get out of here," he said, "or I'll call the wagon."

THE LOVE OF FREEDOM
There was an old darkey preacher down in Georgia, who refused to become ordained, but was content to remain simply an exhorter. This dissent appeared strange to some of his congregation, and one day one of his flock asked him about it.
"Well, it am dis way," he replied, "when you's a real preacher, you's got-

"I can sign a first class leading woman for you," said the theatrical agent. "She's had plenty of experience and has first class press notices. But she wants a lot of money."
"What's her figure?"
"Oh, tall and slender—slender, but not what you'd call thin and skinny."

AS WOOD MISLAID

BY AMBROSE PLATT

CHAPTER I. A WINDFALL.

HAT devil Franks, was the title by which I was most generally misnamed—never, be it understood, to my face. But whispers crept to my ears none the less, and the mirror was often held to my eyes in odd nooks and corners.

When my brother, Lord Devenax, was set upon by poachers and half murdered in his own woods at Devon, quits half of Lerdon discerned my hand in the affair, and I am bound to confess my brother shared in this opinion.

When Florence D'Apice so theatrically quaffed that infernal mixture of champagne and prussic acid at Lady Gravesend's ball, there did not lack detractors who scandalized me as the cause of her desperation, because, forsooth, she had singled me out to be the object of her most unwelcome devotion.

MY NAME IS MESSIDOR

to live hard by the gambler table. Devenax had always refused to allow me a shilling from the day I reached maturity, and a man must live in spite of Monsieur Talleyrand's assertion to the contrary. I vow besides that I never once cheated at cards in my life: I have certainly selected the individuals with whom I should play, but should I be discredited because my opponents were usually unskilled? They were not obliged to dice with me; moreover, they could well afford to lose. I have always made it a rule never to play with a poor man.

In the first place, the game is not worth the candle; in the second, it is impossible to remain pleased with oneself should one win; and, lastly, I have often noticed that if a man be poor enough, that fickle lady Fortune is very apt to smile in his direction. This periphrasis, but it might be inferred that a world so misinformed as to believe me capable of fricade, and worse, would not hesitate to brand me as a card sharp.

It might be asked why should I trouble to visit at houses where my presence was not welcome to all? My answer to such a question would be double-barreled. My equivocal position afforded me a peculiar species of cynical amusement; and besides, the house of every leader of society at that time in London possessed its card room, wherein gambling for high stakes was carried on from dusk to dawn. Sometimes my next day's dinner depended upon the hazard of the game.

my 43d birthday. I awoke with a racking headache and the knowledge that I owed Lord Francis Eveston the sum of 600 pounds, lost to him at carte the previous night. By the light of a penny dip I ransacked my possessions and discovered, after a laborious search, the sum of 3 shillings and 7 pence, had quitted the card room ably enough, and I am bound to say promised Lord Francis to pay the money by noon next day.

I administered another kick, which reduced him to servility. "Load once, my silver-handled pistols at once," I commanded. Richards evidently scented a meeting. He hustled about with sudden brightness, and in a few minutes had everything prepared. "Who is it this time, my lord?" he queried, curiously.

"Myself!" I answered grimly. Richards appeared surprised. "Eh! what, my lord?" he stammered. "I am about to shoot myself." I observed, taking up the pistol as I spoke. "Your lordship is pleased to amuse himself with me," said Richards, with pained dignity.

"No, my man, my time has come at last. I don't mind telling you, Richards, I owe Lord Francis Eveston £600. I have promised to pay him at noon today. To meet his claim I have brought 2 shillings and 7 pence. Under the circumstances, what is left for me to do?" Richards shuddered, and watched me out of the corners of his eyes.

"You may have my pistols for the debt afterwards, they will be for that." Richards commenced to blub. "Don't kill yourself, my lord," he entreated. "What would her grace say?" "Damn her grace!" I commented. "What would Lady Betty say?" "Damn Lady Betty!"

"What will I do without you?" Here the poor fellow fairly sobbed aloud. He was country bred—Richards—and I had never succeeded in kicking the heart out of him. I confess his tears touched me; they evinced genuine affection, for by such stretch of imagination could I consider myself a good master to the lad.

"You fool," I said roughly, "you will get along a great deal better without me. I considered here the advisability of giving the boy some good advice. See here, Richards, I went on presently, 'a word with you. You are growing in years now (he was two years my junior) and after my death you will be thrown upon the world. You have always appeared to be a fool, but you have one virtue—obedience. I am giving you final orders look to it you obey them. Never have anything to do with women; they play the devil with a man. Secondly, never die nor play cards. Thirdly, either jail or destruction. Thirdly, cheat each master you have according to your opportunities. In that case you will rarely be short in your wages, whatever happens.' I felt quite glowing at my virtuous counsel. Truly virtue is its own reward. I had never been quite so disinterested before. 'Now, Richards,' I pursued, 'you had better retire to the next room. I presume you would not care to watch my dissolution.'"

"I beg your pardon," I retorted sweetly. "I have never contemplated a deed of greater wisdom; but permit me to make excuses, you have me at a disadvantage." "On the contrary, my lord," he corrected my visitor. "Your hair, unpowdered, is of a very handsome color, your face is in unison, perhaps too beautiful, too finely chiseled, for a man, but the chin redeems it from effeminacy. And then that chest! My dear sir, you are a veritable Hercules." I blushed—I confess it, I blushed with pleasure.

"I am Lord Caryll Franks," I answered drily. "That information should also acquaint you with the reason that I have not a friend in the world." Messidor bowed low. "I am deeply pleased to have the honor of meeting you, Lord Caryll, while inexpressibly grieved to find you in such a circumstance, I am again much pleased that it is within my power to relieve your difficulty, and yet again grieved and desolate that I unhappily cannot help you without previously exacting a condition."

His words gave me a sudden hope, for I must confess the prospect of blowing out my brains by way of post-prandial exercise did not please me. "You are very kind," I murmured, "and this condition?" Mr. Messidor appeared to reflect, and during his meditation he eyed me with a glance that seemed to search and pry into the very bottom of my heart. At last he took from his pocket a small sheet of parliament, which he unfolded and placed before me. "They are damned traitors every one!" Messidor started back abruptly. "What!" he cried. "Nom de dieu, you—you—"

"I require you to subscribe your name to that document," said monsieur, whom I now decided must certainly be a Frenchman. "And doubtless take the oath therein prescribed," I suggested. "Undoubtedly." "In which case?" "In which case," said Messidor, "I shall have much pleasure in advancing you the sum of £1,000."

"I do not deny it, but you ask too much in return." "You mean that I do not offer enough. Let us say two thousand, then." "I cannot be bought, monsieur." Messidor again shrugged his shoulders. "Let me confess you are not unknown to me; your name was mentioned to me before my arrival here, and your antecedents, I know that in men's mouths your name is seldom but in the case of the other sex the reverse obtain—and pardon me, my lord, having seen you I cannot wonder at that; the question would exist if it were otherwise. With you I have been given discretionary powers. Join me, my lord, and your fortune is assured; my emperor will take your future into his special care. Within a month he will land in England with a vast and unconquerable army; you'll be a duke, and your England will be a province of France, as it was seven centuries ago. Nothing can avert the march of the man of destiny, nothing can alter his intention; already a vast army stands awaiting his orders to embark; already a great fleet is prepared to bring his troops across; already I have approached a number of your peers, who are waiting with anxious hearts to greet the great emperor. This oath of allegiance I now ask you to sign has been subscribed by members of your church and state. I offer you the chance of a lifetime—it were madness on your part to refuse. I will, however, be entirely frank with you. You can do the great cause a more intimate service than other men, and for that reason I am empowered to offer you the greatest advantages. You shall be created a duke, with estates both in France and England, and in the meantime a pension will be granted you of £100,000 a month. In exchange you will be merely required to use your influence with the members of the gentler sex, the belles dames of your acquaintance, to inspire in their hearts an admiration, even a tolerance of the great Napoleon. The emperor, the master of all the most subtle secrets of the universe, knows that the world is governed less by the mind of man than by the heart of woman, and he is prepared richly to reward those who by the kindness of Providence are in a position to assist his cause in this direction. More especially I am desirous you should gain to our side the duchess of Powers, for the will of her husband is her will, and his widespread political influence once cast in our favor will henceforth determine much. He has been approached by my agents and is at present wavering. I depend upon you to complete his conversion—by the method I have indicated. You perceive I conceal nothing from you, and now, my lord, your answer?" I listened to this amazing speech with the profoundest interest, unable to move or protest, so much overcome was I with surprise at the information disclosed and the astounding insolence of the concluding proposition. "According to you," I gasped at last, "there is a widespread conspiracy on foot to betray England to your emperor." "I would not use the word 'betray,' murmured Messidor; 'each of your countrymen who has joined us in the truest sense a patriot, in that each desires ardently the best good for his country, and is convinced that such will only arrive under the glorious auspices of the great emperor.' 'Words! words!' I cried hoarsely;

of the notes in a hiding place so cunningly contrived that I would have defied Liddock himself to discover it. At noon, precisely, I waited upon Lord Francis Eveston at his rooms in Oxford street. A dozen gentlemen were lounging there sipping a new liquor called whiskey, which was already achieving popularity by reason of its capacity for producing intoxication by express. A beauteous draught, I call it, and united to a most refined palate, excelling as it does, moreover, a noxious odor of stale breath.

Lord Francis, who was fencing behind a mask with Eberton Bailey of the Tenth Hussars, called to me over his shoulder as I entered. "I have been waiting for you, Franks; pour yourself out a glass of whiskey." Now it seemed to me that I was punctual enough considering the hour had not commenced to chime. "No, thank you," I murmured, "but please inform me the reason of your expectation. It is not yet the hour; do you permit yourself to suppose that I would fall you?" My words and my frown brought the fenching to an abrupt conclusion.

"By no means, my dear fellow," cried Eveston, with absurd haste. "Damn the money! The fact is I have news for you." I raised my eyebrows, shrugged my shoulders, and drew from my pocket six hundred pounds. I presume you have no objection to being paid in government notes," I suggested. But I was utterly unprepared for the sensation my action caused. "Good heavens!" cried Bailey, trembling with excitement. "Just as he said." "Good God!" gasped Eveston. "What do you mean, sir?" I demanded sternly. "Are you not satisfied? Here is your money."

But Eveston fell back and refused to touch the notes, and the crowd gaped at me as though I had been suddenly transformed into a monster. A thousand thoughts and suspicions flitted through my brain. A nameless fear assailed my heart. I felt I was trembling on the brink of a precipice, but I had been too long a gambler to allow a trace of my emotion to appear. "What is the meaning of this insult?" I demanded, my hand on my sword, and shooting a glance at each in turn. My gesture was unmistakable, and I flatter myself I can always assume an expression formidable enough to extort reason from those who know me.

Young Cavanagh, who had been eyeing me with open disdain, allowed his glance to fall. Somerset turned pale. Carew fugged at his elbow. "Better tell him," he whispered. Young Belmont swung on his heel, while at present only Eveston returned my glance, assuming that severely judicial air for which he afterward became noted on the bench. "A serious charge has been preferred against you, Lord Caryll," he answered, "and your offer to me of these treasury notes imports a certain amount of circumstantial evidence in support."

With a flash of inspiration the whole matter became plain to me. "First the charge!" I demanded, assuming my most insolent demeanor. "But Eveston fumbled with his hands and appeared anything but comfortable. 'Be assured first, Lord Caryll, that in no way assumed the charge to be true. When you entered I was about to mention the matter as a jest. It was only when you offered me treasury notes that the affair looked serious.' I stamped my foot. 'The charge first; afterward your excuses—and satisfying excuses, too, Lord Francis!'"

"If they are needed," he returned coldly. "A gentleman, introduced here by no less a person than the prince, informed 'There is my answer,' I cried, and dashed my fist in his face. He fell to the floor, but even as he fell a bullet grazed my temple and I staggered back half stunned. In a second he was up and at my throat, but I grappled with him, and in the nick of time caught his right hand, which held an ugly-looking knife. The door burst open, and Richards, trembling and white-faced, entered. Seeing the encounter the fool evidently imagined Messidor was attempting to prevent me from committing suicide, for instead of coming to my assistance he rushed to help the Frenchman, and actually tried to pinion my arms. However, Messidor did not know that, but thinking the reinforcement might be on my side, he wriggled like an eel from my grasp and fled to the door. With monstrous effort I threw myself upon him, swinging Richards off his feet, but the fool encumbered me with his weight, I fell short, and all I grasped was the skull which dangled from the Frenchman's job. The door slammed in my face, and I sank down beside it, covered with blood and half fainting. "Good Gawd! good Gawd!" howled Richards. "Say you are not dead, my lord, say you are not dead." "I'll show whether I am dead or not, you idiot!" I growled, for the fool's emotion aroused me. I staggered to my feet, determined to inflict sound and memorable punishment, but as I raised my hand I saw the first time the skull which I still clutched by the riband. At the other end of the riband swung a small case of green leather stamped back and front with a solitary golden bee. I paused, hesitated, hesitated.

only judge of the rest of the evidence before me—an expert—a remarkably expert, circumstantial and most rascally liar." A long sigh as of pent-up excitement suddenly given rein greeted my words, and with the speed of thought the gentlemen about me parted into a double line, leaving me standing between the rows. It was done with miraculous cleverness, like a stage play. I turned to inquire the reason and beheld facing me, with width of the room between us, His Royal Highness Prince George, leaning upon the arm of my morning visitor, Carne Messidor. Experience such as this, and the manner in which I was able to carry myself through them, have reconciled me more than ought else to remember with philosophic resignation my long, and I fear not altogether reputable, attachment to the card table. The professional gambler, his apprenticeship once severed, is par excellence captain of his features. I declare that I fronted my new trial with visage calmly imperturbable. If possible I was too indifferent. My lips parted in a pleasant smile. I bowed profoundly to the prince. "How does your royal highness this morning?" I queried in a voice that contained no suspicion of trepidation. The prince eyed me gravely, and barely

"Undoubtedly!" The matter commenced to wear for me a very black appearance, and I was not slow to realize. Of course I knew this French marquis to be an agent of Napoleon and no Bourbon at all. But he evidently had acquired the friendship of the prince by some devilish means, and he had been clever enough to discount any charge I might prefer against him by striking first and accusing me of robbery. I commenced actually to admire the man, but, as will no doubt be surmised, my admiration was largely mixed with other emotions. It was not long before I had resolved upon my course, and the gambler's spirit within me loudly acclaimed the determination to risk all on a single shuffle of the cards.

Slowly drawing the notes from my pocket, I made a low bow to the prince. "This Frenchman, your royal highness," I observed with a fine assumption of scorn, "declares that I have robbed him and states that he can identify the notes. Now this bundle of notes represents my weekly wealth, your highness will discover, exactly £900." Here I handed the bundle to the prince, who received them in astonishment. I proceeded with another low reverence: "As an Englishman, your royal highness, and a loyal subject, I place myself unreservedly in your hands. If the Frenchman will identify those notes by the only certain means possible, and correctly state their numbers, their numbers" (I repeated) "to your royal highness, then—I spread out my hands and shrugged my shoulders.

The marquis perceptibly changed color. "I am not a banker to keep the numbers of notes, but" (he snapped this out viciously) "my notes are marked on the back with a blue area." I was equal to this emergency. "The way your royal highness is holding the notes allows this fact to be readily perceived." I observed with a gesture of contempt. "I always mark my notes for luck."

This was a common enough practice among gamblers, and I could see that the prince, and in fact the whole audience, were wavering between us. I instantly made a hazard, the risk to me of which was infinitely more than that of my other lucky shot, but I saw one chance, for it was reasonable to suppose that this rascal who had tried to bribe me to betray my country must have originally been supplied with French gold, and mayhap recently which case he would not dare to touch the matter further.

"There is a simple way of settling this dispute, your royal highness," remarked with splendid nonchalance your friend" (with a sneer) "Messidor. Obtain his notes, if he ever possessed any, from some person or persons from a bank. In either case the numbers must be easily obtainable." "Good!" cried the prince, much relieved. "What say you, marquis?" But the Frenchman was biting his lips with rage. "Ah!" he hissed, "long before I can obtain the numbers the rest of my money will be gone." "Will your royal highness deign to accompany me to my poor room, where I shall have the numbers for myself?" I asked politely. "Sang de Dieu," grated out the marquis; "then you have disposed of your stolen goods already?" "It was exactly what I required for my speech. I stepped back two paces to deliver the climax. "Your royal highness and gentlemen," I cried in a clear, ringing tone. "I call you to witness how long I submitted, in deference to your ly possesses several names. Your highness has listened to a grave charge made against me by this Frenchman—" "Your highness," interrupted the marquis, very judiciously, "is it necessary to bandy words with this robber? Is it not rather a matter for your courts of law? I make the charge that this man has stolen from my person £10,000. From behind that curtain I perceived him offer to Lord Eveston some of the very notes which he this morning abstracted from my pocket; no doubt the remainder are still at his rooms. I implore your highness' assistance to save my property. Should not this man be placed in custody?" "Can you swear to the notes?" asked the prince, with some hesitation.

GAZAR ESCAPE ASSASSINATION?

Remarkable Precautions Taken to Save Nicholas from the Nihilist Bomb or Bullet—Seems Absolutely no Chance to Get Him at Present Residence—When He Travels

(Following is another article from John Vandercok, whose visit to Russia has resulted in a number of articles containing much timely information about the czar and his subjects.—Editor.)

BY JOHN VANDERCOCK.

Special Correspondence to The Telegram.

Everyone in and out of Russia believes the czar only escapes assassination by look and precaution. Most people believe further that it must be only a question of time when the determined secret enemies of autocracy accomplish their purpose.

Americans, however, have small conception of the extent of precautionary measure which are taken in the czar's behalf, or how he is kept almost isolated from his kind as if he and his attendants lived on a desert island.

For several months past the czar has spent almost his entire time at Tsarskoe Selo, which is a small palace, or a big country house, about twenty miles from St. Petersburg. Its chief security is the fact that it is surrounded by extensive grounds, the outer boundary of which is a very high and unscalable wall. This wall is patrolled constantly day and night by mounted Cossacks and by foot soldiers both outside and in.

There is outside of the walls a small town surrounding the railway station, but the inhabitants of this town are all, or nearly all, dependants of the palace, and when the czar is in residence probably three out of four of the population are dependants.

The only travel on the little railroad from St. Petersburg is by special trains bringing up officials or taking them away again, or bringing supplies for the palace.

A stranger traveling to Tsarskoe Selo by train is about as conspicuous as the Chicago Auditorium would be in the Sahara desert.

Nihilists, naturally, do not go up by train, but their progress across country is almost as difficult. Between Tsarskoe Selo and St. Petersburg are absolutely flat fields, broken here and there by stretches of sparse pine woods. Pine trees with their first boughs beginning high from the ground make the poorest sort of screen, and the constant patrols of soldiers and police keep track of all tramps and strangers who wander that way.

Inside the palace the czar has around him only his most trusted friends and servants. Stories about his finding threatening letters in his boots when he gets up in the morning and dagger and cross bones pictures on the backs of his letters are largely romance. The yarns are made up by the revolutionary committees in St. Petersburg and allowed to percolate out to the western public through Berlin and Vienna to keep up the impression that the Russian terrorists shadow the person of the czar.

When the czar goes to St. Petersburg regiments of soldiers are previously deployed along either side of the short railway. All other trains are switched off hours before he is expected to pass and all stations and buildings anywhere near the line are absolutely emptied of all goods and packages for fear there may be something containing dynamite, and until the train has gone by are watched over by detectives. The St. Petersburg terminal is similarly guarded.

When the czar enters his sleigh or carriage it is surrounded so thickly by Cossacks that he is almost invisible to the people in the crowd. Just before he enters the Winter palace at a breakneck pace makes it out of the question for an expert marksman to hit him even did he see him. In the Winter palace the precautions of Tsarskoe Selo are duplicated.

In cases where the czar journeys to Moscow and the Crimea the work of the detectives is doubled, but there is no distance too great to prevent the entire line of railway being sentinelled.

Probably the most likely thing which could happen is for the track to have been previously mined and then the mine touched off as the royal train passed over it by a wire strung to a comparatively distant point. To avoid a mischance of this kind expert trackmen are sent out. These men become as skilled as were the American Indian woodsmen. The slightest disturbance of roadbed attracts their attention, and they have a hundred ways of telling whether small things, invisible to the casual observer, mean danger or safety.

The present czar's grandfather, Alexander II, was killed in St. Petersburg by Nihilist bombs. He was driving in his carriage near the admiralty canal when a bomb was thrown in front of the carriage, which exploded, crippled the horses and brought the imperial party to a standstill.

The czar and the attendant accompanying him sprang from their seat and stood confronting a man dressed like a peasant, who for an instant held a bomb over his head. The horrified bystanders saw it all in a flash. And then the man brought the bomb down to the ground, and he, the czar and the carriage were blown to atoms.

In St. Petersburg a repetition of this will be impossible. In the first place, Alexander II. would not take one-fourth the precautions which the present czar takes. He would go to theaters and sit in his box, which the present czar never does. Russians so realized the peril Alexander II. was in and their own peril because they might be near him, that when he entered a theater every one else got up and left. Alexander would pretend not to be disturbed by their departure, and would watch the performance to its end, the terrified actors not daring to seek safety in flight.

All of Brandon, except a few houses occupied by those who have held their ground, has been bought in and added to the giant preserve—churches, hotel, school, homes and all, and only recently, as related in the World, the postoffice was removed to Bay Pond, where not a soul from Brandon dared to go for his mail. Thanks to the publicity of the facts, when it was shown that it was due to the complacency of a high postal official, since out of the service, and who served Mr. Rockefeller by summarily taking the postoffice from the people of Brandon, the office was as suddenly restored.

BULLET THREAT FOR ROCKEFELLER

Adirondack Estate Covered With Placards Warning Millionaire to Stay Away

MALONE, N. Y., May 27. "A fifty thousand dollar bullet will stop William Rockefeller the minute he sets foot upon this property." This is the sign posted upon the trees along the line of the New York and Ottawa railroad between Bay Pond and Brandon and far into the forest over all part of the great Rockefeller estate in the Adirondacks.

The threat is roughly printed, and all the many signs are evidently by the same hand. The reason for the value of the bullet is not understood, and no doubt a private conceit on the part of the man who seeks to intimidate the millionaire. The signs have all been put up within a week.

A hotel proprietor of Malone left here on Friday last under some sort of an investigation in the neighborhood of Brandon. It is said that he went at the instigation of Mr. Rockefeller.

DETECTIVES SCARED AWAY
It is asserted that Mr. Rockefeller has never felt at ease at Bay Pond since the assassination in February, 1903, of Orlando Dexter, the rich New Yorker, on the island preserve, not far from the Standard Oil magnate's. It is declared that he has never ceased in his efforts to detect Dexter's murderer.

At intervals ever since, it is declared, a number of detectives from a big New York agency have visited every part of this section under various pretenses, seeking to fasten upon a certain man the crime.

The knowledge of the presence of the detectives fanned again into flame the hatred against Mr. Rockefeller. Thanks to him, Brandon, once a prosperous village of more than 1,500 inhabitants is now a tumble-down, decaying place, with a handful of people. Those that remain are hemmed about by Rockefeller property, upon which are big signs warning them not to trespass. They dare not step aside from the narrow pathway that leads to the railroad station, and Rockefeller guides patrol by day and night to see that they do not.

All of Brandon, except a few houses occupied by those who have held their ground, has been bought in and added to the giant preserve—churches, hotel, school, homes and all, and only recently, as related in the World, the postoffice was removed to Bay Pond, where not a soul from Brandon dared to go for his mail. Thanks to the publicity of the facts, when it was shown that it was due to the complacency of a high postal official, since out of the service, and who served Mr. Rockefeller by summarily taking the postoffice from the people of Brandon, the office was as suddenly restored.

ENMITY TO THE MAGNATE
It is declared that every act of Mr. Rockefeller in recent years has heightened the hatred against him on the part of the natives, among which were several lawsuits against so-called trespassers, expulsions from the property and like harassments, and that the warnings that some one goaded to madness just as the slayer of Mr. Dexter was pressed on to a cowardly crime by brooding over an injustice committed against him. Mr. Dexter also had a dream of empire in the Adirondacks.

Immediately after the shooting of Mr. Dexter Mr. Rockefeller paid a fall visit to his preserves, but he lived there as in a feudal castle, and was never seen beyond the cordon of guards that watched for a skulking assassin. It is said that the same tactics prevailed last summer, and that Mr. Rockefeller could have found little pleasure in his great estate. It is believed that he may sell the property, and that if he does not it will be because he is rich enough to avoid the acknowledgment of defeat by holding on.

HOW LEON AMES JOINED THE GIANTS

NEW YORK, May 27.—One August afternoon two big boys, Leon Ames and his partner, were stacking the last mound of rain checks, while the lightning flashed outside, when he turned to confront a gawky young man who had just dropped a suit case, says Algie Sanzeau. The treasurer's first move was to shove the money bag into a drawer. He would have called for the police but outside appeared the sly-like figure of "Pop" Hegg, with his right hand on his pistol pocket.

The intruder was wet-dripping—a dreary hiatus showed between shoe tops and trouser bottoms. His hands, big and red, protruded from cuffs, garnished with Columbian half-dollars. "Right smart shower," was his first utterance, and Knowles' fears vanished. This provoking, no remark, the stranger announced, shaking the water from his hat: "Well, I'm the new Giant! right here on time; been travelin' all day. How are the boys gettin' along?"

At this moment Joe McGinnity rushed across the field to the club house and from the Florida orange flower with pollen to believe the Florida orange bloom. Several of these crosses were made. So far two promising hardy fruits have been produced—the Rusk is hardy as far north as North Carolina, Tennessee and Oklahoma. It lacks the flavor of the Florida fruit, but is much improved over the Japanese parent, and will be a useful variety.

The unnamed sort is of good size and excellent flavor; at present he cannot define the northern limit of this new variety, but that he had no reason to believe it will not be as hardy as the Rusk. He also states that the limit of hardiness will not be reached until we have an orange that will stand as much cold as the Japanese parent.

highness' presence, to this man's infidelity. He has come forward and gratefully made a diabolical charge against me. Shielded by the protection of my prince, this man, a Frenchman, and in my humble opinion a dastardly traitor to God and man, has dared to traduce an Emperor.

I started at my blade, the marquis at his. Your highness is surely mistaken," I ventured humbly. The prince appealed to the others.

"The foils are bare!" he cried. "One and all assured him of his mistake, and presently, with a soul-consuming curse, he sank back in his chair and shaded his eyes with his hand. "The devil take you all!" he growled.

NEW HARDY ORANGE AND MAN WHO IS BREEDING IT

DR. WEBBER IN THE ORANGE GREENHOUSE—THE JAPANESE ORANGE AND THE NEW HARDY HYBRID ORANGE.

BY A. S. NEALE.
The department of agriculture has a commendable way of doing things. It sees a want and at once starts some expert out to fill it. He is told to keep pegging away at this one line of work until he accomplishes something definite. It may take years, but if possible the work will be done. It is this believe that we may gather oranges as far north as the 40th parallel, or the northern limit of the hardest member of the orange family.

There is only one orange that is hardy in the north. This is the Japanese hedge orange, the fruit of which is absolutely worthless, being small, very sour and full of seeds. From it the cold-resisting ability of the proposed hardy variety must come.

Dr. H. J. Webber, in charge of the plant breeding laboratory in Washington, has the task of breeding a hardy orange. He began by fertilizing the Japanese orange flower with pollen from the Florida orange bloom. Several of these crosses were made. So far two promising hardy fruits have been produced—the Rusk is hardy as far north as North Carolina, Tennessee and Oklahoma. It lacks the flavor of the Florida fruit, but is much improved over the Japanese parent, and will be a useful variety.

CHAMPION BRUISER BACK ON HIS NATIVE HEATH AGAIN

James Jabemhard Jeffries, boss of the squared circle, also of the Realm of Queensberry, has been searching for health in California since announcing his retirement from the limelight. And he sticks to his promise not to let himself be used to romkage history, as established by A. Patti.

He, or his press agent, that busy microbe of today's public life, has calmly declared that Jeffries is able to find more worlds to conquer, has said his last goodbye to the upholstered mitts and will, for the next few weeks, spend his time searching for the health he lost after a week in Chicago.

No one has offered a reward, however, to the individual bringing back the lost article.

With the retirement of Jeffries, the only undefeated heavyweight champion of the world, retires. For the first time the title has not been knocked off the shoulders of the defender.

James J. Jeffries was born in Carroll, Ohio, in 1875, but no one knew of it until after the eleven round at Coney Island, June 9, 1905, when Fitzsimmons took the count after an engagement with James' manly. Then the public learned that

JEFFRIES CAMPING ON HEALTH'S TRAIL.

Once in a while a sledge would sily and drop him on the jaw or in the stomach. Frequent recurrences toughened him until he became almost bullet proof.

At intervals ever since, it is declared, a number of detectives from a big New York agency have visited every part of this section under various pretenses, seeking to fasten upon a certain man the crime.

Although any boy hereabouts could give the name of the man who committed the deed, nothing has come of the quests of the many detectives.

The knowledge of the presence of the detectives fanned again into flame the hatred against Mr. Rockefeller. Thanks to him, Brandon, once a prosperous village of more than 1,500 inhabitants is now a tumble-down, decaying place, with a handful of people. Those that remain are hemmed about by Rockefeller property, upon which are big signs warning them not to trespass.

Carroll occupied a spot upon the classic surface of the state to which all great men manage to trace their nativity.

While training for his fight at Carson City with Fitzsimmons, Jim Corbett, then champion, wanted a husky sparring partner, and some kindly meaning but unsophisticated friend sent the boilermaker to the camp.

Used to stopping sledges with his anatomy, the love taps landed upon his frame by "Gentleman Jim" made Jeffries laugh. He asked if a champion couldn't hit hard enough to hurt, and when he found that Corbett was giving him the best in his locker he determined to become champion himself.

Having learned the rudiments of the shop, Jim stopped pieces of falling metal. Once in a while a sledge would sily and drop him on the jaw or in the stomach. Frequent recurrences toughened him until he became almost bullet proof.

game. Jeff put it to use by beating three heavyweights, including Choyinski, and drawing with Iuhlin, before the year passed.

This was in 1897. Next year he beat Peter Jackson, Joe Goddard, Pete Everett, Tom Sharkey and Bog Armstrong.

Then he was ready for the title, and took it away from Fitzsimmons at Coney by the sea. Later he fought a terrific battle with Sharkey at the same place. He has had eight fights since then, the longest being twenty-three rounds, with Corbett at Coney Island.

Men being unable to knock him out, Jeffries succumbed to illness. He has gone back to the hills around Harbin Springs, where, following his favorite pastime, he will try to regain perfect physical condition once more.

HOW JAPS WORK AND LIVE IN OMAHA, NEB.

THERE ARE 160 OF THEM IN OMAHA, WHO WENT THERE TO BREAK A STRIKE, AND THEY EXIST ON A COMMUNITY PLAN.

Special Correspondence of The Telegram.
OMAHA, Neb., May 25.—Japanese were imported from states further west last year to take the place of strikers in the packing plants. They number 160 and they receive the same wages as other workmen. While they are quick to learn and very industrious, they are no match for the American in skill and capacity for work. They live in South Omaha.

Konda looks after the interests of the Japs who work in the packing houses. He acts as their bookkeeper, to see that they are fully paid for their work. He is also their purchasing agent to the extent that he buys large quantities of wearing apparel at wholesale, when requested to do so, and gives it to the individuals at the actual cost price.

A hostile view of this addition of the clever Orientals to the industrial population is thus stated by W. J. Nagie, a prominent member of the Retail Merchants' Association:

"The first floor is used as a dining room and the second for sleeping apartments. Each Jap sleeps in a cot fitted with the cleanest of bedding. The cots are arranged in rows the entire length of the building.

"The Japanese are no good to the merchants of South Omaha. They buy nothing here and they are driving good men of families out of town. Many of our best laborers have been idle ever since the strike, because of the importation of the Japs.

The ranges, dishes, tables and all kitchen furniture are the property of the Cudahy Company. Okajima and Konda pay the company $100 a month rent for the use of the building and contents. The meals range in price from 15 cents to 20 cents.

"There is not one among our number who does not bathe at least once a day. Many of them bathe twice each day. Not one would think of going to bed without first taking a bath.

Sixty-five of the Japs live at the Japanese Club. A few months ago the club house was raided by the police and several Japanese were arrested for gambling. Some weeks later a crowd of Japs from the Cudahy camp went to the club house to enjoy an evening's sport with cards. It ended in a free-for-all fight in which knives and a gun were used. Only one Jap was badly injured, and he recovered.

"No Jap unions. We have no labor unions among our people. We receive the same wages that others are paid for performing the same kind of work."

"I expect to become a naturalized citizen of this country. Many of our colony have wives in Japan, and while some will return home before many years, others will send for their wives and children. The Japanese like this country and the people."

Konda speaks and writes the English language. He is a graduate of the Imperial University of Tokio. He has the politeness and general bearing of a polished gentleman.

ADMIRAL BIRILEFF.

He has been placed in supreme command of both land and naval Russian forces at Vladivostok, which the Japs will attack next.
