

OFFERS CURE FOR INSURANCE ILLS

Mr. Clay Recommends Reorganization

WON'T CANCEL PERMITS

Says Interests of Policy Holders Would Not Be Furthered.

Governor Approves

Special to The Telegram.

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 14.—The governor this afternoon made public the report of Insurance Commissioner Clay on his investigation of the New York Life and other insurance companies while in New York last month.

As forecast in these dispatches, about ten days ago, Commissioner Clay does not think it would be to the benefit of the interests of policyholders to cancel the permit of three companies mentioned in his report at present. The full text of Commissioner Clay's report follows: "To his excellency, S. W. T. Lanham, Governor.

"Dear Sir—Complying with your instructions I submit the following observations upon the disclosures concerning the life insurance companies, as revealed to the legislative investigating committee engaged in the investigation as to the condition of said companies.

"These observations are based in part upon my personal inquiry, partly from consultation with officials of state insurance departments, and partly upon reports in the public press.

"Only the companies which have received any special consideration; The New York Life, the Mutual Life of New York and the Equitable Life of the United States.

"The inquiry relates to only two phases of the business of these companies—solvency and management. There are other and very important features relative to life insurance business in my report for the year ending Aug. 31, 1905.

Believes Companies Solvent

"After consultation with the insurance commissioners of more than thirty states, with the deputy insurance superintendent of the state of New York, the home state of the companies mentioned, with a number of the executives of the state departments of insurance now engaged in examination of one of these companies; with a representative expert accountant engaged in thorough examination of the books of another, I am led to believe that each of the three companies mentioned is solvent, and fully able to meet every valid claim against it. I have not heard, nor have I noted any press report suggesting as to the solvency of any one of these companies.

"In one particular, however, the policyholders are doomed to disappointment. That is the dividends which they should reasonably expect.

"This, however, is nothing new, as the settlements made by these three companies have for several years past been far below expectations.

"When the conduct of the management, as revealed in the investigation now in progress, is taken into consideration no one can be surprised at the reduced and continually reducing dividends. The disclosures made as to the management of these companies is most astounding, and reveals shameless and reckless exploitation of the funds. It does not appear that they in charge of these funds have considered that they were expected to give an account to any other than themselves, and then only in matters of aroused memory—no record in many instances ever having been made of large sums appropriated or expended for purposes, at least, questionable.

"It appears that the management of the Equitable, and the present management of the New York Life and the Mutual Life of New York, maladministration, personal gain, recklessness and shameful profligacy of trust reposed in the officials have been the general rule of conduct.

Would Warn Policyholders

"I submit the following recommendations: "Policyholders should be warned as to their condition and every effort made to bring them to the attention of their individual responsibility. These companies are mutual, and supposed to be property of the policyholders. All of their assets belong to the members thereof. Policyholders should bring all pressure possible to bear to force reorganization of the companies and the prosecution of officers guilty of maladministration and a restitution of their part of the funds which have been so outrageously and shamelessly dissipated.

"All interested parties should use every effort to bring about legislation to bring to the attention of the public the ability of officers of life insurance companies to exploit savings insured—representing in many instances all that has been accumulated by the individual for the benefit of his posterity.

"I do not believe the interest of policyholders in this state would be subserved by precipitate action or summary revocation of the permits to do business already granted to these companies for current year (which permits expire Dec. 31 next).

Wants Reorganization

"The investigation now being conducted in the city of New York shows most reckless and profligate disregard for the rights of the policyholders by these companies, but despite the reprehensible action on the part of the officials there is nothing to indicate that companies are insolvent. However, there is no knowing what further disclosures may be made or what steps will be taken to force the proper management of the business interests of these companies. It seems that as is being done in the Equitable, and that the state and the state government should do everything legal and within its power to accomplish this result. What can be done to this end can be determined by what will be done by the New York authorities now conducting the investigations. I believe that due notice should be

President Asked to Investigate Charges Against Him

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 14.—The President has been asked to investigate charges against Governor Brady of Alaska. He is said to have been instrumental in inducing purchasers to invest in what was not a legitimate property.

erved upon all companies that they must enter this state with clean hands and honest management. I believe investigation will result in such revelations as to the weakness and danger of the present methods of conducting insurance business as will induce our law makers to enact laws which will render a recurrence of conditions revealed by the present investigation well nigh impossible.

Respectfully submitted, "W. J. CLAY, Commissioner."

Commissioner Clay also stated that three companies mentioned in the report were the property of policyholders in Texas, and with permits of these companies cancelled all supervision by insurance department would be withdrawn and all protection afforded by the department abandoned.

Governor Cullum said, after reading the report of Commissioner Clay: "Pending the investigation by the New York authorities and until the results are definitely shown and appropriate action taken, it does not seem advisable to arbitrarily revoke the permits heretofore granted to these companies to do business in Texas, especially in the absence of proved insolvency.

"By the time the present permits expire (Dec. 31) we will be better prepared to determine the course to be taken by the state of Texas. The whole subject will come up when applications for the renewal of permits to operate in Texas shall be made. In the meantime it is not probable that the interests of policyholders in Texas would be promoted or any useful purpose subserved by immediate cancellation of the authority of these companies to do business in this state. The flagrant mismanagement and dishonest practices already disclosed upon the part of officials deserve the extreme condemnation of all good people and it is to be hoped that punishment will be visited upon the offenders.

"It now seems that complete reorganization of these companies and placing the conduct of their affairs in the hands of capable and honest men are indispensable to their retaining public confidence and should be considered immediately after sentence is passed in this case.

"Whatever can be done to remedy the existing situation and to secure satisfactory results for the future will receive our hearty approval and earnest co-operation."

NEW YORK GIANTS WORLD CHAMPIONS

Win Fourth Game of Series With Philadelphia

MATTHEWSON IN BOX

BY SAM CRANE

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Oct. 14.—Muggsy McGraw's Giants are the champion ball tossers of the world. For the fourth time in five games they beat the American League Athletics of Philadelphia. This time it was by a score of 2 to 0. It was Bender, the Indian pitcher, who, of all the other Athletic pitchers, had made the best showing against the Giants, who handed McGraw and his splendid players the championship of the world. Twice in the fifth inning and once in the eighth he gave men their bases on balls. And this placed him in the position in the fifth where a long sacrifice fly sent in a run and in the eighth inning it was a bunt fumbled for an instant, sent Matty Matthewson in to pitch, and the game must have been a proud one for him.

"Matty" the Greatest Pitcher

"Matty" stands as the Athletics' conqueror and the greatest pitcher in the world today. The defeated team, however, played splendidly. They made as many hits as did the New York world champions. Each team made five hits. The Giants made two errors.

"Matty" made both of them, but they cost him nothing. It was the fluttering of Bender's nervous arm in the fifth and eighth innings of the game that, above all other things, caused the defeat of the Athletics. The cyclone of cheering that aroused at the end of the game can well be imagined. Hats and cushions went in the air and the crowd carried the champion Giants off the field on their shoulders.

With a record breaking attendance the fifth game of the world's championship series of seven games began today with the Athletics up against a desperate proposition. They were up against Matthewson and they were up against the absolute necessity of winning this game or losing all hope of the championship of the world. Undoubtedly they planned to play the game of their life as an object lesson. They put Bender, the great Bender, the Indian, in the box as the only man of their twirling staff that seemed able to wage war against their opponents.

Athletics Start With Hit

The Athletics led off with a hit, it came from Hartel and Dahlen could not get it. But Loe sent out a flailing bunt. Bresnahan got one and handled it in a jiffy and next Devlin had gathered in a little bonner and nipped Hartel at second. Then Bert saw that Love Cross' shooter did no harm. The Giants did not last long themselves in this inning. Bresnahan, Browne and Donlin only managed to punch out dawdling balls from the Indians' delivery and these were all properly gathered so that no New Yorker saw the first bag. The Athletics touched Matthewson up twice in the second inning, but Bresnahan and Gilbert were right there to knock off

HUSBAND'S BOND $500

Is Accused of Shooting Man for Writing to His Wife

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 14.—Without accident or complication, Mitchell Rissie, was shot down last night, it is alleged, by Ed L. Benson. He will recover within a few weeks. No time has been set yet for the preliminary hearing of Ed Benson, the accused. It is alleged that Rissie sent a note to Mrs. Benson and attempted to arrange an engagement. That the woman promptly handed the note to her husband and that he repaired to the appointed place. At the instant Rissie appeared he was made the target for a pair of bullets. Benson was released on an appearance bond of $500.

GIRL BURNS TO DEATH

Lamp by Which She Was Studying Exploded

CUREO, Texas, Oct. 14.—Frankie, 15-year-old daughter of J. F. Salisbury, an engineer on the Southern Pacific, was burned to death by the explosion of a kerosene lamp while engaged in studying her lessons by the light of a hanging lamp. When the light began to flare she grabbed it, intending to throw it out, but the door was locked. She then started for another door, but before she could reach it the lamp exploded in her hands, the burning oil covering her. She ran into the yard a mass of flames.

HONEYMOON HELD UP

Man Arrested When Starting on Bridal Trip

YOAKUM, Texas, Oct. 14.—Sheriff Noble was here yesterday and got Frank Kucera, whom City Marshal Burkett of Shiner had arrested on a charge of bigamy. Kucera and his wife were leaving for Europe on their honeymoon. The reported wife No. 1 is in Galveston, where divorce proceedings are pending.

TROOPS ARE WITHDRAWN

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 14.—Adjutant General Hulen this afternoon issued an order withdrawing the remainder of the militia from Edna and from now on only two rangers will be on guard there to protect Monk Gibson, although everything is quiet and there does not seem to be any likelihood of trouble. The detachment of rangers will be under the command of Captain McDonald. General Hulen said that he did not think the presence of the troops was necessary at Edna at present.

Habeas Corpus Hearing of Men Charged With Obstructing Track at San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Oct. 14.—Theodore Jurasek and Emil Morowitz, charged with murder and obstructing railway track in the wreck of the Davy Crockett train Sept. 16, had a habeas corpus hearing today. A bond of $5,000 each in the murder case and $500 in the obstruction case was set. They will apply for a reduction of bail. Judge Dwyer, on motion of defendant's counsel, ordered District Attorney Baker to disclose to the defendants' counsel the names of all state witnesses in the case. It is the first procedure of this kind on record.

NO INDICTMENT YET

Grand Jury at Edna Fails to Return Bill in Murder Case

EDNA, Texas, Oct. 14.—Acting upon the assurance that district rangers are capable of protecting Monk Gibson, the remaining militia now stationed at Camp Jackson received orders to leave Edna. This afternoon at 2 o'clock the troops took the train for Houston. The investigation is to continue under the direction of the ranger force not actively engaged in guarding the Jackson county jail. As far as can be learned, however, little if any definite information has yet developed. The grand jury has adjourned Monday without an indictment.

GEORGETOWN, Texas, Oct. 14.—Mrs. Nelson Lackey, the young white woman who is charged with shooting her husband in the neck Thursday night with a double-barreled shotgun, was admitted to bail in the sum of $250 and released today. Lackey will live. Much sympathy is expressed for the woman.

RAILROAD HEARING AT AUSTIN GOES OVER

Attorney General, Wishing to Answer Arguments, Gets Continuance Special to The Telegram.

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 14.—The argument in the application for a writ of injunction against the railroads against the state to enforce enforcement of the Love tax bill was not concluded this afternoon, as expected. Attorney General Davis, wishing to reply to the argument made by the railroads, requested that the hearing be continued until Monday morning, which was granted by the court.

The argument this afternoon was resumed by Judge Clark, who, after going over in general terms the various grounds relied upon by the railroads, took up especially their contention to the effect that if any portion of the law should be held unconstitutional, the whole tax must fall for the reason that it could not be said that the legislature would have passed the valid portion of the law by itself.

Judge Clark conceded that this contention was at variance with one case by the United States supreme court, but cited Texas authorities as sustaining his view. Judge Clark contends that in this instance the state cannot, the Federal authorities should be followed.

Judge J. W. Terry, general attorney of the Southern Pacific, followed Judge Clark in an able argument for two hours, in which he took up every phase of the questions before the court.

Judge Terry reviewed the authorities relied upon by the railroads and concisely pointed out to the court their application to the case.

During the argument of Judge Terry, the court several times asked questions, from which it could be inferred that the view of the court was that the tax should be classed as an occupation tax. Judge Terry read a statement submitted to him by the attorney general, stating briefly the view of the state as to the nature and effect of the tax, but that statement contained the contention that the tax is an occupation tax, but is merely measured by the gross receipts; that thereupon it was not a tax upon interstate commerce.

RETAIL MERCHANTS FORM ASSOCIATION

Will Advertise City as Trading Center

WILL REFUND FARES

The latest, and what is expected to prove one of the most efficacious movements to increase the trade of the city, is the organization of the Retail Merchants' Association. This is a combination of retail merchants representing almost every branch of business, who will enter upon a campaign of judicious and systematic advertisement of Fort Worth as a retail market in all the country adjacent and naturally tributary to Fort Worth.

People in this territory will be advised that Fort Worth merchants carry as large and well selected stocks in all lines as any trading point in this territory and that prices are as reasonable as any. In addition to this the association will refund to every customer who purchases from any one, or all the members of the association combined, one dollar of goods for each mile traveled.

This, in connection with the larger assortment of goods to select from, is expected to prove an inducement which will attract a large number of buyers from the territory adjacent to Fort Worth.

The details of the business will be handled by the Board of Trade, so as to insure absolute impartiality and disinterested action in each and every case. When the customer has concluded his purchases he will call on the Board of Trade and secure a check to cover railroad fares both ways.

This co-operation on the part of the merchants will also prove beneficial by bringing them together at stated intervals to exchange views and make suggestions for the improvement of business. This is the first effort on the part of the merchants of the city to unite in common effort for the advancement of the interests of all, and the prediction is made and the hope indulged that it may prove so satisfactory as to be continued.

MEMBERS OF ASSOCIATION

The Association is composed of the following members: Washer Brothers, Parker-Lowe Dry Goods Company, A. & L. August, Monnig Dry Goods Company, The Fair, J. E. Mitchell, Geneschee Bros., Burton-Peely Dry Goods Company, G. Y. Smith, W. C. Stripling, Wood & Wood, L. G. Gilbert, Lane & Hall, Knight Dry Goods Company, Drumm Seed and Floral Company, John Ward, Baker Brothers, Metropolitan Hotel, Stonebraker Davis, Texas Anchor Shoe Company, J. H. Greer, The Famous Shoe Store, Lee Haygood, the Worth Hotel and the Delaware Hotel.

BIG RICE CONTRACT AWARDED AT BEAUMONT

Price of $3.50 Per Sack Nearly Record for Similar Quantity in History of Industry

BEAUMONT, Texas, Oct. 14.—In competitive bidding today the Atlantic Rice Mills of this city was awarded the sale of 20,000 sacks of rice by the San Jacinto Rice Company of this city. The purchase price was $3.57 a sack, the highest price paid this season and in the neighborhood of the highest price paid for a like quantity of rice in the history of rice industry in Texas. The price was raised near Crockett in Harrison county. It will be shipped here and milled and distributed to the markets.

Colquitt on Campaign Visit Colquitt, Commissioner O. B. Colquitt arrived in the city today to visit friends in the interest of his candidacy for governor. Mr. Colquitt will say in an interview in the Journal tomorrow that he has already advocated lower freight rates for lumber, rice and oil and that he earned the displeasure of the railroad companies by his persistent efforts to reduce the rates in the interest of the producer and consumer. He will return home tomorrow.

DISASTER BREAKS CUNARD'S RECORD

Campania Victims the First in 65 Years

MYSTERY OF THE SEA

Wave Which Swept Death Over Steerage Deck Came Without Warning

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—One of the strangest marine disasters ever recorded, in which five persons were swept overboard to their death, another injured so badly that it is feared death will follow and in which over thirty persons were seriously injured, occurred on board the Cunard Line steamship Campania last week, when a huge ocean wave crashed down upon 200 steerage passengers on the ship's deck while the vessel was 1,000 miles east of Sandy Hook and en route to New York from Liverpool.

The Campania arrived at New York today, and ten of those most seriously injured in the singular catastrophe, were at once removed to St. Vincent's hospital, where it was said tonight that several of the victims will probably die within a day or so.

When the vessel docked today scores of the passengers dropped on their knees on the pier, offering thanks to heaven for their deliverance from death.

The list of dead follows: MRS. COSGRAVE, address unknown. MRS. CLEARY, address unknown. JOHN GRAHAM, Milwaukee, Wis. TWO UNIDENTIFIED IRISH WOMEN. ALFRED GENES, a young Swedish immigrant, died at the hospital.

The injured ones removed to the hospital are: Mary Hourigan of Queenstown, fractured left leg. Annie Farley of Queenstown, compound fracture of left leg. Kattie McAuliffe of Queenstown, broke on ribs. Lizzie Brosner of Queenstown, right knee injured. Nora Roach of Queenstown, contusions. Thomas Maher, right arm broken. James Kane, scalp wound. William Green, right arm broken. John McGeehan, left arm injured.

Breaks Cunard's Long Record "The disaster breaks the record of the Cunard Line held for sixty-five years of never having lost a life on any of its steamships. The Campania sailed from Liverpool for New York, Oct. 7, with 680 steerage passengers and several hundred in the first and second cabins. When about one thousand miles off Sandy Hook a large wave suddenly rose up out of the ocean and descended upon a crowd of more than 200 passengers who were standing in the open forward part of the steerage decks. Five steerage passengers were swept overboard, and their companions caught in the same rush of water were unable to give any assistance to others.

And the ship went on in the gale, for it was impossible in the sea that was raging to look for the victims. For a few minutes after the wave struck the ship she careened at an angle of 40 degrees to port, and the water running over the oval all the while. The passengers up to their waists and necks in the swirling water, grabbed at stanchions, fragments of the wrecked companion way opening and anything that offered to save them from being washed overboard. Several deck stewards rushed to the steerage deck and did heroic work in dragging the passengers out of danger, but many of the victims were unable to get to safety. The wave burst open the gate and the rail on the port side, and the returning mass of water carried out the five victims as if they were in a sluice way. They could not save themselves and their companions caught in the same rush of water were unable to give any assistance to others.

There was pandemonium in the steerage from the moment the wave descended. The steering passengers thought the ship was going straight way to the bottom, and the cabin passengers on the decks above feared equally for their lives with those on the lower decks. The cabin passengers tried to rush out to the decks crying for life preservers and screaming for terror, but at a quick order from Captain Ward the doors of the saloons and dining rooms in which many of them were closed and locked and exit prevented.

Victim Leaves Wife Distraught Of the five persons washed overboard the only one whose name could be learned when the ship docked today was John Graham of Milwaukee, Wis., who, with his wife, had been over to Ireland visiting the old folks. His wife was saved by one of the deck stewards when she was in danger of following her husband through the broken gate. The Graham's left seven children in Milwaukee. Graham had 100 pounds sterling in cash on his person, which represented all the family's money and the widow was left destitute. Part of the ground on deck were able to scramble to the deck above or below by the companion ways, but more than fifty were caught in the rush of water and thrown down by it, while several of this number were drowned as the steerage deck was completely flooded.

As soon as they could, the deck stewards and others of the crew closed the opening in the rail and got the injured out of the way. Captain Ward could do nothing for those who were washed overboard, and the ship plunged on through the great seas and left the doomed victims to their fate.

The waves in Wednesday's gale, the passengers and the ship's officers agreed, were the highest they had ever seen. At times the waves broke as high as 40 feet. The worst of the injured, Agnes Carlson, a young Swedish woman, both of whose thighs were broken, died in the hospital today after the amputation of her legs.

Besides the panic, which lasted among the steerage passengers long after the disaster had passed, the flooding of the deck caused great misery among them. Nearly all the 680 steerage passengers were drenched and as most of them were without changes of clothing, they had to stay in their rooms till what they wore was dried.

Just who those lost overboard are will not be determined until the manifest is checked off by the Ellis Island Immigration authorities.

Besides Graham, it is known that the other victims were two young Irish girls, whose names are believed to be Cosgrove and Cleary, and the two others, two elderly women, one a Swede.

WINS GOOD WORDS FROM EDUCATOR

T. E. Shirley, Financial Agent of Christian University at Waco, Praises Telecon.

"My first impression of Professor J. Austin Larson was that he is an honest, candid, sincere man. Had it been otherwise, I shouldn't be taking treatment of him."
This statement was made by Mr. T. E. Shirley to a reporter, in speaking of the man of Telecon, who has offices at the Delaware hotel, Fort Worth, Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays of each week.

"I have been an asthmatic for twenty-three or twenty-four years. In the fall of 1889 I suffered so much that I had to go to southwestern Texas to get relief. Everyone in Texas knows that to remain down there is to be cured of asthma, but my business interests are here, so I returned. I have not been so bad since. Last February at Waco I had a long, hard attack of the grippe, since which time the asthma has been more severe. However, since I began treatment under Professor Larson I have had but one light attack. My digestion is better, my bowels more regular, my liver more active, my appetite good, my general condition is much improved and I am sleeping much better. Then, too, he has almost entirely relieved me of dull catarrhal headaches which have bothered me mornings. The benefit I have received is much more than I had expected at the beginning of my third week's treatment."

"How do you account for this man's cures?" the reporter asked.
"A few men are endowed with great personal magnetism," was the reply. "Professor Larson is one of those men. Independent of theories which I do not understand, his treatment applied scientifically, I believe will cure or benefit all nervous disorders, stomach, bowel and liver troubles, asthma, rheumatism, etc. I heard him tell a woman this morning that he was confident he could cure her and I was glad, for she has been a great sufferer. To another woman he said, 'You cannot be cured, but can be benefited. Professor Larson has strong personal magnetic power and his treatment is both sensible and scientific.'
Few men in Texas are better known than T. E. Shirley. For thirty years he was connected with the Houston and Texas Central railway, much of that time being claim agent. This gave him a wide acquaintance. In later years he has been actively identified with the state work of the Christian church. For three years past, he has been financial agent and chairman of the board of trustees of the Texas Christian University at Waco, Texas. Having dealt with the public and having been, in consequence, a close student of men for a third of a century, Mr. Shirley's estimate of Professor Larson is certainly flattering to that gentleman."

ELKS ARRANGING FOOT BALL GAMES

Team Rounding Into Shape and General Challenge Issued to State

The Fort Worth Elks' football team has been practicing steadily every evening on the lot in the rear of the Elk headquarters and has developed into a fast aggregation. The team work of the men shows up especially for the practice.
Manager H. C. Maddox has been corresponding with several teams in regard to games to be played here and away from home. Correspondence is being carried on with the Texarkana and Ardmore Elks in regard to games, which will probably be arranged. Texarkana wants to play here about Nov. 15, and their wish will probably be granted if satisfactory arrangements can be made. A game in the immediate future is being arranged with the Entre Nous team of this city.

Challenge Issued
The following formal challenge has been received from the Elk manager regarding games:
"The Elks of Fort Worth issue a challenge to any Elk or independent football team in the state of Texas, to play a match game of football, either in Fort Worth or wherever desired. Games with the teams in Denton, Sherman, Dallas, Cleburne and Waxahachie preferred."
"H. C. MADDOX, Manager."
The team is now almost picked, although the fight for places is not entirely over. The leading candidates are as follows: Center, Elkins, guards, Voges, McKay, Hall and R. Hyman; tackles, Mosley and Brown; ends, J. Hyman and Alvey; quarter, Liston; half, Walker and Spencer; full back, Calvin.
The team is being coached by Mosley, Liston and Spencer. Mosley is a former captain of Agricultural and Mechanical College and played there three years.

CATTLE OUTLOOK CONSIDERED DARK

Frisco Live Stock Agent Expects But Light Shipments to Feeding Pens This Year
Live Stock Agent Weeks of the Frisco does not look for any great improvement in cattle prices during the coming winter, and believes that prices will not go higher. "Future prospects in the cattle business in Texas are not very bright, with prevailing low prices and high prices for meal and huls," said Mr. Weeks.
Continuing, he said: "There is no evidence that better cattle conditions will prevail in the near future in Texas. Missouri, Kansas, Illinois and other northern states have great corn crops and farmers in these states are going to do considerable feeding. They will get their cattle from the northern markets. As a result there will be few Texas cattle find their way to these feeding pens this fall.

"There is plenty of good stuff in Texas ready for the markets, but the price will not justify shipping at this time, and farmers in this state will continue to hold their cattle, because they are long on good feed, especially grazing."
Mr. Weeks says that the number of cattle that are shipped north from Texas at this time of the year is greatly reduced in comparison with several years ago. He does not believe that to exceed 100,000 were shipped last year. Two years ago he recalls 200,000 head found their way to the northern markets in one year, 90,000 of which were handled by the Cotton Belt alone.
Mr. Weeks says that he never saw cattle looking better at this time of the year. Grass has been the finest in years and conditions were never more propitious for the live stock industry in Texas.

DEATHS

D. A. CROMER
D. A. Cromer, 25 years of age, died Saturday afternoon at 5:45 o'clock, after a lingering illness of more than a year. His illness began with typhoid fever, after which complications developed, the final effects of which caused death. He came to Fort Worth from Georgia in 1885 and has made this place his home since that date. Mr. Cromer was married about two years ago, his wife having been Miss Ethel Richardson. He was the junior member of the jewelry firm of Cromer Bros. Mr. Cromer was a graduate of the Fort Worth high school, class of '99, and a member of the First Methodist church. He is survived by his father, four brothers and his widow.

FIRE DAMAGES DALLAS STORE
DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 11.—Fire at an early hour this morning damaged the drug store of Russell V. Rogers, in the business district of the city, to the extent of $2,000. The fire had a hard battle and if the fire had gotten away from them it would have resulted disastrously.

FUNERAL NOTICE
The funeral of D. A. Cromer, who died Saturday afternoon, will take place from his late residence, 1425 East Twentieth street, at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. Rev. Alonzo Monk will conduct the services and interment will be made in the Old Cemetery.

TREATY TO BE RATIFIED

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 14.—Both houses of parliament have unanimously adopted the government bill providing for the ratification of the Karstad treaty. There was no debate in the lower house and criticism in the senate was confined to one or two speakers, who alleged that too much consideration has been shown for Norway by the Swedish delegates.

TALE OF HORROR FROM THE CONGO Lives Are Cheaper Than Rubber King Craves

WHOLE FAMILIES SLAIN Death and Devastation Follow Failure to Furnish Expected Supply of Revenue

BY HARRY G. FARMER Special Correspondence to The Telegram.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—Agitation against the natives in the Congo Free State, which is administered by King Leopold II of Belgium, continues unabated in Congo. One result has been the dispatch of a commission from Belgium to Africa to inquire into the complaints of British and American missionaries. This commission is rated a very fair-minded one, but its report may never be made public by King Leopold. In the meantime the Congo Reform Association continues to give publicity to instances of cannibalism, slavery, massacres and cruelty.

Twenty years ago the 900,000 square miles and million of people of the Congo Free State were placed by the powers in the hands of King Leopold. Now its exports, mostly rubber, amount to over $10,000,000 annually. A standing army of 15,000 men (natives) exists in Congo. There are less than whose right hands 5,000 white persons were cut off by soldiers within its borders. It is to account for whence comes this cartridges they use without waste.

A TALE OF HORROR Sixteen Esanga witnesses told one by one how father, mother, brother, sister, son or daughter were killed in cold blood. The big chief of all Bolima stood boldly before all, pointed to his twenty witnesses, placing on the table 119 twigs, each twig representing a life taken in rubber. He said: "These are my chief's twigs, these are men's, these smaller still are children's."

It comes from the natives kept in virtual slavery by King Leopold with his black soldiers, it is charged. The black soldiers, cannibals, many of them, are paid. The people are not. The paid blacks take savage joy in oppressing the unpaid blacks and killing and maiming those who do not bring in the amount of rubber arbitrarily assessed against them by the dozen rubber concessions in which the state has generally a half interest.

Here are fragments from the mass of evidence placed before the commission, as reported by the chief witnesses themselves: Like Children of Israel In the testimony of Missionary Weeks he said: "The people of Mombembe, during two successive floods which destroyed their farms, had still to supply the food taxes, and in order to do so had to travel forty miles to buy cassava at an exorbitant price, and then they had to take it another forty miles to deliver it. Also, that the Ndobu people, whose swampy country is unsuited to the cultivation of cassava, had nevertheless to buy from the riverain towns at a heavy price in order to meet the insupportable state demands."

At Lubanga, by Mr. Glehrst: "The people flee to the islands, live in the Stomach trouble is not really a sickness, but a symptom. It is a symptom that a certain set of nerves is ailing. Not the voluntary nerves that enable you to walk and talk and act—but the AUTOMATIC STOMACH NERVES over which your mind has no control. I have not room here to explain how these tender, tiny nerves control and operate the stomach. How worry breaks them down and causes indigestion. How misuse wears them out and causes dyspepsia. How neglect may bring on kidney, heart and other troubles through sympathy. I have not room to explain how these nerves may be reached and strengthened and vitalized and made stronger by a remedy I spent years in perfecting—now known by physicians and Druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative (Tablets or Liquid). I have not room to explain how this remedy, by removing the cause usually puts a certain end to indigestion, belching, heartburn, insomnia, nervousness, dyspepsia. All of these things are fully explained in the book I will send you free when you write. Do not fail to send for the book. It tells how the solar plexus governs digestion and a hundred other things every one ought to know—for all of us, at some time or other have indigestion. With the book I will send free my "Health Token"—an intended passport to good health.

Indigestion

For the free book Book 1 on Dyspepsia and the "Health Book 2 on the Heart Token" you must send 3c. Address Dr. Shoop, Book 4 for Women, Box 1552, Racine, Book 5 for Men, W.L. State which Book 6 on Rheumatism, Book you want.

What Sulphur Does For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us daily doses of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Waters. They are small chocolate-coated pellets and contain the active principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health, and act directly on the liver and excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Waters is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins while experimenting with sulphur remedies soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Waters. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Waters is a proprietary article, and sold by druggists, and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles and especially in all forms of skin disease as this remedy."

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers" will find in Stuart's Calcium Waters a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

open air, contract chills, which are followed by serious lung troubles, and die." At Baringa, Mr. Harris told of the murder of the principal chief of Bolima; the killing of his wives, son and children, the mutilation of a woman because she wished to remain faithful to her husband. He said the murder and cannibalism of the natives were, after all, only an exaggeration of their general conduct.

Longol of Lotoko placed eighteen twigs on the table representing men, women and children murdered for rubber. Next Inunga laid thirty-four twigs on the table and told how thirty-four of his people were butchered.

The commission agreed to accept the following general sentiment: "That hundreds of people have been killed in Baringa district alone for rubber, and that I (Harris) could prove it by multitudes of witnesses."

Women were imprisoned in this district because the men were short in their supplies. Slain by Sentries A witness from Esanga told how, on one occasion, because forty-nine instead of fifty baskets of rubber were brought in, some of their people were imprisoned and sentries were sent to punish the people; that one poor woman was trying to catch fish in a small stream near her village and she was surprised and shot by rubber sentries.

FRENCH CAR WINNER OF VANDERBILT RACE

Lancia, Italy's Representative, Probably Would Have Been First But for Accident

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Only touching the high places and sweeping over the roads as if his car were attached to the tail of a comet and propelled by the wings of the French team, driving a 50-horsepower Darracq car, won the second race for the Vanderbilt cup on Long Island today, covering the 283 mile course in 27 minutes 3 seconds, or at the rate of 62 miles per hour.

George Heath, the American amateur, who won the race last year, took second place with a French Panhard car of 90-horsepower, being beaten for first honors by the narrow margin of three minutes and two seconds, while last, but not least, Joe Tracey in a 90-horsepower American locomobile, was third, only 22 minutes behind the winner.

Tracey covered the 283 mile course in 296 minutes 26 seconds, or at the rate of 57 miles an hour. Last year Heath averaged only 52 miles an hour in the first race for the Vanderbilt cup, and the fastest time today illustrates the progress of motor cars, both here and abroad during the past twelve months.

Lancia Shows Wonderful Speed Fast as the winning cars proved themselves they seemed slow beside Lancia in his flying Fiat car which for 200 miles averaged between 70 and 72 miles an hour, when an unfortunate collision with the Christie car in next to the last lap ruined its chances though at that Lancia managed to finish fourth, only two minutes behind Tracey. Lancia gave what was the most wonderful exhibition of speed ever seen in a motor race and his idea of pace he was traveling can be gathered from the fact that he was covering lap after lap of the 28.3 mile course in 23 1/2 minutes, his fastest lap finishing fourth, being made in 22 minutes 18 seconds. Not only this, but his car covered 198.1 miles in 160 minutes 52 seconds, which is "going some." Although something like 150,000 spectators lined the course, from end to end, over 50,000 being gathered around the grandstand at Mineola alone, not a single spectator was injured or harmed in any way.

Two mechanics employed on the Christie and LITTLE cars were injured and Foxhall Keene got a bad shakedown through colliding with a telegraph pole when his tire burst at the dreaded "S" turn at Albertson, but there was no repetition of the horrible Aereuts affair of last year. Judging by today's results if another race is ever held over the Long Island course, contestants who have lost over two laps shall be compelled to withdraw from the race, as they stand absolutely no chance to win and simply encumber the course and increase the chances of accident.

Substituted Cars Make No Showing Neither the White, Christie or six-cylinder Pope-Toledo cars which were substituted for the winning cars in the recent elimination race, made any sort of showing. The White car never could seem to get going properly and when it did it would have tire troubles.

LITTLE in the Pope-Toledo got in trouble in the second round, and finally withdrew after the fourth round. The Christie car did not start until 25 minutes 39 seconds after the others, and while it covered the round in 20 minutes it met with misfortune in the next round and finally got going again just in time to collide with Lancia, who was leaving a control station after having a new tire put on. The spectators who saw the accident say that Christie was not to blame, as Lancia jumped the car right in its path. Lancia was hemmed in by the crowd that he did not see Christie coming. It was a very regrettable accident as Lancia certainly seemed to have the race in hand when the accident occurred.

Janetzky Leads at Start The car to start first, started on its wild flight promptly at 6 o'clock, the driver, Janetzky, one of the German team and the winner of the James Gordon trophy, led the race.

Rheumatism Cured. 50,000 BOXES Free

I discovered a simple cure for Rheumatism and Gout. To introduce this wonderful remedy among the suffering readers of this paper I have sent 50,000 Boxes for Free distribution and it is absolutely safe to take and will not harm the delicate tissues of your stomach like other rheumatism remedies do. This simple remedy has cured many persons who were so decrepit and pain racked that they could neither clothe nor feed themselves, among them a well known reader. Recently it cured an old gentleman who had suffered 35 years and whom seven doctors had called incurable. Address: JOHN A. SMITH, 2672 Gloria Bldg., Milwaukee, Wis.

The doctor's certificate reads, as follows: "I have occasion to use Peruna in my practice daily and also use it in my family. I attribute my success in practice to this wonderful remedy. May you be spared to a long life of usefulness in your noble calling. Your medicine has brought joy and happiness to many homes." -PATRICK F. MALEY, M. D.

don Bennett cup in 1903. He got a good start and kept up a hot pace for three laps, but on the fourth round a cylinder blew out and he was forced to leave the course.

The other cars were started at intervals of a minute and with a few exceptions they got away in good order. The Christie car was not on the course when it was called to the tape, but came up 28 minutes later and was permitted to start. The White car got the poorest start of all and met with misfortune at every point on the course. The lost car had scarcely gotten out of sight when Janetzky, who started first, came into the stretch and passed the grandstand going at a rate of about 80 miles an hour. Number four, driven by Lancia, came in two minutes later. In the third round Lancia passed Janetzky and the others who had started before him and from that time until he was thrown out by his collision with Christie, he held the lead, gaining steadily all the time.

EX-GOVERNOR HOGG IS SERIOUSLY ILL Famous Texan Here on Way to Mineral Wells to Undergo Treatment

Former Governor James S. Hogg arrived in Fort Worth Saturday night over the Santa Fe from Houston. He is a very sick man and is on his way to Mineral Wells for the benefit of his health. He is accompanied by his daughter, Miss Ima, and Miss Campbell of Lampasas.

The governor is suffering from injuries received several months ago in a railroad accident in South Texas, from the effects of which he has never recovered, thus far having been unable to get permanent relief. He recently made a trip to the mountains of Colorado, where he remained two months, but returned to Texas little improved.

Recently Colonel H. M. Wynne of Fort Worth, who received remarkable benefits from drinking Mineral Wells water, wrote Governor Hogg about his cure and urged him to give the waters of that place a trial. His coming is the result of Colonel Wynne's interest in the governor's behalf. He was met at the train by James W. Swayne, Colonel Wynne and Dr. F. D. Thompson and several newspaper men. Governor Hogg was assisted to a carriage and driven to the Worth hotel, where he retired for the night. He required assistance in moving from his carriage to the hotel.

He will go to Mineral Wells on this afternoon and driven to the Worth hotel, where he retired for the night. He required assistance in moving from his carriage to the hotel.

GIRLS TO PLAY BALL Denvers to Cross Bats With Team of Women The Denver baseball team, winners of the City League race, will play the Bloomer Girls this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at Haines park. The girls are reported to play a good game, having lost but one contest in their tour of the state. That was lost to Sherman by a score of 3 to 2. The line-up of the Denvers will be:

ANY CASE on EARTH Of Tobacco, Alcohol or Drug Addictions Permanently Cured in Ten Days Without Pain or Denial of Either as Long as Desired

The treatment thoroughly eliminates all poisons from the System and Permanently Cures the habit, neurosis or disease, thoroughly corrects the nervous condition and insures return of perfect health. Our methods are not to be confounded with "Home Treatments," "Free Trial Samples" and like propositions that are being daily exploited through various mediums. On the other hand, each case of alcohol or drug addiction is required to come to the Sanitarium, where a careful examination is made by the physician in charge, and every weakness or disorder is looked after and the case treated on its individual merits. We have the indorsement of the clergy, all physicians who know us and many letters of gratitude and indorsement from prominent people scattered over the land. Below we print several such letters, which are interesting:

Letter from Judge Goodson, a prominent lawyer of Comanche, Texas, and well known over the state: Dallas, Texas, June 19, 1905. To Whom It May Concern: I March, 1904, I broke my leg and sprained my ankles very badly. For many weeks I lay on my back, experiencing the most excruciating pain. The doctors advised me to use any other way of allaying the pain than by the introduction of morphine. By the time the pain I suffered from disappeared, I had contracted the use of morphine beyond my power to quit, though I made many heroic efforts. I afterward tried some of the advertised home remedies, all of which were of no avail. Finally, I received information, through a letter from a person who had been cured, to come to White Sanitarium, assuring me of a safe and painless cure. I came here with much doubt in my mind as to the efficacy of their treatment. I have been here about ten days and am intending to leave in the morning, thoroughly and permanently cured of my desire for morphine, and that without pain and misery in the treatment. I am and will be a new man, rid of all the horrors of morphine, with the world looking entirely different to what it has to me since I contracted this fearful and ruinous habit. I have friends among the prominent men all over the state, whose good opinion of my character and habits I am desirous to retain, and it causes me embarrassment to make public that I ever contracted such a habit. Still I have been cured of this course, and in order to help save some suffering person, I gladly forego the humiliation of this public statement. I sincerely hope that any person addicted to this ruinous and deadly course will go to White Sanitarium and get rid of this fearful disease. Very truly, G. H. GOODSON.

Rev. G. S. Hardy, President of the Clarendon College, and Rev. James M. Sherman, presiding elder Clarendon District, have the following to say: Clarendon, Texas, June 1, 1905. This is to certify that we personally know White Sanitarium of Station A, Dallas, Texas, and commend these gentlemen in their work. We have seen this treatment demonstrated and know of some remarkable results. We had a church member who would fall periodically in spite of all that could be done; he claimed his trouble was inherited and we believe it was. Your treatment soundly cured him. We know of some homes made happy by your cure where drugs had robbed humanity of all that was good. We have known each of the White brothers for some years and have found them to be honorable and upright—men worthy of the confidence of the public. Very truly, G. S. HARDY, President Clarendon College. JAMES M. SHERMAN, P. E. Clarendon District. Statement of Eldon Smith, a stock farmer of Hereford, Texas: Hereford, Texas, Aug. 29, 1905.

To Whom It May Concern: I have used tobacco in every form for the past 22 years, and for the last ten or twelve years have smoked cigarettes almost incessantly, waking frequently at night to smoke, from which my nervous system became completely shattered. I began treatment at White Sanitarium, and in three days was completely turned against tobacco, and in seven days was permanently cured. The remedy had no objectionable features, and I am now a happy, free man. While there I saw morphine and whisky patients as readily relieved, and I think the treatment the greatest thing in the world. I know this remedy will cure any man on earth of tobacco habit. My case was an extreme one. Yours truly, EDD. SMITH. If you have tried other cures and are skeptical, then place our fee in any bank of the city and we will take care of you at our Sanitarium, pay all of your necessary expenses and not require one cent until you are permanently cured and we will make you the sole judge. Write for literature and further information. All correspondence strictly confidential. Any Oak Cliff car will bring you to our door.

QUARANTINE LOSS PARTLY BALANCED

International, Rock Island and Santa Fe Profited by Freight Diversion

"The quarantine against the state of Louisiana as a result of yellow fever did no particular damage to either the freight or passenger traffic of the International," said Commercial Agent U. S. Fawcett Saturday, in speaking of the situation as it has affected the railroads in Texas, "but, on the contrary, it increased the earnings," he continued.

An investigation of this matter Saturday revealed the fact that the International and Great Northern road is the only Texas line that has been greatly benefited by the quarantine. The Southern Pacific, Texas and Pacific and the Kansas City Southern lines have been damaged to a greater extent than any other roads, because they penetrate the infected districts, while the other Texas roads run only to and near the boundary of Louisiana.

Mr. Fawcett says that the International was greatly benefited by the business turned over to that company through the gateway. In fact, he says that all traffic through this place was handled by his road.

There was some benefit to the Santa Fe and Rock Island from Mexican traffic, both freight and passenger, which came to them through the El Paso gateway. Under normal conditions much of this business goes via the Southern Pacific and the Texas and Pacific.

The relaxing of quarantine restrictions will be welcome news to all railroads in the state. For months not a passenger train of the Texas and Pacific and Kansas City Southern has crossed the Louisiana boundary, and as a result traffic of every kind has been practically at a standstill on these roads, so far as Louisiana business is concerned. It is roughly estimated that the losses to the different railroads as a result of the quarantine will reach several millions.

OFF FOR A HUNT

Local Railroad Men Leave for Clarendon

Chief Clerk McClure of the Frisco, Chief Clerk Card of the Denver road, City Passenger Agent Paschal of the Frisco and H. A. Atwell, chief clerk of the auditor of the Denver road, left here Saturday night for a hunt in the Clarendon country.

Duck are to be bagged by the hundred, according to the report made by the young railroad men as they rolled into comfortable berths of a Pullman car on the Denver road last night. They will be gone a few days. It is reported that the Panhandle country is alive with duck.

ATTENDANCE FIGURES

Railroads Carried Over Eighty-Five Thousand People to Denver Convention

There has been much speculation as to the probable number of visitors in Denver on the occasion of the thirty-ninth encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic held in that city Sept. 4 to 9, last.

The Denver and Rio Grande passenger department has compiled official figures and they are now made public for the first time: Tickets from territory east of Colorado validated at Colorado common points, all lines, 79,177; tickets from Colorado state points, all lines, 13,619; tickets from all territory north and west of Ogden, 224; tickets from Utah points, 125; tickets from Wyoming, 370; tickets from Texas and other points south of Colorado lines, estimated, 150; tickets from other territory not named, estimated, 500; total, 85,224.

In addition to the above no less than 7,500 passengers to and from the Pacific coast passed through Denver encampment week, nearly all of whom stopped off.

These tickets are not included in the above figures, though probably it would be permissible to include them in the grand total of visitors in Denver during the Grand Army encampment, and this would bring the aggregate attendance to 92,726.

SANTA FE CHANGES

Appointments in Passenger Department Announced

Third Vice President Nicholson of the Santa Fe has announced the following changes in the passenger department: William J. Black, now general passenger agent for the system at Topeka, is promoted to passenger traffic manager, with headquarters in Chicago, succeeding Mr. Nicholson. John J. Byrne, now general passenger agent of the coast lines, is promoted to assistant passenger traffic manager, with headquarters at Los Angeles. James M. Connell, now general agent of the passenger department in Chicago, is promoted to general passenger agent at Topeka, succeeding Mr. Black. Edmond J. Shuckhaft, now chief clerk of the general passenger office at Topeka, is promoted to assistant general traveling passenger agent. Charles L. Seagraves, traveling passenger agent, is promoted to general colonization agent, with headquarters in Chicago, vice William Nicholson, resigned to engage in the land business.

It was believed here that when the above announcement was made the name of W. S. Keenan, now general passenger agent of the Texas lines, would be included and that he would be placed at the head of the passenger department of the coast lines.

DOES POLK KNOW IT?

Oklahoma Deal Has Been Connected with Kansas City Southern

A report comes from Oklahoma to the effect that Colonel L. J. Polk has been touring Oklahoma, looking for a suitable line for an extension of the Kansas City Southern in order to give that line an outlet to the Gulf from the Kansas grain belt, despite the statement made recently while in Fort Worth that he was in no way connected with the Kansas City Southern.

The Oklahoma report is to the effect that a deal is now pending for the purchase of the Paris, Dupont and Southern road from Paris, Texas to Rosalia and Bogata, Texas.

NEW DENVER DEPOT

By Dec. 1 the Moffat road will be running into Denver over its own track, and the new depot now under construction will also be completed by that time, said a Denver railroad man today. The depot will be a combination one, passenger and freight, and will cost $50,000.

Effective Nov. 12 the Santa Fe will inaugurate the winter schedule of the California Limited, providing for a daily service between Chicago and Los Angeles and San Francisco. This service will make connection with the Santa Fe service out of Fort Worth as usual. Speaking of the service City Passenger Agent Fenelon said today that the California Limited will be the finest train running between Chicago and California, being a complete special Pullman train made up of observation, cafe, drawing room and sleeping cars of the very latest patterns. This train will pass through the Grand Canon of Arizona.

WEEK OF PLEASURE

City to Have Entertainments Galore October 23 to 28

The week from Monday, Oct. 23, until Saturday, Oct. 28, will be a busy one for the Fort Worth pleasure seeker.

There are several big events and shows scheduled for that week. The Auditorium Circus will be in town on Oct. 24 and 25, with its performances.

On the following day the Forepaugh & Sells Brothers' circus will be here, and in the evening of the same day Al H. Wilson will play a return date at Greenwald's theater.

During the entire week the Gaskill shows will be here for the Fall Carnival, which is to be given under the auspices of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

EASTERN CAPITAL FOR INTERURBAN

Surveys for Mineral Wells Line Delayed to Await Action by Private Interest Engineers

Cleoro Smith was in Fort Worth on Saturday, and when asked about the proposed Fort Worth and Mineral Wells interurban line, he declined to say anything further than that the road will be built as speedily as possible.

He said that the further one goes into the matter of building such a line the more one finds that there are a great number of difficulties in the way. Just now Mr. Smith is trying to interest some eastern capitalists in the matter, and he said that as soon as they agreed to go in with him he would ask them to send their surveyors on to survey the line.

He said further that he would have had the work of surveying the line started before this if it were not for the fact that the work of a local surveyor would not be taken as final by any of the eastern capitalists, as they are accustomed to have all such work done by their own surveyors before going into the work.

Mr. Smith left again in the afternoon for Mineral Wells.

LIGHT FROST SHOWN BY CROP REPORTS

Cool Weather Opening Cotton Along the Rock Island.

Little Rain

The general passenger department of the Rock Island Saturday received several reports of crop conditions at different points on the line north from this city, covering the period from Oct. 1 to Oct. 14. At several of the places reports of light frost are given. There has been very little rain at any of the places except at Bowie, where three and a half inches fell on the first of the month. The reports follow:

Bowie—The heavy rain on the first of October put plenty of moisture in the ground. Cotton conditions are about the same as the last report. Gathering of cotton is well under way and progress is being made. Late rains would have no beneficial effect on the crop, nor would they increase the yield. Pastures are in fine shape.

Jacksboro—There is no material change in crop conditions. There has been no rain. Cotton is opening rapidly. Pickers are badly needed at this place. They cannot be had here at any price. Everybody too busy picking 10-cent cotton to travel. They'll do that later.

Ringgold—Cotton is about three-fourths gathered. Corn is nearly all gathered. No rain.

Shamrock—Crops are in good condition and cotton picking is fairly under way. Cotton is late here. Weather is cool. There was a light frost on the night of Oct. 10.

McLean—Cool weather. A light frost prevailed on the night of Oct. 10, which will help cotton, coming as it did before a freeze. Cotton is coming in now. Believed that about six hundred bales will be ginned at this point.

MECHANICS PLANNING IMMIGRATION FIGHT

Junior Order American Lodge Will Establish Washington Office to Work Against Open Gates

A circular letter is being sent out by the committee on national legislation of the national council of the Junior Order United American Mechanics by the secretary, Jesse Taylor of Jamestown, Ohio, asking for contributions from the subordinate councils of the order, the money to be used in establishing and maintaining an office in Washington, D. C., in charge of a secretary, to promote the interests of the order in working in the campaign against unrestricted immigration.

Attached to the letter is a copy of a resolution passed by the state council of Ohio, at the Dayton session, in May of this year, urging all state and subordinate councils to contribute to the fund for the campaign, which is planned to begin during this session of congress.

The Fort Worth council of the order will take the matter up at its next regular meeting, to be held Monday night.

MONARCH Malleable RANGES

are built to last a lifetime, and give you dollar value for every dollar spent. When once in your kitchen, all worry about a range is over forever; requires no blacking—this cuts out the greatest drudgery of "kitchen-dom." Large, high, square ovens all full size; bake perfectly in any part; steel wire over racks, which are light, strong and unbreakable. The door—well, three men could stand on it and not strain it in the least.

There is no time like now to buy a range that burns either wood or coal, for gas and gasoline stoves must go in for the winter.

CORNER SIXTH AND HOUSTON STREETS

More than once last year stories went out to the effect that the theatrical business throughout the country for the season of 1904-05 was unpropitious and save for a few ventures, notably the George Ade comedies, managers were busy estimating deficits instead of bank balances. Evidently there was something in it, for the plays seen in Fort Worth this season, although few in number, have all borne the undeniable stamp of it's-up-to-you-to-make-good instructions from somebody with more authority than even the stage manager.

ment of the record-breaking crowd that turned out. There was a play with a plot, clever jokes, clean comedy work, and some capable actors who helped out materially. The result was some twelve or fifteen hundred people went home saying, "That's the best play Wilson ever brought here."

In addition to a play which is said to be gorgeously staged, there are seven specialty features.

"McFadden's Row of Flats" will be at Greenwall's Thursday matinee and night.

"Uncle Josh Perkins" is billed for Saturday matinee and night. Uncle Josh doesn't need any introduction.

PLAYS THAT ARE COMING
.....

Al Wilson in "The German Gypsy" will play a return engagement at Greenwall's Oct. 26. Hundreds of people were turned away for lack of room last Tuesday night.

Mason and Mason, who made much laughter in Rudolf and Adolph, will be seen this season in a new musical play, "Fritz and Snitz."

"When Johnny Comes Marching Home" will supply the irrepressible whistlers with some new melodies. The musical comedy is said to have more mouth puckering tunes than any other of its kind on the road.

Barney Gilmore, the Irish singing actor, has a new play this season, "The Rocky Road to Dublin."

"The Liberty Bell," a musical comedy with a big cast, will be seen here soon.

One of the most remarkable histories in connection with the drama is the life of James Sheridan Knowles, the author of "Virgilius," the tragedy Louis James has revived this season. Knowles was born in Cork, Ireland, May 12, 1784. His father, James Knowles, was nephew to Thomas Sheridan of political fame, and first cousin to Richard Brinsley Sheridan, the author of "The School for Scandal."

His career was a most fascinating one, for he never seemed to be satisfied with his lot in life, changing his vocation from poet to soldier, then to doctor, then to actor, then a newspaper reporter, then school master, back again to actor, and prior to his death he became a Baptist minister. It was while he was school master in Glasgow, Scotland, that he wrote "Virgilius," and while his scholastic duties occupied thirteen hours a day of his time, he succeeded in completing this classic in three months. "Virgilius" was written originally for Edmund Kean, but through a misunderstanding he could not produce it, so a friend of Knowles, a Mr. Tait, presented the manuscript to W. C. Macready, who had it produced in London in 1820, with emphatic success. Charles Lamb, Samuel Coleridge, William Hazlitt and Edmund Kean were his bosom friends and many are the stories told of the social feasts these worthies had together.

Knowles married a Scotch actress named Marie Charteris, in 1809, and this union was instrumental to a great extent in formulating his playwright aspirations, by which he is better known today than by any other of his accomplish-son has shown signs of having been sent out with orders to get more snap into its work, cut out listless and half-hearted pretenses of acting, and give the audiences something more nearly the worth of their money than they got last year. The effect of this good work may partially help to make up for much of the bad work last season, and if it is continued, as the owners and managers know, will help to swell depleted treasuries and assure good business for the season of 1906-07.

Here's a forecast then: Look for good shows this winter. If an old favorite is billed, expect to see better actors in it and more honest endeavor to please. If a new production is scheduled, you'll be safe in counting on creditable work somewhere in the cast, even if the play itself has no more than ordinary merit.

Two striking examples of old-time entertainers with new life in their production were seen last week. There was more than "Al Allwin, the golden voiced," in "The German Gypsy," for the entertainments. Following "Virgilius" came "The Hansback," "Alfred the Great" and "William Tell," but none of them ever achieved the success or popularity of "Virgilius," which is said to be the best Roman tragedy written since the days of Shakespeare.

Knowles died at Torquay, 1862, and is buried in the Necropolis, Glasgow, the city that encouraged him as a dramatist and scholar, and first gave publicity to his masterpiece, "Virgilius."

CIRCUS WON OVER SCHOOL LAST WEEK

Many Early Dismissals to Enable Children to Attend Performance in the Afternoon

The circus proved disastrous to the city schools, so far as its record of pupils excused too early goes. At least this is the report for the week past, as made by Superintendent Hogg. The record for the week was forty-one pupils to the thousand, or just forty more a thousand than the preceding week.

Excuses were made, it was announced in all cases, where the parent assumed the responsibility. This average is small, however, as compared with that for former years.

Attendance for the past week was 164 above that for the week preceding and 377 over that for the corresponding week last year. This increase is being cared for by resort to half-day sessions and transfers. Buildings on the north side of the Texas and Pacific reservation are now reported full, with an average of forty pupils to the room. Regular monthly reports will be sent out during the coming week. Request for their careful examination by parents is made.

OWNERS PERFECT GARAGE COMPANY

Officers and Additional Directors Named at Meeting Held Saturday at Worth Hotel

Automobile owners met at the Worth Hotel Saturday afternoon and selected a name for the new organization formed Thursday night, and also elected officers. Two new members of the board of directors were elected, W. W. Sloan Jr. and F. R. Hedrick. The other members of the committee are M. R. Sanguinet, A. B. Wharton and C. D. Reimers. After the meeting of the club members the board of directors held another meeting and elected the following officers of the organization: President, M. R. Sanguinet; vice president, A. B. Wharton; secretary, C. D. Reimers; treasurer, F. R. Hedrick. A committee composed of W. G. Turner, F. R. Hedrick and W. B. Edgington was appointed to draft a set of by-laws.

Several sites for the new garage were offered and each will be thoroughly investigated before a decision is made.

TAX COLLECTIONS BREAK ALL RECORDS

Figures for First Two Weeks Reach $145,000—Many Polls Paid

Tax collections at the office of W. J. Gilvin, city assessor and collector, Saturday, were $36,327.93, making the total collections for the first two weeks $145,020.95, the greatest amount ever collected in a similar period.

All taxes paid during the first two weeks were subject to a discount of 2 1/2 per cent. A 2 per cent discount will be allowed until the end of this month. Seventy-one poll taxes were paid Saturday, making the total number 248.

The heavy payment of taxes in the city is being taken as an indication of the prosperous condition of business men and residents, the ready response being unprecedented in the history of the city.

STATE ENCAMPMENT MAY BE ABANDONED

Local Officers Declare Date Is Too Late for Full Attendance of Men

Members of the national guard here do not believe that there will be a state encampment held in Texas this year, because of the fact that the date set by Adjutant General Hulen is so late—Dec. 4—that it will be a matter of impossibility for anything like a satisfactory attendance to be had at that date.

Colonel George T. West, paymaster general of the state national guard, said Saturday that it was his personal opinion that no encampment will be held. It is explained that at the designated for holding the encampment at Camp Mabry, Austin, the majority of the men of the guard will be busy. Had the encampment been held earlier he believes that the usual interest would have been shown in the state meeting of the soldier boys.

Colonel West said Saturday that he had not heard officially from Adjutant General Hulen regarding the coming encampment, but was expecting notification from him any day.

Captain B. C. Carter of the Fort Worth Fenibles, expresses practically the same opinion about the encampment and says that very few of his men will be able to get away at the time mentioned. He is doubtful, he says, whether he will be able to take the Fenibles to Camp Mabry Dec. 4.

Similar reports are being sent in from other companies, members of the national guard.

SNEAK THIEVES ENTER OFFICES

North Fort Worth Doctors Lose Case of Valuable Surgical Instruments

Drs. Frazier and Gallaway reported Saturday that a valuable case of surgical instruments is missing from their offices in North Fort Worth. The instruments were worth probably $50. No clue was left by which the thief or thieves could be identified, but it is thought that the robbery took place Wednesday afternoon, while the two physicians were attending the circus performance with their families.

The officers are quietly working on the case, but, at late hour Saturday night, no arrests had been made. A reward of $40 has been offered for recovery of the instruments.

Increased interest is being shown in the series of revival meetings now in progress at North Fort Worth M. E. church, South. There have been fifteen conversions to date. Rev. J. M. Bond of Weatherford, Texas, is assisting the pastor, Rev. J. P. Mueser.

Miss Lena Dawson of Sulphur Springs, Texas, is visiting Mrs. Belle McCauley at Twelfth and Main streets, North Fort Worth.

Rev. Dr. E. C. of Nashville, Tenn., is conducting a revival at the North Fort Worth Christian church. Meeting began Friday night and will continue two weeks.

Mrs. E. W. Johnson, who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. S. J. Shea, 1317 Grove street, North Fort Worth, returned to her home at Austin Saturday.

MAN ABOUT TOWN

Captain J. C. Terrell tells the following story of peccan days in the early history of Fort Worth:

"Our constitution wisely provides that in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall be confronted with the witnesses against him.

"In the days of reconstruction E. J. ville used the public school house for religious worship. Lon —, a lad about sixteen, with new red-top boots inside, inclined to a different faith to Parson W., a very nervous spare made man, a local preacher.

"The latter took Phillip and the eunuch for his text. It was peccan time, a heavy crop, and the floor was covered with hulls. Every time Mr. W. made a 'print,' do you know, Lon's boot heels on the hulls, till W. prematurely adjourned his meeting. Lon was indicted, charged with disturbing religious worship, and Rev. W. was state's witness.

"In the cross examination I asked him to state to the court and jury his feelings toward the defendant. He said, with a pious sigh of resignation, looking toward the ceiling, 'As for a lad, in the Spirit I do dearly love him, but (looking sternly at the defendant, with uplifted arm and clenched fist, and with a loud voice) 'as for me, in the flesh I do hate him, I abhor him, and I abhor his God.'"

"Defendant was acquitted on the ground that Parson W. could not hold a religious meeting under the statutes. "Lon — yet says the other boys did it."

COUNTY TEACHERS HOLD INSTITUTE

Large Attendance Marks First Gathering of Present Term. Normal School Plans

The first fall meeting of the Tarrant County Teachers' Institute was held Saturday afternoon in the county court room. The attendance was the largest ever reached, according to Superintendent Ramsey, there being 150 teachers present from various parts of the county, the number from the country schools being in excess of those from city schools.

The constitution and by-laws of the association were read by Professor M. H. Moore of North Fort Worth. He was followed by W. A. Barr of Birdville, who discussed the subject of the new school laws of Texas.

county by the teachers' institute, which he said was an important adjunct to the betterment of the efforts of the teachers.

"How Early Should Children Enter Schools," was the subject discussed by W. T. Hammond of Saginaw.

County Superintendent Ramsey spoke on "School Consolidation and Independent Districts."

After the meeting ended, the committee to arrange for the Tarrant county normal, J. H. Phillips of Mansfield, M. H. Moore of North Fort Worth, W. B. Dwiggin of Crowley, W. T. Hammond of Saginaw, Superintendent Ramsey and W. A. Barr of Birdville, convened. There was a general discussion of the number of teachers for the next year, the place for holding the normal and the date for the session. After these matters were thoroughly discussed by the committee, it was decided that a second meeting be held Nov. 4, at which time all plans for the normal will be consummated. At this meeting teachers are to be selected.

son has shown signs of having been sent out with orders to get more snap into its work, cut out listless and half-hearted pretenses of acting, and give the audiences something more nearly the worth of their money than they got last year. The effect of this good work may partially help to make up for much of the bad work last season, and if it is continued, as the owners and managers know, will help to swell depleted treasuries and assure good business for the season of 1906-07.

Here's a forecast then: Look for good shows this winter. If an old favorite is billed, expect to see better actors in it and more honest endeavor to please. If a new production is scheduled, you'll be safe in counting on creditable work somewhere in the cast, even if the play itself has no more than ordinary merit.

Two striking examples of old-time entertainers with new life in their production were seen last week. There was more than "Al Allwin, the golden voiced," in "The German Gypsy," for the entertainments. Following "Virgilius" came "The Hansback," "Alfred the Great" and "William Tell," but none of them ever achieved the success or popularity of "Virgilius," which is said to be the best Roman tragedy written since the days of Shakespeare.

Knowles died at Torquay, 1862, and is buried in the Necropolis, Glasgow, the city that encouraged him as a dramatist and scholar, and first gave publicity to his masterpiece, "Virgilius."

.....

Al Wilson in "The German Gypsy" will play a return engagement at Greenwall's Oct. 26. Hundreds of people were turned away for lack of room last Tuesday night.

Mason and Mason, who made much laughter in Rudolf and Adolph, will be seen this season in a new musical play, "Fritz and Snitz."

"When Johnny Comes Marching Home" will supply the irrepressible whistlers with some new melodies. The musical comedy is said to have more mouth puckering tunes than any other of its kind on the road.

Barney Gilmore, the Irish singing actor, has a new play this season, "The Rocky Road to Dublin."

"The Liberty Bell," a musical comedy with a big cast, will be seen here soon.

One of the most remarkable histories in connection with the drama is the life of James Sheridan Knowles, the author of "Virgilius," the tragedy Louis James has revived this season. Knowles was born in Cork, Ireland, May 12, 1784. His father, James Knowles, was nephew to Thomas Sheridan of political fame, and first cousin to Richard Brinsley Sheridan, the author of "The School for Scandal."

His career was a most fascinating one, for he never seemed to be satisfied with his lot in life, changing his vocation from poet to soldier, then to doctor, then to actor, then a newspaper reporter, then school master, back again to actor, and prior to his death he became a Baptist minister. It was while he was school master in Glasgow, Scotland, that he wrote "Virgilius," and while his scholastic duties occupied thirteen hours a day of his time, he succeeded in completing this classic in three months. "Virgilius" was written originally for Edmund Kean, but through a misunderstanding he could not produce it, so a friend of Knowles, a Mr. Tait, presented the manuscript to W. C. Macready, who had it produced in London in 1820, with emphatic success. Charles Lamb, Samuel Coleridge, William Hazlitt and Edmund Kean were his bosom friends and many are the stories told of the social feasts these worthies had together.

Knowles married a Scotch actress named Marie Charteris, in 1809, and this union was instrumental to a great extent in formulating his playwright aspirations, by which he is better known today than by any other of his accomplish-

LETTERS OF PRAISE

Are being sent us almost every day. They come from people in all walks of life, including many prominent doctors and druggists. These people, having been cured by the Bitters, feel so grateful that they give their endorsement voluntarily, which is the best recommendation any medicine can have. Read their letters and get some idea of what this wonderful medicine has done and what you may expect it to do for you, too.

MR. W. C. JOHNSON, FRANKLIN, KY., says: "For several years I suffered with indigestion, bloating and other stomach troubles without obtaining relief. My family doctor recommended your Bitters, and from the first dose found relief. I am now entirely cured, and heartily recommend it to all sufferers."

MRS. H. CHAPMAN, CINCINNATI, O., says: "Your Bitters saved me from undergoing an operation for my stomach and back. I was bed-fast for a long time, but after taking your Bitters my trouble began to disappear, and now I believe I am entirely well."

DR. FRANK HOGAN, BROOKLYN, N. Y., says: "Your Bitters has been prescribed by me for 25 years. I cheerfully recommend it as a first-class tonic, to restore the appetite and to cure stomach troubles."

MRS. M. FICHTER, JORDAN, MINN., says: "I have used your Stomach Bitters, and know from experience that it will do all you claim for it."

MR. E. H. SHAWAN, WHEELING, W. VA., says: "I have used your Bitters for indigestion, dyspepsia and other stomach troubles, and it cured me, even after doctors had failed. I willingly endorse it."

MR. G. W. HERZBERG, CHICAGO, ILL., says: "Your Stomach Bitters is without doubt the best for all stomach troubles. I tried many of them, but yours was the only one to effect a cure."

MR. H. I. GOODWIN, BOSTON, MASS., says: "For over four years I suffered from stomach troubles and indigestion. I was unable to eat anything without being distressed. A friend, who had also been cured by your Bitters, recommended it to me, and after taking one bottle I noticed a great improvement. I am now entirely well, and desire to thank you."

The above letters ought to convince the most skeptical that they, too, can be cured and that for making the sick well and hearty and keeping them so there's no medicine before the public equal to the celebrated

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

ANOTHER FACT.

As further proof of its merit we wish to remind you that it has stood the severe test of public approval for over 50 years and has established a record of cures of Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bowel Troubles far in excess of any other remedy. It is the medicine you need and one bottle will convince you that this is the truth. Get it to-day from your Druggist and you'll be just as thankful as those mentioned above.

INSIST ON HAVING HOSTETTER'S.

THE BITTERS WILL POSITIVELY

restore the appetite, assist the stomach in its work of digestion, keep the liver active and bowels open, also cure Flatulency, Heartburn, Indigestion, Bloating, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sour Risings, Chills, Colds, General Debility and Malaria, Fever and Ague.

Women and girls are also greatly benefited by taking the Bitters. It cures Monthly Irregularities, Cramps, Nausea, Headache, Backache, Insomnia, Dizziness and Fainting Spells.

SPECIAL NOTICE.
The genuine is sold only in bottles like the above, and bears this Private Stamp over the neck.

The Store's Birthday

IT WAS 18 years ago that the seed was planted in Kansas City, Mo., out of which grew this store. It was 14 years ago that the store which had been planted in Kansas City, Mo., was transplanted to Fort Worth, Texas. Of course, this store has a history. What store has not? Its life is so young that one glance backward is sufficient to cover all the road it has traveled. The road is not long, if figured by the time it has required to cover it. It is quite long, perhaps, if figured by the distance traveled, as commercial institutions are accustomed to calculate by results rather than the time spent in achieving results. A short glance backward over the period of 14 years tells us that a good, loyal force of store workers had much to do with it. It is a peculiar incident that this store, selling for spot cash, should have so rapidly drawn a large and ever increasing army of patrons to its support. Along with our army of workers there have been some people who did the thinking.

At the start, when we found a few customers well pleased with their purchases, it caused us to think deeply how we might broaden the good work of selling greater and more numerous values. The deep thinking followed the buying and selling campaigns. Under the banner of "Not how much can we ask, but how little for cash," this deep thinking was fortified by honest acting out of the principles of the business on the part of the loyal store force.

So on this birthday we look backward and we look forward. Standing on the pinnacle of the present, we are impressed with the fact that so far we have done our best to "make good." Looking to the future and taking our past experience as our assets, we are firm in the conviction that this store will be better equipped than ever in its life to serve the public, and not only the public, but those who continue loyal to its interests.

It is more determined than ever in its life that everyone shall have a "square deal."

SOCIETY REORGANIZES

Medical Students Meet and Elect Officers for Year

The Medical Society of the Fort Worth Medical College met Saturday night at the college and elected officers. The following were chosen: President, Leonidas Smith; Vice President, David P. Bandy; Secretary, Solon Milton; Treasurer, Guy W. Greer; Celeste, Texas; Critic, Robert W. Moore, Galveston.

This was the opening meeting of the eleventh year of the existence of the society. Public meetings are held every Saturday night in the Medical College building.

Railway Journal Issued

Current issue of the Texas Railway and Industrial Journal, just issued, has been made a State Fair issue, much of the space being devoted to this feature. Articles describing several typical Texas cities also appear.

Franchise Discussed

A meeting of residents of Arlington Heights was held Saturday night to discuss the coming franchise election called at the request of the Arlington Heights Tract Company. Announcement of donation of a lot by the Arlington Heights company for school purposes was made at the meeting. No definite action was taken by those present.

BURGLAR FOUND IN ROOM ESCAPES WITH FIVE DOLLARS

A burglar entered the residence of Dr. W. H. Nugent, 1533 Pruitt street, this morning about 2 o'clock. He was discovered by the doctor while he was leaning over the bed, probably with the intention of taking a valuable diamond ring belonging to Mrs. Nugent. The thief entered the house through a window and when discovered he left again through another window. The only loss that had been discovered up to 2:30 o'clock this morning was $5 in cash. The money was taken from Dr. Nugent's trouser's pocket. There was still $25 in another pocket which was untouched. Dr. Nugent did not get a good look at the thief and could give no marks of identification.

BEARISH NEWS MAKES WHEAT FUTURES DROP

Argentine Locusts Said to Have Done Little Damage—Flour Business at a Standstill

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 14.—Wheat finally settled at a decline of 1-3c to 1-4c for December and May today, the buying by Valentine in the market being nullified by heavy sales in Minneapolis, where the market was flooded with selling orders. Locusts in Argentine fields were reported to have done little damage, yet the millers said the flour business was again at a standstill. Cash sales here were 5,000 bushels, and the seaboard reported 55,000 bushels macaroni wheat worked for export.

Corn closed weak with a decline of 1 1/2c for October, 3/4c now and 1-4c old December and 3/4c May. Cash business here was 70,000 bushels and export at the seaboard 88,000 bushels.

Oats were 1-4c lower for December, May and July, in spite of a good cash trade here; 275,000 bushels and 250,000 bushels at the seaboard for export. Selling by packers broke pork after a higher opening, January closing 7 1/2c lower, lard 5c off and ribs 2 1/2c at 12 1/2c below yesterday's closing figures.

PIG IRON MARKET DULL

Market is Firm, but Buyers Are Somewhat Cautious

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—The pig iron market was firm this morning, but dull. Buyers are still a little cautious on the near deliveries, as the demand for the iron in certificate form is not as active as for other grades, and this tends to keep near deliveries rather heavy. The general tone, however, is very steady and there is no pressure of iron on the market. Warrants continue very firm and only a few were offering this morning. Closing: October $15.75 to $16, November $15.75 to $16.10, December $15.75 to $16.20, January $15.75 to $16.30, February $15.75 to $16.40, March $15.75 to $16.50.

COTTON REMAINS WEAK

Weather Report Continues Good and Bulls Are Listless

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—The absence of rain or frost on the weather map, softness of cables and general listlessness on the part of the bull interests produced a weak market at the opening today in the cotton market. Prices, although opening practically unchanged, were even lower than due on the Liverpool trading. The indications of warmer weather in the south and reports from reliable sources that the cold wave had done practically no damage seemed to give the shorts less nervousness and their renewed activity to a considerable degree this morning. Short selling was in fact the early feature, with liquidation on the part of the long interest, but was moderate. The conviction gathered force today that the long interest was pretty well sold out. If this is so many thought that the weakness of the moment would not continue for long. This belief became a fact as trading progressed. After selling off from the opening when it ought to have been higher on the cables, the market began to recover on the covering of shorts and renewed buying for long account. Prices rallied considerably above the opening. The market was a bit nervous during the early trading, as the element of uncertainty still clung to a good many traders. The strong bull interest, although overcome for the moment by selling pressure, was not shaken in the belief that the situation in the south, the general activity in the goods trade and the continued strong demand for spinners, as well as a short crop, would eventually make for a stronger market.

CURRENCY ON THE MOVE TOWARD SOUTHWEST

Transfer of $1,000,000 to New Orleans Excites Much Comment in Wall Street

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—A transfer of $1,000,000 currency through the sub-treasury to New Orleans excited considerable comment, especially in view of the recent indications that the outflow to the west was contracting. Closing prices showed small fractional losses in such leaders as Union Pacific, Reading, United States Steel, Erie, St. Paul, Louisville and Nashville, Baltimore and Ohio, Copper, Atchafson, Rapid Transit, Illinois Central and others made equally important net gains. The close was dull and featureless with small and irregular net changes ruling in most issues. While the weekly bank statement was favorable it fulfilled expectations, inasmuch as it was entirely out of gear with preliminary estimates and general conditions.

The gain in surplus reserves was $5,925,225, and this increased this item to $10,211,211,400, comparing with $15,957,875 a year ago and with $17,433,250 in 1903. The loss in cash was $2,350,800. Loans decreased by $29,466,000, while deposits decreased by $33,104,100.

General trade reviews from the mercantile agencies and other sources were all extremely favorable and with no reported indications of any let up in the general prosperity. Notice of the increase of the capital stock of the Mexican Central railroad to $100,000,000 has been received by the stock exchange.

reply was given to a query as to the outlook for the B bonds' interest. Another small consignment of European gold arrived today, making the total receipts for the season at $5,520,000.

A very poor response has been made by the Wabash stocks to the Gould-Ramsay handshake. The G debentures did but little better, but conservative Wall street doubts whether these will now be able to hold their present market position. It is rumored that Eugene Zimmerman, president of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton system, will become president of the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton and the Arbor railroads when the final transfer of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton system is made to the Erie Railroad Company. Russell Harding, now vice president and general manager of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton, is to be the vice president and general manager of the Erie under President H. G. Underwood. In a meeting to be held next week Mr. Zimmerman will be re-elected president of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton.

COURSE OF THE SECOND CONTEST FOR THE WILLIAM K. VANDERBILT CUP OCTOBER 14th 1905

NEW YORK GIANTS WORLD'S CHAMPIONS

(Continued from Page One.) scoring. Seibold landing a fine one to left but Dahlen grabbed up Murphy's smasher, passed it to Gilbert and put Seibold on the retired list. Gilbert did more than that. He shot the ball to McGinnis and Murphy was a case for the undertaker. Monte Cross did not make the ball go out of the infield, but he beat it to the first bag just the same. When he tried to steal second, though, it was different. Bresnahan made a lightning throw. Poor Monte sank from view far from port. Bender, the Indian, seemed to have his former hoodoo on the Giants. He fanned McGinnis, his three-time victim of the other day. Mortes, however, mauling him prettily for a single, but "Sandow" acquired too big an idea of his sprinting ability and got nipped seeking to swine second. Then Bender struck out "Wild Bill" Dahlen on a man to first, first crack out of the box. Powers only hit a weak one, but Matty got mixed and Powers lived. But Bender's intended sacrifice was used by Matty in putting Powers out. Lord and Davis went out by planting the ball in Matty's hands and Cross went out Dahlen to McGinnis. That was a poor finish for aspirants for world's championship honors.

han, with a quick throw, caught Lord on every base scored important, but Love Cross' effort fell to Devlin, who turned it over to McGinnis with effective promptness.

It looked like more runs for the Giants in the sixth. Only the fastest kind of fielding prevented the Giants scoring in exactly the same manner that they had in the fifth. Matthewson banded out what looked like a safe one but Lord nabbed the fly. Bresnahan and Browne both cheated their way to first on bunts, and then Donlin tried to bring Roger in with a long fly, but Lord sent the ball back so fast that both runners were compelled to stay where they were. Bender still it on McGinnis a-3 struck him him out.

With only three innings ahead, the Athletics went down one, two, three in the seventh. Seibold swatted Leiber. Gilbert and McGinnis crushed Murphy, and Dahlen fell on Monte Cross' good looking hammer of the ball and handed it to McGinnis.

Matty Scores Final Run The sun looked very bright to the New York fans. It seemed to shine a sure sign of victory. Bender took care of Sandow's bloop hit. Dahlen, through the efforts of Monte Cross and Davis, found he had no right to stay on first base when he got there, and Hartsel took Devlin's sky puncher in hand. That one run looked as big as a mountain.

The eighth found that run still looking very large and important, for Mortes took Powers' fly in his keeping. Matty struck out his rival. The Indian and McGinnis punished Hartsel's grounder. Then while the 30,000 and more fans howled their inexorable delight, the Giants put a big snike in the coffin of the Athletics. Lord grabbed Gilbert's smash off the map, but Bender got wobbly again and presented Matty with a base. Roger Bresnahan smashed out a two-bagger. Matty went to third. Browne handed out one of his mystic bunts and by the time Bender and Murphy disentangled it, Matty had scored. Donlin fanned.

Lord and Davis went out by planting the ball in Matty's hands and Cross went out Dahlen to McGinnis. That was a poor finish for aspirants for world's championship honors.

ROSE VALLEY AS IT APPEARED THE MORNING OF ITS DISCOVERY SHOWING VACANT HILLS NOW THE GREAT HOUSE

HOME OF ALICE BARBER STEPHENS

REMODELED HOUSE AT ROSE VALLEY

BY FRANKLIN H. WESTWORTH.

If you get off the train at Moylan, an unpretentious little station 13 miles southwest of Philadelphia, turn down the road to the left and come to a point at which the road forks, you will see an artistic little finger-board pointing down the hill, bearing the inscription: "One-half mile to Rose Valley." The hill is thickly wooded at this point, but when you have gone on a few paces, and rounded a little knoll, there are no massive mountain peaks thrusting their white points into the blue to accentuate the attractions of the valley, there yet comes to one in looking at this Pennsylvania landscape a feeling singularly akin to that engendered by the first view of some of the most attractive of the Swiss valleys.

Charles Battell Loomis says that the most interesting thing to be seen in Europe is the American tourist, and travelers returning from the Orient say the only blot upon a Japanese landscape is the house built by an occidental. Perhaps the charm a Swiss valley holds for one springs from the fact that the contributions made by man there do not affront him. Such is undoubtedly the charm of this little Pennsylvania valley, at the bottom of which winds Ridley Creek. All about here is historic ground, with traditions of Washington and other revolutionary heroes; and yet, though so close to the great city of Philadelphia, the world curiously has moved past it.

Forty or fifty years ago Ridley Creek, with its modest little 35-horse-power, was turning the wheels of a number of small mills. The principal industry was snuff-making. Around these mills at attractive points of vantage clustered stone houses. Both houses and mills were given walls like those of a medieval castle. It was before the present era of cheap and shoddy structures.

Polite society abandoned snuff-taking and the snuff makers abandoned Rose Valley, leaving their stone houses and their stone mills empty of machinery and all human occupancy.

For 23 years Rose Valley was a well-nigh deserted village and the waters of Ridley Creek rippled away to the sea without turning a wheel, its possibilities in dynamic being too limited to attract the great factories of modern industrialism. Here the wild roses grew unpruned in riotous profusion, and the valley justified its name: the name given to it in a moment of admiration by the first Episcopal bishop of Pennsylvania, Bishop White.

One day in the early spring of the year 1901 two men of Philadelphia on a Sunday morning tramp came to the brow of the hill and looked down into the valley. They were Will Price and Hawley McLanahan, men of some means and considerable idealism. Both had built paternal residences of their own taste and choosing in different desirable parts of the city; both were artists in temperament, and both were expressing their lives in the profession of architecture.

"Hawley," said Price, "how would you like to take an exquisite vale like this and beautify it and live in it, getting entirely away from the tyranny of mere things and choosing your own neighbors?" "I'd like it," answered McLanahan. "I'd like to spend an hour at your house occasionally without paying two hours on trolley cars or in cabs as the penalty, and I'd like to get away from the house that's being inflicted on the landscape in view of my screened piazza. Every time I look in that direction I'm in danger of hypochondria."

"It would be fun," added Price, "to take these old stone buildings and work out a harmonious scheme with them. They would lend themselves readily to artistic effects. We could make homes of the houses and studios and workshops of the mills. When we had the job finished we could go gunning for agreeable neighbors and come and live here ourselves. Everything we care for in town is less than a half-hour away."

"All right," said McLanahan; "let's do it."

Today both of these men are living at Rose Valley. One of them is permanently established in one of the remodeled houses; the other is occupying a remodeled house while his permanent home is in process of erection. Both have sold their elaborate town residences and are living among simple things of a permanent art value. With them in this beautiful valley there is already a community of nearly one hundred permanent residents.

The past four years—since the April morning upon which Price and McLanahan "discovered" the valley—have worked a transformation. These men lost no time in going about their project, and the project grew and expanded and took on such interesting forms of expression that Rose Valley bids fair to become the principal life-interest of these idealists in art and social construction.

In July, 1901, the Rose Valley Association was chartered under Pennsylvania state laws, for the purpose of encouraging the manufacture of such articles involving artistic handicraft as are used in finishing, decorating and furnishing of houses. Thus even in three months the idea had grown in the minds of the founders from a mere place of agreeable residence to a place in which a purposeful work should be done.

Seventy acres in the heart of the valley, including the water-power rights and all the stone mills and houses, were purchased at once by the association, and options were secured upon desirable land adjacent. Work was at once begun in the direction of improvements. The houses were remodeled, water and drainage supplied, and modern conveniences installed. The four small streams or brooks emptying into Ridley Creek were harnessed for the water supply and were found to possess in themselves the power to operate pumps large enough to lift the water to the level of the house tanks. Ridley Creek and its tributaries is the only stream within 15 miles of the city that is not polluted by dyestuffs. Ridley Creek is guarded by the state as the water supply to the town of Media, and is as clear as crystal.

Twenty-five thousand dollars, its entire capital stock, was expended the first year by the association in the purchase of the land and the alteration of the buildings, 15 acres of the tract being set aside as a permanent park. The largest of the old stone snuff mills was remodeled into a Guest-house, simply but artistically finished, and equipped with generous and comfortable furniture. It made an ideal and agreeable living quarters during the reconstruction of the individual houses, and today is the public hostelry of Rose Valley, where people may come at any time to visit the local shops, or simply to enjoy the peaceful and restful atmosphere of the settlement and the society of its interesting inhabitants. Before the main doorway hangs a sign of quaint design, which reads:

"Food for the Hungry, Drink for the Thirsty, And quiet Rest at the Rose Valley Guesthouse."

One must pay a visit to Rose Valley to dispel the conflicting rumors about it that pass current in the clubs of Philadelphia. From one you learn that it is a plaything of two or three rich men including a penchant for aestheticism; from another that it is a paternalistic scheme for the purpose of furnishing stereotyped happiness to needy persons; from another that it is an enterprise in real estate looking to the establishment of a model factory town, and from another that it is one more of the countless experiments in communism.

Rose Valley is no one of these things. The association undertakes the production or manufacture of nothing whatever. Neither is it a scheme of benevolence. It simply furnishes Rose Valley, and in so far as it can, equality of opportunity. The rest is left to individual initiative. It is not an attempt to make anything. It is merely an effort to let something grow by furnishing favorable conditions. A number of rich men have offered money for establishing industries at Rose Valley, but their offers have been declined. It is not the object to establish a factory town. Rose Valley does not want money; it wants men and women of the quality that art and craft occupations develop. It is a place to go to look for work with you.

Suppose you were an artist, or an instructor, or a worker in metals, or a poet, living in the average stuffy atmosphere of Philistinia and upholstery in town, and that you wanted to find a place to live in and do your work amid harmonious surroundings. Rose Valley would say to you, "Here is a place provided for you by people of your own kind; people who want such a place themselves to live and work in; people who understand the artistic and temperamental values, and who also aspire to produce something worth while."

Then, if you liked, you might do one of these things; you might buy a site in the valley for your home and studio and build to your taste; or you might lease the ground of the association for the same purpose; or you might go and live at the Guest-house, free from cares of housekeeping, and do your work in a shop or studio fitted into a corner of one of the old mill buildings, where already are the furniture shop, the pottery and a number of the other crafts.

But there is one thing you cannot do with profit, and that is to speculate in Rose Valley land. Rose Valley does not wish to have its social life warped or destroyed by land grabbing. Hence, in every deed of land sold outright the privilege is reserved to the association to buy back the land at the same price at which it is sold, should residence in Rose Valley have to be discontinued for any reason. Houses built upon leased land may, of course, be sold if desired and the lease transferred to the purchaser. The studios and shops with water power are rented to individuals as desired, the rentals going to pay the interest on the $25,000 capital stock of the association. This interest is limited to 5 per cent, and everything above this in the way of revenue, from whatever source, goes into improvements of value to the common life of the valley.

It will therefore be apparent that the extent of Rose Valley's artificial com-munitarianism is only a barrier against the plundering of community values by possible land speculators. Everything else is left to the volition of the individual resident, who may or may not take part in the social life of the community, as his time and inclination admit.

There is one further reservation by the association, however, and that is the Rose Valley seal or craft "trade-mark." It is a conventionalized rose with the letter V in the center, and it is meant to stand for honesty and quality of material and workmanship. Anyone coming to work at Rose Valley as an individual may stamp this seal upon his product without charge as soon as he demonstrates that the character of his work entitles him to it. The association is the judge of this. Its object is to have every product marketed from Rose Valley shops honest in its value, and worthy of all confidence.

The idea of a village made up wholly of individuals, interesting because of what they are rather than because of what they have, is already in the advanced stages of realization in this beautiful vale. And one senses the psychology of it the moment he enters therein. It is immensely stimulating to a sensitive temperament and a fostering influence over the real social instincts.

Everyone in Rose Valley has pride in the Rose Valley furniture, and fingers, more or less lovingly, over every new and beautiful design which the enthusiasts of the shop may turn out. The furniture shop is now in the third year of its operation, and has turned out furniture that has a rare and distinguishable quality. John Mason, master workman at Rose Valley, is instructor in wood carving and modeling at the Drexel Institute.

W. P. Jarvis, master potter, author of "The Encyclopedia of Ceramics" and other authoritative works on pottery, moved last year from Corona, Long Island, and established himself at Rose Valley, and has already produced a masterpiece which Tiffany's pronounce the finest they have ever seen. Mr. Jarvis' work is of the nature of "directed accidents," each article produced having its own particular markings impossible to duplicate, so that every piece of Rose Valley pottery may be considered unique. The recent Jarvis exhibition in Philadelphia was received with acclaim, both by those who are rather prejudiced in favor of traditional standards and those in whom any fresh individual note struck is likely to excite enthusiasm.

Besides the furniture and the pottery there is the print shop, where books are made and from whence there is issued every month a beautiful little publication called the Artsman, a chronicle of Rose Valley life, and a brief of its aspirations and what of beautiful things the shops are making. It has a publication office in Philadelphia at 1623 Walnut street, and is edited by another devoted spirit—Horace Traubel, one of the literary ex-ecutors of Walt Whitman, and the editor of the Conservator, a monthly publication, the magnitude of whose influence is out of all proportion to the number of its circulation.

The present year has brought to Rose Valley as a permanent resident Alice Barber Stephens, the artist and illustrator, who has given the world such delight by her exquisite illustrations of Roy Roife Gilson's short stories, and other drawings for Harpers' and the other leading magazines. There is a peculiar tenderness in her conception of childhood which gets hold of the heartstrings immediately. Mr. Stephens is himself an artist who has made a valuable and unique collection of American Indian costumes, weapons and curios, and who devotes himself to representing Indian life in all its phases. His house, just completed at Rose Valley, is a good example of what the architectural genius of Will Price can create out of an old stone barn. Its interior, with the large and fascinating studios of both Mr. and Mrs. Stephens on different floors, and the exquisite harmony of the living-rooms, is satisfying to the art sense of the visitor.

It will readily be seen that a community of such spirits as are already established at Rose Valley contains within itself all the elements of that much-mooted thing called society. Individuals whom the wealth and fashion of Philadelphia and the bewildering army of tuff-busters are always eager to wine and dine here live simply and beautifully, each contributing his or her share to the common life of the settlement.

And a real spirit of true communism unquestionably appears wherever people associate upon simple human conditions not gauged by their incomes. They come to feel an interest in and a responsibility for every detail of the common life. One of the master workmen of Rose Valley made for pure love of it two carved gateposts for the entrance to the shops. He took two massive logs and carved the end of each into a bear and set them where the lane leads off the main road. They were one of the joys and prizes of the village. But one morning the people awoke to find the bears gone, sawed off the logs by vandals. The whole community was stirred to indignation by this ruthless theft. A vigorous search was instituted and the bears were finally located. Swarthmore College is just over the hill from Rose Valley. Some ruffians of the Phi Kappa Psi Fraternity had stolen the bears and had them in their clubrooms, where they were found by the constable. The bears came back, but not to their posts; they are now in the Guild Hall as monuments to the refining influences of college fraternities.

But the negative phases of the Rose Valley spirit which was expressed in protest at this vulgar outrage finds its contrast and verification in the enthusiasm over the Guild Hall, which is but another of the old stone mills converted by architectural magic and conservation into a most beautiful common house. Here the villagers meet one another without the restraint incident to assemblies at private homes; here the monthly "folk-mote," or town-meeting for discussions of matters of common local interest, is held; here are given lectures, plays, concerts and dancing parties, and here are celebrated the annual festivals in which the whole village, men, women and children, partake, to the present number of nearly 100. The Guild Hall is a communal possession. It was remodeled, finished, decorated and furnished wholly by love labor. Almost every man in Rose Valley did some actual work upon it just for the joy of it. The communal Christmas tree last Yuletide, the first since the hall was finished, was like a holiday frolic and a dedication of the beautiful common house.

But the great social event at Rose Valley is the New Year's festival. On the 31st of last December the Guild Hall was the scene of this annual community celebration. All the village and a dozen visitors were present. At about 4:30, when the company had assembled, the Christmas tree candles were lighted. The illuminated tree, with the blazing logs in the big fireplace, helped the holiday cheer. The children of the local kindergarten sang songs about the tree. Every family had sent presents to the hall for the children, which were distributed to the happy youngsters by Alice Barber Stephens. At 7 o'clock the company sat down to the community supper, after which the tables were cleared, the chairs rearranged and a concert given upon the stage, followed by a one-act play enacted by Rose Valley actors. The old year was watched out by those who stepped to conclude the festivities with a dance.

Although the visitors to Rose Valley never fail to make their contribution to Guild Hall functions, yet there is so much talent—musical, dramatic and literary—of exceptional quality among the residents themselves that the society can import nothing better than that they already have. The children of the Valley are growing up to know and appreciate the very best things in art, music and literature, for they see and hear nothing else.

When one contemplates the life at Rose Valley he finds himself wondering why all people do not live this way—at any rate, all who can. It brings a sense of relief to get away from the dyablic conditions of town houses, crowded with indigestible goods, into a place where every decoration is made with a coherent purpose and designed merely to hide something or fill a space. There is no difference in essence between art and life; one is simply the expression of the other. All the confusions and misunderstandings about art come from cutting art off from life, and regarding it as a thing apart in Rose Valley art is life; and whatever of life is there consequently takes on naturally and unconsciously the art expression. The children express art ideas and principles in their play.

It may be asked, in these days of social revolution, what Rose Valley is doing for the crowd. The answer is that Rose Valley is not trying to do anything for the crowd; it must be valued by the thing it is doing at, and it aims only to enrich life in one spot. Yet such a community may unconsciously shadow forth in a modified sense the type of the coming industrial civilization. It may disintegrate eventually, and utterly fail, and yet be prophetic.

For the richer the general life at Rose Valley may be the richer the individual life which partakes of it must be. It is the idea of the individual life poured into the common herd and receiving back the infinite riches which mere selfish individual striving never can obtain. There is here no imposed communism. But those who have come to Rose Valley have already done certain things in common and found peace and joy therein; and they will co-operate more and more in certain general directions as time goes on and the advantages of effort so direct are realized.

"Why should not a comprehensive circle of shops gather here, do work all of them of the same high standard, enjoy and dignify the Rose Valley seal in common, live like human beings with room to move round in and decent air to breathe, sustain necessary trade relations with the conventional world, do certain things in common for adding to the grace and reducing the angles of domestic economy, and so, in its own way, unpretentiously, with no exalted notions of its own significance, make a demonstration of private faith?" asks Horace Traubel. Which, so to speak, is all that Rose Valley started out to do.

Anyhow, in the four years which have elapsed since Will Price and Hawley McLanahan came into Rose Valley, at least the dream they dreamed that April morning has come true; they have the society they longed for, and they do not have to ride on trolley cars to get to it.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful It Is in Preserving Health and Beauty. Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose. Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system. Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables. Charcoal effectively clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic. It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh. All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey. The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and pure blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit. A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

the first goal from the field the home team resorted to a kicking game entirely and kicked on first down almost every time. As the visitors could not gain and had to return the kick the university team gained a good distance on each exchange. Touchdown Made. The university scored a touchdown in the first half, but a mixup in the decision as to whether it was third or fourth down was conceded by Captain Mills as a fourth down and the score was not counted. The ball was given to Carlisle on the three-yard line and, on the kick, Mills heeled the ball on the thirty-yard line for a free try at goal. Borden kicked the ball between the posts for the first score of the game, Mills holding it. In the second half Borden scored another goal from the field after getting the ball in the academy's territory on a fumble in which Hudson fell on the ball. The second goal was made from placement, with Mills holding the ball at the thirty-yard line. Upon the next kickoff the university team changed its tactics and started a rushing game. They made five to ten yards at a clip but time was called before the final line could be made. The feature of the game was the presence on the field of Collins, the 260-pound guard of the visitors. No suit was large enough for him, so he played in a pair of overalls, cut off at the knees. Thanks to his weight the average weight of the Carlisle team was about 150 pounds. The game with Simmons college, which was to have been played at Abilene next Saturday, has been canceled by Simmons. The line-up Saturday was as follows: Fort Worth—Right end, Hobbs; right tackle, Hudson; right guard, Lassen; center, Shawson; left guard, Kimball; left tackle, Smith; left end, Charbonneau; quarter, Moore; right half, Payton; left half, Mills (captain); fullback, Borden. Carlisle—Right end, Kelly (Dorsey); right tackle, Lewis; right guard, Crutcher; center, Keller; left guard, Collins; left tackle, Graves; left end, Axtell (McAdams); quarter, Looney (captain); right half, Lamonia; left half, Lynn; fullback, Woollen. Referee, Linton; umpire, DeLaney; timer, Cox. Goals from field, Borden 2. Time of halves, 20 and 15 minutes.

FIELD GOALS WIN FOR UNIVERSITY

Fine Exhibition of Kicking Game Given Here Saturday Against Carlisle. Fort Worth University won the Carlisle Military Academy game Saturday afternoon with a score of 8 to 0. The scores were all made on goals from the field, one in each half. The game was seriously marred by the continuous disputing of decisions by the Carlisle team. The game was otherwise one of the finest that has been played here for some time, neither team being able to gain consistently except at the end when the university started. The university won principally through the superior kicking of Borden, who gained a large number of yards on each exchange. After scoring

Strong Individuality in This Season's Millinery

The charm of this season's Hats lies largely in their individuality. The reason is that everything depends on the tilt or angle at which it is worn, and the tilt must be becoming to the wearer—a point secured absolutely in the diversity of styles shown here.

Special Showing of Hats at $2.95, $5.95, $8.95 "The Fair's" special lines of $2.95, $5.95 and $8.95 Hats show the full range of the season's smartest designs, the execution being as careful and the variety as great as in the most expensive millinery.

Main Thing in Fur Buying, Know Where to Buy

The point of prime importance to every intending buyer of Furs is the reliability—as to quality and style—of the stock from which selection is to be made. That point with economy, constitutes the strong attraction of The Fair's Fur stock. Granbury was the center of social interest last week, the marriage of Jeff D. McLean to Miss Lena Cogdell of that town being an event that attracted widespread attention throughout this and several other states. In Fort Worth it has been the favorite theme of conversation between friends who delighted in the romance that gave to one distinguished county attorney a bride of fair, lovable and altogether charming and to the bride a husband that men have delighted to honor and who embodies manhood's best qualities.

The wedding day at Granbury, therefore, interested hundreds of friends and the special train that took the bridal party out did not by any means carry all those who were interested. The Cogdell home was brilliantly illuminated and the masses of white chrysanthemums and wild and hot house smilax that filled the wedding suite was effective with its mingling of green shaded lights.

In the bay window of the front parlor was the green framed altar for the ceremony. The canopy formed by smilax from the ceiling to the center of the window of bed suspended from it a wedding bell of white roses. The sides of the window was a frame of palms, potted plants and ferns.

In the dining room the smilax was used on the sideboard and buffet. The dining table was covered with a white satin cloth edged with a satin ruffle. Tulle streamers extended from the table corners to the electrolier and bows were tied around the green silk shades. Cut glass bon bon dishes were filled with white and green mints and the wedding cake occupied the center of the table with silver and cut glass accessories.

Before the ceremony Miss House of St. Louis sang "O Promise Me," with accompaniment by Mrs. M. E. Shandy, who played Mendelssohn's wedding march for the bride. The bride and party and during the ceremony "Hearts and Flowers."

The ribbon girls, Josephine Cogdell and Vera Glenn, formed the aisle from the doorway to the bridegroom and his brother, Dr. J. H. McLean, entered from the library, while through the aisle came first Miss Hannaford and W. H. Slay, assistant county attorney; Miss House of St. Louis, and Charles Pain. Miss Shugart of Kansas City was the maid of honor. The ceremony was read by Rev. Dr. Moore of Indian Territory, who had also been the officiating minister at the marriage of two other daughters of the Cogdell home.

The wedding gown was an imported robe of hand made lace with panels and flounces of rose panels. The veil was fastened with a small crown of orange blossoms. The bridal bouquet was of bride roses, the white satin ribbon being knotted around sprays of lilies of the valley. The only ornament was a diamond crescent, the gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Hannaford and Miss House wore lace trimmed radium crowns and carried bouquets of white chrysanthemums. Miss Shugart's maid of honor frock was a corded silk princess under slip with overslip of "Val" lace, hand-whipped, finished with a series of five flounces, making a full ruffle. The bouquet was of white "mums."

After the gavottes of cutting the wedding cake and congratulations, the wedding party came into Fort Worth on the special train. Mr. and Mrs. McLean left for Denver immediately and will spend several weeks in the cities of the mountains.

The bride's going away gown was of green cloth, long-sleeved, with a machine trimmed hat, shoes and gloves of corresponding color.

The house party was composed of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Cogdell, Mr. and Mrs. Gaston Cogdell, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Cogdell, Mr. and Mrs. Julius, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Rhome, "Buster" Cogdell, Mesdames House and Kelly of St. Louis and Clarence Early of Brownwood and W. G. Cook of El Paso.

The Fort Worth friends present were Mr. and Mrs. W. P. McLean Jr., Mrs. Lloyd Pollock, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott, Miss Margaret McLean, Mrs. W. P. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. K. K. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. John Terrell, Mrs. Hunter Wilson, Captain M. B. Loyd, Colonel Taylor, Judge Connor, Max Mayer, Jas. W. Swayne, Judge Millam and Miss Marie Cottier of St. Pleasant.

Among the many handsome presents one attracted more attention than the gifts from the county and city officials, a nine-piece dining room set, a cut glass punch bowl and dozen glasses, a cut glass ice cream service, a silver commode and a dozen plates, testified to the esteem of a hundred official associates.

The parents of the bride presented them with a chest of silver. After the wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. McLean will be at home at the Hotel Worth until the completion of their home in Eighth avenue.

The members of the I. H. F. Club were charmingly entertained by Mrs. E. Duffey at her residence, 312 Lincoln street, last Thursday afternoon. Beautiful La France and Marcelle Noell roses with the modest but dainty quince's wreath of asparagus ferns were effectively used in decorating parlor and dining room. Master Fred Duffey passed the score cards. After nine games of high-five the club prize, a lovely embroidered center piece, was cut for by Mesdames N. C. Hinkley and J. V. Jay, the latter winning. Mrs. J. E. Brewster won the guests' prize, a Japanese cup and saucer. After the games the hostess, assisted by Mrs. J. O. Littinger and G. G. Neil, served a dainty lunch consisting of salmon sandwiches, olive cheese, strawberries and coffee. Several fine piano selections were played by Miss Pearl Lovellett.

Those present were—Club members: J. V. Jay, A. Raboy, M. Lavin, J. O. Littinger, T. Flinn, P. C. Byrnes, W. H. Horrell, N. T. Hinkley, D. Howe, J. E. Kennedy, F. P. Mueller, J. Polan-Corshenny, A. O. Neil, D. J. Hoynes, Miss Katie Baker. The guests were Mesdames S. L. Gerack, Mrs. E. E. Green, J. E. Brewster, J. E. Nichol, G. G. Neil; Misses Pearl Lovellett, Bell Lawrence, Helen Littinger.

Mrs. D. J. Hoynes entertains the club next Friday afternoon.

Miss Lizzie Haley entertained the S. F. C. Club at the hospitable home of her sister, Mrs. W. L. Harrison, 1414 May street, on Friday evening. The occasion was a delightful one, the genial hostess sparing no effort for the enjoyment of her guests. At 10:30 a generous repast of cake, cream and luscious fruits was served. The youthful guests were delighted with the evening's entertainment.

Choice selections on piano and phonograph were given by Miss Nellie Harrison and Ollie Eyles. Those present were Misses Josephine Owens, Wadie House, Mazie Edwards, Mattie Gamble, Emma Cole, Jennie Sydnor, Ina Willis, Lucille Blake, Myrtle Austin, Lela Dale and Nellie Harris; Messrs. Charles Farnsworth, Homer Lyons, Tom Whitworth, Dallas Austin, Grover Wheaton, Percy

The Ladies of the Elks will hold an important meeting in the Elks' Club rooms next Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Every member of the organization is requested to be present, as important business is to be transacted.

The engagement and approaching wedding of Miss Ruby Lyles to F. C. Switzer is announced. The wedding will be at the Lyles home, Wednesday evening, Nov. 8, at 7:30 o'clock. No cards will be issued. Mr. Switzer's home is Mangum, I. T., and that city will be their residence after marriage.

The Imperials will have one of their informal dances in their club rooms next Friday evening. The Ladies of the Elks held an important meeting in the Elks' Club rooms last Friday afternoon, electing officers for the ensuing year and planning the features of their organization. Mrs. F. T. Crittenden was elected president, Mrs. Morgan Hyman vice president and Mrs. Harry McCart secretary and treasurer.

In addition to the social side of their organization, the ladies this year will devote much of their energies to charitable undertakings.

CLUBS The Friendship Study Club met with Mrs. Wholenberg, 1114 Bessie street on Tuesday last and enjoyed a most pleasant as well as profitable afternoon with current events as their topic. Members and their friends are invited to a tea at the home of Mrs. J. Carpenter, 1205 W. Broadway, on Tuesday, Oct. 17, from 3 to 6 o'clock.

The Penelope Club has resumed work after the summer rest. The first study afternoon was held last Tuesday afternoon in the club rooms and was a very enthusiastic meeting. Mrs. A. H. McCarty read a paper, "The Colonization of America." The paper was ably written and well delivered.

Mrs. R. L. Boaz, director for the meeting, by her practical and thorough knowledge of history, made the lesson very interesting, and the discussion, "Causes Which Led to the Permanent Colonization of America," was appreciated by all.

The club looks forward to a very interesting year in American history, art and literature. The questions have been arranged by the director of each meeting.

PERSONAL Miss Vada Pankey has returned from a visit with San Antonio friends. Mrs. Florence Stevens of Chicago is visiting her sister, Mrs. F. M. Dr. 401 Magnolia avenue. Mr. and Mrs. John Phelps of Baltimore are at the Country Club during their visit here.

Miss Mary Harrison, who has been east for several weeks, will arrive home tomorrow. Miss Madeline McCart will leave in a few days for Louisville, Ky., to spend the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Freefield have removed to their new home, 1000 East Belknap street. Mr. and Mrs. Ben Rose and baby removed to Oklahoma City for permanent residence.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Harris and children of Dallas are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Freefield. Mrs. Lawrence of Houston, who has been visiting Mrs. J. H. Lehane, has returned home.

Miss Tom Montgomery took a short trip up the Frisco to meet Mrs. Winfield Scott on the home coming Friday.

Mrs. W. H. Irwin will leave this week for New York to join Mr. Irwin. From New York they go to Cuba for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Tillar are expected home from Colorado this week. Mrs. John Elliott of Dallas visited Mrs. J. Malcolm Brown last week. Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Scott and Miss V. Y. Jay returned home last Friday from a two month trip to Montana, Oregon and the northwest.

Miss Fannie Prince, who has been the guest of Mrs. H. Veal Jewel for the past two months, returned to her home in Sweetwater Saturday. M. G. Brownson and wife, whose marriage took place at the bride's home in Amarillo Sept. 28, have returned to the city after their eastern trip.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Reimers have as guests their son, F. W. Reimers, and his bride, who are on their wedding tour. Their stay in Fort Worth will be short on account of Mr. Reimers' important business engagements.

Miss Adele Palmer was in the city last week visiting her mother, Mrs. May A. Palmer. Miss Palmer left Friday night for Kansas City to join Harry Martell's vaudeville company, in which she is the leading woman. Miss Palmer lived in Fort Worth twelve years ago and thinks the rapid growth of our city is wonderful.

A Fancy Name A young married woman out for an airing in Central Park, took a seat on a bench along the west drive, where an aged negro sat minding a bowlegged pickaninny. Presently the old dandy called the child something which sounded to the white woman like "Exy." "Exy?" she said, "that's a queer name for a baby, isn't it, Auntie?" "Dat ain't her full name," explained the old negro, "dat's 'nats' 'nats' de pet name I got her for short. Dat chile got a mighty fancy soundin' name. Her ma—dat's my daughter—picked out for her in a medicine book. Yessum, de chile's full name is Eczema."—New York Sun.

SOCIETY

Miss Edna Mae Card entertained the Daisies Saturday morning, the players being Misses Nell Trippett, Edna Pendleton, Allie Mallard, Bessie Edmond, Dingle, Annie Newlin, Bess Bibb, Rintelman, Kelley of Sherman, Jordan of Hico, Allen of Dallas, Connell and Church. Pictures as prizes were won by Misses Newlin and Connell, while the third prize went to Miss Bess Bibb. While the "Daisy" cream and cake were being served Messrs. King and Mrs. W. M. Evans was the hostess of the first large card party of the season last Tuesday and the guests were kept busy admiring the dainty arrangement for their pleasure. The place cards were art paper in leaf shape, bearing a tiny envelope with the card of the guest within its folds. Blackberry nectar was served during the afternoon and orange salad, olives, ice cream and cakes when the prize playing was over. Score was kept by Misses Larimer, Moriarity, Connell and Bibb, while Miss Ala Brown passed the nectar. The club prize, a cut glass nappy, went to Mrs. Nugent and the guest prize, its mate, to Miss Bostick. The souvenirs for each table were the lunch clothes of pastel green, with rose pink satin ribbons. These were cut for by the players at the table when the games closed. The guests of the afternoon: Mesdames Harper, Camps, Heffley, McElwee, Beckham, Lehane, Lawrence, Darnell, Brown, W. H. Coombs, Robert Coombs, Robertson, Moriarity, Larimer, Hudson, Nugent, Ma-

HOME ENTERTAINMENTS OPAL LUNCHEON FOR OCTOBER

TIN WEDDING CELEBRATION October Birthstone Suggests Pretty Color Scheme for a Function—Electric Bulbs Among the Flowers—A Many-Colored Menu—Tin Bridal Bouquet at a Tin Wedding—Tin Service for the Table.

BY EDITH A. BROWN. (Copyright, 1905, by Joseph B. Bowles.) The fall, with its colorings, its green and turning leaves and its late flowers, makes the choice of the opal as the October birthstone very appropriate.

The table decorations may be in sweet peas, their many delicate colors corresponding beautifully to the colors of the room. For the "red" of the opal the rich red autumn leaves may be used, and the dahlias, too, are of the tones which are available for such an affair.

Another good idea for an opal luncheon is found in filling a many-colored glass bowl—the regular opal bowls—with flowers, and dropping the bulb of a drop-light in the bowl. The wire from the chandelier may be twined with flowers or sn-lix. Little light bulbs may be hidden among the sweet peas about other places on the table, also.

The place cards may be decorated in water color, with one of the cheap opals to be found on the novelty counters of the city stores, run through the corner.

An ordinary luncheon menu should be served, the courses weaving in as many colors as possible. One of the difficulties with which the average hostess finds herself confronted is the choice of appropriate placecard inscriptions. Such a hostess may find the following of use:

- For the nearest and dearest friend: A perfect woman, nobly planned. To warn, to comfort, and to command. To warn, to comfort, and to command. —Wordsworth. For a popular man of rank: The rank is but the guinea's stamp. The man's the gold for 'a' that. —Burns. For the sunny girl: Born to give joy and bring peace to the world. For the military man: Be that you seem, truly your country's friend. —Shakespeare. For the athletic actor: Good at a fight, but better at a play. Moore. For the smoker: For thy sake, tobacco, I Would do anything but die. —Lamb. For the clergyman: There goes the parson, O illustrious spark! —Cooper. For the jolly man: A man he seems of cheerful yesterdays, And confident to-morrow. —Wordsworth. For the very courteous man: He is the very pinnacle of politeness. —Sheridan.

FAMOUS NOVELIST WIDELY MOURNED

Publishers Objected to Sermonizing of George MacDonald, But Work Pleas'd World

BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET. (Copyright, 1905, by Hearst News Service.) LONDON, Oct. 14.—To all who loved the man who pre-eminently stood in these modern days as the apostle of love, the news of George MacDonald's recent death must have come with a real sigh of relief.

For years the great intellect which had been the inspiration of so many had been clouded, and the winged spirit held prisoner in the body was not allowed to take its flight. But now he has gone who more than any other told stories which were sermons in the highest, truest sense. Some years ago George MacDonald said to the Mediterranean Sea and told a well-known man that the publishers objected to his preaching so much, but he said: "If I were to lose all my public, I must continue to give the message that is given to me for the world."

The words of a well-known writer spoken of St. Vincent de Paul can well apply to George MacDonald: "He was a man of open army and with a heart as wide as the sea."

Of Dr. Barnardo, who passed away the same week, I cannot write today, as I hope next week to send a full account of my knowledge of him which has spread over many years, but I can say without hesitation that he is the greatest philanthropist of our generation.

These two have gone, and their work on this side is ended. Stead in Russia There is a man whose name must always arouse interest, and who is a very outstanding figure, and full of vivid interest at this moment.

Mr. Stead comes of the class in England who less than any other excites a romantic interest, but who are, nevertheless, the strength of our nation, the middle class nonconformist. Early in life he drifted into journalism, but his genius was destined to take him far, and he became the best known journalist in the country. In 1859 he came to London as assistant journalist to John Morley on the Pall Mall Magazine, and when the editor entered parliament in 1859 he succeeded to his important post. I have often asked myself wherein lay the extraordinary power of this man, and the vivid personality which he possesses, and I believe I am right in saying that its strength is to be found in his unshaken belief that to cause the picture and the point of view he takes is the right one. If he thinks he can do right Mr. Stead will go straight to the point. He revels in opposition; he delights in persecution.

He has always had for Russia a romantic devotion, and to him discretion is an unknown quality. He never goes to his point by tortuous roads; he takes the shortest cut, and he will use all legitimate means to reach his end. FULL OF TRAGIC MEANING are these lines from J. H. Simmons of Casey, Iowa. Think what might have resulted from his terrible cough if he had not taken the medicine about which he writes: "I had a fearful cough, that disturbed my night's rest. I tried everything, but nothing would relieve it, until I took Dr. King's New Discovery, for Croup, Whooping Cough, and Colds, which completely cured me." Instantly relieves and permanently cures all throat and lung diseases; prevents grip and pneumonia. At Walpole & Fielder's, Holland's, Red Cross Pharmacy, Renfro Drug Co.

our childhood, and our astronomy goes no further than Twinkle, twinkle, little star. How I wonder what you are. But after all, the poet generally is a good bit ahead of the scientist, and all the learned astronomers who are chasing from point to point in a laudable search for knowledge, watching the sun's eclipse, are perhaps not so very much nearer the heart of things.

It may be that in some future life this knowledge will also be ours, and we shall say with understanding: How I stretched the Universe. There, far as the remotest line. That bounds imagination's flight, Countless and unending orbs In mazy motion intermingled, Whirled about the great Eternal Nature's law. One of the most interesting features, as I saw it of the recent eclipse, was the fact that for about fifteen minutes, when the moon was between us and the sun, only a crescent of light was to be observed, and this was reflected on the pathway and on the trees, on the meadows and the lake. These myriads of crescents told us that the moon obscured the sun, and that a great natural phenomenon was taking place.

SYNDICATE TO RAISE WARSHIP AND FORTUNE Italian Company Employed by Czar to Recover English Craft Sunk in Crimean War (Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.) ODESSA, Oct. 14.—The Italian syndicate which is to attempt to raise from the bottom of Balaklava Bay a great English warship which was sunk by the Russian land batteries during the Crimean war, and which had on board $3,000,000, has started to examine the bottom of the bay.

NATURE STUDY HELD OF DOUBTFUL VALUE Chicago Department Store Managers Say It Does Not Properly Equip School Children NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—More than $25,000,000 was asked yesterday by the board of education of this city for next year's expenses. Comptroller Groat, commenting on this request before the board of estimate and apportionment, said: "It seems to me that the only way to achieve anything in the improvement of the schools is to give the board of education all it wants and demands and then trust to good fortune that the good things are done along with the useless things."

STOCKS

Special to The Telegram. NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Trading was purely professional and very light in volume on the stock exchange today. Speculators were inclined to wait for the bank statement, which was expected to be a favorable one and when issued it proved to be even better than had been anticipated.

There was considerable buying of Canadian Pacific by arbitrage houses and local bull interests. The general market closed rather irregular, with all issues denoting fractional changes.

NEW YORK STOCK QUOTATIONS. NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Stocks opened and closed today on the New York Stock Exchange as follows:

Table with columns: Am. Locomotive, Atchafalaya, Bell and Ohio, Brook. Rap. Tran., Canadian Pacific, etc.

KANSAS CITY PUTS AND CALLS. KANSAS CITY, Oct. 14.—Following puts and calls were quoted on this market:

GRAIN

Special to The Telegram. CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—Liverpool closed 1-4 lower on wheat, being affected slightly by freer Manitoba offerings. The local market ruled firm during the early trading on lighter receipts in the north-west and good buying by the bull crowd.

The world's shipments are estimated at 8,800,000 bushels. Australian shipments, 128,000 bushels. Local receipts, 69 cars. The northwest received 694 cars against 943 cars last year. Winnipeg receipts amounted to 500 cars. Kansas City reports 27 cars.

Corn ruled dull and the undertone was weak. The close showed a loss of 1-8. Local receipts, 241 cars; Kansas City, 45 cars. Primary movement, 295,000 bushels. Clearances, 2,000 bushels.

CHICAGO GRAIN AND PROVISIONS. CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—The grain and provision markets were quoted today as follows:

Table with columns: Wheat, Corn, Oats, etc.

KANSAS CITY GRAIN AND PROVISIONS. KANSAS CITY, Oct. 14.—The grain and provision markets were quoted today as follows:

Table with columns: Wheat, Corn, Oats, etc.

HESTER'S WEEKLY STATEMENT. Reserves, increase, $5,225,225. Less U. S. increase, 5,225,225.

KANSAS CITY PUTS AND CALLS. KANSAS CITY, Oct. 14.—Following puts and calls were quoted on this market:

COTTON

Special to The Telegram. NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—The market was quiet during the short session today, opening firm and unchanged to 2 points off.

The market was very lively supplied with cattle, the demand being strong on any kind of cattle. Beef steers were mostly on the grass order, coming from North-west Texas and Indian Territory.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON. Special to The Telegram. NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 14.—This market closed steady. Spots are unchanged at 97-10c, with sales of 750 bales and 650 f. o. b. Futures advanced 5 to 6 points on the day.

LIVERPOOL COTTON CABLE. LIVERPOOL, Oct. 14.—The cotton market was steady. Early months made no change, while others closed at gains of a few points for some and a loss of 1 or 2 points on others.

Table with columns: October, November, December, etc.

LIVERPOOL WEEKLY STATEMENT. LIVERPOOL, Oct. 14.—The Liverpool Cotton Association today issued the following comparative statement:

Table with columns: Total sales, For export, American, etc.

PORT RECEIPTS. Receipts at the important accumulation points today, compared with receipts last year.

ESTIMATED MONDAY. Following are the estimated receipts for Monday, compared with the receipts of same day last year:

Table with columns: New Orleans, Galveston, Houston, etc.

$10,000 Damages Wanted. LAWTON, O. T., Oct. 14.—A. R. Ayers, formerly a merchant of Lawton, Oklahoma, instituted suit against Sam Strauss and L. A. Troppe, also merchants, for $10,000 alleged damages sustained by the defendant having secured an illegal attachment against a stock of goods held by Ayers.

BUSINESS LOCALS. James A. Bannister, $5 and $6 Shoes. None better. Monig's. The J. J. Langever Co., opposite city hall, interior decorators and sign painters.

TRADE NOTES. If possible when weaning the lambs, the ewes should be placed in a field out of hearing of the lambs.

Buttermilk, provided no water is added, is practically of the same value for feeding pig as separator milk.

England imported 260,555 cwt. of beef during July. The United States supplied 2,500 cwt. Argentine sent 151,317 cwt.

There is a shortage of horses and mules. The only remedy for this situation is for breeders to hold good ones for high prices and breed the mares more diligently.

It is a bad habit to borrow anything, but the worst thing you can possibly borrow is trouble.

PLANS BILL FOR FEDERAL LIFE INSURANCE CONTROL

BY JOHN F. DRYDEN.
My life insurance bill will provide an amendment to the act which established the department of commerce and labor. It proposes an officer called superintendent of insurance, in charge of an insurance division, and who shall be appointed by the President, with confirmation by the senate. Associated with him will be an official to be known as the national actuary.
The bill will provide that the policies of insurance are deemed to be articles of interstate commerce. This act will not apply to any corporation transacting insurance business exclusively in one state, and will have no application to any religious, charitable or fraternal institution.
The superintendent of insurance will have the power to fix fees, establish rules and regulations for conducting the business. Annual reports will be made to the superintendent by corporations, and that officer will be vested with the power to examine into the business and affairs of the corporations for the purpose of determining their solvency and trustworthiness.
Each corporation will be compelled to deposit with the United States treasury, as a guarantee for the faithful performance of its contracts, the sum of $100,000. Licenses will be issued to insurance corporations by the superintendent, providing the companies have complied with the rules. The superintendent will have the power to revoke these licenses for cause.

Staff Special to The Telegram.
NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—A definite plan for government control of life insurance has been agreed upon and congress will be asked to pass the necessary legislation at the session soon to open.
Senator John F. Dryden of New Jersey will introduce the bill, and President Roosevelt will back it with all his influence.
The ideas in the bill, which declares life insurance interstate commerce, are partly those of the President and partly those of Senator Dryden, who is president of the Prudential Life Insurance Company, and one of the highest living authorities upon insurance matters.
President Roosevelt believes that the constitutional question involved can be solved only by congressional legislation, and a subsequent test of such legislation before the United States supreme court.

To secure the passage of this legislation will be one of his principal tasks this winter.
The alleged unconstitutionality of all legislation of this character has always been urged against the passage of any legislation for the control of insurance. The decision of the supreme court in the case of Paul vs. Virginia apparently was to the effect that insurance is not interstate commerce, and that it can be regulated only by the state authorities.
The answer to this contention is that congress never has passed a law declaring insurance to be interstate commerce, and that the supreme court would take a different view of the matter if such a law were passed.

SHREDS AND PATCHES

BY CLARA MORRIS.
One day recently, as I commented upon the discomfort of the life theatrical, a friend violently exclaimed: "Yet no actress can exist away from the theater—even for one single day, save in utter wretchedness." She loses entirely the sense of domesticity.
Now the worst of this sweeping assertion is that much dust is apt to come back into the reckless sweeper's eyes.
The belief that the actress is lost to home influence is far reaching and has just enough truth in it to keep it alive; but there is no hard and fast rule about it. All depends on how many interests in life the woman has. There is a type of actress who, if she have a night off, will so surely as she has breath put on her things and go to some other theater for rest and entertainment, you know. If she has the next night off also, and there are no more theaters, she will put a bit of work—not in her pocket, for the poor soul has none, but in a hand-bag, and going over to the dressing room, will sit on the shelf, amid the powder and rouge, the curling irons and hair pins, close to the cage-covered gas jet, and sew and talk shop. That woman will be elderly at 40, old at 50 and given over utterly to green tea and scandal. Why?—because she is narrow; because she has but one interest in life—the theater.
Nor can that be called devotion to the profession in the best sense. The other type of actress loves it more because she brings hope to it, and we always love the thing we serve. The woman who loves music and plays a bit or sings; who loves pictures and paints or sketches; who dreams her fairest dreams during the orderly placing of dainty stitches; above all, blessed among actresses, is she who is a persistent, a never surfeited reader—such a woman will bring all her gleaming to the theater and give it the benefit of every acquirement, but when the curtain falls, her heart will turn to her morsel of family life eagerly. She will take a festival of HER ONE NIGHT; a chafing dish supper, a bit of music, a rambling chat over most everything under the sun—except the theater.

I have seen a little singing soubrette, with hat and veil and gloves on and hand-bag on wrist, run in evening after evening to the hall bedroom, to hold four little hands in hers and listen to two little voices saying, "Now I lay me," before she rushes to the theater to earn their daily bread. The little ones are young girls now, and the little soubrette mother, who is acting still, plays with lighter heart from the memory of the sweetly wholesome upbringing she gave her babes.
There is a beautiful American over in England; adored wife and adoring mother now, who herself lifted the Crown of Tragedy from her head and willingly exchanged her scepter for a wedding ring, so much love for domesticity had Mary Anderson. While no farther away than Boston, we can find one, who by her beauty, her talent and her honest work reached and worthily filled a niche in our theatrical Hall of Fame, only to descend at a husband's wooing and grace the arm-chair at his fireside. Surely then domesticity is not dead in fair Julia Arthur, Oh, there are others, many others, and then they make such lovely illustrations.

thus decreasing the cost of insurance, broadening the scope of administration, and, in a word, nationalizing the business.
I have no sympathy with the objections raised to Federal control on the ground of the possible exercise of undue powers over insurance corporations by immoral politicians. Our national government is our bulwark of honesty in all of the things which govern our material welfare and there is no precedent on which to ground such objection.
"The very life of our insurance corporations is threatened today. It is a duty for all who are interested in the future of American national life and strength to consider some satisfactory scheme for the regulation of this business which comes nearer to the heartstone and the life of our people than any other form of enterprise."

FIVE CANCER CASES CURED BY RADIUM

Experiments at Flower Hospital With Rods Dipped in Salts of New Element Successful
NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—That five persons have been cured of cancer at the Flower hospital by the use of radium coatings on celluloid rods inserted into the diseased parts, was the substance of a paper read last night by Dr. William H. Dieffenbach, United States delegate to the International Medical Congress at The Hague before the Homoeopathic Medical Society of the county of New York.
In only one of six cases which he treated, Dr. Dieffenbach said, his effort met with defeat. In that case the disease was far advanced. Dr. Dieffenbach described his method of treatment in detail. It consists in dipping celluloid or hard rubber rods into a solution of salts of radium. These rods are then inserted into injections made in tumors. The effect of the radio activity, he said, was to destroy the diseased tissue. There are some hopeless cases, where the growths have spread over large areas.

Professor Hugo Lieber of this city has been experimenting in injecting radium into the tissues without the use of rods or sheets of celluloid. He said that three cases of tumor and cancer had been treated with remarkable success. This marked a distinct advance in medical knowledge. Though at present the subject was vague, they hoped soon to have more light.

JEROME IN FIGHT TO STAY, HE DECLARES

New York District Attorney Says He Will Make Campaign Between People and Himself
NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—District Attorney Jerome, speaking of his independent campaign for re-election and the fact that Tammany hall nominated a candidate to oppose him at Thursday night's democratic county convention, said:
"I am in this fight to stay and will make it over the heads of the bosses, directly between the people and myself. I repeat now that nominations of party candidates are made by one man and sometimes by a coterie of men.
"These men are usually selfish, wholly irresponsible and not infrequently corrupt. I don't say, of course, that all are corrupt. From what I have heard, I believe that Kelly, the former Tammany Hall leader, was an honest man.
"I have spoken about certain men in the republican organization in the past, and what I said then was true. I don't see why they should be any too favorable to me now. It makes no difference to me whether I am elected or not. I can make a living at any time, but, at the same time, I shall put up a strong fight."

BRITISH WELCOMED

Japanese Place Palace at Disposal of Admiral Noel
TOKIO, Oct. 14.—The emperor received Vice Admiral Noel, commander of the British squadron now at Yokohama, and his staff of captains, in Phoenix Hall of the palace yesterday morning and welcomed them heartily to Japan. General Burnett of the British army and other military attaches who arrived here from the front were received in audience simultaneously. All the visitors subsequently had lunch with the imperial family. Prince Arisukawa, the elder statesman, and cabinet officers were also present. The emperor placed the Shiba palace at the disposal of Admiral Noel and his party. The city today is again filled with British sailors and marines engaged in sight seeing. All classes are most hospitable. Yesterday's program of athletic games, etc., was repeated.

CHILDREN DRESSED TOO EXPENSIVELY

Mrs. John A. Logan Decries Modern Custom

LEADS TO FALSE PRIDE

Parents Largely to Blame—The Cost of Living Growing and Servants' Wages Rising

By Mrs. John A. Logan. (Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—A few days since I was driving down a street upon which one of the latest public schools of Washington is situated. It is a graded school, and consequently there are pupils from the first to the eighth grade.

The school faces one of the finest parks in the city.

It was at the hour of recess, and being deeply impressed by the attractiveness of the children, I halted to give them more than a passing notice. There were hundreds of them, and if one were to judge from their apparel one would say that they were all the children of millionaires. No one would have thought them from the families of the ordinary citizens, whose incomes, according to the last census, are not large.

Yet here were children dressed as if attending Sunday school, or a picnic. Rich, bright ribbons tied back the hair of the girls, beads and long chains were around their necks, white and patent leather shoes and fancy slippers encased their feet. The boys, too, wore expensive clothes, that should have been their Sunday best. There were none in roundabouts and jackets as in the olden days.

One could but think that these children were being given false ideas of life and too extravagant notions in dress, and that their parents are responsible for the wrong impressions made upon them as to the importance necessary to be attached to the clothes they should wear.

It would have been refreshing to have seen the girls in simple frocks and pinafores, that are so pretty and becoming, especially to the little six, eight and ten-year-olds, in the place of the befrilled and lace-trimmed fancy dresses for every day wear of these innocent babies, who are scarcely old enough to go to school.

The older girls were dressed as if they were going to a party, with their thin waists, with insertion and lace set in the yokes, through which their fair necks could be seen, and handsome skirts of expensive materials. Scarcely one of them was dressed with the simplicity which belongs to girlhood, much less to childhood.

The legitimate result of all this is the engendering of a spirit of extravagance that is sure to affect them all their lives and give them false ideas of economy and the eternal fitness of things.

Girls, especially with such training, are dissatisfied with plain dress when they grow older, and if it is impossible for them to have their tastes gratified at home they dare to go out into the world to find means to satisfy their desire for showy clothes and furbies, and in the end sacrifice their good names upon the altar of vanity.

Parents are wholly to blame for inculcating wrong principles and ambitions in the minds of their children. They had far better inspire them with aspirations for higher education and usefulness in the world and indifference as to their apparel so they are tidy and respectable in appearance.

Cost of Living Growing

It would be a difficult question to answer if one were asked to explain the reason why there is such an advance in everything connected with one's living expenses.

The abundant crops of this year should have given some relief, but on the contrary, there seems an unreasonable advance in prices. Cereals, meats, poultry, vegetables and fruits are much higher than last year. Wages are exorbitant in all lines, and particularly those of domestic servants and day laborers.

One can understand this would and should be so if the prices of supplies are to be kept at the present standard, and one can realize that persons with families to support must receive higher compensation for their services. They must pay more than formerly for the necessities of life.

But why unmarried servants who get their room and board in the homes where they are in service should be paid higher wages is incomprehensible. Surely it is not on the ground of efficiency, as almost every housekeeper will attest, it is nearly impossible to secure any one in any department of domestic labor who is competent to perform the duties of any position which they engaged to fill.

They are, for the most part, wholly indifferent to everything, save the amount of money they are to receive. Generally they are totally ignorant of the proper manner in which they should execute their orders. They are irresponsible, extravagant and unscrupulous. They demand all kinds of privileges and indulgences and are prone to repay the kindness and generosity of their employers with ingratitude and gross neglect of their obligations.

If their employers happen not to be millionaires, and any of their friends are fortunate enough to be employed by the very rich, they are dissatisfied and expect as much as their more favored friends receive. The matter of rendering service commensurate with their wages never enters the minds of most employees. They are far more inclined to avoid doing any more than is absolutely necessary to keep their places.

Housekeepers in these days are quite accustomed to being catcised as to the privileges they allow their servants, whether or not they can entertain their company, leave every other Sunday and a half day off during the week, and demanding many other similar concessions.

The rush into apartment houses tells the story of the desire of all housekeepers to be freed from the tyranny of servants. The feeling of independence which is secured by persons living in apartments is very grateful to the weary housekeeper. The emancipation from constant worry over the innumerable things that can be transferred to the janitor is most attractive and will surely make a great change in the domestic life of most families, and it is to be hoped will inaugurate a new code governing the duties, obligations and efficiency of servants in this country.

No class have, as a whole, been so well treated, so well paid and had so little required of them in return as have the domestic servants in the United States, barring the slaves of the South in the old days of human slavery.

The people of Washington are so accustomed to the presence of the President of the United States in their midst that they rarely make any note of his coming or going in or out of the capital. But during his absence this past summer he has accomplished so much in bringing together peace commissioners representing great nations which had been waging such a deadly warfare against each other for many months, and had played so conspicuous a part in the fiscal fortuitous results of the peace conference, that all loyal citizens were anxious to manifest their approval of his masterful achievements by a spontaneous greeting on his recent return to the White House.

Knowing the sincerity of their affection for him and their loyalty to their country, and the pride they felt in him because he deeds had placed their country in the foremost rank of enlightened and peaceful nations, his heart must have been filled with pardonable pride and gratitude to the All-wise Ruler who had guided him in the marvelous achievements he had wrought, the fruit of which was peace to so many millions and the cessation of the cruelties of bloody warfare.

Other Presidents have done mighty things with the help of the nation and through the sacrifice of men and money, but it is not undue praise to say that the bloodless victories of Theodore Roosevelt have won a place for him in the history of our Presidents hitherto unattained by any of his predecessors.

The progress of civilization has made it possible to accomplish more by arbitration and peaceful methods than could have been done in days of yore. At the same time, if Mr. Roosevelt was not endowed with rigid abilities and a heart full of kindness and humanity for all mankind, he might not have had the wisdom or diplomacy to have caused the "Bear" and the "Fox" to sit at the same table and discuss the bases of contention and at last to divide them amicably.

But for President Roosevelt's farseeing statesmanship the conference would have failed. It required all his astuteness and logical reasoning to convince the victors that their crowning victory would be won by magnanimity toward a vanquished foe. With consummate skill he succeeded and the sound of war alarms no longer disturbs the world, and it is a meagerly spirit that will not accord to him a full measure of praise.

The most ungenerous must acknowledge that the republic has suffered no embarrassment since Mr. Roosevelt was elevated to position of chief magistrate; neither will the wheel of progress be retarded as long as he is President of the United States.

The Queen's English

A doctor was summoned and found a rural English boy patient in need of his services.

"Put out your tongue," said the doctor.

"The boy stared like an owl. 'My good boy,' requested the medical man, 'let me see your tongue.' 'Talk English, doctor,' put in the mother, and then, turning to her son, she said: 'Tongue thy gobbler and push out thy lolliver.' The boy rolled out his tongue in a moment.—Exchange.

How He Made a Hit

"My monologue was not favorably received by the audience," said an actor in speaking of his career. "I had made up my mind to quit the stage and return to a clerkship in the auditing department of a water company. The night which I had determined to be my last on the stage I was received by a chilly audience. The house attaches were cold; the other actors freezing.

"When I was about through with my monologue, a malicious stage hand let down a piece of scenery, which hit me on the shoulders. The people laughed derisively. I turned indignantly and saw back of me a street scene. That saved me. Stopping forward, I said with an injured air: 'Isn't it enough to have a house down on a fellow without letting the whole street down on him?'

"The people laughed the laugh that cheers, and I warmed up to the occasion, responded to an encore, and have enjoyed public favor ever since."—Columbus Dispatch.

Bill Nye's Habits

The late Bill Nye replied as follows to a correspondent who inquired about his habits of work and life:

"When the weather is such that I cannot exercise in the open air, I have a heavy pair of dumbbells at my lodging, which I use for holding the door open. I also belong to an athletic club and a pair of Indian clubs with red handles. I owe much of my robust health to this.

"I do most of my writing in a sitting posture or in an autograph album. When I am not engaged in thought I am employed in recovering from its effects. I am genial and pleasant to be thrown amongst.

"I dress expensively, but not so as to attract attention. In the morning I wear morning dress; in the evening I wear an evening dress and at night I wear a night dress."—Detroit News Tribune.

NO. 2935—THE NEW FRENCH BLOUSE
With what delight will the woman of moderate means hail the return of the separate waist. In Paris and on the Riviera the separate fancy blouse is again a favorite for dressy occasions. This means that Missy can be quite as stylishly gowned with several old blouses and a separate skirt as is her sister who owns a variety of entire gowns. Here is a waist which may be developed in black satin with revers and vestees of light-blue broadcloth trimmed with silver tissue, having jeweled buttons fastening the vestee and cuff. The deep cuffs and chemise are attractive in all-over lace. If desired the sleeve may be finished with the jaunty cavalier cuff and frill of lace and the vestees may be omitted. For a medium size, this blouse requires 4 3/8 yards of 27-inch material.

Pattern No. 2935 is in 5 sizes from 32 to 40 inches bust measure.
This pattern may be obtained, post-paid in any of the above sizes, by sending 10 cents and the size, name and address to The Fashion Department of The Telegram.

WILL LORD BROOKE WED MISS REID?

American Colony in London Discredits Rumors of Engagement

BY PAUL LAMBETH.
(Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Syndicate.)
Special Cable to The Telegram.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—The American colony in London do not credit the rumor that Lord Brooke, the son and heir of the Earl of Warwick, stands a good chance of becoming the husband of Miss Jean Reid, the daughter of the American ambassador.

There can be no doubt, however, that the Countess of Warwick would greatly prefer the match, seeing that the Warwick fortunes badly need rehabilitating. Miss Reid has views of her own and rose of her friends believes that she will fully throw herself away on a title unless she forms a sincere attachment.

It is an open secret that the present Duke and Duchess of Wellington are scouring England for a really substantial heiress for their son and heir, Lord Drouro, who is still a boy. The duchess would prefer an English heiress, but you raise no objection to an American who would patch up the Wellington finances and restore the beautiful country seat Strathfieldsaye to its former glory.

The American colony is fixing its attention upon the young Lord Drouro and no one would be surprised if he were to take a trip across the Atlantic next spring. Bets, in fact, have already been made in the clubs that the next Duchess of Wellington will be an American girl.

may be said that no American woman in London has ever received such attention from royalty as Mrs. Arthur Paget. The very latest thing in London is the wearing by smart society women of fascinating nightcaps. The Countess Fabricotti, the royal favorite, who set up shop near Bond street as a milliner, has been doing a splendid trade in the "latest fad."

The night caps were first introduced by American women in London who had copied the ideas from Vienna. Mrs. Edly Jaffray was one of the first to reintroduce this old-fashioned custom. The night caps sold by the Countess Fabricotti are made of a broad meshed lace netting and are supposed to keep "waved hair" in curl through the night.

They do nothing of the sort, but they are extremely coquettish and are adorned with bows and frills of the Frenchest pattern. Most of the smart women are now wearing these "Marie Antoinette" caps at night.

The representative interviewed the butler, but got no further. The butler, in the sternest tones, stated that he had instructions that all communications from newspapers, whether they were cards or letters addressed by the editors should be burned at once and taken no notice of.

This rebuff aroused the anger of the editor of the newspaper in question and a long and cynical wire was dispatched to the duchess, who, thinking things over, decided that the best thing to do was to send a long and explanatory telegram to the editor, in which the butler was "the villain" of the drama.

THE WEAK SPOT.
When a boiler explodes carrying death and destruction with it, every body says "Why? we thought it was strong enough." It may have had a weak spot somewhere! When a man who has the outward appearance of being sound and strong suddenly falls a prey to disease, his friends exclaim: "why we thought he was all right—he must have had a weak spot somewhere."
The fact is, almost everybody has a weak spot somewhere. Death and disease are always looking for weak spots. If your stomach or your liver won't do its proper work, if your body fails to get its full nourishment from the food you eat, and your brain loses part of the sleep it ought to have, no matter how big your frame and muscular your limbs may be, you will give out; disease will find the weak spot, and nature will give way.

Know Elegance in Evening Wraps

THE FRANCOIS EVENING COAT

VELVET CARRIAGE COAT

EMPIRE EVENING COAT

The Favored Styles in Evening and Theater Coats.

Parisian Evening or Theater Coat.

The uncut velvets are beginning to share in the extreme vogue that is accorded to all of the pile fabrics, and this example in white uncut velvet with real Cluny, and yards and yards of velvet ribbon—the cut pile fabric in this latter—represents the newest Parisian idea of elegance and luxury in an evening wrap. The lines of the Second rather than the First Empire are followed. The body is characteristically short, and the sleeve is attached to the skeleton lining rather than to the coat itself, a graceful batwing effect which is a continuation of the skirts of the coat being run up over the shoulder. The coat skirts are open on both sides, and the entire garment is bordered with deep Cluny, displaying the historic Francois Premier pattern, and velvet ribbon borders either edge of the lace. That clever little touch of contrast which the Parisians use so much is deftly achieved in the scrap of deep-brown velvet ribbon that appears at the neck, this combination of brown and white largely replacing the favored magpie combination that has ruled for so long.

Velvet and the Carriage Coat.

The extreme of simplicity is rendered still more effective in the clever fashion that the trimming scheme of this charming carriage coat displays. The style is that of the early Victorian, a period in fashion that has been introduced with success in high-class garments, but has failed of acceptance in gowns of more utilitarian intent. In this example velvet, chiffon and bouillonne ribbons—all in black—are cleverly relieved with an application of Irish crochet on the shoulders and ruffles of Lierre lace at the wrists. Long and loose are the lines of the garment, the coat pleated full to the skeleton yoke. An entire deux of ribbon-trimmed chiffon appears half way down and to this a full dozaine is skirted, so that the width at the hem is in the neighborhood of eight yards. The upper part of the sleeve is of chiffon, with elaborate appliques of bouillonne ribbons and a quaint velvet puff, fat and baggy and extremely loose in effect, appears below the elbow and broadens the line of the very full sleeve. The ribbon bouillonnes are artistically interlaced with the crochet to form a trimming scheme below the neck, and the coat is finished with the open collarless throat that is so modish at the present moment.

The Francois Evening Coat.

A rich, deep shade of claret velvet is employed for this Parisian conceit, which is distinctively novel in both outline and trimming. A combination of cape, coat and dolman is very cleverly carried out, the best feature of each garment being clearly shown. The modish Napoleon collar, with its characteristic deep turnover, appears at the neck. The fronts hang loose, after the approved caracas style, while the back is molded upon dolman lines, the garment rounding up in soft cascaded folds to knee length at the sides, the lining of rich white satin showing considerably. Hand-embroideries in several shades of red, relieved with dull green and gold, decorate the wrap, the strap at the back waistline that serves to hold the garment into the figure being especially effective.

Empire Evening Coat.

Very radical are the changes which fashion has wrought in the apparel of women for the coming seasons. But it cannot be said that these styles are entirely new. Rather is it new things built out of old. Here we have with us once again the empire coat, popular not so many years ago, though, of course, with modifications and applications. What may be termed the yoke of the garment fits rather snugly to the figure to below the bust line, where appear two deep tucks running around the body, these serving as a finish for the joining of the yoke and the circular skirts. The voluminous sleeves are gathered into a wide flaring cuff, which narrow to almost nothing in width on the inside seam of the sleeve, this being heavily stitched. Navy blue velvet forms the inlaid collar, which is ornamented with embroideries in pastel shades and large enameled buttons. An inset of the velvet, together with the embroideries and buttons, decorates the sleeves. Navy blue and white chenille is used in the making of the large flat cap-peau, with tan o'banter crown. One long white double-tipped ostrich plume is tacked to the left underbust and brought around over the hair to the right side, where it falls coquettishly over the ear.

The all-gilt or silvered quill is very modish, and others in black and colors have a line of gold or silver running up the body of the quill and ending in a peacock's eye at the tip.

lengths. Some are long in the back and round up prettily to about half that length in front, the fullness of the skirts—for all of the coat skirts are of necessity extremely full this season—making for a cascaded effect, in which the lining alternates with the outside of the wrap. There are others in which the front descends well-nigh to the hem of the skirt, rounding in similar fashion to the back, which usually has inset pleats to afford just the correct amount of fullness below the waist line.

And the finish at the neck is just as various and varied as are the wraps themselves. Some of them display a lowness that is tantamount to a décolletage, a drawback, one might imagine, when the garment is worn with a gown of similar cut. Others have the high Napoleon collar, with its characteristic turnover, upon which much elaboration is lavished. There are not lacking examples of the Medial collar, that flares so becomingly upwards and makes such a flattering background for the hair and features when it is chosen in the color that shall prove most flattering to complexion and coiffure alike. And then there are others that bring the wrap up to the base of the throat, and just depend upon a tulle or chiffon or ribbon ruche there to make for the required finish. It all depends upon the style of face that tops the wrap which is selected, for all are equally modish and in equally good standing with the fashion authorities.

Colored umbrellas with fancy borders are obtaining quite a share of success abroad, and the fad is to have the umbrella match the gown. Long handles, very much like those of the dressy parasols of the summer time, appear on these, and crystal balls and shafts command fancy prices.

The Popularity of Ribbons.

Effective Ribbon Garnitures for Evening Gowns.

Ribbons furnish all of those charming garnitures for an evening gown. The centre-piece is mounted upon one of those featherbone frames that lace in the front, the back decorated with crocheted rings through which a velvet ribbon is laced. The rose sprays employ artificial foliage and centers, which lend an air of verisimilitude to the design. Corsage and skirt sprays, coiffure ornaments and little corsage knots are all represented.

Table Trimmings All in Ribbons.

Extremely effective are the ribbon trimmings for a tea or luncheon table. The centre-piece is of roses, effectively fashioned from various tints of satin ribbon, the stems of milliners' wire, ribbon wound. The candlestick settings are of similar style, rose foliage being effectively mingled with the ribbon blossoms, and the centre-piece is surrounded with long loops of ribbons in all of the rose shades, running from a bluish pink to a rich deep Jaquemont tint, streamers from these being carried to the table corners and serving to indicate the various places at table.

Braids, too, are receiving quite an unusual amount of attention from the milliner. All of the tailored or shirtwaist hats show some touch of this very effective trimming, and there are even dress hats that employ artificial silk braids for the stiff little cravats that are so popular tied with a Quaker bow around the crown.

featherbone that is employed in little rods to support one's collars, this wound around with green ribbon of suitable shade.

Upon frocks of filmy gauze and net and tulle there are charming sprays of flowers fashioned from gauze and the metal tissue ribbons. These latter are among the latest conceits of fashion, and represent gold, silver, bright copper and a greenish bronze, all of them true to the metal type. Oftentimes when these effective sprays and knots are employed upon a corsage and skirt there is a deep-boned girldie fashioning of the same ribbons; and the sash at the back—for there is no evening gown nowadays without its sash, whether it be intended for debutante or grandmother, all types and all ages display it equally—is composed of several loops and ends, no two of them alike as to length.

Another charming conceit that is wrought out with ribbons has the tiny Marie Antoinette ribbons employed to follow a festooned floral pattern. The ribbons are used just the same as a strand of floss silk or any other thread is employed, the needle having a large eye that will carry the ribbon without undue crushing or crossing, and at the same time pierce a hole through the material sufficiently large for the ribbon to slip through easily. Those designs are worked upon a sheer mousseline de sole, one with a good deal of dressing in the finish; and when the material is cut away so that the ribbon festoons seem to hang without visible support. These are worked upon mousseline to correspond with the color of the gown, or else in white, and every last tiny bit of the background is cut away, so that only the embroidery is visible.

A firm of embroiderers—their workers are mostly French and Flemish—display a pair of curtains in which the design is altogether wrought in those same tiny ribbons. The background is a square flax net, upon which a design of fuschia is worked, the natural tints of flowers and foliage being followed to a miracle, and the result is one of the most pleasing that has been displayed in this new branch of the embroiderer's art.

The evening wrap has come to be even more necessary than the evening gown to the woman of limited social opportunities, for a dressy wrap will always atone for a less dressy costume, so far as theater and evening concerts are concerned. While for the woman of fashion it is a garment that is as indispensable as are the more intimate items of her lingerie.

The last note of elegance and extravagance would seem to be sounded in those confections that Paris supplies as models to be copied on this side of the water. Velvets and chiffons, ribbons and real laces, hand-painted silks and exquisitely embroidered tissues—all are called upon to lend their grace and charm to those evening wraps that are destined to see, perhaps, but one season's use, and but occasional wear at that.

The fashionable mondaine will welcome the delightful diversity in styles which the latest models display. So far, it would seem as though no two of them were the least bit reminiscent of any of the others.

There are long coats, loose and full as well may be and still set well upon the figure. There are short little dolman affairs—garments that reproduce delightfully the short and snappy garment which the officers of the Imperial Guard of Russia (only families that have been nobles for at least five generations can ever become members of the personal guard of honor to the Czar) wear for their full-dress uniform. Only one or two of such have drifted to these shores, and they are in the correct white cloth, smooth and lustrous as satin, and trimmed with the Imperial Russian sash that rightfully belongs to the design. That their cost is a high one goes without saying, and there is no danger of the design becoming common because of over-popularity.

The modes of the first and of the second empires are delightfully conspicuous, and although to the student of history there is quite a marked difference between the fashions of the two periods, the dressmakers mingle them quite regardless of the anachronism.

One model, adapted from the early Victorian fashion plates, has had quite a successful run, although the season is but yet young. This is one with the usual skeleton yoke over the shoulders, on which is applied quite an elaborate trimming scheme, and likewise serves as a support to which the extremely full skirts are applied. There is not even the ghost of an attempt to follow the lines of the figure anywhere; the garment is as full and as shapeless as well may be, and is a style which only the woman who carries herself well should ever wear. Of, for the slightest fault in pose or carriage is magnified a thousandfold. On the other hand, though, this is the garment par excellence for the petite woman, provided that she have shoulders that are not too sloping, and that her pose and poise of figure is all that even the most exacting dancing master could demand. This odd style will lend her an air of graceful dignity, even of staidness, if she but carry it well, that few, if, indeed, any other styles can afford.

One example of this mode is so charming that it deserves to be quoted at length. Black chiffon velvet, a double chiffon, the kind that is so often referred to misleadingly as chiffon cloth—Irish crochet and yards upon yards of black satin ribbon skirted on either edge to produce a bouillonne effect. The usual yoke on the shoulders is in black taffetas, completely covered with crochet into the pattern of which bouillonned satin ribbon, some two inches wide, is interwoven. The velvet part hangs in full pleats from here to about the knees, and at this point there appears an entire deux of double chiffon, on which the bouillonned ribbon meanders after an intricate design. Half way below the knee there is an extremely full flounce of the velvet applied, this merely edged with the ruffled ribbon and presenting a width of at least eight yards around the ankles.

The sleeve to this is an excellent example of one extreme of the present styles. The upper part is of chiffon, fulled into the armhole and decorated with ribbon en suite with the coat. An ever-widening design is followed, and this is accentuated in the velvet puff that is applied above the wrist, this flat and baggy beyond description. The lining is loose from the garment and is in white satin, velled in a printed chiffon that looks startlingly like a hand-painted fabric. Anything more luxurious in appearance and yet simple in design can hardly be well imagined.

The extreme vogue that is accorded by the best makers to velvets is now to be shared by the uncut as well as the cut pile, and garments in this exquisite fabric are displayed in all of the delicate tints. One beauty in white uncut pile is bordered all around with a broad cluny in which the pattern that is known to lace-makers as Francois Premier—after the monarch who so largely patronized the French laces in centuries gone by, and who brought the best of the Flemish and Italian makers to France to induce still more artistic designs. This exquisite evening coat displays several points of novelty. To begin with, the characteristic short body of the accepted mode of the First Empire is displayed, and to this the very full skirts—they are cut circular in the best models with quite a sweeping curve over the bust line—are applied. The sides are slit as they need to be in the original, and the sleeves are attached to the skeleton lining of the yoke part instead of to the coat proper. The sides of the coat are brought up over the shoulders after the modish batwing style, this making for an extremely odd and graceful effect. The sleeves themselves are quite original, too, being huge puffs of heavy white chiffon that contrasts well with the uncut velvet, and trimmed with rows upon rows of narrow ruffled valances, the real web of the oldish yellow tint. Spaced between the rows of lace are bands of white velvet ribbon—this in the cut pile—and the Cluny that borders the coat all around is edged with flat applications of the same ribbon, this setting well upon the uncut pile and throwing up the beauty of the lace to perfection.

There are some models that are charming, when viewed upon the right woman. Many of these present quite irregular

SOME NOVEL POSSIBILITIES IN RIBBONS

TABLE TRIMMINGS ALL IN RIBBONS

GARNITURES FOR EVENING GOWNS

One of the best houses in New York that deals in high-class furniture is displaying a dining-room all furnished and seemingly ready to use. While the furniture and laces employed are such as to call forth commendation from even the most critical housekeeper, the one thing that invariably brings exclamations of delight from visitors is the table trimmings.

The dining table is set for luncheon; that is, there is a luncheon cloth of linen and lace laid and the candlesticks are in place; but since the house does not deal in silver, china or glassware those items are conspicuously lacking. However, they are not needed, for the inspiration lies in the ribbon decorations. In the center is a huge bowl of roses, with just enough of foliage in them to relieve the tints, the shades running from a pale bluish pink right on down into the deepest and richest red of the Jaquemont. The silver candlesticks are embedded in a plateau of the same roses; and then ribbon sashes and streamers start from the center-piece and radiate to all corners of the table, each strand serving to fence off each place at the table. The shaded effects are carried out here, too; and while the long streamers are in the pale ribbon, the shorter ones make use of the darker colorings.

"Just the thing to make oneself, and so have table decorations ready for any emergency" is the remark that is almost invariably passed, and eager are the inquiries of the attendant as to where such things are to be found and instruction arranged for.

TEACHER HAS PROMISED TO BUILD 100 SCHOOLS

Pennsylvania Woman Starts Work in Louisiana and Alabama—Gives Reasons

(With an ambition to provide adequate school facilities for the white children of the south, Dr. Agnes Valentine Kelley of Meadville, Pa., who has been teaching in the south, has begun a movement to build 100 school houses in Louisiana and Alabama. She can be communicated with through the Arena magazine of Boston. She writes expressly for this newspaper her reasons for asking assistance in the work.)

BY AGNES VALENTINE KELLEY, M. D.

As a nation we are justly proud of our magnificent public school system. Our standard is the highest in the world. But has the standard been reached in every state of the union?

Many of the southern states, principally the Gulf states, are unable to incur the double expense of building and maintaining schools. A very large proportion of the country school buildings are rough wooden boxes, with rude and insufficient furniture. Good teachers cannot continue teaching in such places. I am acquainted with many localities where no school building of any kind exists, and this, too, where the school population is large. I have known instances where the chance city visitor has been moved by the condition of the people to gather around her the children and sometimes older persons—and instruct them in the common branches of learning. In Louisiana alone 80,000 children are passing the educational limit every year. Fifty-five per cent of these children are not in school because we have not sufficient school buildings in which to carry on our work.

Responding to my inquiry as to what the state needed in the way of school buildings, Governor Blanchard of Louisiana wrote:

"We are sadly in need of more and better rural school houses. The state is deficient in that way. You and those associated with you could not do a nobler work or one that is more needed than in building plain country school houses that will afford the youth of the state a chance to obtain a start in an education that will fit them to fill the social as well as more serious duties of citizenship."

Governor Jelks of Alabama writes:

"I will be glad to meet you at any time or place and assure you of my hearty co-operation and sympathy in the great work you contemplate."

I have promised the governors of these two states to undertake the building of 100 of these school houses. One thousand in each state will fall far short of the actual number required. The governors promise to be present and lay the cornerstones for the first such building in their respective states.

Citizens, you give munificence to colleges, universities, to churches, to the missionaries in Africa, India and China, and now it is in the name of the white children of two states in your own country that I appeal for aid. They will

Miss Goodnow, Politician

Her Campaigning Resulted in a Misfit Gown for Miss Cooper

(Copyright, 1905, by the Short Story Publishing Company)

The Helping Hand Society was an organization for women of all the churches in the town of Brinkdale. The president of the society was always "it" in the town. Especially was this true in the consideration of the eligible young bachelors of Brinkdale.

It is hardly necessary to state that there was a lively rivalry for the office. The society was composed of nearly six hundred women, but only those between the ages of 18 and 35, married or unmarried, were allowed to vote.

One candidate was Isabelle Cooper, 22 years old, handsome, of dark complexion and lithe figure, educated in the local high school and finished at Miss Cooper's high school and finished at Miss Cooper's high school and finished at Miss Cooper's high school.

"Miss President," it was Rose Goodnow. "Miss President, I rise to a question of privilege."

"Now, fellow members, I ask you to picture in your mind's eye a certain magnificent home on Michigan Hillside. Last night, in the midst of the storm and sleet, there appeared at the door of this mansion a miserable, wretched-looking woman, who related in a voice choked with sobs that her husband, a hard-working carpenter, had been laid up for a month with a broken leg. Their little savings were gone, and she was compelled to take in washing to provide the bare necessities of life for eight small children."

"I happen to know that that unhappy woman was put through a course of question such as these: 'What church do you attend? Have you ever applied to the town for aid? Does your husband ever use strong drink? Do your children go to Sabbath school?'"

"And what, fellow members, what do you suppose was the final reason given by a young lady for refusing aid to the sufferer? Nothing more nor less than the plea that she had used all the means at her disposal in sending Christmas boxes to two hundred children of this city."

"Now, fellow members," concluded the orator solemnly, "having heard so much, you know, without any words of mine, the name of the young lady on Michigan Hillside. What you do not know, however, is this—I was the old woman!"

"Then, as from a score of members burst the cry, 'That's so; we saw her,' the room suddenly resounded with loud sobs and hysterical laughter.

Miss Goodnow was very firm. "Miss member of the state legislature, leaned toward the others and said impressively: "Girls, there is just one chance, and that is to break the forces of the Cooperites by nominating a dark horse."

"A dark horse?" murmured the others vaguely.

"Yes, a third candidate—a girl from their ranks, who will cut into Isabelle's votes at first, and make several ballots necessary."

"That's a capital idea," was Miss James' verdict. "What a politician you are! But who shall be the third candidate?"

Twenty minutes later Miss Belknap burst into the room, with consternation written in every line of her face.

"Girls, what do you think," she gasped, "our flag is at half mast. We're linked, to speak plainly, that Isabelle Cooper has sent Christmas boxes of candy to the small children of nearly every family in the society, with New Year cards bearing the inscription, 'Do unto others as you would have others do unto you.' That will make her solid with everybody."

"Then Rose Goodnow said: 'I have a plan. Just listen.' The thirteenth annual meeting of the Helping Hand Society held the following evening in the vestry of the Congregational church was the largest in the history of the organization. Miss Isabelle Cooper and Miss Constance James had been placed before the meeting in the briefest possible nominating speeches. Miss Carrie Holbrook arose and in a most President," she said, "I move that we proceed to a third ballot."

And, as the result of the third ballot, Miss Constance James was formally declared the president of the Helping Hand Charitable Society.

A few days later an expressman called at the Michigan Hillside mansion and took away a huge box, inside of which lay a mass of silk and lace, accompanied by the following note:

"Messrs. Bluefern & Co., Fifth Avenue, New York: Gentlemen—My daughter Isabelle complains that the inclosed costume does not fit. She will call and see you in a week or so, and make some mutually agreeable arrangement with regard to a cold-weather garment. Very truly yours, 'JAMES W. COOPER.'"

Miss Ethel Barrymore, whose engagement to an English soldier-poet has been announced, will not, after her marriage, leave the stage.

"I shall never leave the stage," Miss Barrymore said to a Philadelphia woman the other day. "My audiences are so kind to me, I could not bear to desert them."

"Then she smiled, and out of her store of anecdotes she resumed: "My audiences have never treated me as a western audience once treated a comedian, a distant cousin of mine. "This comedian appeared in a four-act comedy in a western mining town. At the end of the third act the miners rose in a body, gathered up their belongings, and started to depart. "The comedian, in dismay, rushed before the curtain. "Gentlemen," he said, "there is another act yet." "Yes, that's why we're going," said the miners."

WHEN IT WAS DARK BY GUY THORNE

THE STORY OF A GREAT CONSPIRACY--COPYRIGHT 1905, BY G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS

When they had made greetings, cordial enough on the surface, and were seated on either side of the fire, Schuabe spoke at once upon the object of his visit.

"I have come, Mr. Byars," he said, in a singularly clear, vibrant voice, "to discuss certain educational proposals with you. As you probably know, just at present I am taking a very prominent part in the house of commons in connection with the whole problem of primary education. Within the last few weeks I have been in active correspondence with your school board, and you will know all about the scholarships I am now coming to you to propose something of the same sort in connection with your own church schools. My opinions on religious matters are, of course, not yours. But despite that, with whatever means, both the clergy and my own party are broadly working towards one end."

"Walktown provides me with very many thousands a year, and it is my duty in some way or another to help Walktown. My proposal is roughly this: I will found and endow two yearly scholarships for two boys in the national schools. The money will be sufficient, in the first instance, to send them to one of the great northern grammar schools, and afterwards, always providing that the early promise is maintained, to either university. My only stipulation is this. The tests shall be purely and simply intellectual, and have nothing whatever to do with the religious teaching of the schools, with which I am not in sympathy. Nevertheless, it is only fair that a clever boy in a church school should have the same opportunities as in a secular school. I should tell you that I have made the same offer to the Roman Catholic school authorities and it has been declined."

The vicar listened with great attention. The offer was extremely generous, and showed a most open-minded determination to put the donor's personal prejudices out of the question. There could be no doubt as to his answer—none whatever.

"My dear sir," he said, "your generosity is very great. I see your point about the examinations. Religion is to form no part of them exactly. But by the time one of our boys submits himself for examination we should naturally hope that he would already be so firmly fixed in Christian principles that his after-career would have no influence upon his faith. Holding the opinions that you do, your offer shows a great freedom from any prejudice. I hope I am broad-minded enough to recognize that philanthropy is a fine, lovely thing, despite the banner under which the philanthropist may stand. I accept your generous offer in the spirit that it is made. Of course, the scheme must be submitted to the managers of the schools, of whom I am chief, but the matter practically lies with me, and my lead will be followed."

"I am only too glad," said the big man, with a sudden and transforming smile, "to help the cause of knowledge. All the details of the scheme I will send you in a few days, and now I will detain you no longer."

He rose to go. During their brief conversation the vicar had been conscious of many emotions. He blamed himself for his narrowness and the somewhat fantastic lengths to which his recent talk with Gortre had gone. The man was an infidel, no doubt. His intellectual attacks upon Christian faith were terribly damaging and subversive. Still, his love for his fellow-men was sincere, it seemed. He attacked the faith, but not the preachers of it. And—a half thought crossed his brain—he might have been sent to him for some good purpose. St. Paul had not always borne the name of Paul!

These thoughts, but half formulated in his brain, had their immediate effect in concrete action.

"Won't you take off your coat, Mr. Schuabe," he said, "and smoke a cigar with me in my study?"

The other hesitated a moment, looked doubtful, and then assented. He hung his coat up in the hall and went into the other room with the vicar.

During the conversation in the drawing room Helena had come back from the concert, and Basil, hearing her, had left the study and gone to her own private sanctum for a last few minutes before saying good-night.

Helena sat in a low chair by the fire sipping a bowl of soup which the maid had brought up to her. She was a little tired by the concert, where a local pianist had been playing a nocturne of Chopin's as if he wanted to make it into soup, and the quiet of her own sitting room, the intimate comfort of it all, and the sense of happiness that Basil's presence opposite gave her were in delightful contrast.

"It was very stupid, dear," she said. "Mrs. Pryde was rather trying, full of dull gossip about every one, and the music wasn't good. Mr. Cuthbert played as if he was playing the organ in church. His touch is utterly unfitted for anything except the War March from Athalia, with the stops out. He knows nothing of the piano. I was in the front seat, and I could see his knees feeling for the swell all the time. He played the sonata as if he was throwing the moonlight at one in great solid chunks. I'm glad to be back. How nice it is to sit here with you, dearest!—and how good this Borvill is!" she concluded with a little laugh of content and happiness at this moment of acute physical and mental ease.

He looked lovingly at her as she lay back in rest and the firelight played over her white arms and pale gold hair.

"It's wonderful to think," he said, with a little catch in his voice, "it's wonderful to me, with an ever-recurring wonder, to think that some day you and I will always be together for all our life, here and afterwards. What supreme, unutterable happiness God gives to His children! Do you know, dear, sometimes as I read prayers or stand by the altar, I am filled with a sort of rapture of thankfulness which is voiceless in its intensity. Tennyson got nearer to expressing it than anyone, in that beautiful St. Agnes' Eve of his—a little gem which, with its simplicity and fervor, is worth far more than Keats' poem with all its literary art."

"It is good to feel like that sometimes," she answered, "but it is well, I think, not to get into the way of introducing such feelings. The human brain is such a sensitive thing that one can get into the way of drugging it with emotion, as it were. I think I am tinged a little with the North-country spirit. I always think of Newman's wonderful lines—

"The thoughts control that o'er thee swell and throng; They will condense within the soul and turn to purpose strong. But he who lets his feelings run in soft luxurious flow, Shrinks when hard service must be done, and faints at every blow."

"I only quote from memory. But you look tired, dear boy; you are rather white. Have you been overworking?" He did not answer immediately.

"No," he said slowly, "but I've been having a long talk with the vicar. We were talking about Mr. Schuabe and his influence. Helena, that man is the most active of God's enemies in England. Almost when I was mentioning his name, by some coincidence, or perhaps for some deeper, more mysterious, psychological reason which men do not understand, the maid announced him. He had come to see your father on business, and—don't think I am unduly fanciful—the Murillo photograph, the head of Christ, on the mantel-shelf, fell down and was broken. He is here still, I think."

"Yes," said Helena; "Mr. Schuabe is in the study with father. But, Basil, dear, it's quite evident to me that you've been doing too much. Do you know that I look upon Mr. Schuabe as a really good man! I have often thought about him, and even prayed that he may learn the truth; but God has many instruments. Mr. Schuabe is sincere in his unbelief. His life and all his actions are for the good of others. It is terrible—it is deplorable—to know that he attacks Christianity, but he is tolerant and large-minded also. Yes, I should call him a good man. He will come to God some day. God would not have given him such power over the minds and bodies of men otherwise."

Gortre smiled a little sadly—a rather wan smile, which sat strangely upon his strong and hearty face—but he said no more.

He knew that his attitude was illogical, perhaps it could be called bigoted and intolerant—a harsh indictment in these easy, latitudinarian days; but his conviction was an intuition. It came from within, from something outside or beyond his reason, and would not be stifled.

"Well, dear," he said, "perhaps it is as you say. Nerves which are overwrought, and a system which is run down, certainly have their say, and a large say, too, in one's attitude toward any one. Now you must go to bed. I will run down and say good-night to the rector and Mr. Schuabe—just to show there's no ill-feeling; though, goodness knows, I oughtn't to jest about the man. Good-night, sweet one; God bless you. Remember me also in your prayers tonight."

She kissed him in her firm, brave way—a kiss so strong and loving, so pure and sweet, that he went away from that little room of books and bric-a-brac as if he had been sojourning in some shrine.

As Basil came into the study he found Mr. Byars and Schuabe in eager, animated talk. A spirit decanter had been brought in during his absence, and the vicar was taking the single glass of whisky-and-water he allowed himself before going to bed. Basil, who was in a singularly alert and observant mood, noticed that a glass of plain seltzer water stood before the millionaire.

Gortre's personal acquaintance with Schuabe was of the slightest. He had sat him once or twice on the platform of big meetings, and that was all. A simple curate, unless socially, and Schuabe did not enter into the social life of Walktown, being almost always in London—he would not be very likely to come in the way of this mammoth.

But Schuabe greeted him with marked cordiality, and he sat down to listen to the two men.

In two minutes he was fascinated. In five he realized, with a quick and unpleasant sense of inferiority, how ignorant he was beside these two. In Schuabe the vicar found a man whose knowledge was as wide and scholarship as profound as his own.

From a purely intellectual standpoint, probably Gortre and Schuabe were more nearly on a level, but in pure knowledge he was nowhere. He wondered, as he listened, if the generation immediately preceding his own had been blessed with more time for culture, if the foundation had been surer and more comprehensive, when they were a part of the "loving mother" in the South.

They were discussing archaeological questions connected with the Holy Land. Schuabe possessed a profound and masterly knowledge of the whole Jewish background to the Gospel picture, not merely of the archaeology, which in itself is a life study, but of the essential characteristics of Jewish thought and feeling, which is far more.

Of course, every now and again the conversation turned toward a direction that pursued, would have led to controversy. But, with mutual tact, the debatable ground was avoided. That Christ was a historic fact Schuabe, of course, admitted and implied, and when the question of His Divinity seemed likely to occur he was careful and adroit to avoid any discussion. To the young man, burning with the zeal of youth, this seemed a pity. Unconsciously, he blamed the vicar for not pressing certain points home. What an opportunity was here! The rarity of such a visit, the obvious interest the two men were beginning to take in each other—should not a great blow for Christ be struck on such an auspicious night? Even if the protest were unavailing, the argument overthrown, was it not a duty to speak of the awful and eternal realities which lay beneath this vivid and brilliant interchange of scholarship?

His brain was on fire with passionate longing to speak. But, nevertheless he controlled it. None knew better than he the depth and worth of the vicar's character. And he felt himself a junior; he had no right to question the decision of his superior. "You have missed much, Mr. Byars," said Schuabe, as he arose at last to go, "in never having visited Jerusalem. One can get the knowledge of it, but never the color. And, even today, the city must appear, in many respects, exactly as it did under the rule of Pilate. The Fellah women sell their vegetables, the camels come in loaded with roots for fuel, the Bedouin, the Jews with their long gowns and slippers—I wish you could see it all. I have eaten the meals of the Gospels, drunk the red wine of Saron, the spiced wine mixed with honey and black pepper, the 'wine of myrrh' mentioned in the Gospel of Mark. I have dined with Jewish tradesmen and gone through the same formalities of hand-washings as we read of two thousand years ago; I have seen the poor ostentatiously gathered in out of the streets and the best part of the meal given them for self-righteous show. And yet, an hour afterward, I have sat in a cafe by King David's Tower and played dice with Turkish soldiers armed with martial rifles!"

The vicar seemed loath to let his guest go, though the hour was late, but he refused to stay longer. Mr. Byars, with a somewhat transparent eagerness, mentioned that Gortre's road home lay for part of the way in the same direction as the millionaire's. He seemed to wish the young man to accompany him, almost, so Basil thought, that the charm of his personality might rebuke him for his trade in the early part of the evening.

Accordingly, in agreement with the vicar's evident wish, but with an inexplicable ice-cold feeling in his heart, he left the house with Schuabe and began to walk with him through the silent, lamp-lit streets.

CHAPTER IV. The Smoke Cloud at Dawn. The two men strode along without speaking for some way. Their feet echoed in the empty streets.

Suddenly Schuabe turned to Basil, "Well, Mr. Gortre," he said, "I have given you your opportunity. Are you not going to speak the word in season after all?"

The young man started violently. Who was this man who had been reading his inner thoughts? How could his companion have fathomed his sternly repressed desire as he sat in the vicarage study? And why did he speak now, when he knew that some chilling influence had him in its grip, that his tongue was tied, his power weakened?

"It is late, Mr. Schuabe," he said at length, and very gravely. "My brain is tired and my enthusiasm chilled. Nor am I anxious to hear what I have to say. But your taunt is ungenerous. It almost seems as if you are not always so tolerant as men think."

The other laughed—a cold laugh, but not an unkindly one. "Forgive me," he said, "one should not jest with conviction. But I should like to talk with you also. There are lusts of the brain just as there are lusts of the flesh, and tonight, I am in the mood and humor for conversation."

They were approaching a side road which led to Gortre's rooms. Schuabe's great stone house was still a quarter of a mile away up the hill. "Do not go home yet," said Schuabe, "come to my house, see my books, and let us talk. Make me friends with the mammon of unrighteousness, Mr. Gortre! You are disturbed and unstrung tonight. You will not sleep. Come with me."

Gortre hesitated for a moment, and then continued with him. He was hardly conscious why he did so, but even as he accepted the invitation his nerves seemed recovered as by some powerful tonic. A strange confidence possessed him, and he strode on with the air and manner of a man who has some fixed purpose in his brain.

And as he talked casually with Schuabe, he felt toward him no longer the cold fear, the inexplicable shrinking. He regarded him rather as a vast and powerful enemy, an evil, sinister influence, indeed, but one against which he was armed, with an armor not his own, with weapons forged by great and terrible hands.

So they entered the gaunt black trees toward the house. Mount Prospect was a large, castellated modern building of stone. In a neighborhood where architectural monstrosities abounded, perhaps it outdid them all in its almost brutal ugliness and vulgarity. It had been built by Constantine Schuabe's grandfather.

The present owner was little at Walktown. His parliamentary and social duties bound him to London, and when he had time for recreation the newspapers announced that he had "gone abroad," and until he was actually seen again in the midst of his friends his disappearances were mysterious and complete.

In London he had a private set of rooms at one of the great hotels. But despite his rare visits, the tedious stone palace in the smoky North held all the treasures which he himself had collected and which had been left to him by his father.

It was understood that at his death the pictures and library were to be the property of the citizens of Manchester, held in trust for them by the corporation.

Schuabe took a key from his pocket and opened the heavy door in the porch. "I always keep the house full of servants," he said, "even when I am away, for a dismantled house and caretakers are horrible. But they will be all gone to bed now, and we must look after ourselves."

Opening an inner door, they passed through some heavy padded curtains, which fell behind them with a dull thud, and came out into the great hall. Ugly as the shell of the great building was, the interior was very different. Here, set like a jewel in the midst of the harsh, forbidding country, was a treasure-house of ordered beauty which had few equals in England.

Gortre drew a long, shuddering breath of pleasure as he looked around. Every aesthetic influence within him responded to what he saw. It was simple and severe it was beautiful. A great dome of white marble, brilliantly lit by electric light hidden high above their heads. On every side slender columns rose toward the dome, beyond them were tall archways leading to the rooms of the house; dull, formless curtains, striking no note of color, hung from the archways.

In the center of the vast space, exactly under the dome, was a large pool of still green water, a square basin with abrupt edges, having no fountain nor gaudy fish to break its smoothness.

And this was all, literally all. No rugs covered the tessellated floor, not a single seat stood anywhere. There was not the slightest suggestion of furniture or habitation. White, silent, and beautiful. As Gortre stood there he knew, as if some special message had been given him, that he had come for some great hidden purpose, that it had been foreordained. His whole soul seemed filled with a holy power, unseen powers and principalities thronged round him, like sweet but awful fiends.

He turned inquiringly toward his host. Schuabe's face was very pale; the calm, cruel eyes seemed agitated; he was staring at the priest. "Come," he said in a voice which seemed to be without its usual confidence; "come, this place is cold—I have sometimes thought it a little to bare and fantastic—come into the library; let us eat and talk."

He turned and passed through the pillars on the right. Gortre followed him through the heavy, dark curtains which led to the library.

They found themselves in an immense low-ceilinged room. The floor was covered with a thick carpet of dull blue, and their feet made no sound as they passed over it toward the blazing fire, which glowed in an old oak framework of paneling and inglenook brought from an ancient manor-house in Norfolk.

At one end of the room was a small organ, cased, modern as the mechanism was, in priceless Renaissance painted panels from Florence and set in a little octagonal alcove hung with white and yellow.

The enormous writing-table of dark wood stood in front of the fireplace and was covered with books and papers. By it was a smaller circular table laid with a white cloth and shining glass and silver for a meal.

"My valet is in bed," said Schuabe; "I hate any one about me at night, and I prefer to wait on myself then. From the cool cisterns of the midnight air my spirit drinks repose. If you will wait here a few moments I will go and get some food. I know where to find some. Pray amuse yourself by looking at my books."

He left the room noiselessly, and Basil turned toward the walls. From ceiling to floor the immense room was lined with shelves of enameled white wood, here and there carved with tiny floral bunches of fruit and flowers—Jocelyn work it seemed. A few pictures, here and there in spaces between the shelves—the hectic flummery of a Whistler nocturne; a woman avec cerises, by Manet; a green silk fan, painted with fetes galantes, by Conder—alone broke the many-colored monotony of the books.

Gortre had, from his earliest Oxford days, been a lover of books and a collector in a moderate, discriminating way. As a rule he was roused to mild enthusiasm by a fine library. But as his practiced eye ran over the shelves, noting the beauty and variety of the contents, he was unmoved by any special interest. His brain, still, so it seemed, under some outside and compelling instinct or influence, was singularly detached from ordinary interests and rejected the books' appeal.

Close to where he stood the shelves were covered with theological works. Muller's Lectures on the Vedanta Philosophy, Romaine's Reply to Dr. Lightfoot, De la Saussure's Manual, wandered, unconsciously over the books when it was suddenly arrested, and stopped on a familiar black binding with plain gold letters. It was an ordinary reference edition of the Holy Bible, the "pearl" edition from the Oxford University Press.

There was something familiar and homely in the little dark volume, which plainly showed signs of constant use. A few feet away was a shelf of Bibles of all kinds, rare editions, expensive copies bound up with famous commentaries—all the luxuries and editions de luxe of Holy Writ. But the book beneath his fingers was the same size and shape as the one which stood near his own bedside in his rooms—the one which his father had given him when he wandered, unconsciously over the books when it was suddenly arrested, and stopped on a familiar black binding with plain gold letters.

It was about five o'clock in the morning, raw, damp, and cold. With a white face, drawn and haggard with emotion, he strode down the hill. The keen air revived his physical powers, but his brain was whirling, whirling, till connected thought was impossible.

What was it? What was the truth about that nightmare, that long, horrid night in the warm, rich room? His powers were failing; he must see a doctor after breakfast.

When he reached the foot of the hill, and was about to turn down the road which led to his rooms, he stopped to rest for a moment.

From far behind the hill, over the dark, shadowed houses of the wealthy people who lived upon it, a huge formless pall of purple smoke was rising, and almost blotting out the dawn in a Titanic curtain of gloom. The feeble new-born sun flickered redly through it, the color of blood. There was no wind that morning, and the

Then a swift impulse came to him. Gortre could not be called a superstitious man. The really religious temperament, which, while not rejecting the aids of surface and symbol, has seen far below them, rarely is "superstitious," as the word has come to be understood.

The familiar touch, the pleasant sensation of the limp, rough leather on his finger-balls gave him a feeling of security. But that very fact seemed to remind him that some danger, some subtle mental danger, was near. Was this Bible sent to him? he wondered. Were his eyes and hands directed to it by the vibrating invisible presences which he felt were near him? Who could say?

But he took the book in his right hand, breathed a prayer for help and guidance—if it might be that God, who watched him, would speak a message of help—and opened it at random.

He was about to make a trial of that old mediaeval practice of "searching"—that harmless trial of faith which a modern hard-headed cleric has analyzed so cleverly, so completely, and so unsatisfactorily.

He opened the book with his eyes fixed in front of him, and then let them drop toward it. For a moment the small type was all blurred and indistinct, and then one text seemed to leap out at him.

It was this— "Take ye heed, watch and pray; for ye know not when the time is."

This, then, was his message! He was to watch, to pray, for the time was at hand when—

The curtain slid aside, and Schuabe entered with a tray. He had changed his morning coat for a long dressing-gown of camel's-hair, and wore scarlet leather slippers.

Basil slipped the Bible back into its place and turned to face him. "I live very simply," he said, "and can offer you nothing very elaborate. But here is some cold chicken, a watercress salad, and a bottle of claret."

They sat down on opposite sides of the round table and said little. Both men were tired and hungry. After he had eaten, the clergyman bent his head for a second or two in an inaudible grace, and made the sign of the Cross before he rose from his chair.

"Symbol," said Schuabe, with a cold smile, as he saw him. The cross was over. "What is that Cross to which all Christians bow?" he continued. "It was the symbol of the water-god of the Gauls, a mere piece of their iconography. The Phoenician ruin of Giza, built in the shape of a cross; the Druids used it in their ceremonies; it was Thor's hammer long before it became Christ's gibbet; it is used by the pagan Icelanders to this day as a magic sign in connection with storms of wind. Why, the symbol of Buddha on the reverse of a coin found at Uga is the same cross, the 'fylfot' of Thor. The cross was carved by Brahmins a thousand years before Christ in the caves of Elephanta. I have seen it in India with my own eyes in the hands of Siva Brahma and Vishnu! The worshipper of Vishnu attributes as many virtues to it as the pious Roman Catholic here in Salford to the Christian Cross. There is the very strongest evidence that the origin of the cross is phallic! The crux ansata was the sign of Venus; it appears beside Baal and Asarte;—"

"Very possibly, Mr. Schuabe," said Gortre, quietly. "Your knowledge on such points is far wider than mine; but that does not affect Christianity in the slightest."

"Of course not! Who ever said it did? This reverence for the cross, the instrument of execution on which an excellent teacher, and, as far as we know, a really good man, suffered, angers me because it reminds me of the absurd and unreasoning superstitions which cloud the minds of so many educated men like yourself!"

"Ah," said Gortre, quietly, "now we are 'gripped.' We have come to the point."

"If you choose, Mr. Gortre," Schuabe answered; "you are an intellectual man, and one intellectual man has a certain right to challenge another. I was staying with Lord Haileybury the other day, and I spent two whole mornings walking over the country with the Bishop of London, talking on these subjects. He very ably endeavored to bring physical and psychological science into a single whole. But all he seemed to me to prove was that, crystallized into an axiom or at least a postulate. Conscious volition is the ultimate source of all force. It is his belief that behind the sensuous and phenomenal world which gives it form, existence and activity, lies the ultimate invisible, immeasurable power of Mind, conscious Will, of Intelligence, analogous to our own; and—mark this essential corollary—that man is in communication with it, and that was positively all he could do for me! I met him there easily enough, but when he tried to prove a revelation—Christianity—he utterly broke down. We parted very good friends, and I gave him a thousand pounds for the East London poor fund. But still, say what you will to me. I am here to listen."

He looked calmly at the young man with his unsmiling eyes. He held a Russian cigarette in his fingers, and he waved it with a gentle gesture of invitation as if from an immeasurable superiority.

And as Gortre watched him he knew that here was a brain and intelligence far keener and finer than his own. But with all that certainty he felt entirely undismayed, strangely uplifted.

"I have a message for you, Mr. Schuabe," he began, and the other bowed slightly, without irony, at his words. "I have a message for you, one which I have been sent here—I firmly believe—to deliver, but it is not the message or the argument that you expect to hear."

He stopped for a short time, marshaling his mental forces, and noticing a slight but perceptible look of surprise in his host's eyes.

"I know you better than you imagine, sir," he said gravely, "and not as many other good and devout Christians see you. I tell you here tonight with absolute certainty that you are the active enemy of Christ—I say active enemy."

The face opposite became slightly less tranquil, but the voice was as calm as ever.

"You speak according to your lights, Mr. Gortre," he said. "I am no Christian, but there is much good in Christianity. My words and writings may have helped to lift the veil of superstition and hereditary influences from the eyes of many men, and in that sense I am an enemy of the Christian faith, I suppose. My sincerity is my only apology—if one were needed. You speak with more harshness and less tolerance than I should have thought it your pleasure or your duty to use."

Gortre rose. "Man," he cried, with sudden sternness, "I know! You hate our Lord, and would work Him evil. You are as Judas was, for tonight it is given me to read far in your brain. Schuabe rose quickly from his chair and stood facing him. His face was pallid, something looked out of his eyes which almost frightened the other.

"What do you know?" he cried as if in a swift stroke of pain. Who—? He stopped as if by a tremendous effort.

Some thought came to reassure him. "Listen," he said. "I tell you, paid priest as you are, a blind man leading the blind, that a day is coming when all your boasted fabric of Christianity will disappear. It will go suddenly, and be swept utterly away. And you, you shall see it. You shall be left naked of your faith, stripped and bare, with all Christendom beside you. Your pale Nazarene shall die amid the bitter laughter of the world, die as surely as He died two thousand years ago, and no man or woman shall resurrect Him. You know nothing, but you will remember my words of tonight, until you also become as nothing and endure the inevitable fate of mankind."

He had spoken with extraordinary vehemence, hissing the words out with a venom and malice, general rather than particular, from which the churchman shrank, shuddering. There was such unutterable conviction in the thin, evil voice that for a moment the pain of it was like a spasm of physical agony.

Schuabe had thrown down the mask; it was even as Gortre said, the soul of Iscariot looked out from those eyes. The man saw the clergyman's sudden shrinking.

The smile of a devil flashed over his face. Gortre had turned to him once more and he saw it. And as he watched an awful certainty grew within him, a thought so appalling that beside it all that had gone before sank into utter insignificance.

He staggered for a moment and then rose to his full height, a fearful loathing in his eyes, a scorn like a whip of fire in his voice.

Schuabe blanched before him, for he saw the truth in the priest's soul. "As the Lord of Hosts is in my witness," cried Gortre loudly, "I know you now for what you are! You know that Christ is God!"

Schuabe shrank into his chair. "Antichrist!" pealed out the accusing voice. "You know the truth full well, and, knowing, in an awful presumption you have dared to lift your hand against God."

Then there was a dead silence in the room. Schuabe sat motionless by the dying fire.

Very slowly the color crept back into his cheeks. Slowly the strength and light entered his eyes. He moved slightly.

At last he spoke. "Go, and never let me see your face again. You have spoken. Yet I tell you still that such a blinding blow shall descend on Christendom that—"

He rose quickly from his chair. His manner changed utterly with a marvelous swiftness. He went to the window and pulled aside the curtain. A chill and ghostly dawn came creeping into the library. "Let us make an end of this," he said quietly and naturally. "Of what use for you and me, atoms that we are, to wrangle and thunder through the night over an infinity in which we have neither part nor lot? Come, get you home and rest, as I am about to do. The night has been an unpleasant dream. Treat it as such. We differ on great matters. Let that be so and we will forget it. You shall have a friend in me if you will."

log and smoke from the newly lit factory chimneys in the Irwell valley could not be dispersed. It crept over the town like doom itself—menacing, vast, unconquerable.

He pulled out his latch-key with trembling hand, and turned to enter his own door.

The cloud was spreading. "Lighten our darkness," he whispered to himself, half consciously, and then fell fainting on the door-step, where they found him soon, and carried him in to the sick bed, where he lay sick of a brain fever a month or more.

Lighten our darkness! CHAPTER V. In his great room at the British Museum, great, that is, for the private room of an official, Robert Llewellyn sat at his writing desk finishing on the last few lines of his article on the Hebrew inscription in mosaic, which had been discovered about four in the afternoon, growing dark with the peculiarly sordid and hopeless twilight of a winter's afternoon in Central London. A reading lamp upon the desk threw a bright circle of light on the sheet of white unlined paper covered with minute writing, which lay before the keeper of Biblical antiquities in the British Museum.

The view from the tall windows was hideous and almost sinister in its ugliness. Nothing met the eye but the gloomy backs of some of the great dingy lodging houses which surround the museum, bedroom windows, back bedrooms with dingy curtains, vulgar air unlovely.

The room itself was official looking but far from uncomfortable. There were many book shelves lining the walls. Over them hung large-framed photographs and drawings of inscriptions. On a stand by itself, covered with a glass shade, was a duplicate of Dr. Schick's model of the Haram Ares during the Christian occupation of Jerusalem.

A dull fire glowed in the large open fireplace.

Llewellyn wrote a final line with a sigh of relief and then leaned far back in his swivel chair. His face was gloomy, and his eyes were dull with some inward communing, apparently of a disturbing and unpleasant kind.

The door opened noiselessly (all the dwellers in the mysterious private parts of the museum walk without noise, and seem to have caught in their voices something of that almost religious reverence emanating from surroundings out of the immemorial past), and Lambert, the assistant keeper and secretary, entered.

"The firman has been granted!" he said.

A quick interest shone on Professor Llewellyn's face.

"Ah!" he said, "it has come at last, then, after all these months of waiting. I began to despair of the Turkish government. I never thought it would be granted. Then the society will really begin to excavate at last in the prohibited spots! Really that is splendid news, Lambert. We shall have some startling results. Results, mind you, which will be historical, historical! I doubt but that the whole theory of the Gospel narrative will have to be reconstructed during the next few years!"

"It is quite possible," said Lambert. "But, on the other hand, it may happen that nothing whatever is found."

Llewellyn nodded. Then a sudden thought seemed to strike him. "But how do you know of this, Lambert?" he said, "and how has it happened?"

Lambert was a pleasant, open-faced fellow, young and with a certain air of distinction. He laughed gaily, and returned his chief's look of interest with an affectionate expression in his eyes.

"Ah!" he said, "I have heard a great deal, sir, and I have something to tell you which I am very happy about. It is gratifying to bring you the first news. Last night I was dining with my uncle, Sir Michael Manichee, you know. The home secretary was there, a great friend of my uncle's. You know the great interest he takes in the work of the Exploration Society, and his general interest in the Holy Land?"

"Oh, of course," said Llewellyn. "He's the leader of the uncompromising Protestant party in the house; owes his position to it, in fact. He breakfasts with the

1. POPPER: "Good heavens! I wish we hadn't started on this auto tour. Was sure it was going to rain."
MOMMER: "It was all Leander's fault. He insisted on starting."
LULU: "Oh, this is awful, Leander."
LEANDER: "Only a passing shower, I think."

2. LULU: "Oh, Leander, I am awfully frightened at those fearful flashes of lightning and those deafening crashes of thunder. I can't hear another sound."
LEANDER: "It certainly is fierce. Gee, that was a fearful jolt. They should be made to keep these bumps out of the roadway."

3. LULU: "It's no use your talking, Leander. I can't hear a word you say for that awful roar of thunder."
LEANDER: "I'll put on full speed. The next village is only ten miles away."

4. LULU: "Oh! oh! oh! Leander! Where are Popper and Mommer? Oh, tell me, Leander, tell me!"
LEANDER: "Great Scott! They must have been jolted out when we hit that bump six or eight miles back. We'll have to go back and hunt them up."

5. LULU (after they have gone back nine miles): "Oh, Leander, there they are. Poor Popper! Poor Mommer! Oh, just look at them. Hurry, Leander, they are suffering, I know."
LEANDER: "Just as I thought. They were dumped out when we struck that bump and we didn't hear it on account of those fierce crashes of thunder."

6. LULU: "Oh, poor, poor Popper! Poor Mommer! Oh, Leander, WHY did you allow such a thing to happen?"
POPPER: "I'll see my lawyer about this. Drive back home, you renegade!"
MOMMER: "He did it on purpose, I know he did. Oh, you assassinator!"
LEANDER (aside): "Ye gods! What chance have I when even the thunderbolts of heaven are leagued against me?"
