INSIDE FACTS ABOUT THE 100 CLUB

WHY SO GOOD A PIANO AND SIX MONTHS' INSTRUCTIONS CAN BE SOLD FOR $298

A Really Fine Strohmer Piano Made Possible to Any Family or Employed Young Man or Woman

$298 for a $360 Strohmer Piano and Six Months' Instructions

Store Open Evenings Until 9 O'Clock

"The 100 Club" gives to individuals the advantage of quantity buying. "You" could run a Club—find it requires large capital to "carry" the accounts, for we pay the maker spot cash for a hundred pianos and distribute them to you on these easy terms:

$10.00 at joining, then $2.00 a week. "The 100 Club" makes it possible to own a brand new and fine piano for as little money as one must pay for a "second-hand" piano—and even on easier terms.

The advantages of joining "The 100 Club" are: Easy terms of payment; individual purchase at quantity price, and six months' instructions besides. You get your piano without waiting for us to get the rest of the members. In a word, any young man or woman, any head of family, anyone interested in music can certainly afford to secure a new piano of really good grade.

Suppose you and nine of your friends should decide to club together and buy ten baggies; certainly you would get quite a reduction in price. "The 100 Club" is formed on the same principle, but on much larger scale, and consequently the price concession is greater. We bought one hundred pianos of a model at one time for cash, which brought the utmost price concession. One hundred pianos compress five car loads, which gives to us the minimum freight rate, which we pass on to you. The price is as low as the lowest cost possible consistent with good quality.

We do not pay teachers commission, nor do we employ outside soliciting salesmen, which reduces the cost of selling the piano from $50 to $75. This item of cost you earn yourself by making your choice on our warehouse floor. That's why we can sell a fine $360 Strohmer piano and give six months' instructions at the extremely low price of $298.00.

$10.00 at joining, immediate delivery of piano and order for first month's instructions under the tutoring of Professor Maximilian H. Bauer, or the teacher of your choice, and then $2.00 a week thereafter.

Call and be convinced.

COAST DEFENSE DECLARED WEAK

Equipment of Men and Officers Reported Inadequate

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—General Samuel M. Mills, chief of artillery, says for manning the coast defenses of the United States a force consisting of 1,774 officers and 11,833 enlisted men is needed, while the corps has at present only 523 officers and 13,740 men. He also estimates the installation of fire control equipment for the coast artillery to $6,700,000.

Following the advice contained in a letter from President Roosevelt to the secretary of war dated March 12, 1902, in which the President designated nine specific subjects relative to the organization and training of the coast artillery, the annual report of General Mills makes the following nine recommendations:

1. Separation of the coast and field artillery; provision for submarine mine defense; increase coast artillery for gun defense; proper organization of the coast artillery; adequate pay for skilled enlisted men in the artillery; increase of field artillery and proper organization of the field artillery and examination for promotion of artillery officers of all grades and increased appropriations for target practice by both branches of companies.

General Mills says that of the 126 companies of coast artillery, forty-seven are without captains. He says that it is important that the coast artillery companies should be commanded by captains.

General Mills refers to the joint exercises of the army and navy, which were held at Chesapeake Bay last summer, and says the value and interest were greatly increased by reason of the fact that they gave an opportunity to test the methods of fire control and other systems adopted by the coast artillery.

He recommends that political company organization of coast artillery be abolished and the present coast artillery be made to consist of the specified officers and enlisted men. He also recommends the separation of the field artillery from the coast artillery.

NEW MAJESTIC MANAGER NAMED

Charles Fisher of New York in Charge of Theater

H. F. McGarvie, president of the Interstate Amusement company, who is in the city, announced this morning that the manager for the new Majestic theater in this city will be Charles Fisher, who has been managing similar houses in New York, Chicago and other places. The treasurer and other officers will be announced within a few days. They will be from Fort Worth.

The new theater is being pushed rapidly and is much farther advanced than the Dallas Majestic was at the same time previous to the opening there. The decorators arrived Tuesday and started to work immediately. The electric lights have been installed and the work of finishing the theater is now going on at night as well as in the day time.

Two car loads of chairs for the house will arrive this afternoon or tomorrow and will be installed immediately upon arrival. A car load of scenery from Kansas City will arrive at the same time. The scenery for the house is all being painted by a Kansas City firm, which also supplied the other houses of this company.

The prospects for the opening of the theater at the time set are the brightest and it will take a serious accident to cause the plans to miscarry. The Waco house opens next Monday and the Fort Worth theater Nov. 27. The San Antonio Majestic opened Monday of this week and played to a crowded house, every seat being occupied.

Read remains seated in a chair, rising as the dramatic interest of the story may demand. Mr. Read holds a

CAR FAMINE ON

Advance in Coal Sold Due to Lack of Car Supplies

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—Coal dealers who admit that prices are advancing, say it is due to the fact that there is a car famine and that coal cannot be shipped into Chicago from the coal fields.

"The price of all soft coal has advanced from 25 to 30 cents a ton," said the manager of one coal company. "The supply of coal now standing in cars on the various railroads in Chicago," says the fuel dealer, "would not last an hour in the face of the sudden orders for hurried deliveries that follow the first fall of snow."

TEXAS LEAGUE'S CIRCUIT NAMED
Cleburne Decided Upon as the Sixth City for Team

The circuit for the Texas League for next season has been determined upon with six clubs in the league. The two new clubs that will be added are Cleburne and Greenville, and the four clubs finishing the season last year will remain in the league.

The decision to admit Cleburne has just been reached, although it was first thought that the proposition had been dropped. Manager J. D. Roberts of the Corsicana and Temple teams took up the proposition and as he is to be manager of the new team the matter was looked upon favorably by the league officials. The taking of Cleburne into the league disposes of prospects for Mineral Wells, Sherman and Ardmore.

Managers of the clubs expect Greenville have been appointed. W. H. Ward will have charge of the Fort Worth club, Lee Dawkins of Waco, J. D. Edens of Temple, J. D. Roberts of Ardmore and Joe Gardner of Dallas.

The people concerned in the new club at Cleburne expect to have a stock company with $2,000 capital stock. Operations have been secured on several good sites and a decision will be made within a short time. It is probable that the open ground just north of the Trinity and Brazos Valley railroad site will be the place selected.

Next meeting of the managers of the league will be held in Dallas on Dec. 10 when the final question of the circuit will be taken up and the present management confirmed. Election of officers will also be held.

TO TRAVELING TEXANS: The Telegram is on sale at: Chicago, Ill.—Palmer House News Stand.

Now for the Fat Stock Show: Dallas has been setting the pace. The Fort Worth Telegram says so. This is praise indeed. It is up to Dallas to continue to set the pace.

Two citizens of Fort Worth and Dallas. The time for standing and making faces at each other has passed. The two cities are the twin cities of North Texas, and there are many interests that are common.

THE WAR PANTHER FROM PANTHERVILLE

"My voice is for war," says Colonel Richard M. Wynne, "and a fight to the death." Colonel Wynne is a Panther from Pantherville. In plain English, he lives in Fort Worth.

The objects over which Colonel Wynne thus thunders defiance to high heaven are "the principles of true democracy advocated by the majority of the party in this state."

The difficulty, we apprehend, is to find the "principles advocated by a majority of the democrats of this state." This difficulty Colonel Wynne, with fiery impetuosity, surmounts with what, in the language of chivalry, may be called a spirited demerit.

Seven of the twelve "principles" are pronouncements against the railroads of Texas. The warlike colonel's eagle eye sees a gigantic consolidation of all the railroads of this state into one great trust.

Incidentally, of course, thousands of stockholders in Texas would see their savings swept away by such a process; transportation would be interfered with and business deadlocked.

Other evils, too, the doughty colonel smashes to smithereens, on which remains there would be great satisfaction to hold post-mortem, but it seems best to close with this clarion battle cry: "I want fighters who have convictions and have the courage to fight for them."

The esteemed Express takes a wholly erroneous view of the aims and intentions of Colonel Dick Wynne. That distinguished gentleman is no anarchist seeking to destroy the property and vested rights of any corporation doing business in Texas.

So far as the railways are concerned, it is known of all men that they must be kept under thorough regulation and control. So patent is that fact that we see the President of the United States today varying with members of his own party over this very question.

Colonel Wynne is not an anarchist or professional agitator. He believes the time has come when the people of Texas must resume control of the situation generally for their own protection.

These good people of Henderson must have failed to read and properly digest the President's recent remarks on the subject of lynching. Three negroes strung up at one time is a procedure that will attract very general attention and condemnation of Texas in the East.

San Angelo has so far shipped out four cars of new pecans, and it is reported that the demand greatly exceeds the supply. Buyers are very partial to the Texas pecan from the fact that it is generally known to be the best there is on the market.

When you get the Sunday Telegram you have a genuine newspaper. It is a paper that never disappoints the reader from the fact that it is just a little different and a whole lot better than any of the others.

The Fort Worth and Denver is getting ready for more business that is to result from its extension to the sea. New equipment is to be purchased in considerable quantities.

The movement to call out and elect the best legislative material in every district in the state is still being favorably discussed by many of the leading weekly papers of the state, and it is a movement that has too much genuine merit in it to be permitted to die.

It is reported that the Katy railroad will soon have some gasoline motor cars in operation on its lines in this state. The Katy has not raised as much noise over this departure as some of the others, but it seems to be ready to get in on the ground floor, as usual.

The sale of registered cattle held in this city the first of the week witnessed some very low prices. It is hard for the man who is in the market to purchase improved breeding stock to get over the fact that the stuff he has for sale is going at a very low figure.

Money on call is said to be very tight in New York, but the secretary of the treasury says he can see no occasion therefor. That probably means there will be no immediate issue of additional government bonds.

State Treasurer Robbins has just appointed his son chief clerk in the treasury, to succeed Roger Roberdeau, resigned. Treasurer Robbins is the gentleman who accepted the last state election as a complete vindication of the practice of nepotism.

It develops that Statesman Blount of Palestine was at the legislative dinner in Dallas, loaded for bear, but was not afforded an opportunity to uncock his eloquence. That was an unjust discrimination that appeals to high heaven for future vindication.

They are still picking cotton out in West Texas, and the indications are that a part of the crop may be in the field when the time comes to again stir the soil. The West Texas cotton crop is a winner this year.

Some of the farmers are now beginning to talk of 15 cents for their cotton, and when the staple begins to climb up in that vicinity they will form a rapid conclusion that they ought to have 20 cents.

Nearly every day there are contracts being let for more handsome new buildings in Fort Worth. There can be no mistaking the evidences of growth and prosperity that abound in this city.

There are hints of other candidates for governor yet to materialize, in spite of the fact that all the available running ground seems to be pretty well covered.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

Dallas' great political dinner, recently pulled off, forms a base for which many wireless messages have gone out. For one thing, the prominence of Colonel William D. Williams of Fort Worth was marked, and the speech of that gentleman printed in full forms meats for discussion at many a minor political board.

Judge Williams has a big following throughout Texas, and his prospects for the nomination as railroad commissioner are considered very bright. No better man can be found in all Texas for the position.

Over three-fourth of the population of Russia, according to a recent census, can neither read or write. Is it any wonder they do not know what to do with the freedom which the czar has granted them? Time and education are going to work a wonderful transformation in Russia.—Denison Herald.

The people are Russia are very nearly in the same position as the southern negroes were when emancipated—the recipients of all the rights of citizenship without being qualified to exercise them.

It is not hard to get plenty of patriots to volunteer for the big political honors. What is wanted is a great and good man from every legislative district to serve in the Thirtieth legislature. If he will not volunteer, draft him.—Houston Post.

That is the idea exactly. The men who usually offer for legislative honors are the ones who deserve to be left at home. Let the office seek the man and Texas will have a legislature that will do the entire state credit.

The love of money is so great that some men deny themselves all pleasure of this life in its pursuit, lose the respect and fellowship of mankind, and when they die go to eternal damnation, leaving the riches they have worshiped for lawyers and relatives to squabble over.—Grandview Tribune.

Money is said to be the root of all evil, but that fact deters none of us from going after every dollar that can be diverted our way. We are willing to submit to the evil for the sake of the coin.

The President anticipates but a little while the coming of the time when Americans, without abating their convictions of the righteousness of the Union cause, will look back upon the valor and devotion of the soldiers of Grant and Lee with much the same feeling that makes Englishmen of today equally proud of the fiery charges of the cavaliers and the steady courage of the Cromwellians.—Glimmer Mirror.

The fact that we are all Americans is the one that should overshadow everything else. Americanism means patriotism, and as a race of patriots we are all now standing for the same things.

Next year we are going to witness the return of control to the masses in Texas democratic political affairs, and the men who are figuring on any other kind of proposition are going to awaken with a whole lot of skinned places on their anatomy.—Fort Worth Telegram.

For instance? Will the esteemed Telegram please tell us which one of the boys will come out of the game so bungled up as it predicts?—Bonham News.

It is not necessary to name them. They will be so thoroughly marked that identification will be dead easy.

Texas is the greatest state in the union. She leads in the production of honey, cotton, range cattle and a few other things. Texas needs more people and more factories. If Texas is to keep up with her agricultural development, she must develop her industries—they are the things that build the cities and make good markets for what the farmer produces.—Sherman Register.

The people of Texas are just beginning to appreciate the greatness of their own state, and with this appreciation there is continued marked development that promises much for the very near future.

Interurbanism is running wild all over North Texas, but down here it has nothing to run to. What would any of those boasting North Texas cities do if they were not shored up by a vast circles of ministering towns? This city has nothing to feed it but the cattle country and a few truck farms and an occasional cotton farm, and yet it leads Dallas and has increased that lead within a decade, the figures of the United States census takers being accepted as authority. That census is what the city of San Antonio always banks and depends on.—San Antonio Light.

We have been wondering what was the matter with interurbanism in North Texas, and the information that it is running wild probably accounts for its erratic movements. There are several of these enterprises Fort Worth would be glad to catch and would do so if it was not for this wildness.

General Linevitch is reported to be "slowly withdrawing his troops from Manchuria;" that isn't the way he withdrew them before Portsmouth became a famous place.—Houston Chronicle.

There is quite a difference in the situation now. General Linevitch has had Oyama to help facilitate his movements in the past, and since that assistance has been denied him it is but natural he should move slowly. Give him time and he will yet make the landing.

LITTLE TALES WELL TOLD

A NEW TYPE OF MAN

Luther Burbank, the wizard of horticulture, who believes that in the mingling of the human races in this country will produce a new type of man, has a recruit to his theory in Bishop Hamilton. "You may not believe it," said Hamilton in the college of Methodist bishops, "but you will be great-great-grandfather of Chinese, Slavs, Italians and other races. In San Francisco we have several cases of Chinamen marrying American girls. That will grow more and more common, until we finally have the composite, but typically American type."

That something of this sort is bound to result cannot be questioned. Already in certain sections of this country large numbers of foreign immigrants have become wholly absorbed and their national characteristics modified and adapted to our own.

For instance, there is no higher, sturdier, more truly American type of manhood to be found anywhere than that of the great Northwest, and the foundation was Sweden, Scandinavians and Norwegians, who have thoroughly taken up American customs, associations and marriages and the American spirit.

The new type that results from the blend of the races in this country is bound to be a superior one. For years we got the best blood and brawn the world had to offer. If the character of the immigrants is not equal today to what it has been in the past, there are at least stronger and more firmly fixed social forces here to direct and control it.

Our cities are made up of immigrants. Of the thirty-eight cities of the country with over 100,000 population only eight have a majority of native inhabitants, and these eight are by no means the more progressive.

It is impossible that cities dominated by aliens should not ceaselessly change in character. See what the French and Spanish have done to the people of New Orleans, what the Quakers at an early day did for Philadelphia; see the difference between the people of New York and Chicago, and note how the people of Boston are different still.

There can be no question of the production of new types—this has been brought about already. Is there any question that the tendency is toward a higher type?

THE SULTAN'S FEAR OF DEATH

The fear of a violent death has led the sultan of Turkey to adopt some peculiar press laws. Nowhere is the censorship of the press more severe than at Constantinople, write the Marquis de Fontenay in the New York Tribune, and he goes on to say: "Not one of the local papers was permitted to make any reference to the recent attempt on the life of the sultan. The latter will not even allow the word 'anarchist' or 'socialist' to be used in any Istanbul newspaper. The words 'pest,' 'plague' and 'cholera' are equally barred, the people succumbing to one of these maladies being invariably described as having fallen victims to 'an unknown disease.'"

Another rule insisted upon by the sultan is that as far as the press is concerned every royal personage or monarch's death should be described as having been due to "natural causes." Thus when King Humbert was assassinated the tragedy was described as follows: "The king sank back dying in his carriage while acknowledging the enthusiastic and loyal salutations of his subjects." No mention was made of the cause of his death. And when the late shah was killed by a fanatic Babist the Stamboul press recorded this event as follows: "Toward noon the shah felt himself somewhat indisposed. In the evening his corpse was brought back to the city."

"When the fact is recalled that with the solitary exception of the late ex-sultan Murad, every one of Abdul Hamid's predecessors on the throne has died a violent death, the reason for these peculiar press laws instituted by the Padiashah will be appreciated."

NORWAY'S NEW KING

The name of Hakon, which Prince Charles of Denmark will assume if he ascends the Norwegian throne, recalls the remote past in which Norway was an independent kingdom. Hakon VI, who died in 1386, was the last king which Norway had of its own. His widow, Margaret, a Danish princess, came to rule over Norway, Denmark and Sweden, and strove to make the arrangement lasting by the union of 1387. Sweden revolted under Gustavus Vasa, the contemporary of King Henry VIII of England, but Norway remained a Danish dependency until 1814.

The first Hakon was a usurper, who drove his elder brother from the throne in 935, and thus brought on a long and fierce civil war. He was a Christian, unlike his predecessors, and in his zeal did not scruple to convert his subjects by main force. Another famous Hakon, who reigned in the thirteenth century, is remembered for his invasion of Scotland in 1263. He was defeated at the battle of Largs.

The new Hakon, who will be the seventh of his name, also invaded England and carried off one of its princesses. But he came and went in peace. His wife is Princess Maud, daughter of King Edward.—Chicago News.

GETTING CORRECT ESTIMATE

Professor D. P. Cropp of the University of Colorado has invented a machine that increases the height from one to five inches, the closest girl from one to four inches. "It is amazing," said Professor Cropp the other day, "what an interest people take in any change in their physique—the gain of an inch around the chest or forearm, the loss of an inch in the neck or stomach. I know a fat woman who spent July at the seashore, taking an ocean bath and a hot bath daily so as to reduce her weight. The day she was to leave for home she entered the butcher shop and told the old man to cut her off twenty pounds of pork. He cut and weighed this great chunk of meat, and then said: 'Where, madam, shall I send it?' But the woman, as she feasted her eyes on the pork, replied: 'Oh, don't send it anywhere. I don't want to buy it. You see, I have lost twenty pounds since I have been down here, and I just wanted to see how much that was.'"

THE SAME ANIMAL

A young minister at Ottawa who had been given a horse by a rich farmer parishioner rode the animal home to exhibit him to his father. The old gentleman studied the horse carefully and observed that he seemed very aged and infirm. "Well, father," said the son, "I don't think you ought to complain of him even if he is old and feeble. It is a good deal better animal than our Saviour rode into Jerusalem nineteen hundred years ago. 'I don't know, John,'" replied his father, "I think 'It's the same animal.'"

LOVE'S LAMENT

O! my lover! dead and lying Where the bitter wind is sighing, I am left to weep alone! Weep the days of sweetest pleasure, Of a love beyond all measure, When I held you as my treasure, My beautiful, my own!

Sad and drear the dear old place is— Nevermore your pleasant face is— The sunshine of the room! On the stair your step falls—never! Since grim Fate the tie did sever— But its music thrills forever From the darkness of the tomb,

O, my lover, tender hearted! O, my lover! dead and parted! Life has not a joy for me! Just one kiss from you, love! Just one glance of true love! And joy would then renew, love, My heart be all aglow!

O, my lover, from that far land, From bloom and shine of star land, Stoop lightly as of old, When sweet in love's appealing You whispered, lowly kneeling, Your depths of love revealing, In passion strong and bold.

O, my lost one! broken hearted! Since we kissed—as lovers parted, I am left to weep alone! Weep! alone the many blisses! The endearing words and kisses! O, my heart so sadly misses! My beautiful! my own! —T. F. Rowland.

HOW COLD MUST IT BE?

J. D. K.'s question, How cold must it be to be twice as cold as 2 degrees above zero, has stirred up a number of meteorologists and mathematicians. J. J. K., a Central high school boy of Cleveland, writes:

"I would say that two times colder than 2 degrees above zero would be 2 degrees below zero. Being a student of meteorology, I think I ought to know. Another way to find the answer would give as a result 220 or 230 degrees below zero. This answer is absurd, as no place on earth can be that cold. Therefore the only possible answer is 2 degrees below zero. Does that satisfy J. D. K.?"

L. E. H. thinks the answer is 4 degrees below zero, while T. D. N., R. F. H., E. S., H. N. R., H. J. W. and E. E. M. say zero.

The best answer to that is found in the fact that the industrial, commercial, scientific and moral progress of this country is without precedent in the history of the world.

RULERS OF THE WORLD

Meat Eating Nations Are the Leaders in Every Branch of Human Achievements

The ruling nations of the world are meat eaters and history records that they always have been. Vegetarians and food cranks may explain this in any way they choose, but the facts remain that the Americans, English, French, Russians and Germans are meat-eating nations, and they are also the most energetic and most progressive.

The principal food of the heroic Boer soldier, known as Biltong, is a sort of dried beef, affording a great deal of nourishment in a highly concentrated form. The weak races of people are the rice-eating Chinese, Hindoos and Siamese, regarded since the dawn of history as non-progressive, superstitious and inferior physically and mentally to the meat-eating nations who dominate them.

The structure of the human body plainly indicates that human beings should subsist upon a variety of food, meat, fruit and grains, and it is unhygienic to confine one's diet to any one of those classes to the exclusion of the others. Meat is the most concentrated and most easily digested of foods, but our manner of living is often so unnatural that the digestive organs refuse to properly digest meat, eggs and similar nutritious and wholesome food, but it is not because such food is unwholesome, but the real reason is that the stomach lacks, from disease or weakness, some necessary digestive element, hence arising indigestion and, later on, chronic dyspepsia.

Nervous people should eat plenty of meat, and vegetarians should make meat the principal food, hard-working people have to do so, and brain-workers and office men should eat, not so much meat, but at least once a day, and to insure its perfect digestion one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets should be taken after each meal, because they supply the pepsines, diastase and fruit acids, lacking in every case of stomach trouble. Nervous dyspepsia, catarrh of stomach, gastritis, sour stomach, gas and acidity are only different names for indigestion, the failure to digest wholesome food, and the use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets cures them by affording perfect digestion, the stomach has a chance to rest and recover its natural tone and vigor.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the real household medicine, as it is safe and pleasant for the stomach ache of the baby as it is for the imperfect digestion of its grand sire. They are not a cathartic, but a digestive, and no habit can ever follow their use; the only habit Stuart's Tablets induce is the habit of good digestion and consequently good health.

AMUSEMENTS

"THE COUNTY CHAIRMAN"

There will be a gala night at Greenwall's opera house tonight, Nov. 15, where George Ade's quaint comedy drama "The County Chairman," which Henry W. Savage offers for the first time in this city, appears.

Mr. Ade has steadily advanced in the first of dramatic writing since his first venture, "The Sultan of Sulu," was produced, less than three years ago. There were other entirely successful works among the lines of comic comedy, but in his first genuine play he seems to have achieved a success which over-shadows all his other efforts. The theater-going public is familiar with the comedy of "The County Chairman." It was produced in New York last season, and while dozens of theaters were conducted on a panic basis, Wallace's, in which the Ade comedy was being given, was enjoying the most prosperous run in its history.

There were many discerning ones who proclaimed the new work a thoroughly genuine comedy, refining and certain characteristic aspect of life in the west as no other production has ever done. Rural scenes have been employed in scores of plays, many of which have been received with high praise, but in nearly every case they have been too sentimental to be characteristically American, and the comedy types have been drawn so broadly that they merely suggested without being types form real life.

Mr. Ade has gone into the section which supplied James Whitcomb Riley for themes of the most characteristic of American life, and if common report may be depended upon, has found inspiration for a comedy of rare qualities. Politics, a theme which is as vital and as uppermost at the country roads as it is in the big cities, furnishes the motif for the story, and the author of the play is said to have created a number of types of the sort which an audience is sure to recognize as old-time acquaintances. Perhaps a chief reason why the "County Chairman" has been so warmly received is the fact that there is so much of the farm and the little town in the earlier days, and have a fondness for the things they have put behind them.

"THE COLLEGE WIDOW"

"The College Widow," which will be seen for the first time in this city at Greenwall's opera house, Friday night, Nov. 17, is a combined triumph of playwriting and play staging, and it is said to make every mother's son and every son's mother, as well as all the incidental representatives of the family, glad that they are Americans and thereby related to George Ade, who wrote the piece, and able to rejoice conscientiously in its phenomenal success.

"HOOGLIAN IN NEW YORK"

Picturing a phase of life in a big city that cannot fail to excite the interest of all patrons of the drama, "Hooligan in New York" is full of sensational scenes, original comedy situations and thrilling climaxes. It is presented at Greenwall's opera house Monday night, Nov. 20. Scenically the production is unusually elaborate, five complete sets being carried, each one of which is a work of art.

MOODY TO TEST REBATE ON BEER

Attorney General Questions Legality of Practice

Attorney General Moody has filed a petition in the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Wisconsin, brought under the Elkins law to test the legality of certain commissions paid by railroad after receipt of the published rates, to a certain private car company controlled by stockholders of the corporation shipping freight in those cars over the railroad lines. Mr. Moody makes the following statement of the case:

"The petition is against the Milwaukee Refrigerator Transit company, the Pere Marquette railroad company, the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad company, the Erie railroad company, the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad company, the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad company, the Wisconsin Central railroad company, the Chicago and Alton railroad company and the Fabry Brewing company. This case arises out of the following statement of facts, which have been investigated by the interstate commerce commission and by that body and also by private interests adversely affected brought to the attention of the attorney general and by him carefully considered.

"Conferences have been held between the attorney general and District Attorney Butterfield of the eastern district of Wisconsin at Chicago and Washington, and on Friday last, at a conference between the attorney general, Mr. Purdy, Special Assistant District Attorney Pugin, the District Attorney and special counsel, Charles Quarles of the Milwaukee bar, the fee of the petition was determined upon.

"It appears that the Pabst Brewing company is a large shipper of beer over the various railroads running from Milwaukee to the collection points, with the exception of that corporation organized and owned by the Milwaukee Refrigerator Transit company, a corporation operating private cars.

"The latter corporation the control of the equipment of the Pabst Brewing company was given by an agreement entered into between the two corporations named. The various railroads mentioned as defendants, while receiving as freight money the open market rate for the transportation of commodities, have paid to the transit company, in whose private cars the beer was transported, a commission of about 12 per cent upon the amount of the freight money collected, with the effect, of course, that the net amount received for transportation by the railroad companies is so much less than the published and open rate.

"This petition is designed to test the legality of such payments, and is brought under the provision of the so-called Elkins law, which provides that a failure strictly to observe the published rates shall be a misdemeanor, and further provides that 'it shall be unlawful for any person, persons or corporations to offer, grant or give, or to solicit, accept or receive, any rebate, concession or discrimination in respect to the transportation of any property in interstate or foreign commerce, whereby any such property shall by any device whatever be transported at a less rate than that named in the tariffs published and filed by the carrier.'

"The case is regarded as of great general importance by the attorney general, and will be pressed to as speedy a hearing as is just regard for the interests of the defendants will permit. With District Attorney Butterfield, Charles Quarles of the Milwaukee bar has been associated."

CITY TIRED OF WAIT FOR WATER

North Fort Worth Council Serves Notice on Company

Long discussion of the water works contract at the regular meeting of North Fort Worth city council Tuesday night ended in instructing city Attorney Valentine to notify the contracting company that the city desires and expects the company to turn over the plant at once, the contract being a complete system, including the consulting engineer, John B. Hawley of Fort Worth, is designated as mediator of all differences arising between the city of North Fort Worth and the McQuatters Plumbing and Machine Company, the contracting company, that may arise between them.

The point of the discussion hinged about the fact that there is a question as to whether the contracting company must, under the contract, bear the expense of the wiring necessary to operate electric valves in the plant, or whether this expense shall be borne by the city. Alderman Mulholland reported to the council that it is the opinion of Engineer Hawley this expense must be borne by the city. The city attorney was therefore directed to consult with the engineer upon notifying the company that the city expects an immediate delivery of the water works system.

Mr. Pritchard said to the council that the matter of the water works contract was one directly concerning the welfare of every citizen of the city, involving a heavy bond and a heavy responsibility, and should receive careful consideration rather than hasty action. The mayor advised that the contract be carefully gone over by the city attorney and the consulting engineer to ascertain the exact status of affairs in order that the contract be fulfilled to the best interest of all concerned.

Proposition of the Fort Worth and Rosen Heights Street Railway Company was submitted through a copy that was made by H. A. Perlin to furnish twenty-four street lights to the city, giving an estimate of approximately a cost of different kinds of service, to Greenwall, a suspension of the electrical committee with directions to report soon.

MAY MANTON FASHIONS

BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM
"BETRAYAL"
COPYRIGHT, 1904 BY DODD MEAD & CO.

Then I remember only that mad head-long flight back across the park, where the very air seemed full of sobbing, mocking voices, and the ground beneath my feet swayed and heaved. I could not even think coherently. I heard the motor car go tearing down the road past me, and come to a standstill at the turn. Still I had no thought of any danger. It never occurred to me to leave the footpath and make my way back to the "Brand," as I might well have done, by a more circuitous route. I kept on the footpath, and just as I reached the little iron gate which led into the spinney, I felt a man's arm suddenly flung around my neck, and with a jerk I was thrown almost off my feet.

"He is here, madame," I heard a low voice say. "Take the papers from him. I have him safe."
I think that my desperate humor lent me more than my usual strength. With a fierce effort I wrenched myself free. Almost immediately I heard the click of a revolver.

"If you move," a low voice said, "I fire!"
"What do you want?" I asked.
"The papers."
I laughed bitterly.

"Are they worth my life?" I asked.
"The life of a dozen such as you," the man answered. "Quick! Hand them over."
Then I heard a little cry from the woman who had been standing a few feet off. In the struggle I had lost my cap, and a faint watery moon, half hidden by a ragged bank of black clouds, was shining weakly down upon us.

"Guy," she cried, and her voice was shaking as though with terror. "Guy, is that you?"
I lost my self-control. I forgot her sex. I forgot everything except that she was responsible for the unspeakable corruption. I said terrible things to her. And she listened, white-calm—speechless. When I had finished she sighed to the man to leave us. He hesitated, but with a more peremptory gesture she dismissed him.

"Guy," she said, "you have not spared me. Perhaps I do not deserve it. Now listen. The whole thing is at an end. Those few papers are all I want. Your father is already in France. I am leaving at once. Give me those papers and you will be rid of us forever. If you do not, I must stay on until I have received copies of a portion of them, at any rate. You know very well now that I can do this. Give me those that you have. It will be safer—in every way."
"Give them to you?" I answered, scornfully. "Are you serious?"
"Very serious, Guy. Do you not see that the sooner it is all over—the better—the safer—over there?"
She pointed toward the house. I could have struck the white fingers with their loathsome meaning.

"I shall take this packet to Lord Chelsford," I said. "I am down here as a spy—a spy upon spies. He is up at the house now, and tomorrow this packet will be in his hands. I shall tell him how I secured it. I think that after that you will not have many opportunities for playing your cursed trade."
"You know the consequences?" I answered coldly.
"They are not my concern," I answered coldly.
She looked over her shoulder.
"If I," she said, "were as unwavering in my duty as you I should call Jean back."
"I am indifferent," I answered. "I do not value my life enough to shrink from fighting for it."
She turned away.
"You must go your own way," she said. "Send for Lord Chelsford, if you will. But remember all that I will mean. Can't you see that such stern morality as yours is the most exquisite form of selfishness? Goodbye, Guy."
She glided away. I reached the "Brand" undisturbed.

CHAPTER XXXIX.
The Traitor
"I do not understand you, Ducaigne," Lord Chelsford said slowly. "You have been a faithful and valuable servant to your country, and you know very well that your services are not likely to be forgotten. I want you only to be consistent. I must know from whom you received this packet."
"I cannot tell you, sir," I answered. "It was a terribly dark night, and it is not easy to identify a hand. Besides, it was snatched away almost at once."
"In your own mind, Ducaigne," Chelsford said, "have you hazarded a guess as to who that unseen person might be?"
"It is too serious a matter to hazard guesses about, sir," I answered.
"Nevertheless," Lord Chelsford continued, eyeing me closely, "in your own mind you know very well who that person was. You are a bad liar, Ducaigne. There was something about the hand which told you the truth—a ring, perhaps. At any rate, something."

"I had no time to feel for such things, sir," I answered.
"Ducaigne," Lord Chelsford said, "I am forced to connect your refusal to hazard even a surmise as to the identity of that hand with your sudden desire to break off all connection with this matter. I am forced to come to a conclusion, Ducaigne. You have discovered the truth. You know the traitor!"
"On the contrary, Lord Chelsford," I answered, "I know nothing."
"After the day he came to me again, I could see that he had made no fresh discovery."
"Ducaigne," he said, "what time did you say that you left here last night?"
"At midnight, sir."
"And you were back?"
"Before one."
"That corresponds exactly with Grooton's statement," Lord Chelsford said. "And yet I have certain information that from a few minutes before 11 till 2 o'clock not one member of the military band quitted the library."
I bowed.

"That is conclusive," I remarked.
"It is remarkably inconclusive to me," Lord Chelsford remarked grimly. "Whom else save one of your friends who are all upon the board could you possibly wish to shield?"
"That I even wish to do so," I answered, "is purely an assumption."
"You are fencing with me, young man," Lord Chelsford said, "and it is not worth while. Hush! There was a rap at the door down stairs. We heard the duke's measured tones."
"I understood that Lord Chelsford was here," he said.
"Lord Chelsford has left, your grace," Grooton answered.
"And Mr. Hill?"
"He has been at the house all day, your grace."
The duke appeared to hesitate for a moment.

"Grooton," he said, "I rely upon you to see that Lord Chelsford has this note shortly. I am going for a little walk, and shall probably return this way. I wish you to understand that this note is for Lord Chelsford's own hand."
"Certainly, your grace."
"Not only that, Grooton, but the fact that I called here and left a communication for Lord Chelsford is also—to be forgotten."
"I quite understand, your grace," Grooton assured him.

The duke struck a match, and a moment or two later we saw him strolling along the cliff side, smoking a cigarette, his hands behind him, prim, carefully dressed, walking with the measured ease of a man seeking an appetite for his dinner. He was scarcely out of sight, and Lord Chelsford was on the point of descending for his note, when my heart gave a great leap. Lady Angela emerged from the plantation and crossed the open space in front of the cottage with swift footsteps. Her hair was streaming in the breeze as though she had been running, but there was not a vestige of color in her cheeks. Her eyes, too, were like the eyes of a frightened child.

Lord Chelsford descended the stairs and himself admitted her.
"Why, Angela," he exclaimed, "you look as though you had seen a ghost. Is anything the matter?"
"Oh, I am afraid so," she answered. "Have you seen my father?"
"Why?" he asked, fingering the note which Grooton had silently laid upon the table.
"Something has happened!" she exclaimed. "I am sure of it. Last night he came to me before dinner. He told me that Blenavon was in trouble. It was necessary to send him money by a special messenger, by the only person who knew his whereabouts. He gave me a packet, and he told me that at a quarter-past twelve last night I was to be in his music room, and directly the stable clock struck I was to open the window, and some one would be there on the terrace and take the packet. I did exactly as he told me, and there was someone there; but I had just held out the packet when a third person snatched it away, and held my hand close to his eyes, and thought to try to guess who I was. I managed to get it away and close the window, but I think that the wrong person must have taken the packet. I told my father, today, and he told me that terribly still look of his. I thought that he was never going to speak again. When I asked him if there was a good deal of money in it—he only groaned."
"Since then," he asked, "what?"
"A man came to see father," she drove from Wells. He looked like a Frenchman, but he gave no name. He was in the library for an hour. When he left he walked straight out of the house and drove away again.
"I went into the library, and you know how strong father is—he was crouching forward across the table, muttering to himself. It was like some sort of a fit. He did not know me when I spoke to him. Lord Chelsford, what does it all mean?"
"Go on," he answered. "Tell me the rest."
"There is nothing else," she faltered. "He got better presently, and he told me that he never knew him to do such a thing before, except at morning or night. And then he locked himself in the study and wrote. About an hour afterwards I heard him asking every where for you. The servants thought that you had come here. I saw him crossing the park, so I followed."
Lord Chelsford came to the bottom of the stairs and called me by name. I heard Lady Angela's little cry of surprise. I was downstairs in a moment, and she came straight into my arms. Her dear tear-stained little face buried itself upon my shoulder.

"I am so thankful, so thankful that you are here," she murmured.
And all the while, with the face of a man forced into the presence of tragedy, Lord Chelsford was reading that letter. When he had finished his hands were shaking and his face was gray. He moved over to the fireplace, and without a moment's hesitation he thrust the letter into the flames. Not content with that, he stood over it, poker in hand, and beat the ashes into powder. Then he turned to the door.
"Take care of Angela, Ducaigne," he exclaimed, and hurried out.
But Lady Angela had taken alarm. She hastened after him, dragging me with her. Lord Chelsford was past middle age, but he was running along the cliff path like a boy. We followed. Lady Angela would have passed him, but I held her back. She did not speak a word. Some vague presence of the truth even then, I think, had dawned upon her.

We must have gone a mile before we came in sight of him. He was strolling along, only dimly visible in the gathering twilight, still apparently smoking, and with the air of a man taking a leisurely promenade. He was telling up the side of the highest cliff in the neighborhood, and once we saw him turn seaward and take of his hat as though enjoying the breeze. Just as he neared the summit he looked round. Lord Chelsford waved his hand and shouted.

"Toschester," he cried. "Hi! Wait for me."
The duke waived his hand as though in salute, and turned apparently with the object of coming to meet us. But at that moment, without any apparent cause, he lurched over toward the cliff side, and we saw him fall. Lady Angela's cry of frenzied horror was the most awful thing I had ever heard. Lord Chelsford took her into his arms.
"Climb down, Ducaigne," he gasped. "I'm done."
I found the duke on the shingles, curiously unmanly. He had the appearance of a man who had found death restful.

CHAPTER XL.
THE THEORIES OF A NOVELIST
The novelist smiled. He had been buttonholed by a very great man, which pleased him. He raised his voice a little. "In common with many other people, my dear madam," he said, "you labor under a great mistake. Human character is governed by its exact laws as the physical world. Give me a man's characteristics and I will undertake to tell you exactly how he will act under any given circumstances. It is a question of mathematics. We will carry with us, inherited or acquired, a certain amount of resistance to evil influence, certain predilections toward good and vice versa. There are experts who can tell you of blackguards. Some natures are more complex than others, of course—that only means that the weighing up of the good and evil in them is a more difficult matter. There are experts who can tell you the weight of a haystack by looking at it, and there are others who are able at Christmas time to indulge in an unquenchable thirst by accurately computing the weight down to ounces, of the pig or turkey raffled for at their favorite public house. So the trained student of his fellows can also diagnose his subjects and anticipate their actions."
The marquis smiled.
"You analytical novelists would destroy for us the whole romance of life," he declared. "I will not listen to you any longer. I fear ignorance less than disillusion."
He passed on, and the little group at once dispersed. Lord Chelsford plucked me by the arm.
"Let us sit down, Ducaigne," he said. "What rubbish the men of letters talk!"
I glanced toward the ballroom, but my companion shook his head.
"Angela is dancing with the Portuguese ambassador," he said, "and he will never give up his ten minutes afterward. You must pay the penalty of having married the most beautiful woman in London. Guy, and sit out with the old fogies. What rubbish that fellow did talk!"
"You are thinking," I murmured.
"Of the duke? Yes! There was a man who, to all appearance, was a typical English gentleman, proud, sensitive of his honor, in every action which came before the world a right-dealing and a right-doing man. To do what seemed right to him from one point of view he stripped himself of lands and fortune, and when that was not enough he stooped to utterable baseness. He was willing to betray his country to justify his own sense of personal honor."
"In justice to him," I said, "one must remember that he never for a moment believed in the possibility of a French invasion."
Lord Chelsford shook his head.
"It is too nice a point," he declared. "We may not reckon it in his favor. I wonder how our friends on the other side felt when they knew that they had paid

GIRL'S DRESS 5176.

Combinations of plaid with plain material are much to be noted this autumn and are always charming and attractive for little girls. Illustrated is a pretty little frock which is, however, rendered dressy by means of the contrast in materials and which is exceedingly smart at the same time that it is absolutely simple. In the case of the model the material is dark blue cashmere and the plaid is one of the bright ones of the Scottish clans, but all materials that are used for little girls' dresses are appropriate and color is always a matter of individual preference. Plaid this year are exceptionally varied, and also it will be found that the list of colors is a long one. Dark blue is a serviceable, but brown and green in many shades are equally fashionable and smart. Venetian reds are showing a greater number of shades than ever before.

The dress is made with the blouse and skirt, which are joined at the waist line. The blouse is made over a body lining, which is faced to form the chemisette, and is laid in tucks which extend from shoulders to waist line and that give a box plaited effect at the front edges. The sleeves are the favorite ones, made with rather wide cuffs above which they are full, while the skirt is straight gathered at its upper edge.

The quantity of material required for the medium size (12 years) is 6 yards 27, 4 1/2 yards 32 or 2 1/2 44 inches wide with 1 yard 44 inches wide for chemisette and trimming.
The pattern 5176 is cut in sizes for girls of 8, 10, 12 and 14 years of age.

Social Tragedy

Women Who Brave Death for Social Honors.

In the midst of one of the most brilliant social functions of the season, a noted society woman started suddenly from her chair with a scream of agony and fell insensible to the floor.

A few hours later the distinguished physician told her anxious husband that she was suffering from an acute case of nervous prostration brought on by female trouble, and hinted at an operation. Fortunately a friend advised her to try

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The result was that she escaped the surgeon's knife and to-day is a well woman.

The derangement of the delicate female organism sets every nerve in the body quivering with pain. Headaches, backaches, torturing bearing down pains and dragging sensations make women nervous and hysterical.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was troubled for eight years with irregularities which broke down my system and brought on extreme nervousness and hysteria. I could neither enjoy my meals nor sleep nights, became easily irritated and nervous and very despondent. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound proved to be the only medicine which helped me. After taking the third bottle, my general health began to improve. At the end of the fifth month I was well and could attend to my household and social duties and enjoy life.

Mrs. Curry, whose portrait appears on the right, is the leader of the Ladies' Symphony Orchestra. The following letter is from Miss Goode, President of the Bryn Mawr Lawn Tennis Club of Chicago:

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I tried many different remedies to try to build up my system, which had become run down from loss of proper rest and unseasonable hours, but nothing seemed to help me. Mother is a great advocate of Lydia Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for female troubles, having used it herself some years ago with great success. So I began to take it, and in less than a month I was able to be out of bed and out of doors, and in three months I was entirely well. Really I have never felt so strong and well as I have since.

OF INTEREST TO THE CATTLEMEN

PRESIDENT BRESSE'S VIEW BRESSE, Okla., Nov. 15.—R. M. Bresse, president of the Oklahoma Live Stock Association and a prominent live stock man, has sent the following communication to the State Capital in regard to the work of the association.

As a signifier to the Oklahoma stockmen, readers of your excellent paper, all of whom should be and I hope will be members of our organization, I think the Oklahoma Live Stock Association should have a committee on information, composed of liberal, broad-minded and experienced stockmen, whose duty will be to obtain all the information possible on breeding, improving and handling of live stock.

They should also be in touch with all the experiment stations in the country and gather all facts which will benefit the stock raisers of Oklahoma. They should cause the same to be printed in a convenient form and distributed to the members of our association and should also add to this information all the important matters of this association under separate heads, viz: Cattle thefts, horse thefts, excessive and unjust freight rates by transportation companies and to secure the cooperation of our legislatures and to set down and vote out such legislators as are hostile with railroad passes.

Also our association should ask our legislature and the congress of the United States to assist the interstate commerce commission in ferreting out the violations of the beef trust, and all other trusts. Also I believe that each member of this organization should be constituted a committee of one to help carry out this much and I think that each member should pledge to assist the secretary board of Oklahoma and bureau of animal industry of the United States in eradicating the Texas fever, in other words the fever ticks, and clean our ranges of all ticks, and in the next twenty years keep us out of the native markets whereby we have sustained very heavy losses, losses that no one can estimate.

By the concerted action and co-operation of all concerned we can accomplish the ends we desire and justly entitled to. I hope and request that all our territory stockmen will keep these and other important matters in mind that they will arrange in advance to be at our annual meeting in March, 1906, at Oklahoma City and be prepared to discuss fully and effectively the numerous and important matters just before you.

WANT HORNLESS CATTLE

In late years feeders have shown marked preference for hornless cattle. It is a patent fact that cattle without horns will make greater gains in flesh in the feed lot than the horned animal, and they are equally equal footing as well as tamer and less nervous.

Cattle breeders on the ranges and those in the more eastern states have rightly read the signs of the times, and in order to meet the popular demand, many ranchmen are detaching their young cattle, while breeders of native cattle are striving to secure hornless cattle from horned breeds.

Wagon Gammon of Des Moines, Iowa, one of the pioneer cattle raisers of that state, and secretary and treasurer of the American Polled Hereford Cattle Club, states that it is possible to secure hornless cattle from horned breeds. "Improvement is the order of the age in things agricultural, especially in the traits of live stock," remarks Mr. Gammon to a representative of the Kansas City Drivers Telegram. "There is a growing demand for hornless cattle. If a breed has any objectionable characteristics it is but natural for the American breeder to strive to eliminate these objections. The eastern cattle feeders want the very best, and they feed for the export trade. Horned cattle cannot be exported. Without horns the steers fattens quickly and faster than the steers with horns. The herd that is hornless fattens more evenly, as they are all on the same footing, there being no bosses to drive the more timid ones away. These are conditions with which every cattle feeder is familiar.

"The production of hornless cattle can be accomplished without the use of a saw. It has been demonstrated, and it can be done, and is now being done. It can be done in any breed. Cattle breeders doubted this at first, but all doubts are now removed in the living illustrations which have been produced."

THE SAN ANTONIO VIEW

Next to the city election today the question of what would become of the local officers of the various live stock commission houses after Jan. 1 claimed much attention Monday. The ruling adopted by the Fort Worth Exchange was constructed two ways. The solicitor rule, as adopted, says, "No member of this exchange shall employ, or in any manner pay, a traveling or local live stock solicitor. Only individual bona-fide members of firms, bona-fide solicitors of corporations and bona-fide salesmen of live stock on this market, and actually and regularly employed in the prosecution of the commission business at the Fort Worth stock yards may solicit business, all of whom shall be residents of this market and members of this exchange, but no one, thus qualified shall solicit business outside of the city of Fort Worth and North Fort Worth." Some of the cattlemen claim there is nothing in the above to prevent members of the exchange from having branch offices in San Antonio in charge of a man who shall do no soliciting, but devote his time to looking after the loans of his firm in south Texas. Others claim that it was the purpose of the exchange to wipe San Antonio off the map so far as its prestige as a city center is concerned.—San Antonio Express.

WHAT CATTLEMEN WANT

Muelo MacKenzie struck the keynote in Chicago the other day when he said that the cattlemen had never asked that the interstate commerce commission be given power to fix railroad rates. "All we ask," said he, "is that the commission be given power, on complaints made, to investigate, and if it finds a rate unreasonable, to fix a fair rate that must be observed. That's fair to the railroads, and to the shippers. The commission has power now only to investigate and find, and the shipper must fight out in the courts the question of the rates suggested. We have just won one partial victory, after fighting ten years longer to reap any benefits from it. That was the decision rendered last week by the interstate commerce commission that the general charge of $2 against the railroads at Chicago is unenforceable, and should be no more than $1."

Cause of Headaches

You must look well after the condition of your liver and bowels. Unless there is daily action of the bowels, poisonous products are absorbed, causing headaches, biliousness, nausea, dyspepsia. Ayer's Pills are liver pills, mildly laxative. We have no secret! We publish J. C. Ayer Co., the formulas of all our medicines. Lowell, Mass.

Vinol THE COD LIVER PREPARATION WITHOUT OIL
Is fast superseding old-fashioned cod liver oil and emulsions because, without a drop of oil or disagreeable feature, it contains all the medicinal elements of cod liver oil, actually taken from fresh cods' livers. By our process the oil, having no value either as a medicine or food, is separated from the medicinal elements and thrown away. Unlike old-fashioned cod liver oil and emulsions, Vinol is deliciously palatable, agreeable to the weakest stomach, and therefore unequalled as a body builder and strength creator for old people, puny children, weak, run-down men and women, after sickness, and for all pulmonary diseases. Everything Vinol contains is named on the label.

OUR GUARANTEE—We have such faith in VINOL that if you will take it we promise if it does not benefit or cure you we will return you your money without question. We take all the risk.

NEW MANAGER COMING

H. T. Edgar Expected at Traction Company's Offices Dec. 1

It is learned here today that H. T. Edgar, who has been appointed by President Tripp as manager for the Northern Texas Traction Company and city lines in Fort Worth, will arrive here about the first of December. It is not likely that he will at once assume control of the property, but will be under Manager Mapleford for several months for the purpose of getting onto the ways of running a big street car company in a big city. Mr. Mapleford does not anticipate leaving Fort Worth for some time yet, at least until his services as chief engineer of construction of the electric line between Washington and Baltimore that is to be built by George Bishop are needed. That will probably be early in the spring.

C. W. Kellogg Jr. has been appointed to succeed Mr. Edgar and has already arrived at El Paso from Brockton, Mass., where he has been identified with street car lines for many years.

President Tripp is due to reach El Paso today to make an inspection of the Stone-Webster property in that city.

Newton H. Lassiter Who Will Be Asked to Enter Mayoralty Race

NEWTON H. LASSITER.

A petition is being circulated today asking the candidacy of Newton H. Lassiter for mayor of the city of Fort Worth.

A movement to secure his candidacy has been on foot for some time and is now taking definite shape. Following circulation of the petition it will be presented to him, together with the demand of friends that he permit his name to go before the people.

Mr. Lassiter, who served at one time in the city council, is one of the leading members of the bar in this city, and general attorney of the Rock Island railroad. He has not been a politician and his election is being urged by the petitioners as assuring a business administration of city affairs. He is a resident of the Fourth ward.

GOV. HOGG TELLS STORY OF INJURY

Deposition in His Damage Suit Case Complete

Ex-Gov. James S. Hogg, who has been ill in Fort Worth for the past several weeks, has completed his deposition in his damage suit for $100,000 against the International and Great Northern railway. Governor Hogg is suing for damages as a result of injuries which he alleges were received while he was a passenger on an International and Great Northern train at Anchor, Texas, Jan. 26 of the present year.

In his deposition Governor Hogg says that he was seated in a car reading a newspaper when cars of the engine struck the front end of the coach with great force, jarring him greatly and propelling a year in his head and neck and a sharp pain close to the base of his head, from which he has suffered ever since.

Governor Hogg then describes the condition of his health up to the present time, specifying several periods of illness. Previous to the accident, he says, his doctor bills for the past ten years probably would not reach $5.

Governor Hogg says that his earnings during the period he practiced law averaged $2,999 a month.

TOWN BURNED OUT

But Four of 200 Buildings at Burke, Va., Saved

BLUFFFIELD, Va., Nov. 15.—Five practically wiped out the town of Burke yesterday, dwelling a loss estimated between $200,000 and $300,000.

Only four dwellings and one store remain of more than 200 houses, and it was by heroic work on the part of volunteers that this small portion of the town was saved.

MAN'S UNREASONABLENESS

Is often as great as woman's. But Thos. S. Austin, manager of the "Republican," of Leavenworth, Ind., was not unreasonable, when he refused to allow the doctors to operate on his wife for female trouble. "Instead," he says, "we concluded to try Electric Bitters. My wife was then so sick she could hardly leave her bed, and five (5) physicians had failed to relieve her. After taking Electric Bitters, she was perfectly cured, and can now perform all her household duties." Guaranteed by Walker & Pflieger, Holland's Red Cross Pharmacy and Remfry Drug Company, druggists. Price 50 cents.

MADE HIM WALK THIRTY-SIX BLOCKS

LARSON HAD A HAND IN IT

C. S. Houghton Relates the Experience of What He Was Three Weeks Ago and What He Is Now

Six years a rheumatic, hardly able to walk a block, three weeks ago, every step punctuated with untold agony. Such was the condition of C. S. Houghton, but note the contrast today, as explained in his own words, wherein he tells about walking thirty-six blocks without pain or exhaustion.

"I have lived in Fort Worth seven years, six of which I have suffered untold agony from rheumatism. I was on crutches for months, and tried several doctors and patent medicines, but found no relief until I came to J. Austin Larson, Delaware Hotel, three weeks ago. At that time I could not walk a block without enduring excruciating pain and you will understand how much better I am when I tell you that I walked from my home to the court house and return yesterday, a distance of thirty-six blocks without suffering pain or becoming exhausted. My stomach and kidneys were in a bad condition, but they have kept pace with the rheumatism in their improvement under this treatment."

MOVEMENT UNDER DOMINATION OF SOCIAL REVOLUTIONISTS

Seeking Republic

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 15.—The proletariat of St. Petersburg summoned another general political strike, beginning today at noon. This action was decided upon late last night by the workers' strike committee, which is now completely under the domination of the social revolutionists, whose leaders openly proclaim that the ultimate object is the complete overthrow of the monarchy and the establishment of a democratic republic. This is also the real aim of their brothers, the social democrats of Poland, but the proclamation issued keeps this in the background and apparently supports the popular sympathy for Polish autonomy and indignation against the application of the death sentence being imposed on the Kronstadt mutineers.

"Let the workmen of St. Petersburg cease work on Nov. 15, with cries of 'Down with the court martial, down with the death penalty, down with martial law in Poland and in all Russia!'"

The committee appealed to the strike to increase the income of the workers' delegates last night is that in this fight the workers will have the efforts in behalf of the lives of the mutineers to increase cause and help them win over the army and navy to cause freedom.

Some of the delegates who are having the great question of national economy uppermost in their minds, namely: How to increase the income of the workers' labor, have protested that the political strike will interfere with the fight for an eight-hour day, but they were rudely waived aside by the majority, who claimed it would be time enough during the present excited state of public opinion they may be swept off their feet, especially should some untoward incident occur.

The strike commenced promptly on the Baltic and Warsaw railways, and it is announced that further lines will follow. Although the workmen of many big establishments beyond the Moscow and Narva gates and in the Neva and Vassili Ostroff districts, promised to obey the decision of the workers' committee as justly and intelligently. Nevertheless, in the present excited state of public opinion they may be swept off their feet, especially should some untoward incident occur.

Should a general strike again spread over the country the government's position might be rendered desperate. It is important now to deal with many questions confronting it, and it might be ter-
