a view from The Lamplighter

By Ken Towery

The subject of cholesterol, heart attacks, and strokes is very much in the news of late. The medical profession has been on our collective backs for years about the matter, but a recent report seems to prove more or less conclusively that we would all live longer and better if we ate more chicken and less butter

Perhaps so. At any rate I surely don't want to quarrel with the authorities on such matters, but I have some thoughts on the subject of heart attacks and strokes that I think the medics might have overlooked.

I seldom see a television news program that does not drive me to states of near apoplexy, particularly when they are dealing with a subject I know something about. I realize of course that television is essentially an entertainment medium, and in that it does very well...some of the time. It is an excellent medium for sports (even Howard Cosell can't screw up a good football game to the point where it isn't interesting). And it is very good indeed for nature documentaries, and National Geographic specials, and things like that. But when it comes to presentation of the honest-to-goodness objective news, it stinks. Part of the problem of course is that people are hired in the television industry for their looks, and that goes for the news reporters and "anchor person" as well as their entertainment stars. But the major problem lies in the nature of the medium itself. If the story is not "visual", that is, if it does not lend itself to movement, and camera angels, and immediate action, then it seldom qualifies as "news" for T.V. Even when they are reporting on some recent diplomatic development, or some "secret" memorandum they have uncovered from the Defense Department to the State Department, they will go back and run some old footage with a background of jets pounding a hillside, or the bloated bodies of war victims strewn around the rubble, while some cute young thing explains it all to us in dulcet

What brought on this latest spasm on my part was a usual one sided report out of Central America on one of the networks. The reporters were commenting on the Kissinger report that recommends a bundle of money and some additional arms be sent down there. Never missing an opportunity to gig the President, the T.V. type complained that had Reagan seen this crisis coming, and done something about it at the proper time, then all this could have been avoided. Rats.

A few years ago, about 10 to be exact, I had a little involvement in that situation. We saw what was coming. The Soviets were making a big push to establish their influence throughout the area. They had many ploys, one of the more interesting being that they were establishing agricultural "dealerships" throughout the area, in order to sell, ostensibly, a new Soviet Tractor that had just come on the market for export. It was an innocent enough operation on its face. They were merely seeking to sell a new Soviet tractor, at a subsidized price of course, (since all Soviet industry is a child of the State), and give the area plantation owners, as well as the small farmers, a very good deal. It soon became apparent, however, that the operation was concerned less with selling tractors and other farm machinery than it was with placing Soviet and Cuban operatives in strategic places throughout Central America. Once they became entrenched, their next line was to agitate among and organize the peasants. At that time I worked for our government, in a position that made it necessary for me to become, shall we put it lightly, "involved" in situations such as that. I spent more than a little time in El Salvadore, Nicaragua, Honduras, wherever. When we saw what was happening I, along with others, tried to elicit some interest in certain media and congressional circles here at home. It was plain what would be coming down the pike if nothing was

Shedding light on the great Ground Hog's controversy

Why is so much attention given to a furry little animal?

The role of groundhogs as weather forecaster stems from age-old customs and beliefs. During medieval times, it was thought that on Candlemas morning various hibernating animals came above ground to observe the weather.

If the hedgehog, or badger in Germany, saw the sun, he would become frightened by his own shadow and crawl back into his burrow to sleep for another six weeks. To the farmers, this meant that more cold weather was on the way, and that the crops would be poorer that year.

On the other hand, if the skies were cloudy, the animal stayed above ground as this meant that the cold weather would soon be followed by spring warmth.

The custom of observing Groundhog Day (or Candlemas) was brought to America by British and German set-throughout that part of the world. To put it mildly, nothing was forthcoming. Most of the print media took the position that their editors were really not interested in stories coming out of Central America. The T.V. types. of course, saw no story whatever, since there was no shooting, one supposes. One even told me "Well Ken, they are not doing anything our side is not doing.

And there is the rub. Too many of them see no difference between the interests of their own country and interests of the Soviet Union. In this one area they suddenly become very "objective"

So things rocked along. Then, when the shooting started, the T.V. cameras decended on Central America like a cloud of locusts. Now they could get their teeth into the story. Now they could tell the people what was "really" going on. And it was all Reagan's fault, of course, despite the fact he wasn't even around when the trouble started.

So I have some advice for the medical profession. Next time you want to tell us how to avoid heart attacks and strokes. how about saying something like this: Eat more chicken and watch less T.V.

Or, at the very least, take it all with a grain of salt substitute.

found in animal tissue. Primary sources of cholesterol in the American diet are fatty meats, egg yolks, and whole milk dairy products. Cholesterol is essential for certain body processes, but the amount the body manufactures is sufficient for these needs. High levels of cholesterol in the bloodstream are associated with a higher risk of heart disease and stroke. This risk can be reduced by adopting an eating pattern moderate in cholesterol-containing foods and saturated (animal) fats, which can increase the cholesterol level in the blood. A Glance Backwards

By Will Martin

I want to go back for awhile to when I was about nine to eleven years old, and sat on the old barn watching the settlers come and go to New Mexico.

It was what we called the North Road that started on the northwest corner of Floydada near what we called the Emmit Henry place, where Shorty Hall now lives in a big two story house.

The road came west from there by the Wyman Place, the White place and Puryear place and straight on west to Sandhill. The lake northwest of our house was usually full of water in those days and the travel had to circle around pretty close to our farm.

The road went on west from Sandhill through what is now Barwise which was not there then. There was very few houses in that day. The ranch land for miles was called the Callahan pasture. This was later sold to Leslie Stringer, who started a town and called it Stringer. But they later found out there was another Stringer in Texas, so they changed it to Barwise, named after the shape of their cattle brand.

The road then took different forks from there; it went north, south, and on west into New Mexico.

As I said to start with, every chance I got I sat on the barn and watched the covered wagons come and go back home after they gave up on the government claims. Some would have a boy or boy and girl ride a horse behind the wagon to drive three or four cows and two or three horses. Some would have an old buggy with the seat taken off with a chicken coop with chickens in it.

So, on pretty days, I would watch the wagons when Mama didn't have me helping her wash clothes in the old wash pot or keeping fire under the pot to make soap, or washing fruit jars for canning. She always told me my hands were just the right size to fit the jar.

I usually played under the shade trees with Annie Lee and she sometimes went back on top of the barn with me to watch the covered wagons come and go. I don't know how far east they come from, maybe as far as Eastern Oklahome or Western Arkansas, nor do I know where they stopped when they

Along in these years my two sisters, Mary and Jewel and their husbands, George and Jack Yandell, and two children each decided to go to New Mexico and live out a claim. So they hitched up a wagon and team each and took off. I don't know, but I think it was in the late winter or early spring.

We sure were lonesome for them but they were good to write home and we kept up with them pretty good. They said they tried to plant some corn and feed, but the birds and rabbits ate it up. George and Jack worked at whatever jobs they could get, but jobs were very scarce. I did not mention that they stopped near a little town called Tiaban just west of Clovis and Melrose.

Soon we were not getting any mail

Then one evening, I think it was Brother Henry, looked across the lake and said, "There comes George and Mary!" They rented a place west of us for a year, then moved to Roaring Springs where they lived for about thirty odd years. They moved to Plainview where they lived for a few years before they passed away; George first, and Mary a few years later.

Jewel and Jack left Tiaban by train for Carter, Oklahoma. They separated a few years later. Jewel remarried and moved to California where she died three years ago.

I forgot to say that all the settlers didn't give up and come back east, but I am sure the majority of them did according to the number I saw return. I didn't see all of them go west or come back east, because I wasn't out there looking all day everyday.

Speaking of the road that went to town by our house, I saw several bunches of cows driven by cowboys on horse back. The Callahan pasture was pretty good sized, and I suppose they sold their cows at market time through Floydada, which had the closest railroad at that time. And, of course, there was several small ranchers at that time.

The stock pens were on the railroad just out on the northwest side of town, which was in sight of our house by about

I used to sit on the old barn when I had a chance and watch the cowboys drive the herds of cattle to the stock pens to be shipped by train, possibly to Kansas City or around by Amarillo to Fort Worth.

They had a train in those days that stayed all night here that brought freight cars with the things they shipped in and out of here. It was called a mixed train, as it had a mail and baggage car that sometimes carried a corpse, and than a regular passenger

Then, the railroad would send a special train down with cattle cars to get the cattle unless they just had a few cars of cattle, and they would let the local carry them to Plainview

I remember seeing these herds of cattle about three-quarters of a mile long go down the fenced lane to the stock pen, and when they started to load, the cowboys would drive them in a small pen with a ramp to a cattle car. When the car was full, they would close the door and the engine pulled up to the next car, and so on till all were loaded. I can just see the old steam engine trailing black smoke and hear it make a short whistle when it went to pull up, and then the whole load whistle and

Approximately forty five townspeople judged for us. Only one judge did not show up. All the rest were cheerful and helpful. The Backstage Voice organized the concession stand. Through the hard work of Nancy and Mack Willson, Dale Griffin, and many others this was our best year in concession. Mr. Randy Hollums did his usual outstanding job running the debate portion of the tournament. A special thank you goes to the many Floydada merchants, who supported the tournament

Our contest brought schools as distant from Floydada as Crane on the south and Vernon on the north. Approximately three hundred students and forty teachers and or sponsors were in attendance. We tripled the number of Duet Acting teams and doubled entries in all the other events. Our steady growth in the last four years is the result of the support of the community and the hard work of those students involved in Speech and Drama.

It is this type of community support that makes teaching in Floydada such a joy. Again, our most heartfelt thanks to everyone.

Sincerely Yours, /s/ Joseph A. Willis F.H.S. Speech and Drama

In the January 26 story about the opening of the Floydada Spirit of Sharing, we regret that no mention was made of the members of the 1934 Study Club who were in charge of the refreshments for the occasion. We appreciate very much all these ladies did to make the day a success and feel that they somehow typify the suppo the organization has received from the entire community. We are all very grateful.

PROCLAMATION

PROCLAMATION SIGNED-Dr. S.K. Hong, president of the local American Heart Association, looks on as Mayor Parnell Powell signs a proclamation proclaiming February as Heart Month.

AMERICAN HEART MONTH

"Whereas, heart disease and stroke this year will kill nearly 1,000,000 Americans and 50,000 Texans, a total which exceeds all other causes of death

"Whereas, more than 200,000 of these victims die before retirement age,

"Whereas, the American Heart Association is the only voluntary health agency whose sole mission is to reduce early death and disability from heart disease and stroke, and

"Whereas, the Heart Association's relentless battle against this American epidemic combines a nationwide research program, as well as improving health care in the community through professional and public education, and community service programs.

"Now, therefore, I, Parnell Powell, proclaim the month of February as American Heart month and urge all citizens to support the educational and fund raising campaign of the American Heart Association in Floydada. Contributions of time and money will help in the fight against heart disease

Clark volunteers to be Heart Assn. Chairman

Una Loy Clark, widow of artificial heart recipient Dr. Barney Clark, has volunteered to serve as National Residential Campaign Chairman for the American Heart Asociation's 1983-84 campaign.

Working toward a national $100 million goal, volunteers across Texas are hoping to raise $8,200,000. Through door-to-door canvasses of many Texas neighborhoods during February and other fund raising events within the coming months, funds will be collected to benefit cardiovascular research and education programs within Texas.

Hoping her involvement with AHA will help further the cause of basic heart research, Mrs. Clark said, "Through my husband's experience, I realize just how many people are afflicted with heart disease and how devastating it can be to both the patient and the family. I want to do whatever I can to help alleviate the trauma heart disease brings to people."

Dr. Clark, a 61-year-old retired dentist, became the first recipient of a permanent artificial heart on December 1982 at the University of Utah Medical Center in Salt Lake City. Living 112 days with the polyurethane mechanical heart, Dr. Clark died of multiple organ failure on March 23, 1983.

Area coops join to organize whole power cooperative

Ten rural electric cooperatives serving a large area of the Texas High Plains and Oklahoma panhandle have announced plans to form a new generating and transmission cooperative to be headquartered in Amarillo, Texas. The name of the new association is Golden Spread Electric Cooperative, and will serve an area extending from Hooker, Oklahoma, to Lubbock, Texas.

The ten participating Cooperatives are Bailey County Electric Cooperative, Muleshoe, Texas; Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative, Hereford, Texas; Greenbelt Electric Cooperative, Wellington, Texas; Lamb County Electric Cooperative, Littlefield, Texas; Lighthouse Electric Cooperative, Inc., Floydada, Texas; North Plains Electric Cooperative, Perryton, Texas; Rita Blanca Electric Cooperative, Dalhart, Texas; South Plains Electric Cooperative, Lubbock, Texas; Swisher Electric Cooperative, Tulia, Texas; Tri-County Electric Cooperative, Hooker, Oklahoma. The combined assets of the ten systems exceeds 215 million dollars.

David Seay joins board as magazine editor

David T. Seay, minister of education at First Baptist Church, Floydada, since 1977, has joined the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board in Nashville, Tennessee as editor of Sunday School Leadership magazine.

Seay, a native of Andrews, Texas, earlier served as pastor of Megargel Baptist Church, Megargel.

He holds the B.A. degree from Texas Tech University, Lubbock, and the M.Div. degree from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Fort Worth.

is to provide better coordinated power supply planning and contract negotiation. In addition, the new organization will use system studies to find savings through interconnecting transmission systems, load management, other suppliers, and studying cooperative owned generating projects. Lighthouse Electric Board President, Cecil Baxter, said he thought joining the new generation and transmission Cooperative was a wise move because, "We can now monitor wholesale power costs more closely in the future."

Register to vote before The purpose of the new organization upcoming election

January 1984 begins another Presidential election year. In November, when the campaigns come to an end and when all the accompanying political rhetoric is over, eligible citizens will be asked to vote...to select those who will govern this nation for the next two to four years.

When it comes to vote, it's important to remember that self-government without the acceptance of the obligations of citizenship soon brings about the down'fall of self-government and leads unavoidably to tyranny.

Voting is a prime obligation of citizenship. Each time Americans cast a ballot in a free election, they demonstrate to the world that government based on self-determination works. Each time Americans fail to cast a ballot because they're too complacent, too indifferent, too comfortable, or just too lazy, they demonstrate rejection of all the ideals and principles for which this nation stands.

Water level decline expected to be less

The 1983 decline in the water level in the Ogallala aquifer in Floyd County is expected to be less than the past ten year average of -1.98 feet. The High Plains Underground Water Conservation District maintains a network of 97 wells it measures in January of each year in the county. All of the wells are privately owned and these landowners generously allow the Water District's staff to measure their wells to keep the public informed on changes in water storage.

It is believed by Water District officials that less water was pumped from the aquifer in 1983 due primarily to the large number of acres placed in the Federal Payment-In-Kind (PIK) program, reduced pumpage resulting from the high cost of energy to pump water, and the better conservation techniques being utilized by the farm-bank statement. The water levels indicate the quantity of water taken from the water bank as well as the quantity remaining in the water bank. Historically more water has been withdrawn that has been deposited by nature each year. Fortunately, the rate of depletion has decreased in recent years due to an increase in conservation efforts by area farmers. Conservation practices contributing to the decreased rate of decline include: furrow dikes, underground pipeline, tailwater return systems, drop-line sprinkler systems, and general improvements in efficiency of all kinds of existing irrigation

The Water District's staff will place a sticker with the current water-level measurements on each well in the network when it is measured, and will contact news services with its findings on water-level changes for the county measurement to this year's measure- when they are tabulated in mid-Febru-

Guide could help you estimate water needs

A free, handy, pocket-sized soil moisture guide for irrigators is available from the High Plains Water District, the Soil Conservation Service or the County Extension Office in each of the 15 counties served by the Water District. From Armstrong to Lynn Counties, each county has its own separate guide. Each one identifies the five main soils in that county, lists their dominant textures, their average soil root zone depths and each soil's water holding capacity for a full profile in the root zone.

That's just half the story. Each plastic card also carries a guide for judging by using the feel and appearance method, how much moisture is available for crops. What good does it do to figure out a) how much moisture you've got in the ground right now, b) the water holding capacity of your soil, and c) the root zone depth of your soil? With this information you can calculate the total amount of water your soil still needs to fill up the soil root zone to field capacity. These soil moisture guides are another tool to help you make better irrigation decisions and apply water for the most efficient irrigation. They can help you avoid over or under watering where you can control your application.

The 3x5 cards are available in Armstrong, Bailey, Castro, Cochran, Crosby, Deaf Smith, Floyd, Hockley, Lamb, Lubbock, Lynn, Parmer, Potter and Randall Counties. Stop by the SCS, Water District, Extension office or

Most small grains to recover from freeze

While the late December cold wave that swept Texas dealt a heavy blow to grazing from small grains, most of the crops should recover.

That assessment comes from Dr. Travis Miller, agronomist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

"Both wheat and oats were burned back severely by the long period of extremely cold weather," says Miller. "Oats were especially hard hit along with late-planted wheat that had not yet developed tillers (secondary stems)."

Miller noted that a considerable amount of wheat was damaged in central and western areas because it was planted late due to a lack of soil moisture last fall. Some of this was replanted wheat where early stands had been poor due to dry conditions followed by heavy rains in October. To check for freeze damage, Miller suggests looking at the growing point or crown node of the plant about one-half inch below the soil surface. Cut middle of the stem with a sharp knife and look for green material. If the growing point appears water-soaked or brownish in color, the plant is dead. Live plants will generally revive and green color will be restored after a week to ten days of favorable weather.

"Please...DON'T DRIVE DRUNK"

WORDS TO LIVE BY

"The best thing for producers to do right now is to let cattle graze off the dead topgrowth," says Miller. "This is high quality forage with up to 15 percent crude protein. If the small grains were severely frosted, take cattle off the fields to enable plants to recover once this dead growth is removed. If a considerable amount of green leaves remain, continue normal grazing operations. Mild weather is needed and some areas need additional moisture to facilitate regrowth."

The agronomist advises producers to let small grains put forth 4 to 6 inches of new growth before grazing them again. Overgrazing fields prior to the December cold led to heavier than usual freeze damage to wheat and oats in some

In addition to keeping cattle off small grains to speed up recovery, Miller also advises against applying fertilizer at this time. "Fertilizing now would just cause a flush of tender growth which would be highly susceptible to more cold weather," he says. Small grains should be topdressed with nitrogen just before the jointing stage of growth, or about the time cattle are pulled off to enable grain production, notes the agronomist. This ranges from mid-February in southern areas to early March in the plains. Texas boasts about 7.4 million acres of wheat this year and about 1.5 million acres of oats. About 70 percent of the oats planted are grazed out by livestock, but a good portion of the wheat is left to make a grain crop, Miller says. Depending on weather conditions the rest of the winter and into the spring, the Texas wheat crop should not be reduced significantly due to frigid conditions in December.

Growers hear details at Cotton Inc. meeting agriculture during 1983 contained a silver lining for cotton, several hundred cotton producers were told in Lubbock January 20.

It was a year which saw many growers experience a variety of economic and weather-related problems. But it was also a year which saw the market-building programs they support take a strong step forward, said Cotton Incorporated president J. Nicholas

In fact, Hahn told the fifth Annual Producers' Meeting of Cotton Incorporated at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center, "1983 has been the most important year of progress in the history of this company. Since our inception in 1970, we have not seen our retail market share come back to cotton to the same degree as we have in the past calendar

Cotton producer W.T. Robertson of Holly Ridge, MS, chairman of Cotton Incorporated's Board of Directors, pointed out that cotton's share of fiber used in the U.S. retail market--excluding carpets--rose to 39 per cent last year-one full point over 1982.

"Now you may wonder--what's a single point," he added. "Well, one percentage point means $40 million in cotton business to us growers. So you can say that while we're out growing cotton, the folks at Cotton Incorporated are out growing markets for our crop."

The Cotton Incorporated officials emphasized that with the upturn in the economy, cotton has an outstanding opportunity to convert its momentum into further gains that will strengthen the producer's ability to operate profitability. At the same time, the group was told, with the prospects for a considerably larger crop this year than in 1983, the need for grower support of an aggressive "market growing" program is more critical than ever.

Hahn said the 39 per cent market share "is an extremely significant figure when you look back to the mid-60s and early '70s when cotton's share of the market was plummeting. As they say on Wall Street, and as you say when you are developing your own year-end farming operations, let's look at the bottom line.

"The bottom line is that the retail market share for cotton in all apparel and home furnishings end uses, except carpets, has gone up from a low of 34 per cent in 1975 to 39 per cent in 1983, and who would have thought that possible as recently as 1970/71 when we were concerned that polyester doubleknits and other synthetic fabrics were going to take over our total share of market in this country."

Robertson and Hahn led a group of speakers reporting on the wide range of research and promotion activities carried out by Cotton Incorporated with per bale assessment dollars from U.S. cotton producers. The meeting was one of four being held at key locations across the Cotton Belt to give cotton producers the opportunity to get up-todate on the progress being made with their investments in strengthening markets for U.S. cotton in this country and around the world.

The expenses for the meeting, including facilities and meals, were underwritten by the American Cyanamid Company's Agricultural Products Divi-

Hahn emphasized that Cotton Incorporated cannot begin to match the synthetic fiber producing companies in money, manpower or facilities. For example, in advertising and promotion alone, one of these companies, Du Pont/Textile Fibers Division, spent one hundred million dollars in consumer advertising in 1983 alone, as reported in the Wall Street Journal of November 28,

"Do we out-work them? Well, we think we do in many respects," he said. "But the truth of the matter is that the competition is very smart, very professional and very effective at what they do...We think that where Cotton Incorporated's expertise has come into play has been our determination and our insistence on relying heavily on market research.

The Cotton Incorporated president noted that "when you have a limited advertising budget and consumer promotion you simply cannot afford the luxury of selling across the board and trying to use a fishnet approach to bring in your customers. You have to use market research to clearly define who your customer is and then develop the strategies and the media selection to reach and sell to that customer.

"We believe that the key customer for textile products in this decade of the '80s, as in the decade of the '70s, has been the all-important middle class baby boom generation--the young people born after World War II and into the mid-60s. We have been tracking that customer right through the decade of the '80s and we recognize that customer as being career oriented, goal oriented and as having the dollars in disposable income to purchase textile products.

"So with that clear definition of who that customer is and an effective strategy of going after that customer," said Hahn, "that has been one of the keys to our success in bringing this market share gain to its present level.

"The other secret, as far as we're concerned," he added, "has been the recognition that we have a basic underlying truth in our product which is helping us sell cotton.

"The synthetic fiber people, with all the money they have, stumble over each other trying to convince our customers-textile mills, garment manufacturers, retailers and consumers--that they have a product that is just like cotton...that looks like cotton feels like cotton... looks like cotton, feels like cotton, behaves like cotton."

The fact is, he said, cotton is not like any of the synthetic fibers--"we have the basic truth of the product on our side. And we think what Cotton Incorporated has been able to do is exploit, or to take advantage of this truth and demonstrate and sell that truth effectively to our customer base both here in the states and around the world."

Hahn said Cotton Incorporated is faithfully following that strategy and will continue to do so in the future. convinced that it holds the key to cotton's continued success against com-

Producers attending the annual meeting heard details of how Cotton Incorporated pursues a total program that combines farm to mill research, product development, supply/demand analysis, marketing programs in this country and around the world, trade and consumer advertising and promotion to expand the use of U.S. cotton in a variety of specific product areas.

84 farm income to improve

While it may not be a banner year for agriculture, 1984 should bring some improvement in Texas farm income over the depressed conditions of recent

"We could have a 10 to 15 percent increase in farm income over 1983," points out Dr. Carl Anderson, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Anderson sees an increase in farm earnings due to slightly higher prices, fairly steady production costs and continued improvement in demand for farm commodities.

"However, there is a dark cloud hanging over crop producers," contends the economist. "The potential for overproduction is there. It could take hold again and put farmers right back where they were a year ago--facing surplus commodities and depressed markets."

Government programs are offering farmers higher target prices and larger deficiency payments in 1984 which should boost cash flows for participants, notes Anderson.

However, the voluntary nature of the programs and the $50,000 payment limitations will not entice enough farmers to participate so as to have a major effect on curbing production.

"Without doubt, farmers will be facing either tighter production controls or lower prices for the next several years," says Anderson. "At current demand, some crop acreage must be retired. However, the mood in Washington reflects a more flexible farm policy, less government control and market-oriented programs for the 1985 should do well, says the economist. But agricultural lenders will tighten up on credit conditions, with the Farm Credit System and the Farmers Home Administration handling an increasing number

Ranchers, like farmers, should see some improvement in prices during 1984, notes Anderson. Reduced beef and pork supplies should help market prices along with an improved demand resulting from continued economic recovery. However, heavy marketing of culled dairy cows as a result of the new dairy program could dampen meat prices somewhat.

As far as land values are concerned, Anderson sees cropland prices stagnating or declining slightly, especially in prime agricultural areas such as the Texas High Plains. But he expects Texas ranchland values to continue to advance faster than the rate of inflation.

PUBLIC NOTICE

In proceedings pending before the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUC), local exchange telephone companies are requesting authority to charge AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc., for use of their facilities. These proposed charges are higher than AT&T Communications can pay at current Texas long distance rate levels. To position itself to be able to implement rates that are sufficient to produce revenues that will recover the costs facing the company, AT&T Communications must now file for rate relief to be able to implement rates that reflect the costs of access that are ultimately imposed on the company.

While AT&T Communications does not want to increase its Texas rates, an increase would be required to recover the increased access charges AT&T Communications will have to pay to the local exchange telephone companies under several proposals pending before the Commission. These access charges at the proposed increased levels represent more than 80 percent of AT&T Communications' operating expense in Texas. Accordingly, AT&T Communications, in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the rules of the PUC, hereby gives notice of the company's intent to implement a new schedule of rates for long distance calls within Texas. The proposed rates will be effective January 28, 198," unless otherwise determined by the Commission. All customers and classes of customers would be affected by AT&T Communications' proposed rates. If higher access charges are ordered, AT&T Communications has no recourse but to pay these charges and recover the costs from its customers as a cost of providing long distance service within Texas. AT&T Communications has filed rates which would mean a maximum overall increase in adjusted test period revenues of $301.4 million, or 27.85 percent. This amount would help recover cost increases due to the proposed level of access charges now pending before the PUC.

A complete copy of all tariffs and rate schedules is on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission at Austin, Texas, and with every municipality in Texas.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.
