Damage Placed At '$5,000 To $6,000'

Winter Wracks Havoc On Floyd County Highways And Streets

Weather had dealt a severe blow this winter to roads and streets in Floyd County. Donnell Gowens, Maintenance Foreman for the Texas Department of Transportation and Public Transportation in Lockney, said Thursday that "we have about three times as much damage as normal this winter."

Gowens estimated damage to Floyd County highways at "about $50,000, but more and more damage is being done all the time." He now places the total damage at "$50,000 to $60,000."

Most extreme road destruction has occurred along Highway 62 south of Lockney and on state highway 1065 in the northeast portions of the county on Farm Roads 97 and 1065 near Flomot and Quitaque. "There are other scattered areas of damage," Gowens said.

DAMAGE EXPLAINED

Gowens explains that freezing and thawing of moisture causes the major damage. Moisture gets under the pavement and seeps through cracks. This allows the base material (caliche) to become soft, causing a "spongy reaction which just breaks up the pavement."

The damage is most evident when thawing occurs.

Half in jest, Gowens wondered aloud "if the roads probably wouldn't have been better to have stayed frozen.... but I guess people in Northern states would argue otherwise."

The highway official says that the ground "was just beginning to thaw" when he made his estimate two weeks ago. "Additional adverse weather" since that time has continued to plague roadways.

Efforts by the Highway Department to make repairs have been stymied by reoccurring winter weather. "When it gets dry enough to cover up the cracks, here comes another spell," Gowens noted.

Just enough moisture falls to create "soft shoulders and wet ditches. The ditches catch moisture when farmland doesn't."

Gowens said "quite a bit of damage" resulted last winter, "but not near this severe."

highways and seal this over with asphalt and rock."

Gowens notes that Highway Department employees spend many hours during the Spring, Summer and early Fall conditioning roadways so that a minimum amount of damage will result the ensuing winter. This is termed "preventative maintenance."

For now, Gowens and his staff continue to survey the mounting damage and await improved weather conditions to begin repair work.

Date For Sheep Shearing Changed

Date and time for sheep shearing at Lockney and Floydada in preparation for the Floyd County Junior Livestock Show has been changed, according to Orville Harris, vo-ag teacher for Floyd-da High School.

Sheep are to be sheared in Floydada at 1 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 11.

Lockney's day is Monday, Feb. 12.

DAN BAYLEY in May, 1977, when he received the Lockney FFA Honorary Chapter Farmer award.

Dan Bayley Found Dead Thursday

Funeral services for Dan Cheston Bayley, 35, of Lockney were scheduled at 10 a.m. Saturday in the Lockney First United Methodist Church with the Rev. De Witt Seago, pastor of the church, officiating. Burial was in Lockney Cemetery under the direction of Moore-Rose Funeral Home of Lockney.

Bayley was born on February 8, 1944 at Floydada. He married Janie Rhodes on June 14, 1963 in Lockney.

He was a 1962 graduate of Plainview High School. He had attended Lockney schools through the fourth grade. He was a farmer and a member of the Church of Christ.

Bayley was an active exhibitor in local, area and state livestock shows. He had worked with the Lockney Little Dribblers youth basketball program since its inception several years ago, serving as coach, official and commissioner at different times.

He had served on the Floyd County Junior Livestock Show board of directors and had been assistant superintendent of the sheep division at one time for the county show. He received the Lockney Future Farmers of America "Honorary Chapter Farmer" award in 1977.

Bayley was found dead about 9 a.m. Thursday by Lockney rural mail carrier Thomas Marr. Bayley's body was lying beside his pickup truck on the Loren Rhodes farm about eight miles northwest of Lockney. He was pronounced dead at the scene by R.H. (Ras) Ford, justice of the peace. Friday morning, Ford told this newspaper he had not made a ruling on the death. The victim died of a gunshot wound.

A .243-caliber rifle was found at the scene.

Survivors include his wife, a son, Jeffery, and two daughters, Lori Jane and Jennifer, all of Lockney; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer A. Bayley of Lubbock; a sister, Mrs. Wilson DiCuffa of Fredericksburg; and his grandmother, Mrs. Verdie Smith of Lockney.

H.E. Porter, justice of the peace for Precincts One and Four in Floyd County, told The Beacon Friday that he had not rendered a ruling in the Bayley death. An article in the Friday morning edition of an area daily newspaper attributed a ruling to Judge Porter.

City Council Calls Election, OKs Natural Gas Rate Increase

The Lockney city council, during the regular monthly meeting Thursday evening, called an April 7 election to choose a mayor and two councilmen to succeed Mayor Claude Brown and councilmen Thurman Davis and Bobby McCormick, whose terms expire in April.

The council approved a city ordinance granting a 14.88-percent overall rate increase to Pioneer Natural Gas Co. The gas company had requested a 26.3-percent increase. All increases start with natural gas used in Lockney on or after February 15. Residents! bills will go up an average of $3.79 a month.

Another ordinance approved by the council Thursday sets natural gas turn-in charges, and still another modifies the obligation of Pioneer

Natural Gas to extend main lines to serve new consumers in Lockney.

Also Thursday, the council passed a resolution supporting the South Plains Emergency Medical Services Systems.

The council accepted Kenneth Tate's bids for the purchase of the city's station wagon. The city had advertised to sell the vehicle, which had been used as a back-up ambulance, last month.

Basketball Season Ends This Week (Unless Lady Horns Make Playoffs)

Final games on the Lockney school basketball teams' 1978-79 schedules are slated this week.

Monday, the junior-high and ninth-grade boys' and girls teams wind up the season in games with Tulia (boys here, girls there).

Lockney High School teams host Idalou on Tuesday.

That will end the season unless the varsity Lady Horns were successful in their bid to stop Abernathy Friday night. (That game was played after this edition of The Beacon went to press). The girls had to win Friday to have a shot at extending their season by forcing a 4-AA playoff with Abernathy, the first-round winner.

Students Win Area Essay Contest

Six Lockney Junior High School students will be honored at a "George Washington Tea" Wednesday at Plainview. They are winners in the area essay contest sponsored by the Mary McCoy Bains Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The essay contest is sponsored annually by the Plainview DAR chapter. Subject of this year's essays is "Travel in Colonial Times."

Lockney students won all four top places in the seventh-grade division of

'Ginners Used To Charge For Lint Cotton, Not Seed Cotton' — Edd Whitfill

by Felicia Applewhite

Think of Edd Whitfill and you think of the cotton gin. That's because he has operated one almost all of his life, since his father built one about 1908 at the south end of Main street.

Edd didn't have to go far to work in those early days, because the Whitfill family lived at the gin yard.

Their house was a sawed-off room from the old Lockney school building that had given way for Lockney's first brick school house, in the east part of town.

That one large school room was partitioned off and given an upstairs to accommodate the Whitfill family. Other rooms from the old school building were purchased from the local school authorities at the same time.

Before moving to the gin yard in Lockney, the family had lived at Meteor (Aiken), west of Lockney, where they farmed. Edd had to walk a quarter mile to school at Meteor.

When they came to Meteor in 1904 from Ellis County, just 30 miles from Dallas, he had brought no report card with him so had none to take to school his first day at Meteor.

That was before the schools had grades, therefore no report cards. In order for the teacher to know something of his progress in school, she had him stand before the class to read. He was 8 years old.

"I really put on a show when I stood up to read," he remembers when he tells how he acted before that school for his first time.

Evidently, the teacher was impressed with the "show" because she thought he qualified at the age of 8 to rate on the level of what we now call the 3rd or 4th grade.

During the time the family lived in Meteor, there was no Wayland College. It was in the process of being built.

"Once Frank and I got on the burros and rode them the 17 miles to Plainview and spent the night with two fellows who were living in a covered wagon near by where Wayland College was being built. The two men were working, helping build Wayland. We knew these men because our dad was keeping their horses for them at Aiken.

EDD WHITFILL, Lockney's long-time cotton ginner. As a cotton-seed breeder, he produced Galloway's Mebane the best seed in the country.

"We could always have a burro to ride, because there was a big bunch of wild burros there at Aiken, then. Our Sunday afternoon entertainment was riding bucking burros and riding calves. All we had to do was round up the burros and ride," he remembers.

Life at Aiken ended for a while when the move was made to Lockney to the large, remodeled school room.

There was just one other gin in Lockney then. It was located on the north end of Main Street where Lockney General Hospital is located now. It was owned and operated by the Quannah Oil Company.

"I went right to work in the gin. I was the chief ginner. My brother Frank tied out the bales, and Harry ran the steam engine."

The machinery for the gin had been purchased from a man in Turkey. This Continental machinery was moved to Lockney to a building that had been built by Edd's father. Everything except the machinery was left behind in Turkey.

Simply wrote names down to collect the charge by lint bale after the ginning."

Ginning lasted from the first of October until along in the spring about May. The cotton was all hand picked at first. However, it was not many years before they began pulling bolls.

Cotton prices always went down in the fall and up in the spring, after it was out of the farmer's hands.

"One farmer I remember, who kept his children out of school to pick cotton, never made a cent, because the price always went down."

Once when Edd went to the engine room to put a belt on the pulley, he was wearing a loose-tail jumper.

"When I went underneath to put the belt on, my jumper tail caught on a set screw that stuck out. I was twisted round and round. It made a twisted rope out of my jumper tail."

Even though the Whitfills had a gin from then on, Edd "bached" and farmed one year at Aiken—the year before he and Eva Weathers married.

"We married in 1916 and moved into one of the school rooms that Dad had bought when we first moved to Lockney. It had been made into a living-room, bedroom, kitchen, dining-room comfortable house."

"We were married by I.E. Gates, president of Wayland College. We just drove up to his house in a Model T and were married. My sister and her husband were with us."

"We were about the only young people marrying who could furnish a house. I just missed World War I draft a few days. My number was to be called up when Armistice was declared. When the war was over, guns shot up the town. Judge Stalbird shot his old shotgun—all because the end of war had come."

At the time of marriage, the couple had $1,000 to spend for furniture. That was a lot of money in those times. It enabled them to furnish the house.

"We bought a kitchen cabinet for $25 and bought a pretty dining table and chairs. We had a davenport that made our extra bed. We had a New Perfection oil cook stove. We were fixed up good. We bought everything brand new. We had a new buggy with a horse called "Blackie" to hitch to it."

Several years after marriage, when he was still ginning with his father, he and Eva "took a wild notion of going to Colorado to file on a section of land."

"We went to Colorado on that wild plunge, in an old Model T car with our three kids. After we were there for a while, we came home on a visit. Our plans were to go back to work for the contractor I had been working for."

"Instead, I bought half interest in George Meriwether-J.W. Baggett gin. They knew I knew more than they did because I had been raised in it. They had bought Dad out when he bought a gin in Plainview."

Later on, Edd owned two gins in Lockney. Walter Byars moved one of them to South Plains.

Still another gin was owned by Edd Whitfill at Aiken. Once during the operation of this gin, he heard of a man who had registered cotton seed in Oklahoma. These seeds were named Galloway's Mebane seed.

"I bought two car loads of the seed. I bred it up until it was the best in the country. I didn't gin anything else but this single variety of cotton."

"I had the Aiken business a good many years and sold lots of seed."

"Then Anderson-Clayton came in the country and began talking of building a gin. I didn't want to compete with them, so I sold out to them. It was during World War II that Lance Suits, Lockney Beacon editor, and Edd Whitfill worked so hard promoting rural electrification. At the same time, George Mahon was running for Congress."

"Lance and I were all over the country selling words. George Mahon would go along with us to electioneer."

"I have a plaque somewhere signed by F.D.R., showing that we assisted in the war effort."

"Getting help at the gin became harder and harder."

"I began looking like I was working for nothing operating two gins and a cotton warehouse, so we divided company interest. I took land and Baggett took the gin, and Co-op bought the elevator that we had. Lester Carter, Mr. Baggett's grandson, has been running the gin since then."

"When I bought the gin at Aiken, I

Members met at the library to view the book, "Tutankhamun, The Immortal Pharaoh". This was a book of the Media Library Munch which is to be presented Wednesday night, 12:00 - 1:00. The March program is "Tutankhamun, The Immortal Pharaoh" and title of the book will be announced. Those attending had seen the play in Cairo, Egypt and reported that the treasure is so vast it is impossible to comprehend. Close-ups of the objects reveal the beautiful carving and inlays of precious stones. Books about this important archeological find can be found in the Floyd County Library.

A brief look at several books from both the Floyd County Library and the Media Center at First Baptist was presented by Jackie Walls and Beth Pratt.

Mrs. Penny Golightly, Artist Of Month

graduate of Floydada School and the Famous Artists School, Penny McClinch is a talented artist with work on display at Floydada's First Bank this month. She works with oil paints, ink on paper, and enjoys all drawing; and she is busy working on still life and landscape scenes. "I think people and animals would have to be my life, though," she added. The exhibit at the bank closes "Winter Ranch Scene", "Winter on the Rolling Plains", "Kisses", and "Still Life of Bucket and Apples". Two pencil sketches, "A Little Love" and a small drawing of a horse complete the works. "I find it hard to paint or draw as much as I'd like," said Mrs. Golightly. "Two small children take a lot of time!" The public is cordially invited to see the exhibit in the lobby of the bank during working hours: Monday, 9:00 - 5:00; Tuesday through Friday, 9:00 - 3:00 p.m.

Games of dominoes were enjoyed after the refreshments consisting of the birthday cake, punch, cookies, and fruit pizza. The honoree also received many telephone calls from other children in California and the Dallas area.

NEWS & REVIEWS

Pioneering in the opening of a new mission station, only to be driven out by fighting, seemed to be the story of John and Jewell Abernathy's lives. Meeting as each was on his way to China to serve as a missionary in 1920, the young couple married on the field and served in the Orient until their retirement in 1959. They were among the missionaries that were run out of China by the Japanese and then by the Communists. They were the first Southern Baptist missionaries to Korea. Devoted to each other and completely dedicated to God, the Abernathys made a major contribution to foreign missions. Read about their life story in Living Sacrifices: A Missionary Odyssey by Jesse Fletcher.

traces the movement across to Pennsylvania until 1775. For sheer drama, this novel is unequalled. Except for the founders, George Fox and Margaret Fell, the names of actual people have been disguised. This is one of those "can't put it down" books.

Everyone Knows... Whozit Is Joy Assiter

Joy Assiter's appearance apparently changed little over the years. A host of people guessed Mrs. Assiter as the mystery personality in last Sunday's Floydada Whozit... and they were correct.

Mrs. Assiter was the only person guessed. Making correct identifications were: Mrs. Travis Parr, C.L. Gilly, Earl Edwards, Margaret Jones, Mrs. Joyce Lipham, June Patzer, Darlynn Hambricht, Linda Crader, Zann Turner, Flora McNeill, Geraldine Gentry, Bill Beedy, Mrs. L.H. Pesch; Also, Mrs. Grigsby Milton, Jr., Irene Irby, Polly Cardinal, Gail Hickerson, Mrs. Bill DuBois, Mr. and Mrs. Doug Galloway, and Sue Lovell.

Sterling Cummings went one step further, naming the mystery photo as Joy Keeter Assiter. Mrs. Assiter is the former Joy Keeter of Lockney.

Cummings also was correct in naming the Lockney Whozit as Veda Mae (Mrs. Bob) Miller. C.L. Gilly also recognized Mrs. Miller. Two other Floydada callers were less successful at guessing the Lockney Whozit. Darlynn Hambricht thought it was Inez Mosley, and Joyce Lipham believed it was Mrs. Chuck Wilson.

FLOYD DATA
Mrs. Menard Fields, who has been visiting in Temple, fell and broke her knee. She underwent surgery Tuesday at Scott and White Hospital, and at last report she was resting well.

New Number For Phone Business

Business telephone customers of Southwestern Bell have a new number to dial to place telephone orders or to inquire about service, according to Jim West, the company's manager.

The number for business customers now is 1-951-7471.

"This change allows us to assign service representatives specially trained to handle business-type situations," West said.

"Because business communications have become more and more complex with the introduction of hundreds of new instruments, services and special equipment, it has become practically impossible for one person to handle both residence and complex business accounts."

Turnovers Costly For Longhorns

Turnovers are costly any time in a basketball game, but when a team attempts to slow things down, as the Lockney Longhorns were doing Tuesday night, turnovers can be particularly expensive.

The Longhorns slow-down tactics were so effective that only 19 points were scored in the first half Tuesday night, but all 19 were scored by the opponents, the Tulia Hornets.

The Tulia team wound up winning the game 57-20 after posting that halftime lead.

Lockney coach Ed Koester said the Longhorns, even though they lost the game, played pretty well and did a lot of the things they intended to do. "Turnovers just hurt us in the type of game we decided to play," Koester said Tuesday.

Joe Rodriguez, with six points, was Lockney's high scorer Tuesday. Ed Hawthorne and Russell Webb of Tulia had 15 each.

The Tulia boys clinched the District 4-AA title with the Tuesday night game. The Hornets bettered the Lockney seventh-grade winners at the season. The Longhorns' record at Tuesday's game was 0-6, 9-16.

If It's Real

Maintain Quality Of Stored Grain

Good management of grain crops in storage will minimize quality deterioration after harvesting, says an agricultural engineer for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"When grain is harvested at a moisture content higher than that recommended for safe storage, mechanical drying must be done," notes Richard Withers. "The higher the grain temperature and moisture content, the quicker the grain must be dried mechanically to prevent mold."

"For example, when grain is at 90 degrees F. and has a moisture content of 18 percent, moisture content must be reduced to 15 percent within about six-to-eight days," explains the Texas A&M University System specialist. "If temperature is reduced to 70 degrees F., the allowable time to reduce moisture is about 30 days. Of course, we are assuming that grain is being aerated during this period."

Moisture contents for safe storage vary with crops. Withers suggests these moisture percentages for safe storage: corn, 13; sorghum, 12-14; soybeans, 11-12; and wheat, 12-14.

He points out that an aeration system for grain cooling and moisture migration control is needed if grain is stored more than two to three months, even if safe storage moisture requirements are met.

According to Withers, aeration systems for cooling grain and controlling moisture migration within grain should supply about one-tenth cubic foot per

Changing Fiber Business Climate In 80's

A "desperate situation" facing many of the world's synthetic fiber producers today will lead to a different business climate in the 1980s for both cotton producers and textile mills, says a Cotton Incorporated economist.

For the mills, says M. Daniel Troxler, associate director for demand economics, it will mean significantly higher prices for synthetic fibers. For cotton producers, he adds, it will mean an opportunity to recapture and rebuild markets in many parts of the world.

The "synthetic fiber scene" is described by Troxler in the June issue of the Cotton Summary, monthly publication of Cotton Incorporated, the fiber company of American cotton producers.

Pointing out that "good decisions regarding cotton require an understanding of the synthetics," Troxler says the severe problems facing the synthetic fiber industry can be traced back to a series of events beginning with the Arab oil embargo in late 1973.

This blow, he points out, was quickly followed by the worldwide recession in 1974-75. "In rapid succession, synthetic fiber producers saw their petroleum-based raw material costs soar and world demand for their products turn down for the first time in their 35-year commercial history."

Many synthetic fiber producers, says Troxler, underestimated how severe the recession's impact would be on their business and moved ahead with ambitious expansion plans. At the same time, he adds, they failed to anticipate an important shift in consumer purchasing of textile products. The strong consumer preference for natural fiber appearance and comfort "has played an important role in restricting synthetic fiber growth," he points out.

All of these factors combined, says the Cotton Incorporated economist, have kept synthetic fiber prices very weak. "Many synthetic fiber producers," he points out, "have had little opportunity to pass along higher raw material and energy costs so that losses, rather than profits, have been the rule."

The situation is especially bleak for synthetic fiber producers in areas, such as Western Europe, that depend heavily on export sales, Troxler adds. Many of the nations that have been traditional markets for imported synthetic fibers, are making great strides in developing their own chemical fiber industries, he points out.

Troxler says the synthetic fiber industry in the United States has faced

FEEDING GRAIN TO STOCKER CATTLE ON WHEAT PASTURE

Prolonged below freezing weather has reduced the available forage on most wheat pastures on the High Plains. This will result in lowered gains by the cattle and/or reduced stocking rate. Many producers are supplemental feeding grain to the cattle in order to boost gain for the remainder of the grazing season. Demonstrations conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service have shown the most beneficial use of both the forage and the grain occurs when the cattle consume .75-1.0% of their body weight in grain each day (ex. 3.75- 5.0 lb. for a 500 lb. animal.)

One method to regulate consumption is to hand feed the grain each day. This method requires increased labor and adequate bunk space to allow all cattle to eat at one time. Many producers have had good success by regulating grain intake with salt. The following table shows the salt: grain ratios that have worked well to regulate consumption for various weights of cattle.

This can be self-fed, but adjustments in salt level need to be made periodically as the forage conditions change and as the cattle get heavier. It is recommended that salt-grain mixes be hand-fed for a few days until it is apparent that the cattle are consuming the desired level.

Cattle Weight	300 lb.	500 lb.	700 lb.
Corn Per Day	3 lb.	5 lb.	7 lb.
% Salt	12%	10%	8%
% Corn	88%	90%	92%

If intake is to be regulated with salt, it is recommended that the grain be rolled or coarsely ground in order to reduce fines and facilitate thorough mixing. Corn, milo, wheat, barley, and oats can be used in a supplemental feeding program. Producers should use those grains available at the cheapest cost per energy. Many producers have reported less bloat with wheat pasture cattle on a grain supplement.

Bloat is generally one of the biggest management problems we have in the spring months when the wheat begins to produce more forage. If bloat does become a problem, the producer can add Poloxylene to the grain mix. This product has been shown to be very effective in reducing bloat on wheat pasture and alfalfa if consumed by the grazing animal.

In incidence of bloat can be reduced immediately if Poloxylene is added to a grain supplement.

When the pasture is covered with snow it is recommended that consumption be monitored closely to make sure the animals do not consume excessively high levels. Many producers have been able to do this by offering a book quality hay during this time so that the cattle do not have to depend entirely upon the grain for a feed source.

Producers should evaluate all of the factors involved in such a management program, apply their own costs and see of such a program has the potential to increase the returns on their stocker cattle operation.

Calfhood Vaccination For Brucellosis Free

Thanks to programs adopted in Texas and Oklahoma, calfhood vaccination for brucellosis is free.

In both states, vaccine is provided free to veterinarians and the veterinarians are reimbursed for their services. Thus, the cowman doesn't shell out any money for vaccinations. In both states, heifer beef calves must be vaccinated between 2 and 10 months of age, and dairy heifers between 2 and 6 months. Cattlemen can schedule their brucellosis vaccination program to correspond with other work such as preconditioning or spraying.

The goals of both programs are to vaccinate 70% of the replacement heifers annually. According to animal health officials, this rate would provide the level of immunity needed to show improvement in solving the brucellosis problem.

But the big question is whether or not calfhood vaccination works. It has worked for many producers who follow a rigid vaccination program plus traditional testing and slaughter programs. In Wharton County, Tex., a hotbed for bovine brucellosis in recent years, two producers have virtually wiped out brucellosis in their herds by vaccinating all replacements.

W.A. Harrison of Wharton runs a 1,000-cow operation scattered through four counties on six ranches. He has vaccinated his replacement stock for 24 of the past 25 years. Harrison has had some reactors show up at slaughter—five to be exact. But each time state veterinarians checked his entire herd, the report came back negative—no brucellosis.

"I've had to make sacrifices. I've kept pretty much of a closed herd, buying only cows which have been vaccinated for brucellosis. Also, I try to vaccinate the calves at the same time each year during weaning."

Edgar Hudgins of J.D. Hudgins, Inc., of Hungerford, Tex., is co-manager of a Brahman breeding operation. He's been calfhood-vaccinating since 1945. "It's been years since we had a reactor," Hudgins says.

"A purebred producer has got to control brucellosis in his herd. Cattle are a lot easier to sell if they have been calfhood-vaccinated," he adds.

FEED BEEF HAND ACCORDING TO NEED

For proper maintenance and production, cattle must be fed according to their nutritional requirements, says a livestock specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. This means separate feeding of cattle of different ages and production status high productivity at minimum feed costs.

COTTON TALK
FROM PLAINS COTTON GROWERS

Poor crops exceed expectations; good crops fall short. That's an old saying in High Plains cotton circles far more often right than wrong.

And it's now no secret that, true to form, the crop is turning out better than earlier expected.

Production figures for the 25 High Plains counties represented by Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., in 480-pound weight bales, are steadily inching toward the two bale mark, as opposed to commonly heard pre-harvest estimates that ranged from 1.3 million to a little over 1.8 million bales classed and on hand at USDA's cotton offices at Brownfield, Lamesa, Levelland and Lubbock on Thursday, February 1, came to 1,810,000. Samples being received at the rate of 10,000 to 15,000 per day. Paul Dickson, USDA's Director of Area Classing expects to class "at least another 50,000 and possibly as 100,000 more."

The final production figure for the 25 PCG counties include all but about 10,000 (from eastern New Mexico, Scurry County) of the total received by the four offices, plus an estimated 50,000 bales from the four counties that send cotton to classing offices in Abilene and Abilene.

Howard, Martin and Midland Counties will produce a combined total of about 30,000 bales to the office, and the Memphis office may receive about 10,000 bales from Motley County, Dickens County, which forms the Memphis classing facility, now sends its cotton to classing offices in Memphis.

Putting all these figures together, including the 25-county samples still expected by Dickson, would total 2,028,000 bales.

Net compress weights on High Plains cotton are average from three to five percent heavier than 480-pound county net weight factor would bring total to between 2,028,000 bales.

In its final estimate January 11 USDA had the 25-county net weight at approximately 2,075,000 bales. The latest private on the Plains, made early in December, put production at 1,777,000 bales.

Official county-by-county net weight figures will be reported in June or July, by the Texas Crop and Reporting Service.

Changing Fiber Business Climate In 80's

A "desperate situation" facing many of the world's synthetic fiber producers today will lead to a different business climate in the 1980s for both cotton producers and textile mills, says a cotton incorporated economist.

For the mills, says M. Daniel Troxler, associate director for demand economies, it will mean significantly higher prices for synthetic fibers. For cotton producers, he adds, it will mean an opportunity to recapture and rebuild markets in many parts of the world.

The "synthetic fiber scene" is described by Troxler in the June issue of the Cotton Summary, monthly publication of Cotton Incorporated, the fiber company of American cotton producers.

Pointing out that "good decisions regarding cotton require an understanding of the synthetics," Troxler says the severe problems facing the synthetic fiber industry can be traced back to a series of events beginning with the Arab oil embargo in late 1973.

This blow, he points out, was quickly followed by the worldwide recession in 74-75. "In rapid succession, synthetic fiber producers saw their petroleum-derived raw material costs soar and world demand for their products turn down for the first time in their 35-year commercial history."

Many synthetic fiber producers, says Troxler, underestimated how severe the recession's impact would be on their business and moved ahead with ambitious expansion plants. At the same time, he adds, they failed to anticipate an important shift in consumer purchasing of textile products. The strong consumer preference for natural fiber appearance and comfort "has played an important role in restricting synthetic fiber growth," he points out.

All of these factors combined, says Cotton Incorporated economist, kept synthetic fiber prices very high. "Many synthetic fiber producers," he points out, "have had little opportunity to pass along higher raw material and energy costs so that losses, rather than profits, have been the result."

The situation is especially bleak for synthetic fiber producers in areas, such as Western Europe, that depend heavily on export sales, Troxler adds. Many of the nations that have been traditional markets for imported synthetic fibers, making great strides in developing their own chemical fiber industries, are now in a recession.

Howard, Martin and Midland Counties will probably add a combined total of about 30,000 bales to the classing office, and the Memphis office may receive about 20,000 from Motley County. Dickens says, which formerly was the Memphis classing facility, now sends its cotton to Lubbock.

Putting all these figures together, including the 100,000 to 100,000 samples still expected by Dickson, would bring the 25-county running bale total up to between 1,900,000 and 1,950,000.

Net compress weights on High Plains cotton normally average from three to five percent heavier than 480 pound. Using a four percent conversion factor would bring the county net weight bale total to between 1,976,000 and 2,028,000 bales.

In its final estimate January 11 USDA had the 25 counties at approximately 2,075,000 bales. The latest private estimate on the Plains, made early in December, put production at 1,777,000 bales.

Official county-by-county net weight figures will be reported in June or July, by the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Hance K Speaker Water Me

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance, House Agriculture Committee member, will be the keynote speaker at the Annual Membership Meeting of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., next month in Lubbock. Hance will open the meeting Saturday, Feb. 24, after 6 p.m. for the Lubbock Memorial Dinner. Hance joins Texas Agriculture Secretary Reagan V. Brown on the speakership.

Speakers will discuss the state of High Plains agriculture and dependence upon water.
