County oil well produces

Drilling has been completed on the Lucie D. Stephens well located 15 miles southeast of Floydada.

In a related article in the Amarillo Sunday News-Globe, it was reported that oil was found at 9,700 feet. The well was drilled to a total depth of 9,825 fect.

"A significant find as far as the Palo Duro Basin is concerned", Joe Loftis, president of Strata Reserves Inc. of Fort Worth said, is now producing 182 barrels of oil and 1.1 million feet of gas daily in Floyd County.

The well "is a fault trap mechanism, and I think it happens within (throughout) the basin." Loftis says Strata plans some offset drilling.

Horizon Exploration has leased 1500 acres of land in Floyd County and more land is available for leasing. At this point no one will comment definitely as to how big the well is going to be or to any other activity. It would probably be 60 days before any results are definitely truck for the Weldon Henry Construction Company of Plainview, was not injured in an accident Tuesday after-

The truck was northbound on FM 378 about 5 miles north of Lockney at the intersection of the farm-to-market road and the Fort Worth & Denver Railway.

When the truck passed over the railroad, the impact caused the front power drive to snap. It was penned under the front of truck and caught the tires, causing the driver to lose control of the truck.

The incident was ironic since a letter of intent had been received by this paper office this week from the Lubbock office of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The letter stated: "word has been received from the Fort Worth & Denver Railway Company that replanking of the railroad crossing of US 70 in Lockney will begin Monday, October 18, 1982. Traffic will be detoured around these repairs approximately four days.

Bids to be let for Mackenzie

A meeting was held in Tulia Tuesday for the purpose of letting bids for the pipeline for the Mackenzie Water

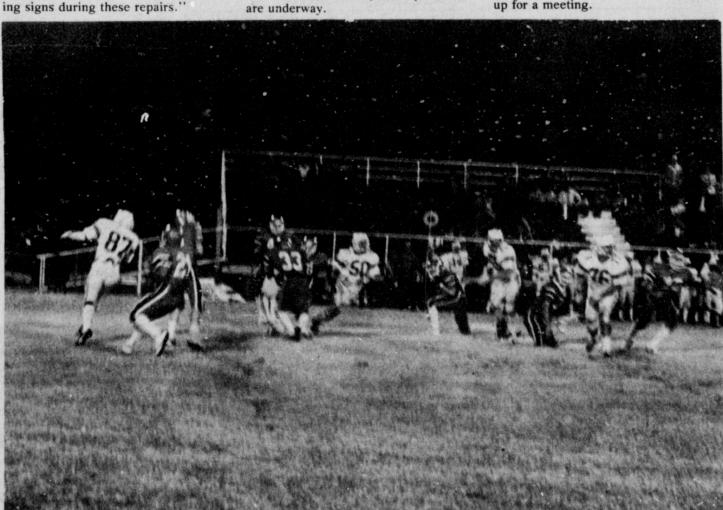

The meeting had been originally cheduled to be held in the City Council room but had to be changed to the District Court Room in the Swisher County Courthouse.

There was "tremendous response" according to Neil Taylor, Manager of the Mackenzie Authority.

More than 125 contractors and suppliers showed up for the meeting. Fifty contractors bid on the transmission phase of the project alone. Bids were well under the expectations of the engineers.

Because of the number of bids submitted, it is expected to take 4 or 5 days to correlate the bids through the use of a computer, according to Taylor.

Bids were opened from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. The engineers reported this was the largest number of contractors and suppliers that they had ever had to show up for a meeting.

Safety emblem posted

You may have noticed this black. orange, and vellow sticker in windows around town and wondered what it meant. The 1956 Study Club has been concerned with community welfare and safety.

This sticker was designed by the club and distributed to responsible community members who agreed to help with this project.

The purpose of this project is to designate a safe and hospitable place for persons needing help. For instance, if a small child becomes lost or frightened of an unfriendly dog, or injured from a fall, he can be assured help and will be welcome in a home with a sticker on a window or door.

Adults should explain this sticker and point one out to children to make them feel secure in seeking help in these places. If you have questions regarding this you may call any club member or club president. Stacey Smith 983-2048 or Connie Bertrand 983-2900.

Board hears report

At the Thursday night meeting, October 12, the school board members heard an overall review from Superintendent Dub Hallmark.

Lockney is participating in a cooperative in offering the adult education classes, with Floydada being the regional coordinator. Lockney has over 50 enrolled in their adult education classes, believed to be the largest response by far than in any previous session.

Mrs. Don Aufill teaches a class of adults who desire a GED. Mr. Vera and Mrs. Arellano teach classes how to read and write the English language. Many of those in their classes will be interested in pursuing further classes. eventually attaining their GED.

School policies were discussed and reviewed, but no changes were made. District values were set based on the STAP board report. The board chose to appeal the values in one area; that of the farm equipment and cattle. This was done as a matter of record. Only until after the November election will the outcome of the finance bill be known after the legislature takes action on it. It could mean that from between $20 to $26 million could be lost to the school district in tax base.

The principals gave an overview of their school's enrollment. The total enrollment in Lockney is 770 compared to 834 at this time last year. With this decrease of about 70 students, the enrollment seems to be stabilized, and no real increase is anticipated due to a light migrant movement this fall.

The practice gym is complete and Supt. Hallmark was authorized to make payment on the project with only a few minor stipulations, which have been accomplished by presstime. Holly Construction was the contractor.

The travel policy was amended to meet federal and state requirements.

The school board meeting time was changed to 7:30 p.m. throughout the fall and winter. This time will be used until at least next April.

Q: How often should I have my car washed?

A: It depends on the external factors that your car is exposed to. For example salt or other corrosive matter such as sand should be washed off approximately every week. In seasons or climates less conducive to corrosion, every two or three weeks should be adequate. One important factor that could vary those figures is whether your car is parked in a garage overnight or left out in the elements.

Nig Adams is a patient at Caprock Hospital. He was admitted a week ago Monday for treatment. You'll have to ask for Lawrence, though, as they don't know him as Nig, at the hospital. Dee has been staying mornings and Nita Lou afternoons with him. Roland Adams came over Sunday from Lubbock and visited his uncle, who is able to have company and enjoys seeing friends and neighbors.

Mr. and Mrs. Blanton Hartsell returned home last week from a long automobile trip through the Southern states and the World's Fair. They traveled on up the east coast to Canada and back. A wonderful trip.

Mr. W. Earl Edwards is feeling much better, answering the phone and chatting with neighbors.

Mrs. Q.D. Williams visited her father, Edgar Jones, at Truscott, last week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. William Bertrand spent the weekend at Vernon with their son and family. Ronald, Betty Sue and Shelly Bertrand. Faye was honored with a birthday dinner Friday evening. One Saturday the men fished at Lake Kemp.

Mrs. Viola Brown enjoyed the Senior Citizens luncheon at Crosbyton Friday and games of dominoes afterward.

Mrs. Buell Neff returned home this week from a three week stay at Luling, Texas with her daughter, Nellie Johnson and husband, Jack Johnson. Ona Ruth attended the wedding of her granddaughter Jackie, to Lynn Holcomb at the little country Baptist Church at McNeil. There she discovered records where her Wright and Barrow ancestors arrived in 1876 and 1877, married, purchased land, later on sold the land and headed west for the Plains. Many people in the area make a living copying old records, printing the information into books for sale.

On Saturday, Mrs. Don Harrison, Mrs. Lillian Smith, Mrs. Joe Harrison, Lona and Jean Dunn went to Plainview to attend the Running Water Draw Arts and Crafts Festival. This is an exciting place to shop for Christmas gifts and look at the beautifully creative ideas of the artists.

Mr. and Mrs. William Bertrand spent a recent week-end in Ruidoso visiting Faye's brother and his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Battey. Other Floydada people there that week-end included Mr. and Mrs. Orville Newberry and Mr. and Mrs. John Key West. All attended the mule races. The Aspen and other deciduous trees were in beautiful autumn color. Rex Battey showed the group old home movies made back in 1955, when everyone was young and fresh and their children were little.

Profitable management of stocker cattle

BY JOHN McNEILL

Beef Cattle Specialist

Texas Agricultural Extension Service Prospects for grazing wheat pasture are extremely good due to timely fall rains. Producers who plan to place stocker cattle on wheat pasture should carefully consider how to best manage the cattle in order to maximize the return on their investment.

Many variables influence the profitability of a grazing operation. Producers should determine which factors have the most economic impact and concentrate their management efforts on those over which they have some degree of control. The following seven (7) variables were selected to show how they affect the net return per head of a typical set of 400 pound Medium Frame No. 1 steers that could have been purchased during October. All management factors such as interest rate. production costs, daily gain and death loss were based upon industry averages. The last column shows the influence on net profit per head if each production variable changes by the interval shown and all other factors remain the same.

whether or not the cattle are implanted and whether or not the cattle are fed a high energy supplement while on pasture.

Production Variable	Unit of Change	Influence On Net Per Hea
Purchase Price	+$1.00/cwt.	$4.32
Death Loss	+1/2%	$1.64
Interest Rate	+1%	$1.01
Pasture Cost	+$.25/cwt./month	$5.21
Average Daily Gain	+.1 lb./head/day	$9.70
Sale Shrink	+1/2%	$2.06
Sale Price	+$1.00/cwt.	$6.12

It may not be feasible to positively influence all of these variables by the degree shown, but it is evident that if all or part of them are influences to some degree that the cumulative effect can have a profound impact on the net return per head.

For example, average daily gain can be influenced by several factors such as genetic ability of the cattle to gain. forage availability, weather conditions,

Producers should examine various management alternatives available to them and determine which combination of management factors offers the most potential for profit, The Texas Agricultural Extension Service offers a Stocker Cattle Budget Analysis service which utilizes a computer to determine which total management system best meets each individual's needs. Data input forms are available at your local County

Potassium levels in rations for stocker calves

BY JOHN McNEILL

Beef Cattle Specialist Nutritional practices during the first few days after arrival of stocker cattle can have a major influence on subsequent performance and health of the cattle. There are many factors which influence the nutritional requirements of newly received cattle. These factors are related to the amount of stress imposed on the cattle, age and weight of the cattle, time in transit, distance shipped, weather, amount of shrink and other factors.

Potassium is a mineral that has many functions and is essential for life. When dehydration occurs it is likely that a potassium deficiency would occur. Research conducted at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station showed that the potassium requirement for stressed calves was 20% more than the requirement for nonstressed calves for the first 2 weeks after arrival.

The table shown below illustrates the benefits of additional potassium in receiving rations. These results are the averages of two trials. The average across Europe, past Moscow, and on daily gains were calculated from pay- toward China. weight to 28 day lot weights with deads out. Additional potassium did not increase average intake, but average daily gains were increased with the additional potassium. The death loss was decreased from 7.5% to 1.1.% when higher levels of potassium were fed. Other research has shown that levels higher than 1.4% potassium can restrict intake and be of no benefit. Potassium is easily added to rations as potassium chloride.

Sorghum and corn exports to top 2.6 billion bushels

By Elbert Harp, Executive Directr of Grain Sorghum Producers Association and Texas Grain Sorghum Producers

Can you imagine a train of hopper cars seven thousand and three hundred miles long? That train would reach from the Texas Panhandle to New York-across the Atlantic to London--continue

Can you imagine the volume of U.S. sorghum and corn it would take to fill that train? A train 7,300 miles long would hold approximately 2.3 billion bushels--the amount of sorghum and corn exported by U.S. farmers last year. Most of the export sales of U.S. feed grains are made to markets which were developed through the aggressive market development program of U.S. feed Grains Council which was established in 1960 by Grain Sorghum Producers Association. This work is continued today largely through sorghum and corn checkoff programs which assess a small fee for each bushel of grain sold. The sorghum checkoff program in the Texas High Plains is administered by Texas Grain Sorghum Producers Board (TGSPB). Texas sorghum producers pay a voluntary assessment of five cents per point of processing.

Current problems of surplus grain and overflowing grain bins raise questions about the value of exports to the U.S. feed grain producer and processor. "If we're exporting so much, why are stocks piling up?" That is due mainly to the tremendous increase in production over the past 15 years.

From 1965 to 1981, U.S. sorghum and corn producers: (1) increased acreage (corn and sorghum), 29%

(2) increased total production, 90% (3) increased domestic use, 28% (4) increased exports, 137%

A look at the glut of grain on hand today and a realization of the ability of American farmers to keep increasing production clearly shows that exports cannot solve all farm problems. But exports have made a tremendous difference in keeping the industry alive. In fact, exports (expected to be about 2.625 billion bushels of sorghum and corn this year) are about the only hope for increased sales in the near future.

Imagine how much worse our storage and price problems would be if we had that entire trainload of grain dumped on top of the piles of surplus grain farmers are harvesting and trying to store.

TETANUS IN ANIMALS

Fall is the time of year that many 4-H and FFA livestock projects are purchased and put on feed. One problem that these young livestock producers will face, particularly in sheep production, is the possibility of death loss due to tetanus. This problem is faced by commercial livestock producers year in and year out.

Lockjaw, the old-fashioned name for tetanus, is a disease which affects practically all warm-blooded animals, including humans.

The name came into use because of the intense spasms of muscles about the head of affected animals. However, many different groups of muscles are affected by tetanus. For instance, the animals may show a "saw horse" appearance and be hypersensitive to sudden noise and other stimulation.

Because the tetanus organism needs dead tissue to organic material as well as a lack of oxygen to grow and produce its toxin, dirty wounds which are closed

Washingtons' careers span 53 years

Washington has a very deep meaning to even the youngest of Americans. Area Lockney residents will smile just as big at the mention of the name on a local basis.

Waverly Washington and his wife Bettie have been teachers in the Lockney school system for a combined total of 53 years between the two of Washington, a graduate of Butler College in Tyler, attended Bishop College in Dallas also. He earned his B.S. degree in social science with a minor in social studies. He teaches the fourth and fifth grades, where he has taught for some 17 years. Up until 1965 when the schools integrated he taught high school. But his career stretches

The elementary students are departmentalized. Washington finds that system more difficult than a previous system where the students remained under the supervision of the same teacher all day for 2 to 3 years. The students learned better. Discipline and teaching were all on a more consistent basis, contributing to a better learning atmosphere.

Washington said the most rewarding part of his career is "seeing the children progress and develop into useful little citizens." He is teaching some second generation students. When the Washingtons taught in Washington Elementary three teachers taught students in grades 1 through 9 with a total enrollment of 130 students. Mr. Washington recalled some of those teachers: Mrs. T.H. Barefield, presently of Tyler; Mrs. Pearlene Grayson, of Amarillo; and Mrs. Terrell, of Ft. Worth at last knowledge.

Washington expressed his anxieties over the extra activities that in which the students participate. He surmised that the students did not learn as well because of them. "I think we are seeing students who do not progress in the basics because of the distractions and interruptions."

Washington's favorite way of discipline is additional assignments. He said he set out very definite guidelines for the students at the beginning of the year, and, if it became necessary, he might have to display the list of about 7 or 8 items as a refresher during the Bettie Washington is a first grade teacher going into her 24th year. She taught third and fourth grades in Washington Elementary.

A graduate of Stanton High School, she received her B.S. degree in home economics from Texas College at Tyler. Her minor was in elementary education. She also did graduate study at North Texas State to qualify in elementary teaching. She also attended classes at Texas Eastern, sponsored by the University of Texas, one summer.

She was the daughter of a carpenter. Her mother was an LVN. Her brother, Donald Green, attended a medical college in Tennessee and currently lives in San Diego. One of her three sisters is a teacher.

Mrs. Washington related that the rewards she receives from teaching the very young student can be "equated with birthing something in a child's mind. I get satisfaction in just knowing they received an idea. It is such a consolation to know that after I try to teach, it did not go to waste.'

Upon being questioned if she ever regreted that she chose the elementary grades, Mrs. Washington said, "I feel I have met a greater need in the elementary school. When I first graduated, I could have thoroughly enjoyed teaching on the high school level. When I was fresh out of my college classes, I could have done a job, but no, I have not ever regreted having chosen the elementary grades."

The Washingtons have five children who are graduates of Lockney. Waverly, Jr. is an accountant for Deep Rock; May Frances Goffney is a teacher; Waverly Ann is employed by TEC, having taught school some four years previously; and Travis has been an employee of Gould Industry until recently when he gave up his career to return to college. They all reside in Dallas. Betty J. Jackson, who lives in Tyler, is an employee of the State Welfare Department.

The Washingtons maintain a second home in Tyler where they spend the summers. Their property there has been in the hands of the members of the family since 1882. They enjoy resting with a little fishing and hunting thrown in. They also visit their children and their seven grandchildren, as well as tie up some social ends during that time.

"We appreciate the opportunity that we have had," Mr. Washington concluded. "We thank the Lord we are able to teach. We have never worried about unemployment."

"We have so much to give back since we have been so fortunate, and our children have done so well."

The 7th grade Shorthorns held off the Idalou Wildcats last Thursday to a 0-0 tie. Both teams had opportunities to score, but defense prevailed.

They took the opening kickoff and drove the ball 75 yards to their first touchdown. By half the score was 32-0. Idalou scored in a variety of ways.

The bright spot was the defensive play of Mike Salas. The Longhorns had a hard time moving the ball and stopping the Wildcat team.
