Pre-school clinic Tuesday

Four doctors will examine children

The annual Athena Study Club-sponsored preschool registration and clinic has been set for Tuesday, April 8, at Lockney Elementary School from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. It will be held in the school cafeteria.

Purpose of this clinic is to preregister all children who will be five years old on or before September 1, 1986 and who will be attending school for the first time. It is also for children who are six years old and have never before attended school.

This clinic is free and open to all residents of Lockney with children who meet the above guidelines.

Dr. W.J. Mangold and Dr. Gary Mangold will be present to give each child a physical examination. Dr. Stewart Webb of Plainview will conduct eye examinations and vision screening for those at the clinic. Also Lockney dentist Ricky Cross will be on hand for dental examinations of those preregistering for school.

Also South Plains Health Provider is expected to be on hand to administer any shots in which those at the clinic are lacking. Any shots administered will be given free of charge to those who need them.

It is very important that parents bring their children to the clinic and bring with them a copy of the child's birth certificate and a current immunization card as these are necessary to enroll all students in school.

All parents of Lockney children who will be five years old by September 1, 1986 or those who will be attending school for the first time if they are six years old are urged to bring their children to this clinic. It will save time in getting these children registered for school if they are at the clinic.

Newspaper policy restated

[Editors note: Upon receiving this week for publication more than one advertisement and letter to the editor which involved personalities and personal reflection, the Floyd County newspapers are restating their policy, which first appeared in The Lamplighter column on February 28, 1985. The same Policies apply to both letters to the editor and advertisements.

job, or positions on public policy we take here, your letters will be welcomed and published.

But there are things that must be understood by all concerned in this process. The letters should be as short as possible and to the point. The Editor has sole discretion over whether letters will be published, and that will be determined by several factors, including the length, the clarity, and the subject matter.

The subject today is letters to the editor. Or, at least the first part of the column will be devoted to the subject.

Our policy in the future relative to letters to the editor will be essentially as follows:

First, we want to encourage as many letters as possible. We want to hear our readers views. It is your paper, up to a point. But here will be the ground rules under which letters will be published.

If you have a gripe, or if you have praise, about governmental policies at the city, county, state or national level, and if you feel strongly enough about your views to wish to share them with your fellow citizens, write us a letter. It will be published, providing you sign your name, and providing your letter does not reflect upon the personal honesty of people mentioned in your letter.

If you have views about what would be best for the community, concerning directions our city, county, state, or national leaders should follow, your letters will be welcomed and published.

If you have views on how we are doing our job here at the Hesperian, or at the Beacon, send them in. They too will be published. If you agree, or disagree, with the way we are doing our

For instance: We will not become a sounding board for an argument between private citizens over issues that are not matters of public policy, and public concern. Those arguments can best be settled in other forums. If you are a farmer, and your neighbor insists on using your land as a turning area, don't complain to us and expect to see the letter published. We would certainly publish a letter in which one citizen sets forth his views on the practice itself, but we are not going to publish a letter in which farmer Jones complains about his neighbor, farmer Brown. The reasons should be obvious; we have no way of knowing who is right, and who is wrong in that kind of a situation, and we do not wish to become a party to any libel suit that might arise out of a squabble between two private citizens.

So I repeat, we welcome, and encourage letters to the editor. It would suit us fine if we were inundated with them each week. We feel that our subscribers are thoughtful people, interested in the affairs of their community. If they were not thoughtful people they would not be subscribers. And the community always benefits from hearing the views of thoughtful people.

Garland Sams withdraws from race

A Lockney resident has withdrawn as a candidate for justice of the peace, yet his name will appear on the May 3 Democratic Primary ballot. This is due to Election Code regulations.

"Mr. Garland Sams has advised the Floyd County Democratic Executive Committee that by reason of his existing family circumstances requiring his time, he is withdrawing from the race for Justice of the Peace, Precincts 2 and 3," according to information released to this newspaper by the committee.

"However, under the Election Code," the county Democratic Executive Committee continues, "the last day for effective withdrawal by a candidate in the Primary Election was February 27, 1986, and the Executive Committee cannot now remove Mr. Sams' name from the ballot."

Bill Fewell and C.L. (Mike) Mooney are active candidates for the J-P post.

Candidates express views during forum

Monday night the Lockney Chamber of Commerce held a candidate forum which introduced candidates in the local and county election races to the citizens. About 70 candidates, wives and members of the public attended the forum.

Local candidates included those for school board and city council. The only person not present was Lloyd Wofford, who is a candidate for city council. Wofford was associated with Wofford Manufacturing Company for many years.

Clar Schacht, an agent with Floyd

County Farm Bureau, is seeking reelection to his seat on the school board. He has served one three year term. He is a lifelong resident of Lockney and commented "I have really enjoyed working with the administration and would like to opportunity to serve three more years on the school board."

Dickie Lambert, owner of Lambert Spraying Service, is seeking his first term on the school board. He is a lifelong Lockney resident and has four children in the Lockney school system.

Lambert said, "I feel it is the obligation of those who have children in school to support the school system by serving on the board and I would like the chance to serve on the school board and work with the administration."

Paul Glasson, Lockney veterinarian and resident for 16 years, has two children in the Lockney school system. He commented "I was approach to run for the board and after due consideration decided to go ahead. I know nothing about the inner working of the school but would like a chance to learn and would serve on the board to the best of my ability if elected."

Dan Smith is a native Lockneyite and was graduated from LHS and Texas Tech University. Commenting on the reason he is running for city council, Smith said, "This is the place I have always wanted to live and raise my children. I want to do everything I can to make this a better community and continue to improve it."

Kim King, Lockney resident for the past two years, is the president of the First National Bank. When asked, "Since you have only lived in Lockney for two years, what qualifies you to run for city council?" King answered "I think my administrative education background would help in making many decisions that involve the city. I feel that serving on the city council is one way I can give something back to a community that has given so much to me in the two years I have lived here. I feel that the way to give back to the community is through service and serving on the council is one way to devote myself to this community." He added that he was excited about having the opportunity to run for the city council.

Leslie Cox is a retired farmer-businessman who is running for the city council. He came to Floyd county in 1948 and moved into Lockney in 1957 after leaving farming, "due to hail." He stated, "I own my home in town and pay taxes here and your vote and influence would be appreciated."

In times like these... By Mary Jo Fielding

Certainly something needs to be done to revive the stagnant Soviet system. The stark truth is that, nearly 70 years after the revolution, the Soviet Union still cannot feed itself. And now, as more advanced nations move into a high-tech postindustrial age, Soviet factories are falling into the same unproductive rut as Soviet farms. Once the vanguard of the international communist movement, the Soviet Union is becoming an ideological backwater, a relic of simpler times when growth could be achieved by brute force. From Hungary to China, other communist countries are experimenting with economic and social reforms that undermine Soviet orthodoxy.

Moscow's problems are shared by most of its allies. Living standards either fell or failed to rise in most of Eastern Europe last year. Farther afield some of Moscow's most loyal proteges offer the worst advertisement for the Soviet system. Cuba has been a basket case for two decades, despite massive Soviet aid. North Korea remains poor while capitalist South Korea thrives. The shortcomings of the Soviet model are so conspicuous that communist all over Western Europe are rapidly losing members and political influence.

Care Center Capers

by Bonnie Purdom

The center will be working with the Retired Senior Citizens Volunteer Program, to provide services and tasks, for this organization. Alice Hall with the RSVP will be at the center on Wednesday, April 2 to begin setting up the program.

The plans are to begin a training program for our staff the 15th. Once the staff has been trained, we will be ready to begin training volunteers and residents.

Although senior citizens are on a fixed income that does not allow them to earn a salary, they remain useful, valuable, productive citizens. This program provides them with one outlet for their talents and abilities. We are very excited about the volunteers joining our health care team. The time and date of the training program has not been set. Senior citizens can pick up an application in the office, and we will notify them as to the time and date.

The Easter baskets the residents made were just beautiful. We have some really talented residents. This group included: Bessie Jackson, Eula Malone, Bessie Smith, Edna Hunter, Betha Cunyus, Nina Loudermilk, and one brave gentleman, Floyd Barber, with a cheering section of other residents we were able to complete the baskets and make some sales.

With the proceeds from the basket sales, the residents enjoyed an Easter egg hunt and party on Friday afternoon. With chocolate egg nests made by Dixie Johnson and cupcakes by Mary Ann Nuncio, the party was a success. Our resident hostesses were Bessie Jackson and Mary Jo Fielding. I can't say enough for our volunteers, they provide so very much for the residents in time and love. Thanks to you all.

The bus to Plainview on Monday was pleasant, with Ester Pyle, Bonnie Julian, Eva Cresswell, Bessie Hunt, Earl Mercer and Mary Jo Fielding going. McDonald's treated us to ice cream and cokes.

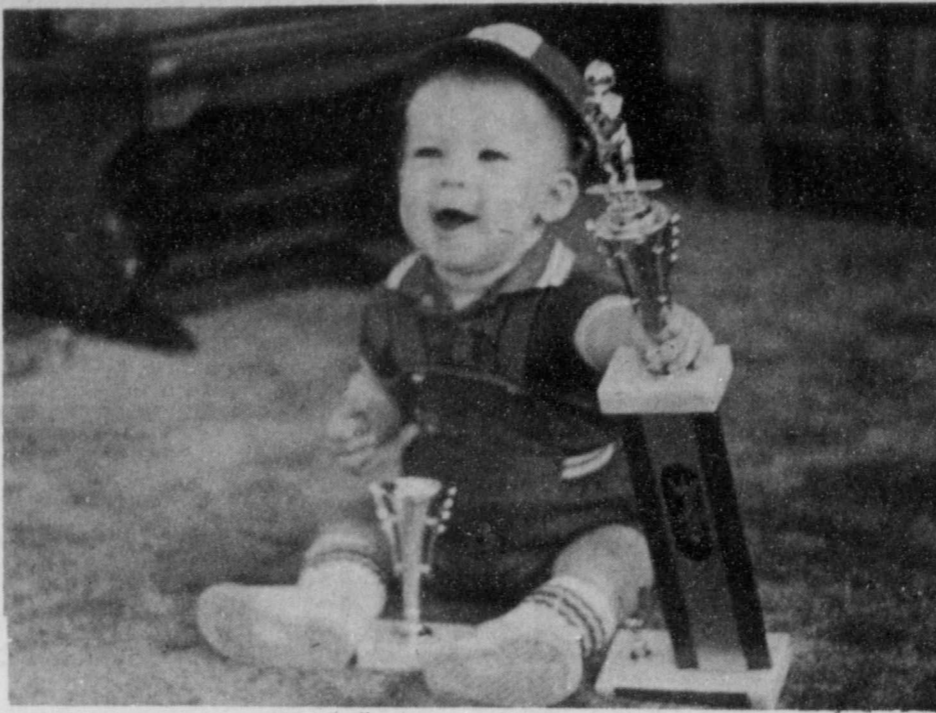

The center is blessed with beautiful religious groups. Each group is different and special. Each morning at 11 a.m. the halls are filled with music. I attempt to attend a different group each week, as time permits.

This week it was the John Francis Singers. Clyde Morrison and Bessie Hunt showed a lot of enthusiasm, although all of the residents enjoyed the music.

Mr. and Mrs. Ester Pyle had a nice surprise this week with a visit from their great-great-great- (I hope I got the right amount of greats in there) grandchildren from Arkansas. One of these delightful children assisted Eula Malone with extra hands in basket making. She also bought a basket to take back to Arkansas with her.

Mr. Ray Ogden and Dennis Grabbe are in the hospital. Although we all miss them, it is lonesome for their roommates, J.C. Jones and John Smith. Hopefully they will recover soon and be back home.

May God be with you and yours until next week.

BEAUTY CONTEST WINNER—Kirk Aaron Wilson, six month old son of Aaron and Karen Wilson, was a recent winner of a beauty pageant, benefitting the Pediatric Pavilion at Lubbock General Hospital. Kirk received the large trophy for winning the most beautiful in his age division and the small trophy for winning King of the Royalty division. This was for acquiring the most points for health, beauty and for selling tickets.

MR. AND MRS. MANUEL "DAVID" DeLEON

Reyna-DeLeon promises exchanged in Lockney

Sylvia Reyna and Manuel "David" DeLeon chose the 46th anniversary of the bridegroom's grandparents (Mr. and Mrs. Perfecto DeLeon Sr.) as the date for their own marriage.

Miss Reyna, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Reyna of Lone Star, and DeLeon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Manuel DeLeon, exchanged wedding promises at 3 p.m. March 2 in the home of the bridegroom's parents at 320 Southwest First Street in Lubbock.

Justice of the Peace C.L. Mooney officiated for the double ring ceremony.

In addition to being the 46th anniversary of the bridegroom's grandparents' wedding in Laredo, his wedding band was a family heirloom. The ring was first worn by a great-uncle of the bridegroom and later by the bridegroom's father.

BRIDAL GOWN

Escorted down the aisle prior to her marriage by Enrique Segovia, an uncle of the bridegroom and a friend of Miss Reyna, the bride wore a formal white lace gown featuring a fitted bodice, a choker lace neck and a Queen Anne yoke of sheer Chantilly lace, accented by a full four-tier ruffle of lace and lace organza, which formed cap sleeves. The full flowing skirt was silk-like taffeta featuring a full overlay of soft Chantilly lace, accented with two soft draping ribbon bows at each side in the front, producing the pick-up effect. The skirt was held out by a full hoop underskirt.

She wore a veil of illusion, secured to a crown of pastel blue rosebuds.

Her bouquet was made of blue and white rosebuds accented with white baby's breath and blue ribbon streamers.

Amy Nance of Lockney attended the bride as maid of honor. Her gown was ivory with small navy stripes, V-neckline and full skirt. Miss Nance's bouquet of blue roses was tied with blue and white ribbon, forming streamers.

Dickie Hernandez of Lockney served as best man.

The DeLeon home was decorated in various shades of blue and white, the bride's chosen colors.

"The Wedding March" and "Up Where We Belong" were presented on the accordion by Mrs. C.L. Record.

Michael DeLeon, brother of the bridegroom, played the guitar and sang "Abba Father," a religious hymn.

RECEPTION

Following their marriage ceremony, the couple was honored with a reception in the DeLeon residence. The oval service table was covered with a blue cloth overlaid with lace. The bride's bouquet was used as the centerpiece.

Crystal punch bowl, bride and bridegroom goblets, a three-tier wedding cake trimmed in blue and topped with a pair of white doves holding a wedding band with their beaks, completed the table decorations. Also gracing the table were Pan de Polvo (Mexican wedding cookies) and nuts.

Mrs. Milton Schaeffer, Mrs. Richard McCarty and Misses Michelle, Sandra and Josey Cavazos served refreshments to guests.

At the conclusion of the reception, a surprise Mexican wedding supper was provided for the wedding party and family by the bridegroom's grandmother, Mrs. Perfecto DeLeon Sr., and his aunt, Mrs. Enrique Segovia. This feast was staged in the DeLeon home.

The newlyweds are continuing their studies at Lockney High School.

Recent bride complimented with shower in McCarty home

A bridal shower honoring Sylvia Reyna DeLeon was given March 22 in the home of Mrs. Debbie McCarty.

Special guests were: Mrs. Gilbert Reyna, Mrs. Manuel DeLeon, Mrs. Perfecto DeLeon Sr., Mrs. Enrique Segovia and Mrs. Armondo Vasquez.

The gift from hostesses to the bride was silverware, ironstone and glasses.

Serving as hostesses were: Debbie McCarty, Vicky Schaeffer, Cindy Ford, Glenda Ford, Karen Evans, Wanda

Rogers, Barbara Carthel, Nellie Webb, Maria Arellano, Robin Gay and Karen Ford of Lockney and Marva Rasco and Billie Lam of Plainview.

Dub Hallmark appointed carnival ticket chairman

Dub Hallmark was appointed ticket chairman during the March meeting of the Floyd County Fair Association.

The tickets for this year's carnival are on sale now and are priced at two tickets for $1.00. These tickets will be on sale until August 20, 1986. If not purchased in advance the tickets will be priced at $1.00 each. Advance sale tickets, must be bought in pairs and will benefit the fair association, as the fair board gets a percentage of the tickets that are sold for the fair. The ticket sales will also enable the fair board not to charge a gate admission to the fair.

The carnival this year will be brought to Lockney by Jest Amusements which is owned by Virginia Wright. It was recommended by Ed Burlingame, owner of the Pride of Texas Carnival which has been in Lockney for the past five years. This year's carnival will include six big rides, six small rides for children, and about ten concessions.

At the meeting it was also announced that the Floyd County Arts Association will be in charge of the art department.

Fund raising projects were also discussed. The fair board will be selling balloons at the Old Settlers reunion in May. They will also have tickets for the carnival on sale at that time. Chairpersons for the balloon sale are Kay Martin and Penny Ogden.

The next fair board meeting will be on Monday, April 7 at 7:30 p.m. in the Lockney home economics building. The public is invited to attend, to help with the fair or just to share ideas for this year's event.

SCRAMBLE FOR THE EGGS—The kindergarten class of Mrs. Cindy Ford had a picnic and Easter egg hunt at the city park in Lockney last Friday afternoon. There were over 200 eggs hidden and these five year olds found them all in a matter of minutes.

livestock and . . . well, here's the story in Gary's words:

"A friend of mine, that I will call Eddie, asked one day if I had any ideas on how he might load some hogs. It seems that Eddie had 10 hogs (250 pounds) running in a 10 acre pasture, which had no pens.

"I suggested to Eddie that he might park a trailer near a corner of the pasture and then scatter a little corn on the ground and up into the trailer and that he might get one or two of the hogs loaded that way.

"During the conversation, I mentioned that I had seen my dad put a tub or bucket over a hogs' head and back it into a trailer.

"Later in the week, Eddie's wife told me that he had tried my suggestion and although he had not been able to get any hogs into the trailer, he had received a free piggy back ride.

"After parking the trailer and putting out the corn, Eddie set the bucket down to wait to see what happened. One of the hogs stuck its head into the bucket and Eddie decided to see if he could back the hog into the trailer.

"He grabbed the top of the bucket with both hands and tried to get the hog to back up. The hog ran between his legs, catching his hands between the bucket and the hog's head.

"Caught as he was, Eddie took a ride on the hog, him looking one way and the hog going the other way. After freeing himself and getting off, I understand that my name was severely discussed and that Eddie threatened his wife with severe punishment if ever she told anyone about what had happened."

SO GOD MADE A FARMER . . .

Surveying the world He had made, God looked down one day and said, "I need somebody down there to be a caretaker of my kingdom."

So God made a farmer.

"I need somebody who will sit up all night with a newborn colt, watch it die and say, 'Maybe we'll get an even better one next year.'"

So God made a farmer.

"I need somebody who can eat dirt, smell manure, listen for thundercaps, taste bugs in his teeth and still feel good all over."

So God made a farmer.

"I need somebody who can get up before dawn, milk cows, work in the field all day, milk cows again, eat supper and then go into town and stay there 'til 2 a.m. at a school board meeting."

So God made a farmer.

"I need somebody with arms strong enough to wrestle a big calf to give him shots, but a heart gentle enough to cry when his first grandchild is born."

So God made a farmer.

"I need somebody who can call hogs, cuss at ornery, cantankerous old machinery, bark orders to the hired man and then come home and whisper to his wife that she's the same pretty girl he married 15 years ago."

So God made a farmer.

"I need somebody who can wait patiently for his afternoon lunch until his wife is done feeding all the ladies at her cosmetics party, and then tell them all to come back soon."

So God made a farmer.

"I need somebody who waits all year to harvest a crop, but will stop in mid-field and run to help when he sees smoke coming up from the neighbor's place."

So God made a farmer.

I need somebody who will smile, then laugh and then cry when his son says he wants to spend the rest of his life doing just what DAD does."

So God made a farmer.

REMEMBER TO VOTE

With local elections — school, city and hospital — galore this Saturday, we encourage voters to take a few minutes to cast ballots for your favorites.

"My vote doesn't really matter," many think. On more than a few occasions, outcomes have been decided by a handful of votes. Everyone's vote counts THE SAME.

Well over half the individuals living today would gladly change places with those in the United States and their style of self-government. Casting one's ballot, in this viewpoint, is not only a right but also a responsibility.

HE'S NOT HOMESICK

Anxious about their eight-year-old who was away at camp for the first time and who hadn't called home in four days, the worried parents placed a call to Junior. The parents were a bit disappointed to learn that the lad had not missed them at all.

"Have any of the other kids gotten homesick?", the mother asked.

"Only the ones with dogs," came the reply.

MY WIFE'S GONNA KILL ME!

After having a wife take the TECAT (teacher's test), the following story hits close to home:

Three men were fishing out on a lake one day and witnessed a man drowning when his boat hit a stump.

They got to the man in time, hauled him from the water and pumped the fluid from his lungs, saving his life.

"I want to express my appreciation for saving my life," the victim said.

"I'm a very wealthy man and I want to grant each of you your wish."

The first man said, "I have always wanted a Cadillac with all the extras."

"Very well," replied the victim.

"We'll go to the dealer tomorrow and get your car."

The second fisherman said, "I've always wanted to take a trip around the world, but have never been able to afford it."

"Fine," said the victim. "We'll book your passage at the travel agency and you can take as long as you wish on the trip."

The third fisherman answered simply, "I want a nice funeral."

Surprised, the victim commented,

"Are you sure? I'm able to give you anything you want. Surely you have a desire for something more than a funeral."

"Well," the man said with a very serious look on his face, "when I get home and tell my wife, who's a school teacher, that I helped save the life of H. Ross Perot, she's gonna kill me. I won't need anything else." — Rick Craig in Hamlin Herald

Accent On Health

Buyers cautioned against unsafe food and drugs

Dr. Robert Bernstein, Commissioner of Health, recently urged all consumers to examine carefully food and drug products before buying or using them. His consumer alert followed the February discoveries of poison-contaminated Tylenol capsules and jars of baby food containing broken glass.

health department conducts inspections and random surveys for unsafe food and drugs. We test any questionable product we find, but the buyer is always more likely to find that product first.

"Therefore, increased consumer awareness is urgently needed to prevent injuries, illnesses, or fatalities resulting from products which have been subjected to deliberate tampering or accidental contamination in handling," he said.

the container and when transferring it to another container.

5. Check all seals carefully. Drugs sold over the counter are required to have tamper-resistant packaging.

6. After opening a drug container, make certain that none of the tablets or capsules are discolored or in any other manner vary in appearance from the rest of the contents.

7. If anything about a package looks suspicious - BE SUSPICIOUS.

Dr. Bernstein said state agencies, the Federal Food and Drug Administration, and private industry are diligently searching for safer packaging and better ways to detect tampering. "We must caution, however, that even the best safeguards cannot entirely eliminate all risks. And, we must keep in mind that regulatory agencies and industry cannot guarantee protection when an individual is intent on committing such terrible acts as have occurred with the recent Tylenol tamperings," he said.

Coopers visit Tennessee in search of roots

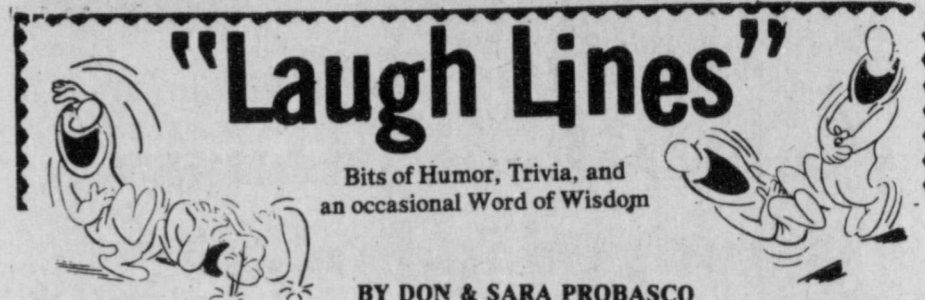

Last September, the Earl Coopers and their daughter, Shirley Durmon of Amarillo, visited Decatur, Tennessee, searching for their "roots."

Mrs. Cooper is a descendant of George Tucker, whose grandson Henry A. Tucker, founded the old Scotts Hill College in 1890 in Tennessee.

The following is a clipping from The County Paper, Decatur, Tennessee from September when the Coopers visited:

The Earl Coopers of Lockney, Texas, and their daughter, Shirley Durmon of Amarillo, Texas, recently visited here. Mrs. Cooper is related to the descendants of George Tucker whose grandson, Henry A. Tucker founded the old Scotts Hill College in 1890. Upon inquiring to our Dee McCollum, the first person they saw on entering Scotts Hill, he referred them to Gordon Turner who was happy to give them highlights of our area and the old school. He showed them the old college site and the home of the B.A. Tuckers and guided them to Lafferty Cemetery and Concord in Decatur County. They thrilled to find the graves of Mrs. Cooper's forebears and the grave of Prof. Tucker.

Mr. Turner told them that his sister, Mrs. Myra Turner Graham once lived in Lockney, Texas, and taught at the Bible School about 1908-09. They had heard of the Lockney School and of the parents of John C. Graham. Well, the world is a small place after all.

Global expert says ag production over demand

Dennis Avery is described in official Washington circles as a "senior agricultural analyst for the Department of State." He might better be called a myth-breaker, a realist who tells it like it is. Consider these current Avery propositions.

*The world's peoples are not nearly as hungry as most of us suppose. Capacity of both poor and rich countries to feed themselves has increased immensely in recent years, as production and population figures clearly prove.

*Food emergencies still occur and must be dealt with, but agricultural production in the world today overall is outstripping demands. This is due in large measure to ever-advancing technology that has led to productivity gains around the globe.

"It is unfortunate that American farmers got the idea they were the only ones in the world that could increase productivity over time," Avery told FarmLand News. "That's not true and it is less true by the day. There are more researchers in more countries of more colors working in agriculture than the world has ever seen."

*Continually improving technology and other factors will pile up more farm products than the world can use for an indefinite period to come. "There isn't room for all the farmers in the world with all this technology," said Avery. "Somebody is redundant. The question is who?"

*There's no question there will be a great competitive struggle among exporters for markets in the coming years. Some are going to sell more than they have in the past. The question again is who. "As an economist," said Avery, "I'd like to see this determined competitively because that's the rational way to do the maximum good for human-kind."

*U.S. farmers can regain and expand markets with improved policies and a broader definition of farm products to include such things as chemical feedstocks, sophisticated organic chemicals and others.

*It is tremendously important to U.S. farmers to get this country behind a reform of GATT to provide a level playing field for agricultural trade as has been done already in non-ag trade — world agreements that allow a country to sell what it can best produce and buy from others what it can't without hindrance of artificial trade barriers.

American farmers, Avery pointed out, are going to have to realize that they no longer have a leg up on other countries of the world merely because of the abundance of good crop land and a temperate climate. Natural factors are having less and less to do with ag output, he said, than is the degree to which technology is put to cost-effective use.

With new crop strains that can be adapted to poor soils or less optimal climates, places in the world that had been too cold, too saline, or too damp are now yielding bumper crops. The best crop land no longer assures the American farmers of prosperity, Avery noted. "It just means higher production costs," through higher priced land.

Herein is where the future of America's farmers lie, Avery noted. To stay in business, in an increasingly competitive world agriculture, he said, U.S. farmers must pare down their cost of production.

"The strategy for U.S. farmers," he said, "must be to invest only in those things that will significantly lower per-unit cost. This will often mean output-increasing technology."

The world, he pointed out, is currently producing 60 million tons a year more grains and oil seeds than it can use. There simply isn't enough room in the world for everybody who could be in the business of producing grain to be in it, he said, and make a living.

Our country has got to find a "rational way" to sort out which farms stay in which kind of production, Avery went on. You can't just hold good farm land out of production. "See those models of tractors in the window," he said. "They've had more to do about the number of farms we've had in the U.S. over the last 50 years than any farm program."

Dairy subsidies over the years have pushed up the cost of land on which the cows graze, he said, but they really haven't had much to do with the number of dairy farms. Avery, it might be noted, grew up on a dairy farm in Michigan.

Before joining the Department of State in 1980, he worked at the Department of Agriculture, on the U.S. Commodity Futures Trading Commission and Presidential Advisory Commission on Food and Fiber. He majored in ag economics at Michigan State University in '57, going on to get a master's at the University of Wisconsin.

The U.S. has "significantly" lost its share of world farm exports, Avery will tell you, partly because of federal farm policies — "our long-term policy of storing surpluses rather than selling them."

How would Avery revamp our farm policies?

As a State Department employee, he noted, he's not allowed to comment. But he made it quite clear he thinks present policies are not what we need now.

"One thing seems certain," Avery said. "The price supports, land diversion and storage programs that have dominated U.S. farm policy for the past 50 years work against the U.S. farmer in a world of high technology and rising productivity."

"What I'm trying to do is help American farmers understand what kind of competition they have overseas and what implications that has for our competitive opposition...there's no question export markets are going to be fought over like crazy in the future."

"So many other agricultures have shown they're willing to step in ahead of us to meet consumer demand," Avery said.

Europe's production is up; China's and India's are way up. Argentina still has cattle on some of the finest crop land in the world, and if the government ever allows its farmers to do it, Argentina could produce a heck of a lot more. Brazil has found that phosphate and lime applied to its central plateau makes it good for wheat, corn and soybeans — 125 million acres. Brazil's problem, however, is there still isn't infrastructure, roads, elevators, and so forth.

What all this amounts to for American agriculture, Avery concluded, is that our farm policymakers will have to recognize that buyers of farm products will have more alternative sources of supply than ever before — "their own agricultures, competing agricultures all over the globe, and more synthetics and substitutes."

Our policies must, he said, focus on reducing per-unit cost and providing farmers with the latest technology. There must also be "strong efforts" to lower trade barriers.

"In the long run," Avery said, "I have no doubt that the world capacity to produce farm products will grow faster than demand. But I don't think it has to mean a lot fewer farmers."

"I've got tremendous admiration for American farmers. I think they are the most knowledgeable, quickest footed in the world, and they have benefited by a great infrastructure — contributed to enormously by exports. I'd hate to see us lose that."

Assistance centers founded to aid farmers

By Joe B. Priddy
JTPA Field Coordinator

Local farmers are dropping like flies because of farm depression, and they're doing it by voluntary liquidation, by bankruptcy, and farm foreclosures. Texas is losing about 100 farmers a week. The existence of a farm crisis is general knowledge; its effects on Texas are particularly sobering because of the importance of agriculture in Texas's economy.

Texas has 185,000 farmers and ranchers — more than any other state. When farm families are counted, the total farming population is 600,000 or 4% of the total population of the state. The South Plains Service Delivery Area (SDA), consisting of thirteen counties (11,930 square miles), has a total population of 153,205 (1985).

There are reportedly 6,200 farmers. Using the national average of 3.3 persons per farm family, there is 20,400 total farm population; which is 13% of the total South Plains SDA population. Three counties with significant farm family populations are Hale (2,746), Lamb (2,716), and Hockley (2,089).

Farmers in our South Plains SDA are significantly spread out among age groups; approximately 20% are below age 35, approximately 45% are between 35 and 55, and approximately 35% are 55 or older.

Caprock Action Association, Inc. (SPCAA) is setting up Farmer's Assistance Centers to help local farmers who are having financial difficulties. SPCAA will serve a thirteen county area of Northwest Texas to include the following counties: Bailey, Cochran, Crosby, Dickens, Floyd, Hale, Hockley, King, Lamb, Lynn, Motley, Terry and Yoakum.

The Farmer's Assistance Centers objectives are to evaluate current skills and abilities, help in job search, provide vocational training, classroom training, on-the-job training, job referrals, and placement in a permanent, full time job.

This program is designed to assist farmers with severe cash-flow problems and those facing bankruptcy and/or foreclosure. Farmers should visit a designated Farm Assistance Center nearest them for details and eligibility requirements. The centers will be staffed in the following communities:

South Plains Community Action Association, Inc., 411 Austin Street, Levelland, Texas 79336, (806) 894-6104.

Caprock Community Action Association, Inc., 1909 Quincy, Plainview, Texas 79072, (806) 293-4397.

Golden Super may cost more by the pound, but it's less by the bushel.

Typical cost increase per acre over bulk blend

Typical yield increase per acre over bulk blend

Some things it just doesn't pay to save money on. Corn starter's one of them. Compare the real cost of a 10-30-5 bulk blend to that of Golden Super 10-30-5. It costs you about two dollars an acre less than Golden Super. But according to our field tests conducted over the years, it'll also cost you about eight bushels of corn. Golden Super gives you better results because its 7 percent

Sulfur and 2 percent Zinc make for more efficient protein synthesis and improved nitrogen and phosphorus uptake. The mono-ammonium phosphate in Golden Super is equally important because it is highly soluble and can be used efficiently by the crop. This promotes the vigorous early growth that is necessary for high yields. Our 10-30-5 also gives you more uniform application than a bulk blend because every granule is a homogenous mixture of nutrients. See your Grace dealer. He'll help you work up a Golden Super program to bring down your cost per bushel. Because you can't reach maximum economic yield by cutting back on the one thing that's most likely to get you there.

Tennis teams fare well

The Lockney tennis team fared well at matches and tournaments held the past two weeks.

On March 22, Ronnie Ford and Chad Frizzell reached the semi-finals of the prestigious Plains Tennis Association Tournament. They defeated teams from Ralls, Floydada, and Anton before succumbing to the eventual champion, Nazareth.

Last Friday the team tangled with Petersburg in a duel match. All Horn players were victorious. Doubles winners were Heather Holt-Julie Davis, Inez Gibson-Lisa Terrell, and Oscar Reyna-Ray Jimenez. Single winners were Aaron Kidd and Jimmy Ballejo.

BLOOD DONOR—The student body at Southwestern Oklahoma State University recently received an honor from the Oklahoma Blood Institute, as the students donated, at a recent drive, some 658 pints of blood, second highest count in the state. Although Southwestern had been the number one donor for the past three years, they were beaten this year by the Oklahoma Health Sciences Center. Accepting the award for the student body were Southwestern Student Senate members (from left): Rob Scheele, Lockney; Laura Ballett, Putnam City, and Brian Box, Fairview.

Lorenzo's track will be the site Saturday, April 12, of the district junior high track meet. Competing schools are: Lockney, Petersburg, Paducah, Crosbyton, Ralls and Lorenzo.

Roundup at LHS

The Lockney High School One-Act Play cast recently went to Petersburg to compete in the District UIL Competition. The group will advance to the area contest on April 12, also at Petersburg after winning first in Class 4-AA.

The students presented William Shakespeare's "As You Like It" under the direction of Dayna Owen.

In addition to winning the contest Lockney High School also had the distinction of bringing home more special awards than any other school in the competition, with Julie Davis selected Best Actress, Matt Williams named to the All Star Cast and Julia Segovia, Lisa Terrell, and Gwen Lane all receiving honorable mentions.

Also advancing to the area contest is Crosbyton High School.

The English IV classes traveled to Odessa March 14 to see the play, "A Midsummer Night's Dream" by William Shakespeare. The classes had studied the play previously which was about four Athenian youth discovering the truths of love. Performers were drama students from North Texas State University who greeted the Lockney seniors backstage after the play. Mrs. Kay Williams, teacher, sponsored the group who stayed overnight before returning home. Mr. and Mrs. C.L. Record also accompanied the seniors.

On Saturday, April 5, the Lockney regional qualifying power lifting team will journey to Ralls for the regional meet.

Qualifying for regionals are Randy Race in the super heavy weight division, Johnny Silva in the 161 pound class, George Basaldua in the 181 class, Allen Stallings in the 123 group, and Michael DeLeon in the 114 pound class.

These young men will be attempting to qualify for the state power lifting meet to be held in Austin on April 26.

Come Alive

By Vivian Resendez

But whoever drinks of the water that I shall give him will never thirst; that water that I shall give him will become in him a spring of water welling up to eternal life. John 4:14

How do you tell thirsty people in other lands about your product? Some good ideas just don't translate very well. Consider the case with a popular soft drink when they chose an advertising theme. Come alive with Coke. It was a success in America but not elsewhere. The soft drink company placed an advertisement in the Taiwanese edition of Reader's Digest. The artwork was fine but the "Come Alive" theme needed translation into other languages. It really is good to come alive, but not with a physical drink, but with a spiritual drink and that spiritual drink is Jesus.

To the Samaritan woman at Jacob's well, our Lord offered living water. She should have understood sooner when He discussed that favorite theme of old Testament prophets. Jeremiah had claimed God's people "have forsaken the Lord, the fountain of living water" Zechariah talked about those same living waters (14:8).

No doubt about it. Jesus is the only source of living water which satisfies our ultimate thirst for real life. Had He not come alive out of the grave. His claims would have been forgotten. But the Samaritan woman at the well finally understood. She became alive with the water that Jesus offered her. Alive spiritually not physically.
