Saturday election to name mayor, trustees

HERE FOR THE WINTER—An abundance of sandhill cranes have overwintered in the Lockney area, due — in one opinion — to an abundance of lakes and feed this year. These cranes, pictured at a site immediately west of town, also reportedly spend time on farms northeast of Lockney. —Staff photo Contests for mayor and three school trustee positions highlight a trio of elections this Saturday for Lockney residents. In addition, three city council and three hospital board seats are to be filled.

Polls open at 7 a.m. and close at 7 p.m.

J.D. Copeland and Dan Smith are candidates for a two-year term as mayor, Copeland is the incumbent.

Historical flag display coming

A display of historical flags of Texas will be in Lockney and on display free of charge, from April 13 through April 20 at Lockney Junior High.

The flag display will be open from 6 p.m.-9:00 p.m. for public viewing on Wednesday, April 15 in the Lockney Junior High cafeteria.

The display measures approximately 25 feet long by 6 feet high and all flags are housed in two sided glass frames to allow viewing from both sides.

SCHOOL ELECTION

Four men — Gary Mangold, Warren Mitchell, Ronnie Thornton and Keith Jackson (listed in order of ballot appearance) — are candidates for three-year terms on the school board. Two of the four will be elected.

Lisa Mosley and Joe Neil Rexrode have offered themselves for service to the two-year, unexpired school board position to which Clar Schacht was elected last year.

Terms of Jackson and Kelton Shaw expire this year. Shaw is not a candidate for re-election.

G.B. Johnston has been named as election judge, with balloting scheduled in the high school foyer.

Trustees whose terms do not expire this year are Dr. Paul Glasson, Dickie Lambert, Jim Bob Martin and Eddie Teeter.

CITY ELECTION

In addition to the mayor's race, three candidates are unopposed in their quest for positions on the city governing body.

Incumbents Jerry Johnson and Kenneth Wofford are seeking fresh terms of two years.

Gary Marr is the lone name appearing on the ballot for the one year remaining on the term to which Kim King was elected. King, like Schacht, resigned the post due to employment out of town.

City Hall will be the municipal election site. Willis Reynolds again will serve as election judge.

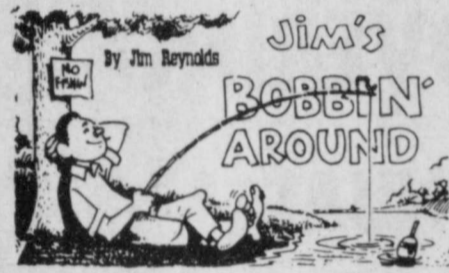

Smith and Ronnie Aston are holdover aldermen.

HOSPITAL ELECTION

Present board members Claude Brown, Jack Covington and Larry Golden are candidates for re-election, without opposition, to the Lockney General Hospital board of directors.

Persons desiring to cast ballots in the hospital election are advised to enter the east door at Lockney High School. J.D. Copeland is the election judge.

L.D. Brandes, Chester Carthel and H.E. Frizzell are other board members.

LOOKS TOO GOOD
A Baptist pastor paid a visit to a normally regular member of his congregation who had missed four straight Sunday morning services.

The man explained that his suit and other clothing were badly worn and that his appearance was embarrassing. Being a kindly man, the pastor took the fellow right to town and bought him a new suit, shoes, shirt and tie.

The next Sunday the fellow still was not at church.

This prompted another visit from the pastor.

Well yes, the man said, he got up Sunday morning and put on his new clothing.

Pre-school clinic slated Tuesday

Youngsters planning to enter Lockney schools for the first time this fall will receive physical examinations Tuesday, April 7, during the 37th annual pre-school registration clinic, sponsored by Athena Study Club.

The elementary school cafeteria is to be the site for the clinic, scheduled from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

Purpose of the clinic is to preregister youngsters who will reach their fifth birthday on or before Sept. 1, 1987, and who will be attending school for the first time. The clinic also is for children who are six years old but have never attended school previously.

The clinic is free to all residents of this school district who will have children enrolled for the first time in Lockney schools in 1987.

Conducting physical examinations will be Dr. W.J. Mangold and Dr. Gary Mangold.

Screening for visual problems will be Dr. Stewart Webb of Plainview. Plainview dentist Dr. Ricky Cross, a Lockney native, is to examine children's teeth.

South Plains Health Provider is expected to have personnel present to administer free vaccinations which children have not had. Certain immunizations are required by the state.

BIRTH CERTIFICATE, IMMUNIZATION RECORD SHOULD BE BROUGHT

Officials emphasize the importance of parents bringing their children's birth certificate and a current immunization record to the clinic. These are "necessary to enroll any student in school."

Parents are urged to bring to the clinic all children who will be enrolling in Lockney school system for the first time.

"It will save time in getting the children enrolled for school because all their records and immunization inform-

In times like these... By Mary Jo Fielding

Washington and Moscow seem to be heading in an argument on intermediate range nuclear forces (INF). The result would be a sharp reduction of nuclear weapons in Europe, an accomplishment that Washington's allies endorse in public, and dread in private.

An INF treaty has become a hot prospect because it serves the interests of both superpowers and of their leaders. For both countries medium-range missiles are dispensable their potential targets can be covered by longer-range or shorter-range nuclear weapons. But the West faces a special risk. An INF deal would remove one class of nuclear weapons that helps to offset Moscow's considerable advantage in conventional forces in Europe. Rightly or wrongly, the loss of those weapons could spook the allies.

By itself, an INF treaty will not split the NATO alliance, nor will it come close to leaving Europe defenseless. But NATO unity is more a matter of faith than firepower. As it negotiates an INF deal with Moscow, the Reagan administration will have to find a way to persuade its European allies that the American commitment to their defense is not just an expendable bargaining chip.

Wednesday, March 25:

This week was a week of weather we hardly ever see. Wind has blown so hard, and caused damage to many buildings. Here at the Rest Home many of the shingles on the roof are gone, from the rough wind we had here on Monday, March 23. The fence across the road is plastered with papers, letters, and all kinds of trash. It will take a lot of work to get the town all cleaned and straightened up.

Fruit trees suffered this week in the awful wind we had. I expect Monday's storm will kill most of the apple, peach and other blossoms that were out.

This Wednesday, March 25, is a real cold day. We see ice on the little ponds of water that were left by the rains of yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Early Pritchett who have spent the winter here at their home on the highway, have gone back to Ruidoso, New Mexico, where they will enjoy the summer at their summer home.

Mrs. Burmah Probasco moved from the Lockney Rest Home March 25, to go to her home in Floydada.

Friday night of last week a dinner was given at the gymnasium, near the school house. Neighbors gathered and brought dishes to spread for a delicious supper. The occasion was the celebration of Kendall Cummings birthday.

Mrs. Darel Dunham passed away in N.W. Texas Hospital in Amarillo on Wednesday at 10:00 a.m. and services were said for her on this day here. Mrs. Dunham was a niece of Mrs. Mamie Wood of South Plains.

A visitor at the South Plains Baptist Church Sunday at S.S. and church was Veronica Galvan.

March 30:

Today, a lovely afternoon, a group of ten residents went to Plainview for ice cream and cokes at Wendy's and visited the Plains Nursing Home to see old friends there.

On Friday the 27th of March, some of the residents gathered in the afternoon for games of Bingo. Mary Jo Fielding was the winner for the blackout game. Prizes given were apples, bananas and cookies.

Everyone is doing well at the Lockney Nursing Home. We are looking forward to a lot of changes in the weeks to come in arts, crafts and games.

If there is anyone interested in volunteer work, please feel free to help us. We would be so happy.

Social Security News

By Terry J. Clements

Anyone who believes that he or she may be eligible for Social Security survivors benefits should apply for them as soon as possible after the worker's death. Application can be made at any Social Security office. In some cases, benefits may not be payable for any month before the month of application.

The application process can be quicker if certain evidence is available at the outset; however, the application should not be delayed simply because all the required evidence is not available. The people at the Social Security office can start the application process and suggest other evidence that may be submitted.

Some of the evidence needed to support an application for survivors benefits includes:

• The applicant's and the deceased worker's social security numbers.

• Proof of the applicant's age.

• Proof of marriage, if the person is applying for widow's or widower's benefits.

• Proof of the worker's death.

• Children's birth certificates if they are applying for benefits.

• The deceased worker's Form W-2 (or federal tax return if self-employed) for the most recent tax year.

• Proof of support if application is being made for benefits as a dependent parent or grandchild of the deceased worker.

Other evidence may also be required, depending on the kind of survivors benefits for which application is being made.

For more information you may contact us at 1401-B West 5th Street, or call us at 293-9623. Appointments can be arranged if desired.

Program developing leadership

Currently a target of proposed budget cuts in the Texas Legislature, the 4-H program remains one of the top youth organizations in the state and nation for turning out leaders—the future of America. Only about $8 of state general revenue is spent per 4-H member each year, and that investment goes to programs and activities that help boys and girls gain leadership and coping skills that will make them more productive citizens, says Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, which administers the 4-H program.

A luncheon of steak and trimmings for the public is planned by Lockney Senior Citizens for Thursday of next week, April 9. Serving will be from 11 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. at the Community Center (former Legion Hall).

The group's regular meeting is scheduled immediately following the luncheon or about 1 o'clock.

This Thursday (today), senior citizens will have a covered dish luncheon at noon. Individuals are encouraged to remain for games and the 3 p.m. meeting. Free blood pressure checks are expected to be available.

Gross proceeds from the Mexican dinner, served last Thursday, totaled Chairs are badly needed at the center. Anyone who would like to contribute one or more chairs of any type may take them to the center, 118 West College (former Lena Fay building). Volunteers continue to renovate the structure as the future senior citizen center.

Velma Harrison will continue to serve as hostess for the organization through April.

AIDS APPRAISED

Say, boss, does someone know something that I don't know about myself?

Sure, you can wonder why I ask. And I'll tell you. I received a letter the other day telling me about AIDS information seminar in Ralls on April 2 and in part it stated: "Your recommendations are requested regarding..." Then later on it added: "Your counsel is needed."

Now, boss, from where do I know about AIDS! Other than all the hype that is being given it by television and the print media.

They want to know my recommendations on how to prevent it spreading in Crosby County. Well, it's half-way simple—do nothing. No petting. No kissing. And certainly no what comes after a heady application of the first two. If memory serves me correctly, there is nothing more thrilling than arduous osculation. But after a while the excitement causes both the mind and the hands to wander to the point where all control is gone.

No, boss, petting and kissing won't bring on AIDS, but as I said they sure lead to what comes next and that can bring on AIDS if it happens to be with someone who has the disease or is a carrier.

I am not making light of such a dreaded and insidious disease. But as far as I can read abstinence is perhaps the most sure-fire preventative. And if one just can't possibly abstain, then caution there also becomes the better part of valor. Use something.

Recently on a national television program, a man, when asked the best prevention to catching AIDS, said bluntly, "for the women to keep their legs closed, and the men to keep their pants zipped up."

Yes, boss, that is a little blunt. But it's danged good advice, which I don't believe can be misinterpreted. It's the same advice I received when I was growing up in East Texas. Only then the taboo was against getting some girl pregnant. It's good advice, boss. For those two small actions can prevent many things, ranging from catching venereal diseases, to AIDS, to unwanted pregnancies, to sinning and even divorces. It's just a crude uncouth way to describe abstinence.

The American public as a whole has yet to grasp the total impact AIDS can have on our future. It is a disease which is nauseous to normally compassionate people. Brought on by mostly pervert actions, AIDS has a tendency to turn off people to whom such actions are foreign to their nature. They tend to feel "these people have made their bed, let them lie in it."

I know that I catch myself harboring that thought many times.

Yet, they are human beings and you can't just turn your back on them. And, too, there are now so many innocent victims of the disease that we must do all we can to combat its spread, even if only out of the selfish feeling of self-preservation.

In final retrospect, the only way I can see to help prevent its spread is to convince people that, despite the hue and cry of gays for specific rights, homosexuality is a sin according to the teachings of the Bible, is unnatural, and is unhealthy and just hope that the message gets across. As far as the innocent victims are concerned, we must demand, not ask, but demand, that all blood used in transfusions is pure and the public must insist that testing for AIDS be mandatory when an individual's actions can affect society. To me the protection of society as a whole is far more important than the protection of an individual's rights.

But, if anything as deadly as AIDS could have a silver lining, it certainly has delivered a kick in the pants to a society in which promiscuity has become almost a religion. At least now some people are thinking twice before exercising their freedom and doing their thing by jumping into bed with just about everyone they meet.

That is good, for it not only might slow down these ever increasing nefarious actions that are earning our country the infamous honor of being a decadent nation, but at the same time prevent the spreading of a disease which could well become the most deadly disease in the history of mankind. —Burnis Lawrence, Crosby County News

NOT SO BAD

A young college girl sent her parents the following letter:

"Dear Mom and Dad:"
"I'm sorry to be so long in writing, but all my writing paper was lost the night the dormitory burned down. I'm out of the hospital now, and the doctor says my eyesight should be back to normal sooner or later."

"The wonderful boy, Bill, who rescued me from the fire, kindly offered to share his little apartment with me until the dorm is rebuilt. He comes from a good family, so you won't be surprised when I tell you we are going to be married. In fact, you always wanted a grandchild, so you will be glad to know you will be grandparents by the end of the year."

Then she added this postscript.
"Please disregard the above. There was no fire. I haven't been in the hospital. I'm not pregnant. And I don't have a steady boyfriend. But I did get a D in French and an F in Chemistry, so I wanted to be sure you received this news in the proper perspective."

LOVE

In the New Testament there are many wonderful examples by which to live our lives each day. There are concepts such as meekness, kindness, longsuffering, caring, hospitality, gentleness, goodness, faith, and love to mention a few. Paul stated in I Corinthians 13:13 "And now abideth faith, hope, and charity (or love), these three but the greatest of these is love." What Paul was trying to tell us is that whatever we do in life, if it is to have worth, it must be done out of love.

We see a lot of things in the media called "love" that really should be translated "lust". Love is a concern for others that is demonstrated by the way we live and minister to people. Jesus said in the New Testament that we need to live as Matthew 25:35 states, "For I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in: Naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me. Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungred, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink? When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee? Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee? And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Jesus tells us that when we show love and concern for people it is just like we were ministering to the Lord himself.

In another place in the Gospel of Matthew some lawyers asked Jesus what was the greatest commandment. These lawyers were trying to trick the Lord in order to trap him, or make him say something that could be used against him. Jesus, in Matthew 22:37, said this, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets." Did you notice that the word love is prominent in both of the commandments? First, we are to love God above all else and then, second, we are to love our fellow man as much as we love ourselves. Throughout the Bible love is important and should be the motivation for all that we do in life.

If love is to be such an important part of the Christian life, we must diligently seek to love each other. Do you remember the song, "Give me that Ole' Time Religion"? A couple of verses that I remember singing as a boy were "It makes the Baptists love the Methodists", and "It makes me love everybody". I know that the Baptists love the Methodists in Floydada. We need to pray that for all of us that our love will increase and grow to include everyone in Floydada. Love is one of the most important ingredients of life, especially the life of a Christian. One song writer put it this way, "They will know that we are Christians by our love."

By far the largest annual gathering of "cotton folk" in Texas will take place in Lubbock April 8 through 11.

An estimated 6,000 ginners, producers, oil millers, compress operators and others in the industry will congregate in the city on those dates for the Texas Cotton Ginners Association (TCGA) convention and trade show and the annual meeting of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. (PCG).

Activities will begin April 8 with an 8:00 a.m. golf tournament at Hillcrest Country Club, and TCGA officials will stage the convention and trade show opening at 9:00 a.m. April 9 in Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

PCG President Myrl D. Mitchell of Lenora will open that organization's annual meeting at 9:30 a.m. in the west end of the Civic Center Banquet Room.

Featured speakers for the PCG meeting include Nick Hahn, executive vice president of Cotton Incorporated (CI), Raleigh, North Carolina, and National Cotton Council immediate past president and board chairman Lloyd Cline of Lamesa.

Hahn, a former CI president, recently returned to CI after a three-year absence. He is now shouldering responsibility for special CI projects as assigned by the CI board. His remarks to the PCG membership will center on CI's "Grown and Made in the USA."

Exhibits in the cotton trade show will be open from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday

New payment limitation directive

S.M. True of Plainview, president of the Texas Farm Bureau, says he had been assured by USDA officials that a new directive on payment limitation would give relief to farm operators.

Under the 1985 Farm Bill, there is a $50,000 payment limit per farm. Stricter interpretation this year by USDA had jeopardized some farmers who have certain business ties with close relatives.

True and Vernie Glasson, TFB director of Public Affairs, met Wednesday, March 25, in Washington with USDA officials to request that the interpretations be softened to give relief.

They met with Milton Hertz, administrator of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, and two key associates; and separately with Peter Myers, USDA deputy secretary.

True said both Hertz and Myers promised that USDA would issue a new directive "Within a few days" to all state ASCS offices, clarifying the matter. The new directive would be in addition to one issued March 25 to county ASCS executive directors and committeemen, True pointed out.

"Farm Bureau is not seeking relief for those who may be purposely subverting the intent of the law," True told the officials. "However, USDA's attempt to clamp down on abuses is causing serious concern for many legitimate farmers."

The Farm Bureau leaders cited several actual examples that have been in question. In each case, the USDA officials assured them that the payment eligibility would not be affected, True said.

These examples are:
 "(1) Cases where health problems resulted in disability of a father during a crop year. The father and son operate with their own financing, separate equipment, on separate farms. Due to the father's health problems (such as a heart attack), the son has to finish the crop.

"(2) Cases where father and son have separate operations and because of weather problems one of their farms dries up earlier and both operators plant the crop on that farm and then move over to the other farm to plant that crop."
 "(3) Cases where two brothers have separate bulk fuel tanks and one brother uses his truck's fuel tank to transfer his brother's fuel to his brother's tractor."

The TFB president also cited a personal example in which he and his brother had helped one another for over 30 years in putting in crops or harvesting crops as family members helping family members, yet having separate farm operations, separate financing and a minimal sharing of equipment.

The USDA officials assured True that both he and his brother will continue to be eligible for separate payment limitations.

The problems with interpretations surfaced in early March during the state ASCS committee meeting in San Antonio. Many producers have contacted the TFB on the matter.

True and other leaders in Texas have been busy in the past few weeks,

Tax laws tell farmers to get big or get out

By Marilyn Brown
 TAES Science Writer

Changes in federal tax laws over the past 10 years generally have been favorable to agricultural enterprises, but the Tax Reform Act of 1986 has given a new signal to commercial crop farmers: Get big or get out.

Farmers who normally have taxable incomes over $40,000 will have reduced taxes under the new bill, while those who earn less will have greater tax liabilities, according to Clair J. Nixon and James W. Richardson, agricultural economists with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

The 1986 tax law is the most radical change in federal income tax law in recent history, according to Nixon and Richardson, who recently studied how changes in the law will affect agriculture.

Using a computer model to simulate different sizes of farms of different regions of the country, the economists analyzed the tax outlooks under the new tax law.

One of the most sweeping changes under the bill results from the new passive loss rules, which prohibit deduction of losses in excess of farm income for nonfarmer investors. This could lure investors, who play an important role in money-losing enterprises (such as beef production), away from agriculture toward more profitable investments, Nixon and Richardson say.

If that happens, consumers can expect to pay more for some agricultural products.

"In the past, investors in agricultural enterprises have been able to deduct farm losses against other sources of income. The agriculture tax shelter activity has been especially attractive to high tax bracket individuals, who, before 1987, were able to take advantage of the many favorable tax benefits available to agricultural investments," the researchers say.

The passive law changes, in addition to the repeal of the capital gains deduction, will hit hardest in cattle feeding and orchard development, the researchers say.

The repeal of the long-term capital gains deduction also hurts individuals who sold their farmland on an installment basis, hoping to receive capital gains treatment throughout the term of the contract, Nixon and Richardson say.

This provision greatly increases the taxable incomes of dairy and beef producers, two members of the agricultural community who do not need any more financial adversity.

The elimination of the investment tax credit and changes in depreciation methods provide for a generally less generous investment climate than under previous law, the economists say.

Changes in depreciation or expensing methods will most directly affect farm operators with large investments in special purpose buildings, such as poultry houses, silos, and again, dairy barns.

"With the elimination of the investment tax credit, there is a strong likelihood that expensing (depreciation) will be heavily utilized by profitable farming operations," Nixon and Richardson say.

But expensing is not allowed for farm operations purchasing more than $210,000 of equipment annually. The amount of expensing is limited to the taxable income generated from farming.

Income averaging also has been repealed under the new bill, which will most directly affect those farm operators who have highly variable incomes from year to year, the researchers say.

The new tax law also does not bode well for some conservation efforts.

"The modification of soil and water conservation expenditure deduction will discourage some farm operators from future investment in conservation activities," the researchers say.

After 1986, expenditures for soil and water conservation activities are limited to expenses consistent with a conservation plan approved by the Soil Conservation Service or a comparable state agency.

Expenses such as cleaning or filling wetlands, land preparation for the installation or operation of center pivot irrigation systems, or clearing land are no longer deducted, and must be added to the taxpayer's basis in the land, the economists say.

Some of the provisions of the bill are favorable for at least some segments of agriculture.

Farmers whose debts to non-relatives are forgiven after April 9, 1986 will not have to report that as income. This will greatly reduce the income tax liabilities for solvent farmers who receive debt forgiveness from a lender, the researchers say.

In addition, any gain dairy farmers realize from the sale of dairy cattle under the U.S. Department of Agriculture dairy herd buyout program will be treated as capital gain income until September 1, 1987.

While the average annual taxable farm income for the crop farms studied declined as a result of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, the lower tax rate set forth in the bill is often offset by its other provisions.

Crop farmers with taxable incomes greater than $40,000 benefitted more from the reduction in the income tax rates than they lost from the elimination of the investment tax credit and depreciation rule changes.

The same is not true for crop farmers who earn less than $40,000. Because small-scale crop farmers have a relatively greater investment in machinery and generate less profit, the loss of the investment tax credit makes them relatively worse off.

COTTON MARKETING
 LOAN PRAISED

National Cotton Council Board Chairman Lloyd Cline told the House Wheat, Soybeans, and Feed Grains Subcommittee this week the marketing loan is working "quite well" for cotton. "In its first year, offtake of U.S. cotton is up 68 percent, cotton exports have more than tripled, carryover stocks have fallen 45 percent, and foreign cotton acreage has responded to our renewed price competitiveness by dropping 12 percent from the 1984-85 peak," Cline testified.

"And all this was accomplished while program costs were falling 29 percent." He asked the subcommittee for its support and leadership to keep the program intact, saying it has served the cotton industry as well as the nation.

Check for alfalfa weevils

By C. Mark Brown
 Extension Agent-Entomology [PM]
 Crosby-Floyd County

This is the time when producers need to examine their alfalfa for the presence of alfalfa weevil larvae.

With the beginning of warm spring weather, overwintering female weevils start laying eggs. The young larvae which hatch are very small, yellow-green in color and feed in the growing tips and developing buds. Older larvae are green with a white stripe down their back.

Alfalfa weevil activity is expected to peak in April in our area.

If larval numbers are high enough to reach economic threshold, one properly timed application should give control. Treatments should be applied in alfalfa two to six inches tall when two or more larvae are found per plant or when 30 to 50 percent of the plant terminals show weevil feeding damage.

Plants 7 to 14 inches tall should be treated when 25 or more weevil larvae per square foot are present. Several effective insecticides are registered for alfalfa weevil control. These include parathion, methyl parathion, Furadan flowable and Lorsban. Of these chemicals, parathion and methyl parathion are the least expensive; however, they have the shortest residual activity.

Because of the toxicity of these two chemicals, they are not recommended for ground application by the Extension Service.

The alfalfa weevil has only one generation per year and is only a pest of first cutting. After the larvae finish feeding, usually by mid-May in our area, the larva spins a net-like cocoon on the plant or in the soil debris. The adult weevil emerges from this cocoon and leaves the field. The weevils stay out of the alfalfa fields all summer and re-enter them in the fall. The adults overwinter in the field and the cycle then repeats itself.

Since the larvae are a pest of first cutting, it is sometimes possible to cut a little earlier than usual and avoid chemical treatments. Cutting results in exposure and a lack of food which kills many of the remaining larvae. Winter grazing by livestock also helps reduce weevil populations.

LEAF RUST IN WHEAT

Depending on weather conditions in the next few months, leaf rust could once again sharply reduce Texas wheat yields. According to Dr. Wendell Horne, Extension plant pathologist, infected wheat fields have been observed from South Texas to the Red River.

The severity of the disease in any given year will depend largely on moisture, since a high relative humidity is required for spores to germinate and penetrate the leaf surface. The disease causes a reduction in both number and size of kernels in the head.

Certain fungicides are effective against leaf rust; however, controlling the disease is a very costly process. Control is only practical when a producer has a yield potential of more than 40 bushels per acre, and leaf rust is the major limiting factor.

Timing of the fungicide application is critical. The most effective time to apply a fungicide is when the flag leaf (last leaf) is emerging. The flag leaf contributes greatly to grain filling and maturity, and should thus be protected from infection.

All commonly grown wheat varieties are susceptible to the rust fungus even though some offer a degree of resistance. More resistant varieties include: Sturdy, Bounty 309, Arthur 71, Abe, Caprock, and Lancota. Some of the more susceptible varieties include TAM 101, TAM 103, Vona, Caddo, Coker 68-15, and Lindon. The variety listing is for education purposes only, with no discrimination or endorsement intended.

RUSSIAN WHEAT APHID UPDATE

Presence of the Russian Wheat Aphid has now been confirmed in Crosby and Floyd, as well as Lubbock, Hale, and Bailey Counties. These infestations have currently been reported as light to moderate.

Dr. Tom Archer, research entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Lubbock, has been monitoring Russian wheat aphid populations at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center north of the airport. He found that populations on wheat planted at the Center has increased five-fold between early February and early March.

The Russian wheat aphid is similar in size and color to the greenbug. Unlike the greenbugs, however, it does not have visible cornicles or "tailpipes"; it does not have a dark green stripe on its back, and a side-view of the aphid reveals a "double-tail".

Leaves infested by the aphid curl up, much like soda straws, protecting the insects. The aphid injects a toxin as it feeds, causing whitish streaks in the leaves. Other symptoms include purpling of tillers, lateral growth of infested tillers, and brown circular patches from three to 20 feet in diameter.

Dr. W. Pat Morrison, Extension entomologist at Lubbock, reports that more than 100,000 acres of wheat on the High Plains had to be treated for the pest last year, at a cost to producers of about $6.00 an acre. The insect has been known to cause up to 60 percent loss in yield.

Treatment with a systemic insecticide has provided good control of the insect in our area. Scientists in other areas of the world which have studied the pest recommend treatment when 10 percent or more of the plants in a field are infested and the plants are beginning to joint.

Before making a treatment decision, producers should consider the yield potential of the field and the price the grain is bringing.

To Residents of the Lockney School District

Several people have asked my reasons for becoming a school board candidate after my two children had graduated from Lockney High School.

The answer is simple, I am proud of the education my offspring received from the Lockney school system and I would like for youngsters of the future to be afforded the same educational opportunities.

From a personal standpoint, I believe that I can be even more objective in weighing school decisions today than I would have been during the years my children were students.

I would like to emphasize that I certainly have no axe to grind, and the only reason I am offering myself as a trustee candidate is my interest in Lockney's youth of today and those of the future.

A resident of this community for over 30 years, I am a graduate of Lockney High School and am involved in farming.

If you, the people, see fit to elect me as one of your school trustees, I pledge to work toward a goal of continued quality education in the local school district.
