Truck overturns on West Highway 70

A loaded module truck owned by Lockney Coop, overturned at the intersection of Hwy. 70 and Hwy. 97, December 23, blocking both westbound lanes of traffic for seven hours.

The truck traveling east on Hwy. 70 was attempting a left turn onto Hwy. 97 and overturned at approximately 5:00 p.m. Tim Cooper, employee of the Lockney Coop, was driving but apparently sustained no injuries.

Members of the highway department, the city police, sheriff's department, and the Lockney Volunteer Fire Department helped route traffic until the highway was cleared. Fire department members also washed the gasoline from the highway that had leaked from the overturned truck. Because of the size and weight of the truck, a wrecker service from Amarillo was called. Arriving with large wreckers and air bags they lifted the truck and turned it to an upright position around 11:50 p.m. (See pictures.)

All those who worked the accident including: the Lockney Volunteer Fire Department, Lockney Police Department, Sheriff's Deputies, Highway Patrol, and the Highway Department wish to thank all the kind-hearted citizens who brought them coffee and food during the long cold hours they spent on the highway. A special thanks went out to Pizza Gold who sent a "bunch of still warm pizzas" at 12:30 a.m. to feed the hungry.

Partnership takes over Floydada Ford-Mercury

New faces have joined Reed Ford Mercury bringing lots of new enthusiasm and a new name, Floydada Ford-Mercury. Starting officially on Jan. 2, Laura Johnson joins in partnership with Ray Reed. "There will be lots of changes," said Laura of the new partnership. "We are keeping all the good things about the store that were around before and adding a lot of new positive ideas."

Originally from Pampa, Laura came to Texas Tech in 1980 and majored in advertising and marketing. After graduation in 1984 she went immediately to work for FM 99 in Lubbock, selling advertising. Still there today, Laura has a successful advertising career.

The almost empty showroom floor of Ford Mercury will very soon be full of cars and pickups. "We are getting 35 vehicles in mid-January," said Laura. "They will be all sorts of vehicles; F150's, F250's, Taurus, Thunderbirds, Crown Victorias, Bronco II's, Ranger pickups and Mercurys. Our goal is to sell all of them and increase our allocation. The more we have the more we can sell."

"To get our sales going strong we are getting a new salesman, Gary Winkle, moving here from Dimmitt. Gary is very knowledgeable about Ford products. He and his wife, Pat are very excited about moving to Floydada and living in a small town."

Pat Winkle will be the finance and insurance manager. Her job will be to choose the best interest rates from the many different finance companies available to her.

Not only a new salesman and finance department but also new mechanics will be brought in to help the one already there.

"One of our new mechanics, Albert Rivera, has had 10 years experience as a mechanic for a Ford dealership. Albert has a real good reputation. He is married, has two girls and lives in Ralls. He is on the school board and is a member of the volunteer fire department," said Laura.

"We are going to be very competitive. We are going to sell cars and service them. We will also have a strong used vehicle department. Our sales department will now be open every Saturday, beginning January 9."

Another year down and years to go...we hope.

At any rate it is that time of the year when we try to assess where we are, what we've done, where we go next, things like that.

In other words it is time for resolutions and predictions. In this corner we will pass on the resolutions business. We gave that up years ago as mostly a lost cause. We recommend it for everyone else, but for us it just doesn't seem to work. Too, it seems that if we know something needs changing we probably ought not wait until the New Year rolls around before trying to do something about it.

But the predictions business is something else. It's kind of fun to look back and see just how wrong we were. Accordingly we offer a few predictions for the coming political year, and a few comments on why.

Number One: Congressman Beau Boulter despite advice from friends and backers will decline to run for reelection to his present post and will instead stand for election to the United States Senate. He will run an exceedingly underfunded campaign against U.S. Senator Lloyd Bentsen and will probably lose. Bentsen will have all the money he wants, which will be more than he needs. He will turn out votes which otherwise would not turn out, which brings us to...

Prediction Number Two: After losing in Michigan and Iowa George Bush will win in New Hampshire and across the South. He will ultimately win the Republican nomination and will win the Presidency in November. But his margin in Texas will be much smaller than it would have been if Boulter had not chosen to tackle Bentsen. Bush will be

Deadline for primary filings is January 4

Next Monday, Jan. 4, is the final day for candidates to have their names placed on either the Democratic or Republican primary ballots.

Individuals for county positions may file with either the Democratic or Republican county chairman or at the county clerk's office.

Primaries are scheduled for Tuesday, March 8, and the second or run-off primary is to be held on Tuesday, April 12.

Primaries are early this year due to the "Super Tuesday" presidential preference primary throughout the South.

There have been no new county candidates since the first week of filing. Presently, 12 individuals are seeking the Democratic nomination to six positions.

One-half of the positions to be filled involved races at this point.

Five men — Connie D. Bearden, Hulon Carthel, Bill Hopper, Delmas McCormick and Sam Spence — are vying to become commissioner in Precinct One. Spence is the incumbent.

George Taylor and incumbent Thomas Warren are opponents for commissioner in Precinct Three.

Candidates without opposition at press time were Bill Hardin for county judge, Fred A. Cardinal for sheriff and Kay Crabtree for commissioner in Precinct Four.

There is no candidate to date for county attorney.

All the county candidates at present are running in the Democratic primary.

Places on the ballot are to be determined by drawing after the filing deadline.

forced to spend time and money in Texas that he ought not have to spend in his home state.

Prediction Number Three: The Boulder move against Bentsen will precipitate a veritable free-for-all within the 13th Congressional District in both Republican and Democratic camps. The folks who have expressed tentative intentions to enter the race if Boulder bows out are too numerous to list here, but the list would have to include Floyd County District Attorney Randy Holms on the Democratic side. Boulder's move will have impact in other races across the state as well. The last poll we saw from the public policy research department of Texas A&M University, indicated that for the first time in polling history more Texans say they intend to vote in Republican primaries than intend to vote in Democratic primaries. That is hard to believe, but may not be so hard to explain. On the Republican side Bush is identified in the Texas public mind as being the front runner, while on the Democratic side the lead is shared, more or less, between Gary Hart and Jessie Jackson. Not many Democrats whom we know, or know of, are happy with that situation, and the rest of the Democratic field doesn't offer much better, which perhaps explains Texans' present inclinations to invade the Republican primary in March. All of which brings us to still another.

Prediction Number Four: The Democrats will have a "brokered" National Convention, with no clear winner coming out of the primaries. We just can't see the Democratic party, made up for the most part by decent, hard working Americans, knowingly nominating a liar and cheat like Gary Hart as their choice to be President of the United States. Nor can we see Jessie coming any closer to the crown than he now is. But he could well throw his support to Hart at the convention with the two of them then having the power to broker the outcome. Neither Gore nor Babbitt, both of whom in a moment of nervousness and candor, rushed to confess their previous experiences with "pot," are likely to improve their chances. That leaves only Simon and the guy from Massachusetts, or someplace up there. So it may well be that the man, or woman, who ultimately heads the Democratic ticket is not now in the race.

Our next to last prediction is that the voter turnout in Precinct One of Floyd County will be higher than usual in the March Primary, and our very last prediction is that some of our predictions will turn out right.

Floyd and Briscoe offices among computer recipients

Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) has completed one of the largest computer automation projects in the country. FmHA, the "major credit agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture," has installed AT&T computer systems in some 2,300 state, county and district offices as well as the national office in Washington and the finance office in St. Louis, Mo.

The systems now include over 6,000 individual work station terminals.

Included in the systems is a computer in the Floyd and Briscoe office in Floydada.

"The major benefit of the system will be to improve FmHA's service to family farmers and rural residents," local personnel say. "The system will allow FmHA to perform many of its functions with greater speed and accuracy."

The nationwide installation was completed in November when the final terminal was delivered to the FmHA county office in Clarendon, Tex. Official recognition of the event is being marked by a nationwide open house in FmHA offices across the country to demonstrate the new equipment.

Although the system will perform a multitude of sophisticated functions, one of the most important is the ability to assist family farmers with their financial analysis. Software is available which, after plugging in basic information, can help both the borrower and the FmHA county supervisor determine which management options will produce the most beneficial results.

The computer will also help FmHA's key lending officials, the county supervisors, to process loan applications quicker and more efficiently. Already, county offices can interact with the main frame computers in Kansas City to review, change and update borrower files. The system also allows electronic mail communications among national, state and district offices across the country.

The automation effort began in 1984 when a Price Waterhouse study indicated that automation of FmHA offices would be of substantial benefit. Electronic Data Systems (EDS) was awarded the contract in September 1985.

The first deliveries of AT&T 3B2 mini computers and PC 6300s were made in January 1986. The cost of the nationwide system is about $67 million.

Staff of the Floyd-Briscoe office includes Becky Via, county supervisor; Rick Hayter, assistant county supervisor; Laura Turner, county office assistant; and Terry Nelson, county office clerk.

WIC program assists mothers

The WIC program is a federally and state funded supplemental food program for pregnant and breastfeeding women, and children from birth to age 5. Those that qualify for the program can get food vouchers to exchange at the grocery store for milk, eggs, cheese, beans, juice, adult cereal, baby cereal and iron-fortified infant formula.

A participant can qualify for the WIC Program if they show some sort of nutritional need and if they meet income standards. Recently the income standards were raised by the State WIC office, so now more people can qualify for the program.

When a woman or child comes in for their WIC appointment, WIC staff will weigh and measure them, and ask them to list everything they ate and drank in the last 24 hours. The staff will also test their blood for hematocrit to see if they have iron levels that are too low.

WIC foods provide high sources of calcium, iron, vitamin C and protein. WIC participants pick up their food vouchers monthly from the WIC office. Along with the food vouchers, WIC staff also provide a different nutrition education lesson each month. Participants can learn about various aspects of nutrition from these lessons, so that the good habits taught by the WIC program can continue even after the participants no longer qualify.

In Floyd County, the WIC Program office is located in the South Plains Health Provider clinic at 319 S. Main Street. The WIC staff are there Tuesdays and Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. For more information or to set up an appointment please go by the clinic or call 983-5371.

Safety tips offered for holiday

Major W.J. Cawthon, regional commander of the Texas Department of Public Safety, says, "Unlike last New Year's holiday, this New Year holiday period will make for a long weekend for many Texas motorists. The additional highway traffic and the traditional New Year celebrations could lead to tragedy for some Texas motorists."

Major Cawthon says, "All available Department of Public Safety troopers will be on patrol throughout the holiday period in an effort to prevent traffic accidents and fatalities. The troopers will be watching for traffic violators, especially the drunk drivers, which is the leading cause of traffic fatalities in the state of Texas. Department of Public Safety Troopers will also be available to assist motorists with any problem they might have."

Major Cawthon stated, "If the campaign to reduce fatalities is to be successful, then motorists must do their part." He suggested that adequate travel time be budgeted in holiday plans, stop frequently and rest, reduce speed for road construction and drive defensively, always watching out for the other driver's mistakes, buckle up and don't drink and drive.

Major Cawthon also stated, "If you are going to host a New Year's party, you need to be a responsible host." He offered these suggestions: Non-alcohol beverages should be made available for guests, don't center the party around alcohol, don't double up on drinks and don't rush the refills, have food available and above all do not allow anyone who has had too much to drink drive.

Icy roads keep police busy

Panhandle residents woke on Christmas morning to a covering of white consisting of snow, ice or both.

While most residents stayed indoors police were still kept busy from a few who ventured out onto icy roads.

Starting with the snow and ice packed roads on Dec. 15, police investigated a minor accident at 5:15 p.m. on East Grover. The driver of an Olds Cutlass failed to control his vehicle on the ice and slid into a Chev. pickup parked on East Grover.

On Dec. 16 at 9:00 a.m. the driver of a Chev. Suburban attempting to park in front of Allsups slid on the ice into the Ford pickup in the next parking space.

Also on Dec. 16, at 5:18 p.m. a GMC pickup was turning right onto East Price off N. 12th, slid on the ice and hit the left front corner of a Chev. pickup. There was minor damage.

On Dec. 24, a Chev. Camaro headed north on S. Wall lost control on the ice and hit the right saddle tank and steps of a conventional truck parked in the dirt median between lanes.

On Christmas day at 6:50 p.m. a Chev. pickup, southbound on US 70 lost control on the curve at the first intersection entering the city. The vehicle spun sideways and hit a telephone pole on the east side of the street. The pole was damaged and also damaged the line connections at ground level.

NON-WEATHER RELATED ACCIDENTS

Weather was not a factor in all the accidents investigated by city police.

Dec. 20, a Ford pickup was backing from a parking stall in the parking lot of Dairy Queen and backed into a Chrysler LeBaron breaking the LeBaron's stop light lens.

Dec. 24, a Chev. Impala traveling southbound on Menefee turned east to cross Hwy. 62 and failed to yield right of way to a Mack truck heading SW on 62. The tractor hit the Chevrolet on the left door. The driver of the Chevrolet suffered bruises and abrasions but walked away. Both vehicles were driven away later.

HOLIDAY BURGLARIES AND THEFTS

On Dec. 24 a residence in the 200 block of West Georgia was reported burglarized sometime on Dec. 22. Stolen were children's clothes and toys.

Dec. 26 the owner of a storage shed in the 400 block of West Jackson reported the shed had been burglarized. The shed was discovered burglarized on Dec. 25. Stolen were sockets, a saw and a skill.

Residents of a home in the 200 block of East Hallie say that sometime between December 20 and 21 a large amount of stereo equipment and jewelry was stolen.

On Dec. 22, Fast Freddie's reported a plate glass window was broken about 5:50 p.m.

Dec. 25 at 1:43 a.m. city police discovered a car high centered on a curb in front of Dairy Queen. It appeared to police the vehicle had been involved in an accident but there was no one around. Part of the vehicle was in the roadway and it was impounded. Later city police were informed the car had been reported stolen to the Sheriff's Department later the same day.

Two accidents were investigated by city officers on December 29. The first, occurring at approximately 11:30 a.m., resulted in minor damage to a southbound 1987 Buick and an eastbound 1975 Toyota at the intersection of 5th and Mississippi.

The second accident, at around 12:00 noon, resulted in "substantial damage" to both vehicles according to a city police official. An eastbound 1975 Buick and a northbound 1981 GMC pickup were involved in the collision. No injuries were reported in either accident.

SCHOOL BUS VANDALIZED

Vandalism to a school bus parked at A.B. Duncan Elementary School was also reported and investigated on December 29. The bus was the victim of BB gun wielding youths.

Nance-Masciola pledge nuptial vows

Amy Jill Nance of Lockney became the bride of Phillip James Masciola of Alexandria, Virginia on December 19 at the Ambiance in Lubbock. The couple chose to wed in December as the parents of both were also united in December ceremonies. Officiating over the 5:00 p.m. ceremony was Delvin Bybee of Lockney, a Baptist minister.

The bride is the daughter of Joe and Peggy Nance of Lockney. She was a graduate of Lockney High School and attended International Business College in Lubbock for six months.

The groom is the son of Col. Mario and Mary Jane Masciola of Alexandria, Virginia. He was a graduate of Mt. Vernon High School and Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University. He is presently a pilot in the U.S. Air Force.

Centering the nuptial area were two candelabras tied with red satin bows, wreaths of holly and baskets of poinsettias.

The bride was escorted to the altar area and given in marriage by her father. For her dress, the bride chose a white satin gown designed by Alfredo Angelo. The open V-neckline of the bodice was adorned with Venise lace and seed pearls and the full length Juliet sleeves of satin and lace were accented with seed pearls and sparkling sequins. A soft midline inset of satin and lace allowed the full length ball gown skirt to fall softly into a chapel length train.

To complete her ensemble, the bride chose a Launette bridal veil. A V-shaped headband featured side interests of seed pearls and silk. The waltz length illusion veil fell from a pouf at the back of the headpiece.

The bridal bouquet was made up of white silk roses and miniature red carnations accented with a touch of holly tied with white satin ribbon trailing from the bouquet.

Lucinda Mahagan of Lockney served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Christy Coffman of Lockney and Stacy Kimberlin of Canyon. Sarah James of Hereford, niece of the bride, served as flower girl. The attendants were attired in red satin dresses with puffed sleeves and open necklines. They each carried holly wreaths tied with white satin ribbon.

Eric Perlman of Larchmont, New York, served as best man. Groomsmen were Michael Masciola, brother of the groom from Westfield, Massachusetts, and Phil Rosnik of Burbank, California.

Registering wedding guests was Jody Stansell, sister of the bride. Ross James of Hereford, brother-in-law of the bride, seated guests.

Musical selections for the wedding included "Doubly Good to You," sung by Kellye Hickman of Lubbock and "The Lord's Prayer" vocalized by Don Barrick of Lockney. Marjorie Ferguson of Lockney accompanied the soloists on the organ.

A dinner reception followed the ceremony and was held in the blue room of the Ambiance. Guests were seated at tables covered with blue and white tablecloths and were centered with hurricane lamps holding gold candles.

The bride's table covered with a blue cloth, was highlighted with a red and white poinsettia surrounded with homemade Christmas ornaments. The bride, groom and their parents were seated at the bride's table.

The wedding cake, which sat before an old fashioned Christmas tree, was a traditional white three-tiered cake decorated with white roses on each tier and holly greenery around the bottom.

The bride chose a blue silk skirt and blouse as her traveling attire.

The bride and groom will be traveling to Washington, D.C. and AnaCapri, Italy, for their honeymoon and will return on January 3 to make their home in Lubbock until May 20 when they will travel to Sembach, Germany, for a four-year tour of duty.

Pre-nuptial courtesies honoring the couple included a shower in the First Baptist Church Garden Room in Lockney; and a lingerie shower, hosted by Barbara and Christy Coffman in their country home.

Refreshments of red punch, cookies, sandwiches, candy and cake were served to all. Thanks to the family members for bringing such delicious refreshments.

Tuesday, the day care children came and sang carols for the residents. They always enjoy the children. At 2:30 was Bible study, taken from John 16: 25-33, "Be of good cheer." At 6:15 the adults from the First Baptist came and sang carols. We appreciate all who came to share.

In Times Like These... By Mary Jo Fielding

The dinner crowd at the San Marco restaurant in the Pacific Ocean resort town of Vina del Mar was thinning out at 11 p.m. when there was a stir at the door. White-coated waiters lined up and after a few security men had glanced casually around the brightly lit room, in walked General Augusto Pinochet, Chile's military dictator for the past 14 years.

It was not an awesome event. Dressed in a gray business suit, Pinochet cocked his head, smiled slightly, gave a regal wave and disappeared into a small private dining room with a few associates. Half a dozen diners stood to cheer and ten or so others applauded but most stayed silent. Within a minute, everyone had turned back to the seafood and wine.

It is a shock for an American to see a head of state appear so nonchalantly in public — especially only a few months after an assassination attempt — and to see him greeted so indifferently. But the scenes in Vina are symbolic of Chile's political life today.

Pinochet is not popular, but neither is he detested. He scares a bare 20 percent approval rating in Chile's public-opinion polls. Yet few people are making serious attempts to oust him. Gentle wrist slaps from the Reagan administration, conveyed by an outspoken new ambassador, have cheered human rights activists but have had no other noticeable impact.

Census Bureau conducting 1987 agriculture census

Farm operators of Texas and the nation are receiving forms to complete in the upcoming 1987 Census of Agriculture. Forms are being mailed to individual farmers and ranchers in late December by the Commerce Department's Census Bureau.

"The agriculture census will focus on key information, including the number of farms, farm size, operator characteristics, production, sales, and financial health," says Dr. Carl Anderson, agricultural economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

This is one of the 1987 Economic Censuses that will provide timely details of the manufacturing, mining, construction industries, retail and wholesale trades, service industries and transportation segments of the nation's economy.

The census is designed to provide the U.S. Department of Agriculture with data to define problem areas and current information to help farmers across the nation. Also through these statistics farm organizations and others can plan programs for farm operation improvements.

"Much of the information collected, such as land use and ownership, crop acreage, and numbers of livestock, will be similar to the 1982 census," Anderson says.

The Census Bureau obtained advice from agricultural organizations and universities and added new questions on all production expenses, income from farm related sources, payments from farm program participation and conservation reserve program acreage to give a better view of the current farm financial situation.

Farmers are asked to return the forms by Feb. 1, 1988, and to be sure the information is complete, timely and accurate. General summarized census information results will be made available to farm broadcasters and editors to share with their producer audiences.

Information provided by individual farm operators is held confidential by law. Data are summarized to prevent identification of individual farms, Anderson says. Other government agencies do not have access to the individual reports, he points out.

Wind stripcropping seminar set January 12

Native West Texan Wilson Scaling, chief of the United States Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service in Washington, D.C., will headline a wind stripcropping seminar Jan. 12 in Lubbock.

Scaling will discuss national issues and legislation affecting soil conservation programs, especially the 1985 Food Security Act (FSA) which mandates that farmers institute adequate conservation practices to be eligible for federal subsidy programs.

He will speak at an 11:30 a.m. luncheon. The seminar, which begins with registration at 8 a.m., will be at the Holiday Inn Civic Center. The luncheon will be in the Cotton Room and the program will be in the Petroleum Room.

The free seminar is to provide Great Plains farmers with information about wind stripcropping.

Wind stripcropping, the practice of interspersing narrow strips of grasses in crops to serve as wind erosion barriers, is a feasible way to comply with the FSA, according to a three-year demonstration by the Texas Tech University College of Agricultural Sciences. Wind stripcropping can block destructive wind erosion, cut down on replantings due to wind damage and increase total yield.

Individuals who plan to attend the seminar should notify the Department of Plant and Soil Science by Jan. 8, 1988, so arrangements can be made.

For more information, contact the Texas Tech Department of Plant and Soil Science, P.O. Box 4169, Texas Tech, Lubbock, Texas 79409, (806) 742-2837 or the SCS, 1205 Texas Ave., Room 424, Lubbock, Texas 79401, (806) 743-7644.

Requirements of mineral for grazing cattle vary with breed, season and geography

By Marilyn Brown
TAES Science Writer

Mineral deficiencies in grazing cattle, even before they become symptomatic, result in lowered feed consumption, which in turn reduces cow condition, production, and calf weaning weights.

These responses occur long before clinical symptoms from mineral deficiencies are displayed and in many cases may not be recognizable until weaning weights are lower than expected, says L. Wayne Greene, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station animal scientist.

For example, grass tetany, a deadly magnesium deficiency that occurs when the potassium content of early season grasses is high, is considered to be the number one cow killer in the United States. Even so, subclinical deficiencies of magnesium probably outweigh the losses from grass tetany.

Greene says the range in mineral requirements is highly variable and dependent upon the physiological state of the animal, as well as mineral interactions in the digestive tract or the dietary availability of minerals from the different feedstuffs.

A lactating cow, for example, is at high risk for grass tetany because her requirement for magnesium doubles as she begins lactation. Her calcium needs rise dramatically as well.

Forage mineral composition changes with the stage of plant growth, fertilization, and environmental conditions, Greene says.

Research in Greene's lab shows that phosphorus, magnesium and potassium forage concentrations vary primarily with forage maturity, and, thus, change seasonally. Also, concentrations in live tissue are higher than in dead tissue.

Calcium concentrations are found to be affected more by forage species than by tissue age or maturity. Magnesium concentrations vary significantly as a function of tissue type, species, and date.

Forage mineral concentrations can be changed by fertilization, but that practice is not economical, Greene says. Fertilizer should be applied to maximize forage growth, and minerals should be supplemented to complement the forage mineral supply, he says.

Identifying the mineral status of grazing cows is an extremely difficult task, Greene says, because an assessment of feed intake in a grazing environment is infeasible.

While serum mineral analysis can provide an accurate status for such minerals as magnesium, phosphorus, and calcium, others, especially the microminerals, can best be determined through a liver biopsy. But a liver biopsy is hardly a practical practice for the pasture.

The best plan for producers, then, Greene says, is to identify the concentration of minerals in the forage and design specific supplementation programs.

However, quite often when producers realize cows are in poor condition or weaning weights are lower than expected, they increase energy and protein supplementations even though mineral deficiencies are the root of the problem.

Based upon the cost of mineral, energy, and protein supplementation programs, it is much more economical to solve mineral deficiencies, Greene says.

"The key to a successful mineral supplementation program is to get the needed minerals into the animal's system," Greene says. "The most elaborate and complete mineral supplement will not do the job if it is not consumed in adequate quantities," he says.

Palatability is a major problem especially with free-choice salt mixtures. Adding energy or protein to the salt may enhance palatability, as may flavoring agents.

Geographic location also must be considered, since different regions have different mineral levels in the soil and, thus, in the forage.

Cattle breed may have a bearing as well; for example, cows with Angus breeding have a much higher susceptibility to grass tetany than do Brahman-bred cattle. Herefords are intermediate.

Breed differences are believed to be a function of the relative size of the digestive tract and of grazing behavior.

How to avoid going broke

To avoid "going broke," farmers should pay particular attention to areas of financial management that frequently pose pitfalls to expanding businesses or those having cash flow problems, suggests Dr. Wayne Hayenga, economist-management with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

"Don't expand beyond your cash flow, don't incur more debt or other financial obligations than your income will handle.

"Do be certain to maintain adequate working capital, which by definition, is the difference between your current assets and current liabilities.

"Don't invest too much capital in fixed and intermediate-term assets at the expense of current assets. Capital invested in current assets generally is more profitable than money invested in fixed assets. In addition, debts and other current obligations of the business have to be paid out of current assets, not fixed assets.

"Do give high priority to converting your sales into cash and maintaining close control of inventories. Both are current assets but you can't pay bills with either receivable or inventories. To provide current, accurate financial information, all receivables should be aged on a monthly basis.

"Don't live on depreciation. A common mistake is the failure to maintain and replace assets—especially intermediate-term assets such as machinery and trucks—that are essential for business operation. Living on depreciation paints an unrealistic picture of your current asset situation and serious trouble can result when the assets have to be replaced and you find yourself short on capital.

"Do keep your lenders informed of developments that affect your growth projections. Early detection of problems can help to avert them or minimize their impact.

"Don't liquidate current assets to finance fixed assets. While there are exceptions to this rule, they need to be tempered by circumstances.

Volunteers can deduct certain expenses

Volunteer workers should be aware that certain out-of-pocket expenses are tax deductible, says Dr. Wayne Hayenga, an economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Expenses that qualify as deductions include these:

—Unreimbursed travel expenses, including travel expenses to and from the place of operation, and meals and lodging on a trip away from home for the organization, provided the expenses are incurred for an organization which authorizes your travel.

—Actual operating costs of your car in volunteer work, or a flat mileage rate of 12 cents per mile, whichever is greater. If expenses for gasoline, oil, tolls and parking fees are greater than the standard rate, you may deduct actual expenses. You may not deduct any part of general repair and maintenance expenses, insurance or depreciation.

—Cost of telephone calls incurred in conducting the volunteer work.

—Cost of materials and supplies furnished by the volunteer in conducting the volunteer work, such as stationery and postage.

—Convention expenses of official delegates to conventions.

Non-deductible items include the value of volunteer time or service and child care expenses incurred by volunteer work.

Hayenga advises volunteers to keep good records of expenses incurred in carrying out volunteer work. Unreimbursed expenses for volunteer work are deductible on the "Contributions" section of Schedule A for taxpayers who itemize their expenses.

Unlike miscellaneous deductions which are deductible only to the extent to which they exceed 2 percent of adjusted gross income, deductions for contributions remain fully deductible under the new tax law, Hayenga points out.

Additional information on unreimbursed expenses of volunteers may be found in IRS Publication 17, "Your Federal Income tax for Individuals," IRS Publication 526, "Charitable Contributions," and other tax guides.

Irrigation conflagration will stress efficiency in Amarillo meet

Producers who farm some four million acres of irrigated crop and pastureland, on the Texas High Plains can learn techniques and innovations to obtain the maximum efficiency from their irrigation equipment at a conference in Amarillo on Jan. 5.

The annual High Plains Irrigation Conference will be held that day at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center, 6500 Amarillo Blvd. West.

For more than a decade, the daylong program each January has helped area producers make the most effective use of their water, said Leon New, irrigation specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and conference coordinator.

"This conference has always focused upon the major concerns of our irrigators," New said. "This year we'll be looking at improved ways irrigation equipment can be used," he said.

The conference will begin with registration and an exhibit of equipment and supplies at 8:30 a.m. At 9:25 a.m., Paul Gross, district Extension director, will outline the program objectives.

Jack Musick, agricultural engineer with USDA-Agricultural Research Service, Bushland, will discuss efficient furrow irrigation methods. New will explain ways to refine existing irrigation systems to meet new demands.

Ways to adapt center pivot systems to provide effective chemigation will be explained by Dr. Allen Knutson, Extension entomologist for Castro County. The economic potential of center pivot irrigation will be analyzed by Dr. Wyatt Harmon, agricultural economist with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

A popular feature of the annual conferences will conclude the program as a panel of producers relate innovations, problems and successes in their own application of irrigation methods and equipment.

Cow's performance related to her nutritional status

The way a cow is handled during the winter will have an influence on a calf's future and next year's calf crop, says Dr. Larry L. Boleman, Extension beef cattle specialist.

"The cow's reproductive performance and the health and weaning weight of her calf is greatly influenced by her nutritional status throughout the year," says Boleman, a specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

If a cow is allowed to calve in a poor or thin body condition, the odds are against her to maintain a 12-month calving interval.

Cattle are usually fed hay during the winter, but if not enough energy is supplied by the hay, additional grains should be given.

"Ranchers should have their hay tested to obtain the real protein content," Boleman suggests. "This enables the producer to feed cattle without over or under feeding."

Producers also should make allowances considering the weather conditions and realize that as temperatures drop and wind and rain increases, nutritional needs of cattle increase as much as 20 percent.

A dry pregnant cow can usually live on 20 pounds of average quality hay per day during the winter. If the quality of hay is less or it is a cold wet winter, an additional 2-3 pounds of supplement should be fed daily.

A cow nursing a calf needs about 5-6 pounds of supplement with 22 pounds of hay per winter day. If weather conditions are bad, the supplement should be increased to 7-8 pounds per day.

Shelter may be considered when cattle have to face severe winter conditions. A windbreak may be sufficient, but overhead cover is important during heavy rains, Boleman says.

Getting Texas' goat in a cook-off

By Jo Maeder

When I get away from New York I like to really get away. So I recently trotted down to Brady, Texas, to preside as a judge in the 14th Annual World Championship Barbecued Goat Cook-off.

Brady is the official heart of Texas and it has a mayor, H. L. Gober Jr., who outdoes Hizzoner Mayor Koch in flamboyance. He's tall and rugged and he punctuates almost every sentence with a hearty laugh. "Brady is where men are men and the women are proud of it," he says.

He made a point of introducing "the little lady from the Red Apple," as he kept putting it, to all the local movers and shakers. One of them was Gary Brown, the city manager of Floydada, and the man who conceived the very first goat cook-off in 1973.

"We were trying to raise money for the Jaycees and I said we oughta do a goat cook-off since Brady is the goat capital of the world," he explained.

It seems to be that. The ratio of goats to humans is reported to be about 1,000 to one in these parts. It's a wonder the goats don't barbecue the people.

"Well, the first goat cook-off had 25 cookers," Mr. Brown continued. (Cookers is the correct form here. Cooks isn't.) "We didn't get any help. Had to kill the goats and haul the wood ourselves."

Today the cook-off is the talk of Texas, with 125 cookers vying for the $250 first prize and World Goat Bragging Rights every year. They've come from as far away as Alaska and South Africa and in teams of up to 30. They bring "pit" rigs that look like nuclear missileheads. Huge. They transport them in horse trailers.

In addition to the goat cook-off there are competitions for washer pitchin', goal pill flippin' — that's like cow chip chuckin' — and tobacco spittin'.

I spoke to the second place winner of the tobacco spittin' event's women's division, Mickey Baird, a teacher at Western Texas College, as she was cleansing her mouth with Lone Star and Beech-Nut, and asked her about her technique. "Ah jest rare back and spit," she said.

But back to the cook-off. According to Sue Sims, wife of State Sen. Bill Sims and proprietor of The Pan Tree gourmet cook shop in San Angelo, "goat is much tougher than lamb. It needs to be marinated first, then cooked at a low temperature for a long time. And moisture. Seal in the heat with foil if it's on an open fire." One other tip. Don't ever use green wood. It gives the goat a kerosene taste.

And what does one look for in prize goat? The official criteria:

1. It's got to be tender.
2. It's got to be unquestionably goat. Not too "barnyard," but not disguised with a lot of "flavorin'."
3. It's got to have that old twang to it.

Most of the contestants were pretty tightlipped about their recipes. This year's first place winners were first time entrants and called themselves Las Fantasmas Andando, The Walking Ghosts. All they'd tell me was that the major ingredient was "Secret Sauce No. 6."

But one jovial group, the Chuckwagon Gang, who won in the Showmanship category, was willing to share their recipe. Cook it up with some sour-dough biscuits and some baked beans on the side and you have one observer described as "like frog legs—a real delicatessen."

SALT BRINE GOAT

Courtesy of Donnie Bybee, Lockney

Cut goat into pieces like anything else. Leg, Ribs, Etc. Whatever.

Rub all over with salt.

Soak in water for 24 hours.

Rub with mustard and lemon juice. Let set 3 to 4 hours.

Wash off good.

Wrap in foil. Cook over open fire for 3 hours, 15 minutes.

Open up foil. Bones should come right off.

Baste real good with a mixture of honey and cornstarch and water, as you like.

Leave foil open and cook a little longer. At this point everybody will be nibbling at goat anyway, and group consensus should determine exactly when done.

PUCT approves fuel-cost credit

Southwestern Public Service Company's (SPS) Texas retail customers will begin receiving in their January bills a one-time $11.2 million fuel-cost credit. The refund was approved Thursday by the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUCT).

The "average" residential customer, based on monthly consumption of 600 kilowatt-hours, will receive about a $10 credit, said Sam Hunter, SPS vice president of rates and economic research. The refund will include interest at an annual rate of 11.7 percent.

Hunter said lower costs for coal and natural gas, which are major expenses in generating electricity, and mild summer temperatures, which allowed the company to operate only its most efficient power plants, made the refund possible.

AFDC payments delayed in January

The Texas Department of Human Services announced that the checks to the recipients of the Aid to Families With Dependent Children (AFDC) program will not be mailed from Austin until the first working day after the federal funds become available to the state, which will be January 4. Based on past experience, mail from Austin takes about five days to reach some addresses in the Panhandle. It is conceivable that the checks will not reach the AFDC recipient families until January 11.

The department is concerned that many of the families who depend on these payments will be unable to pay utility bills and rent in time to avoid disconnection of services or eviction from their homes.

Community agencies and groups who provide emergency services are also concerned because there is not enough funds to assist the number of families who may need help due to the delayed payments.

The department is asking utility companies and rental agents to take this delay into consideration and allow some additional time for payments.

Drunk driving fatalities down five percent

Drunk driver fatalities in Texas are decreasing.

Findings of a study made for the highway department based on post mortem examinations indicate the percentage of intoxicated drivers fatally injured in traffic accidents dropped from 51 percent in 1983 to 46 percent in 1986.

The Texas Transportation Institute of Texas A&M University studied medical examiners' blood-alcohol concentration tests from 2,300 driver fatalities during the 1983-1986 period.

While driving while intoxicated fatalities in Texas decreased, they still were above the national average. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration estimates fatally injured drivers who were legally intoxicated nationwide declined from 42 percent in 1983 to 39 percent in 1986.

Other findings suggest many fatally injured drivers were more than just social drinkers. The average blood-alcohol concentration of drivers killed in 1986 who were above the 0.10 legal intoxication limit was over twice that limit in 0.209.

Legally intoxicated driver fatalities were highest among males and drivers in their 20s. A high proportion resulted from single vehicle accidents and accidents occurring late at night and early in the morning.

The study found that the level of intoxication among drunk driver fatalities did not vary significantly by either the age or the sex of the victim. For example, males and females had almost identical blood alcohol concentrations.

Although drivers 18 years old and younger were below the legal drinking age in Texas during the entire study period, roughly 20 percent of the driver fatalities in that age group proved to be legally intoxicated.

Drivers in the 19-20 age group were below the minimum drinking age in one year of the study, 1986. The percentage of intoxicated driver fatalities in that age group dropped from 55 percent in 1985 to 44 percent in 1986. While the decrease is noteworthy, Nancy Hatfield, the principal researcher in the study, said it appears that legal restrictions on the purchase and consumption of alcohol are not sufficient to eliminate drinking and driving among many young people.

Motorcycle operators were included for the first time in 1986, with results similar to those observed for motor vehicle operators. The average blood-alcohol concentration level for DWI motorcyclists, however, was lower, at 0.189 than for car and truck drivers, 0.209.

Hatfield noted a marked improvement in reporting alcohol involvement in traffic accident reports. In the first three years of the study, reports on less than 30 percent of the accidents involving legally intoxicated drivers had alcohol cited as a contributing factor. In 1986 the proportion was 48 percent.

Hatfield said this trend is encouraging, but the underreporting of alcohol involvement in accident reports remains a problem.

The study stressed the need for complete blood-alcohol concentration testing and reporting for all driver fatalities.

"Furthermore, until data are available for all drivers involved in fatal accidents, not just those who were fatally injured themselves, the full extent of drunk driving problem will never be known," Hatfield said.

Gary Trietsch, state safety and traffic operations engineer, said, "We're pleased to see reduction in drunk driving fatalities in Texas and commend law enforcement agencies for improvement in reporting alcohol involvement in traffic accident reports. However, much remains to be done to continue reducing the drinking problem on our highways."

November highway patrol report

Capt. L.A. Reinhart, district supervisor of the Lubbock Highway Patrol District comprising of 21 counties said, "For the month of November, our troopers investigated four fatal accidents, 48 personal injury accidents, and 60 property damage accidents. There were five persons killed and 48 persons injured in these accidents.

Sgt. Glenn Fant of Crosbyton stated, "In Floyd County, our troopers investigated no fatal accidents, one personal injury accident and one property damage accident in the month of November. No person was killed and one person was injured in these accidents.

'The Hopes and Fears of all the Years'

By Jack Gist

Many years ago a minister from Boston stood on a hill in the Holy Land. The moon shone down on a village below and he wrote these famous words:

O little town of Bethlehem
How still we see thee lie!
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep
The silent stars go by.

The stars had done by for untold centuries. For millions of years the heavens turned, planets circled, stars were coldly bright. Night had fallen countless times. Like a blanket, putting all to sleep. Noting new in this. Then why did he continue his poem, and write:

Yet in thy dark streets shineth
The everlasting light.
The hopes and fears of all the years
Are met in thee tonight.

Why? Because there was a night the Child was born. A child who was different. Did he really answer "the hopes and fears of all the years?" What do you hope for? Happiness. What do you fear? The things that take it away. Children make us happy. But they grow up. Times is a thief. We are happy. I hope during this Christmastime, right now. But next year? Life, health, friends and family - these fill us with joy. But separation, sickness, death - they are waiting, sure to come with them.

There is only one answer to our search for happiness. Find someone who heals forever. Who lives beyond time. Who brings us together. Who speaks of life, and promises it more abundantly, life without end.

He is our hope, the answer to our fears. He is the light in darkness, the everlasting light.

I have introduced the "Foreign Ownership Disclosure Act," which is part of the comprehensive fair trade legislation now being considered in Congress. It would require disclosure of major foreign-owned interests here; for most, it asks only, "Who are you, where are you from, and what have you got?" For controlling interests in large U.S. businesses, it asks for basic financial data that much smaller publicly traded American corporations already disclose.

The "Bryant Amendment" creates absolutely no restrictions; it simply asks major foreign investors to sign in as they walk through our open door. The U.S. will still have the most open foreign investment policy in the world—in sharp contrast to other nations, which impose strict restrictions, preclearance requirements, and outright prohibitions on Americans seeking to invest there.

Legitimate foreign investors are here to make money, not to hid it. Why would simple disclosure stop them from investing here, if much more onerous requirements have not stopped Americans from investing abroad? Why should our government policy be to help those who do have something to hide?

Yet the Reagan Administration teamed up with a league of foreign interests to sidetrack the Bryant Amendment in the Senate. At least one foreign-owned business directly threatened a Senator that it would close down its extensive operations in his state if he actively supported the Bryant Amendment—the very kind of blackmail that demonstrates why basic disclosure is essential.

In addition to handicapping our own ability to responsibly manage our own economy, our current policy of ignorance shields foreign investment here about which all Americans should be concerned.

*The Soviet's attempt in the 1970s to acquire U.S. companies with access to advanced American technology was discovered by the CIA only by accident.

*President Reagan's 1986 order freezing Libya's assets here was a futile gesture because we cannot identify them.

*Philippine dictator Ferdinand Marcos siphoned off billions of dollars from his country—and, presumably, our foreign aid—and used the money to buy Manhattan real estate.

*OPEC nations have reportedly been discreetly buying U.S. oil refining and production facilities and could eventually control vast domestic, as well as foreign, energy supplies.

Opponents of the Bryant Amendment admit America has become too dependent on foreign investment—but they say this is why we cannot afford to even ask basic questions about it. They overlook the predictions that American may be more than a trillion dollars in debt internationally by 1990—and therefore even more dependent of foreign investment, while still knowing very little about it.

Foreign investment helped the U.S. emerge industrially. It still brings many benefits. But we are no longer an emerging nation; we are the world's leading democracy. Increasing foreign influence over decisions vital to our future has implications for our national prosperity, sovereignty, and security. We should no longer be forced to make critical economic decisions in the dark. We need reliable information about the foreign flags flying over the American economy.

Time now to reflag the U.S. economy

'It's time to get our heads out of the sand'

By Congressman John Bryant

In the last five years, known foreign investment in American farmland, factories, banks, businesses, buildings, government securities, and other U.S. economic assets has doubled and now exceeds $1.3 trillion. Last year alone, it increased by 25 percent. Foreign money has been financing a record borrowing binge, while disguising the fact that we are living dangerously beyond our means.

The U.S. was the world's largest creditor nation in 1982. Now, it is the world's largest debtor nation, with a foreign debt exceeding those of Mexico, Argentina, and Brazil combined. Foreign investments in the U.S. are treated as debts owed by the U.S., because they affect our economy in the same way.

As ownership of U.S. assets moves overseas, so does authority over vital economic decisions affecting American jobs, business goals, and prosperity. Foreign ownership in our high technology industries could narrow our strategic and competitive edge. Foreign ownership in our energy and defense-related industries could endanger our national security.

The world's leading democracy is trading its sovereignty for a security blanket of foreign money, not to foster long-term economic growth, but to sustain a high national lifestyle. To finance its budget deficits and pay for foreign products, America has been selling off its productive capacity—selling off its family jewels to pay for a night on the town.

This surge of foreign investment and foreign influence is the greatest change now taking place in our economy, but the one we are least equipped to understand. Unlike other nations, we do not require disclosure of basic information on foreign ownership in this country. Though a hodgepodge of federal agencies collect various types of data on foreign ownership, the information is useless for sound analysis or informed decision-making. Much information is kept secret—even from Congress.

As a result, we are unable to see the growing concentration of foreign ownership in U.S. industries, and unable to see the real consequences of our economic policies.

Opponents of disclosure say we already know enough from lists kept by the Department of Commerce (but the agency refuses to vouch for their accuracy) and from Commerce and Agriculture Department reports (but foreign owners are free to hide behind anonymous dummy corporations.)

The Agriculture Department lists 270,000 acres of Texas agricultural land owned by residents of the Netherland Antilles—one acre for every man, woman, and child who live there. But because the registered landowners are dummy corporations, the true owners could live anywhere.

I have introduced the "Foreign Ownership Disclosure Act," which is part of the comprehensive fair trade legislation now being considered in Congress. It would require disclosure of major foreign-owned interests here; for most, it asks only, "Who are you, where are you from, and what have you got?" For controlling interests in large U.S. businesses, it asks for basic financial data that much smaller publicly traded American corporations already disclose.

The "Bryant Amendment" creates absolutely no restrictions; it simply asks major foreign investors to sign in as they walk through our open door. The U.S. will still have the most open foreign investment policy in the world—in sharp contrast to other nations, which impose strict restrictions, preclearance requirements, and outright prohibitions on Americans seeking to invest there.

Legitimate foreign investors are here to make money, not to hid it. Why would simple disclosure stop them from investing here, if much more onerous requirements have not stopped Americans from investing abroad? Why should our government policy be to help those who do have something to hide?

Yet the Reagan Administration teamed up with a league of foreign interests to sidetrack the Bryant Amendment in the Senate. At least one foreign-owned business directly threatened a Senator that it would close down its extensive operations in his state if he actively supported the Bryant Amendment—the very kind of blackmail that demonstrates why basic disclosure is essential.

In addition to handicapping our own ability to responsibly manage our own economy, our current policy of ignorance shields foreign investment here about which all Americans should be concerned.
