By Jane Martinez

Hello Again!
Missed you last week, but we are back with you this week. We have had an exciting week. Now, I am going to tell exciung week. Now, about it. Hope you will be as excited as we were.
On November 19, we had our Thanksgiving Dinner and Auction. We had giving Dinner and Auction. We had a good turn out, everybody seemed off to a good time. Our auction consisted of a good ime. Our auction consisted of cakes, but we had lots of other items donated to us by businesses here in Lockney, Silverton and Plainview. The most exciting part of this auction was the amount of money we made. The amount came close to $$ 1,800.00$. All this money came close to $$ 1,800.00$. All this money will go to the Stocking Fund for the will go to the Stocking Fund for the residents, to buy them presents for Christmas. We, the staff of the Lockney Care Center, want to thank all of the people that attended our dinner and auction. We appreciate the help and the auction. We appreciate the help and the donations given to us.
All the places that donated to us were: Lockney Band Boosters, Wal-Mart, Golden Corral, Juanitos, Far East, Long John Silvers, Gabriels, Elizabeths Hair Etc., Rosa's Hair Chateau, Witch's Hut,

Vitamins...What They Do For Us

 With the emphasis placed on healththese days, many people are wondering which vitamins they need to maintain or which vitamins they need to maintain or achieve a healthy body "Different vitamins perform different functions in our bodies, and people need functions in our bodies, and peeple need to be aware of which vitamins do what," said Cindy Rowell, R.D., outpatient dietitian at Methodist Hospital. The major vitamins and their functions are: tions are:

Teens, Alcohol and Drugs: What Parents Can Do decide about using drugs and alcohol, whether they are well prepared or not. The decision will be theirs. The or not. tion is up to you.

Why do teens drink or use drugs? To understand how to help teens avoid alcohol and drugs it helps to understand why they use them in the first place. Teens give these reasons To have fun." "Because adults do it, illegal." "Everybody else does." Many counselors say that the real reason has to do with teens' insecurities and the pres sure they feel to look attractive, "cool, popular and smart.
Once teens try alcohol or drugs the may turn to them as their main w

So before trouble starts, here are suggestions to help you help your teen leam to cope without turning to alcohol and drugs.
Teens need your suppor

* Take the time to listen to your teens. This shows you respect their thoughts and feelings and helps them feel impor tant. Don't jump to conclusions overeact. This causes teens to withdraw. Given the chance, they'll talk thingsout using parents as a sounding board. * Respect your teens' need for pris vacy. It doesn't mean they're hiding

they may not be w sonal information

sonal information. * Show your teens

*hem. Look for oppor you care about hem. Look for opportunities to share time with them. Praise ties they may not have noticed qualiselves. Don't set expectated in themor too low. Tell expectations too high * Talk with teens about learning. handle peer pressure. Help them dehanale peer pressure. Help them develop some "one-liners" to resist situations they feel pressured about. Having a ready excuse or response can save a teen from getting into trouble in the first place. Tell teens they should respond and then leave. Here are some sample "onversations: What s ste matter, are you chicken? Response: "Yeah, of dying. My parents would kill me, or ground me for the rest of my life."
"If you were my friend, you would." Response: "Come on, you're too smart to want to do something so dumb," sponse: "I'm allergic." ponse: "'m allergic.
Explain clearly your standards about alcohol and drugs and the rules you expect your teens to follow. Teens are more likely to respect rules if you explain the reasons behind them. Keep the rules short and simple as too many rules rules short and simple as too many rules make anyone feel harassed.
