

PRaises FOR NEW BAPTIST PASTOR

SPLendid RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY THE WOODWARD CHURCH.

Rev. T. G. Netherton arrives in the City to Take Charge as Pastor of the Baptist Church.

Rev. S. T. G. Netherton has arrived with his family from Woodward, Okla., to assume the duties as pastor of the Baptist church. The following were resolutions passed by the Woodward church upon his resignation:

Eight and one half years Rev. T. G. Netherton entered upon his duties as the pastor of the First Baptist church of Woodward, Oklahoma. For years he has enjoyed the distinction of having the "longest pastorate" in the state. At the conclusion of this long and most satisfactory pastorate the church in regular business session unanimously passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, First: That our retiring pastor, T. G. Netherton, has the love, confidence, and good-will of the church. We have ever found him to be a man of high and worthy ideals; as to his life and character, clean and unquestioned; as a preacher, sound, safe and sane; as a pastor, he is truly "a man with the shepherd heart." We unhesitatingly recommend him to any church desiring a live, capable, spiritual and consecrated preacher of the gospel.

Second: That we hereby express our sincere appreciation of his many years of splendid service. His devotion to the cause of Christ, his love and loyalty to our church, and his faithful discharge of every duty has been a great inspiration to all of us. He leaves us strong, united and harmonious.

Third: That we would not forget to acknowledge with profound gratitude, our indebtedness to our Pastor's faithful companion whose beautiful and unselfish life, both in the home and in public service, has won for her the love and esteem of a host of friends, both young and old.

Fourth: That we congratulate the First Baptist church of Canyon, Texas, on their success in securing the services of our beloved pastor, and while we deplore our loss, yet we rejoice that our loss is gain to a sister church, and our earnest prayers and best wishes go with Brother Netherton to his new field. May the Holy Ghost who has "made him overseer of the church" which is in Canyon, cement and sanctify the pastoral relation that it may not be dissolved until the Lord's own time has come.

Fifth: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to our denominational papers and that they also be spread upon our minutes.

Federal Jurors Selected.

An unusually large number of Canyon men have been selected to appear as jurors in the Federal Court which opens in Amarillo Sept. 22. S. C. Whitman, W. T. Moreland and W. C. FOOD INSPECTOR HERE.

Praised Cleanliness of Canyon and Says That Stores of the City are in Good Position.

T. H. Johnson of Austin was in the city Friday representing the Food and Drug department of the state of Texas. His business is to make an inspection of the groceries and drug stores of the state and he has power to prosecute any violations of the food and drug act. After making a comprehensive inspection of the city Mr. Johnson reported to a representative of the News that the stores of Canyon were in excellent condition. He stated that he was glad to know that weekly inspections are made by the ladies of the Pure Food Campaign as this always insures better and cleaner stores.

Asked concerning the general appearance of the city, Mr. Johnson said that Canyon was certainly a very clean city. He had inspected the alleys and that generally they are in good condition.

Foster-Whiteley Marriage.

Miss Ruth Whiteley and Albert Foster were married Saturday in Silvertown at the home of bride's parents. Mr. Foster is assistant in the postoffice and has made his home in this city for many years. Miss Whiteley has been attending the Normal for the past two years. They are receiving the congratulations of their many friends in the city.

TWO GOOD RAINS FALL THIS WEEK

HEAVY RAINS THURSDAY VARY FROM INCH TO TWO INCHES.

Followed By Slow Half Inch Rain Tuesday Night—Crops Looking Very Much Better.

Two good rains during the week have put life into the grass and crops and restored confidence in the people of the Plains country. The summer drouth has been broken all over the southwest and while the rains come too late to make a very large crop, there will be good fall grass and much late feed. The weather has been uniformly cold for the past week and there was a light frost Saturday morning but it did no harm. Barring an early heavy frost the prospects are good for a considerable late feed crop.

The rains of last Thursday afternoon and night varied in amounts over the county, but every portion was visited by a good rain. In Canyon there was probably the least rain of any section of the county, only half an inch falling.

Nathan Schee reports that four miles east at his place the rain amounted to three inches and that there is more water in the lakes than since 1907.

Henry Weber reports two inches at his place six miles north of the city on Wednesday night of last week, report of which rain was given by the News last week and almost as much on Thursday night.

At Umbarger the fall amounted to one and one-half inches and over that amount on Thursday night.

All over the southern part of the county the fall has averaged from three to four inches for the three rains.

Pug Cavet Will Pitch.

Pug Cavet will come from Dallas to pitch for the Canyon team against the Wichita bunch Monday. Pug has just finished a very successful season with the Mobile club in the Southern League although greatly handicapped during the end of the season with eye trouble. SIGNS UP FOR THE TRANSCONTINENTAL 800 MILES WILL BE COVERED ON SEPTEMBER 29.

All Commercial Clubs Along the Way From Hutchinson, Kans., to El Paso Will be Busy.

The greatest road marking event in the middle west will occur on Monday, Sept. 29.

That day, more than 800 miles of highway from Hutchinson to El Paso, Texas, will be designed with "trail-markers" for guiding transcontinental tourists. Commercial Clubs and auto organizations in all the counties along the route will participate in the marking which is to be completed in one day.

The 250 miles from Hutchinson to Liberal will have metal signs—a block shield on yellow background—reading "Hutchinson & Liberal Road." The route beyond Liberal with similar signs will read "Liberal and El Paso Road."

Sixty organizations will that day locate the markers, placing one in the middle of the section and three each way from the corner of the section along the route.

The Canyon Commercial Club under direction of D. A. Park, county chairman of the Transcontinental route, will mark the road from half way between Canyon and Amarillo to half way between Canyon and Tulla.

From reports that come in this route will soon be very popular with transcontinental motorists. The traffic has already become of considerable importance.

To The People Of Canyon.

The inspector for Holland's Magazine Cleanest City Contest has not yet visited Canyon. We have entered this contest to win and want to keep fighting until the game is over. A few weeks ago Canyon was almost a clean town, but to-day the weeds are getting started in some places. Some people have become careless about throwing out tin cans and old papers. Let's be more careful. Let us strive within the next two days to put our premises in first class order. Pick up all kinds of rubbish, place in sacks and set where the scavenger can get the sacks. Cut the weeds that have started.

We will win if ALL will help. Get busy to-day.

INSPECTOR YET TO COME.

Letter From Holland's Magazine to M. S. Lusby States that Inspector Has Not Been Here.

Dallas, Texas, September 15, 1913. Mr. M. S. Lusby, Sec'y-Treasurer Clean-up Campaign, Canyon, Texas.

Dear Sir: Replying to your inquiry of September 9, we beg to say that so far as we are able to find from Dr. Carrick's reports, we believe that he has not yet visited Canyon. We are not quite sure of this as the doctor has not been in Dallas for several weeks, and he charges his route from time to time so as to make the best possible train connection. We scarcely deem it probable that he would have been in your town long enough for the inspection without some of your citizens knowing about it. While it is quite permissible under the rules for Dr. Carrick to make or have made an inspection of any town without notifying any citizens of his presence, he does not ordinarily make such inspections or at least does not get out of town without notifying some of those interested in the clean-up campaign of his visit.

We received the picture of your citizens on clean-up day for which accept our thanks. The picture will appear in the October number of Holland's which will be issued in a very few days.

Yours very truly,
Holland's Magazine.

ATTENDANCE AT NORMAL IS 405

105 STUDENTS REGISTER DURING THE PAST WEEK.

Attendance Now is 100 More Than At This Time Last Year—Will Reach 500 Mark.

The attendance at the Normal jumped from 300 last week to 405 yesterday afternoon. There has not been a day during the week when there were no enrollments and it may be expected that this will continue until the third quarter will begin. The enrollment does not include 20 who are registered in the ninth grade and the 126 who are in the training school. It is confidently expected that the enrollment will reach 500 before the end of the year.

Secretary Travis Shaw reports that everything is moving nicely in the school and that the work is getting well organized. The faculty is well pleased at the large attendance. There was some fear that the general drouth throughout the state might cut down the attendance but this has been shown to have had no effect.

Will Play Wichita Monday.

The Wichita Santa Se shops team will be in the city Monday to play the Canyon boys in base ball. The visitors have a long string of victories to their credit this year and will make a strong proposition for the locals. Canyon boys have been hard at work during the past week and will put up a fine game.

Another Silo.

Wm. Schmitz is building an underground silo at his place south of the city. The silo will be 18x20 and hold about 150 tons.

WHEAT PLANTING TIME HAS COME

H. M. BAINER MAKES VERY VALUABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Ground Should be Thoroughly Prepared and Only Very Best Seed Used After Treatment.

We know that early deep preparation of land for wheat is advisable. Ground that has been well plowed or listed in July or early August and properly cared for after that time, will show a better yield than land prepared later than the dates mentioned. August plowing or listing is better than plowing or listing done in September for wheat. Ground prepared after September first must be worked shallower and it will likely not make as large a yield as that plowed early and deeply and well packed. The ground that is prepared late should be well packed with a sub-surface packer. If the sub-surface packer cannot be obtained, the common smoothing harrow used two or three times over the field, immediately after the plowing, will do much good. The harrowing, together with the tramping of the horses used in drawing the harrow, will aid in "firming" the ground. We must remember that wheat requires a firm seed bed.

Time for Seeding: The time for seeding wheat must necessarily vary according to the season and location.

For Kansas and Oklahoma conditions, the best wheat crops usually come from sowing from September 15 to October 15, provided that the seasons are favorable.

For Northwestern Texas conditions, later sowing has proven more successful, the time being from October 1 to November 1, depending on the season. Sowing as late as December 1, often produces good results.

Good Seed: Too much cannot be said in favor of good, pure seed. Much of the wheat used this fall will doubtless be badly mixed and of an inferior quality. It pays to sow good seed, even if it has to be secured at prices above the average market. Turkey Red and Kharkof wheats will be found as good varieties as may be obtained for our conditions. These are both hardy winter varieties of excellent milling and good yielding qualities.

Quantity of Seed to Sow: Wheat raisers continue to make the mistake of sowing too much seed. For Kansas and Oklahoma conditions 45 pounds of seed per acre is usually sufficient, provided that the wheat is sown in season in well prepared ground. Under no conditions should we sow more than one bushel per acre. For Northwestern Texas conditions, 30 pounds of seed per acre is sufficient, if sown in well prepared ground and 25 pounds per acre usually enough. We must give the wheat a chance to stool, which it cannot do if sown too thickly.

Treatment for Smut: It is a good plan to treat all seed wheat for smut, whether the seed appears to be free from it or not. The "Formalin Treatment," as set out in the following, is considered most reliable.

Secure a 40 per cent solution of formalin at a reliable drug store. One pound of this 40 per cent formalin solution, carefully mixed with 40 gallons of water, is sufficient to treat from 2,000 to

WHY NOT GET A GUARANTEE.

Every Article of Merit that is Sold
These Days is Guaranteed--No
Guarantee Often Means Poor Quality.

There is very little excuse for any person to claim that he has been "stung" on a purchase. Fifty years ago the buyer had to look out, but to day it is unusual to find a merchant who will not return the money for any article that has proved unsatisfactory.

An excellent example of this kind of fair dealings is shown by the clean cut guarantee that the City Pharmacy gives on Dodson's Liver Tonic.

These people tell us that any person who pays 50c for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic and does not find it a gentle and most pleasant liver tonic, harmless, but a sure deliver of constipation and a perfect substitute for calomel, can get his money back just as quick as they can get it out of the money drawer.

Dodson's Liver Tonic has practically taken the place of calomel. It is absolutely harmless, sure in its actions and causes no restriction of habit or diet. No wonder the drug people are glad to guarantee it, while other remedies imitate the claims of Dodson's Liver Tonic and not guarantee it all.

Mutterliebe.

By Jake H. Harrison.

It populates the teeming earth
With smiling childish faces.
It beautifies the homes of men
With sweet domestic graces.
It is the spring that moves the world,
The all-prevailing leaven
Of self-effacing sacrifice.

That clears the way to heaven.
It dries the flow of infant tears.
And then directly after
To please the tearful, toddling tot
It joins in childish laughter:
Through all the watches of the night
It is a faithful sentry,
And when Disease would seek its fold
Is there to bar his entry.

Through busy days and weary nights
It watches by the ingle,
Where ever-present household cares
And love are wont to mingle:
Unwearying it treads the path
Where duty bids it linger,
And points to moral rectitude.
With stern unswerving fingers.

It cools the fever-heated brow
With loving kind attention.
It finds excuses for its young
Beyond a saint's invention,
It sweeps beside the couch of pain
With heart attuned to pity,
While to the tossing sufferer
It hums a soothing ditty.

Wherever home and children are
We find it there presiding,
With willing hands and loving heart
And faith sublime; confiding
In all religion has to give
Of deep and tender feeling,
A sense supreme, a trust divine,
In all its acts revealing.

When life is done and time is past,
And things of earth are ended,
And infinite and finite things
In harmony are blended:
Then Mutterliebe forth will stand,
When tested by the measure
Of all the things that men have known,
Their most enduring treasure.

Selecting and Saving Seed.

Seed from such crops as kaffir, Milo, Sorghum and Feterita is going to be in good demand throughout the southwest next spring.

A large percentage of the acreage planted to these crops this year, will not make seed, on account of dry weather. Many fields will produce immature seed, and this is unfit to plant. We are certain that it will pay you to save the choicest heads of all the crops mentioned that are produced on your farm this year for seed purposes. These heads should be selected from the field as soon as they are thoroughly matured, before the fodder is harvested for feed. These heads should be stored in some building in gunny sacks, or tied in bundles, the stem ends being fastened together with strings. The seed should be kept in the head until nearly planting time, when it must be carefully threshed by hand.

Most farmers know that the crops here mentioned belong to the sorghum family and that they therefore mix readily when grown side by side. It is on account of this that the purest and best seeds are to be found in the centers rather than at the edges coming close to other closely related crops. Select heads that are well shaped and of a compact type, rather than those that are loose and open, or a broom-corn type.

It has been clearly demonstrated that the yields of the crops mentioned can be increased at least one-third through the use of properly selected seeds.

Write and tell us if you have good, well selected seed for sale.
Yours very truly,
H. M. Bainer.

Home.

(By Mrs. E. P. Turner, Chairman, Rural Homes and Schools, Farm Life Commission.)

Home is the place where our thoughts return in the hour of loneliness. Its memory seems to cling to us more in the time of need than in the moments of pleasure. We look upon home as a shelter where we find safety in times of distress, as a ship finds a calm sea behind the breakwater, when the waves roll high. Home is where we find a love worth while—a mother's love. Childhood days and the thoughts of home fill the hearts of the lowly as well as the lordly. We all love home but sometimes our thoughts are prone to roam to other things that for the moment command attention and seem more pressing. The awakening sometimes comes too late—after loved ones have departed or furious elements have done their work—but it is inevitable as life and death. Home is the natural heaven of rest.

Wheat Seeding.

2,500 pounds of wheat.

The seed may be treated by dipping or sprinkling: To dip the seed may be placed in a gunny sack and submerged or covered in the solution, the liquid being in a barrel or tank. The bag or sack of wheat should be allowed to remain immersed in this solution for at least ten minutes, after which it is taken up, allow the liquid to drain back into the tank or barrel for a short time. The wheat should then be emptied into a clean place and covered with sacks or blankets for two hours, after which it should be thoroughly dried before sowing.

To sprinkle; prepare a clean place on a canvas or smooth floor and thoroughly sprinkle the space to be occupied by the wheat, with the solution, before the seed is emptied upon it. Now spread the wheat upon the space thus prepared for it, and sprinkle the solution all over it, shoveling the grain in such way over and over, so as to insure that all of the seed will be uniformly moistened with the liquid. Having thoroughly dampened the wheat with the solution, shovel the grain into a pile and cover with sacks or blankets for two hours, after which it should be thoroughly dried before sowing. Do not allow the wheat to remain too long after treating, as the germinating qualities may be injured.

Place the dried wheat into sacks that have been dipped in the solution, and it will be found a good plan to sprinkle the grain drill with the liquid before putting the seed into it. Exercise every precaution not to bring the treated seed in contact with grain that has not been treated, avoiding the use of bins that have contained smut infested wheat. The wheat should be treated but a short time before sowing.

Sowing: Sow all wheat with some good, reliable grain drill and cover with a press wheel attachment if possible. This press wheel attachment "firms" the ground above and immediately around the seed and insures a better stand. If a press wheel attachment can not be had, a roller will do a great deal of good, if used immediately after the drill. The roller must be followed at once with a common harrow. The seed should be sowed deep enough to come in contact with the moist soil, but this should not be over two to four inches deep. Wheat can be sowed slightly deeper in sandy soils than in heavy or tight soils.

Wheat Acreage: It is far better to sow a smaller acreage, and do the work rightly, than to sow twice as many acres on ground that has been but half prepared. We cannot afford to "Hog-In" our wheat.

INSURE WITH THE GUARANTEE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY HOUSTON, TEXAS

Insurance now in force, over TWENTY MILLION DOLLARS.
Applications received for insurance since January 1, 1913, over EIGHT MILLION DOLLARS.
Assets are over ONE MILLION DOLLARS.
Insurance issued since January 1, 1913, over SIX MILLION DOLLARS.

This company, since commencing business in September 1906, has paid out five annual dividends to stockholders, amounting to forty-four per cent interest on the capital stock.

This Company has grown up during the past seven years in the midst of competing companies, many of which had a large surplus to spend in securing business. While there are other good life insurance companies in this state, a number of them started with a large surplus fund contributed by the stock holders, THE GUARANTEE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY started with a paid up Capital Stock of $100,000 and a very small surplus of $25,000, and by work, close attention to business and economy, has built up a large surplus fund, which on January 1, 1913, was assigned and unassigned $172,000, all of which was derived from the earnings on its business.

If you were going to deposit your accumulations of years in a savings bank for the benefit of those dependent on you after you had gone, which institution would you select; one that had started with very little money and had grown to be very strong as a result of many years of hard work, close attention to business and economy of management, or the one that had started with lots of money which was contributed by the stockholders, and whose existance was of short duration and experience very limited? Isn't it true that men who save and safely invest their own accumulations are most likely to safely invest and preserve the money of others entrusted to their care?

If the knocker or twister should call on you, ask him to compare the record of his company with the above.

THE principal value of advertising consists in the fact that the influence of advertising is cumulative. It gains strength by repetition. This does not mean the repetition of one advertisement indefinitely. A change of copy is desirable. It means the continued advertising of one's business in as effective a manner as possible.

One man has been in business in the town twenty years; another opened his store last week. Both may be equally honest, equally enterprising, equally deserving of credit and custom. But which has the better reputation? Naturally the man who has been doing business in the same building for twenty years. It is the result of persistency; the inevitable cumulative effect.

You can't get away from it — your reputation will either get better or worse as your business methods become known. Repetition impresses the fact even on the careless observer. Remember this in your advertising. Don't expect to make a fortune by one effort, but use it as one stone to help build the tower that will raise you higher and higher.

MAKE YOUR ADVERTISING TODAY HELP YOUR BUSINESS NEXT YEAR.

The Higher Law.

The Higher Law, which will be here tonight is the latest of Oscar Graham's plays. As author and producer of such marked success as A Prince of His Race, The Stumbling Block, Circle C Ranch, Shadows of the Past, and latterly his novelization of the play A Prince of His Race, he is known far and wide as a writer and purveyor of thoroly high class and extremely popular drama and fiction. His plays are marked by that persistently dominating quality of moral uplift and are fraught with an optimistic endeavor to leave the auditor impressed with a newer and stronger faith in something better than the sordidness of material injustice.

Oscar Graham and his company will be seen here in The Higher Law tonight at the G. & L. Theatre.

Good Rains Help Fair.

Recent good rains over nearly all of the Panhandle and Plains country has perceptible brightened the outlook for The Panhandle State Fair, to be held at Amarillo October 6th to 11th, and the Fair management is more enthused than ever the prospect for a notable first year's success.

Those who have visited the old Glenwood Park near Amarillo in the past will rub their eyes when they look upon it in October. An army of workmen have been busy for weeks constructing the substantial stock barns, hog and sheep pens, main exhibition Hall, special County Agricultural Hall, lunch rooms, grand stand, etc. The new half mile track was in excellent condition before the rains, but now it is packed solidly, harrowed, rolled and in almost perfect shape.

Several large silo companies will exhibit models on the grounds, many machinery houses have taken space, the ladges textile department promises to eclipse anything ever seen in Texas before and entries in the live stock and agriculture departments are pouring in daily.

Many prominent men, including Governor Colquitt, Senator Shepard, Congressman Stephens and State Agricultural Commissioner Ed R. Kone have been invited to speak, and first class amusement features have been provided for, including an aeroplane flight twice daily for three days, or possibly five days.

The outlook for a magnificent first year's Fair could not be better, and all Amarillo is working as one man to, make the visitors feel at home and to give them their money's worth.

The Little Rifles—Big in Quality
 YOU are going to buy a .22 calibre rifle, single shot or repeater—you'll find that many well known crack shots started with a Remington-UMC .22. Their advice now would be "By all means, get a Remington-UMC" because they know that there is a tendency in some quarters to look upon these models as only "a small boy's rifle" and to cheapen them so that they can be sold at a price.

You have just as much right to expect full shooting value in your .22 calibre arm as in your $75 big game rifle. You want the Remington-UMC single shot at from $3 to $6, .22, .25-10 or .32 calibre, made by the same people who make the famous Remington-UMC Autoloading Rifles. Or, if you prefer the repeating rifle, the Remington-UMC slide action .22 repeater with its easy take-down and special safety features, shooting .22 short, .22 long or .22 long rifle cartridges, at $10 and up, in your arm. Sold by live dealers of this community—the most popular small calibre rifles in America.

Many Planting Wheat.

Following the good rains of this week, the farmers of Randall county are getting out their wheat planting machinery and putting in one of the largest crops Randall county has ever had. J. R. Cullum of the Thompson Hardware Co. says that his firm has sold more repairs for wheat drills the past week than for many falls.

W. F. Thurman, a large Randall county farmer living north of the city, says that this ought to be an excellent wheat year. The drouth killed the crops very extensively, but in many cases the farmers have diligently tilled the land so that it is in excellent condition, near the same as summer fallow. Mr. Thurman says that he is confident that next year will be normal and that there will be a great crop. He says that it will pay any man to plant a big wheat crop if for no other reason than to make good spring pasture.

Panhandle State Fair.

Spectacular flying, something that Panhandle people have never seen before, is scheduled for next month when Art Smith, the world's famed aviator, will give an exhibition of the art of at THE PANHANDLE STATE FAIR at Amarillo, Texas.

Art Smith will, according to contract, arrive at Amarillo one day ahead of time, bringing with him his Curtiss Biplane and a staff of mechanics. The aviator will ordinarily fly from twenty minutes up, weather permitting of course, and will attain an altitude of not less than 1000 feet. He will also fly as close to the ground as possible, and should weather interfere all spectators will be given rain checks for the exhibition which is to take place at Amarillo is without doubt one of the most popularly arranged that any aviator could attempt. H. Smith will do stunts within the grounds that hardly seem possible for anyone to do without wrecking the machine.

Art Smith has been very successful in all his flights and has had very few accidents, none of them of a serious nature. The fact that he recently made a record-breaking flight at Pataluma, Calif., to Santa Rose, a distance of 141-2 miles, in twelve minutes and 32 seconds goes to show that he must be something of an aviator. In this flight he got away with as much ease apparent; ly as a bird. He states that a man can run an aeroplane as easily as an automobile, provided he does not get too reckless.

WISHED SHE COULD DIE

And Be Free From Her Troubles, but Finds Better Way.

Columbia, Tenn.—"Many a time," says Mrs. Jessie Sharp, of this place, "I wished I would die and be relieved of my suffering from womanly troubles. I could not get up, without pulling at something to help me, and stayed in bed most of the time. I could not do my housework.

The least amount of work tired me out. My head would swim, and I would tremble for an hour or more. Finally, I took Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I am not bothered with pains any more, and I don't have to go to bed. In fact, I am sound and well of all my troubles."

Cardui goes to all the weak spots and helps to make them strong. It acts with nature—not against her. It is for the tired, nervous, irritable women, who feel as if everything were wrong, and need something to quiet their nerves and strengthen the worn-out system.

If you are a woman, suffering from any of the numerous symptoms of womanly trouble, take Cardui. It will help you. At all druggists.

THE PRODIGAL JUDGE

By VAUGHAN KESTER
ILLUSTRATIONS BY D. MELVILLE

Copyright 1914, The Dorr-Harris Company

Meantime Ware and Murrell had landed and were coming along the path, the outlaw a step or two in advance of his friend. They reached the horses and were untying them when the thicket suddenly disgorged the three men; each held a cocked pistol; two of these pistols covered Murrell and the third was leveled at Ware.

"Hues!" cried Murrell in astonishment, for the man confronting him was the Clan's messenger who should have been speeding across the state.

"Toss up your hands, Murrell," said Hues quietly.

One of the other men spoke.

"You are under arrest!"

"Arrest!"

"You are wanted for nigger-stealing," said the man. Still Murrell did not seem to comprehend. He looked at Hues in dull wonder.

"What are you doing here?" he asked.

"Waiting to arrest you—ain't that plain?" said Hues, with a grim smile.

The outlaw's hands dropped at his side, limp and helpless. With some idea that he might attempt to draw a weapon one of the men took hold of him, but Murrell was nerveless to his touch; his face had gone a ghastly white and was streaked with the markings of terror.

"Well, by thunder!" cried the man in utter amazement.

Murrell looked into Hues' face.

"You—you—" and the words thickened on his tongue, becoming an inarticulate murmur.

"It's all up, John," said Hues.

"No!" said Murrell, recovering himself. "You may as well turn me loose—you can't arrest me!"

"I've done it," answered Hues. "I've been on your track for six months."

"How about this fellow?" asked the man whose pistol still covered Ware.

Hues glanced toward the planter and shook his head.

"Where are you going to take me?" asked Murrell quickly. "Again Hues laughed.

"You'll find that out in plenty of time, and then your friends can pass the word around if they like; now you'll come with me."

Ware neither moved nor spoke as Hues and his prisoner passed back along the path, Hues with his hand on Murrell's shoulder, and one of his companions close at his heels, while the third man led off the outlaw's horse.

Presently the distant clatter of hoofs was borne to Ware's ears—only that, the miracle of courage and daring he had half expected had not happened. Murrell, for all his wild boasting, was like other men, like himself. His bloodshot eyes slid around in their sockets. There across the sunlit stretch of water was Betty—the thought of her brought him to quick choking terrors. The whole fabric of crime by which he had been benefited in the past or had expected to profit in the future seemed toppling in upon him, but his mind clutched one important fact. Hues, if he knew of Betty's disappearance, did not connect Murrell with it. Ware sucked in comfort between his twitching lips. Stealing niggers! No one would believe that he, a planter, had a hand in that, and for a brief instant he considered signaling Bess to return. Slosson must be told of Murrell's arrest; but he was sick with apprehension, some trap might have been prepared for him, he could not know; and the impulse to act forsook him.

He smote his hands together in a hopeless, beaten gesture. And Murrell had gone weak—with his own eyes he had seen it—Murrell—whom he believed without fear! He felt that he had been grievously betrayed in his trust and a hot rage poured through him. At last he climbed into the saddle, and, swaying like a drunken man, galloped off.

When he reached the river road he paused and scanned its dusty surface. Hues and his party had turned south when they issued from the wood path. No doubt Murrell was being taken to Memphis. Ware laughed harshly. The outlaw would be free before another dawn broke.

He had halted near where Jim had turned his team the previous night after Betty and Hannibal had left the carriage; the marks of the wheels were as plainly distinguishable as the more recent trail left by the four men, and as he grasped the significance of that wide half circle his sense of injury overwhelmed him again. He hoped to live to see Murrell hanged!

He was so completely lost in his bitter reflections that he had been unaware of a mounted man who was coming toward him at a swift gallop, but now he heard the steady pounding of hoofs and, startled by the sound, looked up. A moment later the horseman drew rein at his side.

"Ware!" he cried.

"How are you, Carrington?" said the planter.

"You are wanted at Belle Plain," began Carrington, and seemed to hesitate.

"Yes—yes, I am going there at once—now—" stammered Ware, and gathered up his reins with a shaking hand.

"You've heard, I take it?" said Carrington slowly.

"Yes," answered Ware, in a hoarse whisper. "My God, Carrington, I'm heart sick; she has been like a daughter to me—I—" he fell silent, mopping his face.

"I think I understand your feeling," said Carrington, giving him a level glance.

"Then you'll excuse me," and the planter clapped spurs to his horse. Once he looked back over his shoulder; he saw that Carrington had not moved from the spot where they had met.

At Belle Plain, Ware found his neighbors in possession of the place. They greeted him quietly and, spoke in subdued tones of their sympathy. The planter listened with an air of such abject misery that those who had neither liked nor respected him, were roused to a sudden generous feeling where he was concerned; they could not question but that he was deeply affected. After all the man might have a side to his nature with which they had never come in contact.

When he could he shut himself in his room. He had experienced a day of maddening anxiety; he had not slept at all the previous night; in mind and body he was worn out; and now he was plunged into the thick of this sensation. He must keep control of himself, for every word he said would be remembered. In the present there was sympathy for him, but sooner or later people would return to their sordid unemotional judgments.

He sought to forecast the happenings of the next few hours. Murrell's friends would break jail for him, that was a foregone conclusion; but the insurrection he had planned was at an end. Hues had dealt its death blow. Moreover, though the law might be impotent to deal with Murrell, he could not hope to escape the vengeance of the powerful class he had plotted to destroy; he would have to quit the country. Ware gloated in this idea of craven flight. Thank God, he had seen the last of him!

But, as always, his thoughts came back to Betty. Slosson would wait at Hicks' place for the man Murrell had promised him, and, failing the messenger, for the signal fire, but there would be neither; and Slosson would be left to determine his own course of action. Ware felt certain that he would wait through the night, but as sure as the morning broke, if no word had reached him, he would send one of his men across the bayou, who must learn of Murrell's arrest, escape, flight—for in Ware's mind these three events were indissolubly associated. The planter's teeth knocked together. He was having a terrible acquaintance with fear, its very depths had swallowed him up; it was a black pit in which he sank from horror to horror. He had lost all faith in the Clan which had terrorized half a dozen states, which had robbed and murdered with apparent impunity, which had marketed its hundreds of stolen slaves. He had utterly collapsed at the first blow dealt the organization, but he was still seeing Murrell, pallid and shaken.

A step sounded in the hall and an instant later Hicks entered the room without the formality of knocking. Ware recognized his presence with a glance of indifference, but did not speak. Hicks slouched to his employer's side and handed him a note which proved to be from Pentress. Ware read and tossed it aside.

"If he wants to see me why don't he come here?" he growled.

"I reckon that old fellow they call Judge Price has sprung something sudden on the colonel," said Hicks. "He was out here the first thing this morning; you'd have thought he owned Belle Plain. There was a couple of strangers with him, and he had me in and fired questions at me for half an hour; then he hiked off up to The Oaks."

"Murrell's been arrested," said Ware in a dull level voice. Hicks gave him a glance of unmixed astonishment.

"No!"

"Yes, by God!"

"Who'd risk it?"

"Risk it? Man, he almost fainted lead away—a damned coward, Hell!"

"How do you know this?" asked Hicks, appalled.

"I was with him when he was taken—it was Hues—the man he trusted more than any other!" Ware gave the overseer a ghastly grin and was silent, but in that silence he heard the drumming of his own heart. He went on. "I tell you, to save himself, John Murrell will implicate the rest of us; we've got to get him free, and then, by hell—we ought to knock him in the head; he isn't fit to live!"

"The jail ain't built that'll hold him!" muttered Hicks.

"Of course, he can't be held," agreed Ware. "And he'll never be brought to trial; no lawyer will dare appear against him, no jury will dare find him guilty; but there's Hues, what about him?" He paused. The two men looked at each other for a long moment.

"Where did they carry the captain?"

"I don't know."

"It looks like the Clan was in a hell-fired hole—but shucks! What will be easier than to fix Hues?—and while they're fixing folks they'd better not overlook that old fellow Price. He's got some notion about Pentress and the boy." Mr. Hicks did not consider it necessary to explain that he was himself largely responsible for this.

"How do you know that?" demanded Ware.

"He as good as said so." Hicks looked uneasily at the planter. He knew himself to be compromised. The stranger named Cavendish had forced an admission from him that Murrell would not condone if it came to his knowledge. He had also acquired a very proper and wholesome fear of Judge Slosson Price. He stepped close to Ware's side. "What'll come of the girl, Tom? Can you figure that out?" he questioned, sinking his voice almost to a whisper. But Ware was incapable of speech, again his terrors completely overwhelmed him. "I reckon you'll have to find another overseer. I'm going to strike out for Texas," said Hicks.

Ware's eyes met his for an instant. He had thought of flight, too; was still thinking of it, but greed was as much a part of his nature as fear; Belle Plain was a prize not to be lightly cast aside, and it was almost his. He lurched across the room to the window. If he were going to act, the sooner he did so the better, and gain a respite from his fears. The road down the coast slid away before his heavy eyes; he marked each turn, then a palsy of fear shook him, his heart beat against his ribs, and he stood gnawing his lips while he gazed up at the sun.

"Do you get what I say, Tom? I am going to quit these parts," said Hicks. Ware turned slowly from the window.

"All right, Hicks. You mean you want me to settle with you, is that it?" he asked.

"Yes, I'm going to leave while I can; maybe I can't later on," said Hicks stolidly. He added: "I am going to start down the coast as soon as it turns dark, and before it's day again I'll have put the good miles between me and these parts."

"You're going down the coast?" and Ware was again conscious of the quickened beating of his heart. Hicks nodded. "See you don't meet up with John Murrell," said Ware.

"I'll take that chance. It seems a heap better to me than staying here."

Ware looked from the window. The shadows were lengthening across the lawn.

"Better start now, Hicks," he advised.

"I'll wait until it turns dark."

"You'll need a horse."

"I was going to help myself to one. This ain't no time to stand on ceremony," said Hicks shortly.

"Slosson shouldn't be left in the lurch like this—or your brother's folks—"

"They'll have to figure it out for themselves, same as me," rejoined Hicks.

"You can stop there as you go by."

"No," said Hicks. "I never did believe in this damn foolishness about the girl, and I won't go near George's—"

"I don't ask you to go there; you can give them the signal from the head of the bayou. All I want is for you to stop and light a fire on the shore. They'll know what that means. I'll give you a horse and fifty dollars for the job."

Hicks' eyes sparkled, but he only said:

"Make it twice that and maybe we can deal."

Racked and tortured, Ware hesitated; but the sun was slipping into the west; his windows blazed with the hot light.

"You swear you'll do your part?" he said thickly. He took his purse from his pocket and counted out the amount due Hicks. He named the total, and paused irresolutely.

"Don't you want the fire lighted?" asked Hicks. He was familiar with the employer's vacillating moods.

proved to be from Pentress. Ware read and tossed it aside.

"If he wants to see me why don't he come here?" he growled.

The Prodigal Judge

"Yes," answered Ware, his lips quivering; and slowly, with shaking fingers, he added to the pile of bills in Hicks' hand.

"Well, take care of yourself," said Hicks, when the count was complete. He thrust the roll of bills into his pocket and moved to the door.

Alone again, the planter collapsed into his chair, breathing heavily, but his terrors swept over him and left him with a savage sense of triumph. This passed; he sprang up, intending to recall Hicks and unmake his bargain. What had he been thinking of—safety lay only in flight! Before he reached the door his greed was in the ascendant. He dropped down on the edge of his bed, his eyes fixed on the window. The sun sank lower. From where he sat he saw it through the upper half of the sash, blood-red and livid in a mist of fleecy clouds.

It was in the tops of the old oaks now, which sent their shadows into his room. Again maddened by his terrors, he started and backed toward the door; but again his greed, the one dominating influence of his life, vanquished him.

He watched the sun sink. He watched the red splendor fade over the river; he saw the first stars appear. He told himself that Hicks would soon be gone—if the fire was not to be lighted he must act at once! He stole to the window. It was dusk now, yet he could distinguish the distant wooded boundaries of the great fields framed by the darkening sky. Then in the silence he heard the thud of hoofs.

CHAPTER XXVI.

The Judge Names His Second. "Price—" began Mahaffy. They were back in Raleigh in the room the judge called his office, and this was Mahaffy's first opportunity to ease his mind on the subject of the duel, as they had only just parted from Yancy and Cavendish, who had stopped at one of the stores to make certain purchases for the raft.

"Not a word, Solomon—it had to come. I am going to kill him. I shall feel better then."

"What if he kills you?" demanded

"It Will Be Quite Informal, the Code is Scarcely Applicable."

Mahaffy harshly. The judge shrugged his shoulders.

"That is as it may be."

"Have you forgotten your grandson?" Mahaffy's voice was still harsh and rasping.

"I regard my meeting with Pentress as nothing less than a sacred duty to him."

"We know no more than we did this morning," said Mahaffy. "You are mixing up all sorts of side issues with what should be your real purpose."

"Not at all, Solomon—not at all! I look upon my grandson's speedy recovery as an assured fact. Pentress dare not hold him. He knows he is run to earth at last."

"Price—"

"No, Solomon—no, my friend, we will not speak of it again. You will go back to Belle Plain with Yancy and Cavendish; you must represent me there. We have as good as found Hannibal, but we must be active in Miss Malroy's behalf. For us that has an important bearing on the future, and since I cannot, you must be at Belle Plain when Carrington arrives with his pack of dogs. Give him the advantage of your sound and mature judgment, Solomon; don't let any false modesty keep you in the background."

"Who's going to second you?" snapped Mahaffy.

The judge was a picture of indifference.

"It will be quite informal, the code is scarcely applicable; I merely intend to remove him because he is not fit to live."

"At sun-up!" muttered Mahaffy.

"I intend to start one day right even if I never live to begin another," said the judge, a sudden fierce light flashing from his eyes. "I feel that this is the turning point in my career, Solomon!" he went on. "The beginning of great things! But I shall take no chances with the future; I shall prepare for every possible contingency. I am going to make you and Yancy my grandson's guardians. There's a hundred thousand acres of land hereabout that must come to him. I shall outline in writing the legal steps to be taken to substantiate his claims. Also he will inherit largely from me at my death."

Something very like laughter escaped from Mahaffy's lips.

"There you go, Solomon, with your inopportune mirth! What in God's name have I if I haven't hope? Take that from me and what would I be? Why, the very fate I have been fighting off with tooth and nail would overwhelm me. I'd sink into unimportance—my unparalleled misfortunes would degrade me to a level with the commonest! No, sir, I've never been without hope, and though I've fallen I've always got up. What Pentress has in based on money he stole from me. By God, the days of his profit-taking are at an end! I am going to strip him. And even if I don't live to enjoy what's mine, my grandson shall! He shall wear velvet and a lace collar and ride his pony yet, by God, as a gentleman's grandson should!"

"It sounds well, Price, but where's the money coming from to push a lawsuit?"

The judge waved this aside.

"The means will be found, Solomon. Our horizon is lifting—I can see it lift! Don't drag me back from the portal of hope! We'll drink the stuff that comes across the water; I'll warm the cockles of your heart with imported brandy. I carry twenty years' hunger and thirst under my wee-coat, and I'll feed and drink like a gentleman yet!" The judge smacked his lips in an ecstasy of enjoyment, and dropping down before the table which served him as a desk, seized a pen.

"It's good enough to think about, Price," admitted Mahaffy grudgingly.

"It's better to do; and if anything happens to me the papers I am going to leave will tell you how it's to be done. Man, there's a million of money in sight, and we've got to get it and spend it and enjoy it! None of your swinish thrift for me, but life on a big scale—company, and feasting, and refined surroundings!"

"And you are going to meet Pentress in the morning?" asked Mahaffy. "I suppose there's no way of avoiding that?"

"Avoiding it?" almost shouted the judge. "For what have I been living? I shall meet him, let the consequences be what they may. Tonight when I have reduced certain facts to writing I shall join you at Belle Plain. The strange and melancholy history of my life I shall place in your hands for safe keeping. In the morning I can be driven back to Boggs."

"And you will go there without a second?"

"If necessary; yes."

"I declare, Price, you are hardly fitted to be at large! Why, you act as if you were tired of life! There's Yancy—there's Cavendish!"

The judge gave him an indulgent but superior smile.

"Two very worthy men, but I go to Boggs attended by a gentleman or I go there alone. I am aware of your prejudices, Solomon; otherwise I might ask this favor of you."

Mr. Mahaffy started loudly and turned to the door, for Yancy and Cavendish were now approaching the house, the latter with a meal sack slung over his shoulder.

"Here, Solomon, take one of my pistols," urged the judge hastily. "You may need it at Belle Plain. Good by, and God bless you!"

CHAPTER XXVII.

Bess Leads to Betty.

Just where he had parted from Ware, Carrington sat his horse, his brows knit and his eyes turned in the direction of the path. He was on his way to a plantation below Birard, the owner of which had recently imported a pack of bloodhounds; but this unexpected encounter with Ware had affected him strangely. He still heard Tom's stammering speech, he was still seeing his ghastly face, and he had come upon him with startling suddenness. He had chanced to look back over his shoulder and when he faced about there had been the planter within a hundred yards of him.

Presently Carrington's glance ceased to follow the windings of the path. He stared down at the gray dust and saw the trail left by Hues and his party. For a moment he hesitated; if the dogs were to be used with any hope of success he had no time to spare, and this was the merest suspicion, illogical conjecture, based on nothing beyond his distrust of Ware. In the end he sprang from the saddle, and leading his horse into the woods, tied it to a sapling.

A hurried investigation told him that five men had ridden in and out of that path. Of the five, all coming from the south, four had turned south again, but the fifth man—Ware, in other words—had gone north. He weighed the possible significance of these facts.

"I am only wasting time!" he confessed reluctantly, and was on the point of turning away, when, on the very edge of the road and just where the dust yielded to the hard clay of the path, his glance lighted on the print of a small and daintily shod foot. The throbbing of his heart quickened curiously.

"Betty!" The word leaped from his lips.

That small foot had left but the one impress. There were other signs, however, that claimed his attention; namely, the boot-prints of Slosson and his men; and he made the inevitable discovery that these tracks were all confined to the one spot. They began suddenly and as sudden-the bayou to the cabin, and he ran back up the path the distance of a mile and plunged into the woods on his right, his purpose being to pass around the head of the expanse of sluggish water to a point from which he could later approach the cabin.

But the cabin proved to be better defended than he had foreseen; and as he advanced, the difficulties of the task he had set himself became almost insurmountable; yet sustained as he was by his imperative need, he tore his way through the labyrinth of trailing vines, or floundered across acre-wide patches of green slime and black mud, which at each step threatened to engulf him in their treacherous depths, until at the end of an hour he gained the southern side of the clearing and a firmer footing within the shelter of the woods.

He ceased, yet there was no mystery about these; he had the marks of the wheels to help him to a sure conclusion. A carriage had turned just here, several men had alighted; they had with them a child, or a woman. Either they had re-entered the carriage and driven back as they had come, or they had gone toward the river. He felt the soul within him turn sick.

He stole along the path; the terror of the river was ever in his thoughts, and the specter of his fear seemed to flit before him and lure him on. Presently he caught his first glimpse of the bayou and his legs shook under him; but the path wound deeper still into what appeared to be an untouched solitude, wound on between the crowding tree forms, a little back from the shore, with an intervening tangle of vines and bushes. He scanned this closely as he hurried forward, scarcely conscious that he was searching for a safe trampled space at the edge; but the verdant and pressed its unbroken continuity, and twenty minutes later he came within sight of Hicks' clearing and the keel boat, where it rested against the bank.

A little farther on he found the spot where Slosson had launched the skiff the night before. The keel of his boat had cut deep into the slippery clay; more than this, the impress of the small shoe was repeated here, and just beside it was the print of a child's bare foot.

He no longer doubted that Betty and Hannibal had been taken across

The Merchant's Message.

(By W. Holt Harris, Chairman Mercantile Committee, C. S. Ass'n.)

To successfully advertise, the merchant must create an impression that is favorable and lasting. To secure a permanent impression, the merchant's ad should occupy the same position in the local paper every issue. A favorable impression is created by carrying a message of truth to the buyer, who looks kindly upon an ad that is well written, attractively arranged, and one that carries a message of bargains.

The buying public is always on the look-out for bargains, but looks skeptically upon the spasmodic advertiser, who occupies first one place then another in the local paper.

Consistency in advertising is as commendable as in any other transaction, for it creates confidence in the minds of the buying public and adds force to the message of merchandising.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOL is one of the greatest factors in our country. When reinforced by good, wholesome, reliable newspapers, it gives the American child a practical education. Without the aid of newspapers the public school can not give a boy or girl that degree of general intelligence that you wish your children to have. You can now get The Randall County News and The Dallas Semi-Weekly Farm News for one year, three papers a week, for $2.30.
