

LARGE NUMBERS AT SANTA FE SPECIAL

500 PEOPLE LISTEN TO INTERESTING DISCUSSIONS TUESDAY

Better Farming, Dairying, Poultry Raising and Domestic Science Lectures are Interesting.

Canyon ever alert and progressive, turned out in liberal numbers to the stop of the Santa Fe's Educational Special, Tuesday forenoon. Despite the early hour of the Canyon stop the "Athens of the Panhandle" did herself proud, through an interest in the general educational enterprise being presented without money and without price to the people of the Santa Fe system.

The train consisted of ten cars three of these being lecture and private cars, the other containing silos and silage equipment, dairy cows and dairying equipment, poultry and poultry house and farm equipment and domestic science equipment, together with a baggage car filled with printed matter and other supplies.

L. L. Johnson being introduced by H. M. Bainer, made a brief though interesting talk on poultry. He declared that the farm is the logical place to raise poultry, but was not unmindful of the service rendered by the more extensive grower, by the fancier, stating that the latter contributes liberally of to the fund of purebred stock. Launching into the subject broadly, Mr. Johnson gave first consideration to poultry houses, describing several types. Then came the section of breeding, feeding, housing, culling and selection, together with attention to marketing of eggs and poultry.

H. M. Bainer gave a talk on better farming, during which he denounced the all too common practice among Panhandle and Plains country farmers of spreading their efforts over too much ground. He declared that the same energy expended upon half the area would be far richer in results. This led down to what he described as the necessities for the assurance of maximum yields and prosperity, rotation, diversification and intensification. Seed selection, preparation of seedbed, seeding, cultivation, harvesting and also marketing received attention at the hands of this speaker. He declared that in the absence of the best seeds, best yields are impossible, regardless of the fact that the cultural methods applied may be of the best and most dependable throughout. The preparation of the seed bed, the proper seeding and after that the cultivation for a large yield. Having secured the yield, it is up to the farmer to give attention to the harvesting of his crops at the right or proper time. The marketing as the speaker agreed is the better accomplished through live stock, which latter assures a return to the land of valuable elements looking to its continued and perhaps increased fertility.

J. D. Tinsley exploited the silo and live stock as the means giving greatest returns to the tiller of the soil. He declared that nothing short of this regime will return to the farmer the highest percentage on his investment in farms and farm machinery and general equipment. Mr. Tinsley also handled the selection of dairying and dairy animals illustrating and strengthening his remarks by exhibiting three excellent cows of the dairy strains: Holstein, Guernsey and Durham. It was the unshakable stand of the speaker that the man on any average farm throughout this section of the country should have at least a few milk cows, and that these should for general benefit be of the dual purpose type rather than of the exclusive dairy class. The silo was described as an absolute essential to that man who would make of his farm the greatest possible success.

In the domestic science car Miss Amanda Stoltzfus and Miss Frances Lowen held sway receiving and entertaining ladies with lectures and demonstrations. This rather important department or division of the work from the Educational Special, has as its purpose increased efficiency of the homes of the entire people, and that too at a decrease in labor, time and money. The ladies seemed enthused on account of the lectures and many of them read eagerly the recipes, rules and suggestions decorating the walls of the coach. Special dishes in cookery were demonstrated, chief among these being the preparations from kaffir. To use the materials and facilities at hand was the chief burden of the talks and demonstrations. In addition to the illustrated work on the car, a vast array of labor saving devices for the home were shown.

Among those aboard the Educational Special at the Canyon stop, were:

H. M. Bainer, agricultural demonstrator Santa Fe System, Amarillo.

J. D. Tinsley, agricultural demonstrator Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe, Brownwood.

L. L. Johnson, assistant agricultural demonstrator, Amarillo.

H. C. McCowen, assistant agricultural demonstrator, Amarillo.

Miss Frances Lowen and Miss Amanda Stoltzfus representing the Department of Extension University of Texas, Austin.

I. O. Wilson, train master, Amarillo.

Vaughn Benjamin, attache Harvey House System, Newton, Kans.

J. L. Pape, chief clerk of department and in charge of publicity, Amarillo.

The attendance at Canyon was increased by attendance of a portion of the immense student bodies of the West Texas State Normal and the city schools.

Farmers Meeting Nov. 29.

A meeting has been called for Saturday, November 29 of all the farmers of Randall county at which time Wm. Ganzer, district agent for the U. S. Department of agriculture, and Hermon Benton, agricultural demonstrator for Randall, Potter, Oldham and Carson counties, will address the farmers on various farm topics of interest. Mr. Ganzer is a highly educated farmer and has had much experience in governmental work.

Mr. Benton is working in Randall county this week to get co-operators for this work next year. He reports progress and that his list in this county will be large. He spent the past three weeks in the other counties of this section and reports that he will have a good sized list in all four counties.

Wm McCann of Happy was a business caller in the city Thursday. He says that the wheat is looking the best down his way that he has ever seen it and that the acreage is very large.

COMMISSIONERS OPEN NEW ROADS

ONE ROAD IS TURNED DOWN BY THE COURT.

Harrison Report Results of Auditing County Books—Only Few Errors are Found.

The commissioners court adjourned Saturday afternoon after a busy week's work. The following business was transacted the last three days:

The report of the jury of review in regard to a road petitioned by Cyrus Eakman and others is as follows: "We recommend that the present road remain as it is now and that the petition for a new road be not granted." The court voted to sustain the report. The road petitioned was to begin at the northwest corner of section 64 T. T. R. R. Co. land and run east three miles to the northwest corner of section 14 in block 9 I. & G. N. land.

The report of the jury of review on the road petition of Nathan Schee and others recommended that a part of said road be granted as follows: Beginning at the northwest corner of survey 85 block 6 I. & G. N. and running south one and one-third miles. The court granted the road as recommended and order the overseer to open the same.

Various accounts against the county were approved.

A. P. Baird was appointed on the jury of review for the road petitioned for by Nathias Hess in lieu of Parker Hanna who was one of the petitioners for said road.

The jury of review for the road petitioned for by Henry Meyer and others presented a favorable report and allowed claims as follows: Henry Meyer $10, G. H. Albers $20, John E. Albers $20. Said road begins at the northwest corner of survey 109 in block 6 I. & G. N. lands, thence east along the north boundary of surveys 109, 108, 107 and 106 four miles and ending at the northeast corner of survey 106. The road overseer was ordered to open the road at once.

The reports of various county officers were examined and approved.

The court ordered the telephone in the county attorney's office be moved to the corridor on the second floor as such removal would be to the best interest of the officials and public in general.

C. N. Harrison was appointed in June to audit the books of the county and reported the following errors: In the collector's report of May 1913 there is shown $105.94 charged to the county special whereas the amount should have been charged $113.05 and whereas in the same report under county special the amount of commissioners credited was $5.29 and the correct amount of commissioners should have been $5.65. The collector was thus indebted the county $6.95 to balance said fund. In auditing the treasurer's books Mr. Harrison found in the April report a credit under the road and bridge fund of commissions on amount received of $109.66 whereas the correct commissions was $100.96. In the same report under the cemetery fund the amount of commissions shown is 50 cents whereas the amount should have been 71 cents. The treasurer was thus indebted to the county $8.49.

CONTEST NOT DECIDED YET

CANYON MAY BE INSPECTED AGAIN BEFORE DECISION.

Editor of Holland's Magazine States Contest Will Not Close for Several Weeks Yet.

The News wrote Holland's Magazine last week for information regarding the Cleanest Town contest and received the following letter in reply:

Dallas, Texas, November 14, 1913.

The Randall County News, Canyon, Texas.

I have your favor of November 12, and beg to advise you that in all probability the Cleanest Town Contest awards will not be decided for several weeks. Dr. Carrick is now in Oklahoma inspecting Oklahoma towns.

The first inspection of all towns is very nearly completed, but it will be necessary to make a second inspection of a number of towns in each class. There are some reports yet to come in, so that the writer cannot state where your town stands on this list. He is under the impression, however, that it is going to rank pretty high in its class on the first inspection.

Yours very truly,
Walter B. Whitman,
Editor Holland's.

Team Starts Practice.

The Canyon basketball team started practice Monday night at the old opera house. Henry Gamble has been elected manager for this year and Pug Cavet captain. C. F. Hunt will continue as coach. The first game will be played with the Normal team on Thanksgiving night. Cavet has not arrived in the city yet, but will come about the first of December. He is in good training after his strenuous baseball season and by that time the remainder of the team will have worked themselves into good condition.

Manager Grmble is working on the schedule for this season and a number of good games are assured. He has received letters from some of the big teams of the state and arrangements will probably be made to bring a faster bunch of players than has ever been seen on the local grounds.

The team will play Simmons college of Abilene in the city on Dec. 10 and 11. The Normal will play Simmons on the 12 and 13.

Wheat Very Fine.

R. E. Prewitt was in the city Tuesday on business and says that the wheat in the southeast part of the country is looking very fine. He estimates that there are 10,000 acres of wheat in his vicinity. Mr. Prewitt says that the average crop this year is about 200 acres. There are many 600 acre fields and the farmers who formerly planted only a small acreage are putting in large fields this year. Mr. Prewitt is very hopeful of a large yield next year.

Rev. F. M. Neal Returned.

Rev. F. M. Neal was returned by the Northwest Texas conference which was in session at Vernon last week. Rev. Neal will start on his third year's work in the local Methodist church next Sunday. The members of this organization are truly grateful that Mr. Neal is to be their pastor for another year.

Presiding Elder O. P. Kiker was transferred to the Plainview district and Presiding Elder J. T. Hicks of the Plainview district was transferred to the Amarillo district. This change was made Sunday night after the appointments had been read by the Bishop.

Judge F. P. Works of Amarillo district lay leader, was chosen the leading lay leader of the conference to be held next year. Judge Works was unable to be present and his election was a great honor.

The conference voted a very large majority not to change the name of the church, leaving off the word South.

Would Publish Report.

Mineral Wells, Texas,
November 16, 1913.

Editor Randall County News,
Canyon, Texas.

Dear Sir:—

I have been in the western part of the state for the last ninety days reclassifying and re-precising the state school land and upon my return home am advised by my wife that the recent grand jury of Randall county "suggested," "requested" or "demanded" that the former trustees of the West Texas State Normal College publish complete report of all receipts and disbursements of money passing through their hands in construction and equipping of the building. Now I am in hearty sympathy with this "request" or "demand," let it be either, as I believe the public should be taken in their confidence. The trustees employed Mr. Travis Shaw, in their opinion a very accurate accountant, to complete these figures in book form and strike a balance, and I suppose this book can be had by calling upon the president or secretary of the board. I really think it would be a good idea to publish the report of all receipts and disbursements in the Randall County News provided arrangements can be made with the manager of said paper. This report will cover several pages of the Randall County News, and perhaps will cost some money, and as the "salaries" of trustees were not sufficient for them to pay this cost the question arises who will pay it. However I am willing to chip in and help pay for same. The public is entitled to this information if it will pay the cost, and I will help do that. I hope to be in Canyon within the next few weeks and will be glad to render any assistance I can.

Yours very truly,
L. E. Cowling.

Apples in Bloom.

What do you know about apple trees being in bloom in November? W. T. Morland's trees are in full bloom now. The pretty warm weather of the past few weeks has completely buccooed the trees into believing that spring has come.

Mrs. B. T. Johnson left Monday for Dallas where she will attend the State Baptist Convention. She will visit her son W. C. Johnson at Westminster before returning.

All Odd Fellows and Rebekahs and their families are invited to meet at the I. O. O. F. hall on Thanksgiving morn and bring a well filled basket.

Mrs. J. D. Tunnell of Amarillo who has been visiting at the home of W. S. Hamric for the past month returned Sunday.

LOWERY-PHILLIPS DEFEATS NORMAL

3 TO 0 SCORE IN VERY SLOW UNINTERESTING GAME.

Normal Team State After Inactive Week—Drop Kick Made by Amarillo in Third Quarter.

The Normal team was defeated Monday in Amarillo by the Lowery-Phillips team in one of the slowest and most uninteresting games ever witnessed in that city. The Normal team was stale after a week of inactivity, there being no practice since the Seth Ward game two weeks ago.

Shotwell played quarter until the fourth period when Conner was sent in. The make up of the team was the same as played Seth Ward.

The first two quarters were played principally in the Lowery-Phillips territory. During the third quarter the Amarillo school rushed the ball down the line and landed a drop kick for three points. They were not within striking distance at any other time. During the fourth quarter the Normal took a brace and it looked as if they might have placed the ball over the line had there been a little more time.

Little open play was attempted by either team during the game.

A return game will probably be played here next Monday. It is not yet known whether the Roswell team will play here Thanksgiving.

Y. W. C. A. Meeting.

The meeting of the Y. W. C. A. Saturday, Nov. 15, 1913 was enjoyed by all members present. The organization unanimously elected Miss Jessie Green President of the Y. W. C. A., as the delegate to the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. convention, to be held at Kansas City, Dec. 31 to Jan 4.

Miss Hudspeth was elected faculty representative to this convention.

The program for the evening consisted of a most constructive and helpful lecture by Pres. Cousins.

Parvin-Bates Wedding.

Miss Elizabeth Bates of this city was married Sunday at Prosper to T. H. Parvin, an old friend of the family. The intentions of the young couple were kept secret from the family and none were informed until Monday. Miss Bates is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Bates of Canyon and has a large number of close friends in the city. She has been at Prosper at the home of her brother for the past three months. Mr. Parvin is a farmer and is an industrious young man.

Barefoot Stunt.

Rattlesnake Jim, the barefoot hiker passed through here, and made a stop over Monday night, going on in the snow Tuesday morning. He is a half breed Sioux Indian and his feet were calloused until he struck matches on their soles. He is on his way from Buffalo to the Panama canal.—Stratford Star.

Mr. and Mrs. John Rowan who have been visiting their daughter Mrs. Evans in Happy since last Saturday returned Friday.

Farm Facts.

(By Peter Radford, president, Farmer's Union.)

Farmers who are capable are always in demand.

Ability is the only measure of merit in farming.

The farmer who does not know where he stands does not stand anywhere.

A silo costs but very little compared with its real value: Build more silos.

The farmer who farms with his mind as well as his hands is generally a success.

Success in farming depends largely upon proper marketing, cheap money and co operation.

Every farmer should buy his own implements from the home dealer and acquire the home industry habit.

Co-operation between the rural and urban districts means better schools, better roads and better living.

Texas farmers will spend $30,000,000 this year outside the state for corn. Plant more corn and keep Texas money in Texas.

Benjamin Franklin must have been thinking of Texas farmers when he said: "If we do not all hang together, we will assuredly hang separately."

The nation's menu must be made up from the fields, pastures, orchards and gardens, and to farm intelligently the farmer must know what is needed.

Beautify the Home Grounds.

The home grounds mean a great deal more than most of us think. Only a very few people may come into the home, while many pass and see the yard, the buildings and the setting of the farmstead.

The occupants of the farm home are judged very largely by the environment of the home. Strangers do not as a rule expect to see costly and pretentious residences in the country, but they may reasonably expect to find neat homes, adorned and hedged in by trees, shrubs and flowers. And nothing reduces our standing estimated by strangers more than bleak, treeless, flowerless homes.

The value of trees, shrubs and flowers when farms are offered for sale is well known, yet few of us place high enough value on these while we live on the farm. If trees and ornamental grounds are so essential when the farm is to be sold, why are they not valuable while the farm is retained as a home?

The veteran trees that shade our homes stand as monuments to those who planted them. They witness for the progress and industry of the planter, cheer and comfort the family and remain to brighten those who live after

Truth Creates Confidence in Advertising.

By W. Holt Harris, Fort Worth, Chairman, Mercantile Committee, Commercial Secretaries Assn.

A modern business concern with its wide-awake eyes on the balance sheet cannot overlook the fact that advertising pays big dividends. Printer's ink, distributed through the columns of the local paper is the best advertising medium, and no merchant can climb the ladder of success without it. Truth in advertising is manifestly essential. It creates confidence, and confidence is the first requisite for securing buyers. Honesty creates good will. The good will of the purchaser is both desirable and necessary in successful selling.

Successful selling consists not only of furnishing the buyer with the commodity he desires. It is the least of the service he performs in selling. The manner in which the article is transferred to the purchaser, the courtesy, kindness and decency with which the transaction is made is supremely important. This is the policy of the advertisers of this paper.

- "Don't sleep in hot rooms."
- "Don't avoid the fresh air."

A VALUABLE SUGGESTION
IMPORTANT TO EVERYONE

It is now conceded by physicians that the kidneys should have more attention as they control the other organs to a remarkable degree and do a tremendous amount of work in removing the poisons and waste matter from the system by filtering the blood.

During the winter months, especially, when we live an indoor life, the kidneys should receive some assistance when needed, as we take less exercise, drink less water and often eat more rich heavy food, thereby forcing the kidneys to do more work than nature intended. Evidence of kidney trouble, such as lame back, annoying bladder troubles, smarting or burning, brick-dust or sediment, sallow complexion, rheumatism, may be weak or irregular heat action, warns you that your kidneys require help immediately to avoid more serious trouble.

Many physicians claim that an herbal medicine containing no minerals or opiates has the most healing influence. An ideal herbal compound that has had most remarkable success as a kidney and bladder remedy is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention the Canyon Weekly Randall County News.

CLASH OF FEEDS.

Fort Worth Show, November 22 to 29, Will Be Virtual Education to Producers.

A significant clash of "feeds as well as breeds" will be witnessed in the magnificent hog exhibits that will be made in the National Feeders and Breeders' Show, which will be held at Fort Worth November 22 to 29.

Hog producers throughout Texas and Oklahoma have been forwarding entries in great numbers and it is learned that the hogs that will be on display have been fattened on a variety of feeds—principally kafir corn, milo maize, Indian corn and peanuts. The supremacy of corn as a feed for hogs will be questioned and feeders and breeders are awaiting with interest the decisions of the judges. From the Panhandle is coming the hog that has never eaten a grain of corn in its life, but is sleek and well-finished on kafir corn and milo maize. From other sections of the State will come hogs that roamed at will through acres of peanuts and have attained the "battleship" state. And the corned variety, pampered with the "golden" grains, will be on hand to defend the title he has held so long. It is expected that the latter will not have altogether easy going.

The awards in the hog department will be more liberal than ever before and a number of new classes have been added. Entries have already been received in great number. Producer, big and little, will meet in competition.

The grass-fatted sheep of Southwest Texas, that section which has been in such a flourishing condition this year, will compete with its more pampered relatives that have been nurtured and carefully fed on the stock farms of North Texas. This will be the first time that Southwest Texas sheep have been entered in the show, but the producers, who have raised the standards of their breeds greatly within the past few years, anticipate carrying off many prizes. Additional classes and more prizes have been added in the sheep division. For the first time, Oxford Downs and Rambouillets will be given recognition. All of the standard breeds will be represented in the magnificent exhibit. The foremost breeders in the State have already entered and the small farmer is showing greater interest than ever before.

The Social Side of School.

By Mrs. E. P. Turner, Chairman, Homes and Schools, Texas Farm Life Commission.

Social companionship moulds the future destiny of our boys and girls so far as character and intelligence are concerned. Manhood and womanhood are the outcome of human sociability. The policy of the average school during the past has been an open feud with the social hunger of its students, but social life has ever been the strongest motive power in shaping the progress of civilization.

A social department should be equipped thoroughly as the social center of the community. It should be the headquarters for all-social, civic and athletic movements. It should be the headquarters for all the community art clubs, music guilds, literary societies, dramatic clubs and social organizations. There should be reception rooms, music halls, auditoriums and any other feature in current social use should be provided. There should also be a gymnasium with a swimming pool and complete equipment for recreational sports.

FAMILY AVOIDS SERIOUS SICKNESS

By Being Constantly Supplied With Theford's Black-Draught.

McDuff, Va.—"I suffered for several years," says Mrs. J. B. Whittaker, of his place, "with sick headache, and stomach trouble.

Ten years ago a friend told me to try Theford's Black-Draught, which I did, and I found it to be the best family medicine for young and old.

I keep Black-Draught on hand all the time now, and when my children feel a little bad, they ask me for a dose, and it does them more good than any medicine they ever tried.

We never have a long spell of sickness in our family, since we commenced using Black-Draught."

Theford's Black-Draught is purely vegetable, and has been found to regulate weak stomachs, aid digestion, relieve indigestion, colic, wind, nausea, headache, sick stomach, and similar symptoms.

It has been in constant use for more than 70 years, and has benefited more than a million people.

Your druggist sells and recommends Black-Draught. Price only 25c. Get a package to-day.

Where Merchants May Profit.

O. C. Payne.

It is estimated that manufacturers and jobbers in the United States spend each year a little more than $1 per each inhabitant advertising in magazines and other periodicals of wide circulation the merits of their goods. The object of this advertising of articles of standard merchandise is to create a demand for them and to stimulate the demand.

Nearly every town in the Southwest of 1,500 population has a trade territory around it of at least as many more people, many of them twice as many more. This means that the merchants of such a town who carry reasonably full lines of trade-marked-advertised merchandise have spent for them each year by the manufacturers more than $5,000 in creating and stimulating a demand for those goods.

What is the local merchant doing to turn that expenditure to his own account? Too often he is doing nothing. What should he do? Many are answering that question to their increased prosperity. They advertise in their local papers that they have in stock the very goods that the people are reading about in the pages of the magazines. They advertise every week, and they use liberal space and name specific lines of goods and quote prices. In this way, for each dollar they spend in advertising they really get the benefit of two—theirs and that of the manufacturer.—Texas Farm and Ranch.

Taxes Coming Good.

Tax Collector Worth A. Jennings reports that taxes are coming in faster this month than they did during the month of November last year. October was not so good as October of last year. A large per cent of the taxes collected so far are from non-resident land owners.

Billy Mersfelder and wife visited the former's mother, Mrs. Sue B. Mersfelder last week.

WHEN YOUR LIVER GOES WRONG

Nearly Everybody Needs a Liver Stimulant at One Time or Another.

Nearly everybody now and then is annoyed with a sluggish liver or by constipation or by biliousness.

It is for this reason that Dodson's Liver Tone is such a good medicine to keep always in the house.

Either children or grown-ups can take Dodson's Liver Tone without bad after-effects and without restriction of habit or diet. It is a vegetable liquid with a pleasant taste, but a reliever of constipation and liver troubles, and entirely takes the place of calomel.

The City Pharmacy guarantees every bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone they sell. It costs 50 cents per bottle and if you are not satisfied that it is worth the money, they will hand your half dollar back to you with a smile.

Don't be fooled by preparations imitating the claims of Dodson's Liver Tone. Just remember The City Pharmacy will give you back your money if Dodson's Liver Tone fails you. That is a guarantee that guarantees. (Advertisement.)

Entertainment Pleases.

The entertainment at the Normal Thursday night by Miss Davault was highly pleasing. Miss Davault presented "The Music Master" and concluded the program with a number of short readings. This was an extra number of the lyceum course which the Normal has procured.

F. M. Ryburn of Amarillo was a business caller in the city Friday.

According to a letter published this week in the News, Canyon is likely to be inspected again before the Cleanest Town Contest closes. Many Canyon people had hoped the contest would be announced this month, but there seems to have been delays in the inspections since Dr. Carrick stated while on his visit here that only a few more days were required to complete the work. The particular portion of this letter of interest to Canyon is that another inspection may be made. This has been necessary in the contest since it was organized. Canyon must be awake and alive to the situation. Keep in the clean up game. But so far as that concerns we should keep in that spirit all the year around. The contest is not over by any means and if there should be another inspection, we must be ready. The News hopes that the ladies will make some more inspections of the business houses so that none may become slack in their routine work. Keep in the game as long as the contest is on!

Hon. F. M. Bralley has resigned as president of the board of regents of normal school. Gov. Colquitt has not yet named his successor.

Clarendon News—B. F. Fears is editor and proprietor of the State Line Tribune, at Farwell. But, judging from a number of his recent editorial utterances, that name he carries is a misfit. For instance, listen to this from last week's Tribune: "Farwell is encumbered with a political wart in the person of an ex-J.P., which she would be glad to exchange for a wild hog claim or a bee course in Arkansas, or might consider a town lot in Parmerton." How's that for "speaking out?" Of course no names are mentioned, but the man alluded to, and all the Farwell community, probably know who's "it." None of our business, but if we felt that it was our place to advise Bro. Fears, we'd suggest that his "nerve" was admirable, but an altogether different adjective must be used in speaking of his judgment.

Many exchanges are speaking of Tammany as "down and out" and the "under dog" and "can't come back", but we are inclined to think that Tammany is still a real and live thing and that the spotted creature will come back. Charles Murphy may cease to be the dictator but Tammany will continue to live. It is too old an institution to die with one defeat. The opposition were united this year but in the future there is nothing warranted that they will continue united.

Happy is the man who can use his mind more and his tongue less.

CAUSING A COOLNESS.

The two bosom friends met fortuitously and rushed into a mutually fond embrace.

"Oh, dearie," cried the first to get her breath, "I so wanted to be the first to congratulate you on your engagement! How mean you were not to give your dearest friend a hint as to what was expected."

"Well, dear, I—"
"Now, don't tell me you concealed things from me on purpose."

"I—"
"I know. And that charming fiancé of yours! Weren't you perfectly surprised to death when he proposed?"

"I can't say I was. Why should I have been?"

"Why, everybody else was."

CHAPTER VII.

A Legal Document.

MARY TURNER spent less than an hour in that mysteriously important engagement with Dick Gilder of which she had spoken to Aggie. After separating from the young man she went alone down Broadway, walking the few blocks of distance to Sigismund Harris' office.

Harris regarded his client with an appreciative eye as he bowed in greeting and invited her to a seat.

"I sent your cousin, Miss Agnes Lynch, the release which she is to sign," he explained, "when she gets that money from General Hastings. I wish you'd look it over when you have time. It's all right, I'm sure, but I appreciate your opinion of things, Miss Turner—particularly of legal documents."

"Thank you," Mary said. "And have you heard from them yet?"

"No," the lawyer replied. "I gave them until tomorrow. If I don't hear then I shall start suit at once." Then the lawyer's manner became unusually bland and self-satisfied as he opened a drawer of the desk and brought forth a rather formidable appearing document, bearing a most impressive seal.

"You will be glad to know," he went on unctuously, "that I was entirely successful in carrying out that idea of yours as to the injunction. My dear Miss Turner, Portia was a squawking baby compared with you."

"Thank you again," Mary answered as she took the legal paper. For a moment her glance ran over the words of the page.

"It's splendid!" she declared. "Did you have much trouble in getting it?"

"Why, no," he declared. "But at the outset when I made the request the judge just nearly fell off the bench. Then I showed him that Detroit case to which you had drawn my attention, and the upshot of it all was that he gave me what I wanted without a whimper. He couldn't help himself, you know."

That mysterious document with the imposing seal reposed safely in Mary's bag when she returned to the apartment.

Mary had scarcely received from Aggie an account of Cassidy's threatening invasion when the maid announced that Mr. Irwin had called.

"Show him in," Mary directed.

"Who's the gink?" Aggie demanded.

"You ought to know. He's the lawyer retained by General Hastings in the matter of a certain breach of promise suit."

"Hope he's brought the money."

"Leave the room now," Mary ordered. "When I call to you come in, but be sure and leave everything to me. Merely follow my lead. And, Agnes, be very ingenious."

"Oh, I'm wise—I'm wise," Aggie nodded as she hurried toward her bedroom. "I'll be a squab—surest thing you know!"

Next moment Mary gave a formal greeting to the lawyer who represented the man she planned to snuff effectively.

Irwin lost no time in coming to the point.

"I called in reference to this suit which Miss Agnes Lynch threatens to bring against my client, General Hastings."

"It's not a threat," Mr. Irwin. "The suit will be brought."

"You realize, of course, that this is merely plain blackmail."

"If it's blackmail, Mr. Irwin, why don't you consult the police?"

Mary turned to the maid, who now entered in response to the bell she had sounded a minute before. "Fanny, will you ask Miss Lynch to come in, please?" Then she faced the lawyer again, with an aloofness of manner that was contemptuous. "Really, Mr. Irwin," she drawled, "why don't you take this matter to the police?"

"You know perfectly well," the lawyer said bitterly, "that General Hastings cannot afford such publicity."

"Oh, as for that," Mary suggested evenly, and now there was a trace of flippancy in her fashion of speaking. "I'm sure the police would keep your complaint a secret. Really, you know, Mr. Irwin, I think you had better take your troubles to the police rather than to me. You will get much more sympathy from them."

The lawyer sprang up with an air of sudden determination.

"Very well, I will then," he declared. Mary pushed in his direction the telephone that stood on the table.

"3100 Spring," she remarked encouragingly. "Will bring an officer almost immediately." She leaned back in her chair and surveyed the baffled man amusedly.

"Nevertheless," he rejoined, "you know perfectly well that General Hastings never promised to marry this girl. You know"—He broke off as Aggie entered the drawing room.

Now, the girl was demure in seeming almost beyond belief—a childish creature, very fair and dainty, guileless surely, with those untroubled eyes of blue, those softly curving lips of warmest red and the more delicate bloom and the rounded cheeks. There were the charms of innocence and simplicity in her manner as she stopped just within the doorway, whence she regarded Mary with a timid, pleading gaze, her slender little form poised lightly as if for flight.

"Did you want me, dear?" she asked.

"Agnes," Mary answered affectionately, "this is Mr. Irwin, who has come to see you in behalf of General Hastings."

"Oh," the girl murmured, her voice quivering a little as the lawyer, after a short nod, dropped again into his seat. "Oh, I'm so frightened!" She hurried, fluttering, to a low stool behind the desk beside Mary's chair, and there she sank down, drooping slightly and catching hold of one of Mary's hands as if in mute pleading for protection.

"Nonsense," Mary exclaimed soothingly. "There's really nothing at all to be frightened about, my dear child; you mustn't be afraid, Agnes. Mr. Irwin says that General Hastings did not promise to marry you. Of course you understand, my dear, that under no circumstances must you say anything that isn't strictly true and that

"Oh, I'm so frightened!"

If he did not promise to marry you you have no case—none at all. Now, Agnes, tell me. Did General Hastings promise to marry you?"

"Oh, yes—oh, yes, indeed!" Aggie cried falteringly. "And I wish he would. He's such a delightful old gentleman!"

The legal representative of the delightful old gentleman scowled disquietedly at this outburst.

"Was that promise made in writing?"

"No," Aggie answered gushingly. "But all his letters were in writing, you know. Such wonderful letters! So tender and so—er—interesting!"

"Yes, yes, I dare say," Irwin agreed hastily, with some evidences of chagrin.

"But you're quite sure, Agnes," Mary questioned gently, "that General Hastings did promise to marry you?"

"Oh, yes," Aggie declared tensely. "Why, I would swear to it." The timid eyes, so appealing in their soft luster, went first to Mary, then gazed trustfully into those of the routed attorney.

"We're beaten," he confessed dejectedly, turning his glance toward Mary, whom plainly he regarded as his real adversary in the combat on his client's behalf. "I'm going to be quite frank with you, Miss Turner, quite frank," he stated, with more geniality, though with a very curving air. "We can't afford any scandal, so we're going to settle at your own terms." He took from his pocket a thick bill case and from this a sheaf of banknotes, which he laid on the desk before Mary, with a little laugh of discomfiture over having been beaten in the contest.

As he did so Aggie thrust forth an avaricious hand, but it was caught and held by Mary before it reached above the top of the desk, and the avaricious gesture passed unobserved by the attorney.

"We can't fight where ladies are concerned," he went on, assuming as best he might contrive a chivalrous tone. "So, if you will just hand over General Hastings' letters, why, here's your money. You have the letters, haven't you?" he demanded abruptly.

"We can't afford any scandal."

Aggie coyly took a thick bundle from its resting place on her rounded bosom.

"They never leave me," she said.

"Well, they can leave you now, all right," the lawyer remarked unsympathetically. He reached quickly forward for the packet, which Aggie extended willingly enough. But it was Mary, who, with a swift movement caught and held it.

"I think," Mary explained tranquilly, "that you had better see our lawyer, Mr. Harris, in reference to this. We women know nothing of such details of business settlement."

"Oh, I see," he said disagreeably, with a frown to indicate his complete sagacity in the premises.

"I thought you would, Mr. Irwin," Mary returned. "If you'll take the money to Mr. Harris Miss Lynch will meet you in his office at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and when her suit for damages for breach of promise has been legally settled out of court, you will get the letters. Good afternoon, Mr. Irwin."

The lawyer made a hurried bow which took in both of the women, and walked quickly toward the door.

"Oh, you forgot your marked money, Mr. Irwin," Mary said.

The lawyer wheeled and stood staring at the speaker with a certain sheepishness of expression that bore witness to the completeness of his discomfiture. Without a word he walked back to the desk, picked up the money and restored it to the bill case.

"Young woman," he said emphatically, "you ought to have been a lawyer." And he took his departure, while Mary smiled in triumph and Aggie sat gazing astonished.

"You've darn near broke my heart," she cried, bumping up violently. "Iet Couldn't you see that all he wanted was to get the letters and have us take the marked money? Then, my simple young friend, we would have been arrested very neatly indeed—for blackmail."

CHAPTER VIII. The Thief. MARY was in joyous spirits after her victorious matching of brains against a lawyer of high standing in his profession when she had entered the telephone booth, which had been installed in an extra closet of her bedroom for the sake of greater privacy on occasion. During her absence from the drawing room Garson again came into the apartment seeking her. On being told by Aggie as to Mary's whereabouts he sat down to await her return, listening without much interest to the chatter of the adventuress. The maid appeared and said:

"There's a girl wants to see Miss Turner." "She says it's important. I guess the poor thing's in hard luck from the look of her," the kindly Fannie added. "Oh, then, she'll be welcome, of course!" Aggie declared, and Garson nodded in acquiescence. "Tell her to come in and wait, Fannie. Miss Turner will be here right away." She turned to Garson as the maid left the room. "Mary sure is an easy boob," she remarked cheerfully. "Bless her soft heart!"

A minute later a girl perhaps twenty years of age stepped just within the doorway and stood there with eyes downcast after one swift, furtive glance about her. Her whole appearance was that of dejection. Her soiled black gown, the cringing posture, the pallor of her face, proclaimed the abject misery of her state.

"Are you Miss Turner?" she asked in a voice broken by nervous dismay. "Really, I am very sorry," Aggie replied primly, "but I am only her cousin, Miss Agnes Lynch. But Miss Turner is likely to be back any minute now." "Can I wait?" came the timid question. "Certainly," Aggie answered hospitably. "Please sit down." As the girl obediently sank down on the nearest chair Garson addressed her sharply, so that the visitor started uneasily at the unexpected sound. "You don't know Miss Turner?" "No," came the faint reply. "Then, what do you want to see her about?" "She once helped a girl friend of mine, and I thought—I thought—" "You thought she might help you," Garson interrupted. "You have been in stir—prison, I mean," Aggie hastily corrected the lapse into underworld slang. "Come a distressed muttering of assent from the girl. The conversation was put to an end by the entrance of Mary, who stopped short on seeing the limp figure huddled in the chair. "A visitor, Agnes?" she inquired. At the sound of her voice the girl looked up and spoke with some degree of energy. "You're Miss Turner?" she questioned.

"Yes," Mary said. Her words rang kindly and she smiled encouragement. A gasp burst from the white lips of the girl, and she covered as one stricken physically. "Mary Turner! Oh, my God! I—She hid her face within her arms and sat bent until her head rested on her knees in an abasement of misery. Vaguely startled by the hysterical outburst from the girl, Mary's immediate thought was that there was a pitiful instance of one suffering from starvation. "Joe," she directed rapidly, "have Fannie bring a glass of milk with an egg and a little brandy in it, right away." The girl in the chair was shaking soundlessly under the stress of her emotions. A few disjointed phrases fell from her quivering lips. "I didn't know—oh, I couldn't!" "Don't try to talk just now," Mary warned, reassuringly. "Wait until you've had something to eat." Aggie, who had observed developments closely, now lifted her voice in tardy lamentations over her own stupidity. "Why, the poor gawk's hungry!" she exclaimed. "And I never got the dope on her. Ain't I the simp?" The girl regained a degree of self control and showed something of forlorn dignity. "Yes," she said dully, "I'm starving." Mary regarded the afflicted creature with that sympathy born only of experience. "Yes," she said softly, "I understand." Then she spoke to Aggie. "Take her to my room and let her rest there for a while. Have her drink the egg and milk slowly and then lie down for a few minutes anyhow."

Half an hour afterward Aggie reported with her charge, who, though still shambling of gait and stooping, showed by some faint color in her face and an increased steadiness of bearing that the food had already strengthened her much. "She would come," Aggie explained. "I thought she ought to rest for a while longer anyhow." "I'm all right, I tell you," came the querulous protest. "Are you quite sure?" Mary said to the girl. "Then tell us all about it—this trouble of yours, you know. What is your name?" "Helen Morris." "I don't have to ask if you have been in prison. Your face shows it." "I—I came out—three months ago." "And you'd made up your mind to go straight?" "Yes," The word was a whisper. "You were going to do what the chaplain had told you." Mary went on. "You were going to start all over again, weren't you?" The bent head of the girl bent lower in assent. "It doesn't work very well, does it?" "No, I'm whipped." Mary's manner changed. She spoke cheerfully for the first time. "Well, then, how would you like to work with us?" "You—you mean that?" "Our kind of work pays well when you know how. Look at us. Suppose I should stake you for the present and put you in with a good crowd. All you would have to do would be to answer advertisements for servant girls. I will see that you have the best of references. Then, when you get in with the right people you will open the front door some night and let in the gang. Of course you will make a getaway when they do and get your lift as well." There flashed still another of the swift, sly glances, and the lips of the girl parted as if she would speak. But she did not; only her head sagged even lower on her breast and the shrunken form grew yet more shrunken. "It doesn't suit you? Good! I was in hopes it wouldn't." So, here's another plan. Suppose you could go west—some place where you would have a fair chance, with money enough so you could live like a human being till you got a start?" There came a tensing of the relaxed form, and the head lifted a little, so that the girl could look at her questioner. "I will give you that chance," Mary said simply, "if you really want it." The wretched girl sat suddenly erect, and her words came eagerly. "Oh, I do!" And now her hungry gaze remained fast on the face of the woman who offered her salvation. "Then I have just one thing to say to you first. If you are going to live straight start straight, and then go through with it. Do you know what that means?" "You mean keep straight all the time?" The girl spoke with a force drawn from the other's strength. "I mean more than that. I mean forget that you were ever in prison. I don't know what you have done—I don't think I care. But whatever it was, you have paid for it—a pretty big price too."

"I have, I have!" The thin voice broke, wailing. "Well, then," Mary went on, "just begin all over again, and be sure you stand up for your rights. Don't let them make you pay a second time. Go where no one knows you, and don't tell the first people who are kind to you that you have been crooked. If they think you are straight, why, be it. Then nobody will have any right to complain. Will you promise me this?" "Yes, I promise," came the answer, very gravely, quickened with hope. "Good!" Mary exclaimed, with a smile of approval. "Wait a minute," she added and left the room. "Huh! Pretty soft for some people," Aggie remarked to Garson, with a sniff. Mary returned soon. In her hand she carried a roll of bills. She went to the girl and held out the money. "Take this. It will pay your fare west and keep you quite awhile if you are careful."

But, without warning, a revulsion seized on the girl. She struck again and turned her head away as the body trembled. "I can't take it," she exclaimed. "I can't! I can't!" "Didn't you come here for help?" "Yes," was the faltering reply, "but—but I didn't know—it was you!" "Then you have met me before?" Mary said quietly. "No, no." The girl's voice rose shrill. Aggie spoke her mind with frankness. "She's lying." Garson agreed. His eyes were spoken in a tone of complete certainty. That Mary, too, was of their opinion was shown in her next words. "So you have met me before? Where?" The girl unwittingly made confession in her halting words. "I can't tell you." There was despair in her voice. "You must." The girl only crouched lower. "I can't," she cried again, panting as if in exhaustion. "Why can't you?" "Because—because—" The girl could not go on. "What were you sent up for?" "For stealing." "Stealing what?" "Goods." "Where from?" "The Emporium."

In a flash of intuition the whole truth was revealed to the woman who stood looking down at the cowering creature before her. "The Emporium!" she repeated. There was a tragedy in the single word. "Then you are the one who—" The accusation was cut short by the girl's shriek. "I am not! I am not, I tell you!" For a moment Mary lost her poise. Her voice rose in a flare of rage. "You are! You are!" The cowering spirit of the girl could struggle no more. She could only sit in a huddled, shaking heap of dread. Mary soon mastered her to such an extent that when she spoke again, as if in self communion, her words came quietly, yet with overtones of a supreme woe. "She did it!" Then after a little she addressed the girl with a certain wondering before this mystery of horror. "Why did you throw the blame on me?" The girl made several efforts before her mumbling became intelligible, and then her speech was gasping, broken with fear. "I found out they were watching me, and I was afraid they would catch me. So I took them and ran into the cloak room and put them in a locker that wasn't close to mine and some in the pocket of a coat that was hanging there. God knows I didn't know whose it was. I—just put them there—I was frightened—" "But they caught you later. Why didn't you tell then?" "I was afraid," came the answer from the shuddering girl. "I told them it was the first time I had taken anything, and they let me off with a year." "You cried and lied, and they let you off with a year. I wouldn't cry. I told the truth—and—" Mary's voice broke in a tearful sob. The color had gone out of her face, and she stood rigid, looking down at the girl whose crime had ruined her life with an expression of infinite loathing in her eyes. Aggie took advantage of the pause. Her voice was acid. "Some people are sneaks—just sneaks!" Somehow the speech was welcome to the girl, gave her a touch of courage sufficient for cowardly protestations. It was more like the abuse that was familiar to her. A gush of tears came. "I'll never forgive myself, never!" she moaned. "Oh, yes, you will," Mary said malevolently. "People forgive themselves pretty easily. Stop crying. Nobody is going to hurt you." She thrust the money again toward the girl and crowded it into the half reluctant, half greedy hand. "Take it, and get out." The contempt in her voice rang still sharper. "Go, before I change my mind!" (Continued next week)

stood looking down at the cowering creature before her. "The Emporium!" she repeated. There was a tragedy in the single word. "Then you are the one who—" The accusation was cut short by the girl's shriek. "I am not! I am not, I tell you!" For a moment Mary lost her poise. Her voice rose in a flare of rage. "You are! You are!" The cowering spirit of the girl could

Was Arrested For Vagrancy. Last Saturday City Marshal Wolfe had the unpleasant task of arresting a blind man the name of whom we do not know. It was in the afternoon that the "blind" man approached a group of citizens and implored them in the name of mercy to help the "afflicted". His lamentation was heart-rendering to listen to. When he had finished his woe-be-gone wail for help, one of his listeners said, "Prove to us that you are blind by removing those goggles and allow us to examine your eyes and we will give you ten dollars." The "blind" man responded indignantly, "I'll bet you never saw ten dollars."
