Hughes has occupied his place upon the highest court of the world, while at the same time flirting with the politicians, and knowing that he would accept the nomination if given a chance. Talk about the supreme court being free from politics—not so long as such men are placed there. Hughes continued the good name of this great court by his actions. Why did he not come out and stand like the remainder of the candidates. There is no question of his desiring the nomination. His telegram of acceptance shows distinctly that he has in mind campaign thunder for many days and weeks. If he ever had a chance for election, it was swept away by his methods of procuring the nomination.

Governor Ferguson opened his campaign for re-election at Waco Saturday. He defended the acts of the administration and puts it up to Morris to answer the charges. Morris made against the Ferguson administration by telling what appropriations have been misused by himself. It's Morris' move. But he won't. He knows that all of the money appropriated was needed by the state government, but is appealing to the prejudices of men who think that the tax rate ought to remain the same year after year, or perhaps be lowered a little year after year.

Before the end of the week President Wilson will be nominated by acclamation. He is charged and counter-charged by the politicians of the land for numerous and sundry things, but for the one fact that he has lead the American people through the most dangerous period of the world's history without bloodshed, will gain for him one of the largest votes ever accorded a President of the United States.

All is not peace and quietude in the republican camp. The Progressives threaten to go astray. Roosevelt's actions remind one of a Mexican leader. Four years ago he lead his flock away from the fold. When picking was good for him in the old camp, he slipped back and felt the deserters to starve without a leader. The Progressives ought to appreciate that—or else not.

The Lockney Beacon complains that Amarillo has tried to corner all of the political honors of this section of the state—and true she has. But in the race for the Court of Civil Appeals, to which the Beacon refers, Canyon has a candidate who will be a fit opponent for the Amarillo candidate or any candidate from any section of the district. Judge B. Frank Bule is an able lawyer. He is the old fashioned man who believes that there is just one way to do things—the right way. He is a hard worker and if elected will make one of the ablest judges that has ever graced a Texas bench. To the Beacon, we commend Judge Bule for consideration. We know you will not be disappointed in selecting him as your candidate for this high office. And furthermore, this is the first time that a Canyon man has ever offered for any of the high offices of the state.

While the wheat crop of the Panhandle has been cut short by the unfavorable spring, yet there will be a much better crop than was generally expected. The late sowed crop will be of little or no value. The crop that was planted in time is looking good and many farmers says they will have 12 to 15 bushel yields. The row crops generally is doing fine and will make another big yield. The man who does not stake all of his faith on wheat is wise.

The Mexican situation is becoming more alarming day by day, if the daily newspaper reports are to be taken as an index of what is happening. It seems that the Mexicans are becoming bold under the guise of the Carranza note demanding the withdrawal of United States troops.

The people of Randall County are behind Judge B. Frank Bule in his candidacy for the Court of Civil Appeals. He is our man, and is an able man. Write to your friends in the district and urge his candidacy. You can greatly assist him in his race.

At least President Wilson will now have the pleasure of filling a designing politician's place on the highest court of the land, with an able lawyer who would not use such practices as Hughes.

Every voter in Randall county should hear Dr. S. P. Brooks at the court house Saturday night. He is not only one of the big men of Texas, but one of the leading candidates for the U. S. Senate.

If Roosevelt didn't dictate Hughes' telegram to the Chicago convention, then Hughes has turned himself into a good looking Roosevelt.

There will be a big time in Canyon Friday and Saturday when that lot sale starts. In fact Canyon is always a good place to be.

One thing we like about the suffragettes is that they never give up the cause.

Judge Riddle for the Senate.

Judge Riddle would like for the best in the world to have your support for the Senate. You know there is nothing in the professional politician and chronic office seeker.

We need men with initiative and constructive ability, men that have proven themselves worthy and capable, men that have our country at heart and can do things. We need that kind of a man now, and will need him badly for the next few years.

Congress is wasting hundreds of millions every year in foolish extravagance, and we need the element of common-sense and practical ability in it.

Federal Valuations of Railways.

(A. M. Hove) For about two years the Santa Fe Railway has maintained a force of men at Amrillo in connection with the valuation of railways that the Interstate Commerce Commission is making of all the American railways. There are at present fifty seven men employed at the Amarillo office in connection with the physical investigation of Western lines of which F. C. Fox is General Manager. The expense is borne by the railroad.

When Congress authorized the Interstate Commerce Commission to make the valuation of railways, it was generally understood that the cost of this enormous undertaking would be borne by the Federal Government. But when the plans of work were finally made, it was determined that the railroads themselves should supply the data, many of them along lines that required absolutely new schedules. It then became apparent that the heaviest cost would fall on the railroads and eventually its customers—the American people.

So far nineteen orders for information have been issued by the valuation division of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The first required detailed maps to be filed as of June 30, 1914, showing everything as lines, location, lands structures, grades as shown on the profile: in short the map must be one of every detail, a kind that few railroads had. Then there was a call for an inventory of all the property of the carriers. Field parties were organized to go over the roads, the railways being required to supply pilots and other assistants.

Much has been done so far. But it will take at least four years to complete the work, including accounting, original cost, present value, and an estimate of what the reproduction cost new would be. Yet really the only work that is now progressing satisfactorily is the physical examination of the property, something like sixteen field parties being at work. They expect to cover close to 50,000 miles a year. About 50,000 miles are completed out of over 250,000 miles of railroad.

The director of valuation Chas. A. Prouty, Interstate Commerce Commissioner, estimates that this valuation work will cost the railroads $35,000,000.00 and the government about half of this amount. It is very likely that the cost will exceed this amount. The making of maps alone according to the commissioner is costing the railroads in some cases $100.00 a mile, to say nothing of other things fully as costly.

In this connection a statement made last November by Mr. Prouty in a public address is worthy of note. He said: "Now I speak from my experience of seventeen years as a railroad commissioner when I say I am sure that all of us in the past have been inclined to feel that whatever was required of a railroad did not cost anybody anything certainly that it did not cost the public anything. But, my friends, we have come to a time when that error has become apparent. We have come to a time when we realize that somebody has to pay for this work which the railroad does, and that somebody is the public."

The object of this Federal valuation of railroads is to get a fair basis for rate making. It is agreed that the railroads re-entitled to fair return on the investment. When the value of the roads have been settled definitely, the rates will be made accordingly. When the work was first started, many people in government circles thought that this was the first step toward government ownership. But in two years those closest to this valuation work have changed their mind. It would take upwards of twenty billion dollars to take over all the railroads and saddle an enormous debt on the nation.

Uncle Sam's navy constitutes the most thoroughly American body of men in the world. Of the 52,561 men abroad American workshops or serving on shore 47,664 were born within the continental limits of the United States, and of the remainder 1,900 were born in the overseas possessions of this country.

The daughters of the American Revolution in Kansas are arranged with the state agricultural department for the founding and maintenance of a garden for the conservation and cultivation of native wild flowers. An excellent idea, and particularly welcome at a time when we are called upon to read that other states are being literally stripped of trailing arbutus by the thoughtlessness and selfishness of people in the great cities.

Foreign merchants in Mexico City, headed by a large number of Germans, Monday served notice on General Hill, military commander of the federal district, that they will close their shops and ask their governments to take steps to protect their interests unless Hill's "anti-high-price" order is rescinded. General Hill, in reply, reiterated his threat to depart all foreign merchants who fix wholesale or retail prices above the maximum set in his decree.

Rice is the cardinal feature of the Turkish bill of fare. "Pulau," or cooked rice is the national dish. Rich and poor alike eat it every day. It makes up the main part of the soldier's daily ration. Constantinople alone imports some 44,000,000 pounds of rice per year, in normal times. At least 50 per cent of the total imports consist of Rangoon rice (British India), which has predominated for several decades. It is imported by commission agents in Constantinople from Alexandria, Egypt.

The sober, non-jingo people of this republic will generally agree that we would only be justified in engaging in war when necessary to defend substantial and indisputable rights, preserve our liberty, or repel invasion, says La Follette's Magazine. Wars of conquest or aggression may accord with a policy of imperialism, but they have no place in the fulfillment of the destiny of a democracy. We have a republican form of government. Our liberty is not threatened by a foreign foe. In crucial times in our nation's history the American people have not failed. The Revolutionary War was fought by volunteers.

SEVERE PUNISHMENT

Of Mrs. Chappell, of Five Years' Standing, Relieved by Cardui.

Mt. Airy, N. C.—Mrs. Sarah M. Chappell of this town, says: "I suffered for five years with womanly troubles, also stomach troubles, and my punishment was more than any one could tell."

I tried most every kind of medicine, but none did me any good.

I read one day about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I decided to try it. I had not taken but about six bottles until I was almost cured. It did me more good than all the other medicines I had tried, put together.

My friends began asking me why I looked so well, and I told them about Cardui. Several are now taking it."

Do you, lady reader, suffer from any of the ailments due to womanly trouble, such as headache, backache, sideache, sleeplessness, and that everlasting tired feeling?

If so, let us urge you to give Cardui a trial. We feel confident it will help you, just as it has a million other women in the past half century.

Begin taking Cardui to-day. You won't regret it. All druggists.

HOLES

Through Which an Advertiser's Money is Practically Wasted.

A man once cut a hole in the barn door so that the old cat could go in and eat whenever she pleased. Then he scratched his head quite awhile and cut a smaller hole beside it for the kitten.

Many business men cut unnecessary holes in their cash register by attempting other lines of advertising than the use of newspaper space, in the effort to increase sales.

Concentration of the advertising appropriation in newspapers will bring the results as no other method of publicity can produce—and there will be only the one hole in the cash register. The money is being spent in a way that will soon cease to be an expense because it will bring returns in increased sales and good will.

Moreover, it is not only size, but concentration of circulation that will bring the best results to an advertiser.

WORRY, DESPONDENCY.

Kidney Disease is suspected by medical men when patients complain of backache or suffer with irregular urination, disturbed, too frequent, scanty or painful passage. The general symptoms are rheumatic pains or neuralgia, headaches, lumbago, irritability, despondency, weakness and general misery. Worry is a frequent cause and sometimes a symptom of kidney disease. Many of your neighbors have testified to immediate relief from these symptoms after using Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets for kidneys and backache. Druggists in town are now supplied.

From personal observation in large hospital practice, Dr. Pierce knows "Anuric" will give you speedy help if you are suffering from uric acid trouble, and to show his faith send 10c. to Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, and you'll receive a large trial pkg. of "Anuric." "Anuric" dissolves uric acid as hot water melts sugar and Dr. Pierce has thoroughly tested it in his hospital and found it 37 times more potent than lithia.

The fish are frequent in the brook, and I must take my line and hook, and see if I can catch a shark that will occasion some remark. I know not why I always feel like going after other redhot things. And I'll be sun-trout or eel, about this season of the burned, I suppose, until the bark peels year; the inclination's rather queer, off my nose, and I'll be coated thick For well I know I will not bring, when with mud, from falling in the babbling

WHITE ACRES

By EDWINA FAXON.

A sense of humor did much to take the edge of a stinging wind, but in spite of her bravery tears welled up in Kathleen's eyes. She had turned a corner and come in sight of the old house, desolate in the midst of a dreary late November landscape, and the house brought back recollections that were hard to bear.

A touring car stopped at the gate and a man got out. "Miss Lowell, I believe," he said.

"Yes!" she answered abruptly. He came up on to the veranda beside her. "I am Horace Davidson, and I represent the Burlington and Hartwell road. But I've no doubt you have already guessed my identity. I'm sorry if I kept you waiting. We had a blowout. Deducedly cold, isn't it? Shall we go inside?"

"It is colder in there. Besides, our business is outside, I believe."

The wind was screaming so he had to stand quite close to catch her words. "An uncommonly pretty girl, by Jove," he said to himself.

A shrill whistle sounded in the distance, and both turned quickly. A big interurban trolley car appeared around the curve of the road and sped on a raised track across the open space below them.

"The suit comes up next week, I believe," began Kathleen.

"Unless you change your mind and have it withdrawn."

"Why should I?"

"To begin with, I don't think you have much chance."

"Is there no justice in the world, then? What are courts for?"

"Justice," he answered. "No judge can see why a strip of track should do any damage to a farm."

"Perhaps he can see it if it is explained to him that the road got its right of way under false pretense, that the track cut my father's farm in two to begin with, and that the raising of it made it impossible to pasture a herd of cows on one side with the barn on the other. A culvert would have cost us two thousand dollars, and the company wouldn't pay it. Further, when he saw in despair that his big dairy farm was ruined, began to have visions of a summer hotel and petitioned the company for a station. But that was refused, too. He was ruined financially and in health. He was too old to stand the blow, and he died."

Horace Davidson was silent awhile. Then, "Why don't you sell the place?"

"I would if I could. No one will have it with that ugly raised track in the wrong place."

He saw that she was shaking with emotion and cold. "Miss Lowell," he said more kindly, "after all it was foolish of me to ask you to meet me out here. We can talk better in my office in town."

The next morning, Horace Davidson was having trouble about a button which had disappeared from his overcoat.

"Evelyn," he begged his married sister, "will you sew a button on my overcoat if you happen to have anything at all that will match?"

"Such shiftnesses! Where's your tailor? Take it up to the sewing room, the proper place for such operations. You'll find someone there."

So Horace went upstairs and along a hall to a remote corner of the great house, where he had a vague idea the sewing room was. An open door through which a light shone and the faint whir of a machine were his guides, and he soon found himself watching a girl, her head and shoulders bent over the machine, a dark island in billows upon billows of snowy-white stuff.

"I beg your pardon," said Horace. The whir stopped and the girl looked around. It was Kathleen Lowell. She sprang up, instantly recognizing him. "Mr. Davidson! How you startled me! Won't you sit down?"

"Thank you, Miss Lowell. We seem destined to meet in white acres, although I must say this landscape is warmer than the last one. To explain my errand this time, I was told to come here to have a button sewed on. May I beg the favor?" He held out the coat he had been holding on his arm.

Kathleen flushed. "Certainly. I'll do it right away. Have you the button?"

"No. I thought maybe there might be one around that would match."
"I'm afraid not. They are very odd. Oh, I believe—Why, yes! I found one in the station yesterday and put it in my bag. It's up in the schoolroom with my things. I'll get it. You see, I'm the children's governess."

He looked his surprise and inquiry. "This is extra—you see!" she explained. "I teach days and sew nights."
"And all this because the road ran through your farm and ruined it!"

She looked away and didn't answer. A new look had come into the man's eyes, stern and determined. "Give me that coat, Miss Lowell. I'll sew on my own button." She handed it over wondering.

"You go home now and stay the rest of the winter. When spring comes, move back into your home in the country. I'll answer for the road. I'm a big stockholder myself. I am going to make it my business to see that you are treated properly."

KNIFE AND PISTOL

Effective Combination to Be Carried in Pocket.

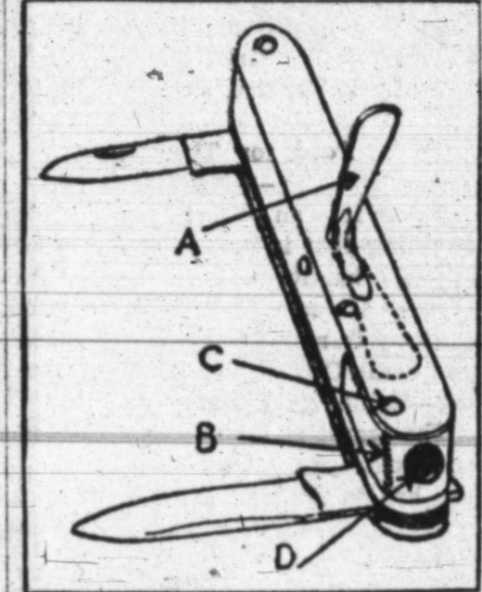

Discharges Small Cartridge, but One Capable of Inflicting Damage at Close Range—Useful Defense Against Burglars.

The smallest breech-loading cannon in the world is now being made for pocket use. It is not a toy, but takes a 22-caliber rim-fire cartridge.

Of course, it is not easy to hit anything at a distance with it, on account of there being no sights and the barrel being only half an inch long and concealed, but a 22-caliber bullet is useless except at very close range. The special use of this "cannon" is for scaring off burglars, as when fired with a blank cartridge it makes a tremendous bang, and fires a bullet that would inflict a nasty wound at close range.

Its inventor is Edmund C. Moore of New York, who is also the patentee of a rifle grenade.

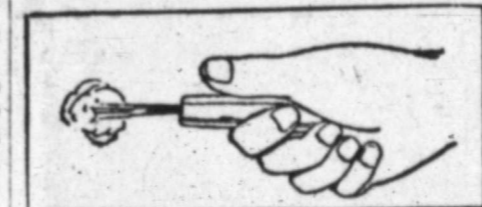

It is in the form of a pocket knife no larger than the usual knife and has two blades of fine-steel. But at one end is a hole. Anyone asked to examine the article and say what it is will be most likely to guess that it is some new-fangled pencil sharpener or cigar cutter.

In the end of the knife is a steel block that turns out on a swivel, being held by a spring that is released with the thumbnail and reveals a hole straight through the block. The cartridge is inserted at the base of this hole, the block is swung back into place, the trigger on the side is opened, thus cocking the pistol, which is now ready to fire. It is held in the hand and the trigger pressed down with the thumb.—New York World Sunday Magazine.

Survival Among Birds.

The struggle of life among the birds and other wild creatures is so severe that the feeble and malformed, or the handicapped in any way, quickly drop out, writes John Burroughs in Harper's Magazine. Probably none of them ever die from old age. They are cut off in their prime. A weeding out process goes on from the time they leave the nest. A full measure of life, the perfection of every quill and feather, and unerring instinct, carry them along. They are always in the enemy's country; they are always on the fringe line; eternal vigilance and ceaseless activity are the price of life with them. The natural length of life of our smaller birds is calculated to be eight or ten years, but probably not one in a thousand reaches that age. Not half a dozen times in my life have I found the body of a dead bird that did not show some marks of violence.

Mules Now 'Kerchoo-ing.

Even the mules in the mines here are suffering from the ravages of the grippe epidemic and stable horses and hostlers are kept busy caring for the sick animals. Many miners declare that they have caught the infection from the mules, who sneeze in the limited air supply in the underground workings and spread the germs all over.

The local veterinarians have thus far vainly sought to find a remedy to combat the disease. In some cases quinine and whisky appeared to help the animals temporarily.—Hartleton (Pa.) Dispatch to Philadelphia Inquirer.

War Unkind to the Lawyer.

The war, while having a pretty depressing influence upon litigation, is having a still larger effect upon calls to the bar. Only 30 students have donned wig and gown this term, and half of them bear oriental names, indicating that they belong to distant parts of the empire.—London Mail.

The Soda Fountain

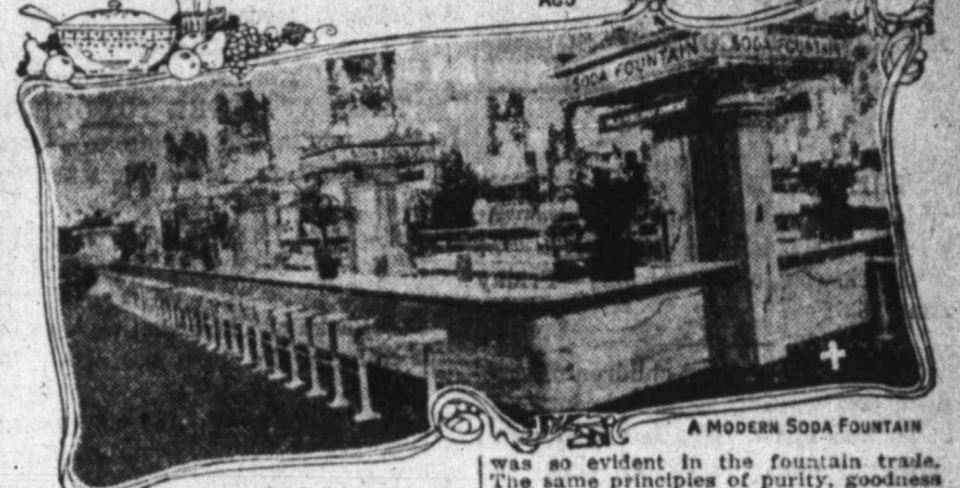

An American Institution

Did you ever stop to realize that the soda fountain is as much an American institution as the sausage is a German institution, "French bread" is an institution in France and the Plum pudding an English institution? And the funny part of it all is that though one seldom sees a soda fountain in Europe (and then only for the sake of attracting American tourist trade) just as soon as a foreigner gets to this country he too seems to learn to love the soda fountain.

But, if you are old enough to look back a few years you will remember that only comparatively recently has the soda fountain been either so popular or so beautiful and hygienic.

You may remember what these old soda fountains looked like—what poor provision they made to supply even their scanty trade.

What has wrought this great change—what has made the soda fountain a national institution—a comfort and necessity in the daily lives of men and women—not only during the hot summer time but the whole year round.

The answer lies in that delicious beverage Coca-Cola. Soon after its introduction at the fountain people began to ask more and more for this distinctive drink. Along with its demand came the demand for more places that would serve it. Soda fountains sprang up everywhere, improving in beauty, neatness and attractive service. It is a fact that the soda fountain and all its allied industries have come to play in the economic life of the nation today in due largely to the stimulus given to it by Coca-Cola.

was so evident in the fountain trade. The same principles of purity, goodness and deliciousness made another astounding record of growth possible. Bottling plants have been established all over the country to take care of this branch. Just think of it—over 30,000,000 glasses and bottles of Coca-Cola are drunk every month, so—just as much as in the soda fountain a national institution so is Coca-Cola the National Beverage.
