THE CHILD AND AUTHORITY

BY SIDONIE MATZNER GRUENBERG

If we are to deal effectively with children, whether at home or in school, whether at work or at play, we ought to understand their attitude toward authority. A study of this attitude was made a number of years ago in this country and in England.

A comparatively small proportion of the children, and those chiefly among the older ones, cannot find any means for meeting the emergency presented by these hypothetical cases other than a resort to "punishment."

The last type of solution would seem to be the most logical. If we take into consideration both the limits of delegated authority and the responsibilities that go with it...

The reasons that the children give for their decisions are even more significant. On the side of punishment Johnny, one girl said: "It would not be right to let her do wrong when she was placed in his charge."

One boy writes: "I think he should have waited and told his mother, because his mother was boss of them both." and a girl of the same age fourteen years wrote: "It was not right for him to punish his sister without his parents telling him to do so."

Mother's Cook Book

Baked Parsnips.

Boil slowly two pounds of pared parsnips until soft enough to put a straw through, then drain and mash thoroughly as you would potatoes. Add a good big lump of butter and a little cream or milk. Don't make too soft. Then pack in baking dish and bake a golden brown in a quick oven. Splendid served with boiled or baked whitefish.

Fried Cucumbers.

Cut into small pieces some all fat salt pork and place in the frying pan. Have ready chilled fresh cucumbers. Pare and cut into slices lengthwise about a quarter of an inch in thickness, dip in flour to which has been added pepper. Fry on both sides a delicate brown. This is a delicious side dish with the meat course.

Lentils and Macaroni.

Cook one-half pound lentils in boiling salted water for two hours. In another kettle boil one-half pound of elbow macaroni in salted water. When it is all done drain most of the water in which it is cooked but leave a little so that it will not be too dry. Fry one onion in four slices of salt pork. Mix the lentils, macaroni and pork fat and onion together and let it boil up for one minute. Season to taste.

Potato and Liver Salad.

Add as much diced liver to potato salad. Baked or boiled liver or fried liver freed from fat may be used, and it should stand wet with French dressing an hour before mixing. Diced eggs, fried hard, skinned cooked sausages, shredded smoked fish, dried beef flakes of fish and other vegetables combine with potatoes in salad.

Peach Melba.

Cut angel or sponge cake in thin slices and cut off outside edges. Lay one-half a canned peach on each slice, fill the cavities with bits of pineapple and candied cherries, cover with rich vanilla ice cream, pour a little pineapple sirup over the top and garnish with cherries.

Planked Steak.

Wipe a rump steak, cut two inches thick, and pan broil for ten minutes (or sirloin, removing the flank end). Pipe a border of mashed potatoes around the edge of slightly buttered plank and make eight nests of mashed potatoes. Put steak in center and finish cooking meat. Fill potato nests with omelet, peas, reheated and seasoned, and arrange around at equal distances piles of buttered carrot cubes and stuffed tomatoes.

Nellie Maxwell

authority delegated to Johnny was not "plenary," but was limited perhaps to preventing serious injury to the younger child. In order to test this further, another group of children was asked a similar question, but playing with fire was substituted for scratching the table.

The problem is to get a clear recognition of the extent of responsibility and at the same time a realization of the limits of the authority. This the children can learn if we are fairly consistent in our own delegation of authority.

In making it a rule of the household that members hold delegated authority, whether children or hired helpers, we must be sure also to support these in the exercise of their authority. If it is a rule, for example, that Johnny is not to "punish" Mamie for impudence or disobedience, we must follow up his complaints consistently and justly.

The Clover

Some sing of the lily, and daisy, and rose. And the pansies and pinks that the summer time throws. In the green, grassy lap of the medder that lays. Blink'n' up at the skies through the sunshiny days.

Where I tangle my toes in the blossoms that gleam. With the dew of the morning of love. Ere it wept on the graves that I'm weepin' above.

And so I love clover—it seems like a part. Of the sweetest sorrows and joys of my heart; And wherever it blooms, oh, there let me bow.

And thank the good God as I'm thankin' Him now; And I pray to Him still for the strength when I die.

To go out in the clover and tell it goodbye. And lovinly nestle my face in its bloom.

While my soul slips away on a breath of perfume. — James Whitcomb Riley.

Town and Country

The flowers are blooming in the woods, the daffodils and kindred goods, the cowslip and the rose; and, as I do my office task, I wish that I could go and back among such things as those. Oh, it would surely be sublime, upon a fragrant bank of thyme, for drowsy hours to rest; to revel in the wholesome breeze, and pluck the toadstools from the trees, and rob a farmer's nest. But now a farmer comes to town—a man whose residence is down where buds are bathed in dew; all day he sees the posies grow, all day he feels the zephyrs blow his flowing sideboards through. And when I'd talk, in burning words, of bumble-bees and bats and birds, and other woodland things, he looks at me as though he feels that my fat head is full of wheels, and cranks and rusty springs. He interrupts my glad harangue, and says, "I do not give a dang for cowslip or for rose; I'm happy, when the sun goes down, if I can chase myself to town, to see the movie shows."—Walt Mason.

When in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes, I all alone be-weep my outcast state, And trouble of heaven with my bootless cries, And look upon myself and curse my fate, Wishing me like to one more rich in hope, Featured like him; like him of friends possessed; Desiring this man's art and that man's scope, With what I most enjoy content the least; Yet in these thoughts myself the most despising, Happy I think of Thee; and then my state, Like to the lark at break of day arising, From sullen earth sings hymns at heaven's gate; For Thy sweet love remembered such wealth brings That then I'd scorn to change my state with kings. —Shakespeare sent to all parents and probable students informing them just what sort of conduct is expected of Sanford undergraduates. Dr. Wilbur quotes the desire of the founders of Stanford, in this regard, as follows: "Our purpose is not only to assure the practical character of instruction, and to prevent such instruction as will not tend directly to qualify students for individual success and direct usefulness in life, but to protect the university from the cost of instructing and from the baneful influence of a class, bound to infest the institution as the country grows older, who wish to acquire a university degree or fashionable educational veneer for the mere ornamentation of idle and purposeless lives." Continuing Dr. Wilbur said: "A student's principal business is his studies. He needs enough money to buy food, lodging, simple clothes, books, stamps, and the like, and to pay certain fees and dues, admission to a few entertainments, and special bills. Any money supplied beyond these simple needs means that time will be wasted in spending it. A surplus of money is one of the biggest handicaps possible for the youth who expects to be a good student."

A message from Secretary Eignus of the Southern Rice Growers' association of Beaumont stated that he had just received permission from the quartermaster general of the United States army to send cooks and demonstration agents in the army camps along the Mexican border to make rice demonstrations among the men of the army. This permission was asked some time ago by the Southern Rice Growers, on the belief that such action would tend to largely increase the use of rice among the families of the men when they return to their homes. Many of the soldiers are from the North, where the use of rice is not generally practiced as an article of daily diet, and it is the hope of bringing the cereal into use in such families that the permission to demonstrate in the army camps was asked. News that the permission sought had been granted has been received with great satisfaction by the rice interests.

Fish farmers in the sea would be as profitable as a wheat farm in Dakota or a potato farm in Minnesota, according to Dr. G. H. Parker of Harvard University, in a speech before the members of the American Association for the Advancement of Natural Science, the Pacific division of which met in San Diego recently. Dr. Parker's piscatorial ranch proposition was as follows: He announced that he would be glad to take charge of a five-acre fish farm somewhere in the Pacific. He maintained that there would be much money in the venture, and his idea was borne out by a large number of savants, some of whom believed that the government should parcel sea farms out by the same method used in land claims. Dr. Parker proposed five acres for a farm. This area would have to be increased by those who desired to "raise" tuna or albacore, it was argued. The speaker said that the state and federal governments should be urged to pass more stringent laws that fish in the rivers, lakes and seas might have better protection.

The great reservoir, lying behind Elephant Butte and filling the valley of the Rio Grande, from bluff to bluff, for a distance of 42 miles up-stream, submerges villages, farms, and graveyards. For the present only water covers this space, but the wash from the watershed above is so great that silt already has begun to cover the floor of the reservoir, and in the course of time will continue to flow in until science finds a way to remove it. Porter W. Dent of the United States Reclamation Service, which built the dam, says in the Las Cruces Republic: "Elephant Butte dam abounds with oddities. Perhaps every one doesn't know that there are five cemeteries, with perhaps 300 corpses in each; six churches, five villages, having a population of 3,000; and many buildings on the bottom of the reservoir. When the water flowed into the allotted space for the reservoir only parts of the buildings were destroyed. But the cemeteries with their weird tombstones still contain the bodies. We permitted many of the natives, from whom we bought land; to remain on the property until the water reached it. Several took advantage, but one family was forced out at night by the overflow of the water. The villages that were overflowed were, Paraje, Cantadero, Cantarecio, San Alvaro, San Jose, and Alamoita."

Maine

Now that the Republican trumpeters and the Democratic dirge-trusts have had their funny noises duly attuned to the returns from the Maine election, please permit State Press to creep up softly to the rostrum and tell the multitude what happened in Maine. The Maine election was not a Republican triumph or a Democratic defeat in so far as Democracy or Republicanism is concerned. What the Maine election in fact and reality amount to is a reaffirmation of Maine's allegiance to prohibition. Maine is normally and habitually a prohibition State. Prohibition for half a century has been supported there by the Republicans, not that Main Republicans are more virtuous than Maine Democrats, but that the majority being for prohibition, the ruling party made haste to chum with the prohibition side. Four years ago the Democrats managed to put one over, while the majority party was divided factions. All right. But no sooner did the Democrats get in than some of the nutheads among them began hammering on prohibition, taking the side opposed to the Republicans. That sort of thing soon made the Republicans sponsors for prohibition and the Democrats sponsors for anti-prohibition, in effect if not in actual fact. And when the State election came on last Monday the prohibition elements got together and gave a majority for the party which has in that State stood for prohibition. Why should not the Democrats tell the truth about it? Why should they choose to befog the result in a maze of explanations having to do with nothing in particular? On the other hand, why should the Republicans claim as a National victory a result which was primarily a local victory? Finally, why should anybody fling into confusion over an outcome so reasonably to be expected? —Stole Press in Dallas.

A Few Don't Have to Be Observed

Leaving out the humane side of the question, it is good business from the standpoint of economy and efficiency to be considerate, in the treatment of farm animals. They will more than repay in better service and longer life for such treatment.

A few "Don't's," in the handling of farm animals, compiled by the editor of Extension Farm-News, North Carolina Agricultural College, are worthy of consideration. These are:

Don't work or ride a horse with sore shoulders and back, unless they can be protected from further injury.

Don't work lame or sick animals to keep them from getting stiff; turn them in pasture or lot and allow voluntary exercise. Forced exercise will nearly always do harm.

Don't work a soft horse like you would a well-hardened one. Season him gradually.

Don't overload and don't overwork.

Don't fail to prevent many diseases by good hygienic and sanitary measures. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Don't forget that a correct diagnosis is essential to good treatment. Guess work and "hit or miss" methods are poor policies.

Don't give medicine when you don't know the nature of the disease or the action of the drug. Most patients recover in spite of treatment rather than because of it. Give nature a chance unless you know what to do.

Don't ever drench through the nose; the dose will be liable to go into the lungs instead of the stomach.

Don't expose young or susceptible animals to infectious diseases. Quarantine infected animals and premises.

Don't produce colic by careless feeding, watering and work. Nearly all are caused by such.

Don't treat colic by working or running the suffering animal.

Don't induce heat stroke in summer. Avoid it in about the same way you would colic. Most cases occur when the animal is otherwise indisposed and usually when digestion is disturbed, as in changing from old to new feed.

Don't neglect the teeth of horses and mules. Irregular and decayed teeth are responsible for much chronic indigestion and thriftlessness, especially in old animals.

An example of an unusually effective method of marking highways is found in the sign erected by the Automobile club of Southern California near Roscoe, California. On a large signboard, such as is used for roadside advertising, a map has been painted outlining the good roads to various points within a radius of 17 miles from Roscoe. The location of all the towns is shown on these routes and in addition the principal neighboring communities are again named in two

Home Buyer's Creed

"I buy at home? Because my interests are here. Because the community that is good enough to me to live in is good enough for me to buy in. Because I believe in transacting business with my friends. Because I want to see the goods. Because I want to get what I buy when I buy it. Because my home dealer carries me when I run short. Because every dollar I spend at home stays at home and works for the welfare of my town. Because the man I buy from stands back of the goods. Because I sell what I produce here at home. Because the man I buy from pays part of the town, county and state taxes. Because the man I buy from gives value received always. Because the man I buy from helps support my school, my church, my lodge, my home. Because when ill luck, misfortune or bereavement comes, the man I buy from is here with the kindly greeting, his words of cheer and his pocket book, if needs be. Here I live and here I buy."

Saving The Birds and Our Crops.

Prevalent knowledge we must save the birds to prevent destruction of our crops by boll-weevils, worms, insects and weeds has begotten strong desire among the people to stop bird slaughter.

The present law, even if observed allows "open seasons" of sufficient length in which to kill those few birds which hatch each year, besides the law is generally ignored. So total extermination is imminently upon us.

A majority of citizens even among those residing in cities realize the great benefit birds are to the whole people and the necessity to prevent the destruction of our food and cotton crops by the propagation of birds to keep down insects and weeds, as well as for their aesthetic values in beauty and song and for future use as food. All these things being true and very obvious, it is TIME TO ACT! Allow me to say to your readers that in order to get a record of this sentiment to use for effective bird protection I will introduce in the 35th Legislature a Bill to protect harmless birds for five years, provided I receive favorable expressions and support from enough citizens to justify the effort and expectation it will become a law. Therefore, I request every one who reads this to address a postal card to me here and one each to their Representative and Senator, asking the passage of this law to stop the slaughter for five years at least, also each one should ask his neighbors to do the same.

The occupation of each writer should be stated and reasons given for the request. Also they should see their Representatives in person. When this is done by all, it will be effective as Legislators are glad to hear from the people and to comply with their reasonable wishes. Surely every one can well afford to spend three cents and a little time to accomplish so good a purpose and thus make it possible for ourselves and our prosperity to feed and clothe the whole nation including the cities and for all of us to live and prosper. Promptness is vital, write to-day.

A Mail Order Deal.

Down in Oklahoma recently a man went into a store to buy a saw. He saw the kind he wanted and asked the price. It was $1.65, the dealer said. "Good gracious," said the man, "I can get the same thing from Sears Roebuck & Co. for $1.35. "That's less than it costs me," said the dealer, "but I'll sell it on the same terms as the mail order house just the same." "All right," said the customer. "You can send it along and charge it to my account." "Not on your life," the dealer replied. "No charging accounts. You can't do business with the mail order house that way. Fork over the cash." The customer complied. "Now 2 cents for postage and 5 cents for a money order." "What?" "Certainly, you have to send a money order to a mail order house, you know." The customer, inwardly raving, yep! to his agreement and paid the nickel. "Now 26 cents for postage." "Well, I'll be—," he said, but paid it, saying: "Now hand me that saw and I'll take it home myself and be rid of this foolery." "Hand it to you? You're in Oklahoma, and I'm in Chicago, and you'll have to wait two weeks for that saw."

Do You Know That

The Constitution of the United States doesn't mention health? Procrastination in sanitary reform is the thief of health? A book on "Exercise and Health" may be had free for the asking from the U. S. Public Health Service? Not everybody can achieve greatness but everybody can be clean? If you sow a hygienic habit you reap health and you attain longevity? Railway cars would be sanitary if it weren't for the people in them? America's typhoid fever bill is more than $270,000,000 a year? The full dinner pail is the enemy of tuberculosis?

WORK

A Song of Triumph
Angela Margan, in New York Evening Mail.
Work.
Thank God for the might of it.
The ardor, the urge, the delight of it—
Work that springs from the heart's desire.
Setting the brain and the soul on fire—
Oh, what is so good as the heat of it.
And what is so glad as the stearn command.
Challenging—brain and heart and hand?

Work.
Thank God for the pride of it,
For the beautiful, conquering tide of it.
Sweeping the life in its furious flood,
Mastering stupor and dull despair.
Moring the dreamer to do and dare.
Oh, what is so good as the urge of it.
And what is so strong as its summons deep.
Rousing the torpid soul from sleep?

Work.
Thank God for the pace of it,
For the terrible, keen, swift race of it.
Fiery steeds in its control,
Nostrils aquiver to greet the goal.
Work, the power that drives behind,
Guiding the purposes, taming the mind,
Holding the runaway wishes back,
Reigning the will to one steady track.
Speeding the energies faster, faster,
Triumphing over disaster,
Oh, what is so good as the pain of it.
And what is so great as the gain of it?
And what is so kind as the cruel goad,
Forcing us on through the rugged road?

Work.
Thank God for the swing of it,
For the clamoring, hammering, ring of it,
Passion of labor daily hurled
On the mighty anvils of the world.
Oh, what is so fierce as the flame of it?
And what is so huge as the aim of it?
Thundering on through death and doubt,
Calling the plan of the Maker out,
Work, the Titan; Work, the friend
Shaking the earth to a glorious end,
Draining the swamps and blasting the

Education Pays in Cash

According to a survey made of 100 Kansas farms recently, the farmer with a high school education is making 70 per cent more profit than his neighbor with only a common school education, while the college graduate is earning an income so much greater than that of either that he is frankly in a class by himself.

Here is an argument for education that gets right down to brass tacks. The remark is heard frequently that the farmer's boy does not need much education unless he intends to leave the farm and enter one of the professions, but this survey has developed the fact that he can stand all he can get.

Moreover, inasmuch as one of the burning questions of the hour in Texas is the further development of our educational system and the most fundamental need in this connection is money, this information comes to us with special timeliness. Governor to appropriate $2,000,000 for rural schools and the movement in the direction of creating rural high schools by consolidation will be continued during the coming year. Also West Texas will ask the legislature to create an Agricultural and Mechanical College to be located in that section and devoted to developing trained men to deal with the peculiar conditions of soil and climate which prevail there. All of this and other educational reforms which may be urged will cost money. Here is argument to justify the expending of all the money we can spare.

We knew before that education makes for better citizenship and more wholesome social conditions generally but here is a cinching argument. It shows conclusively that education pays cash dividends, not only to the community, but to the individual. Let's have as much of it as we can afford. —Star-Telegram.

The cracker barrel oracle at the corner grocery has settled in Mexican question and the European horror, but is all fussed up over the interesting possibility of Brazilians and Argentinians and Chileans getting right pally with New Yorkers and Hoosiers and Kentuckians. The dames in the Ventura Club are all agog about "Ross on South of Panama" and at 42nd Street and Broadway a discussion of the drama in Rio and Buenos Aires has "When I was With Sothern and Marlowe" pushed clear into the la trench. No wonder then that my woman's natural curiosity is awakened, (not that it ever snoozes), and that I have decided to see for myself or, in more expressive parlance, to give our South American cousins the once over before we get all chummed up. Consequently I told the passport man my right name, the color of my hair in the original, the number of my chins and the date of my birth—but why go further. "Take it from me, you need a four season repertoire of clothes, a bathing suit, a mackintosh and a bottle of Mothersils if you contemplate a brief trip down this way. Food for thought and also for the fishes is the necessity for Mothersils. Heavy garments are essential because June, July and August are the winter months in Buenos Aires, and brides and roses bloom contrariwise in December. Thin clothes are needed because Rio has a tropical climate, smuggling as it does just within the torrid zone. A mackintosh comes in handy because as you sail near the equator, where often the coolest weather of the trip is encountered, the showers are as frequent and fleeting as any of our April best. As for the bathing suit it is indispensable first of all because of the advent on board of Neptune and his daughter Aphrodite. They appear as the equator is crossed and initiate into the mysteries of Neptune's court all those innocents who have crossed the line before. They cross the line but they do not draw the line and no more sex will gain you exemption from the rites. Neptune's vigilant polies are no respecters of fine apparel and though you duck and run in all the grandeur of your festive togs, they trail you to your stateroom's lair and lead you to be ducked again. 'Tis a neat and simple service: You first say "howdy" to Neptune and Aphrodite. Aye, then comes the rub. You are smeared with a lather of flour and water and shaved by Neptune's own barber and then promptly ducked in the canvas swimming pool set up on the lower deck. After being duly ducked you are handed an elaborately engraved certificate signed by Neptune Rex, the skipper and diverse lesser official lights, which enables you to cross the equator unscathed for the rest of your days. I for one wrapped myself for preparation and convinced that a bathing suit in time saves nine yards of the work of a salt-water dip on a perfect, by good-bye now. Your bathing suit comes in handy yet again to be donned when masticating mangoes, which are purchased in great abundance and fairness at Bahia, Brazil, the first port of call. When eating this tropical fruit you are bound to be covered both with embarrassment and mango.

Patience, Waiting, Worth and Skill.

Jake H. Harrison.

A wealth of patience often brings A royal treasure in return; And he who takes the time to wait On either Fortune, Worth or Fate, In great as well as little things, The smile of each or all may earn.

And he who wins the smile of Fate, Of Fortune, or of solid Worth, By waiting, patience, work and skill, May then demand of each, at will, To wait upon him, soon or late, And help him subjugate the earth.

But who has all these attributes Of waiting, patience, work and skill The gods themselves cannot command An excellence so hugely grand; Why, even mighty Jove refutes The thought that gods, the place can fill.

And yet we have, this day and time, A set of men who seem to hold The secret of this grand success, And home is potent forces press; With patience, work, and skill sublime, They turn what'er they touch to gold.

And still we have another kind, Who do not turn their thoughts to gold, But in their skillful, patient way, The force of Science deftly sway. With penetrating, godlike mind And courage prudent, grand and bold.

Until the gods, who stand aghast At what these modern men have done, And watch them as they sally forth, Adorned with patience, skill and worth, Are forced to say: "Well, men, at last, Succeed where gods have here won.

Where Courtesy Paid

The winner of the contest on "Why I Think It Pays To Be Courteous" in the August American Magazine tells the following instance where courtesy paid a big dividend.

"A woman came into the bank quite early, eighty-thirty, an hour and a half before the opening hour, ten o'clock. She said she was in great trouble and had to get some money from her account immediately, as she was obliged to leave for the South at once. She showed me a telegram announcing the death of her son by a gunshot wound received in Texas. I consoled with her, had her waited upon immediately, accompanied her to the station, secured her tickets, etc. As the railroad station was only a block away from the bank I had ample time to attend to these details. She thanked me with tears in her eyes. I returned to the bank and dismissed the matter from my mind.

"About six weeks afterwards, a lady garbed in mourning, approached my desk, wished me a pleasant good morning and said, "You don't remember me, do you?" I replied in the negative.

She explained that it was she whom I accompanied to the train. She told me she had realized on the accident and life insurance policies of her late son, and though she was offered by a bank in Texas one and one-half per cent more interest on her funds than we paid, she preferred to deposit them in the bank in Chicago where the employees were courteous to her in her hour of bereavement and trouble."

What Does Catarrh Mean?

It means inflammation of a mucous membrane somewhere in the head, throat, bronchial tubes, stomach, biliary ducts or bowels. It always means stagnant blood—the blood that is full of impurities. Left alone, it extends until it is followed by indigestion, colds, congestion or fever. It weakens the system generally and spreads its operations until systemic catarrh or an acute illness is the result.

Peruna

Is the nation's reliable remedy for this condition. It restores appetite, aids digestion, checks and removes inflammation, and thus enables the membranes through which we breathe and through which our food is absorbed, to do their work properly. Forty-four years of success, with thousands of testimonials, have established it as the home remedy—Ever-Ready-to-Take. Its record of success holds a promise for you.

Let Something Good Be Said

When over the fair fame of friend or foe
The shadow of disgrace shall fall;
Instead
Of words of blame, or proof of so and so,
Let something good be said.

Forget not that no fellow being yet
May fall so low but love may life his head;
Even the cheek of shame with tears is wet,
If something good be said.

No generous heart may vainly turn aside
In ways of sympathy; no soul so dead
But may awaken strong and glorified,
If something good can be said.

And so I charge ye, by the thorny crown,
And by the cross on which the Savior bled,
And by your own soul's hope for fair renown,
Let something good be said.

Forsoaken

I go my weary course alone, all-horred and shunned where'er I'm known. No maidens smile when I draw near, but from my path they shrink with fear. For me there is no outstretched hand, no welcome smile, all the last. There is no lamp alight for me, no children climb upon my knee. Alone, alone, all, all alone! The gray world has a heart of stone, and pardon it will never give to its pariahs, while they live. I long to join the busy throng that moves in joyous haste along; I long to take my place again, and mingle with my fellowmen, but if I make a slight advance, I find the outcast has no chance, and voices rise, with anger fraught, "Go, Ishmael we want you not!" Perhaps when I am gone to rest, and grass is green above my breast, some pilgrim bending o'er my tomb, will say, "We drove him to his doom! Though dark and wicked his offense, his punishment was too intense. We drove him from his kind away, for eating onions every day!"

Ready, Ky.—"I was not able to do anything for nearly six months," writes Mrs. Laura Bratcher, of this place, "and was down in bed for three months."

I cannot tell you how I suffered with my head, and with nervousness and womanly troubles.

Our family doctor told my husband he could not do me any good, and he had to give it up. We tried another doctor, but he did not help me.

At last, my mother advised me to take Cardui, the woman's tonic. I thought it was no use for I was nearly dead and nothing seemed to do me any good. But I took eleven bottles, and now I am able to do all of my work and my own washing.

I think Cardui is the best medicine in the world. My weight has increased, and I look the picture of health.

BICKERINGS OF A BACHELOR

Men suffer untold privations, but women always tell them.

Sometimes it makes a man hot when you hand him cold facts.

One sure thing about women is that you can't be sure of them.

The world seems all the brighter to lovers when the light is dim.

Married men are henpecked and bachelors are chickenpecked.

If a man has plenty of money he can afford to marry for love.

Kissing as a theory is far less satisfactory than a practical example.

Lots of men would be glad to work—if they could find someone to work.

Of course a woman always has the last word—and incidentally about 98 per cent of the preceding conversation.

There is no law to restrain a woman from kissing a pug dog—but just the same it's a mean advantage to take of the dog.

A woman may be a good talker and still have a slight impediment in her thoughts.—Indianapolis Star.

OLD GEN. GROUCH SAYS—

If you pay as you go these days you stay at home.

Every woman in an opera box looks like a Lady Godiva.

Sympathy costs nothing unless you sympathize with a widow.

If you are present it is a toast. If you are absent it is a roast.

Figures do not lie because women hang them up in the closet.

There's no such thing as a good man gone wrong; it is only a bad man found out.

You pick out a woman you think is a steady roadster and she proves to be a little runabout.

Don't kick a man when he is down. You don't know how tall he may be when he stands up.

Every woman can hammer nails like lightning—which doesn't strike twice in the same place.

If you see black hand prints on the bathroom towel you may be sure your small boy has "washed" his hands.

SOME DAY SOMEBODY WILL—

Invent something without claiming that it will revolutionize the world.

An artist will draw a funny picture without depicting anyone in it getting hurt.

Some man will tell his wife he wished she could cook as well as his mother. No man has dared to do it yet.

Some George Washington of a newspaper reporter will describe a wedding without writing that the "bride was charming."

Write a problem play in which the problem will be about finances or theology or something fit for family discussion.

There will be a waiter with enough human intelligence to take your order, which will include a demand for a cup of coffee with the viands, and to bring that coffee, instead of waiting twenty minutes and then asking if you will have coffee.

FROM OUR NEW PRIMER

What is the man doing?

What would a wise man do?

Why do you call him a fool man?

Be-cause it is un-wise to look a gift horse in the mouth.

A wise man would sell the horse for what he could get and let the other chap look.

Some-one pre-sent-ed the fool man with a horse and he is look-ing in its mouth to try and as-certain its age.

HOW TO BE HAPPY

Do not expect too much from your friends.

Make whatever work that comes to you congenial work.

Retain your illusions, and do not believe all the world wicked and unkind.

Keep your nerves well in hand and inflict them on no one.

Relieve the miserable and sympathize with the sorrowful.

Do not waste your vitality in superfluous and energetic talking, especially in gossip.

Do not forget that kind words and a smile cost nothing, but are priceless treasures to the discouraged.

The Ad Man

Bouquets as well as bricks are sometimes thrown at the advertising man. Here is one of them, culled from the pages of Life:

"See the advertising man!"

"The advertising man furnishes us with all the ideas that we have, and more that we haven't previously desired. He stimulates our curiosity, enlightens our minds, and relieves us of our superfluous cash—if there is such a thing as superfluous cash."

"The advertising man is a live wire of industry. His art exceeds the art of the Mesopotamians and the Babylonians, also the Greeks and the Egyptians. In days to come our chief monuments will be the masterpieces produced by our advertising men. You may not believe this now, but you will then—if you are still alive."

"Every morning all the advertising men in the country get up and arrange the daily programme of culture and refinement for the American people. They have superseded nature. No landscape is now complete unless an advertising man has arranged it to suit himself."

"Without our advertising men there would be no journalism; and, worse still, there would be no magazines. We would have nothing to do but read classics. This will give a faint idea of the value of advertising men."

"The advertising man awakes in the morning and lusteth for power and dominion over all the people of the world, and before night he gets it. He furnisheth the department stores with customers, and he maketh glad the heart of the trade combina-

Auto Engines.

A reader at Nacogdoches, who practices law for his living, but keeps his heart devoted to the public weal, writes in to ask that State Press tell the world of use automobiles for motive power from the Houston Chronicle which portrays an unkept and somewhat dissipated automobile engaged in pulling a large and imposing grain reaper through a grain field. It looks like a slick scheme, and although State Press hates like Old Hemp to give any advertising to the Houston Chronicle, he feels bound to say that the Chronicle's picture looks like it works all right. There are in these federated States perhaps 200,000 battered and shamed automobiles which are no longer ornamental to good society, but which still possess powerful lungs, and which are capable of being transformed into agricultural motive force. As long as the engine throbs with the breath of life it is entitled to its rightful ration of gasoline and its proper portion of activity in the sphere of its influence. Therefore we urge upon all owners of spavined, windgalled, cracked-hoof automobiles not to sell same or to rattle them out to die miserably on vacant lots. Simply remove the superstructure, strip the frame work down to the chassis, bare bones and rig a spring seat upon the floor joists. Then hitch up and do your fall plowing with neatness and dispatch. Or slap a hand wheel onto the back axle and run your feed chopper, churn, coffee mill or laundry wringer by motor power. You may even attach it to your wife's sewing machine or the baby's cradle, if so be she is not afraid of machinery and will take whatever chances there may be of getting her hands pierced by the fast-flying needle, or spilling the dimples. However, it may be better to use the engine for a stump puller, or some grand work like that, rather than humiliate it with housework. Nor should the women, heaven bless them, be subjected to the loss or the bloom from their cheeks by contracting engine grease.—State Press, in Dallas News.

Liars Betrayed by Breath

When a man is telling a lie he breathes differently from when he is telling the truth. The difference was discovered by means of some tests made upon his students by Prof. Benussi, of Graz, Austria.

He prepared cards bearing letters, figures and diagrams, and distributed these among his pupils. These were required to describe the cards correctly, except in certain cases when the cards were marked with a red star and the students receiving them were required to describe them falsely. Each student was watched carefully by his fellows, who ignorant of the nature of the card, tried to judge from his manner whether he was telling the truth or not. The watchers were unable to judge with any certainty.

Under the direction of Prof. Benussi, the time occupied in inspiration and expiration was measured, and the measurement was taken again immediately after he finished. It was found that the utterance of a true statement always diminished the quotient obtained by dividing the time of inspiration by the time of expiration. Dr. Anton Rose, commenting on these results, remarked that the discovery furnishes a certain criterion between truth and falsehood.

Is House Cat Menace to Health of Family?

By W. S. TALLOR, Associate Professor of Agricultural Education, University of Texas.

The cat question has become a serious one with bird lovers. And yet, whenever the subject is discussed, there are always a few who will defend them on the basis that they are good mousers and beautiful pets.

Kittens Become Cats. There isn't anybody who does not like a playful little kitten with a blue ribbon round its neck. A baby lion is interesting and attractive. But a baby lion becomes dangerous when full grown, and at maturity a kitten becomes a cat. The cat belongs to one of the wildest, most cowardly, and yet most treacherous, of all the great divisions of the animal kingdom, having as it does the lion and tiger for its relatives, and the lynx and wildcat for its nearest relatives.

Incestimable Value of Birds. The value of birds to humanity can not be estimated, either from an economic or an esthetic viewpoint. Perhaps we can better appreciate their economy in nature when naturalists tell us that if the bird life were totally destroyed, that in ten years the world would be completely devastated of all forms of plant and animal life.

Birds are nature's creation to hold insects in check and to help in destroying weeds. Without them, the battle would be hard indeed.

Texas Birds. It isn't necessary to point out the esthetic value of birds to Texans. Few States are so fortunate in having such a vast number of birds of bright plumage and beautiful song. Texas has practically every natural advantage for bird study. The long coast line, with its inland swamps and lagoons, offers excellent opportunity for the study of water and shore birds. In the interior of the State may be found almost any climate and condition that one may wish.

Cats are enemies of bird life. Tabby and her kinspeople are ranked as one of the three greatest enemies of birds. Every roaming cat is said to be responsible for the death of at least fifty birds a year. A game warden reports 200 quail killed by a mother cat in less than one year.

Cats Kill Birds. Cats may be seen crouching near nests almost any time waiting for the mother bird to return, that they may pounce upon her and devour her. The brighter and more beautiful the plumage of the bird, the more attractive it seems to be to this beautiful, purring creature that becomes a growling snarling animal the minute she gets her claws on a bird.

Expert Opinions. The following expert opinions of the cat's destructiveness to birds are taken from Bulletin No. 2 of the Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture:

"I have found the cat a beautiful, clean, intelligent and affectionate pet, readily trained not to molest game birds, but also a very dangerous enemy to bird life in general. It is idle to deny the latter point."

President Animal Rescue League, Fall River, Mass. Dr. C. F. Hodge says that evidence from all civilized countries in which measures are being taken to protect game and insectivorous birds is overwhelming that the cat is the worst enemy of bird life.

"There is, I think, no doubt that for years past the greatest destructive agency to our smaller song and insectivorous birds has been the cat." Witmer Stone, Philadelphia Academy of Science.

John Burroughs says that cats probably destroy more birds than all other animals combined. He believes that the preservation of birds involves the non-preservation of cats.

"If ownerless cats were eliminated and owned cats confined like other domestic animals, or limited in their movements to buildings or inclosure for their owners, the cat evil would be minimized. Even if the cat could be brought to obey a master and so be kept under control, like the dog, the trouble would not be so acute. The cat then could be utilized more in killing rats and mice and prevented from destroying birds; but the moment the average cat in the country gets away from the house it becomes practically a wild animal and beyond control."

Tramp Cats. Few people realize how badly the cities, and even small towns, are overrun with vagrant or tramp cats. And they are not confined to cities and towns, either; they are plentiful enough in the open country. The stray cat in the country becomes extremely wild in a very short time. Their destruction to birds is incalculable. In the cities these "ash-barrel" cats live by catching birds, mice and rats, and visiting "dumps" and garbage cans. Many of these animals are mangy and diseased, and practically all of them are hungry; the suffering among them must be great. All such cats should be killed as a measure of humanity and public safety.

The Animal Rescue League of Boston reports that it destroyed 269 cats in a single day. If the humane societies, the societies for prevention of cruelty to animals, the Animal Rescue League and other similar organizations had the cooperation of all the people in the cities and towns, the cat problem would soon be solved. The only solution seems to be to humanely put to death all cats that are not properly confined during the nesting season of birds.

There is just one last final statement that should be made about the cat. Romans says that the feelings which prompt a cat to torture a captured mouse are apparently delight in torturing for torture's sake. Universally, the cat seems to get great enjoyment from torturing its prey. Who has not seen a cat play with a mouse until it was almost lifeless, and finally, when it could hardly move when released from the clutches of the cat, it was pricked with sharp claws, or slapped or pushed, to make it try to escape, in order to give tabby another opportunity to exercise her skill in capturing prey.

Sometimes it isn't a mouse. More frequently it is a bird or a butterfly. The writer has seen cats punishing warblers and buntings in the same way. Whether a cat realizes the terrible sufferings of its victims or not is hard to tell; but the keen joy that comes to this savage animal from the tortures which it inflicts on its prey is maddening. The so-called domestic cat is in all probability the most cruel of all animals.

The Test That Tells The ability to succeed is the ability to sort out, to do the important and delegate the unimportant. Duties—thousands of them—seemingly necessary to be done, and at once, face the busy earnest worker every day. It he lacks broad vision—is dominated by the pressure of small things—he becomes a drudge.

Life claims him as a doer of detail. If he wishes to rise out of his drudgery he must learn to distinguish between the important and the unimportant—make himself a judge of essentials. If a man has his nose deep in a mass of details that tie hand and brain so that he cannot focus on the things that count, large opportunity slips by him. Until he can learn to do the important and delegate the unimportant—the test that tells—no doer of detail can hope to become a big man.

A chain is no stronger than its weakest link. Do you know your one weakest spot? Do you know where your weakest link is? If you do not, search it out—correct those tendencies which lie in the path of your advancement. An otherwise powerful man, with wonderful possibilities of accomplishment, may be held back by one little condition which becomes his stumbling block. Find out where your weakest link is. Don't forget you have one weakest link.—Bowser Boomer.

Worry is as a dangerous, injurious book, the reading of which not only takes up the time that might have been spent in reading a good, instructive and helpful book, but, at the same time, poisons the mind of the reader, corrupts his soul with evil images, and sets his feet on the pathway to destruction.—From Commercial House-Organ.

If wisdom be not our guide in the journey through life, it is more than probable that self-conceit will take its place.—Dillwyn.

In Bed With a Rattler

A big rattlesnake with nine rattlers and a button crawled in bed with two men in the Texas Company pipe line camp southeast of Henrietta a few nights ago. How long he occupied quarters with them is not known, but when the presence was discovered there was a wild scatterment.

One of the men belonging to the camp returned in the night from a trip to Wichita Falls, bringing with him a bottle of booze, and being in a joyous frame of mind he woke the sleepers up and urged that they drink some, too. Suddenly he called the two and said there was a snake in bed with them. They paid no attention to him, thinking he was just "seeing things" from his too fiery conflict with the armies of John Barleycorn. But he insisted and finally they did look, and sure enough, there really was a strike in the bed.

Pandemonium reigned for a while but they killed the snake and nobody was bitten.—Henrietta Independent.

Old Home Town Paper

When the evening snare is falling at the end of the day, An' a feller rises from labor, smokin' in' at his pipe of clay, There's nothing does him so much good, be fortune up and down, As the little country paper from his Old Home Town

It ain't a thing of beauty and its print 's not always clean, But it straightens out his temper when a feller's feelin' mean; It takes the wrinkles off his face an' brushes off the frown, That little country paper rom his Old Home Town

It tells of all the parties and the balls of Pumpkin Row, 'Rout who spent Sunday with who's girl, and how the crops 'll grow, An' how how it keeps a feller posted who's up and who is down, That little country paper from his Old Home Town

Now, I like to read the dailies, and the story papers, too, And at times the yaller novels and some oher trash--doot you? But when I want some other readin' that'll brush away a frown, I want that little paper from my Old Home Town

We Live to Learn.

The New York book reviewer is among the wise men of the East. Fresh proof of his world-embracing knowledge is furnished by comment in The Evening Post on a new volume, "Texas, the Marvelous." List and learn:

"Texans have a delightful informality in naming their counties. The names not only constitute a complete roster of the noted men in its history, but they are characteristic in another way. It was desired to name one county after a man named Smith, who had developed a large section. He was very deaf, and on the map went the official designation, 'Deaf Smith County.'"

Sacred ashes of Vince Bridge! That any man who would attempt to write of Texas should know nothing of the hero-scout of San Jacinto! This reviewer and others of his like should read at least a condensed history of Texas. It is brief, but glorious, and of absorbing interest. They'll discover who Deaf Smith was and, among other things, hat he was a native of New York State.—Dallas Evening Journal.

Wanted—A Man

"We want a man," says a big corporation, advertising in this newspaper. Well, let's see; what sort of man does it want?

A jazy man, a shikler, a clock-watcher? No. It says he must be an "energetic hustler." No fellow who is looking for an easy job, for a soft snap, need apply.

A man who has become flat-chested, stoop-shouldered and sickly from dissipation? No. The very first requirement mentioned in the advertisement is that he must "possess vigor."

A man who is content to drift with the tide? No. It says that he must have "enthusiasm and ambition," and the word ambition is in capital letters. Also he must have "earned purpose and common sense."

A grouch, cross-tempered, uncivil man? No. The advertisement states that he must have a "good personality," which means that he must be a likable man, a man whom other manly men will respect.

A college man? Not necessarily. "A fair education" is all that is required.

A man of loose character? No chance. He must have a "clear record."

A diffident, bashful, timid man? No, sir. This job is not for him. No good job is or ever was for the shrinking, self-effacing, you-go-first sort of a man. That kind never arrives. This job is for a man "with full confidence in his own ability," and that accomplishment is left for the last punch in the advertisement.

What's the pay? There's no limit. Go as far as you like. The man who can fill this bill is the kind that goes to the top, and they're scarce as hen's teeth. Big business is hunting for this kind; and rewards them. A firm in New York advertised recently for a man to fill a hundred-thousand-dollar-a-year job, and did not find him.

There are plenty of the other kind, though—plenty of the ten-dollar-a-week kind; so many thousands of them that they gang around the bottom rungs of the ladder.—St. Louis Times.

Just Once.

"Van Skinn is an awful tightwad. I don't suppose he has ever been known to give a cent to charity."

"Oh, yes, he has. He gave a plugged nickel to a blind man once, but only after he had made perfectly sure that he couldn't pass it on any one else."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"I am if I don't get the bonnet."—Yonker's Statesman.

Parents, Your Boy or Your Girl's Future is on Trial! What are you going to do?

You would be a very unnatural parent if you did not wish to give your boy or girl the best educational advantages that are in your power, a very thoughtless parent if you sent him to the first school that mailed you a catalogue, and an unpardonable parent if you entered him in a school without first investigating its location, sanitation, equipment, character of studen body, faculty, system of discipline, and above all, the moral surroundings. Yours is the duty of investigation, comparison and ultimate decision.

You acknowledge the hearsay that our school offers many advantages, it all depends upon the boy or girl." If you rest your decision on that, you may later on have bitter occasion to regret your indolent and indifferent attitude. Your boy or girl is the hope of your life. In him or her is centered your most cherished ambitions. On him or her rests your future happiness, your joyful right to live, or your sorrow or your willingness to die. His or her worth to you cannot be measured by dollars and cents, but his or her value must be measured by the training which he receives in home and in school. If the school were an ideal place for your boy or girl, you wouldn't think about sending him away from home. Under present conditions, they doubtless need more self reliance, because they lack the power of initiative, are wanting in breadth the scope of vision, haven't learned how to study, can't make for themselves, and are ignorant of the fine art of a business career. If so, their education should be continued in a school where discipline really means something, where personal supervision by the faculty is constant, where our service is rendered above everything else, and where manly and womanly character, and conduct are held paramount to all other considerations.

Our school offers many advantages that no other commercial school can afford. Its location, excellency of environments, its student body is made up from the best homes of the country, the faculty is second to none, its discipline is the outgrowth of long experience, tempered to conserve individual needs, just, sane, and firm. One or two hundred dollars spent on your boy or girl now may mean an unbounded success for their future life. There is a time in every young person's life for them to consider an education, and if that time goes by, unheeded by the parents, and they fail in the future, you are, in a measure, responsible for that failure. On the other hand, if you encourage the seed thought of an education when your son or daughter is interested, it may mean the turning point in their lives, and will cause you much joy and happiness in the future. One or two hundred dollars spent on them is one of the best business investments you ever made. It will pay greater dividends in their future than anything else you could bestow upon them.

Our 228 page catalogue will tell you as to the financial standing of our institution. It will tell you of the endorsements by the best business men, ministers, lawyers and bankers, it will give you the experience of young people who came to us with limited means, and in a short time in our school, what their success and future has meant to them. We know you are bound to be interested, so ask us to furnish you the proof. One large, beautifully illustrated catalogue is free. If you will fill out this coupon and mail to us.

On the official ballot in the November election, you will find printed across the bottom an amendment to the state constitution providing that the legislature may pass a law so that school districts may raise the tax limit to meet cases of emergency. The amendment does not call for a raise of your taxes. It simply provides that it may be done when the people are willing and ready for the raise. Many schools have been a failure because of insufficient funds. No telling when such a case may arise, in fact there are cases in the past then the people would have liked very much to raise the tax limit in order to maintain a better school but were prohibited by the constitutional limitation. Vote for this amendment next month. It is needed by the schools of the state.

Being awake to the necessity of good roads is one of the attributes of Panhandle people. Just now there is great effort being made by all of the counties to put their main roads in first class condition. There are places in the main roads of Randall county which should be put in better condition during the coming year. This is the great motor age and the county that makes provision for easy travel will be the one that gets the tourists. The beauties of the Palo Duro will draw the people here if the roads are in good condition.

The discussion of the state agricultural department and the plans to do away with the department as advanced by the Dallas News and others, has stirred up somewhat of a hornet's nest. No one suspects the state department of being perfect in all respects and this airing of its shortcomings will tend to strengthen it. It sometimes is a good thing in state affairs to stir up departments which do not look necessary in order that the people may know that they are getting for their money.

T. R. and Taff grunted at each other a mere "how do you do," on the occasion of their first political meeting since the tear up in the republican camp four years ago. Just how far does "how do you do," go in the realm of political love?

Letter from Herb Miller

Candelaria, Tex., Sept. 29, 1916
We are still on the river but I don't think we will be here much longer. There has been so many different reports lately about us being relieved by Regulars that it is hard to tell just how long we will be kept here. Nearly half of Troop B is at Candelaria now, but the rest of the squadron is still at Ruidosa. All the boys that are here like it much better here than there. We have no drill nor every-other-day inspections, etc. like they have in the troops. Here we have to stand guard every other night, and make a ten mile patrol up the river the next day. We are also getting fairly good cats here, which is the main thing. The cook gives us hot cakes for breakfast and most always fresh meat of some kind for dinner. We had a wild duck pie for dinner today. We have lots of goat meat. We can buy them here for 75 cents, dressed.

Two Y. M. C. A. men that are traveling the border with a moving picture outfit, for the benefit of the soldiers on the border, were here last night, but their machine was out of commission, so they didn't get to shoot but one reel. They also brought a Grapona, lots of reading matter, among which happened to be an annual of the W. T. S. N. College. We certainly appreciate such callers as reading matter and amusement had gotten a mighty low.

"All the Canyon boys are fine and we are always anxious to get the papers. They most generally get here by Tuesday.
Candelaria is about such a place as Ruidosa, only there are a couple American families live here. It is about as hot, during the day here, now, as it was there when we left, but it gets quite cool at night.
Two different patrols of Troop B and one of Troop D have gotten in a little scrimish with the "cattle rustlers" from the other side but none of them amounted to much. Twice the sentinel has been fired on while walking his post, lately, and a call-to-arms in the middle of the night has gotten quite common.
They have built a mess-shack for each troop at Ruidosa, and they have one nearly completed here. They also have the lumber to build stables and bath houses, so it is certain that this will be a permanent camp for some squadron, but I rather hope it won't be us.
We have lots of sport swimming, fishing and hunting. I have never been fishing myself but a few of the other boys made their hook, line and pole and went down and caught a bunch of little ones that looked like sardines. I don't know what they were but I'm quite sure they don't have them back in civilization. This country is just thick with ducks and quail. Last week a bunch took a three days trip on a deer hunt but they came back disappointed.
Well-I must close,
Herb Miller

PLAIN'S LAST BUFFALO HUNT STAGED FRIDAY

Three Arrows Enter Heart of Mighty Bison, as Indians compete for Honor of Making Last Kill of Their Race.

GOODNIGHT, Texas, Oct. 6.—The Texas Panhandle halted from its daily routine of empire building today and harked back to the era when buffalo grazed upon its broad expanse—the days before the cattle baron broke into the land and drove the Comanche and the buffalo into the limbo of the past.

The famous buffalo hunt arranged by Colonel Charles Goodnight was the event which sent the Panhandle back to those pioneer days. When Colonel Goodnight retired tonight, after having for hours received congratulations he was extremely happy man, and so was Mrs. Goodnight. This happiness was also shared by the 11,000 people who saw the chase.

When one sits down to tell about the event so soon after its consummation, he is likely to be extravagant in his use of superlatives. Big things have been happening in the Panhandle in recent years and just how to classify the history making affair today is not easy, but a large portion of the eleven thousand people who were here went home declaring it was the greatest day of their lives.

Indians Do Quick Work.
The chase itself, despite its thrilling qualities, was brief. The settings, bordering, crowd and other commitments must share in the happy chronicle of the day. Just 17 minutes elapsed from the time the 4 year old bison was driven from the corral back of the Goodnight ranch house, until he sunk to his haunches at the far corner of the East pasture suffering from his mortal wounds.

Maybe it was Kiowa George, tall, lithe, supple and reminding one very much of Uncas, last of the Mohicans, who sent the arrow winging its way to the bison's heart first; maybe it was Horse, wrinkled and painted aborigine, or maybe it was Luther Sahment, wiry and nervous redskin. But whoever first pulled his bow, every one of the three arrows found lodgement in the animal's heart and all must share in the honor of killing the last buffalo in the Panhandle.

Crowd Well Handled.
Perhaps Col. Goodnight expected a big crowd today. Certainly he did not expect as big a one as came. But the size of the crowd did not frustrate either Colonel Goodnight, or his aides. When the gates swung open at 1 o'clock the cars which filled every street in town began slowly to file through the gates. Elaborate precautions had been taken to safeguard the visitors against accident. Police Commissioner Woods of New York City handling an election crowd in Madison Square Garden couldn't have done any better than President R. B. Morgan, of Goodnight College, Sheriff Woodburn of Armstrong county, ex-Sheriff Patman of Danley county, and the other aides, did.

Through some misunderstanding a few cars were parked directly in the line of the chase, but they were soon moved and without confusion. At 2:51 the crowd had been placed and the buffalo was turned from its corral and started down the lane to the hunting ground.

By pre-arrangement it was agreed that should the arrows fail to find the animal's heart and it became angered, Monroe Blanton was to give it a charge from a 30-30 Winchester. But the ten Indians with the heritage of a race of buffalo hunting ancestors to uphold, went into the chase determined that no such thing was going to happen, and it didn't. Blanton never had a chance to use his Winchester.

"Victor Shoots the Piece"
That individual who has become so prominent at all events of this nature in the last few years—the moving picture man—was very much in evidence today. By popular consent any moving picture camera man is named Victor, and making the picture is called "shooting the piece." Victor certainly did. Over ravine and gully he followed the chase, his machine clicking out hundreds of feet of film.

After the buffalo had fallen and Van Lane had loaded it onto the big dray the movie machine followed it to the tower from which it was suspended to have the hide removed and the camera recorded the entire process. Then the Indians lined up in front of their tepees and smiled blandly as they were photographed.

George Hunt, full-blood Kiowa, educated in the best schools which the Great White Father has prepared for his charges and now a United States district farmer at Lawton, Okla., was proud of his Indian friends and their excellent marksmanship.

Hunt is a type of the Indian of today. He is busily engaged in making Indians into farmers and mechanics, and preparing them for the professions of their pale faced brothers. He is a close friend of Colonel Goodnight and it was his task to line up the redskins for the event.
A Day of Reminiscence
Primarily the portions of the day preceding and following the chase were given over to reminiscences. The persons who were conveyed here by the 1462 automobiles which passed through the gates had little share in this part of the program. By train from distance points came the special guests of Col. and Mrs. Goodnight, dozens of men and women who have had a very important part in making the Panhandle of today.

These pioneers gathered and talked of the days when the Comanche and the buffalo were the sole occupants of northwest Texas. Then the talk led to the day when the cattle baron came and found the grass bub-high to buckboard and the stirring events of the Chisholm cattle trail days; then of the days when the thin, white line of home builders came from the redlands up to the staked plains and met in the cattle barons vanquished him, vanquished him with golden heads of wheat and maize and billowing harvests of wheat as his weapon. Then tonight the conversation had been carried up to the splendid developments of today and surmises as to what tomorrow new dawning will bring forth.
At Goodnight Baptist College tonight there was a program which drew there was a crowd. Tomorrow Colonel and Mrs. Goodnight will be hosts to intimate friends at a barbecue.

What Are You Doing?
What are you doing for this town? What are you doing to justify your citizenship in this town? You can no sit down, criticise, let others do the work that makes a town or community, and still call yourself a good citizen.

The good citizen never thinks only of self. He must necessarily think of self, or he would not survive, but good citizenship requires more than that—much more.
It requires that you keep in mind that there are others who have rights and who are entitled to have those rights respected by others—by you. On the same basis you are entitled to have your rights equally respected by them.
That is good citizenship—partially. In addition, the good citizen remembers that his town is entitled to his best efforts in its behalf to the end that the interests of the community be advanced by all legitimate means. This means, too, that in advancing the interests you are advancing your own, which is the ultimate aim of the human race. What then, are you doing to constitute yourself a good citizen?

Illinois has more women in its clubs than there are soldiers in the regular United States Army.

It Made Talk
It was a cordial (?) meeting—that of Taft and Teddy.
They shook hands.
"How do you do?" asked Taft, who was slated to make the advance.
"How do you do?" asked Teddy.
Neither answered the other's question. It was as though each had said: "None of your durn business."
Seemingly they greeted each other very much as Mrs. Maloney greeted Mrs. Moriarity.
"How are yez this marnin'?" asked Mrs. Maloney.
Mrs. Moriarity proceeded to tell of her rheumatism, neuralgia and various other aches and pains until Mrs. Maloney interrupted:
"Not that I give a cent, but it makes talk," said she.—Evening Journal.

Conserving People's Health

It is encouraging to note from a report recently made by the census bureau that the death rate is decreasing in this country. In a five-year period between 1901 and 1905 the death rate for the United States was 16.2 per 1000. Statistics show that the rate has gradually decreased. The rate for 1914 was 13.6. Statistics gathered from 25 states and 41 cities with a total population of 67,000,000 show that the death rate for 1915 is 13.5 per 1000.

People are making use of their increasing knowledge to conserve life and prevent disease. They are taking better care of their lives. Yet the number of fatalities from preventable diseases is still too large.

People who live in rural districts should use greater precaution in pro-venting such diseases as malaria and typhoid. Especially should the source of drinking water be safeguarded; plans taken to prevent flies and mosquitoes, carriers of disease germs.

Better sanitation is needed for schools, churches and other public meetings. Where there are no departments charged with enforcing sanitary laws the people individually must be diligent.

House Joint Resolution No. 30

A measure of much importance which may easily be overlooked by voters in the general election in November is House Joint Resolution No. 30. It is a constitutional amendment. Some uninformed persons are stating that the bill will increase the tax rate, in independent school districts to $1.00 on the hundred dollars' valuation. It is clearly seen that this is not the case. The matter is OPTIONAL with the voters in each district. It does, however, give the people in any district the power to vote a tax in excess of fifty cents and up to $1.00 on the hundred dollars if they NEED it. There is many a school handicapped by not having enough money to properly carry out its work. Often it is the case that only for a limited time the higher tax is needed, but when such a time arrives it is needed badly. House Joint Resolution No. 30 is constructive legislation. A statement from State Superintendent of Public Instruction W. F. Doughty places the issue in its true light:

"(1) To authorize the Legislature to enact a law whereby counties may levy and collect a maintenance tax for school purposes not exceeding 50 cents on the $100 valuation of property, if such tax be authorized by a majority vote in an election called for that purpose; (2) to authorize the Legislature to enact a law whereby common and independent school districts may levy and collect a local tax not exceeding $1 on the $100 valuation of property. The maximum rate that may be levied in such districts at present is 50 cents on the $100 valuation. It will thus be seen that this feature of the resolution, if adopted by the people will raise the tax limit in school districts from 50 cents to $1 on the $100 valuation of property. Neither of these features of the resolution may carry in the November election without the other carrying also. In other words, the two propositions constitute one resolution, which will be voted upon, and if one proposition fails, then the other must fail also. These two propositions were not separated by the Thirty-Fourth Legislature in providing for the submission to a vote of the people of this matter. This resolution was passed by the Legislature in response to an urgent need from many sections of the State for a higher tax rate for school purposes. Many school districts in Texas are willing to vote upon themselves a county tax for school purposes, if this constitutional amendment is adopted."

I keep Black-Draught on hand all the time now, and when my children feel a little bad, they ask me for a dose, and it does them more good than any medicine they ever tried.

the improbable event of his election. Therefore we should have the mirth-provoking spectacle of Hughes going to war with England and Roosevelt going to the same thing with Germany—America, formerly the most peace-loving of nations, hocked up with two European wars, besides comical little combat with Mexico, Columbia and Nicaragua. Also perhaps we should have to take on Japan, thereby encircling ourselves with enemies, all in the name of buncombe and all to the greater glory of brass buttons and braggadocio, if the American people defeat Mr. Wilson for re-election they will at the same time declare their distaste for peace. Their mandate having been delivered, it would be only dutiful on the part of Messrs. Hughes and Roosevelt to dig up some wars. And inasmuch as Mr. Hughes has cried out for the employment of force against England and her allies, while Mr. Roosevelt is bellowing for trouble with Germany and her allies, each would perhaps go ahead and start something with his favorite enemy, thus enlivening things in these federated States. Food For Thought

The wisdom of the wise and the experience of ages may be preserved by quotation.—Benjamin Disraeli.
Defeat is only a reason for exertion. We shall do better next time.—Washington.
Little minds are tamed and subdued by misfortune, but great minds rise above them.—Washington Irving.
Censure is the tax a man pays to the public for being eminent.—Swift.
The slander of some people is as great a recommendation as the praise of others.—Fielding.
Misunderstood! It is a right fool's word. It is so bad then to be misunderstood? Pythagoras was misunderstood, and Socrates, and Jesus, and Luther, and Copernicus, and Galileo, and Newton, and every pure and wise spirit that ever took flesh. To be great is to be misunderstood.—Emerson.
Hate no one; ever turn a man's wrong-doing, but do not overturn him unless it must be done in overturning the wrong.—Lincoln.
A man's good breeding is the best security against other people's ill manners.—Chesterfield.

PRESIDENTIAL POINTERS
The Democratic national convention of 1912 was held in Baltimore from June 25 to July 2. Alton B. Parker being temporary, and Ollie M. James, permanent chairman. Forty-six ballots were taken, Champ Clark leading till the thirtieth, when he was passed by Woodrow Wilson. On the tenth and seven following ballots Clark got more than half the votes cast, but as two-thirds are necessary in a Democratic convention, he was finally defeated. Other prominent candidates were Judson Harmon of Ohio, Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama and Thomas R. Marshall of Indiana. Marshall was chosen as the candidate for vice president on the third ballot.

The Whistle of "Bob White"

By Jake H. Harrison
The whistle of "Bob White" is sweet,
His love-call is entrancing,
Its flute-like sylvan melody
The chords of life enhancing;
As standing on the old rail fence
He pipes it in the morning
Protruding chest and lordly air
All thought of danger scorning.
And then at noon he calls again,
This time a trifle louder,
His head erect with dignity
His bearing somewhat prouder;
For he, in truth, has won a mate
To cheer him through the season,
Therefore, is not amendable
To either rhyme or reason.

Again when the Sun is in the west
And shades of night are falling,
From somewhere near a safe retreat
We hear him softly calling;
A cautious pleading in his tone,
Though not to love a stranger,
In which he begs his errant mate
So come away from danger.

And then when nesting time has come
And parent pride is nearing,
He whistles often to his mate
Her patient labor cheering;
And oh, his tone is loving then,
Is full of thrills erratic,
Expressing in their rhapsody
A state of mind ecstatic!

And then when cheeping midgets creep
And dart about their mother,
His whistle takes an anxious tone,
It changes altogether;
He knows a host of enemies
Are seeking their destruction,
And bids them all to watch and ward
In every direction.

When dread November comes at last,
And men and dogs together
Go forth with murder in their hearts,
That chills the autumn weather,
His whistle is a frightened wail,
Dumbfounded, broken-hearted,
And nearly always, in the end,
A dirge for the departed!

Governor Ferguson has brought suit against certain parties in Temple, his home town, for damages and libel in the sum of $50.00 growing out of the campaign of 1916. Recently, District Judge Swayne, of Fort Worth, charged $50,000 alleging slander a few years ago. If the Washington stories continue to bring in indictments for criminal libel against parties who had circulated campaign falsehoods again any person. The Texas Republic, published at San Antonio, points out that McClure's Magazine for September has printed a story which is aimed at President Wilson and suggests judicial investigation of the charges. It will be remembered that Col. William Barnes, of New York, brought suit against ex-President Roosevelt for $50,000 alleging slander a few years ago. If the Washington stories continue regarding President Wilson somebody ought to become responsible for them and if he has been unjustly accused severe penalties inflicted. Campaign falsehoods are just as criminal as any other falsehoods.

The Navasota Examiner-Review says: "Don't be a sucker and let some slick-tongued individual sell you a block of stock in an oil well in some remote spot or a bunch of shares in a company promising rainbow dividends. Remember that there are any number of ways to invest all your spare cash in legitimate ventures right here at home, where you can see what you are buying and have the pleasure of looking at it whenever you want to. Buy a cow or a pig; if you are flush buy several cows and fill, in a few years or so, pay three times the dividends of any investment of the same outlay." There are too many men with schemes to keep out of work. The whole world needs more workmen in all lines and fewer crafters.

The dedication of the Elephant Butte Dam at Elephant Butte, New Mexico, 125 miles north of El Paso, by President Wilson on October 14, will be an event of world-wide importance in the field of land reclamation and water conservation. It will be the spectacular feature of the 23rd annual convention of the International Irrigation Congress, which will be held in El Paso, October 14 to 18, and will mark the Reclamation services' greatest achievement.

The county school trustees of McCulloch county, acting in conjunction with the county school trustees of Concho county, have consolidated the Salt Gap school district in McCulloch county with the Littlefield school district in Concho county, thereby forming a county line district. The consolidation was effected for high school purposes. A modern school plant will be provided. The new building, which will cost several thousand dollars, will be 18 miles from a railroad.

Wonderful experiments along this line are now being made successfully in Australia. Prof. Summerton has conceived the idea of sending up captive balloons equipped with steel points through which the negative electricity of the earth could pass into the upper strata of air accelerated by special electrical devices. If all the experiments of the Australians are doing prove successful, as they are doing, it means that the sky can be cleared of clouds at will, the rain can be made to fall, the fogs dispersed as desired, the complete control of the atmosphere is near at hand. On a small scale this has been done recently in Australia.

Industry is making rapid strides during the war. Only a few months ago American manufacturers were lamenting the scarcity of dyes here and the inability of American dye makers to turn out the best dyes of certain varieties. Now the cheerful report is brought by the big trade magazines that American is growing substantially independent in dye production. America has plenty of raw material for dye making. Coal tar, one of the biggest essentials, being particularly abundant in this country. We have chemists of undoubted ability and manufacturers abundantly able to pay for the best chemical experts. Every other industrial problem within the realm of possibility has yielded to American genius and persistence. Once the Yankee attacks the dye conundrum seriously he will not stop short of

NO REASON FOR IT

When Canyon Citizens Show a Way.

There can be no reason why any reader of this who suffers the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the pains and dangers of kidney ills will fail to heed the words of a neighbor who has found relief. Read what a Canyon citizen says:

Mrs. Clarence Smith, E. Third St., Canyon, says: "My back was weak and ached. It was also stiff and sore. The kidney secretions annoyed me a great deal. Black spots floated before my eyes and caused dizziness. It took only a few boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Burns' Drug Store, to cure me and I have not been bothered since."

success. Iceland is far from being a dreary waste, for it exports large quantities of the finest grade of wool in the world, besides quantities of hides, sheepskins, feathers, old fish and fish products, and, curiously enough, many horses. The island has several natural resources that have never been developed, among them great sulphur deposits, says the Argonaut. One of them contains not less than 250,000 tons of practically pure sulphur. There are extensive deposits of copper ore. This, while of a low grade, could be worked at a huge profit, since the water power is unlimited and always at hand wherever the copper is found. There are also large deposits of geysers, which are equal to the best Arkansas honeystone. In addition there are several sections rich in agates and chalcedony, which are widely used in making jewels for the bearings of watches and electrical instruments. None of them has ever been worked.

Chicago is putting its new municipal pier to a novel use. Here every Thursday night, in the large auditorium at the end of the pier, the people come together and sing. "People who know how to sing, people who do not know how, but wish they did, people who do not know how, but think they do, all are welcome. Community singing is not by any means a new idea; it doubtless antedated even the days of Iahobad Crane singing master for the Dutch settlers of Sleepy Hollow. But it is an idea that, in the United States, seems to have gone out of fashion until recently. Is there any good reason why vived, why every community, large and small, should not say to its people once a week, "Let us come together and sing?"

People You Ought To Know

There are many people in this town you ought to know for your own sake. Some of them you may not know, but you should.

You should know the banker. He is the one who supplies you with money when you need it and cares for your money when you have it. No town can conduct modern business without him.

You should know each merchant. They have the goods you want, and if you know each one personally you should also know something of the wares they sell. This enables you to buy judiciously and saves you many a lost penny.

You should know the mechanic. Every time an improvement is made you must call him in. If you know all you likewise know the one who is most likely to give you the best service.

You should know the school teacher. He is responsible to a great degree for the moulding of the character of your children, for the lessons they learn while under his care are not forgotten even to the brink of the grave. Know him and help him.

You should know the farmer. He holds the world in the hollow of his hand. To him we look for the production of the sustenance of life, and without him we could not live.

You should know the minister. He is interested in you, though you may give little thought to him. He does not supply you with the bread you eat, or the clothes you wear, but he does beckon you along the road to a better life beyond. Know him, and hear him and heed him.

And brother, you should know the sheriff. When the devil gets under your hide the sheriff is a good man to know. If you are inclined to kick up a little dust your knowledge of him may cause you to pause before you kick. Yes, brother, know the sheriff, for while you are a good citizen he is your friend, and when you cease to be good he puts you where you can be nothing but good.

The Mail Order Citizen

The man who buys his goods of a mail order house and expects his neighbors at home to buy goods of him, or to buy labor of him, or to buy professional service of him, is economically a leech. He is sucking industrial blood out of the town and gives none back. He sends his profits out of town, like a chinaman, and has no more right to a standing in the community than a foreigner. We are all neighbors industrially in our home town, and the man who sends away for his goods is not one of us. He is of another industrial system, and deserves no local man's support. The fact that this is economically wrong is recognized by the mail order houses themselves. They protect their customers as thieves by offering to keep people from knowing where the mail order goods come from. The mail order houses have no "tag" on their goods. They say in their catalogs that none of their goods are marked and that no one knows where they were bought. If it is proper to hide the place of purchase of an article, it is wrong to buy the article at that place. Only the man who steals is ashamed to say where he got anything he has. There is such a thing as "tainted" goods, "tainted" groceries, and "tainted" furniture. All of such that are not bought at home, of men who befriended you, of men to whom you owe a living, are "tainted" because they come unfairly.—William Allen White.

Let the People Rule!

The trouble in Mexico continues. Colonel House is at Shadow Lawn. A girl in Oklahoma, earning $6 a week, recently paid $22.50 for a pair of shoes on the installment plan at $1 a week.

Churches, colleges, hospitals and Y. M. C. A.'s are planning campaigns this year to raise an aggregate of $750,000,000.

A New York police magistrate recently sentenced an unruly boy to receive a thrashing and his father promised to administer it.

A woman who was convicted of burglary last June, by a woman jury in Los Angeles, secured a new trial and has just been adjudged insane by a jury of men.

Policemen representing the health department raided a Long Island home and forcibly took from a mother a 19 months' old baby as "a plague subject."

A newly married woman in Kansas intrusted her husband with the job of being a fat hog. He spent the proceeds on a spree. She is suing him for divorce.

The widow of a millionaire coal operator who was married in Kentucky recently forfeited $10,000,000, half the fortune of her former husband, under the provision of his will.

A grandson of the poet Longfellow, and a graduate of Harvard, recently enjoyed the experience of running a street car and afterward of carrying a hod. He is a socialist. And the people rule.—Leslies.

Mrs. Abigail M. Johnston of Shippenburg, Pa., who is now past 80 years of age, is the oldest chorus singer in the world, having just completed 67 years of continuous service as a singer.

No woman in Palestine is too old or too young to work. A girl of 6 tends the grandmother weaves or spins until the day she dies.

Although she is past 90 years of Mrs. Mary Norcross of Danville, Ill., is just learning to read.

Under the new recruiting system in Canada thousands of women will have to be employed to take the places of the men called to the front.

OFFICIAL BALLOT

COARSE JOKE IS PUNISHED

Would-Be Wit Deserved Fright Which Made Him See Things in a Different Light.

Some years ago it was the custom in France to conduct condemned criminals through gaudy crowds of idle spectators to the public guillotine.

On one such occasion, the unfortunate, seated upon his cot in the cart, heard a would-be wit in the crowd remark to a companion: "Well, I'll bet that fellow doesn't feel much like laughing."

The coarse attempt at a joke stung the prisoner, and when he arrived at the scaffold, he asked that the proceedings might be stayed a moment as he had a confession to make.

"Although I deny it at my trial, I had accomplices in the crime for which I have been sentenced; and there," pointing to the joker, "stands one of them!"

Great excitement ensued. The person designated was seized by the gendarmes with no gentle hands and placed on the scaffold beside his accuser.

Such a fearful spectacle of abject terror as the joker presented was never before witnessed in that somber locality.

After enjoying his helpless fright for a few moments, the fated convict said to the official in charge: "He tried to make sport of my sufferings, but the man is innocent. And as soon as he seemed to be sure that it was no laughing matter for me to be here, I was curious to see how much such a funny fellow would laugh under similar circumstances himself."

MONEY AT HIS FINGER TIPS

Scores of Men Borrowed From William Weightman As They Would From a Bank.

William Weightman, the old quinine king, was one of the three or four richest men who ever died in Pennsylvania.

No man in this city ever kept so much real money at his finger tips as did Mr. Weightman, a writer in the Philadelphia Public Ledger states. Scores of men borrowed money from him as they would from a bank, and it was the custom to give them cash and not a check.

Here is an example of the old millionaire's method which I have from Frederick A. Riehl, whose plant for making testing guidelines is a neighbor of the Weightman chemical factory.

"We often had occasion to borrow money, and we used to go to Mr. Weightman's office and ask him for the loan of some cash. Mr. Weightman never refused, and after listening to our story quietly and patiently would reach around to one of his many fire-proof safes and open the door, get out one of his fat pocketbooks and pick out the banknotes for the amount that we needed. Mr. Weightman never gave me a check."

Then this touch of the human side of that extraordinary money getter: "Mr. Weightman was very fond of flowers and generally had a cluster or two of very choice blooms."

He could well afford them with those innumerable "fat pocketbooks."

Character in Handwriting. Half the business and professional men you meet have a fad. That of William Copeland Furber, the architect and ex-president of the Business Science Club, is reading character by means of penmanship, a writer in the Philadelphia Public Ledger declares. "I am taught by the best experts," he said to me, "that they can without difficulty tell a crook from an honest person by handwriting. Character or lack of it is easy to detect upon the written page."

"But what no expert can yet do is to distinguish a dull man from a smart one by the style of his penmanship."

"The greatest scholar I ever knew personally wrote a decidedly inferior hand. An examination of the penmanship of American presidents will reveal something of the same thing."

"There was no better writer than James K. Polk, who put flourishes on his own signature, but his bravery was distinctly inferior to that of 'Geo. Washington' or 'A. Lincoln,' as they signed themselves, in a cramped, mediocre hand."

"John Adams wrote the clearest and in very plain letters. Madison had a fine, effeminate style, while that of R. B. Hayes resembled more nearly the writing of a business man than did that of any other president."

Cork Tree. The cork tree is a species of oak. In Spain the outer bark is harvested from the same tree once every nine or ten years. The best cork comes from trees that are fifty to one hundred years old. Instead of injuring the tree, stripping the bark seems to add impetus to the growth of a new coat. The yield of a tree varies from fifty pounds to five hundred. What is known as the "cork-bark elm" in some sections is also called the "wetch elm" in some parts of Canada, from the weird and ghastly appearance of its boughs and trunk. Although somewhat similar in appearance to the cork oak, it has not the slightest value for its bark.

Judicial Pessimist. A judge holds that marriage today is too easy, and says young men marry for pretty faces, and "if they take a look at some of the women married ten or twenty years they would know better what kind of a wife to select. Must want to kill the game."

For the amendment to Section 3, Article 7 of the Constitution of the State of Texas, relating to the levy of ad valorem taxes not exceed fifty cents on the $100.00 valuation in the county, and not exceed one dollar on the $100.00 valuation in the district, for the purpose of maintaining the public schools of the county or of the district.

For the amendment to Section 3, Article 7 of the Constitution of the State of Texas, relating to the levy of ad valorem taxes not exceed fifty cents on the $100.00 valuation in the county, and not exceed one dollar on the $100.00 valuation in the district, for the purpose of maintaining the public schools of the county or of the district.

More Money for Schools

House Joint Resolution 30, passed by the 34th Texas Legislature, submits an amendment to the State constitution to be voted on by the people at the general election to be held in November, 1916, providing that the Legislature may enact a law permitting common and independent school districts to levy a local school tax not to exceed one dollar on the $100 of assessed property valuation by a majority vote of the qualified property taxpaying voters of the district, and also permitting counties to levy a county school tax of 50 cents on the $100 of assessed property valuation to supplement the county school fund if a majority of the qualified property taxpaying voters of the county desire to do so.

The adoption of this amendment does not, therefore, impose a tax upon anyone, but simply removed the constitutional handicap which forbids many localities having efficient schools, and allows the people of school districts to do so to provide adequate financial support from their own funds for the proper maintenance of their own schools.

In many sections of the State the schools are suffering seriously on account of insufficient funds. The people of such districts desire better schools for their children, but the constitutional stands in the way. Is this right? If you do not need the amendment in your county or district, will you not help your fellow citizen in some other section who does need it?

The state of Arkansas has a constitutional limit of seven mills for local school purposes, as against five mills in Texas. The people of Arkansas are asking that this limit be raised to 12 mills. The people of Texas are asking that the limit be raised to only 10 mills. Oklahoma already has a state school tax of 15 mills.

It is an acknowledged fact that Texas is considerably below the average among the states of the United States from the standpoint of an efficient public school system, and the main reason for this fact that many of the schools of Texas are hindered by a constitutional restriction which forbids the people to provide out of their own means sufficient funds to maintain good schools, although, in a majority of instances, they are eager and willing to do so. Should not the constitution and the laws serve educational needs of the people?—Farm and Ranch.
