

NORMAL PLAYS CLARENDON, LOST BY 19 TO 6 SCORE

Only Touchdown Make Against Visitors This Year—Normal Puts Up Good Game.

Outclassed by a good odd, the Normal team put up a good fight in Monday's game with Clarendon College, but lost by two touchdowns and two field goals.

Clarendon kicked west to the Normal, the ball being downed on the 40 yard line.

The Normal received on her 38 yard line. A forward pass was intercepted and the ball carried to the Normal's 22 yard line.

The Normal decided it was time things were tightened up, and so they were to a great extent.

Clarendon kicked west to the Normal, the ball being downed on the 40 yard line.

Clarendon intercepted a forward pass on the Normal's 32 yard line. They made first down.

The Normal opened the second half by kicking west to the 25 yard line.

Clarendon kicked to the 38 yard line. Clarendon intercepted forward pass on the 32 yard line.

The Normal made 10 yards on the first down, but Clarendon intercepted a forward pass on the second play.

Clarendon punted, the ball rolling over the line. Normal's ball on their own 20 yard line.

The following was the Normal lineup: Center, Carey; guards, Showalter; ends, Ballard, Black; quarter Conner; halves, Stone, Leon; full Carey.

Clarendon—Center, Sone; guards, Boehning, Rainey; tackles, Carpenter, Thompson; ends, McNabb, Rippy, Connelley; quarter, Acker; halves, Goodwin, Combest; full, Clang.

Snider Pleased with Panhandle

AMARILLO CANCELS GAME FOR NEXT SATURDAY

The Normal football game scheduled with Amarillo for Saturday afternoon was cancelled yesterday by the Amarillo bunch with absolutely no reason for so doing.

Asked the reason for calling off the game, they would give none. It is indeed a sore disappointment to the Normal team that they do not get to meet the high schoolers Saturday and at least they feel that they are due an explanation for the cancellation.

SECOND NUMBER OF LYCEUM COURSE MONDAY AT NORMAL

Edward Amherst Ott Will Lecture on "Sour Grapes, or Heredity and Marriage."

The second number of the Normal Lyceum will be held at the Normal auditorium next Monday night, which is a lecture by Edward Amherst Ott on the subject "Sour Grapes, or Heredity and Marriage."

Reserved seats will be at the News office Saturday and Monday. Admission of 50 cents will be charged to those who do not hold season tickets.

Mr. Ott's lecture deals with the following important facts:

Which has the greater influence on character, heredity or environment? How are the accumulated benefits of environment saved to the human race?

Do our first class men come from Universities? How do we produce our new flowers and fruits?

Is it divorce or marriage that the moralist needs to discuss? Are there personal and character qualities of the individual that are determined by heredity?

Why has the Juke family of New York produced nearly twelve hundred of the criminals of that state?

Could a born musician live amidst the noise of a machine shop? Why did congenital idiocy increase 150 per cent in Norway in ten years?

Can environment explain the presence of both good and bad children in the same family? Can heredity explain it?

Can our teachers and preachers do it all? Professor Ott was the pioneer in popularizing biological ethics.

Eugenics is not a fad with him. He has worked out a practical breeding guide based on Mendel's laws for poultry and stock breeding.

He has done much practical work in breeding. "Sour Grapes" has been delivered over 2000 times and has been heard by over a million people.

Younger-Estes Wedding.

Miss Luella Younger and Ennis Estes of Quanah were married yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Younger, Rev. W. H. Younger officiating.

50 YEARS

A Seattle judge rebuked the district attorney because no cases were ready and the court was idle for two days. The district attorney replied that there were no cases to get ready. When asked why he had to admit that work for the criminal court had fallen off about 50 per cent since the prohibition law went into effect. Of course there were some bootlegging cases. (We mention this to save anyone who is opposed to prohibition the trouble of informing us.) But of course there was a real dearth. and the home in making and enforcing laws to protect working children. And since half the adult population of our American homes are women since approximately 75 per cent of the church members are women, since 90 per cent of the school teachers are women, and since every moral and educational enterprise in the country is represented in about the same proportion, cold logic forces us to the conclusion that we need women in politics. In our case of 10,000 members, if the national child labor committee 6,400 are women, 3,600 are men.

But Experts Are Asked to Explain Why Chicken and Quail Are Immune.

Harrisburg, Pa.—Experts in universities and colleges of the state have been asked to inform the state department of agriculture why strychnine will kill crows and not affect chickens when eaten.

The state live stock sanitary board stirred up the question by sending out a notice urging that crows be exterminated and giving instructions as to use of the poison.

Some people wanted to know if chickens would be harmed by it. The board officials replied that they would not, and told of the result of an experiment by one man who had written to the department that he had fed strychnine in corn to brown leghorn chickens and that they had not minded it a bit.

When he threw it out for the crows to eat he had to send out burial parties. On the other hand, quail did not seem to mind it a particle.

REUNION OF BLUE AND GRAY

Two Visitors in a Dakota City Fought on Opposite Sides in Civil War.

Volga, S. D.—The Blue and the Gray had an interesting reunion in Volga when Mr. Witherspoon, a guest at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Samts, and Timothy Corcoran, who is visiting his son in Volga, chanced to meet and compare notes of the stirring days of the great Civil war.

Witherspoon served in the Union army, while Corcoran served on the Southern side. From their conversation they learned that the companies in which they served on their respective sides participated in several battles with each other, and on one occasion during a series of battles the two companies of which the two were members faced each other on the battle line.

The former wearer of the Blue and the former wearer of the Gray became great chums as the result of their reunion.

APPENDIX REMOVED ON SHIP

First Successful Operation of the Kind to Be Performed on Ocean.

San Francisco.—The first successful operation for appendicitis performed on the Pacific ocean was revealed here on the arrival of the United States transport Sheridan from Manila via Honolulu. Maj. E. A. Dean of the United States medical corps performed the operation on Milton S. Finch, a private soldier.

When the Sheridan was three days out from this port, Finch was suddenly stricken with appendicitis.

Major Dean, an army surgeon returning from the Philippines on the Sheridan, was called in and asked to operate on Finch, and while the Sheridan plowed through the waves he removed the appendix. Finch recovered rapidly from the operation and was removed to the army hospital at the Presidio when the Sheridan arrived here.

No king of the realm, no matter how purple be his royal raiment, nor in fact any other human being, can trace his ancestry as far back as that of the horse. This animal, so well known the world over, has the longest pedigree on record; one probably over 3,000,000 years old, dating back to what is known as the Eocene age, thousands of years before the coming of man. His genealogical tree is shown in the National Museum at Washington, where a series of feet and skulls depict some of his more important ancestors. The horse of the Eocene, or his forebear, rather was known as Eohippus, or Dawn Horse. He was about the size of a fox, standing a little more than one foot high. Eohippus lived in North America, where he ran lightly-footedly over the Tertiary rocks on his well-developed four-toed front feet and three-toed hind feet. His teeth were not like those of a modern horse either, but were short-crowned. While scientists are unable to tell us just how long his mane was, if he had any, or the color of his hide, they do know the facts mentioned above, for his fossil remains have been found in the rock strata known as the Lower Eocene, which is supposed to date back about 3,000,000 years.

At no time since the Civil War have the prices of flour and potatoes been as high as they are now, reports the department of agriculture. Other food products also are soaring. Of Mrs. Chappell, of Five Years' Standing, Relieved by Cardui.

Mt. Airy, N. C.—Mrs. Sarah M. Chappell of this town, says: "I suffered for five years with womanly troubles, also stomach troubles, and my punishment was more than any one could tell."

I tried most every kind of medicine, but none did me any good.

I read one day about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I decided to try it. I had not taken but about six bottles until I was almost cured. It did me more good than all the other medicines I had tried, put together.

My friends began asking me why I looked so well, and I told them about Cardui. Several are now taking it.

Do you, lady reader, suffer from any of the ailments due to womanly trouble, such as headache, backache, sideache, sleeplessness, and that everlastingly tired feeling?

If so, let us urge you to give Cardui a trial. We feel confident it will help you, just as it has a million other women in the past half century.

Begin taking Cardui to-day. You won't regret it. All druggists.

A STORY OF DIMES.

Silk Petticoat Graters Miss Flood of Silver at Minneapolis.
We wonder how many ladies in this vicinity fascinated by the thought of a brand new silk petticoat sent a dime and the names of five friends to that Minneapolis concern? Don't all speak at once. Not one! How fine. But lots of them did in other places any way. So many of them and the flood of dimes to the northern city almost swamped the post office employees up there. The postal officials started to investigate the would be graters then fled.

Many a lady will be disappointed in not possessing a brand new silk petticoat. But this is a cold cruel world.
Here is the story as it comes from Minneapolis:
Minneapolis, Oct. 25.—A deluge of dimes that already has passed the 30,000 a day mark and that seemingly has not yet reached high tide, today continued to swamp the Minneapolis post office all due to the unprecedented success of the "chain letter petticoat" plan of the grand National Mail Order Brokerage exchange the operators of which had fled Minneapolis before they had time to reap the rich harvest they had planned.

With the dime stream swelling by arithmetic progression, the Minneapolis postal authorities today faced a serious problem. The petticoat letters—all enclosing dimes and all written by women who will never see those silk petticoats they have been dreaming about—already amount to 10 per cent of the post office's total business. At the present rate of increase present rate of increase these letters may soon form the bulk of all the business.

Here are some facts:
More than 285,000 dime letters have already been received.

Approximately 60 per cent of them bear return cards and cost the government 2 cents each to return them to the senders. More than $3,400 already has been spent for that purpose.

About 40 per cent bear no return cards and these must be sent to the dead letter office at Washington, where they are opened and sent back to the senders when their names are given. This costs the government ten cents each. More than $11,400 already has been spent for this purpose.

Handling this mail in Minneapolis is now costing the government $50 a day in extra clerk hire and the rate is rising daily.

This gives some idea of the problem the postoffice department is now facing because a Minneapolis concern six weeks ago started in to send "chain letters" promising the woman to whom it was written that she could have a silk petticoat for 10 cents if she would send in her name and her dime to the company.

The first woman did as requested. Apparently of the ten friends sent copies of the letter to ten more friends who sent copies of the letter to ten more friends and likewise sent in a dime. By this time 100 women were busy writing letters to the 1,000 women and sending in 100 dimes. By the next day 1,000 women were busy writing letters to 10,000 women and sending in 10,000 names. Next day 10,000 women wrote letters to 100,000 women and sent in 10,000 dimes.
Just keep on figuring as long as you want to.

MODESTY.

When every pool in Eden as a mirror That unto Eve her dainty charms proclaimed,
She went undraped without a single fear or Thought that she had need to be ashamed.
'Twas only when she'd eaten of the apple
That she became inclined to be so prude.
And found that evermore she'd have to grapple
With the much debated problem of the Nude.
Thereafter she devoted her attention.
Her time and all her money to her clothes.
And that was the beginning of convention,
And modesty as well, I suppose.
Recessions come about in fashions recent;
Now girls conceal so little from the men
It would seem, in name of all that's decent,
Some one ought to pass the apples 'round again.

Our bookkeeping is one of actual business from start to finish and our shorthand may be written either with pencil or the typewriter. We could show you clearly how it is that we can turn out a better stenographer or book keeper, and do it in three months less time when we used to teach the systems that are now being used in other schools. This saving of three months time means much to the prospective student; at a conservative salary of $50 per month, the three months time would amount to $150, three months board at $12 per month would amount to $36, or a total of $186, to say nothing of the fact that the student of our school gets three months practical experience, while the student of the other school is just finishing his course and has no experience.

We have hundreds of graduates holding the best positions to be found in our larger cities. We have more calls for our graduates of Bookkeeping, Shorthand, Business Administration and Finance, Cotton Classing or Telegraphy than we are able to supply. You may enter with us at any time; our work is practically all individual instruction. Thorough preparatory work in English branches is given free. There are so many noble gents in this bright world of joy and glee, that men who seem like 18 cents don't need to worry you or me. We do not need associates who are not built to put up ice, we need not mingle with the skates who would be dear at any price. The woods is full of splendid scouts whose freindship is a thing to prize, but if you herd with down-and-outs, you cannot to such freindship rise. Man must be honest, good and straight, if he have friends worth the while; he cannot trot a crooked gait and be considered quite in style. The men whose freindship is a boon are found all o'er this cheerful earth; they do not give a quicayune for anything but sterling worth. D. W. Griffith's World Mightiest spectacle comes to the Grand, Amarillo, for four nights beginning Wednesday, Nov. 15th, with a matinee on Thursday Friday and Saturday. The seat sale will open at the City Drug Store on Tuesday morning, November 9th. Money orders or checks made payable to G. T. Oliver, manager of the Grand, Amarillo, will have immediate attention now. The performance at nights will begin at 8 p. m. and the matinees will start at 2:15 p. m. The prices will be 50 cents, $1.00 and $1.50 nights and 50 cents, 75 cents and $1.00 at all matinees.

"The Birth of a Nation" brings forth D. W. Griffith's wonderful new art-of-pictorialized spectacle with music. The first half of the production which was suggested by Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," exhibits its salient events of the War between the States. The formation of the Confederate; Lincoln's call for troops, Sherman's march to the sea; the Battle of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant; and the awful tragedy of Lincoln's assassination at Ford's Theatre, April 14th, 1865, live before the spectator of the Griffith drama. In the second half of the South's "second uprising"—this time against the carpet-bagger regime—is shown in a thrilling story of the reconstruction days. The romance of the little Confederate colonel Ben Cameron, with the Northerner Elsie Stoneman, and that of the Unionist Captain, Phil Stoneman, with Margaret Cameron, the South Carolina lassie, maintain two threads of continuous love-interest throughout the story.

But the great out-doors is Mr. Griffith's special field. Tremendous battle fields and the wild rides of the Ku Klux Klansmen are staged with thousands of participants. Eighteen thousand actors, and three thousand horses were employed in making the picture, which cost half a million dollars and took eight months to produce. Some idea of its immensity is gained from the fact that there are no less than 5,000 distinct and individual scenes.

On the musical side Mr. Griffith attempted what had been previously unheard of in connection with motion pictures. This was the synchronizing of a complete symphononic score with the appearances of the important characters and the enactment of the principal scenes. This magnificent instrumental music is played by a large orchestra of thirty musicians.

Starting a Public Library.

Are you trying to start a Public library. This bulletin tells you how to proceed step by step. Such is the information flung in bold faced type across the front page of the October issue of "Texas Libraries." This bulletin also contains a constitution and by-laws for a library association and some pointers for those trying to establish a library.

Other articles in the bulletin are: "What Will You Do for Good Book Week, Dec. 4-9"; County Librarian; Proposed Changes in the County Library Law; History of Libraries; Should Public Schools Have Libraries; by H. W. Stillwell, Professor of English of the West Texas Normal College, Canyon; some library versions by the students of the same college, a list of books in the state traveling libraries, and notes from the smaller libraries of the state.

The bulletin is full of library information, and anyone desiring a copy may obtain it by writing the editor, Miss Octavia F. Rogan, Texas Library and Historical Commission, Austin.

A traveling man told the News Friday that the worse piece of roads he had found on the plains, was between Canyon and Amarillo. He said the road was full of holes and bumps and looked as if nothing had ever been done to them since they had been piled up in the center with the grader. That is not a good advertisement for Randall county, and the commissioners should get after this road and put it in good condition. If Randall county wants the Okard Trail, she must get busy.

The lowest death rate on record for the registration area of the United States is shown in the 1915 figures compiled by the United States bureau of the census. The rate of 13.5 per 1,000 estimated population establishes the new low mark. It was based on 909,155 deaths returned from 25 states (in one of which, North Carolina only municipalities of 1,000 population and over in 1910 were included), the District of Columbia, and 41 cities in nonregistration states. The total population of this area in 1915 was estimated at 67,337,000, or 67.1 per cent of the total estimated population of the United States.

Among the cities having 100,000 or more inhabitants in 1910 the tendency is toward a still greater reduction in mortality. The following named cities show, for 1915, decreases of 20 per cent or more as compared with the ve-year period 1901-1905: Newark, New Jersey, 29.9 per cent; Atlanta 28.4 per cent; New York City, 26.8 per cent; Los Angeles, 25 per cent; Jersey City 24.9 per cent; Pittsburgh, 23.9 per cent; St. Louis, 22.9 per cent; Denver, 22.7 per cent; Providence, 22.3 per cent; Paterson, 21.9 per cent; San Francisco, 21.7 per cent; Fall River, 21.7 per cent; Louisville 21.1 per cent; and Nashville, 20 per cent.

Value of Monroe Doctrine
 How It Acts as Substitute for Large Standing Army in Preventing Possible Menace to United States.
 By HENRY A. WISE WOOD
 Chairman Conference Committee on National Preparedness

It is a curious phenomenon that, despite the great national necessities out of which the Monroe Doctrine sprang and the persistence with which throughout a long period it has remained with us a fixed article of faith, its practical worth as a national safeguard is little understood. Unfortunately this ignorance of the subject and its disregard are not confined to the man in the street or the man on the farm, but is almost as prevalent among our educated classes. This may be accounted for by the rarity and unimportance of the international crises which have come to America during the life of the present generation, because of which there has been small need of our giving any attention to matters affecting our safety.

As this state of mind may more easily be illustrated than described, I shall quote from a conversation concerning our national defenses held recently with a leading lawyer of New England, which is sufficiently illuminative to clear up existing doubts of the wisdom of our preserving the Monroe Doctrine as a national policy:

"In the event of the flagrant violation of the Monroe Doctrine by a strong European power, what steps," I asked, "do you hold we should take?"

"None," he replied. "I do not believe in the Monroe Doctrine, and think the American people tired of it. We have responsibilities enough at home without going abroad for others. We should be content to live within our own four walls. All that we require is that we be left alone to attend to our own affairs."

"Do you mean this literally?" I asked.

"I do; why should we bother with the affairs of our neighbors? It isn't our job to protect them; let them take care of themselves."

"Do you include all of our neighbors; Mexico, among the rest?"

"I do; that country is a nuisance. What business is it of ours who rules it, so long as it behaves itself?"

"You would have no objection, then, to the occupation of Mexico by a European power, with, say, a million troops?"

"Well, I shouldn't like that."

"Do you, then, wish to withdraw your objection to the application of the Monroe Doctrine to Mexico?"

"How about the countries to the south of Mexico; between Mexico and the canal?"

"Blank the canal; I wish we hadn't built it. It will get us into a lot of trouble before we're through."

"Yes, but we have built it, and we've agreed to keep it an open, neutral seaway for all users, and for that purpose have constituted ourselves its armed police. Now, are you willing that the army of occupation which you would not permit in Mexico should be allowed to establish itself between Mexico and the canal?"

Must Be Secure as Far as Canal Zone.

"No, I shouldn't say that. We must be secure as far as the Canal Zone, at any rate."

"Then, you believe the Monroe Doctrine should cover the territory between ourselves and the canal?"

"Yes."

"Well, where, exactly, would you now draw the line?"

"At the far edge of the Canal Zone; there it should stop."

"What, then, would you advise our doing if an ambitious European power should line up its army but ten miles beyond the canal, within heavy-gun range of its prism and works? Wouldn't it seem necessary in that case that we have in the zone an equal army of our own?"

"Well, we've fortified the canal."

"Yes, against ship fire at its approaches, but not at all against an investing army. Nor is the protective area at either side sufficiently wide to prevent the dropping of heavy shells into the canal from outside."

"That, of course, couldn't be prevented; I admit that we must protect the canal at all hazards, and as far south as necessary."

"Then, I take it, you would wish to maintain the Monroe Doctrine down to a line sufficiently remote to assure the canal against an invading army. Just where, in Central or South America, would you place that line, in view of the celerity of present-day military travel and transport?"

"I can't say precisely."

"Well, suppose it be drawn across Brazil, for instance, and we assent to the occupation of the territory beyond it. How should we insure the inviolability of the territory on this side of the line—by a stationed army of our own?"

Could Not Maintain Military Force in Brazil.

"We couldn't maintain a military force in Brazil, of course, but Brazil could invite us in case of trouble."

"Now, isn't it likely that should we permit the occupation of any South or Central American territory it would soon become the thoroughly equipped base of an army sufficient in equipment and numbers to threaten our own peace and security?"

"Yes; we should undoubtedly have to arm against it."

"Well, doesn't it follow that in order to prevent the very militarization of our country to which we are all opposed—the maintenance of a standing army of European dimensions, which from the beginning has been contrary to our policy—it is essential that we forbid and maintain sufficient sea forces to prevent, if necessary, the acquisition by a foreign military power of any new territory whatever in this hemisphere?"

"Oh, I see; your contention is that the maintenance of the Monroe Doctrine by means of a powerful navy will rid us of the need of a huge standing army of our own?"

"Exactly; given a sufficient navy, the Monroe Doctrine itself is a more certain barrier against invasion than without it any army could possibly be."

"Well, I hadn't before looked at the doctrine as a substitute for an army."

Water Works Week in Mississippi is scheduled for November 12-18. Final preparations are under way for reaching every farm family in the state during this time. Every county in the state will be thoroughly covered in a speaking campaign. Hundreds of meetings are now being scheduled at which state, district and county farm demonstration agents, home economics agents, specialists from the State A. and M. College, superintendents of education, county health officers, bankers, hardware merchants and practical farmers will lend their services in speeches and personal work. Several water works lessons are being prepared for use in the schools throughout the state in teaching the children that pure water piped into the house is a necessity at this stage of farm development.

The portable elevator that moves from one wheat market town to another in Oklahoma and camps on the railway right of way has become a factor in the wheat market of Oklahoma. This form of elevator is inexpensive and efficient. It is claimed by them to be a factor in keeping the price of wheat out of the influence of combinations. This type of elevator is in favor with the established grain elevators. It is considered by some small railroad men to be a sort of usurper on the right of way.

There is a Real Difference

Cream of tartar, derived from grapes, is used in Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder because it is the best and most healthful ingredient known for the purpose.

Phosphate and alum, which are derived from mineral sources, are used in some baking powders, instead of cream of tartar, because they are cheaper.

If you have been induced to use baking powders made from alum or phosphate, use Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder instead. You will be pleased with the results and the difference in the quality of the food.

Ozark Trail Meeting.

Delegates to the Ozark Trails convention at Oklahoma City, November 21-22, already appointed and signified their attendance number in the thousands. These men are coming from every town and city on or near the prepared transcontinental highway between St. Louis and Los Angeles. Among them will be the governors of at least three states. It will be a gathering of the foremost men in these respective communities and the convention will be notable for the high class of its delegates.

Those most enthusiastically regarding this highway with intimate knowledge of the value of other transcontinental lines to the communities through which they pass. They assert that to a comparative new region such as Oklahoma and New Mexico with great undeveloped natural resources the value of an Ocean to Ocean highway would be of even greater value. The strength of this argument is obvious.

HUNTING FOR HEALTH

In Its Pursuit Peter Perkins Found His World Changed.

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS.

(Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Peter Perkins came into temporary possession of the old Stanwood property through mutual friends of his own and the last remaining member of the Stanwood family. He did not know Madge Stanwood, nor was he in any way interested in making the girl's acquaintance so long as he had obtained a three year's lease on her property.

Peter was run down, physically, while the Miss Stanwood was financially embarrassed. The transfer of property was a step in the right direction for both parties concerned. It left Madge free to go into the city and pursue congenial labor, while Peter Perkins could seek the robust health he had lost in his effort to find that vague pedestal called fame. His channel had been through art, and Peter had succeeded to a flattering degree before his health—or the lack of it—had sent him to the country.

The Stanwood property was sadly dilapidated. The gardens, both vegetable and floral, were all but wrecks; the lone cow was a pitiful sight to a lover of animals, while the few hens and rabbit were forlorn creatures. The orchard, once bearing choice and rare fruit, required pruning, lopping and care to an alarming extent, but with it all Peter felt sanguine as to the results he would obtain from healthy labor on the property.

Peter had worked with feverish inspiration on his art, and by so doing had arrived on the precipice of a nervous breakdown. The Stanwood place came as a blessing to him. Since he might not make further use of his brain during its process of rebuilding he rejoiced in the physical activity that would be demanded of him during his three years in the country.

It was difficult at first to fling off the inertia that gripped him after leaving the steam-heated studio and his paints and models; but the trimming of shrubs that was necessary, since it was late autumn, sent Peter out with hedge scissors and an augmented sense of zeal. Having come originally from the West, Peter was at heart adapted for outdoor life. Farming and the artist's temperament went strangely hand in hand in Peter's mentality. It was not difficult then, during the lull of the artist's brain, for the farmer to come readily into activity.

When the shrubbery had been trimmed the trees in the orchard came next. Peter Perkins was companioned and served only by old Gregory, who was both an intelligent gardener and a handy man about the house.

"No social intercourse and no pottering with paints. Remember that!" had been the doctor's parting words to Peter. "For one year at least."

And so Peter had forgotten the pleasure of seeing even Doris Brown, the girl whom he had almost definitely fallen in love with, and he had locked up his paints and brushes in the attic room and had bravely given the key to old Gregory.

"Don't give it to me—even if I fire you for not doing so," he had commanded Gregory, and the old man kept the key.

Before the cold weather came the cowshed was mended, the chicken coops whitewashed and a cockerel and some fine hens added to the meager flock, and all other preparations for an excellent springtime were made. The poor little rabbit was given a mate and, that being the last of the domestic arrangements among the barnyard life, Peter and Gregory turned their attention to their own habitation.

During the winter months they painted every inch of the interior of the Stanwood house and mended roofs and drafty doors and windows. Creeping vines were trimmed so that with the springtime rosebuds would seek admission to the old living room with its great stone fireplace and lofty ceilings.

It was not until the arrival of spring, when the verdure was brilliant and the fruit blossoms in full and odorous bloom, that Peter really threatened Gregory with dismissal.

"It's a chance in an artist's life," he stormed at the imperturbable servant. "Those blossoms are perfect—there never was an orchard so beautiful. I could win a thousand dollar prize with just a small sketch." His tone had become somewhat wheedling.

"The blossoms'll be out again next year," was all Gregory said, and Peter raved in vain for the keys to his paints and brushes. He eyed Peter with a glow of pride. Somehow he felt responsible for the glow of health that was slowly progressing in Peter's body.

"Whatever will we do with the fruit, chickens, eggs, milk and vegetables that we will be having before long?" questioned Peter as he realized the prolific tendencies that work at Stanwood farm was beginning to make evident. "We will have a hundred fine little rabbits if we don't watch out," he laughed. The question, however, was a serious one. "Old Nancy is a real beauty now," he added as they watched the sleek, fattened cow chewing her spring cud with bovine contentment. "Think of the fine milk that will be wasted. You and I can't get away with it."

Everything that Peter and Gregory touched multiplied with astonishing rapidity. Each accused the other of possessing a weird charm with growing things. With the development of vegetables and fruits, to say nothing of the barnyard of prolific hens and fancy rich milk, the question of disposal of the produce became an imperative one.

Old Gregory, however, had a scheme on his worn sleeve, but he kept it to himself until he had made a round of all the small cottages that surrounded the farm. They were tiny bits of property owned and inhabited largely by young married couples with small children. It was not easy to provision the homes with fresh vegetables and the grounds did not permit of gardening. The suggestion that Gregory made to those housewives was that he supply them with eggs, chickens, fruit and vegetables at a nominal price. Housewives one and all flew to the rescue of Peter and Gregory, and considered themselves very lucky in obtaining farm products so close to their own doorsteps. The question of milk was difficult, as Nancy might not supply an entire community, and one and all wanted Nancy's rich milk.

"It means," laughed Peter, "that Nancy will have to occupy a smaller portion of the shed. We will have to get a couple more like her." He eyed Gregory for a moment very thoughtfully. "You know, of course, Gregory, that I am not going to take the profit from this business. No, I am not," he added swiftly, seeing the incredulity in Gregory's face. "You are going to take a certain per cent, but all the rest is going into that hole in the old chimney corner against the time Miss Stanwood returns. You see, it is really her farm, and—"

"A pretty farm it was," said the old gardener disgustedly, but with added affection in his eyes for Peter. "Nevertheless, the cow, the chickens, the orchard and all are really belonging to her. You see it—do you not, Gregory?"

"Yes, I suppose I do," grumbled the old man, and turned away lest Peter Perkins see that which had risen in his eyes.

Suffice to say that Stanwood farm became a paying proposition that quite exceeded the dreams of the temporary owner. The hole in the chimney corner was stuffed with bills and silver, and the day came when another brick had to be dislodged and another bank started.

The brushes and paint had been taken from the attic room, and Peter revealed anew in the blossoming orchard and his loved art. One or two marvelous sketches found their way into the New York shops.

Peter had regained health, both mentally and physically, and it was a most attractive looking artist who looked up suddenly one sunny day in early spring to see a wood nymph standing gazing admiringly at his canvas.

His brushes were suspended in the clear air, so lovely was the girl. Her wide hat seemed made to shelter the beauty of her oval face and her deep blue eyes held a hint of fear in them. She would have fled save that Peter stopped her.

"If I could put you in this picture," he suggested, frankly. "I could most probably make several thousand dollars from the canvas."

The girl blushed shyly and drew a trifle nearer. There was awe in her glance. The orchard, as it appeared on the canvas, seemed to breathe of spring and to sway with the breeze. Certainly the petals were fluttering down.

"It would be a pity," she said softly, "to hold myself responsible for so great a loss to you. Since I am boarding in the Rose cottage it will give me pleasure to pose for you for a few moments each morning."

"Hours!" breathed Peter eagerly. It so happened that old Gregory was left with more work on his hands than on the days before the nymph had arrived. One day he peered through the branches of the trees and gave vent to a low whistle when his eyes rested on Peter's model. Madge Stanwood, the last of the old family, was standing beneath a gnarled apple tree while Peter's brushes were rapidly sweeping her image onto the canvas. There was that in the eyes of Peter, and it reflected itself in the eyes of the girl, which made old Gregory laugh softly. Love in its most wonderful form was making the spring a paradise.

At that very moment of old Gregory's musings Peter Perkins had said "Wonderful girl!" in an awed and breathless tone, and Madge had returned softly:

"But you are a wonderful man, Peterkins," and her tone had been more awed, more breathless than Peter's own.

A Slight Repressive Influence.

"Do you feel that your work is of any real benefit?"

"Yes," replied the censor. "While we cannot prevent war from being terrible, we are at least doing everything possible to render it uninteresting."

Dictated To.

Yeast—You've got the word dictated at the bottom of this letter? Crimsoneak—Yes, I know it. "But it's in your own handwriting!" "Yes; my wife made me write it."

Odd Result.

"That terrible old gossip, Mrs. Gabby, is not reliable in anything she tells."

"Yes, I notice, what she says, goes."

Fifty thousand acres of land, all in practically one lot and all under irrigation, is located in Western Kansas and is said to be the largest single irrigated farm in the United States, if not in the world. It is located in what is known as the Shallow Water basin in Finney and Scott counties. This basin is an old lake and from 6 to 12 feet below the surface of the ground is water of unknown depth. This water is inexhaustible, three pumps operating from the same well and throwing water at the rate of 10,000 gallons a minute can lower the water stratum only fifteen inches when pumping 24 hours a day, and the water returns to the proper level in two minutes after the pumps stop.

Great as has been the advance in the diversification of crops in the State, the idea is to be emphasized anew at the exposition about to be opened at Atlant. The model farm cottage to be shown there will resemble neither the white pillared mansion of the plantation days nor cabin that sheltered the cotton picker, but

You need a real tonic. Strength is required to overcome the trouble. Let that tonic be one that is specially valuable in catarrhal conditions, and you can conquer the cold. A Mystery of the Sea.

Tilfish are again being caught in sufficient numbers to become a staple article of food in America. They are handsomely colored fish, and very good to eat, but thirty years ago millions of them died in a mysterious way, and it was thought that they thus became extinct. In the beginning of 1882 fishermen and others made amazing reports of having sailed through miles of dead and dying tilfish by the coast of the United States. The whole area covered by dead fish was reckoned to be 170 miles long and 25 miles wide. More than 1,400,000,000 fish had died. The actual reason was never proved, but from temperature tests it was assumed that a sudden chill in the water accounted for the blight.

Habits, After All, Make the Child

By SIDONIE MATZNER GRUENBERG

It is Through Little Tricks of Politeness and Deference That a Child Learns Respect.

THERE is no doubt that some children are much "brighter" than others. And, of course, the brighter children are easier to teach than are the others. But many a bright child absorbs the teachings offered him and develops a character that is very far from satisfactory, while among the less "gifted" children are evolved useful and lovable spirits that amply compensate for the relatively feeble intellects. This is all common knowledge; yet we continue to be puzzled about it without making any effort to clear up our understanding. Or we continue to think and to act as though the development of the intellect were of itself sufficient to insure suitable training of the character. The fact is that while knowledge may be converted into power it is in itself very far from being a substitute for wisdom. And still more remote is it from character. We know that children can learn knowledge; the important question for us is, can they acquire character?

When we compare an infant with an older child and with an adult we may see that the lack of "character" on the part of the infant means that the child has not yet developed fixed habits in regard to certain things, whereas the older person has. You do not know just what the child will do under given circumstances, while you do know what the grown-up will do. It is the mass of habits that make up the foundation of the character which the child acquires.

Habits of courteous speech, for example, may be mere imitations of other people's speech, and very different from what the child would use if neglected in this regard. Yet as it becomes a habit it constitutes a distinctive part of the person's character. It is through the little tricks of deference and politeness that a child learns respect, and it is from this that he develops an appreciation for the qualities that we wish him to look up to.

And that suggests the second element that enters into the "character" that can be trained or cultivated. The comparison between young children and adults shows us that another difference in their characters lies in the comparative instability of the child's likes or dislikes, and of his standards of right and wrong. Beginning with nearly direct imitation of what he sees his parents do, he comes in a few years to imagine himself doing things that he hears of others doing. When he begins to read about the exploits of great heroes he projects himself into the characters of history or legend, and for the time being he lives in the character that is uppermost in his interest. In this way he absorbs from his immediate surroundings and from his reading and associates the ideals and principles that will give stability and color to his conduct—that is, his character.

WORDS OF WISE MEN

He that is extravagant will soon become poor, and poverty will enforce dependence and invite corruption.—Johnson.

The greatest obstacle to being heroic is the doubt whether one may not be going to prove oneself a fool. The truest heroism is to resist the doubt, and the profoundest wisdom is to know when it ought to be resisted and when obeyed.—Hawthorne.

We ask for long life, but 'tis deep life, or grand moments, that signify. Let the measure of time be spiritual, not mechanical. Moments of insight, of fine personal relation, a smile, a glance, what ample borrowers of eternity they are.—Emerson.

The only cure for imprudence is the suffering which imprudence entails. Nothing but bringing him face to face with stern necessity and letting him feel how unbending, how unyielding it is can improve the man of ill-governed desires.—Herbert Spencer.

Art employs method for the symmetrical formation of beauty, as science employs it for the logical exposition of truth; but the mechanical process is, in the last, ever kept visibly distinct, while in the first it escapes from sight amid the show's of color and the shapes of grace.—Bulwer.

We see how habits and interests and likings mold the theories of those around us, yet forget that our own theories are similarly molded. Nevertheless, the instances in which our feelings bias us in spite of ourselves are of hourly recurrence. That proprietary passion which a man has for his ideas veils their defects from him as effectively as maternal fondness blinds a mother to the imperfections of her offspring.—Herbert Spencer.

GATHERED SENTENCES

Borrowed money soon begins to look like borrowed trouble.

Wealth has its penalties. You never hear of a poor man spending money for dyspepsia tablets.

When fortune begins to smile on a foolish man he thinks it is up to him to sit down and bask.

A bachelor says the simplest kind of simple addition is the adding of one and one to make one.

The woman who says she wouldn't marry the best man on earth usually weds one that is no good.

In looking backward a woman sees only the bright places in her past, and a man sees only the high spots in his.

Any woman can keep an expense account, but not more than one in a thousand can make it tally with her cash.

It takes a smart man to dispose of his property in a way that will shut out the lawyers as well as his relatives.

Many a young man loses sleep nights wondering how he can win the only girl, when all he would have to do is ask her.

And the average man spends nine-tenths of his life trying to accumulate enough money to enable him to spend the other tenth in comfort.

M'CLARYGRAMS

Friendship should be built on business—not business on friendship.

There is not really so much method in some people's madness as in theirs in their methods.

That man may be smart who can give an incorrect impression without telling a lie, but he isn't very wise.

It takes a great deal of promise to make some people hopeful; in other words, they want a lot to build on.

When a man sticks too closely to his business the result is a glued-up mass that doesn't progress at all.

Sometimes we have wondered if it may not be true that with many people the more you do for them the less they like you.

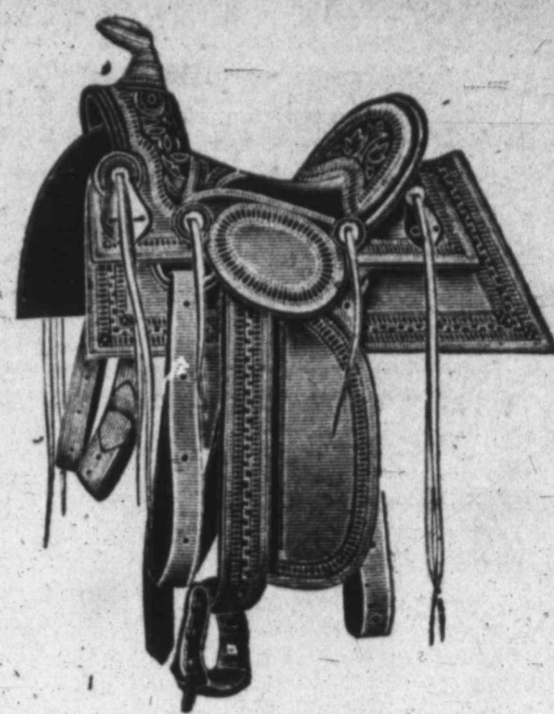

Some people, who by reason of their constant efforts to push work on to someone else, consider themselves executive geniuses, are merely shirkers and general nuisances.—McClary's Magazine.

Thompson Hardware Company

As the result of studies which have been made at the forest products laboratory on methods of handling wood chips suitable for paper pulp, it is announced that Wisconsin paper companies are now negotiating with the railroads for shipment to their factories of experimental train loads of chips of Western Woods adapted to paper making. Previous investigations by the forest service have demonstrated that good grades of paper can be made from a number of Western woods. These experts now estimate that some of these woods, when cut into chips and dried and baled, can be delivered at the mills in Wisconsin at a very small advance over local timber. If a favorable freight rate can be obtained, they say, the great quantity of pulpwood on the national forests should prove to be a considerable factor in supplying favorably located paper mills with the necessary raw material.

Thee Berean-Fideles Reception.

The guests began to arrive at seven o'clock. They were met at the door and welcomed by Mr. Johnson who led them to a room decorated with the Fideles colors. They were introduced to one another, and led into the Berean room.

The room was decorated with the colors of Nile green, canary and white and large bouquets of autumn tinted bushes, which contained an enumerable amount of red berries on their branches, were placed on the piano and in the corners. On these and pinned to the scarfs were autumn leaves of many colors.

After all the guests had arrived the Jones family was announced. They marched in with Mr. and Mrs. Jones leading and Sam and Sallie Jones following. Mrs. Jones gave a talk on the contrast of Canada and Texas manners. Mr. Jones gave Sam a talk on "you must not marry for love but for money." He then suggested that Sallie should practice a song. Sallie soon got tuned up and sang a delightful song. Sam wanted to practice speaking, but his father suggested that he get the motion and the speech would come later, so Sam arose and delivered an elaborate number of gestures. Sallie then suggested that they were not yet able to appear before any audience, so they departed thanking their guests for the valuable training they had given.

Coca and cake were served and the guests departed planning to have the Jones family back soon.

Japan is far from being the land of the suffragist, yet in at least one little Japanese colony woman rules. This colony is in the Bay of Shima and has existed for at least a thousand years and the women there are known as Nymphs. They make their living by diving for pearls and are almost mermaids.

The term "ranch" is often too loosely applied by those unfamiliar with agricultural affairs in the great Southwest of the United States. Perhaps a fairly intelligent idea of what a "ranch," actually is can be obtained from either of two West Texas real estate items in recent publication. West Texas, by the way, seems to be an active ranch market at the present, the number of transactions of late being so large as to attract special attention.

One of the ranches sold a week or ten days ago contained 20,080 acres, and brought $120,000; another ranch of 60,000 acres, stocked with 600 head of cattle sold for $80,000. They do not bother with quarter sections in West Texas.

The Little Peanut Grown Big.

It is strange what great things can come from small things and small beginnings. A few years ago the small peanut farmer was looked upon by the general public as a kind of a botch, but he has changed his standing. The peanut farmer nowadays is looked upon as a progressive farmer and he deserves it. There are many peanut farmers in this country this year that have made enough peanuts to pay for a good farm. In fact in a great many cases the peanuts have sold from $5 to $10 per acre more than the value of the land they were produced on.

A few years ago it was thought by many that peanuts could only be manufactured into candies and a few other little nick nacks and this would be the limit of peanuts. But this was a mistaken idea. Peanuts are already one of the leading food and feed products of the South. Peanuts are made into many fancy foods. Peanuts are fine in the raw stage, they are better parched, they are exceedingly good made into butter, and peanut candy is eaten by everybody that knows anything about it. Aside from the knick nacks and the natural ways peanuts are eaten, the oil of the peanut is said to be one of the finest oils in existence for seasoning and other domestic purposes. I am informed that an olive oil can be manufactured from peanuts that causes the olive oil manufacturer to be envious of the commercial value of the peanut.

Where peanut farming prevails other arts follow. It has been said a thousand times that this county, Comanche county, Texas, was no stock county. Peanuts have filled this county with hogs. Peanuts are one of the best hog feeds in all the world. Hogs never tire out on peanuts as they do on other feeds. Hogs will eat peanuts 365 days in the year and put in half the night for good measure. And other stock thrive upon them too.

Cotton seed have gotten so high that people that people can hardly afford to feed them to their milk cows. Peanut hay comes about as near being a real substitute for cotton seed as milk and butter producer as anything that has ever been tried out by the farmer.

But enough said about the peanut as a feed and food product. I wish to say a few words in conclusion in regard to the evolution of the peanut market in the past two years, particularly as developed in the southwest. At this season two years ago peanuts were selling on our local market at from 40 to 60 cents per bushel and they were rather a slow sale at that low price. The peanut buyers would howl "to many peanuts." Of course they knew better. Peanuts were hardly known outside of two or three counties in this section. Along about the time peanuts were selling the cheapest, Mr. O. C. Payne of the Farm and Ranch, came through our town. I remember hearing Mr. Payne made the remark in the First National Bank building here that peanuts were too cheap and the cause of the low market was purely a lack of distribution. "I got the idea and at once sent Farm and Ranch a small peanut advertisement. When the advertisement appeared in the Farm and Ranch I was greatly surprised at the results. Mr. Payne's predictions were true. I was literally swamped with peanut orders. shipped peanuts all over Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana and some to Kansas for seed purposes, people found out what peanuts were.

We have the largest crop of peanuts in the United States at present that was ever known. With millions of bushels of peanuts, we hear the cry no longer from the peanut buyers, "Too many peanuts," but they want more peanuts at more than double the price they paid two years ago.

The boll weevils are gradually closing in on the cotton farmers. It is impossible to raise cotton where the boll weevils say not. The acreage in peanuts will be increased in another year. I predict that seed peanuts will sell for $2 per bushel next spring and if the farmers wait too long about buying their seed peanuts they won't get supplied with seed peanuts at $2 per bushel.

Farm and Ranch deserves much of the praise for helping in getting the peanuts up to the present price. Some people will argue that there is nothing in farm papers. This is because they don't read them. Every farmer in Texas ought to have a good word to speak for the Farm and Ranch.

The peanut is no longer a little "patch" crop to be grown by the children like the row of pop corn. It has become for some sections the most important crop, and no farmer ought to pass it up lightly.—T. I. Fitzgerald.

54,936 Births Per Annum not Registered.

Some interesting facts are shown in the August report of the Bureau of Vital Statistics. During August, 1916, 4470 births were recorded and more than 4578 were not registered, provided the birth rate of Texas is only 25 per 1000 per year.

If the labor unions, whose purpose is the protection of the laborer, both child and adult, were awake to the fact that Child Labor Law is absolutely dependent upon Birth Registration for enforcement, the Labor Unions in Texas would swing all their influence for complete Birth Registration.

If the tax payers realized how many cases are appealed to higher courts on a question of age and the cost of such cases to the state when such questions could be settled in the lower courts by a birth certificate, they would demand a complete birth registration.

Compulsory education without birth registration will lead to endless litigation, depriving the child of such education as the state intends to force upon it. Teachers who are progressive must stand for birth registration.

If the mothers realized that the orphan girl, who needs protection under those laws which have an age limit, is deprived of such protection by failure to have her birth registered, the mothers of Texas would see that every baby's birth in their community was registered.

Birth registration keeps the underage orphan boy out of the penitentiary or off the gallows when his age would send him to the reformatory.

Birth registration will furnish the state undisputable evidence to convict the criminal who assaults an orphan girl under the age of consent, and will exclude the purchasable testimony of some negro woman, or an old Bible with its birth record that has been erased or re-written.

The minister of the gospel, if he would be consistent, must stand for Birth registration as a protection for those who will be orphans in coming generations.

Accuracy in birth registration is necessary. More than one out of a hundred do not know the sex, date of birth, or whether the child is legitimate or otherwise. If a child's birth is registered, the parents should not permit a stigma to be thrown at a child by questioning its legitimacy, unless it is otherwise. Such defects do not become apparent until the child's age is questioned and it is possible that by that time it may be an orphan.

Those who predicted that there would be no demand for the new land banks, maintaining that the present bank system is taking care of rural credit needs adequately, probably read with amazement the statement that inquiries have come to Washington from 100,000 persons, asking how rural loans can be made from the new banks. Like the federal reserve system, which was established when panic threatened to engulf the country at the opening of the war, the land bank system comes at a time when there is a greater call for farm products and higher prices than ever before. America must find ways and means to increase its farm production, lest the prices of foods in cities shall become prohibitive. With millions of people in the United States and additional billions of money to spend during the prosperity period, there is an added demand for foods and merchandise of all kinds, which helps still further to raise prices. When the farmers obtain necessary credit, they will be able to get a start with better livestock and better seeds, which will increase the beef, dairy and grain output of our farms.

We sometimes refer to the goose as a stupid fowl by way of comparison with some silly ones of the human race. When we do so we pay the goose no compliment, because geese speaking of them collectively, in many ways are much keener intellectually than men. Let us take up the case of the wild goose for example. He and his flock know enough to pull up stakes and pick off to a warmer climate the moment coal goes up, and to return with the first strawberries and cream of the season. They are better drilled than our idolized West Point cadets and are free of all the ills that man is heir to, nor do they overtake themselves with useless cares. They are better versed in geography, astronomy, gastronomy and the art of self-preservation. With these superior endowments the goose cannot be called a fool.

A bureau of the United States department of agriculture makes the interesting announcement that there are 2,452,000 miles of public road in this country outside the limits of incorporated villages and cities. This would belt the earth 97 times. Of course there are many hundreds of thousands of miles of these highways that are in a mighty poor condition, deep with dust of dry weather and resembling a bog when the rainfall is heavy. But they are roads, nevertheless, and must be counted. About 11 per cent, or 277,000 miles, have been improved by some sort of surfacing, and the increase in this kind has been rapid in recent years, probably due to the motor car. The good roads movement, so important to the farmer, has been promoted far more by the coming of the automobile than by discussion of its economic value.

Trademarked-Advertised Merchandise.

Those people who have given the matter little or no thought will probably question the statement that trademarked advertised products offer consumers advantages and protection not afforded by the unadvertised sort.

They invariably ask how advertising can possibly make any piece of goods or merchandise better.

"If material and construction are right how can publicity affect the quality?" This is a most natural question for any one to ask, and on first thought there is apparently no logical affirmative answer.

The fact remains, however, that trademarked advertised products do afford consumers protection not afforded in unadvertised products. Moreover, it is a further fact that in trademarked-advertised goods in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred represent better value than the unadvertised goods.

While it is true that advertising does not effect any piece of merchandise after it is in its finished state, it is equally true that continuous advertising does compel the advertising manufacture to produce merchandise "up to his publicity claims" in every respect.

The manufacturer who places his name or trademark upon his product and then spends large sums of money advertising them must keep faith in the buyers of his goods.

Every dollar he spends in advertising represents one hundred cents investment in public good will toward the products bearing his name, brand or trademark. To allow his goods to fall below his published claims and statements would imperil every dollar of his investment in publicity.

While looking through a large canning plant not long ago I noticed several workers busily sorting tomatoes. The firm ripe ones were put into one pile. Those under and over ripe, and some that were bruised or had spoiled places in them went into another pile.

Naturally I wanted to know the why of this process, and what would be done with each assortment. I put the question to my conductor, who is one of the owners of the plant. His reply gave me a deeper appreciation of advertising and of the protection afforded the consuming public by advertised products. Here it is:

"Tomatoes and other fruits and vegetables are always carefully inspected immediately upon coming into our house. Those found to be perfect in every way are put up in our advertised brands. The balance are marketed under private unadvertised labels or in bulk."

He then went on to explain to me that his concern has too much money invested in advertising of their standard brands to permit any but the very best ingredients to be used in them.

At the time of purchase consumers are frequently unable to judge quality of materials or ingredients used, and sanitary conditions of manufacture of many articles they buy and consume.

Advertised goods can, however, be depended upon, as the manufacturers' advertising is good faith pledge to the public, backed by their entire advertising budget.

They are better drilled than our idolized West Point cadets and are free of all the ills that man is heir to, nor do they overtake themselves with useless cares. They are better versed in geography, astronomy, gastronomy and the art of self-preservation. With these superior endowments the goose cannot be called a fool.
