

Get Down to Fundamentals.
The evil results of the late war have never been fully estimated. Today the poignancy of grief over losses and the absorbing problems of reconstruction have obscured many of the worst effects of the war which have been more insidious in their operation.

We are thinking particularly of the abject dependency of our people on the government for the solution of every difficulty and perplexing economic question which arises.

It is likely that the exigencies of war would not permit the government to wait in every instance for the orderly working of the law of supply and demand and the natural adjustment of price levels. But now we are actually at peace and have been for some time.

All winter we have been watching our government grappling with one economic question after another, particularly the high-cost-of-living, and while it has seemed to win temporary successes, inevitably the tide of rising prices has swept aside the barriers which the government has set up.

Perhaps we are in error, but it has seemed to us that the attitude of the average person has been that this is a war between the government and the profiteers. He hopes the government will win out, but feels that what he himself does will have no effect on the final result when really, of course, it is the only thing that will effect it.

If the experience of the human race counts for anything at all, it may be regarded as an immutable law that as long as the demand for a thing is greater than the supply, that sooner or later the price of the article will rise until demand and supply are again equal. The action of the government may accomplish something if it can act on neither the supply or the demand for an article, but as long as it acts only on its price (which is an effect and not a cause), its action must be abortive and often harmful.

Some recent remarks of Vice-President Marshall could well be taken as a guide for the ordinary individual during 1926 who wants to pick his way through the mazes of rising prices which confront him on every hand. Mr. Marshall says:

"One of the old ideas of the republic was that the limit of striving for success was the limit of capacity and endurance. The real evil which we are confronting to-day is the high cost of leisure. I speak in a censorious way because I am myself the laziest of the lazy.

"I only beg the thoughtful consideration of younger men who have the good of the republic at heart, seriously to consider the problem as to whether the only way in which to meet the increasing difficulties of American life is not by additional striving to produce more, to earn more, to economize more, and to save more."

The Canyon News, which is a weekly newspaper, has increased its subscription price from $1.50 to $2.00 a year. The increased cost of print paper takes most all profit out of it even at this rate.—Plainview News.

The Randall County News is another of the Panhandle newspapers to raise subscription rates to $2.00 per year. News print is becoming so high that $2.00 per year for subscription now is not as much as 50c was four years ago. Not alone is paper high, but you can hardly secure it. We recently sent in a small order for paper to one of the largest paper houses in the United States and they were able to fill only about one-fourth of the order.—Miami Chief.

How many War Savings Stamps did you get for yourself last month? They are $4.13 a piece in February and worth $5.00. The wise person puts away a little fund where it will be safe, snug and ready for use. Be wise!

High prices have made it harder to make both ends meet, except both ends of the belt.—Greenville (S. C.) Piedmont.

No Eight Hours for Edison.
 Thomas A. Edison, the electrical wizard, celebrated his seventy-third birthday Thursday.
 In a birthday statement Edison deplored the tendency on the part of the modern youth to shirk work.
 "I can remember when it used to be fashionable to be ambitious, but there seems to have been a change in late years", he said. "The eight-hour day had not been invented when I was a young man and I am glad of it. I don't believe I could have accomplished a great deal on the eight-hour principle.
 "Hard work is the secret of success and happiness, and I think that idea is particularly applicable right now. But I am not against the eight-hour or any other measure that protects labor from exploitation by ruthless employers.
 "I have seen a great many birthdays, but I hope I can borrow the trade-mark of one brand of whiskey to say 'I am still going strong'—even if the eighteenth amendment is in effect."
 There is no need of growing old, Edison said.
 "If man delighted in studying the natural element in which he exists, and if he used the knowledge to protect his body against the malignant actions of his environment", he continued, "I think that he would live at least twice as long as now, with his mentality unimpaired at the end of life. As man learns more of his environment and is thus able to protect himself more and more, that is no reason that I can see why his form of life should not be as long as that of the sequia trees of California, which is several thousand years."

And here's his advice to the boy:
 "The boy, while being educated, should try many hobbies, changing from one to another as many times as he desires, the more the better, until he finds one that delights him—one that he is sure he will succeed in after he leaves school—because he is happy while pursuing it after trying many other hobbies. With this hobby he can succeed, and with no other, because when a man is vitally interested in a thing his memory becomes highly efficient in that pursuit, but in all other lines normal. A good memory means executive ability, and with this comes Do It Now."

Courting.
 Courting? Why, bless your heart, the young fellows of today do not know the meaning of that word! When a young man would walk five or ten miles through the snow or rain or mud, freeze his ears and fingers, and face the danger of wild cats, to see his girl, and that too, in the general living room with the family, he was entitled to admit that he was courting.

And that was the rule not the exception. The young fellows would start out Sunday afternoon to see their sweetheart, and no weather was too bad to keep them at home. It might be too cool or too muddy to take out a horse, but in that case he would go on foot, and he would go through as much hardship to see his girl as did the knights of old to rescue fair maidens in castles bold.

There were no marriages of convenience and few hasty marriages then. The courting was long and young people might meet often at the singing school or the dance of the husking bee, but these did not take the place of regular "courting."
 The courting was on Sunday night and the young man went religiously to see his girl and remained until midnight with the object of his affection even though the father and mother and younger children were present to share in the visit. When he went home either through the storm or under the bright starlight, he walked the earth as a conqueror—for he had been in the presence that to him represented the real poem of life. He had been courting—and that is all that we need to bring back safe and sane ideas in marriage—courting—courting in the true sense of the word. The man seeking if not serving, like

Splendid Fate of Napoleon.
 Napoleon Bonaparte thought that the letter M was his fatal letter. An examination of history shows what a peculiar part the letter played in his life. Six of his marshals were: Massena, Monier, Marmont, Macdonald, Murat, and Monecy. Marbeouf was the first great Frenchman to recognize his genius. Malet conspired against him. Moreau betrayed him. Moscow was the last town he captured, Marek was his secretary. Montalivet was his minister, and Montesquin his chamberlain. He married Marie Louise. His son was born in March. Some of his most brilliant battles were at Montenotte, Maunta, Millesimo, Mondovi, Malta, Mareng, Mormons, Montereau, Merry Montmartre and the final assault fas at Mont St. Jean at Waterloo.
 At St. Helena Napoleon was exiled

If mere ability were the only question involved in the proposed candidacy of Joe Bailey for the governorship of Texas, there would be no question of the advisability of electing him. He is no doubt the ablest man in the race. But Bailey belongs to the old school which has been relegated to the political bonaparte because their days of usefulness has past. This class of men have never stood for progress. The saloon and gambling joint is welcomed by Bailey and the crowd he represents. The regulation of man with criminal instincts and lusts would go free if Bailey had his way. Bailey will cast a big vote if he gets into the race because he has a magnetic personality which counts a great deal, in fact in the heat of a campaign, it usually counts for too much. The News is not skeptical of the results, however. Having seen the people of Texas show Jim Ferguson the door, we are confident that a majority of the voters will know what to do with Joe when he comes up for election.

The News prints this week resolutions from the farmers, denying that any class has a right to strike. The farmers put the case right, and those who feel it within their providence to strike regardless of the results should read and think upon these resolutions. The farmer has a right to speak. He belongs to the only class of producers who so far is not able to figure the cost of production and demand a fair profit for the results of his labor. All other classes can and are doing this. And yet handicapped as he is in selling his goods, no farmer would think of organizing with a strike in view in which men and women, boys and girls and babies would be starved. If the threatened railroad strike comes, it means certain starvation to the people of the cities. It means bankruptcy to the farmer who has the food that must be hauled over the roadroads to the cities. If the railroad workers are so badly underpaid the public is willing that they should receive a raise when they present their case in open court.

President Wilson no doubt had better reasons than he published for the dismissal of Secretary Lansing from the cabinet. If he did not have, the President made a serious mistake which will cost him a lot of good friends. Lansing was the strongest man Wilson had in his cabinet. That a cabinet should be a band of advisers rather than mere followers seems to have not been strongest in the mind of President Wilson in the selection of his cabinet members and in some of the methods used in the management of their officers. The loss of Lansing at this particular time is as serious a mistake as the President could have made.

The democrats of the house in caucus voted against military training against the wishes of President Wilson. Universal military training is going to be a question in the national election, and the democrats are going to be up against it if they do not sponsor this law.

We will appreciate your insurance business. Let us write your fire, tornado and hail insurance. J. D. Gamble & Co. -11

The Smoke Screen of Free Speech. Now we know that they are the flying squadron of the propaganda army invoking for these agents the protection of the rights of free speech merely as a smoke screen to cover their hostile activities.

The Wonders of America

By T. T. MAXEY

THE WHITE HOUSE.

THE home of the president of the United States, generally known as the White House, first became known as such when it was painted white to cover the marks of fire after being partially burned by the British in 1814. The foundation of this world-famous structure was put down in October, 1792. It was the first building erected in Washington. The site was picked by President George Washington, who also laid the corner stone.

The building was first occupied by President John Adams, during the summer of 1800. It is two stories and basement, and contains 31 rooms. It is surrounded by a spacious lawn and gardens, which are inclosed by a huge iron fence. Whether viewed through the heavy foliage of the giant trees or across winter's mantle of snow, it always looks restful and dignified.

The White House naturally has been the scene of many tragedies and comedies, much joy, and also has had its share of anxiety and grief. It holds a peculiar interest for the people of all nations, those of the United States in particular. It is a point of pilgrimage for thousands and thousands of people annually, who come to admire its decorations and paintings, study the relics of past occupants and, if opportunity offers, grasp the hand of the first citizen of the land. To a greater degree perhaps than any other building in the world, people of all ages and ranks have mingled under its roof.

Pruning The Fruit Trees.

Modern horticulture calls for low, open headed, spreading, strong fruit trees. They should be pruned so as to assume the proper shape when laden with a full crop. The tips of the lower branches of apple trees for instance should reach the ground, the lowest the longest, and this is the way we grow them in Colorado. Above these, tiered up and filling all space around the tree, the other branches should be of such length that their tips reach to and are supported by those respectively just below. The trunk of a fruit tree should be only for holding the top really above ground. Every extra inch of tree trunk is not only unnecessary, but is very expensive. The increased cost comes not only in the extra labor of climbing to an unnecessary height in pruning and spraying, thinning and picking fruit, but also in the increased damage to fallen fruit and also even to picked fruit when carried down from higher trees. In pruning to shape a tree its natural form as to kind and variety must be kept in mind. For example, it is as equally impossible to prune a Bartlett pear tree or a Yellow Transparent apple to make them assume the shape of a Jonathan, as it is to prune the Jonathan to the shape of the pear tree. The chief point is that by proper pruning a tree that naturally grows upright can be made much more spreading.—Field and Farm.

New Cattle Feed to be Tried.

A combination of alfalfa and sugar cane ground together is one of the products for cattle feeding being tried out by growers in sections of South Dakota, or will be as soon as they can get the feed in shape for a trial.

One of the products of alfalfa which is put upon the market contains a certain percentage of cheap molasses, and it is believed that the sugar cane will supply the place of molasses in this mixture. Years of effort have demonstrated that both alfalfa and sugar cane are crops which can be grown in the central and western parts of the state every year, bringing the grower a heavy crop of forage. If the two can be combined in a ground forage feed, the stock grower can feel certain that he can easily supply himself with the necessary concentrated product to carry his herds through a seige of storm and cold.

In the same line cattle growers are finding that ground alfalfa goes farther, and apparently makes a better feed for their stock than the hay without preparation, and alfalfa-grinding mills will become more numerous over the state when this fact is once permanently developed.—American Hereford Journal.

A Timely Act.

The fire bell rang out its shrill alarm. The fire engine came clattering down the street. "Where's the fire?" people shouted to each other. "The Grand Hotel. Every thing will go", others answered running to the scene. There seemed no chance for the hotel, a large, wooden, three-story building.

"All out?" inquired the police. "All out", reported the brawny fire chief. Glancing upward he became frozen with horror. A crippled girl was at the window of the third story, beseeching aid. In a moment he mounted the iron ladder. The heat was unbearable now. It seemed an age to the people below before he began descending, bearing the girl. As they took his unconscious burden, he dropped senseless on the pavement. —Irene Berry, Ninth Grade.

A Cure for Mobs.

A bill has been introduced in Congress, offering an anti-lynching law. There is every year a large number of lynchings in the United States, and they are unnecessary, unlawful and we could say more against them, but why. We do not believe that any anti-lynching law will ever stop lynching. The quickest and easiest way is to give speedy justice by the law, and not have so many criminals pardoned after they are convicted. Nine out of every ten mobs would not be formed, nor any attempt be made at lynching if the people knew full well that regardless of a criminal's money, standing or friends, our laws would mete out justice, without appeals to higher courts with a final dismissal on some small technicality. No good true American citizen can approve of mob law, but we all would sure like to see some improvements in our courts, both civil and criminal. —Miami Chief.

Nearly every farmer's organization in the country has declared against universal military training but congress will evidently pay no heed to their desires on this or any other basic principle. It will create an endless lot of jobs for fancy folks and this is all that is needed to put any proposition over these days. We would rather see compulsory agricultural training and it would be worth millions to the youth of the land.—Field and Farm.

Farmers Against Strikes.
Washington.—Denial that any group of organized workers possess an inherent right to strike is contained in a memorial to congress, formulated today at a conference here of representatives of four large farmers' organizations, the National Grange, the American Farm Bureau Federation, the Cotton States Board and the Association of State Farmers' union presidents.

In view of "recent events and happenings", representatives of the four organizations said it was agreed that the attitude of the former membership of their associations of the right to strike should be made plain to congress and the country.

Pointing out that the city population of the country is dependent on the farmer for food and that interruption of this supply can be bought about three strikes of railroad or other transportation unions, the memorial asserts:

"Those who believe that labor has an inherent right to organize a strike, believe that such organizations have a right to starve the people of the cities to death, on the one hand, and to destroy the property of the farmers on the other. No such right has ever existed and no such right exists now. It is economically unsound and the American people can and will work some other method for the settlement of such controversies. No set of men has ever had the moral or legal right to destroy property or cause suffering by conspiring together and the welfare of all the people must ever remain superior to that of any class or group of people.

"What would be the verdict of the people if the farmers of the United States should suddenly decide to go on a strike and refuse to supply the wants and needs of those who are not in a position to produce food and clothing for themselves? They would be condemned from one end of the country to the other and the fact would be pointed out that they, as the owners and illers of the land had no right, either moral or legal, to bring about such a calamity. If the farmers who own and occupy the land, have no such moral or legal right, then why should it be conceded by any one that those who handle the farmers' products have a right to block the transportation or industrial facilities of the country and thus jeopardize the food and clothing supply of the nation.

"If farmers have no such rights, those who handle his products have no such rights."

Country Weekly Survives.

While the daily newspaper of the present time, generally thoroughly organized as to policy, concerning both the character of news it publishes and the trend of its editorial comment, must, of necessity, reflect the judgment and views, broadly speaking, of some group of individuals or some single individual, it will no doubt be readily admitted that the publication of today which most clearly reflects upon its pages the ideals and interests of the individual in charge is the country weekly. It is probably true that in the United States, now, as formerly, publications of this particular class are to be found in greater number than in any other country. As purveyors of news and exponents of opinion they greatly antedate the daily newspaper, as a matter of course. Established first in the small cities, long before equipment was procurable for the issue of a daily paper, and long before the public demand was expressed that the news should be printed oftener than once a week, the weeklies for many years occupied the newspaper field exclusively. In those earlier days the news, no matter how important, coming from the capitals of the world, was often weeks and sometimes months old when published, for it must come, never by telegraph, an cable, as it comes today, but by courier, coach or sailing vessel, according to its source. Comparatively, then, the weekly publication was as nearly abreast of the times in those days as is the daily paper of today.

The early period of newspaper making in the United States was an intensely partisan period. Partisan allegiance manifested itself more often than today in bitter and acrimonious aggravation and negation, too frequently with the element of personality interjected. The editor of a weekly paper, because of his outspokenness and his opportunity to be heard, almost to the exclusion of others, often became the state, sectional or perhaps national standard bearer of the cause, the party or faction which he chose to espouse. This was true in the earlier periods of the last century, in the days when the working policies of the new republic were being formulated, and continued progressively through the long strife of ante-bellum days, and for years after war-between the states. It was some time after that war when the daily newspapers became an important factor generally in state and sectional affairs, because both the transmission of news by telegraph and the distribution of daily newspapers by mail were slow and uncertain undertakings.—Christian Science Monitor.

Noah Must Have Had Troubles.

A French scientist has made some interesting observations as to the behavior of different wild animals at sea. The polar bear, he says, is the only one that takes kindly to the sea, and is quite jolly when aboard ship. All others violently resent a trip on water and vociferously give vent to their feelings until sea sickness brings silence. The tiger suffers most of all. He whines pitifully, his eyes water continually, and he rubs his stomach with his terrible paws. Horses are very bad sailors, and often perish on a sea voyage. Oxen are heroic in their attempt not to give way to sickness. Elephants do not like the sea but they are amenable to medical treatment.

During the recent howl about the world coming to an end on the 17th of December, a Kansas editor had the following to say: "Please pay up your subscription before the seventeenth as the world will come to an end on that date and we don't want to go chasing all over h - l trying to collect the small sum due us."

Getting out of war is, also.—Detroit News.

The poorest argument in the world is that of the man or woman who says he is too poor to save. Poor people can't afford not to save. The Government is making it possible for every one to get ahead with 25c Thrift Stamps and $5.00 War Savings Stamps for $4.13.

This may not be loyalty, but we hope Mr. Carpenter, of France, who spent three years in active service for his country and our country, 'knocks the tar out of our stay-at-home champion.—Harveyville Monitor. Maybe the Reichstag would let Mr. Berger sit in it.—Columbia Dispatch.

Changes in Wilson Cabinet.

Resignation of Secretary Lansing, one of the ablest members of the administration, because he had called together the Cabinet during the incapacity of the President, is the latest of many shifts in the administration household. Others are:

James C. McReynolds, Attorney General, resigned Aug. 29, 1914, to be associate judge of the United States Supreme Court.

William J. Bryan, Secretary of State, June 9, 1915, difference with the President on foreign policy.

Lindley M. Garrison, Secretary of War, Feb. 4, 1916, difference between the President on universal military training.

William G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, son-in-law of the President, gave as his reason that he needed a rest and more income.

Thomas W. Gregory, Attorney General, found private practice more agreeable.

William C. Redfield, Secretary of Commerce, Nov. 1, 1919, difference with the administration.

Carter Glass, Secretary of the Treasury, resigned to become Senator.

Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior, resigned Nov. 23, 1919.

Settling Business Disputes Out of Court.

Detroit Free Press: Chicago has devised an ingenious way of settling business disputes without going into court with them. The Chamber of Commerce has an arbitration committee of thirteen to hear such disputes and pass upon them, and where an expert is required it calls in one of its own. There is no time lost in swearing in a jury, and questioning each member as to whether he knows any one who knows any of the parties to the dispute, nor in listening to legal quibbles or long-winded speeches. The committee is composed of business men who approach the case as they would any question arising in their own business, and decide it from a commonsense point of view.

Should the plan work out as well and as satisfactorily as is expected, it will not only relieve the courts of an immense mass of trivial disputes, but it will obviate the ill-feeling that so often follows the trial of cases in court. The litigants will be in the position of two friends who refer their misunderstandings to a third for his opinion, and there will be no reason why they should not shake hands when the decision is made.

All Set for the Cattlemen.

For three days of next week, commencing Tuesday, Amarillo is expecting to entertain the largest convention of cattlemen ever gathered together in its limits.

Many buyers from all over the United States have signified their intention to be here, among them Louis F. Swift, the head of the great packing concern bearing his name.

Among the prominent speakers expected are Hon. Joseph W. Bailey, candidate for governor; Pat Neff, candidate for governor; W. W. Turney, president of the Texas Cattle Raisers Association, three representatives of the Agricultural Department at Washington—Turner H. Wright, investigator of live stock and meats, who has recently returned from Europe; E. W. Sheets, who has charge of the Bureau of Animal Husbandry for beef cattle, and Prof. J. W. Smith, in charge of cattle range matters, and many other distinguished cattlemen. The meeting and speaking will take place in the district court room.

The Amusement Committee promise that something will be doing every minute. Dancing every night at the Case Building, a big boxing tournament on Tuesday night, besides special vaudeville acts and picture shows at the theatres.

All this, together with the big cattle show and sale, with the giving away of a thousand dollars worth of prizes, ought to suit the most fastidious, and will no doubt bring the biggest crowd ever seen in Amarillo.

The housing committee promise to get everyone a place to sleep.

"Put on your old gray bonnet" and be here!

Too much oil stock and not enough savings accounts.

Too much envy of the results of hard work and too little desire to emulate it.

Too many desiring short cuts to wealth and too few willing to pay the price.

Too much of the spirit of "get while the getting is good" and not enough of the old-fashioned Christianity.

Too much discontent that vents itself in mere complaining and too little real effort to remedy conditions.

Too much class consciousness and too little common democracy and love of humanity.—Fargo Forum.

"The Fort Worth newspapers carry more church advertising than the papers of any other city in the country", editorializes the Denton Record-Chronicle.

Why shouldn't a church advertise? Publicity is the thing. Religion is a splendid offering. Why not advertise it? The ten commandments are good things. Why not place them before the people. Business is business and the church should be placed on a business basis.—Ft. Worth Record.

These Tires Are a Revelation

The Brunswick is frankly a combination of the best in tire building.

There is one tread that's supreme beyond question. And that is now on Brunswicks.

There is one side-wall construction, which, by every test, holds the summit place for endurance. And that one was adopted for Brunswicks.

Fabrics differ — up to 30 per cent — in their strength tests. On Brunswicks the maximum long-fiber is the standard.

There are certain additions, each one expensive, which add vastly to tire mileage. The Brunswick embodies all these extras.

There are no patents, no secret formulas to prevent any maker from building the best. It is simply a question of knowledge and skill — cost plus care.

Brunswick standards are known the world over. The very name certifies an extraordinary tire. Yet Brunswicks cost no more than like-type tires.

Buy ONE Brunswick. It will prove that a better tire can't be bought, regardless of price.

WEST TEXAS AGRICULTURAL AND MECHANICAL COLLEGE

Dallas News Editorial.
There is genuine need of an Agricultural and Mechanical College in West Texas. The News believes the people of that section can get it if they go about the work in the right way. This right way in The News' opinion, is to base their demand for it solely upon the argument which can be made in support of it and to refuse to pool their interests with that of other sections which will make demands that are, intrinsically, less worthy than theirs. The votes they can get in the Legislature in support of their demand by pledging the votes of their own representatives in support of their demands cost more than they are worth, for the reason that they bring down upon their own demand a prejudice which it would not incur if it were advanced independently. The legislature and the people of the State can be made to see that it is both just and expedient that an Agricultural and Mechanical College be established in West Texas, and once seeing it, they will order its establishment. But they are blinded to that fact in some degree when that demand is allowed to enter into partnership relations with others which can win only by entering into a game of pork-barrel politics.

The agricultural problems of that vast expanse called West Texas are radically different from those of every other section of the State. The Agricultural and Mechanical College we now have at College Station may train a young man perfectly to follow his profession of farming in North, East and South Texas and leave him utterly unfitted to follow in West Texas. The News doubts if that institution is adequately equipped, in the matter of men and facilities, to give such training as is needed by a young man who goes to it from West Texas. For the most part the crops which it is practicable to grow in West Texas can not be grown successfully in Brazos county, so that to the extent that actual demonstration in field work enters into the teaching it must be thought that the Agricultural and Mechanical College is not fitted to serve the needs of that immense section. Furthermore, it must be regarded as rather likely that professors who have mastered the problem presented by the agricultural needs of North, South and East Texas have neither time nor energy to master problems so essentially different as those which confront the farmers of West Texas. To attempt to make the existing Agricultural and Mechanical College serve the needs of West Texas is virtually to neglect them, for we attempt the impracticable, if not the impossible. Probably very few young men from West Texas attend the institution at College Station. The reason is, not the distance of that institution from West Texas, but the belief that it is so little capable of giving the training that is serviceable to young men of that section. The establishment of an Agricultural and Mechanical College in West Texas would undoubtedly be a powerful stimulus to the farming industry of that section, and that result would handsomely repay the rest of the State for its contribution to the cost.

Beeville Bee: Beginning March 1, 1926, the Bee's yearly subscription will be $2. We leave it entirely to the readers' judgment if the paper is worth the money. If it is your opinion that it is not, then we regret to part with your name. If it is your belief that the Bee is worth $2 per year, we will be immensely pleased to continue your name on our subscription list. There it is, plain business in plain language. We can do no more.

State Press in Dallas News.—They are all coming to it. The publisher can't stay in business on a shoestring when it costs him the price of a pair of shoes to pay for a bundle of print paper. Indeed, it is a wonder how the shoemakers can afford to adulterate their soles with paper at the present prices. Two dollars a year for a weekly is, cheap enough. As a business proposition the Bee can not be sold for less. And as all newspapers which are not run on business principles are going to their graves to rise no more, the reader whose first consideration is cheapness will soon find it impossible to stick onto any paper's subscription list. Suspension and consolidations are now the rule in newspaperdom. The weak ones, made weak by timorous business policy, are failing. The strong ones are doing in the publishing line what strong men are doing in other lines—raising their prices to conform with other prices. There is no other way out. The day of the two-bit weekly is past. A few are still published at nominal prices, but their patrons may do well to wonder who makes up for the losses sustained between the cost of the product and the selling price. If the advertiser is bearing the burden he is paying dearly for his whistle. If the advertiser is not paying it, who is? Somebody certainly pays it, for there is no paper mill doing a gratis business.

He Pants for Fame.

A boy in the Wichita Schools has been suspended for reading the following essay on "pants".
"Pants are made for men and not men for pants. Women are made for men and not for pants. When a man pants for a woman and a woman pants for a man they are pair of pants. Such pants don't last. Pants are like molasses, they are thinner in hot weather and thicker in cold. The man in the moon changes his pants during the eclipse. Don't go to the pantry for pants, you might be mistaken. Men are often mistaken in pants. Such mistakes are breeches of promise. There has been much discussion as to whether pants are singular or plural. Seems to us when men wear pants they are plural, and when they don't wear any pants, it is singular. Men go on a tear in their pants, and it is all right but when the pants go on a tear with the man it is all wrong."
