

PHENOMINAL CROP WITH NO PLANTING

Sorghum Coming From Shattered Grain of East Fall Comes Up After Wheat Cut This Year.

J. W. Hancock has a crop of sorghum on his place five miles west of the city which is a wonder. He told the story to the News man yesterday morning.

He had sorghum on the land last year. He cut off the crop and planted 70 acres to barley and 40 acres to wheat. He did not notice that the sorghum of last year was shattering out of the head more than usual when it was handled.

He had a good crop of both wheat and barley this year. When these grains were cut, he noticed that sorghum was coming up thick on the ground, and that it stood from one to six inches high in the stubble after he had cut the grain.

Then the big rains started to fall, and the sorghum started to grow. Today it stands eight feet high and is heading out wonderfully fine. He went in and tried to bind the stalks but they were too big and high. Mr. Hancock is going to gather two good crops from his land this year; first the wheat and then this bumper crop of sorghum.

Mr. Hancock said when he came here a few years ago, he was told that he could not stay long in this country. He was told that men had come here with a lot of money and eventually they had gone broke. He thought he knew differently, and stuck. He has made good money while he has been here. Mr. Hancock believes there is no more wonderful land in the world than right here in the Panhandle. He believes that it will never be any cheaper today. He is certain that there will be dry years when rain is plentiful as this year, but he is certain that there are enough good farmers in Randall county who will not be scared by a little dry weather, and who know how to handle the land when the dry weather does come, that land will never go down in value.

Mr. Hancock says that he had a drinking tank setting out in his yard at harvest time when the rains started. He put no water in the tank and took none out and today there stands twenty inches of water in the tank. The natural evaporation would have taken considerable water from the tank, and he therefore figures that he has more than twenty inches of rain at his place since harvest.

Mr. Hancock states that Randall county will have the biggest row crop in the history of the county this year. He states that the farmers are getting ready to put in the biggest wheat acreage in the history of Randall county. He believes that if a good rain had fallen the first of May there would have been a phenomenal wheat yield this year. He is confident that with the fine moisture in the ground there will be a good wheat yield next year, as certainly the small moisture necessary to bring out and mature the grain in the spring will not fail when there has been nearly twice the normal rainfall already this fall.

Mr. Hancock is well pleased with Randall county. He is satisfied that there is not a better farming country, than that of his farm in this county.

L. T. DAVAUT DIES LAST THURSDAY IN AMARILLO

L. T. Davault died last Thursday evening at 5:30 o'clock after the operation of Tuesday morning. His death was not unexpected as he was found to be in a very serious condition when the operation was performed, but seemed to be recovering Thursday morning. Mr. Davault had not been in good health for a number of years, but was never to be in a critical condition until taken seriously sick Monday. After the doctors saw his condition during the operation they were skeptical as to the results.

Mr. Davault was born Nov. 6, 1877, being 42 years, 10 months and 10 days of age at the time of his death. He leaves his wife, son and daughter, one brother, J. F. Davault of Anna, Illinois, two sister, both living in Illinois. Mr. Davault and family moved to Canyon several years ago. He first engaged in the furniture-business, selling this to retire, he was forced to spend some time at Mineral Wells on account of his health. He has been engaged in the automobile business with O. A. May since that time.

The funeral services were held at the Methodist church Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Simeon Shaw. Rev. B. F. Fronbarger assisted, making a talk at the church. The pall bearers were J. M. Redfearn, J. A. Guthrie, Oscar Hunt, E. H. Powell, C. R. Fleisher and Grady Holland.

20 Inches of Rain

During 1910 and 1911 Randall county received a total of 13 inches of rain for each year. Those were pretty dry years, and while the grain crops were not much, there were fairly good row crops both years.

What a difference this year. The farmers living west of the city report to the News that 20 inches of rain have fallen since harvest started this summer. They have all the rain they want and more than they need just now. One man states that not a cloud has formed in the vicinity of his farm the entire summer without a great down pour. The result is that Randall county has the greatest row crop in the history of the county.

There will be hurried councils in the political camps now. Some plan must be devised to keep mice away from the polls.—Pittsburg Sun.

PAVING ELECTION IS ORDERED FOR OCT. 30

At the regular meeting of the City Council last night, the order was passed calling the city election for paving purposes to be held on Saturday, October 30th.

The order of the election is printed in this issue of the News.

DORMITORY ACCEPTED BY BOARD REGENTS NORMAL OPENED WITH GOOD NUMBER

Contractor Johnson Completes Job, Which is Accepted for State by Regent Robt. Eckhardt.

Hon. Robert J. Eckhardt of Taylor, member of the Board of Regents for Normal Colleges, was in the city this week to accept from the contractor the new dormitory for girls, the work on which was completed this week. Architect Endress of Austin was here to see that all of the provisions of the specifications had been completed.

The building was accepted by Mr. Eckhardt and both he and Mr. Endress expressed great satisfaction with the work as turned over by Mr. Johnson. The material and workmanship throughout is first class and furnishings as contracted for through the Board of Control are all that can possibly be desired for comfort and convenience of the girls who will make their home in the building.

All of the furnishings, practically, were in place when the school opened this week. The furnishings which had not arrived Tuesday will be placed as soon as possible.

The new boiler house was accepted at the same time. This is a $30,000 one story structure, which has in addition to the boiler house, a large room in which a portion of the manual training department is being housed. An additional appropriation will be asked from the next session of the legislature to enlarge this building in order to put all of the manual training department in this building in order to make more room in the main building for other departments which are now overcrowded.

High School Notes

The public school is still being called upon to accommodate more pupils.

The primary and intermediate grades are especially crowded, having each between 30 and 50 pupils.

Many pupils are coming to our school as strangers and are making good. Our pupils are delighted with the teachers this year and the teachers are speaking in highest terms of the splendid attitude of the pupils.

The classes of high school are organizing and are enthusiastic in their plans for another year. A report of their proceedings will be given soon.

From reports of teachers pupils are making a good start in their work.

The play spirit is good among the children. At rest periods they are scattered over four blocks with their respective coaches.

Football and basketball is the favorite sports at present.

Play equipment is expensive and hard to secure, but the children are making arrangements for themselves.

The first game of football was played Wednesday between the fifth and sixth grades on one side and the seventh on the other. Result 6 to 0 in favor of the seventh. The seventh grade will play the second team of the high school Friday. The high school is expecting a game with Tulia soon.

Our girls will soon be ready to begin practice in basketball.

Cash Buys Baltimore Building Harvey Cash has bought the Baltimore building at the southeast corner of the square of H. E. Smith of Amarillo. Leases on the store rooms are retained by the Gouley Furniture store and the Normal Grocery.

Mr. Cash moved to Canyon from Dimmitt last week and has great faith in the future of Canyon.

PHILLIPS MAKING PLANS FOR AGRICULTURE IN NORMAL

Frank R. Phillips arrived Saturday from Denton to take up his work in the Normal, having accepted a position in the Agricultural Department. Mr. Phillips will have charge of the Vocational Agriculture work in the training school and assist Mr. Ives in the college courses.

Mr. Phillips is a graduate of the Denton Normal in 1911. He was with the Extension Department of the A. & M., going to the Louisiana agricultural college, then to Yale, spent a year in the army and has been county agent of Denton county until accepting his present position in the Normal.

Mr. Phillips is highly interested in making a great course of the Vocational Agriculture work in the training school. He is planning some very interesting and instructive trips for the boys taking the course. Next week he will take his class to the Plainview Fair. The following week they will go to the Hereford Fair. Inspection trips will be made to ranches, dairies, meat markets, green houses, creameries and other places which handle farm products. Mr. Phillips wishes to make the work as practical as possible in order to appeal to the boy's interest.

Indications are that a very large number of boys will take the course offered in the training school.

EXTENDING RED CROSS WORK INTO COUNTRY THIS WEEK

Mrs. J. B. Gamble and Miss Botsai, the Red Cross nurse, made their first trip out of the city Tuesday, going to the Block community and to Umbarger, organizing these communities for the class instruction work along the Home Aid lines as are being developed in the classes given at the court house in Canyon.

A car has been procured for Miss Botsai and she will answer calls to all communities of Randall County. Just as soon as she finishes her work in the Block and Umbarger communities, she will visit other sections of the county.

Miss Botsai reports that the class work in Canyon is progressing very satisfactorily. There are forty enrolled and great interest is being taken in the work. She is very highly pleased with the way the people of Randall county are taking hold of the work she is bringing them in the name of the Red Cross.

Highest Scoring Babies

Mrs. Fred H. Ives makes the following report on the Baby Show held during the Randall County Fair:

The score cards are complete and the six highest scoring babies are as follows:

Mary Ella Fleisher—97½.

Dorothy Arnold—97.

Leon Tate—97.

Joe Grady Crowley—96.

Edwin Kuehn—96.

Edwin Meyer—95.

The superintendent of this department wishes to thank publicly Miss Botsai, our Red Cross nurse, and Doctors Ingham, Stewart, Wilson, Latson and Biggers for their assistance which made this Baby Conference possible.

May Randall County never omit a Better Baby Conference in connection with its Fair, for the health of one baby is far more important than all the pigs that can be brought to a Fair.

Let next year's Baby Conference be better and bigger one for Randall County.

Panhandle People Moving Here

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Bishop and family moved to Canyon yesterday where they go to get the benefit of the State Normal College. Mr. Bishop is the present tax assessor for Carson county and the Democratic nominee to succeed himself, but since deciding to move his family to Canyon as their permanent home he has tendered his resignation as the nominee to Chairman O'Keefe, who has called a meeting of the committee for tomorrow to name Mr. Bishop's successor.

R. C. O'Keefe and family of the Cuyler community moved this week to Canyon for school advantages.

Mrs. Nova Callihan of the Conway community moved to Canyon this week in order to give her children the advantages of the State Normal College.—Panhandle Herald.

EXHIBIT WANTED FOR DALLAS FAIR

C. F. Walker Will Take Exhibit From Randall County—Want Best Products of all Kinds.

Randall county will have an exhibit at the Dallas Fair.

A booth has already been reserved by the Randall County Commercial League and arrangements made with C. F. Walker, county agent, to take an exhibit to the big fair.

The big job now confronting Mr. Walker is to get the best possible exhibit from Randall county to take to the Fair.

There is such a vast amount of good stuff in Randall county to select from, that Mr. Walker will have a job making his selections in order to get the very best. He cannot do all of this vast amount of work by himself. He needs help and must have a lot of help if Randall county is to send the best possible exhibit—the kind of exhibit that will do credit to the good county of ours.

Mr. Walker has been promised a lot of things to go to the Fair. In fact, most any producer will promise to furnish him with anything in his fields or his garden—and straight way forget all about getting the stuff to Mr. Walker. If Mr. Walker has to go out and gather all of the exhibit which goes to Dallas, then bring it to Canyon, and wrap and box it for shipment, he will not be able to get the best possible exhibit.

If every producer in Randall county will bring to Mr. Walker his very best samples and let Mr. Walker select from among them the things he will need, then he can get an exhibit that will do credit to the county.

The state fair officials have sent warning that all exhibits which are not in place for the opening morning of the fair—October 9—will be penalized. In order to get the Randall county exhibit to Dallas in plenty of time for the opening day, it must at least be here Saturday, Oct. 2nd.

Mr. Walker wants all samples left at his office by that date. Any person who has good samples and cannot get them to Canyon by that date will please notify Mr. Walker and he will try to send after them.

Altogether now for a bigger and better exhibit from Randall county

COMMERCIAL LEAGUE WILL MEET NEXT TUESDAY P. M.

The Randall County Commercial League will meet at the News office next Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock for the regular monthly business session.

Owing to the Fair there was no Trades Day or monthly meeting held last month. The business of the past two months will have to be looked after at the meeting next Tuesday.

All of the members of the League and citizens who are interested in the welfare of the city are invited to attend the meeting next Tuesday night.

Big Wheat Acreage This Fall

Farmers have reported to the News this week that in all directions from Canyon wheat is being planted more than has been the case in the past number of years. Every farmer is planting "between showers," as it has been raining so much that all farmers are much behind with their work.

The fine moisture will bring the wheat up this fall, and all are trusting, for the small amount of rain that will be necessary for its proper development next spring.

Remodeling Store

S. B. Orton is remodeling his store building which was occupied until recently by the Ideal Cafe. He will use the back part of the building for a ware room for his grocery business, and the front part will be made into offices. Fleisher Brothers and Pipkin & Redfearn have leased the offices being constructed in the building.

Car Turns Over

Judge and Mrs. Henry Bishop were on their way to Plainview last Saturday morning from their home in Amarillo when the car struck a rut and turned completely over, the wheels standing in the air when they and the other three passengers extracted themselves from the wreck. The car was a new Sedan and the only damage was broken glass. All of the passengers were more or less bruised and cut by glass, but none were seriously injured.

The Low Cost of Thinking
By William Mathér Lewis, National Director Savings Division, U. S. Treasury Department.

The cost of living will not go down permanently until the use of gray matter goes up. As long as the people of America are content to delegate their thinking to a select few, that select few will run matters to further their own personal ends. The average American does not function above the shoulders. The movies pay tremendous dividends because they furnish a form of amusement which requires no mental effort. We are a nation of magazine readers; a long book demands too much sustained thinking to please us.

Are these accusations false? Put yourself to the test. Why are you a Methodist or a Catholic? Why a Republican or a Democrat? Your sectarian beliefs were probably settled for you by your great grandfather. You were a Republican or a Democrat fifty years before you were born. You have not thought through the political problems, and as a result the little group which have given these problems attention are leading you whither they will. The big asset of the political boss is the mass of voters which won't think on matters political and which welcomes his advice. Do the people choose the President of the United States? They do not. A little group of men picks the candidate who best suits their purposes. Then they say to the people: "John Jones is the man we want for president," and the people, gratified at having their thinking done for them, shout: "He is." The average American has nothing to say about who will lead the nation, because he doesn't want to.

And to get back to the cost of living. That problem isn't being solved because we have delegated the consideration of economic matters to a few financiers and college professors. The high cost of living is a result of something. The American people have got to think consecutively enough to work back from result to cause; they have got to understand the law of supply and demand, of production and consumption. The war took millions of men out of productive industry, goods became scarce and prices correspondingly high. The war is over. What is the answer? To buy everything in sight and to produce as little as possible, or to spend carefully and produce the maximum? Supply and demand: You cannot eat your cake and have it too. Maximum production, careful spending, regular saving—these things are the only remedy. What if you make ten dollars a day and have to spend eleven? Do high wages get you anywhere?

Your Liberty Bond is below par. Have you thought why, or have you let someone tell you why and take your bond away from you in exchange for "phony" stock? The Government borrowed your money for a certain period of years, at the end of which time it will pay you back dollar for dollar, and in the meantime the interest that was promised you. Like other bonds, Liberty Bonds are subject to market conditions, including the law of supply and demand. The market quotations have declined chiefly because of the failure of the investing public to save in proportion to the enormous expenditure of capital during and since the war. Of the twenty million or more Americans who patriotically subscribed during the war, large numbers have been unwilling or unable to retain bonds after the cessation of hostilities. Liberty Bonds and notes were issued in such stupendous amounts in a short period that their absorption by the investors of the country necessarily requires time, with prejudice to their sale value.

These facts have not been considered by those who let other men do their thinking for them, and as a consequence thoughtful men are buying Liberty Bonds from the thoughtless men. Thoughtful men will know that the security behind the Liberty Bonds is the honor and faith of the United States and the whole wealth of this great nation. They know that United States bonds issued in other war periods fell in value for a short time, and then rose to par, and in many instances above, before maturity. If Liberty Bonds are not good, why are so many people trying to get them away from their original holders? Give money matters a little thought. Don't be content to let others do your financial thinking for you, if you want to get ahead in this world. The little group that has always done our money thinking for us has surrounded financial dealings with mysterious language which frightens the uninitiated. Don't let them fool you. The principles of finance are simple and clear.

Let us use our heads in politics, in religion, in finance. If we do our own thinking, then the life, liberty and pursuit promised in the Declaration of Independence will come to be something more than a phrase juggled by the Fourth of July orator.

There is no real democracy founded on mental laziness.

Double Taxation

San Antonio Light: Some time, maybe, the fitness of candidates for the Texas Legislature will be judged by their opposition to existing laws rather than by their advocacy of more trouble. But as yet there are no signs of the millennium. As the Light observed editorially the other day, a man who says he expects to be a member of the next legislature has announced that he is framing a bill to amend the tax laws in such a way as to define secured debts as assets and make them taxable as such.

Whether such a measure as he is preparing would swell the State treasury to any considerable extent is a question not difficult to answer—in the negative. There is always one consolation when bad laws are enacted; they are respected more in the violation than in the observance. The evil of unsound legislation, like so many other evils, carries its own remedy.

As a matter of fact, if this prospective legislator only knew it, we have a law in this state under which at least one form of debt is taxable. But to say that anything is taxable is not to say that it is taxed. There is a vast difference between legal theory and actual practice. This form of debt may or may not be of the secured variety.

One person holds another's note; it may be either secured or unsecured. In either case it is "subject to axaion." Whether secured or unsecured the note may never be paid; the holder can never know in advance, so that it is not only possible, but highly probable, that a person who renders a note for taxation may pay taxes on wealth that he never receives.

For example, Mr. A. who has no money, asks Mr. B. to lend him $1000. Mr. B. complies, taking Mr. A.'s note for the amount. If he $1000, actual money, should be taxed, the man in whose possession it is ought to be the one to "dig up." If Mr. A. having borrowed the $1000 and placed it in bank, does not swear falsely when he renders his property for taxation, he will include that amount in his rendition. Then the State ought to be satisfied. But, under the law, the man who loaned the $1000 is supposed to render for taxation the borrower's note for that amount. If both the borrower and lender respectively, comply with the letter of the law, the State taxes the $1000 twice; whereas, if no loan had been made, there could have been but one levy on that amount.

But how many people tell the tax assessor how much money they have in bank? And how many render the notes they hold, unless, purchase, such securities should be on public record? Few tax assessors press the question, or even ask it. Doubtless they realize how futile it would be to try to go into everybody's safe-deposit boxes.

Oftentimes, however, men who are known to be accustomed to making large time transactions are pressed for information concerning their "paper." One who was disposed to circumvent the law would not be worried if his "paper" were not on record. But there are ways and ways of avoiding literal violation of the law while escaping taxation for which the law specifically provides. One of these ways is to make notes payable outside of the county in which the payee resides, or payable to some one who resides elsewhere. The presumption is that a note is held where it is payable, or by the person to whom, on its face, it is to be paid. But oftentimes this presumption goes wide of the facts. While it may be regarded as a sharp practice to circumvent the law in such a way, certain is it that the law is a bad one because, in theory at least, and sometimes in practice, it produces double taxation on the same wealth.

In Texas, particularly Southwest Texas, where large tracts of land frequently change hands, the taxing of notes works an extreme hardship even to be assumed that the notes are perfectly good. For example, a man owns a 10,000-acre ranch and sells it for $10 an acre. The chances are that a partial payment will be made, and that a note or a series of notes will be given for the balance. If the seller renders his note or notes for taxation, he will be taxed on the full face value, whereas his land has been assessed at only a fraction of its market value. He may have to pay three or four times as great a tax on his notes as he was required to pay on the land—and he may never collect on the notes, either. Moreover, while he is paying taxes on his notes, the man to whom he made the sale is paying taxes on the land. Double taxation again.

It would be intolerable if the law were enforced to the letter. But it is not, and in the nature of things can not be enforced to the letter to the letter, and no more could the law that the prospective member of the

An Artistic Nation
By Phebe K. Warner in Star-Telegram.

Nature is the greatest artist in the world. Every living, growing thing is a work of art, or was in the beginning. Everything in nature is a result of a definite design. There is a definite design for the daisy and the lily. Every tree has its own special pattern. Every bug, every bird, every blade of grass, every leaf, grain of corn, every stalk of cotton has been designed some time, somewhere by the one Great Artist. If the great God teaches us one lesson more often than another every day of our lives it is His lessons in art. Every sunset is a perfect picture. Not a color or even a tint in the wrong place. Every sunrise is another picture. The rainbow is one of His masterpieces. Even God cannot make a rainbow every day. There only uncertain days and certain conditions when the rainbow can be produced. Every one of us lives in a world of art. We see it over our heads, but we do not understand it. We tramp it under our feet, but we do not know it. All because we have never been taught to appreciate the beauty in every flower and tree and sky. The greatest lessons in life are taught by the natural things about us. Order, system, regularity, punctuality, obedience, stability, patience. These are but a few of nature's lessons that we learn from the pedals of a rose; from the ever returning sun, moon, and stars. The growth of the trees and the changing seasons. And all nature is so beautiful. Everything is perfect, that has had a fair chance. And it seems that the Great Artist, who designed and made all things in earth and air and sea, took just as much pains with the tiny flower on a far away, lonely hillside, as He did with the great oaks. He made them just as beautiful as those in the gardens of the Royalty of earth.

And how beautiful the Great Artist is with His beauty. Beauty, beauty, everywhere. And yet, how miserably ugly most of us live! Without a line of beauty in our homes. Without order or system or regularity in our daily lives, or our business. What a mess the world would have been if men and women had planned it all. Our poor little homes and yards and towns are samples of our works of art. They are samples of designless lives and works. Millions of us are starving and suffering for even one beautiful object in our homes, and we do not know how to get it. We scarcely know one color from another. We haven't studied nature enough to learn what colors "go together." In all our lives we never knew an art teacher. We have never associated with those who have studied nature and found out her beauty secrets. We want beautiful things all about us and sometimes we really think we have them because we do not know the difference between the artistic and that which is not artistic. We have never been taught the laws of lives and colors and their combinations. Because there are not enough are teachers to go around. And how often little children who cannot have beautiful surroundings in their home never have a taste of them at school either. Isn't it a shame, when there is so much beauty in the world that every human being may not be taught how to have his share. And sometimes children are literally driven out of school by the studies they cannot grasp when their minds and lives are hungry for the things they could grasp if those things were only to be had. Isn't it strange that we still insist on millions of our school children studying dead languages, higher mathematics and the records of death and destruction caused by wars among men and refuse to give them a chance to study the works of the Creator Himself. And teach them to love and enjoy the beautiful things around them and do the work that will make these beautiful surroundings possible in their future homes.

Let's put more art into our schools. Let's develop an artistic nation to live in this beautiful world. A nation that will add more beauty rather than destroy what nature has given them.

Don't Keep It Bottled Up
Nautlius: The psycho-analysis have proved to us a great truth, that to ignore unpleasant facts or truths is to multiply their power over us. To "forget" the undesirable experience is but to sink it into the unconscious self where it sets up a complex or tension and strain, which evolves into a "mental cancer" and eventually becomes a real cancer or other deranged condition.

Only by expressing the unpleasant memory, understanding it, making light of it, can it be exercised. Bring it to light, examine it, see the foolishness of it, and it will dissolve in your smiles and leave you free from the disease of which it was the cause.

The disease of your body and your mind, and of your spirit, are caused by repressed areas of consciousness.

Express 'em!
Spit 'em out!
Then the Lord can fill your consciousness with God and satisfy your soul with His salvation.

And remember this law of self-expression when you find others spitting out the truth as they see it.

There is no life, truth, intelligence, power or virtue in repressing facts or convictions.

There is life, truth, intelligence, power, progress and healing in expressing the truth as you see it; and in leaving others free to do the same.

"Promote the Junior Cat"
Portland Oregonian: Inasmuch as rats did much damage to his papers, a Hindu clerk, who was in charge of the official documents in one of the more remote Indian towns, obtained permission to keep two cats, the larger of which was to receive somewhat better rations than the other. A few weeks later the head office at Delhi received this dispatch:

"I have the honor to inform you that the senior cat is absent without leave. What shall I do?"

To this problem the office vouchsafed no reply. After waiting a few days the Hindu sent off this proposal: "In re absentee cat. I propose to promote the junior cat and in the meantime to take into Government service a probationer cat on full rations."

Life Like a Fountain
High in the heavens, eternal God,
Thy goodness in full glory shines;
Thy truth shall break through every cloud
That veils and darkens thy design.
For ever firm thy justice stands,
As mountains their foundations keep;
Wise are the wonders of thy hands,
Thy judgments are a mighty deep.

Life, like a fountain rich and free,
Springs from the presence of the Lord;
And in thy light our souls shall see
The glories promised in thy word.

What a Fordson Owner is Doing

D. E. Covington is one of the farmers of Randall County who has motorized his farm with the latest machinery which will do the most work in the least possible time.

After careful investigating the values of different tractors, as to their price and the volume of work they would do for him, he decided that the FORDSON was the tractor for his farm.

On February 8th he bought a FORDSON and put it to work. He stated last Saturday that since that time he had had the tractor at work one hundred days on his place. He had used it to break sod; he had pulled plows on old land; he had used it to disc; during threshing he had run his separator with the tractor; he had used it to pull the grain wagons to market; in fact, he had made a thorough and trying test of the FORDSON for every possible farm work.

Mr. Covington was asked what his repair bill had been during those 100 days of hard usage of the FORDSON. He smilingly admitted that he had put in one new connecting, which was damaged while running in the dark. Not even had the cylinder head been removed during those 100 days of hard usage. Not another penny had been expended for repairs of any kind. The FORDSON runs today on the Covington farm northwest of Canyon as smoothly as it did the day it was taken from the KUEHN & WISE GARAGE in February.

Mr. Covington has a Dodge car. On cold mornings it does not easily start. His boys crank up the Fordson and pull the Dodge under such condition until the engine starts. Mr. Covington believes there is no other tractor made which starts as easily as does the Fordson.

Not all men will get such remarkable service from the Fordson as does Mr. Covington because they will not take such good care of their machine. Mr. Covington believes in giving his machinery the same good treatment as he does his teams, and is confident that any farmer who will do the same will get the same remarkable results as he has from his Fordson.

Is it any wonder that Mr. Covington is a booster for the FORDSON?

As Laymen See Newspapers
Be the main cause what it may, certain illusions, all of them woefully incorrect and most of them entirely false, firmly have been grafted upon the lay mind, to-wit:
That practically all city editors are crabbed misanthropists with the disposition of a dispeptic Nero.
That all newspapers are terribly put to it to find material with which to fill up their columns.
That reporters are noisy youths, armed with large note books, who prowl about town on the lookout for something unusual or exciting to happen so that they may hurry back to their offices and write overdrawn accounts of it.
That a reporter will go to any ends in order to get hold of a piece of news which a brother reporter has not yet got hold of, and that having got it he will die in his tracks before he will whack up with his fellow.
That a reporter who gets a story—the word being here used in the newspaper sense to imply anything which is printable, from a paragraph to a page article—invariably writes it out himself for publication.
That the sap green reporter invariably lands the biggest beat.
That a newspaper shop is run like a madhouse, and that as the hour of going to press approaches it becomes more of a madhouse than ever, being peopled with agitated figures rushing wildly to and fro and uttering demoniac shrieks.

That the old time newspaper stars were habitual drunkards and did their best work while in a state of intoxication. Also that many of the brilliant figures of the present day are cursed with the same craving for strong waters and are suffered by their employers to lead dissipated lives because they are most sparkling when they are most soured.

Foreign Advertising Representative THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

From an editorial appearing in the Amarillo News Friday in which the writer professed a very friendly relation to the Normal and urged the proper appropriation for the school, but at the same time criticised local interests of the west which are opposed to the West Texas A. & M. College, it would seem that the Amarillo paper was taking exception to what the Randall County News had to say regarding the situation in our last issue. The Amarillo paper seems to take it for granted that the Randall County News is opposed to a West Texas A. & M. College. It is quite evident that the editor of the Amarillo paper failed to read the comments which went the rounds of the Panhandle press early this spring when the question of expanding the Normal's agricultural department was under discussion. Had he read these, he would have found but one paper, the Quanah Tribune-Chief, which is opposed to any kind of a new school at this time, owing to the fact that the present schools are not satisfactorily supported by the legislature. He would have found all of the rest of the papers of this section in favor of an A. & M. College in the West, provided it was located in the west and not at Abilene, or some place away down in the state which would have been little or no advantage to this Panhandle-Plains country. He would have found that a number of the papers of this section were firmly convinced that the school could never be located on the Plains, and he would have found that a majority of the papers in this section were firmly convinced that the only way the Panhandle-Plains country was to get the proper agricultural instruction was through the expansion of this department of the Normal. The friends of the school who advocate this idea are not seeking a "make shift" agricultural school, as the Amarillo paper and several other West Texas papers have dubbed the idea as advocated. Those who know conditions as they really exist are firmly convinced that this plan is the only chance the Panhandle-Plains country has of getting agricultural instruction for the boys and girls of this section until such time as the population has increased to such an extent that our section can demand and get political recognition from the political leaders of the state. The West Texas State Normal is the second largest Normal in the State of Texas. It was established here for the benefit of the Panhandle-Plains people. It is serving these people admirably. Why should it not be of more service to the people of this section through a wide expansion of the departments of agriculture, manual training and domestic science? The Amarillo paper raised a great-howl together with every paper in this section when the West Texas A. & M. College was located at Abilene. Every paper in this section will do the same thing if another bill is passed and the location is made at Abilene, or some town away down in the state which has conditions more like central Texas than the Panhandle-Plains country. The Randall County News believes in getting what will be of most service to the people of this section. There is none in the Panhandle-Plains who do not believe that the agricultural possibilities of the section should not be developed to the greatest possible extent. Were it possible to get the A. & M. College for the Plains, it would possibly be better to make a great drive for the school. Those towns in this section which spent so much time and money a few years ago in the attempt know how useless it would be at this time, and most of them are satisfied in accepting the expansion of usefulness of the West Texas State Normal College.

Governor Cox took the wind out of his "wet" admirers the other day. He is now under suspicion of both the dries and the wets. However, nothing that Cox or Harding may say or do will have much weight with the prohibition question. The wets who want booze will get it as long as there is any. But a majority of the people of these United States are for prohibition, and if the United States cannot blot out the bootleggers in one generation, they will in the second generation. The habits of a nation are not changed in a year.

It is a safe bet that the fools who throw out bombs to kill innocent people did not throw or have bombs thrown at them in the battle line. And it is further a safe bet that they would use their utmost effort against being deported from this "uncivilized" country to their heart's-dream-of-perfection—Russia.

He Needs an Electrician
Frank Becker: "I've been reading an article on electricity, William," said his wife, as she laid down the technical magazine, "and it appears that before long we shall get pretty near everything we want by just touching a button."
"It will not pay here!" said friend husband. "You will never be able to get anything that way."
"Why not, William?"
"Because nothing would ever make you touch a button. Look at my shirt."

On Growing Old

Be with me, Beauty, for the fire is dying;
My dog and I are old, too old for roving.
Man, whose young passion sets the spendthrift flying,
Is soon too lame to march, too cold for loving.

I take the book and gather to the fire,
Turning old yellow leaves; minute by minute,
The clock ticks to my heart; a withered wire
Moves a thin ghost of music in the spinet.

I cannot sail your seas, I cannot wander
Your cornland, nor your hilland nor your valleys,
Ever again, nor share the battle yonder
Where the young knight the broken squadron rallies.

Only stay quiet while my mind remembers
The beauty of fire from the beauty of embers.

Beauty, have pity, for the strong have power,
The rich their wealth, the beautiful their grace,
Summer of man its sunlight and its flower,
Springtime of man all April in a face.

Only, as in the jostling in the Strand,
Where the mob thrusts or loiters or is loud,
The beggar with the saucer in his hand
Asks only a penny from the passing crowd.

So, from this glittering world with all its fashion,
Its fire and play of men, its stilted march,

Let me have wisdom, Beauty, wisdom and passion,
Bread to the soul, rain where the summers parch.

Give me but these, and though the darkness close
Even the night shall blossom as the rose.
—John Mansfield in "Enslaved."

Gone

All that is left of a memory
Is a table and vacant chair;
Mutely they tell the story,
Gone, but where, oh where?

Ask of the gentle breezes,
That toy with twig and flower;
Ask of the sunbeams shining,
Ask of the twilight hour.

Vanished into the silence,
That hides like a funeral pall,
Into that world of shadows,
Gone, and that is all.
—Mrs. M. E. Cunningham.

The Pilgrim Anniversary
The year 1920 is doubly significant, historically. It marks the 300th anniversary of two important events which led to the founding of the Republic of the United States of America. One is the signing of the Mayflower Compact and the landing of the Pilgrims; and the other is the meeting of the first American legislative assembly.

On November 11, 1620, in the cabin of the Mayflower, a tiny bark lying off the Massachusetts coast, a little band of liberty loving men, from "Brittania" entered into what history has styled the Mayflower Compact. This agreement bound the forty-one adult males in the ship's company into a civil body politic for the better ordering, preserving, and furthering of their mutual ends. And it provided for such just and equal laws and for such offices as should be necessary for the general good of the colony.

Ten days later, so records Dr. Charles W. Eliot's inscription on the Pilgrim Memorial Monument at Provincetown, Mass., "the Mayflower, carrying 102 passengers, men and women and children, cast anchor in this harbor 67 days from Plymouth, England.

"This body politic, established and maintained on this bleak and barren edge of a vast wilderness, a state without a king or a noble, a church without a bishop or a priest, a democratic commonwealth, the members of which were straitly tied to all care of each other's good, and of the whole by every one.

"With long-suffering devotion and sober resolution they illustrated for their first time in history the principles of civil and religious liberty and the practice of genuine democracy."

Meantime, uninformed of the Pilgrims, fellow-colonists of Captain John Smith had met at "James City" (Jamestown), Virginia, for the first American Legislative Assembly. On July 30, 1619, they had thus broken ground for the foundation of the present democratic form of government in the United States.

It seems hardly short of Providential that in this year of 1920 which marks the 300th anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims that the Old World should be looking to the New World for help and advice in the solution of its own troubles.

In a world torn with dissension and strife the American continent stands alone in its tranquility and orderly observance of the process of government.

What more fitting celebration of this fateful anniversary than that chief issue in our presidential campaign should be how best to give the world the advantages and the lessons which we have gained from our experiment in Democracy. We can choose whether we shall do it through "The League" or "A World Court with teeth." We are told that the world awaits—and will accept what the United States offers.

In our ratification over the unique position of the United States, we are not so foolish, we hope, as to think that our form of government is Utopia realized or that there are no evils in this country which must be eradicated but we know it is the best so far achieved in an imperfect world. And we further believe that if the citizens of today would bring to bear on the problems which now confront us a fair measure of the spirit of devotion, the passion for liberty and justice, and courage of the Pilgrim Fathers whose anniversary we celebrate this month, America will continue on its way to become "The Ideal State."

Realizing Premises

"We must raise money somehow."
"But we've got nothing we can sell."
"Where are those jewels I promised you?"—Griffiths and Carmen.

In these profiteering days it is not so much the heat as it is the cupidity that annoys us.—New York Morning Telegraph.

Ah Oui

What has become of all the French words the boys brought along with them from "over there?" Our best prophets predicted that the English language as spoken in the United States would be enriched with parlez-vous after the boys came home.

"Tout suite" was to remain a permanent piece of the furniture of daily conversation, according to the prophets, but, nevertheless, the boys have gone back to using the good Anglo-Saxon "right away."

And they say "hello" and not "bonjour;" and they no longer "mange" but "eat," and "madamoiselle" is plain "girl."

"Well, well," some veteran reading these lines will exclaim, "I had almost forgotten there were such words."

And yet these words were the ordinary small change of their conversation during their stay in France and up to the time they landed on home shores.

The truth is the war with all its trimmings has passed from their minds like some nightmare. And that is well. The demobilization is complete, even to the slang the war produced.

Returning travelers report that the streets of Europe capitals still are filled with uniforms. But on American streets the uniform is a rare sight. The boys got out of it "tout suite" and jumped into their overalls. And who ever hears of them bragging about what they did in the war? Conversations on the streets are about baseball and never about Argonne and St. Mihiel.

They've forgotten they were heroes. And that's fine. Ah oui, as they used to say in the A. E. F.

Prewitt Moves to Plainview

R. E. Prewitt of Happy, Texas, who has recently assumed the management of Helen Temple Farm, Saturday moved his herd of registered Duroc-Jersey hogs, his flock of pure bred Mammoth Bronze Turkeys, and his flock of D. C. R. L. Red chickens to their new location at Helen Temple, five miles northwest.

At one time Helen Temple farm was one of the most noted hog farms in the Southwest, sheltering the famous Tom Frazier herd of Duroc-Jerseys. In recent years the herd has been allowed to deteriorate. Mr. Prewitt will use only the best animals from his own herd and that on the farm to build up the former reputation of the Helen Temple herd.—Plainview Herald.

New Dormitory for Girls

Cousins Hall, the new dormitory for the West Texas State Normal College, is nearing completion. The building and equipment will cost $155,000. The West Texas State Normal College is the first normal in Texas to get an appropriation from the legislature for the purpose of building a dormitory.

This new dormitory for girls is modern in all particulars. It is a concrete, brick, and steel building, and it will be lighted and heated from the local plant of the college. Every room has in it two large closets, and there are lavatories and toilets on every floor. It has forty-five living rooms, and each room will accommodate two girls. On each floor of this three story building there will be a member of the faculty, and the matron of the hall will be in charge. One large room has been set apart for the purpose of laundry work. This room is equipped with all modern conveniences so that girls who desire may do their own laundering.

RANDALL COUNTY NEWS

It is equipped with electric washers, electric irons, and it will be free to all girls who room at the hall. In the west end of the building and on the first floor is a large reception room 34 by 60 feet. This room is fitted up with comfortable furniture, and is intended as the center of the social life of the hall. The dining hall is 46 by 60 feet, and it will seat two hundred people.

Cousins Hall is located about three hundred feet east of the main building and concrete side walks will soon be built between the two buildings. Furniture is arriving daily for the hall.

The culinary department will be under the direct supervision of the Home Economics Department. No pains have been spared to make this hall an ideal home for the girls who attend the West Texas State Normal College.

Farmers Getting Good Stock

One of the facts brought out at the sale held recently at the Silver Crest farm near Hedley was that the farmers of this county are taking more kindly to a better grade of stock. The majority of the sales by far went to local men—men who were acquainted with the quality of the stock being offered. The man who bought in a Silver Crest sow already bred for less than five hundred dollars at that sale made a good investment. About seven hundred and fifty people were present at the sale, some two hundred women being numbered among the interested spectators.—Clarendon News.

WHY TEACHERS ARE LEAVING THE SCHOOLS

a Northern State with four teachers reports an annual salary of $300.

A 16-year-old boy greasing coal cars and dumping them in Hastings, Colorado, receives as much pay as the principle of the schools.

The average annual salary for rural teachers in a southern state this year was $354. The average for white men teachers was $385; for white women teachers $327.

Forty per cent of the rural teachers of the United States receive less than $500; 15 per cent less than $400 and a great many teachers receive from $100 to $300 a year for teaching school.

New York City, it has been estimated, spends $250,000,000 this year on automobiles and something over $36,000,000 on teachers.

Otis Alston had a rather gruesome and peculiar experience a few days ago as he was on his way to Lakewood in his truck. He saw a large rattlesnake lying in the road in front of him and proceeded to run over it with the truck; the reptile struck at the wheel and was whirled about and landed over the windshield. Mr. Alston, seeing what was coming, promptly shut off the gas and as he says, fell from the car, leaving his snakeship in full possession. After the machine came to a stop he investigated and found the snake gone. Mr. Alston says he saw and heard rattlers in every leaf that was blown by the wind for several days after this experience.—Carlsbad (N. M.) Current.

Treat the Seed Wheat

The presence of smut in almost every wheat field the past season renders it more necessary to treat seed wheat this fall than ever before, as practically all the wheat grown in the Panhandle has smut in it or was exposed to smut contamination by growing in close proximity to infected plants, or by being run through separators which had previously threshed smutty wheat; or that might have been infected by winds scattering spores from infected fields.

Smutty spores or seed may be easily killed by treating the seed wheat with a solution of formaldehyde and water; in the proportion of one pint 40 percent formaldehyde to 40 gallons of water. The solution may be sprinkled over the seed wheat as it is turned over and over on a tight floor or wagon sheet; or the wheat may be placed in a sack and immersed in the vessel containing the solution. The average person will secure better results by using the immersion method, as by this method there is less danger of not getting every seed in contact with the formalin solution. The method is simple. Place 40 gallons of water in a barrel or tank, and one pint of the 40 percent formaldehyde to the vessel and stir well; place about one bushel of the seed to be treated in an ordinary sack, tie out long; immerse the sack containing the seed in the barrel, shake up and down a few times as the sack is immersed; let remain in the solution from five to fifteen minutes; lift out of the barrel, place on drain board that will conduct the solution back into the barrel until dripping ceases; spread the sack containing seed in the sun 4 to 12 hours; place seed in drill as if seed had not been treated. In case of rain or cloudy weather it will be necessary to spread the seed on a tight floor and stir until dry.

The solution may be used as long as any remains. When it becomes too low to cover the desired quantity of wheat make up more solution in a separate vessel, and add to the barrel. Never try to guess at the amount of either the water or formaldehyde to add; if so the solution may contain too much formalin, in which case the germination of the wheat will be injured; or the solution may contain too much water; in that case the smut spores will not be killed.

The secret of success in treating grains for smut lies in bringing every seed in contact with the solution of the proper proportion of formaldehyde and water. Never guess at the quantities used. Measure carefully. —Harmon Benton, Potter County Agent.

Teach your son. It is the only remedy the world has ever known. —Josephine Daskam Bacon.

The American Flag Code

The American Flag is the symbol of the brotherhood of man; it stands for courage, for chivalry, for generosity and honor.

No hand must touch it roughly; no hand shall touch it irreverently.

Its position is aloft; to float over its children, uplifting their eyes and hearts by its glowing colors and splendid promise; for under the Stars and Stripes are opportunities unknown to any other nation of the world.

The Government commands the people to honor their flag; men and boys should uncover as they pass the vivid stripes which represent the life blood of brave men, and the stars which shall shine on forever.

It must be raised at sunrise; lowered at sunset.

It is not a plaything of the hour; it is a birthright of privilege and integrity.

It may not be used as a staff, or whip, or covering.

It shall not be marred by advertisement, nor desecrated on the stage.

It was born in tears and blood; it was baptized in blood and tears.

It has floated since June 14, 1777; over a country of benevolence, refuge and progress.

It must always be carried upright.

To bear the Star Spangled Banner is an honor; to own one is a sacred trust.

It is the emblem of Freedom, of Equity, of Justice for every person and creature as it floats unvanquished, untarnished over the open door of free education.

Keep but God's model safe, new men will rise to take its mould.—Robert Browning.

When is man strong until he feels alone!—Robert Browning.

The Victor in War

It is now almost two years since the world celebrated with hysterical joy the armistice, harringeo of returning peace. But peace has not come. The historian of the future will write of the armistice as the end of the violent phase of the great revolutionary wars; it led to a truce between certain great powers, but not to the final peace that everyone expected. The treaty of Versailles may prove no more conclusive than the peace of Amiens or the peace of Tilsit.

It is Russia, the nation that we wrote down as exhausted and helpless in 1917, that is the aggressive and, so far, the successful protagonist in the war today. Russia, like France of the Revolution, has been stimulated and energized by the ferment of the new ideas that have stirred the country since the fall of the Czar. It has felt, even in its defeat and weakness, in the breaking away of province after province, and in the constant interference of other nations in its domestic affairs, a strong revival of national spirit. Its resources great in spite of the mismanagement of its present masters, are largely turned to the use of its army. The Polish invasion united Russia; the Russian army today is commanded and officered by men of the old army, trained and capable men. Gen. Brusiloff is said to be at the head of the organization. Whatever is to be the future of the soviet government, it is today the government of Russia, defending the country against invasion, and promising to restore its former boundaries and its former influence in Europe.

The collapse of Polish resistance offers a great opportunity to the ambition of Lenin. He means apparently to make peace only in Warsaw and, if he finds the matter too difficult, to set up a soviet government there. Poland as a candidate for the Slav hegemony he means to wipe out. The Allies will protest, and events may in the end drive them to fight. But they can get to the scene of action only across Germany. Either they must buy German permission by yielding some important points in the Versailles treaty, or they must make up their minds to fight; for Germany will hardly stand by and see itself invaded and Russia dismembered.

German policy today requires a strong Russia. The Germans make no secret of the fact that an alliance between the two nations is their ultimate aim. It is the vision of a restored Russia and a revived Germany, in friendly understanding with the Moslem peoples, that troubles the minds of the British and French statesmen. If the new phase of the great war ends in that way, it will be central and eastern Europe that has won the war. There are those who think that what we mean by Western civilization is in greater peril today than it was in 1914 or 1918.

It is interesting to observe, however, that those who know best what is going on fear Russia more than they fear Bolshevism will overrun the world; they even believe that it wanes in Russia. The soviets have not made Russia happy or prosperous or peaceful. The leaders themselves admit that the peasants do not embrace Bolshevism as a theory and that the proletariat does not work well except under compulsion. Lenin is constantly making concessions of one sort or another to the despised bourgeois. He still has the power in his own hands, but he keeps it by surrendering by little the essentials of Bolshevism as we first knew it. A good many people look to see the army that his colleague, Trotsky, has created through the help of the generals of the old regime turn against the soviets; and they expect Brusiloff or another to play toward Lening the part that Napoleon played toward the Directory. But no one outside Russia knows enough to predict what will happen there.

What is certain is that pure Bolshevism has no chance of conquering France and Britain unless after such a crushing overthrow as Russia experienced three years ago. It is also apparent that Russia and Germany are gravitating steadily toward each other. Whether Lenin bolshevizes Germany, or whether reaction triumphs in both countries, there is reason to think that both will be implacably hostile to the democracies of France and England. The destruction of the British Empire and the reduction of France to powerlessness would be the aim of any such combination in eastern Europe. That is why there is so much uneasiness over the Polish breakdown. With Poland gone there is nothing to prevent Germany and Russia from falling into each other's arms. The foundations would be laid for another struggle, and it is not likely that the United States could, in its present mood, be induced to lend its aid again to the Allies.

The world war is not yet over, and it is by no means certain who will be the victor in the end.

What's in a Name?

A stalwart Swede stepped into a corner drug store. "I bane sick," said he to the clerk. "And I want some viskey."

"Nothing doing," answered the clerk. "Don't you know the country's dry? "But," he added, "you might be able to get some squirrel whiskey over there at that saloon."

Across the street the big Swede made known his wants.

"Squirrel whiskey!" yelled the astonished proprietor, "we don't have such a thing, but," in a whisper, "I can fix you up with a little Old Crow." The Swede shook his head. "I no want to fly," he answered, "I youst want to yump around a while."

How the Bees Work

Public Opinion: It is estimated that to collect one pound of honey 62,000 heads of clover must be deprived of their nectar, necessitating 3,750,000 visits from bees. It would seem that the reputation of the wonderful little insect for industry has not been overrated. Wax is a substance secreted by the bees, and in analagous to the fat or higher animals. To produce a single pound of wax, the bees must consume from fifteen to twenty pounds of honey. This expensive substance is used by the thrifty little insects with the greatest economy.

Formaldehyde Solution Prevents the Smut in Wheat

The northwest Texas wheat belt this year suffered quite a loss from smut in wheat and as a result there is unusual interest in methods of smut prevention. W. H. Darrow, county agricultural agent of Floyd county who has recently been appointed supervisor of the San Antonio district, in recognition of his success in Floyd county, was here this morning en route to San Antonio on business. Mr. Darrow, when asked about the methods of treating wheat for smut, stated that the most practical method he knew was sprinkling the wheat with a solution of formaldehyde, although there is an alternate method of submersing the sowed wheat in the solution, which is objectionable on account of the time required and also the amount of the solution. His suggestion is as follows:

"Sprinkle seed until thoroughly moist with solution of 1 pint of formaldehyde to 40 gallons of water, shoveling over repeatedly to distribute moisture evenly. Forty gallons will treat 60 bushels. Shovel into a pile and cover with sacks, canvas or blankets for two hours or over night. Dry by spreading in thin layer and stirring occasionally with rake. Seed may be sown when dry enough to run freely through the drill, setting the drill to show about 2 pecks more per acre, to allow for swollen condition of grain. If to be stored for several days or longer, dry thoroughly. Disinfect sacks, bin and drill, to prevent re-infection.—Plainview Herald.

Road Versus Railway

Springfield Republican: A somewhat gloomy view of the future of British railways is taken by Lord Montagu of Beaulieu, who in a recent article in the London Sunday Times declares bluntly that "Today, taking into account all charges from point of origin to destination road transportation is cheaper and more expeditious than transport by rail, except for very heavy goods in bulk, and for long distances." Conditions in England are, of course, quite different from those which obtain in this country because of the greater density of population and the fact that so much of the island is in close communication with the sea, making unnecessary the long haul for which the railway is still at an advantage as compared with motor transport. Yet from the remarkable development in this country of both automobile travel and truck transportation we can see how seriously the British railways might be hit by the conditions which Lord Montagu describes.

His figures go to show that if the Government were not subsidizing the railways to the extent of about $1,000,000 a week they would be bankrupt already. The highways with which they have to compete are, of course, also heavily subsidized by the immense sums spent upon their upkeep, only part of which comes back in the form of taxes upon vehicles. The roads have been immensely improved since motor traffic began, and these improvements will be continued and extended. Fuel for motors grows dearer, yet not in proportion to the increase in the operating cost of railways. The railways have been granted an increase of fares, but while this puts upon their patrons a more equitable charge for the increased cost of service given, it also obviously puts the railways at a still greater disadvantage in competing with the motor. Nor is it simply the well-to-do, owners of motor cars, who are deserting the railway for the road; in England the motor coach, known as the charabanc, is competing with the railways much as the inter-urban electric roads were doing in this country two decades ago. England needs its railways; apparently, till the situation clears, it will have to maintain them with little regard to the balance between profit and loss.

Democracy's Competitors

Honey Grove Signal: Some fellow in Central Texas is claiming McGregor will beat Neff 100,000 votes in the November election. If this fellow comes this way and is foolish enough to back his judgment we are sure of a new hat for Christmas.

Dallas News: The talk of beating the Democratic nominees in Texas is of a piece with the talk of defeating the Republican nominees in Maine. Such talk is always heard prior to each important State election, and ceases immediately after. The women vote in Maine last Tuesday, served to almost double the total number of voters, but didn't change the result, which means that most of the women, like most of their husbands, voted the Republican ticket. A similar thing will occur in Texas. The chance to elect a Republican or an "American" Governor in opposition to the Democratic nominee is about the same as for the Socialists to turn that trick—and heaven knows the Socialists, with all their chuckle-headedness, haven't had the least expectation of doing any better this year than they usually do. This being a justly celebrated free country, it is entirely permissible for as many parties as want to set up establishments and make claims of one kind or another. But it is a great waste of time and money and words and whangdoodle for any party to offer formal opposition to the Democratic party in Texas. It looks like the various oppositionists would learn this some time, granting that they are of the learning kind.

Are We Happier for Our Wealth?

"I writter after I have been home for two weeks," says Frederick Palmer in the September Harper's "while I have perspective for my judgment of impressions which are still fresh and distinct, though not as much so as on the first day, when I thought: 'Here is a nation which has been left a fortune without knowing just how to use it and enjoy it.'

"In Europe I was again and again reminded that we were the richest Nation in the world as the result of the war. When I mentioned this at home as a cheerful thought in the midst of our gloom it seemed of no more interest than if I had remarked that the Mississippi flowed into the Gulf of Mexico. In the last six months we had become even richer, yet the richer we became the unhappier we apparently became, as well we might if the wealth were not broadly distributed. Evidently it was or there would not be 7,000,000 motor vehicles of different kinds in the United States, and by the number of automobiles in a Nation these days you may judge of its prosperity.

"New York City has more than all England, London more than Paris, Paris more than Rome, a few taxis and private cars still ply in the streets of Berlin and in Warsaw the only cars that give a modern touch to the traffic of horse-drawn vehicles are those of the legations, the American relief workers and a few high officials—the intrigue of politics having in mind this rare perquisite.

"If we acquire a few more million automobiles and plumbers ride in $5,000 instead of $3,000 cars, I wonder if we may not develop acute melancholia, for the faces in the triumphant procession of democracy's luxury along our gasoline perfumed highways on Sunday mornings did not seem as happy as the faces of the holiday-makers whom I had seen on foot in the Bois de Boulogne, or those of the singing recruits for the army in Poland. Yet one ought to be happier, riding than walking. Else, why buy cars?"

The Origin of "Dixie"

Cleveland Press: A monograph in the London Financial Times on the history of the old Citizen's Bank of Louisiana, at New Orleans, reveals the origin of the name "Dixie Land"—the term applied now to all the Southern States and preserved in the famous Southern war song, "Dixie." Prior to the Civil War the Citizen's Bank, having the power to issue paper notes, issued several millions in bills in denominations of $10 and $20, but mostly $10. The $10 bills were engraved in French with the French word "Dix" featured on their backs. The bills became known as "Dixies" and this money becoming popular, Louisiana was referred to as the "Land of Dixies," or "Dixie Land." Eventually the term was so broadened as to apply to the Southern States. This seems a very acceptable explanation of the origin of the term, which has been the subject of so much discussion.

Habit and Promptness

Napoleon once invited his marshals to dine with him and to discuss important matters. As they did not arrive at the moment appointed, he began to eat without them. They appeared just as he was rising from the table. "Gentlemen," said he, "dinner is now over, and we will immediately proceed to business."

It is a rare thing to find a really successful man who has not strongly developed a habit of promptness.

A man who is constantly missing his train, who is late in keeping appointments and who is habitually behind time in meeting his bills, or his paper at the bank, creates a distrust in the minds of those who have dealings with him.

The whole structure of the business world rests on principles, and promptness is one of the most important.

A man who is not prompt in meeting his engagements cannot be relied upon, no matter how well he means.

A man who fails to report promptly for work inconveniences and retards all other workers associated with him—eventually he becomes a drag upon them.

No worker can claim for himself the privilege of tardiness without conceding it to all others—and if granted to all, disorder and confusion predominate.

Honestly of purpose alone will not compensate for tardiness.

Many young men have failed to promotion or lost good positions of the lack of punctuality.

There is no more desirable business qualification than this and no other so indispensable to a man of affairs, or to anyone who would save his own time and that of others.

"If a man has no regard for the time of other men," said Horace Greeley, "why should he have for their money? What is the difference between taking a man's hour or taking his $5.00? There are many men to whom each hour of the business day is worth many times $5.00."

When his secretary excused the lateness of his attendance by saying that his watch was too slow, Washington replied, "Then you must get a new watch or I another secretary."

How can one expect to succeed when his tomorrows are always mortgaged for the debt that should have been paid today?

The ready boy, or decisive man, the one always on the alert for the next thing, always prepared for the thing required, doing it at once, is the one who wins.

"In the dynamics of human affairs," said a learned man, "two qualities are essential to greatness—power and promptitude. The former is often the fruit of the latter. A man or woman who is impressed with the value of time will make every minute count to such purpose that his or her life will inevitably

Going Back to Nature

If we can only come back to Nature together every year, and consider the flowers and the birds and confess our faults and mistakes under the silent stars, and hear the river murmuring absolution, we shall die young, even though we live long; and we shall have a treasure of memories which will be like the twin-stem, and carry with us into the unseen world something which will make it worth while to be immortal.—Henry Van Dyke.

In my Father's house are many mansions.—Jesus.

Panhandle Will Lay Plans for Stocking Farms With Pure Hogs
By Silliman Evans, Staff Correspondent, in Star-Telegram.

Busily engaged in the greatest agricultural and commercial progress it has ever had, and in the midst of what appears the golden age of the Panhandle-Plains, leaders in this section of the country are realizing that probably the greatest havoc wrought by the drouths of several years ago is the practical disappearance of swine from the farms and ranches. When the dry sun burned like a copper disc in the sky, when vegetation sprouted, but never fruited, one year, and the next never sprouted at all, when there was no dew at the dawning, some of the more apprehensive residents of the Panhandle, and some of its misguided friends, feared that an irreparable injury was being done to the country.

The rains of last year came and they brought bounteous crops, the biggest crops in history. Rains continued to fall in 1919 and 1920 and the farmers have garnered a still bigger wheat crop and a multitude of small grain crops, row crops and other crops are filling barns, already bursting, with an over-plenitude of nature's products. The ranchers are restocking the range with better cattle than ever before; the barnyards, the last to render their tribute of poultry and eggs to the resuscitation of the dwindling fortunes of the farmers in the dry days of drouthy years are being replenished with pure bred poultry; but the hog wall, which dried under the incessant hot rays of rainless suns, and gave up its population when feed could not be raised, nor purchased, is still vacant.

Occupying an almost indispensable place on the farm, and the stock farm, in the years gone by, the hog, to a lamentable extent, has vanished from the Panhandle, and economic leaders realize that this must be corrected. Plans are now being put on foot by the leaders in the Panhandle-Plains Chamber of Commerce to inaugurate a campaign such as was waged years ago, instilling interest in the hog as an economic asset to every farm and stock farm, and to provide machinery for the distribution of breed sows all over the land.

When the drouths came the hog industry was among the most remunerative in the Panhandle. For years economic and farm leaders had encouraged the breeding of hogs. Banks had financed the distribution of brood sows, pig club boys had gotten pigs and raised them and knew the ins and outs of pig culture. Every farm had its hog pen; every stock farm its quota of hogs. The hog not only furnished smokehouse meat for the tables of the farmers, but made an extra addition to the income. The hog was almost a requisite. Great glory was the Panhandle's in the fact that most of the hogs on it were pure bred.

The drouth years produced a double effect which was suffered most visibly by the hog. The farmers were unable to raise feed. It is the fact that the hog thrives on the grain which is the Panhandle farmer's easiest crop, that makes him especially valuable on a Panhandle farm. If the feed market has an oversupply, or if the traffic system is so congested that the feed cannot be moved to market, a well populated hogpen furnishes a mint where the feed can enter and go to market in the form of a sleek hog, bringing home the bacon in the form of ready money.

The drouth years produced no feed and the grain fields were as barren as a billiard table. The hog on the Panhandle stock farm was left stranded in a desert. The very fact that this country is as large a contributor as there is, in a normal way, to the feed market of the world, operated, of course, to send the feed price upward. Feed rose to new price levels, and then sought an altitude record in a flight in which feed was entirely lost. Feed not only was quoted at exorbitant prices, but feed could not be bought at all. If it could have been purchased, the price being asked for it would have rendered it impossible as hog feed, but it could not be obtained. At the same time, these conditions brought about a tempting price for hogs and the porkers were all taken, the brood sow included, to the market and sold. In the main, the clean-out was absolute. No hogs were left.

The come-back of the Panhandle was precipitate. New herds of cattle were brought to the ranges; pure-bred livestock to the barn yards; the farmers jumped into the job of planting and harvesting with zest. The hog, always humble, was forgotten in the jumble.

These are the facts which are being now considered by the directors of the Panhandle-Plains Chamber of Commerce, according to Frank R. Jamison, secretary, who is holding conferences in various sections of the Panhandle and Plains countries with members of the Chamber, farmers and hog breeders. The latter constitute almost the only proprietorship of hogs in the land. These are the men who breed hogs exclusively, and breed the purest strains. Their hog farms are well populated, and it is the intention of Secretary Jamison to use their herds as the leaven of the whole loaf. They are the men with whom he is discussing the big job of restoring the hog to his pristine prestige.

Plans now in contemplation by Secretary Jamison and the Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce look forward to a meeting of bankers, hog fanciers, county farm demonstrators and agricultural agents, leading ranchers and stock farmers, and commercial secretaries of the Panhandle and Plains section, where ways and means of the rehabilitation of the hog to the Panhandle pens will be discussed. Recently Secretary Jamison conferred with several hog breeders in Donley county. There the Poland-China breed is foremost. Breeders of the Duroc, Jersey, and other breeds of hogs, are also being interested by Secretary Jamison.

Several counties are organizing county hog breeders clubs. These clubs are to take care of the local situation, carry on propaganda, and crystallize community interest. For instance the movers in the organization of the Donley County Hog Breeders Club plan to build a community sales pavilion. The hog auction, or hog sale, which is put on at regular intervals by the larger fanciers, is becoming events of section-wide interest, and people from all over the country come to them. Ample sales pavilions are requisites to a successful auction.

"The meeting will likely be called some time in January," said Secretary Jamison. "We want the hog fanciers interested primarily because of all men they most know the value of the hog. Then we will start a movement which will stimulate interest all over the Panhandle. The drouth has proved a blessing in disguise in many ways. For instance the chicken pen was depopulated of the domineer and the scrubs, it has been populated now with the pure-bred of every strain. It is that, precisely, which we propose to do in the come-back of the hog industry. We are going to lay stress on the necessity of the pure-bred hog; of his actual money value."

"There are in Texas some of the finest hogs in the country."

"We are conscious that within our own state there can be gotten the finest of hogs," said Secretary Jamison. "Therefore, whatever we might do in this regard we are going to stress the necessity of 'buying it in Texas.' That slogan ought to be applied to the buying of hogs, or livestock, or anything else, as well as to the purchase of manufactured products."

Some restocking has already gone on. This has largely been confined to the lower Plains. Many hogs have recently been brought into the Spur, Matador and Post vicinities. The biggest portion of them have come from Fort Worth.

Nature's economy is such that, even if the restocking of the hog pen has been belated, the hog will be at the end of the come-back race, although he was handicapped, along with the first to enter. The hog is prolific. Where the process of many months is required for the building up of a herd of cattle, a few sows, farrowing a litter of eight hogs semi-annually will soon build up a big population in the hog pens.

BACKACHE IS DISCOURAGING

But Not So Bad If You Knew How To Reach the Cause.

Nothing more discouraging than a constant backache. Lame when you awaken, pains pierce you when you bend or lift. It's hard to work or to rest. Backache often indicates bad kidneys. Canyon people recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Read this case: Ask your neighbor!

Mrs. W. E. Bates, Canyon, says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for some time. Often my back begins to ache and I get lame and sore. Sometimes I get so dizzy I almost fall over and I have spells of headache. I also feel tired and worn out. Then again my kidneys get out of order. Whenever I feel this way I begin taking Doan's Kidney Pills and a few never fail to give me instant relief."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Bates had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mrs. Buffalo, N. Y.
