The bond issue went over. The ndreds of thousands of dollars rere spent and the roads were all right and shiny with newly graded itches, a few new bridges, graveled nud holes, and improved appearances general. For a while everybody as happy, even if taxes were raised bit. They were getting more than their money's worth, and they knew

But a strange thing happened. The roads began to show unmistakable signs of wear. Folks began to wonder why they were not fixed. It was discovered that the bond issue money had all been spent on temporary re-pairs and that no provision was made for road maintenance. It was also discovered that the work had been put afoot without the constant advice of competent engineers. And sad to say, it was also discovered that the county leaders, honest men though they were, had pulled a terrible bonehead when they plunged into a bond issue without careful planning ahead.

was started. But when the bond issue was started. But when their taxes are paid at the beginning of each year they find that they are still paying for the roads; and their children will help pay for them when the old home places are passed down.

representative Hamilton county cooperate in the plan.

The parade wil form immediately afternoon is prophetic, this county will not suffer such a fate as its sister county not so far from here. Instead of saying, "Yes, we want a bond issue in order to get good lateral roads in Hamilton county," and then plunging headlong in to proposal, those representatives decided to appoint a committee of seven men, from as many communities, who will have the job of working out details of the plan.

Local representatives who won out the form immediately after the Lions Club luncheon. which after the Lions Club luncheon. Whill after the Lions Club luncheon. which after the Lions Club luncheon. There is little objection, it seems, to any plan that will insure good— PERMANENTLY GOOD—lateral roads for Hamilton county. It has been the position of the Hico committee, appointed by the Lions Club, that no plan which calls for temporary improvement alone should be considered. The committee was also authorized to stand for a plan which would be backed in every detail by competent upkeep on the roads.

The bond issue as proposed at the meeting last Friday, it appears, calls for an expenditure of approximately will move here with his family at $600 to $700 per mile on county roads, exclusive of all state highways. With than will be necessary. And the question of maintaining the roads after they are improved has been only partially settled

Good roads are the crying needs of Hamilton county today. And a mere handful of citizens are against them. In the face of experiences of other counties, it is known that good roads can be successfully financed only through the voting of bond issues.

There is a way by which Hamilton county may have good roads-per-manently good ones. It is up to that committee of several men, who are enter into road building, to submit will be used for all cooking, and the facts and figures to show that a bond company is making a special offer

It is up to every citizen in Hamilto sup to every citizen in Hamilton county to cast a vote for permanent good roads when the committee offers a plan that has the backing of competent road builders and the experiences of other counties.

World War Veterans to Meet Here Tonight

Whether you are eligible to become a member of the American Le-gion, you are especially requested to come to the Legion meeting Friday night, April 12, at the city hall, eight o'clock. Bring your souvenirs and be prepared to tell how you CAPTURED them, and it is not expected that you remember the exact particulars. The Legion wants all men who served in the World war to be present, and would like to have the veterans of both Civil War and Spanish War as our guests. Reorganizations will be completed, and plans laid for the coming year. Be present and bring a buddy with you.

MORE EGGS NEXT WINTER

WHEN THEY ARE WORTH MORE:

That's a fair question to ask yourself now before the chick hatching-raising season is too far along.

To insure you money making winter layers, we have selected the best and money making strains in this territory. "Good Layers Produce Good Layers."

Vitality has not been sacrificed to get this unusual laying quality. We invite you to inquire about the quality of our chicks. Ask some of those who have bought their chicks from us this season.

Practically every chick we have sent out this season is laying. We are anxious to see you taking in more egg money.

What the Gray House Hid

The Mystery of a Haunted Mansion

by Wyndham Martyn

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Hilton Hanby, prosper-ous New York merchant, has realised a long-cherished ambition by purchas-ing a country place—the Gray house, mear Pine Plains, An unknown woman, who gives her name as Miss Selenos, a former tenant of the Gray house, calls at his office and warns him that the house is under a curse. Further alarm-ing details are impressed upon Adolf Smucker, Hanby's secretary, by a man who claims to have been chauffeur for Sir Stanford Seymour, former occupant of the place.

CHAPTER II.—The Hanbys laugh off the warnings they have received both from Miss Selenos and from Smucker's acquaintance, as some form of practical joke, but they are shocked when they hear that the caretaker whom they have put in charge of the Gray house, a man ramed Kerr, has been mysteriously murdered. Declining to be terrorized, however, they go out to their new home, with their two sons. Junior and dim, and their eldest daughter, Celia.

CHAPTER III—Appleton a clerk of Douglas and Smith, the agents through whom Hanby bought the Gray house, explains to Pelham, that a dangerous pond near the house, in which several children have been drowned, has since been filled in, but he urges Pelham to dissuade Hanby from occupying the Gray house. Hanby and Junior learn that the caretaker was known to the police as "Red Chapin" and had a bad record Chapin had stolen references from a man named Kerr to secure the caretaker's job. Hanby considers asking Leslie Barron, long an admirer of Celia, and a husky youth, to join the house party. CHAPTER III-Appleton, a clerk of CHAPTER IV.—Mrs. Hanby declares she likes the house and will not be frightened into giving it up. Pelham becomes a member of the household. with the official title of "house detective." Over the telephone Hanby is warned by a woman not to subject his family to the dangers of the Gray house. She tells him his caretaker was killed because he was mistaken for Hanby. He is worried, but Mrs. Hanby insists on treating the affair as a joke. Leslie Barron arrives. making four able-bodied members of the Hanby household, ready to cope with any difficulty that may arise.

CHAPTER V—A phone call from a man who declares he is an old acquaintance of Hanby's and interested in ornithology, but whom Hanby cannot identify, urges him, if he goes to live in the Gray house, to preserve a part of the grounds as a bird sanctuary. The idea appeals to Hanby and he makes the promise. The Hanbys take possession of the Gray house. At breakfast on the morning after their arrival they receive a letter from Sir Stanford Seymour—now living in England—which makes it clear that the man who pretended to have been Sir Stanford's chauffeur was an impostor.

CHAPTER VI—A stranger introducing himself as Frederick Appleton, calls at the Gray house and is welcomed because of his interest in bird life. Hanby foresees trouble in connection with work to be done on the estate with which he is unfamiliar, and gladly engages Appleton as his agent, with quarters over the garage. His work is eminently satisfactory and he becomes a popular member of the household.

CHAPTER VII—Smucker, out of a tob after the loss of his position with Hanby, becomes embittered against him as the author of his misfortunes, and plans revenge. He goes to Pine Plains and while skulking in the Gray house grounds is felled by a blow which leaves him unconscious. Hanby meets his friend Douglas, of Douglas, of Douglas, of Douglas, of Mand been in his employ, is untrustworthy. Hanby informs the family, who are as much astonished as he had been. That night, after a quarrel with Celia. Leslie Barron determines to leave the house. He writes a note to Celia, but puts it in his pocket and departs. On his way to the railroad, through the grounds, he meets a stranger with whom, after a sharp interchange of words, he fights, knocking his opponent out. While Leslie is bending over his unconscious foe Appleton appears and treacherously fells Leslie.

CHAPTER VIII—Returning to CHAPTER VIII—Returning to contributor to the literature of the subject nor a donor of funds for bird conservation. Some of your friends have been playing a joke on you."

Half an hour later the professor had changed his clothes to khaki and puttees. He was armed with sketch books, notebooks, and a costly camera. He declined any aid. He even resented it. Every now and then it could be seen that he despised the amateur ornithologist. His luncheon had been put up for him, and he promised to be in time to dress for dinner.

CHAPTER VIII—Returning to consciousness. Leslie is greatly puzzled over the situation. He is taken by a man called Luigi, a powerful individual, to Appleton and a woman companion. Appleton has Leslie's note to Celia, which he says he will deliver, leading the girl to believe her lover has departed willingly, and no search for him will be made. Leslie perceives the situation and almost gives up hope.

The day on which, as the Hanby family supposed, young Barron had taken his early morning departure, saw the arrival of half a dozen visitors. His absence was in a measure overshadowed. Mrs. Hanby spoke of Leslie, and hoped that there had been po quarrel. Celia assured her mother that he was no more than a friend, and that she was well satisfied to be rid of him for a little while,

Dina Hanby put her arm about the girl's shoulder.

"Do you expect me to believe you?" she asked. "I wonder what was in that letter he wrote to you!"

"Here it is," Celia said. "If you can interpret what he means by threatening to 'jump off the road for good,' I should like to know." "I don't understand references to a wild faun," said Mrs. Hanby. "That was nothing," Celia replied.

"Here's dad with his house detective. Not a word to them! I'm going to play tennis with my new cousin. He looks most attractive. I've often wanted to contrast Ann Arbor and New Haven.

Dina looked at the two as they sauntered to the courts. Leslie had been very unwise to go just now, she thought.

You two look as if you were conspiring," she said to her husband.

s few weeks back. He remarked that it was beneath the dignity of a lord of the manor to do his own sleuthing. Bill was boosting himself for the job."

"Have I fallen down?" Bill demanded. Hanby's bantering tone ceased. Dina could see that something worried him. "Bill," he said, "you have; but I shame myself, too. I assumed, rather illogically, that when Miss Selenos proved merely an emerald in disguise, we had been making mountains from molehills. Seymour's letter puzzled me; but when nothing happened, I put that aside. There was one other threat."

"The woman who said that Red Kerr was killed because he was like you in build? Oh, Hil, you don't think that was anything serious?"

"It prevents us from being dull," replied her husband, laughing. "I find I rather thrive on suspense, and certainly this house has given us enough surprises one way and another. I'm now due to show it to Tom Burton. He's a man who always has a hobby-some sort of bug or other. I've got to listen. Lords of the manor have their duties."

"Do you think he's nervous?" Bill Pelham asked, as he disappeared. "Not a bit," replied Mrs. Hanby. "He's getting annoyed, and that means that he wants to fight. His mental reactions are quite simple. Look to your laurels, Bill, or he will get ahead of you in this affair. I wonder if there is anything in it!" She turned her head to where her husband was walking with Professor Burton, whose son was trying to impress Cella with the idea that a college boy, at twenty, stands on an intellectual eminence not easily comprehensible to others. Professor Burton held a chair in philosophy, but it was with living things that his lelsure was occupied. Mrs. Burton and Mrs. Hanby were cousins.

"No," said the professor, "I've long ago given up the coleoptera in favor of something more fascinating. I started by way of the reptiles, and came logically to the birds.'

"Logically?" said Hanby. "I don't see that, but then I'm ignorant in these matters. If you're interested in birds, you've come to the right spot, Tom. I've got about the best bird sanctuary in the state."

On his way to it Hanby poured into Professor Burton's ears some of the wisdom that had come to him over the wire from the unknown millionaire ornithologist. Hanby's memory was good, and he forgot nothing.

"You flatter me," said the other, when he finished. "You have quoted almost verbatim from my article published in the May number of Popular Natural History,'

"So that's where he got it from!" Hanby commented, a trifle ruffled. "I thought the old faker was giving me something from his own published Hanby related the incident. Professor Burton shook his head.

"You must have made a mistake in the name. Remember, Hil, this is my pet hobby, and I know every writer on our birds. I'm president of my State Ornithological association, and corresponding member of a score of others. I'm in touch with every dinner.

He was glad, as he fought his way along, that he was armed with leather gauntlets and stout clothes, Nature had placed about this little sanctuary a seemingly impenetrable barrier.

He had begun to despair of reaching the distant mound when he saw that this solid hedge came to an end. He stepped from it to a path worn by the foot of man-a path three feet across, bearing the impress of recent treading.

Professor Burton set out to follow the path to its end. Presently it brought him to a stream, sunk at least ten feet below the surrounding ground. It was this stream, he supposed, which had been diverted in order that the twenty-acre lake half a mile away might be fed. He resumed his silent walk along the path. The acrid smell of a cigar smote his nose. He knew the noisome long and narrow cigars which only native Indians enjoy. Then the odor was wafted from him, and he found his path dropping toward the stream level. The professor stopped. He had suddenly encountered a stranger, It would be difficult to say which of the two seemed the more amazed The professor looked upon a small but well-proportioned man dressed with conservative elegance. The stranger's face was florid, and his mild blue eyes were accentuated in size by reason of strong lenses. Mr. Appleton, for his part, thought he had run across an inquiring scout master laden with all the impedimenta that his position demanded. Burton was tall and slight, and suggested erudition. "How did you get here," Mr. Apple-

"In order to make my position clear," he said frankly, "I must term myself a sanitation expert. Mr. Hanby has heard that former tenants of the Gray house have suffered from sewer-gas poisoning. He does not wish to alarm his family and visitors. I am, therefore, making a sort of secret investigation, Much water settles here, as the luxuriant foliage shows. I have been commissioned to determine upon the healthfulness of this spot, and to make what recommendations I see

"Before doing so. I should like you to come with me and see more. You cannot possibly judge from here." Professor Burton followed the other along a winding pathway, until be was in the thicket's very center. When his guide paused on the edge of an opening, the professor exclaimed upon the oddity of a lake, filled in, as be had supposed, being open instead.

"It was only partially filled in," Mr. Appleton told him. "When I took charge of the work, I had my own views-very interesting views, too," he added, chuckling, "Oh, dear me, yes! They amuse me even now. You can settle a moot point for me.' He looked over the edge of the opening, gazing intently at some low bushes whose roots were in the moist "What is that?" Appleton asked. "Look at it and tell me." Professor Burton moved toward the edge and peered down. "Is this one of the things that amuse you?" he demanded.

"Yes," said Mr. Appleton, smiling. With that he gave the other a push. The professor, with waving arms, sought to recover his balance, but failed. He went up to his knees in mud. His precious camera had parted company from him. The spectacle of the amiable gentleman with the florid face, who smiled down at him. angered him. He shook a muddy

"You shall pay for this outrage!" he shouted. "Perhaps," said Appleton cryptical-

"but not just yet." Mr. Appleton gave another of his excellent owl imitations. In a few moments Luigi Bartoli joined him.

"In order that he might not escape," Appleton explained, "I had to push him down there. He enjoyed it less than I. Your task, Luigi, is to get him out and put him with the man who came first."

Adolf Smucker had proved a tractable prisoner. In reality he lacked the courage to do anything that might bring him punishment. He realized that he was the prisoner of three men who had powers of life and death over him. Of Appleton he saw almost nothing.

"You Shall Pay for This Outrage!" He

James Delaney, the second in command, knew Smucker's sort, and despised him. Luigi was his jailer. He enjoyed incendiary talk. The day could not come too quickly which would permit of looting, unattended with death penalties. By this time Smucker was so much the prey of delusions that he had almost forgotten his home and family. He brooded upon the chaotic day when, by the alchemy of strange events, he should be high among those whose mission it was to destroy. Luigi, who cringed to capital in the guise of Appleton, would be an early

Adolf Smucker looked up, that afternoon, to find his rell invaded by a stranger-not such a man as the previous young capitalist in evening dress, but a worker clad in muddy khaki, stained and torn.

Professor Burton wondered at the heartiness of his welcome. After he had been an hour in Smucker's company, he spoke incisively.

"Your mania," he said, "is termed dementia praecox. Our word 'precocious' comes from the common root, It means that your intellect is unable to assimilate the ideas you crowd into it. Be kind enough to leave me in silence. I find such twaddle as yours extremely tedious."

Infuriated at this, Smucker attacked the professor. He was rescued by Luigi. The professor was bigger, stronger, and in a rather evil temper. Luigi dragged him to another small stone room and shut the

"What the devil?" said Leslie Barron, rudely awakened. "I am not the devil," snapped the professor, "but I feel like him. I have been brutally beaten. A Caliban from southern Italy has promised to twist my head from by neck. I am in no mood for the ordinary social amenities."

"Another nut!" sighed Leslie. "Tell me, if you've any decency left, whereabouts I am.'

"You are in what my cousin Hilton Hanby terms a bird sanctuary. You, I take it, are one of the birds.

presume that I am another." "I was blackjacked by that infernal Appleton. I had an idea that I'd been put in an automobile and taken miles away."

Lesile recounted the misadventures he had suffered.

"Never mind!" said the other. "You will be rescued when they get me

"Cheery little optimist, aren't you?" Leslie retorted. "That man Appleton is the devil. He'll arrange it so that you won't be looked for."

"Impossible!" said the professor. Leslie Barron was right. Appleton, who had a skill with the pen that might have earned him a great name among forgers, was at that very moment looking at Professor Burton's notes and forging a letter. He called to mind the professor's way of speaking. This is what Mrs. Burton read:

Have sustained injury to corner of right eye through a thorn spike. In-advisable to trust to local physician. Have accepted offer of passing motorist to go to a specialist. Do not wor-ry. Will telephone you from the city.

"Tom is always nervous about his eyesight," Mrs. Burton declared. "It is just like him to rush to see a specialist. Oh, why was I out?" "You couldn't have done anything if you had been here," her cousin said, comforting her. "We shall have a telephone call before long." But nothing was heard from Professor Burton. (Continued next week)
