HICO, TEXAS, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1930

NUMBER 17

Here In HICO

What are hard times? How often do they come and when do they leave? That is a question to puzzle the best of economists, and a problem that is hard to solve to the complete satisfaction of any thinking man or woman. Some say times are hard when crops are short—others say things are in a bad way when prices are low. Yet neither of these statements holds true every time, for short crops sometimes bring high prices and large yields at low prices swell the banks with money at certain times. When crops are bad and prices low at the same time, is that any indication that hard times are present in the most evident manner possible? We say no, and we'll tell you why.

Retrospection brings the memory of war times—when indeed a boom was on over the entire country. Money was flush, but were those good times? Was the sacrifice of our brave soldiers and the mental anguish concerning the welfare of our loved ones a good thing? Were we sure that the United States would come out victorious, and that our homes would remain our own and our future secure? For our part we don't want too much of that kind of prosperity.

Think of the many years which have been considered "good years" when money was easy and a good profit was made by farmer, merchant and professional man. Wasn't there always a fly in the ointment—a lot of things happening to spoil the pleasure that had been anticipated through prosperity?

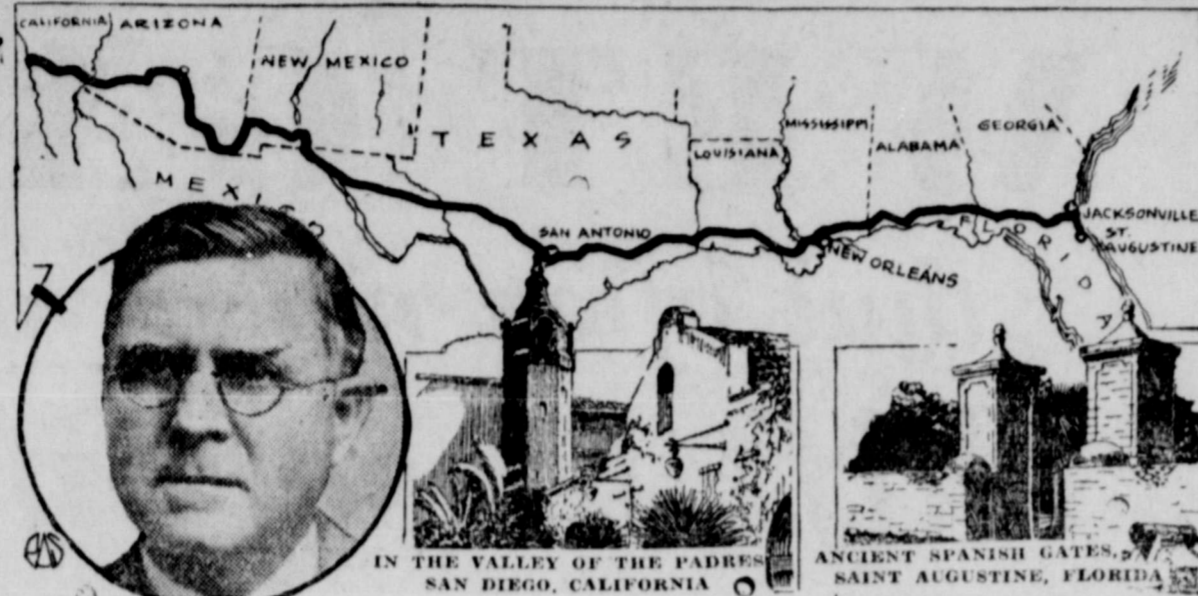

Sickness, epidemics, floods, wars and domestic troubles—an endless train of events can be remembered easily which were worse than not getting rich quick. While money has become to be considered as a very necessary item for the enjoyment of life, other things enter into the picture, and the same person will think a long time before he says times are worse than they ever were before.

Cotton is down, that's a fact. It ought to bring more money, but in the "good old days" often recounted to this writer, when the streets of Hico were lined with cotton from one end of the town to the other, what price was cotton bringing? How many farmers were finding a ready market for their poultry, eggs and produce, and selling enough of these products to keep them going between crop seasons? How often did you hear the statement that times were hard and there seemed to be no salvation for the country? Equally as often as now, we find that the cost of living has increased, but don't we get a better living for our money now? Things that used to be classed as luxuries for the rich alone are now commonplace with the most modest of us. Automobiles, radios and a great number of other things add to the pleasures of living, and there is still existent a high regard for our fellow citizens. Friendships are as strong or stronger. And education has added its share to the fulfillment of the dreams of our ancestors.

Don't be a silly optimist, but on the other hand shun the appearance of being a gloomy pessimist. More men come to their death through worrying about unavoidable situations than are killed by starvation or lack of means of support. If there should come upon us a terrible scourge of sickness—if a cyclone should wipe the town and countryside off the map—if everybody owed more than they could ever pay and burglars and thieves plied their trades on every hand, the Hico might be classed as suffering from hard times. But with the spirit of friendship and consideration for our fellow men in existence as it is now—with most families having at least a living and farmers in general paying their bills and getting by under adverse conditions—with good churches, good schools and good social organizations of every type, in addition to good business houses, good business men and good citizens, this country is, we say, in good shape. We are hardly ever called upon to record a burglary, or any of the kindred crimes that are much in evidence elsewhere, and we may leave our home in the morning with the assurance that nothing will happen there to endanger the life or safety of our family, and that our belongings will be safe from the pilfering hands of cheap robbers and thieves.

Business is getting better in Hico, farmers are getting in better shape than they thought would be possible a few weeks back, and while no one is expecting a boom, nobody wants one. Let's all take a hitch in our belt, and look at the bright side for awhile, if only for the novelty of the thing.

Good Crowds In Town Saturday And "Cow Day"

Local merchants report increased business during the past few days, and the fall buying season, which has been delayed through various reasons bids fair to open up immediately. Some lines are showing more improvement than others, with the dry goods and grocery stores coming in for the greater share.

Last Saturday witnessed a large crowd of shoppers, who although were a little late in getting in, nevertheless availed themselves of the opportunity to supply their needs at present low price levels of commodities.

Cow Day, the regular monthly event held the last Wednesday in each month, attracted a large crowd on Wednesday of this week, and interest was greater than for some months past. Mrs. Ella Bullard, who resides in the east part of town, bought the registered Jersey male on the special offer of the Hico Lions Club, and secured a fine animal. It is announced that there will be two registered Jersey heifers offered next Cow Day, and those who have needs to supply will find it to their advantage to trade in Hico and take advantage of the liberality and thoughtfulness of local merchants.

CONGRESSMAN O. H. CROSS VISITED FRIENDS IN HICO LAST FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

Congressman O. H. Cross, who makes his home in Waco during the recess of the congressional body, was in Hico last Friday afternoon, and stayed over that night, leaving Saturday morning.

While here he took advantage of the opportunity of meeting his many friends in this city, and visiting around among the citizens and in the stores considerably. Calling at the News Review office he found the editor out, but left word that he was at the beck and call of any of the citizens of this community at any time he might serve them in his official capacity, or be of service to them in any way.

Mr. Cross has been a friend to Hico in the past, and his assurance of cooperation is noted with pleasure. He seems to realize the duty of the responsible office which he holds, and is found ready to aid in every worthy matter that is brought to his attention.

Mr. Cross made some nice remarks about Hico and the business interests, and also seemed pleased to find the country in as good shape as he did. His compliments were appreciated, and he was invited to come back as often as he could and enjoy association with his many friends in and around Hico.

Word received by J. P. Rodgers, Sr., Wednesday, from his daughter Miss Thoma was to the effect that her hand had been taken out of the cast and improvement was rapid, although it was not known at that time whether she would recover the use of her fingers or not.

She had hoped to be home last Sunday for a visit, but had to wait at least another week. Her many friends hope she will soon recover completely from the accident in which the hand was so badly cut, and be at home again.

Business Tide Turns At Last, Lamont Says

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—A silver lining to the clouds of business depression that have hovered over the United States in recent months was discerned Monday by Secretary Lamont.

"It is perfectly clear," the Commerce Secretary said in a statement, "that business on the whole has ceased a marked decline, which was characteristic of a number of earlier months and there are some distinctly encouraging features."

Mr. Lamont added that the most encouraging signs were the growth of export trade as revealed by August statistics and the distinct increase in retail trade in this country.

"The increase of exports during August," he said, "was more than is customary at this season. The gain already manifested in retail trade is more than usually occurs at this season. Moreover, stocks of retail stores are exceptionally low and there is good reason to believe that their purchases from manufacturers and wholesalers will increase materially."

Mr. Lamont added that the business men already are buying raw materials far ahead of the current consumption and that this was a natural reaction to the present low level of commodity prices.

The Government, the Secretary said, is not responsible for the extra buying.

"Every good executive," he explained, "knows more about his business than anyone else possibly can know and sound business men do not have to be told that a low peak in commodity prices represents a signal for intelligent buying."

Ad. Found His Pig.

Last week the News Review was requested to run an ad stating that J. W. Fairley had found a stray pig and held same at his place for the owner to call.

Asa Bullard, who lives nearby, had lost a pig, and searched everywhere in the neighborhood, but upon reading the ad knew just where to go. He dropped in at the office Tuesday and paid for the pig back last Saturday.

MARRIED

Miss Alice Loyd and Mr. C. L. Spinks were united in marriage at the J. M. Aiton home Saturday, when Elder J. M. Aiton performed the marriage ceremony.

Both come from prominent families residing northwest of Iredell, and will make their home in that section also.

Sinclair Refining Co. Takes Lease On Blair's Gas Station

A. Fauquet, District sales manager for the Sinclair Refining Company, was in Hico last Saturday completing arrangements and details of the trade recently made whereby that company leased the filling station at Blair's Chevrolet Sales and Service. All Sinclair products will be handled in the future, making this a 100 per cent Sinclair station, it was announced. Mr. Blair will continue to operate the gasoline and oil business, and the same force will be employed under the new arrangement.

Four new automatic motor-driven pumps of the latest type have been installed, enhancing the appearance of the property and making for convenience in waiting on the trade. Mr. Blair states that he considered the move a wise one, in view of the fact that it would enable him to offer a higher type of service and better inducements to his gasoline and oil customers than has been possible in the past.

The Sinclair Company, having recently bought the Pierce-Petroleum Company interests effective July 1, are getting their message to the public through a large advertising program, embracing newspaper and magazine advertising and radio broadcasting. M. L. Whisenant, local agent, calls special attention to the radio program—each Monday and Friday afternoon at 6:45 from Station KRLD, Dallas, at which time three of the most noted movie stars have been engaged to put on a program.

Mr. Whisenant, who has been in Hico since last December as local agent for the Pierce organization, continues in the same capacity with the combined Pierce-Sinclair group, and reports a nice increase in his business locally since he has been in this field.

Lion President Doesn't Believe In "Fooling Around"

Holding up the tradition of Lionism, which is keeping things moving all the time, President Barrow last Friday exercised his authority wisely and upon finding that there was nothing further before the meeting, dismissed the Club about 15 minutes ahead of the regular time.

A short but peppy meeting was the result, Lion Secretary Persons had nothing on his desk, and no business came up for discussion, and although a pleasant round-table discussion ensued for a short time, the adjournment resulted immediately.

Lion E. R. Lynch was introduced as a visitor, having missed a number of meetings in succession, but promised to be more faithful in attendance in the future.

ADDITIONAL DISTRICT CHAIRMAN APPOINTED FOR SCOUT CAMPAIGN

These District Chairmen are in turn appointing Captains and Team members who will make the calls during the campaign for funds October 4th to 12th.

The first District to report complete is District No. 8, headed by Mayor C. P. Davis, who has called a meeting of his committee for Tuesday evening when all details of the campaign will be explained by Virgil Williams, the Director of the campaign.

On request of Scout Leaders of Limestone and Freestone Counties, Mr. A. J. Lawrence, Scout Executive, met with a committee of Scout Leaders from these two counties and completed details for joining this additional territory to the Heart O' Texas Boy Scout Council. All the towns in these counties will participate in the Finance Campaign for building a permanent camp. The organization of committees to take part in the campaign will be completed this week and announcements will be made later as to district chairmen and team members. This will add several active Scout towns to the council, and the new territory fits Council for administration of very well into the plans of the Scouting.

VISITORS IN HOME OF NEW HICO RESIDENTS

Mrs. J. W. Crawford and daughter, Miss Maurine Crawford, have been visiting in the home of their parents and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Sweatman for the past few days. Their home is in Poyote.

Mr. and Mrs. Sweatman have just recently moved to Hico from their ranch near Carlton, which embraces a tract of 2250 acres, on which he has 1000 head of sheep and about 100 head of cattle. He has owned the ranch for 15 years, and made his home there for a time before moving to Hico about a month ago. They have also lived at Corsicana and Dublin.

Mr. Sweatman stated that they were liking their new home fine, having secured a house in the west part of town, and indicated that he was well pleased with his investment in this section.

Texas has one and a half times as many farms as any two other states in the Union, 465,646. Texas has about 14 per cent of all the farms in the United States.

Party of Tourists Visit Hico After Spending 21 Weeks on the Road

A great many Hico people were interested in a large Cadillac automobile that drove into town last Saturday morning, on whose sides and in every available spot over the entire outer surface were stickers and signs from hotels and places scattered over a wide territory. No sooner had the car stopped, however, than hand-shaking came to be the order of the day, and the car was found to contain a party of tourists who were not strangers in Hico, even though it had been some time since they had been in this part of the country.

G. W. Garrett, J. E. Richards, wife and daughter, and John W. Gardner were the occupants of the car. Mr. Garrett will be remembered here as having been a native son. His father settled on a place east of town in 1875, before the town of Hico was existent in its present location. The old rock house which his father built still stands. After reaching his maturity, he became railroad agent and telegraph operator at the station here and held these positions for some time, afterward being transferred to Walnut Springs from which place he moved to California 31 years ago. Saturday was the first time he had visited Hico in 31 years, but nevertheless he was met with gusto by his old friends, and seemed to be able to find many of his old-time cronies. He makes his home in Southern California, at Whittier, and like all other residents of that golden state, thinks a lot of his adopted home. At the same time he has a place in his heart for Hico and seemed to be enjoying his visit here.

John W. Gardner, who is a brother of Mrs. Zach Medford, is another Californian who was loaned to that state by Hico. He has made more frequent visits back to his old home, but now makes his residence in Los Angeles. Mr. Gardner also came from a pioneer family of this section, and thinks so much of the country and the people that he plans to spend about a month here visiting with his friends and renewing old acquaintances.

J. E. Richards, who with his wife and daughter were the ones responsible for the other old-timers' return to the haunts of their childhood, is a native of Waco, but has relatives and friends here. They now make their home at San Antonio, where Mr. Richards has two thriving eating houses, "The Black Cat" at Alamo and "Comer's," and "The Wild Cat" across on the other side of town. He stated that he probably had more people in either of his two establishments than were cared for in any other one restaurant in the United States. Several months ago they planned a vacation trip to the western and northwestern states, and have been on the road in their car for 21 weeks, having covered a portion of 17 different states, and at the northern boundary went across the line to Canada. While in California they visited with Mr. Garrett and Mr. Gardner and would hear no excuses when they invited the latter two to make the return trip to Texas with them. That was their main idea in the beginning, they stated, and the idea seemed to have appealed to their guests for they prevailed on the Californians to come back with them. All reported that they had had a wonderful journey and had seen many sights of interest.

And the appearance of the car bore them out in this statement. The only amazing fact connected with the affair is that they were able to visit so many places in so short a time. Of course 21 weeks enables one to cover a lot of ground in a high-powered automobile, but the stickers on the car indicated that they had made an almost complete coverage of the territory.

Mr. Garrett cited one amusing incident, stating that while they were stopped in front of a hotel in Roswell, he noted that a negro boy kept circling the car, and giving it a close inspection. "What do you want, boy," he asked, "Boss, I see just tryin' to find a place on dis here car to put another sticker" was the honest reply.

It would be impossible to give a complete account of the places visited by this tourist party, and in fact to tell even a small part of their experience. This reporter became so interested in their conversation that he failed to secure the usual amount of data as to whom they were planning to visit and who their relatives here were. But they announced that they intended to stay here a few days in the Medford home, and also promised that they would drop around again to talk with us, so probably we may be excused for our negligence.

If a time ever comes when this scribe is in San Antonio and hungry, (which he will doubtless be, neither being a novel experience with him) it is a foregone conclusion that Mr. Richards will have another visitor either at his Wild Cat or his Black Cat, for he just looked like the kind of a fellow who knew how to put out a meal that would satisfy any kind of an appetite. And in addition he and his wife and daughter seem to be adept in the art of choosing traveling companions, for a more congenial party than this it has never been our pleasure to meet.

Keeping Up With TEXAS

J. H. Branard, about 50, registrar of the Federal Land Bank of Houston, was charged with embezzling $19,000 in a complaint filed Tuesday afternoon before United States Commissioner Winston McMahon. The complaint alleged embezzlement of 19, $1,000 bonds issued by the Joint Stock Land Bank of Dallas. The date was fixed at "about March 24, 1930."

The first Protestant church in Texas—near Nacogdoches—recently celebrated its ninety-second anniversary.

Mrs. P. L. Burke, 75, of Van Alstyne, was shot at her home Monday night when her husband mistook her for a burglar. The charge from a double-barrel shotgun struck Mrs. Burke in her thigh. She was taken to a hospital at Sherman. Her condition was serious.

Fanned by a stiff wind from the southeast, fire at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon threatened to wipe out the entire east and north-east section of the town of Honey Grove, the blaze having originated in the seed house of the Honey Grove Cotton Oil Company. With velocity almost unimaginable the flames swept to the huge hall house across the street, and within a few minutes, both structures were a total loss, including thousands of tons of new seed and hulls. The oil mill office and several negro dwellings in the same vicinity were also destroyed.

Endowment of $200,000,000 for the University of Texas from its oil royalties and bonuses alone is predicted within forty years by the Land Commissioner. In little more than seven years it has received over $13,000,000 from this source.

A woman and three children were killed and a fourth child was hurt when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by an east-bound Texas & Pacific passenger train near Eastland Monday. The dead are: Mrs. E. W. Halbert, 30; Albert Halbert, 9; Clifton Halbert, 11; Mary Louise Mitchell, 6; J. W. Mitchell, age 9, was severely injured. The Halberts lived about two miles from town and the children had entered a grade school here. Mrs. Halbert was driving her two little sons and the Mitchell children home after their classes when the accident happened.

A letter advising all banks and agricultural credit corporations in the State that the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Houston had "ample lending capacity" and therefore is in a position promptly to render a large amount of assistance in financing the storage and orderly marketing of the present cotton crop, was issued Tuesday by M. H. Gossett, president.

Texas has what is probably the oldest "little theater" in America. Organized thirty-five years ago in Carmine, small community in Fayette County, it has functioned continuously since, according to The Billboard.

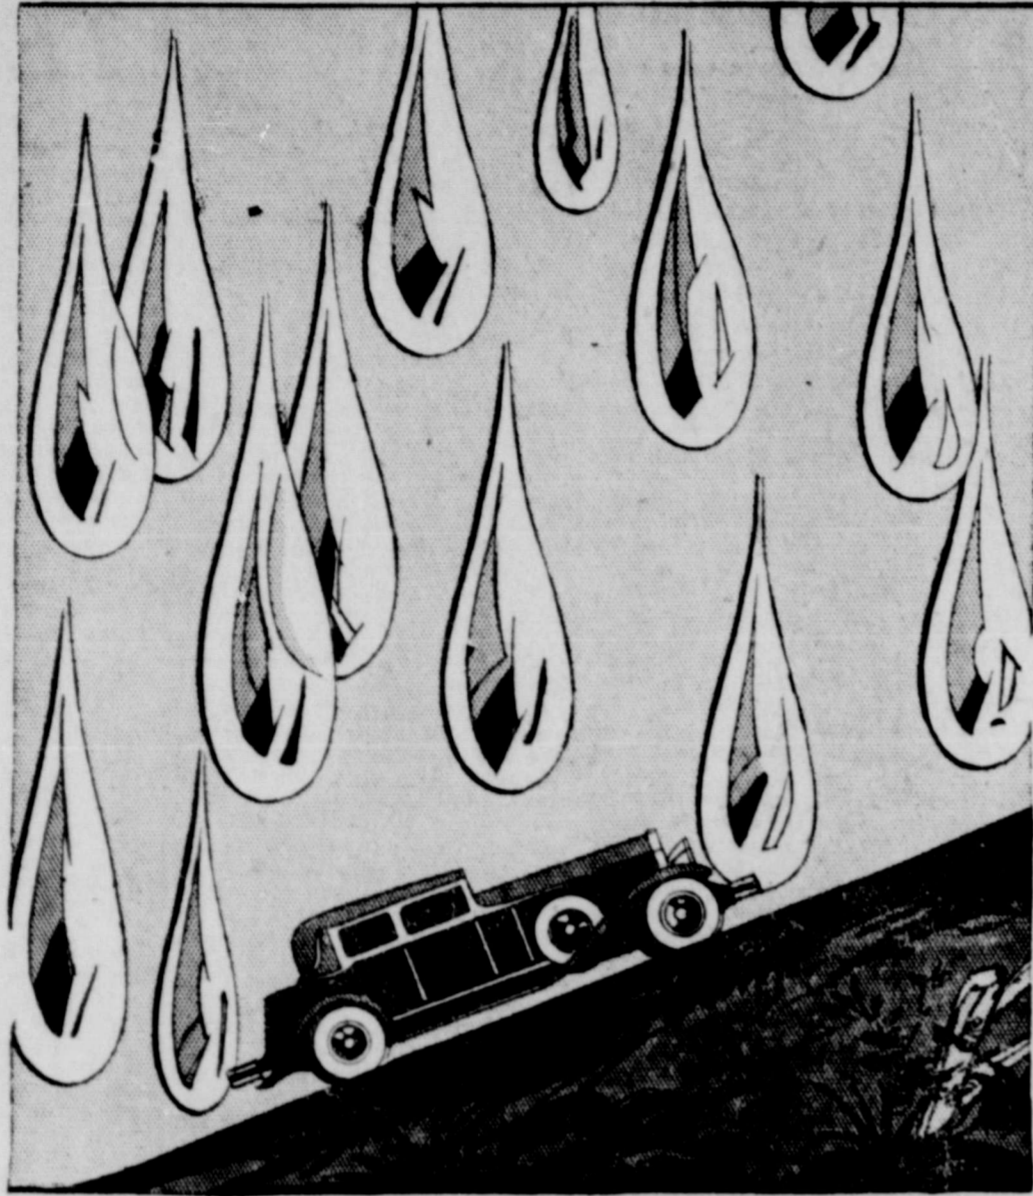

Three unmasked men Monday entered the back door of Farmersville State Bank and after forcing W. W. Porter, cashier, and Mrs. Edward Everett, wife of the bank president, to throw up their hands, went through the bank vault and cash drawers, took about $20,000 in currency and escaped.

Once again Fort Worth is the baseball capital of Dixie. The Panthers brought the title of Dixie-land back to Fort Worth when they burst forth in the seventh inning Monday, scored six runs, won the fifth and last game of the 1930 Dixie Series from the Memphis Chicks, Southern Association champions. The score was 13 to 6.

Odum Lloyd Hoffman, 8, son of Mr. and Mrs. U. A. Hoffman, and Mrs. Edward Overcast, 9, son of W. H. Stallings, are both dead from burns received while playing with gasoline late Sunday afternoon, and Ralph Overcast, 6, brother of Edward Overcast, is in a critical condition in a Wellington hospital. The tragedy occurred when the boys drew gasoline from a farm tractor, with which they intended to burn the handle from a hammer. When the match was struck, the head flew into the bucket of gasoline, causing the fire to ignite the boys' clothing.

William E. Lowe, 40-year-old Wait farmer, was shot and killed early Sunday morning in front of the cabin of his negro tenant, Slim Knight. Shortly afterward, Knight died by his own hand, to avoid capture by a posse of neighbors which was searching for him. He was 45 years old. The negro was working on halves, and the agreement was said to have been over his half of the sale money, with Lowe insisting that he pay some on his debt due him.

It's these stubborn drops of

that often make you shift to second!

Half-way up a busy hill you have to shift to second. Horns honk impatiently. Drivers smile in sympathy or glare in irritation. Angrily you swing into the gutter to make way for those who can take the hill in high.

Blame wet gas for this constant annoyance and embarrassment. It condenses into drops of raw gasoline in the manifold, resists the spark and dilutes motor oil. It not only ruins performance but may ruin the motor itself. What a difference when you put Texaco in your tank! This gasoline forms a dry gas that others are trying to imitate! It vaporizes readily and burns completely, enabling your car to start like an arrow and climb like a mountain goat!

Tests prove that Texaco is as pure as it is powerful. With it, engines seem immune to usual gasoline troubles. It has become the favorite of motorists throughout each of our 48 States!

Stop today at the Texaco Red Star with the Green T. Swap your wet gas troubles for dry gas power and pleasure. And remember—Texaco, the original dry gas is obtainable only from the Texaco pump.

1. A wet gas is an atomized mixture of gasoline vapor in which are suspended drops of raw gasoline.
2. These drops of raw gasoline form an uneven mixture which resists the action of the spark.
3. Result: Destructive crankcase dilution, difficult starts, slow acceleration—a sluggish motor.

1. The new and better Texaco vaporizes so readily that it forms a dry gas—an active mixture of gasoline and air.
2. This pure, dry gas responds instantly to the action of the spark.
3. Result: Lightning starts, rapid acceleration, smooth action—power!

Many a true word is spoken by accident. During a show the other night the girl behind us remarked that there seems to be quite a far for "anaesthetic" dancing — and an overplus of it sure puts us to sleep.

What is modesty, anyway? Thirty years ago she was called a brazen hussy because she didn't care who saw her elbows.

SUCCESS AT LAST

Today the home is in competition with modern life. It must be modernized or it will be relegated to a mere place for eating and sleeping. Here is where wall paper enters.

Wall paper alone offers you an easy, sure, inexpensive way of transforming your home to conform with the spirit of the times — with the accepted ideas of modern home decoration.

For wall paper styles too have changed with the years — have kept pace with world and style progress. Today's wall paper bears little resemblance to wall paper styles of fifty, twenty-five, ten, even five years ago.

An eastern paper tells about a storm that blew the horns off a cow. That is some horn-blowing but it is nothing to what some of the horn-blowers in the big cities can do.

It is rumored that New Jersey is about to kill its last mosquito, thus destroying one of the best jokes in America.

REVIEW—THE GREATNESS OF THE GOD FEARING

Devotional Reading Psalm 8

Rev. Samuel D. Prie, D. D.

Fourteen outstanding characters in the Old Testament have been studied during the quarter.

To read the Scripture content would take you from Genesis to Jonah. You can at least read the various Scripture passages indicated for each lesson and then summarize the general teachings by a careful perusal of each Golden Text. One of these conclusions, supported by the experience of those studied in recent weeks, is found in today's Golden Text: "The fear of Jehovah is the beginning of wisdom; and a good understanding have they that do his commandments; his praise endureth forever." Psalm 111:10.

Since biography involves the study of history it is possible to trace the life of a mighty nation from the very inception when Abraham left Mesopotamia to become the Father of the Faithful in Palestine until that nation, after reaching its summit in the days of Solomon, was led into Babylonian captivity. Those were days of pioneering in building up a religious faith as well as in establishing the life of a nation.

The Bible is a book for humans and not just for saints. Therein we find the record of baseness as well as of goodness. All deeds recorded in this Book of Life are not to be commended, though we can profit from the experience of each.

Women always have an essential place in all progress. Deborah and Ruth are types for careful study. Men seemed to have lost heart when the nations oppressed Israel in those pioneering days. It was then that Deborah listened long enough to hear the commission of acting as a deliverer. Naomi and Ruth present the fact that many know too well; how tragedies lie so close to the highway of life.

THEY DARED AND WON

The only feat in aviation which compares with Col. Lindbergh's solo flight from New York to Paris is the return of the French airmen, Dieudonne Coste and his flying mate, Maurice Bellonte, who flew from Paris to New York. It is not detracting from their glory to point out that there were two of them, to relieve one another at the controls, while Lindbergh flew alone. Their feat was more hazardous, since the storm danger was greater and the wind was not in their favor.

Everyone who admires courage will endorse President Hoover's words in greeting the French flyers at the White House. Their achievement, he said, "demonstrates again the high courage of mankind. It gives heart to all of us in whatever tasks engage us, for it proves that there are no limits to the courage of man and there are no limits to what that courage can accomplish."

No limits to what courage can accomplish! Is there not inspiration in that for faint-hearted age as well as for daring youth? It is true—we must believe it in the light of what courage has accomplished in the past. Courage, backed by skill and reinforced by judgment, can conquer the world. It has never failed to conquer when so buttressed. As we grow older we lose some of the courage of youth. We flatter ourselves that we have gained in judgment, but have we? Did not Lindbergh, did not Coste and Bellonte, judge their chances more accurately than the oldsters did who did not dare their flights? And as for youth, if that is not acquired in skill, it will never be gained.

One reason the world does not progress faster is that too much control of its affairs is vested in those who have outgrown their courage. "Safety first" may pile up dollars but it doesn't beget the adventurous spirit which is the force that, after all, makes life today different from yesterday and that of tomorrow different from all that has gone before.

POLITICS

"As goes Maine, so goes the Nation," is an ancient political aphorism which is no longer true and probably never was. Maine holds its state elections in September; a practice, doubtless, handed down from the days when natives of the Pine Tree State were pretty likely to be snowed in for the winter by November and unable to get to the polls!

The election just held in Maine can be interpreted by political forecasters to suit any partisan point of view. The Republicans made a clean sweep, therefore the Republicans will carry everything in other states in November. So some will argue. But the Republican majority was much less than in 1928, therefore the Republican vote will be cut down enough to elect many Democrats to Congress. That is the other argument. Neither of them means anything.

The most significant thing about the Maine election, it seems to us, is that so few voters took the trouble to vote. According to the political experts of both parties, the people of the United States are stirred to the depths of their souls by the issues of unemployment, the tariff and prohibition. Uh-huh? Maybe so. But the people of Maine have more than their normal share of unemployment, and the new tariff law hits them in a dozen places, but they don't seem to have been stirred up enough about those things to take the trouble to express themselves at the polls. More than 260,000 Maine voters cast their ballots in the Presidential election of 1928; fewer than half that number, apparently, bothered about voting this year.

Wouldn't it be funny if the politicians were all wrong in believing that everybody is all excited about politics this year?

REVOLUTIONS

The revolution in Russia, against the Czar, was perfectly understandable to Americans. We understood the French Revolution, against the King of France. We understood well enough the revolutions whereby the nations of South America liberated themselves from the kings of Spain and Portugal. Our own national history is based upon just that sort of a revolution.

What is difficult for us to understand is the sort of revolution they are having in South America

now. The former President of Peru is in prison, with revolutionists in power. The man who ruled Argentina for many years has been despoised by revolutionists. There are rumblings of revolution in southern Brazil.

Why a revolution in a republic? All of these nations are self-governing countries; why don't the people change their government at the polls, if they are dissatisfied, as we do? The answer is that they can't. There is no such thing as universal suffrage in these neighbor-republics. Only a privileged few vote, and the party or group in power has the unpleasant habit of entrenching itself behind the army and holding on by force. The only effective way of getting it out is by the use of superior force. The politicians attend to that and the common people have nothing to say about it.

Old-Timer Continues His Reminiscences Of the Olden Days

(Editor's Note.—The following article is another of the series by W. A. Huckabee, who has written two previous letters on his recollection of the olden days. His articles contain a great deal of history, with comments of his own, which are reproduced because we found them interesting ourselves and believed they would appeal to our readers. While we may or may not agree with everything he says, it must be remembered that the comments are Mr. Huckabee's, and what he has to say embraces his own individual knowledge and opinions, and are not a part of the editorial attitude of this newspaper.)

Iredell, Texas, Sept. 15, 1930.

Well, Mr. Editor, I will take up my subject and come on with it. When we came to Hico 25 years ago, there were two saloons here. The women and girls didn't promenade the sidewalks then as they do now. There was lots of drinking and drunkenness and what follows that kind of a town so the good people had stood for it as long as they wanted to, so they just voted it out as an open door—she-bang! (But of course all the laws and powers on earth can't stop the lawless boot-legger.)

There was no picture show here 25 years ago, but it came and has survived all down the line until now.

When we came here there were two schools in the town, one a private school, taught by Professor Randals. He was a good teacher, too. The new school building was put up just a few years ago. The children have gotten so they are so smart in the books and in order to hold them back so they won't finish so soon, they have added a lot of nonsense to the list, such as reading big yarn books and kicking balls, and so on and so on.

When we came here, I think the school was much better than now. A great many people that were here are gone. Some have moved away and a great many have died. But there are a few of us old people still here for some purpose I guess. The good Lord knows.

The wonderful light plant has grown up lately to get a great many people out of the dark and to light up the streets of our little city, beautiful and healthy Hico.

The bakery has come to our town since we came here, which is a good enterprise to any town. Some good nice houses and lots of improvements, otherwise. Old houses have been torn down and new ones built, streets and sidewalks have been improved greatly and Hico is among the cleanest and healthiest small towns in Texas.

God bless your souls, it is the truth if it is a sad one, the picture shows and all kind of shows as to that the dance halls, skating rinks, ball stands and everything of worldly nature is crowded at every appointment but the church pews has plenty of empty seats at all times.

During the last war all nations looked to see in confidence. Are we going to betray that universal confidence in us as a nation by forgetting God and His Holy Sabbath and other divine loves?

When we came to Hico there were several here who made good handling a side line to get some money to go with their farming. Wood has sold here from $2.00 to $5.00 per wagon load, but that is almost a thing of the past. The coal oil stove came first to cut the wood wagon out, then came coal to help its share and then came the natural gas piped from the Laney gas field, and in furnishing a good many with gas for heating and cooking, so the old fashion wood wagon with its loads of wood is almost a thing of the past with the Hico people.

SEPTEMBER IS HURRICANE MONTH

Storms Like That Which Wiped Out Santo Domingo Occur Every Autumn.

(By Caleb Johnson)

Four thousand known dead, with the back country still to hear from, an entire city destroyed, farm crops ruined and the entire population of a nation plunged from moderate prosperity into want—that is the record of the 1930 hurricane which swept over the Caribbean Sea on September 1 and struck the eastern end of the island on which are located the Republic of Haiti and the Dominican Republic.

The city of Santo Domingo, capital of the Dominican Republic, received the full force of the hurricane, which blew at a rate estimated at 160 miles an hour. The property damage in this city of 40,000 people is estimated at more than $50,000,000. Not one person in four escaped without physical injury, and complete enumeration of the dead is expected to show that in the city alone one out of every eight inhabitants perished.

The hurricane hazard is one which every inhabitant of the islands which fringe the Caribbean Sea is exposed to every September, and which often menaces those living on the mainland along the coast of the Gulf of Mexico. Like the typhoons which ravage the China Sea and the tornadoes or "cyclones" which have done so much damage in our own Mississippi Valley, the high winds of the West Indies are unpreventable, though modern methods of weather reporting, especially by radio from ships at sea, usually give ample warning of their approach.

The most serious damage done by any hurricane of which there is a record was in 1900, thirty years ago this month, when the city of Galveston, Texas, stood directly in the path of a wind which rolled the Gulf of Mexico before it in a great tidal wave which drowned thousands who had escaped the direct fury of the storm. More than 6,000 persons perished in the Galveston disaster and, contrary to the general rule of such storms this hurricane swung northward and easterly, crossing the Great Lakes and Newfoundland and across Iceland, doing great damage all along its path.

Like all of the other hurricanes the Galveston storm started some where in the Atlantic Ocean, between the African coast and the Windward Islands. The origin of these storms is not definitely known, but they are supposed to be caused by the equatorial heat causing a column of heated air to rise so rapidly as to start a vertical circulation. When the heated air encounters cold air at a great height, condensation of water vapor begins, the falling water starts a downward circulation over a wide area and the whole body of air affected begins to revolve in a "counter-clockwise" rotation. The center of the disturbance travels westward at a comparatively slow rate, not more than 10 or 15 miles an hour, but the outer circumference of air revolves around this center at a speed up to 150 miles an hour or more. There is thus a comparatively calm area twenty miles or so in diameter, in the middle of the hurricane, but for 150 to 200 miles each side of the center there is a storm in which no ship can live.

Experienced, sea-captains navigating hurricane-infested waters in the hurricane season try to run for the calmer center of the disturbance as soon as the falling barometer gives them warning of the approaching storm. As the storm always revolves in the same direction, it is easy to tell where the center lies.

Some years ago I voyaged into Caribbean waters on a ship whose captain had sailed those seas for forty years. The month was August, and I was impressed by the captain's solicitude over the barometer readings.

"Too soon for hurricanes," I suggested.

"Not too soon to watch for them," he replied. "They usually occur in September, but they have been known in August, if the early Summer has been hot, and sometimes they occur in October."

Then he taught me the rhyming doggerel which sailors, who like to put everything into verse, have made up about the hurricane season:

"June—too soon, July—be shy, August—shouldy must, September—remember, October—all over."

Twice in the past four years parts of the United States have been swept by West Indian hurricanes. The great hurricane of 1926, which struck the city of Miami, Florida, peninsula and over the Gulf of Mexico to Pensacola. I was in Miami a few days after the event and saw the devastation which had been wrought there and in the surrounding country. The modern buildings of sound construction were not materially damaged except for the loss of window glass, but in the environs of the city piles of what looked like kindling-wood were all that remained of thousands of homes and other buildings. The greatest damage here, as in most other places, was by water, the wind having rolled the ocean up into the city streets. In the low-lying country around Lake Okechobee, where the flood water rose ten or twelve feet, whose villages were wiped out and no accurate count will ever be possible of the number of persons who were drowned.

Porto Rico has not yet recovered from the effects of the hurricane of September, 1928. More than 255 persons were killed, almost half a million left homeless, and property loss of more than $100,000,000 was sustained.

In September, 1929, another hurricane swept the island of New Providence, in the Bahamas, damaging practically every building on the island and wrecking many vessels in the harbor of Nassau, the chief British port in the Bahamas, besides causing great loss of life.

If one wonders why people live in a region which is subject to the annual peril of the hurricane, it might be inquired why they live in California or Japan, where earthquakes are frequent, or in Italy, where Vesuvius is often in eruption, or in our own "cyclone belt" with the catastrophes of Omaha, St. Louis and Oak Park in mind. The answer seems to be that some of them live there because they can't get away.

Hands Show Age And Neglect Unless Cleansed And Protected

OF ALL the things that you can do at home to preserve a good appearance, nothing is more important than the care of your hands. Most women, however, think of their faces first. If little lines and wrinkles begin to appear, and the skin on their faces darkens and coarsens, they immediately take steps to remedy this. Of course we all want to keep our faces fresh and youthful just as long as possible. That is as it should be. But did you ever realize that your hands can betray age and neglect, too? This so often is unnecessary, for your hands can be kept young as well as your face. After your daily facial treatment, thoroughly rub into your hands the remaining tissue cream or skin food and muscle oil smoothing and gripping your hands as if you were washing them. Rub each finger from the tip to the base, and push back your cuticle so it will not be tight or ugly. If you do this just before going to bed, slip on an old pair of gloves and wear them all night. In the morning wash your hands with mild soap and warm water. If you take this hand massage before going out, wash your hands with warm water and mild soap immediately after the massage, and then apply hand cream. Before manicuring your nails, always apply skin food or tissue cream to your nails, and rub it in well. Then gently push back the cuticle with an orange stick. Be careful not to bruise your nails, and do not, as a rule, cut your cuticle. That only makes it tough and hard, and gives your nails a careless, untidy look. But if the cuticle is very ragged, and you must cut it off, use your cuticle scissors instead of your nail scissors. Then again rub in tissue cream or skin food, as plenty of lubrication soon will cure any tendency to hangnails and ragged cuticle. If your hands are rough and dry, instead of washing them too often with soap and water, try a basic cleansing occasionally to cleanse your skin without drying up its natural oils. For this basic cleansing, first apply a liberal amount of cleansing cream to your hands, and after a minute remove the cream with soft cleansing tissues. Next, just as in your daily facial cleansing, smooth pads of cotton saturated with skin tonic over your hands. This will remove all traces of cleansing cream, but never will leave your skin feeling drawn and dry. Last of all, apply a bit of hand cream to whiten your hands gently without leaving them sticky or greasy.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

ABOUT YOUR BODY It is surprising, come to think of it, how few people know enough about their own bodies, to intelligently describe a pain or distress to the physician. For instance, a husband called me over the phone about his wife, who was in bed and suffering severely "with a hurtin' in her side." That's all I could get out of him, except that I was to "come over in a hurry." He could not have given me more information as to the locality of that pain, if his neck depended on it! A man of far more than average intelligence, too. To forewarn your physician is to forearm him. If he has the faintest inkling of what the trouble is in advance, he knows better what to bring with him, and hence may give quicker relief. I remember a hurry-up call one dark night, to see a stranger, an old man, who was "nearly dyin'" with a pain in his stomach. I hastily gathered additional remedies for my emergency bag; put a stomach tube and equipment for lavage—everything I could think of at that hour. Imagine my disgust of that would be likely to aid me at this world in general—to find that I needed a catheter! Nothing whatever else, I had to track back to the office and get one, requiring almost an hour of time, that much more suffering, that much extra loss of sleep. I added the little instrument to my equipment after that, and carried it devotedly until it wore out from disuse in that emergency bag; and all, because a fellow didn't know his bladder from his stomach! I find this same ignorance of the human body in my modern otherwise well-informed patients; it's because they have never picked up even the rudiments of the topography of their bodies. If our editor will permit, I am going to offer some simple information in my next two or three letters, about the landmarks of the human body; things that every one should know. I shall try to make it interesting and worth while. Watch this space next week.

Under the glass top of the desk of an interesting New Yorker I saw a bit of white paper with these words: "The dog barks, but the caravan passes on." Taken in connection with the man's character and career, the sentence is revealing. He has been barked at plenty, but he has proceeded. He has done his work, built a great enterprise, created employment for thousands of people. The barking long since became faint and very far behind. The First National Bank of New York is presided over by a white whiskered gentleman of more than eighty, named George F. Baker. When his name gets into the newspapers it is usually because some stock in which he is known to hold a large and permanent interest has advanced a hundred points in a week and added several million dollars to his fortune. A friend of mine visited the bank on business, and came back with this sentence: "The vision to see them; the courage to buy them; the patience to hold them." Whether it came from Mr. Baker or not, it is his philosophy, and the secret of his fortune. In Boston there is another old man, perhaps the most unselfish human being I have ever known. His whole life has been devoted to service to the city's poor, and the look in his eyes is a benediction. I asked him once whether he is worried about the future. "You give away all you earn," I said. "What will you live on when you are too old to work?" For answer he pulled a slip of paper out of his pocketbook, and passed it over to me. "Trust in the Lord and do good. So shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed." That, he said, is a promissory note from the Owner of the Universe. On that promise he has lived for seventy years, and he has confidence that it will continue to be good.

KEEP COMING WITH YOUR PRODUCE!

The best way to overcome low prices for other commodities is to keep your chickens, turkeys and cows doing their best. Proper care and feed means more eggs, better and heavier chickens and turkeys and more cream. Of course these things do not bring a great deal of money at a time, but by the end of the year, if you have marketed eggs, cream, chickens, etc., every week, your total will not be very small. We pay you the TOP MARKET PRICES for everything you have to sell and urge you to come to see us before selling. Our business is buying what farmers produce.

This Week WASHINGTON BY RADFORD MOBLEY AUTOCASTER WASHINGTON BUREAU

Special to Hico News Review Washington, Sept. 24.—An annual expenditure of $36,720 by the federal government on an almost completely unknown work directed from here holds possibilities of aid to the individual farmer which will shadow all the gigantic marketing, planting advisory and other projects sponsored by the government. The $36,720 mentioned is the yearly appropriation which the astrophysical observatory receives from Congress for its study of solar radiation. Solar radiation may sound technical; reduced to ordinary terms it means the heat the sun sends to the earth. In other words it is the source of life for everything that does live on this planet. Furthermore, if its variations and changes, heretofore unpredictable, can be reduced to an understanding system, the scientists who do so will be able to tell the farmer, insurance man, baseball fan and anyone else interested in the weather, just about what will be happening to the climate two years or more ahead. In other words, if the sun's eccentricities had been fully understood two years ago, the drought which has crippled so many individuals this year could not have crept upon us as it did. Every area which was likely to suffer would have been warned two years ago, in time to assure water supply, change plantings, even to dig wells or build additional storage structures. Dr. C. G. Abbott, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, who is directing the work, does not promise that predictions of such accuracy can be achieved at any time within the immediate future. But there is plenty of evidence to show that such prophesies will be routine work for the weather man of the future. It is already known, for instance, the sun's radiation varies in periods of definite length, one period of two years, another of 15 months and another of 11 months. It is already known that the cycle of sunspots on the sun is 11 years. Taken together these make up what "seem a predictable variation of the sun," according to Dr. Abbott. The complex nature of this study is heightened by the effect wind circulation over thousands of miles, also in cycles, and by the oceans, mountains and valleys on the earth's surface. So marked would be the effect of these factors that it has been shown that an increase in the radiation of the sun, far from causing higher temperature in North America, would cause cooler temperature because of the effect of clouds, humidity and similar factors over this continent. All that is needed, however, despite these complications, to enable successful long-range weather forecasts, is more statistics, say these scientists. The astrophysical observatory is gathering these through its stations in California, in Chile and, cooperating with the National Geographic Society in southwestern Africa. In addition, observers all over the world are engaged in the same work on humidity, clouds, winds and the related phenomena. Practical long-range forecasting therefore may not be nearly so far in the future as it now appears. * * *

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Giles Chittenham, distressed over the suicide of his younger half-brother Rodney, returns to Europe from America, where he had made an unhappy marriage. Rodney had killed himself because a notorious woman, Julie Farrow, threw him over. Giles is introduced to Julie Farrow by his friend Lombard, in Switzerland. He resolves to make her fall in love with him, then throw her over as she threw Rodney. She tells him she has made a bet with her friend "Bim" Lennox that she can drive her car to the top of the St. Bernard Pass and back. Giles challenges her to take him with her and she accepts. They start out in the face of a gathering snowstorm.

Chittenham, to his amazement, that the girl beside him in the car appeals to him as no other woman has ever appealed. And something intangible convinces him that her feeling toward him is similar to his own toward her. "Do you believe in love at first sight?" he asks her, as the car toils up the mountain toward the hotel. At the hotel, after refreshment, Chittenham and Julie found their mutual attraction so strong as to be irresistible. In the morning they returned to the town below; Julie apparently jubilantly happy. Lombard tells Chittenham that he has made a mistake, that this Julie Farrow is not the one who ruined Rodney, but her cousin of the same name. Chittenham is horrified. He calls at Julie's hotel and confesses that he had tried to win her love for purposes of revenge, believing her to be the other Julie.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"I know it sounds a damnable insult . . . but you mustn't forget who I thought you were. A notorious woman—a woman who counted one man more or less as nothing. I wanted to make you more—see if I could make you care for me and then treat you as you had treated my brother. You told me you had never really cared for any man and so . . . last night."

He felt her sway beneath his hands. "You mean . . . it was all just a game?" she asked dazedly. Her eyes never left his flushed, agitated face. Chittenham watched her, white-faced, tense.

Suddenly he found himself beside her, holding her unresponsive hand, pleading with her.

"Forgive me. For God's sake, say you forgive me. I shall never forgive myself. I'd give ten years of my life to wipe out the ghostly mistake. But it wasn't altogether my fault. Lombard—"

She turned her head and looked at him. "Can you blame Mr. Lombard, because you wished to behave like a cad to a woman who had never done you any harm?"

Chittenham flushed crimson. "She sent my brother to his death. I had a right to make her pay."

"Your brother was as much of a coward as you are." The very stillness of her voice was like a knife-cut. "Brave gentlemen both of you! The one to die and leave the stigma of his death upon a woman who never wanted him and had often told him so and the other to break a woman's whole life in order to satisfy his petty pride and the thing I suppose he calls his honour."

"Julie!" Chittenham said passionately. "And then somehow, without either of them being conscious of having moved, she was in his arms sobbing, her face buried on his shoulder, her arms about his neck."

"Oh, say you love me . . . say you really love me—she pleaded wildly. "Oh, do you really love me after all?" Chittenham answered between clenched teeth: "I do, God help me."

It was the truth; a truth of which he had never dreamed.

He turned her face up to him and kissed her lips. "I love you—whatever happens, always remember that I love you," he said hoarsely.

She freed herself from his arms, wiped her eyes, and pushed back her hair.

"I hope nothing else is going to happen," she said, half sobbing still. "I think I've had enough for one day. I'm not used to crying . . . it doesn't suit me."

He caught her hand, holding her fast.

"Wait . . . Julie, there's something else; something . . ."

He drew her into his arms again, holding her fast for yet another moment, then he gently released her.

"I love you with all my heart and soul," he said hoarsely. "But you will hate me more than I can ever hate myself, Julie . . . My dear, I—Julie, I'm not free to marry you, Julie . . . I—"

Then Julie said—at least her lips said it, for no sound seemed to pass them: "You mean . . . you're married already?"

"Yes."

Suddenly she began to laugh; helpless hysterical laughter which she tried in vain to check or control.

"Julie . . ." Chittenham said. "But she went on laughing. It was so funny, so intensely funny that she of all people, who had never cared immoderately for anyone, and who had always dreaded caring, should so suddenly have been plunged into this tragedy."

Two days ago she and Chittenham had never met, and now a whole lifetime of events bound them together. They had quarrelled, loved, quarrelled again, then kissed and been happy, and now the end had come. . . .

Suddenly she spoke; she felt as if she were choking. "Please go away."

"Not like this. I can't go like this. Julie, there must be some way out. I'll do anything, anything."

She laughed with white lips. "What can you do? I suppose you'll say that you are unhappily married, and ask me to be sorry for you? Perhaps you will even offer to divorce her?"

"She would be as glad of her freedom as I should," Chittenham said curtly.

Julie laughed in his face. "Julie!" He caught hold of her so roughly that she cried out. "Do you think you're going to be the only one to suffer?" he asked savagely. "Do you think it doesn't rebound on me too? Do you think I wanted to care for you, or for any woman? I set a trap for you and I've been caught it myself."

She flung back her head and looked at him with blazing eyes. "I wish I could kill you. I wish I could kill you," she snarled desperately and was gone.

Giles Chittenham's mother leaned back in her chair and applied an absurd lace handkerchief to her eyes.

Giles frowned and moved restlessly over to the window.

He had all a man's dislike for a scene, and for the past three days he had been treated to one every time he was in his mother's presence.

He found himself remembering the barely-furnished room at the hotel on the heights of St. Bernard—the isolated top-of-the-world room in which he had held Julie in his arms.

He had been forced to leave Switzerland without seeing her again, although he had made several attempts.

He had wired Sadie the name of the hotel at which he intended to stay, and the day following his arrival a letter came from her.

She did not even sign her name, and Chittenham burnt the letter as soon as he had read it.

A thousand times since he had left Switzerland he had thought of asking Sadie to divorce him, but Chittenham knew her well enough to guess that if she thought if he wished to get rid of her she would never allow him to do so.

They went away together thru the pillared partition to the room where the jazz band played. A sudden scream rose shrilly above the noise followed by a burst of hysterical laughter and the clatter of breaking glass.

"What on earth—" Chittenham began. Doris Gardner laughed.

"It's only Julie Farrow. I don't know what's happened to her lately. She was quite drunk here the other night. I wonder they didn't turn her out."

"Julie Farrow!" Chittenham's voice was calm and indifferent, but he felt as if someone had tugged at his heart.

"Yes, do you know her? She used to be rather a friend of mine, but one has to draw the line somewhere. Just lately she seems to have taken leave of her senses."

Chittenham's eyes were straining across the room in the direction from which the noise had arisen, but there was too much of a crowd for him to distinguish any one face.

"You mean the famous Julie Farrow, I suppose," he submitted laconically.

Doris glanced across the room. "There she is—" she said. "In the green frock. No—over the other side, sitting on the arm of the chair laughing. That's what I call a cocktail laugh. Come along. I'm sure Essen and your mother are bored by this time."

But Chittenham did not move. He was looking at the girl in the green frock—a green frock of which there seemed to be so very little with which to cover her white neck and arms. Her lips were painted a vivid red, and she was laughing noisily—immoderately—laughter which died away suddenly as she met his gaze across the room, and it was his Julie—the woman who had said she loved him, and with whom he had spent that never to be forgotten night on the top of the world.

Doris Gardner tugged at Giles Chittenham's arm. "Come along! If Julie sees me I'll want to join our party and I'm not anxious to have her. Oh, damn—I knew it would happen."

She shrugged her shoulders detachedly as Julie suddenly distinguished herself from the noisy ly expensive street where his mother lived, punctually at nine o'clock.

The door opened behind him and his mother came in.

"I haven't kept you waiting, have I?" she asked gaily.

Giles turned round, then he rose slowly to his feet. He felt as if he was in the presence of a perfect stranger.

"It's well, it's amazing!" he said at last. "You don't look a day more than thirty-five."

"You dear thing!" She stood on tip-toe and kissed him gratefully. "So you don't mind dancing with your old mother, tonight, Giles?"

"And where are we going?" Mrs. Arden asked, as they drove away.

"I'm told the Faun is the place to go to," Giles said. "If you don't like it we can go on somewhere else." But Mrs. Arden adored it, and told him so every few minutes during the evening with varied extravagance.

Presently she saw some people she knew. "Darling! you simply must be introduced! They're such sweet people. Doris Gardner is the girl—no, the one in the black frock and the scarlet shoes. She's twenty-two, and she's just got divorced from her husband."

Giles looked at the girl with the scarlet shoes.

"Do you dance, Mr. Chittenham?" Doris asked.

"Yes. May I have the pleasure with you?"

They went away together thru the pillared partition to the room where the jazz band played. A sudden scream rose shrilly above the noise followed by a burst of hysterical laughter and the clatter of breaking glass.

"What on earth—" Chittenham began. Doris Gardner laughed.

"It's only Julie Farrow. I don't know what's happened to her lately. She was quite drunk here the other night. I wonder they didn't turn her out."

She shrugged her shoulders detachedly as Julie suddenly distinguished herself from the noisy group she was with and threaded her way across the room.

Doris glanced at Chittenham. "Do you know Mr. Chittenham, Julie?" She made the introduction with obvious reluctance.

Julie had returned Chittenham's formal bow with a careless nod. "How are you? I've heard of you," she said casually. "Rodney Arden's half brother, isn't he? Delighted to meet you."

Chittenham's face hardened beneath its pallor. He felt as if he were in the presence of a stranger who yet looked at him with well-beloved eyes.

"I think we have met before," he said with cool deliberation. "Julie raised her brows.

"Have we? Oh, surely not. I'm so good at remembering faces. Perhaps you are mistaking me for my cousin—the other Julie!" She laughed insolently. "That does happen sometimes I assure you," he said, turning to Doris. "Julie probably wouldn't be flattered if she knew, but all the same it happens occasionally. You may not believe me, Mr. Chittenham, if you know my cousin that is—but a man once kissed me in the most impassioned manner thinking I was the other Julie! So very awkward, especially as he was a man whom I very much dislike."

"A disappointment to the man also perhaps," Chittenham said bitterly, but she only laughed.

FAIRY ITEMS

Everything is being rushed in our fair land at present. The roar of the tractor is heard day and night rebreaking stubble and seeding the ground and trucks are being kept busy hauling grain and cotton, while cotton pickers are hiking to the cotton patches.

We are enjoying beautiful weather for all outdoor work, but the showers are too light and far between and the grasshoppers are too numerous for the health of our turnip patches.

Mr. Ford went to Eulogy last Tuesday week, where he purchased several buckets of home made cane syrup, some of which he sold to us Fairy folks and it truly is fine.

Mrs. Ben Wright spent a few days in Stephenville last week returning home Tuesday.

Mrs. Dr. King and son, Melvin, accompanied by Mrs. Dr. Laury all of Gatesville, spent a few hours in Fairy last Tuesday afternoon. They were enroute to Stephenville where Melvin is attending school. They had the misfortune to get the timer of their car broken just after leaving here, necessitating their return here for repairs. Jack Blakely took the boys on to Stephenville and purchased a piece for their car in Hico doing the repairing to their car on his return. Meanwhile in order to pass the time away while waiting for their car, also to dispatch some urgent messages, they accompanied Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Bridges to Hico to a picture show.

Olga Duncan spent last Tuesday in Hamilton and while there attended the trial of Young Cox who in connection with his father killed an old man near Johnsville about two years ago.

Jim Lane of Hico was in our midst Thursday repairing windmills.

Mrs. Numan and daughters, Mrs. Price Cox, Mrs. Elmer Hoover and Mrs. Jim Richardson visited Mrs. Numan's daughter, Mrs. Heyroth, at Cross Plains a few days ago.

Miss Jennie Huchingson of Hico spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Newt Adams, Sunday week.

Mr. and Mrs. Newt Adams had as guests Thursday, Mrs. W. W. Stralley and children of Kansas City. Mr. Stralley was at one time editor of the Hico News Review.

Mrs. Clara Brunson was called to Tuxedo Friday to the bedside of her sister of that place, who is ill.

Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Bridges were guests to the following stewards, members and wives Friday night: Merss, Will Goyme, Stormy Wright, R. C. Hanson, Clara Brunson, Ted Arrant, Mrs. Jack Blakely, Mr. and Mrs. Newt Adams and Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Jones. Ice cream and cake were served and the evening was pleasantly spent in discussing church affairs and exchanging wits of humor. Newt Adams has quite a tact for amusing a crowd.

Mrs. Bert Wright and Mrs. Pickett visited relatives in Fort Worth Sunday week.

Several of this place went to Fort Worth Sunday: Messrs. Jack Blakely, Tom Betts, Joe Hutton and Jim Burse.

Mrs. Olga Duncan made a trip to Hamilton Monday afternoon. Elmer Hoover has weather boarded his dwelling using the weather boarding from the old school house.

The new gas lights are fine. The Methodist church has them installed.

Rev. Allison filled his regular appointment here Saturday night and Sunday. Rev. Chambless also a student of Howard Payne College, accompanied him and preached Sunday night. A good crowd was present at both services Sunday.

There were fifty three members present at the B. Y. P. U. Sunday night and Bro. Allison tells us we have the best B. Y. P. U. in the county. Maybe that is just to encourage us.

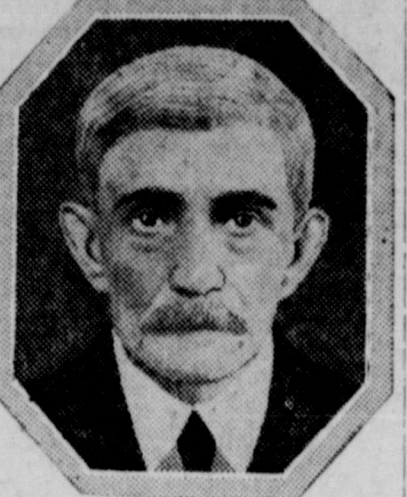

Miss Edith Pitts spent the week end with homefolks.

Professor: "You can realize the great distance of this star from the earth when you consider that the light took several thousands of years to reach the earth."

Lady: "Yes, but the stars only shine at night; otherwise it would have got here quicker."

Konjola Freed Ft. Worth Man of Rheumatism

Suffered Five Years—Kidney and Stomach Ailments Also Banished.

MR. N. R. DANIEL

"I suffered from rheumatism for four or five years," said Mr. N. R. Daniel, 808 East Arlington avenue, Ft. Worth. "This settled in my left leg and hips and I became so sore and stiff that I walked with a limp. I could not stoop sufficiently to lace my shoes. Later I became afflicted with stomach pains caused by gas. My kidneys became affected and I suffered constant back pains."

"I watched local endorsements of Konjola and decided to give it a trial. I noticed a change while I was taking the first bottle so I continued the treatment. Today the pains of rheumatism have entirely passed. I move my limbs freely and without effort. The stomach and kidney ailment have gone the way of my rheumatism and I no longer suffer from constipation. Even head catarrh which bothered me for years has been relieved by this new medicine."

The files of Konjola contain many such instances. Konjola is free from alcohol, nerve-deadening drugs or heart-depressing chemicals. Konjola is sold in Hico, Texas, at Porter's Drug Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

DAIRY DEVELOPMENT WILL DO MUCH FOR FARMS AND FARMERS

After years of observation, coupled with the practical experience of this Creamery, it is our belief that sound dairy development can do more to stabilize Agriculture than any other one factor.

Dairying, to be sound, must be built gradually with blooded stock as the basis of productive herds. Each cow must pay her own way and show a profit to her owner. Then there must be a steady, dependable cash market for all the milk farmers can produce.

It is the purpose of this Creamery to maintain that steady, dependable market—then its further purpose is to help in forwarding those activities which will promote the welfare of all the people.

"THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR SAFETY"

HIGHWAYS and BUY-WAYS...

Everyone welcomes good roads—lateral roads for convenience in local traveling and marketing and highways for quick all-weather access into and out of trade centers.

There is a sense of freedom in the knowledge that we can travel far and wide with comfort, speed and safety.

Good roads are a blessing—but they offer a challenge, too.

Modern automobiles and modern highways exert a great influence upon buying habits. They might tend to build up one community at the expense of another, but for one important fact . . . they transport trade in either direction impartially.

MERIT Merchants of Hico are meeting the challenge of good roads squarely and fearlessly. Well they know that trade goes where it is invited and stays where it is well treated.

Any advantages which the larger city may claim in luring trade are more than offset by the enterprising merchant in the smaller city. The knowledge which he alone has of customers' needs and desires enables him to serve them with unrivaled efficiency.

Ease of access—saving in time and transportation cost—freedom from traffic congestion and parking problems—all weigh heavily in favor of the local man.

About the only advantage his big city brother can boast of is larger sales volume, and even that will be eliminated through co-operation with and from the buying public. With your aid in building volume, your merchants can reduce costs surprisingly.

Savings thus effected will be promptly and cheerfully passed along to customers in the shape of constantly lowered prices.

Let's all work together and make prosperity of our community keep pace with the improvement in lateral roads and highways.

J. C. RODGERS BRINGS IN ODD-SHAPED EGG

The News Review has in the past received samples of egg freaks of various shapes, but this week J. C. Rodgers brought in one that takes the prize for uniformity and evenness, if not for its small size. It is perfectly round, and has the appearance of a marble. It is about the size of a small agate.

The hens over this section are on the job all the time now, and seem to believe in advertising their wares through the method of freak specimens.

TIME

We have almost reached the point where the work of the world can be done in half of the time that it took twenty years ago. The shortening of the hours of the working day in industry has only just begun, according to the U. S. Department of Labor. The eight-hour day is general in many industries, but in some sections the ten-hour day still prevails.

It is the belief of those who have studied the subject closely that a universal seven-hour day would give everybody work all the time, except for a reasonable vacation period, and would not slow up production below the demand for finished products, in any line. The difficulty is to get competing industrial establishments to agree to the change. Such difficulties are not insuperable, however. Twenty years ago nobody would have believed that it would be possible to get all of the department stores in New York to agree to close all day Saturday in Summer, but it has been brought about.

BUILDINGS
The newest thing in building construction is the "hung" building. Instead of a foundation as big as the building, with posts at the four corners, the building is hung from a single steel pole set in concrete and resting at its lower end on bedrock.

Two such "hung" buildings have been constructed in New York. The center pole is in the middle of the building, and all of the steel floor beams are suspended from it and braced against sagging. The outside of the building is merely a shell of brick or terra-cotta to keep out the weather and does not have to support anything more than its own weight.

Now efforts are being made to introduce lighter materials for the walls and floors of hung buildings, including featherweight preproof of concrete for floors and glass for the outer walls. Another innovation is steam radiators only ankle-high.

One set of inventors is working on a scheme of weaving rugs and draperies with electric wires concealed in the fabric through which a current can be run to keep the room warm, on the principle of the electric heating-pads, now familiar everywhere.

FREEZING
After three or four years of experimenting with frozen fish and meat, one of the largest food distributing companies is now going for frozen fruits, vegetables and oysters. Modern methods of instant freezing instantly check all tendency to decay, and when the frozen product is thawed out it is said to be exactly as good as when fresh.

Spinach, cherries, loganberries, red raspberries and peas are among the foodstuffs to which the freezing process of preservation has been applied with success thus far, in addition to practically all kinds of meat and sea-foods.

ICE CREAM
Every person in the United States ate three gallons of ice cream last year, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. If you got less than that, somebody else ate more. The consumption of ice-cream has increased by one-half in ten years.

We are shipping ice-cream from America now to every part of the world. At your hotel in Cairo, Egypt, or Bombay, or Hong Kong, you will find a well-known American brand of ice-cream on the menu. One of the greatest inventions in the food line is the homogenizer used by ice-cream manufacturers, which enables them to store surplus cream through the winter in the form of butter. Butter will keep where pure cream will not. It is run through the homogenizer, which breaks up the fat globules, mixing them with milk, with pure cream as the product, which can then be flavored and frozen.

LIGHT
A young man named Elmer Sperry went to Chicago fifty years ago and began to make electric arc lights. He built a tower on top of the Board of Trade building and installed 20 electric arcs which gave 40,000 candle-power of light. It was the wonder of its time, but another young man named Edison about that time brought out incandescent light and that soon replaced arcs for city lighting.

Elmer Sperry kept on experimenting with arcs, however, and developed the searchlights which are used today by every navy in the world and by most armies. Sperry died a few weeks ago at the age of 70, but before his death he gave the city of Chicago the most powerful light ever built. It is known as the Lindbergh Beacon, and was first used during the national air meet in August. It stands on a tower 600 feet above Lake Michigan, and throws a light more intense, per square inch of radiating surface, than that of the sun. It can be seen for 250 miles, to guide flyers to the Chicago Airport.

Who could want a better monument than that?

REV. C. A. MORTON RESIGNS TO ACCEPT GATESVILLE CHARGE

Rev. Clarence Allen Morton, pastor of the First Baptist Church at Hico, surprised the members of his congregation present at prayer meeting Wednesday evening by tendering his resignation as pastor of the local church and announcing that he had accepted a call to Gatesville where he will be pastor of the First Baptist Church of that city. Regret at losing the services of so able a minister of the gospel from local circles was lessened through the fact that the change will be in the form of a promotion, the Gatesville church being in a larger town and carrying added responsibilities.

Bro. Morton stated Thursday to a News Review reporter that he would be in Hico over two more Sundays, closing three years of work with the Hico congregation on the first Sunday in October. In this connection he stated that there was a coincidence in this date, as he first visited Hico on the first Sunday in October, 1919, at which time he was present as a supply pastor; he preached his first sermon as pastor of the local church on the first Sunday in October, 1927, and will close his work here on the first Sunday in October this year. His first pastorate was with the Olin church. He has been in the county for 11 years, and came to Hico from Hamilton where he was pastor for five years.

Having served as Moderator for the Hamilton County Baptist Association for seven years, Bro. Morton has been active in the surrounding field as well as in all local church activities. In the years 1927-1928 he served as Grand Chaplain of the Masonic Lodge, and just recently completed his work at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary at Fort Worth and received his degree from that institution, at the same time being accorded signal honors for the record he had made in his work there.

During Bro. Morton's pastorate of the Hico Baptist Church, the membership has grown from 214 when he came to the present total of 447. At the same time, his work has been instrumental in fostering a better feeling of love and harmony among the members, and the finances have been handled in a manner that is worthy of commendation. At the present time all affairs connected with the church are in the best shape they have been in for many years, according to those who have watched his progress, and it will be a huge task to find a man to take his place, and a family in whom the members of the church and the citizenship in general can place like faith and tender corresponding regard and respect. Mrs. Morton has been active in women's work, and for the past two years has been president of the County Women's Association. Four new women's organizations have been added under her leadership. Margaret Ann, the 8-year old daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Morton, will be missed also, having formed friend-ships among her playmates that will long live in their memory.

Four members of the Hico Baptist congregation have surrendered to preach under Bro. Morton's pastorate, three of them being at the present time ministers of the Gospel. The Sunday school has raised to the A-1 standard, with a corresponding growth of membership and interest. The number of B. Y. P. U. organizations has been increased from one to five. Thirty-three revival meetings in the county have been held by Bro. Morton, and he states that he has probably held his share of weddings and funerals. He remembers the first wedding performed under his Hico charge, that of Daniel C. Hulsey and Miss Birdie Lee Lambert, who were married in J. C. Rodgers' office in October, 1919.

With one exception he has buried every returned soldier in Hamilton County, according to the records of the American Legion. Words would be useless in showing the regard in which Bro. Morton and his family are held by the citizenship of this city. They join, however, in wishing for them happiness in their new home, success in their work and satisfaction with their new surroundings. Bro. Morton will preach at both the morning and evening hours next Sunday, at which time there is expected to be a large crowd on hand for both services, to show their respect and esteem for the pastor and their gratitude for his labors in their behalf.

HICO METHODIST CHURCH (Put God First)

Do we need a Revival? This question can be answered by asking two questions. First, have the lives of the members of the church reached their highest possible efficiency in the kingdom of God? Second, are there unsaved people in the town and community? The answers these questions give are: We are in need of a Revival. Pray for a Revival. Genuine Revivals are not got up, but they are sent down.

Subscribers Don't Want to Let Their Paper Stop Coming

People are still interested in keeping up with Hico—whether they live here or have taken up their residence elsewhere—judging from the way subscriptions have been coming in at the News Review office for the past few days. In addition to renewals, several new subscriptions have been secured.

A number of readers have told us that they save more than the price of subscription in one week often, by reading the advertisements and taking advantage of the bargains and special offers. Hico merchants are bidding for patronage in a big way, and the sooner everybody takes the home paper, the sooner they will come in for their share of savings on purchases.

MRS. W. A. HOWARD, city will receive the paper another year, as her son, Leonard, gave us the money Friday of last week to renew with Leonard is a good friend to the News Review, bringing in many subscriptions that are taken at the news stand of Miss Jonnie Huehington.

JOHN T. STOREY, who lives at Lockhart, was up several days ago to see about his Hico property, and came around to renew for the paper. He makes frequent visits to this city, and keeps up with what is going on in the meantime through the local newspaper. ROY MOFFATT, chief engineer of the Texas-Louisiana Power Company, over several districts in Texas, who makes his home in Hico, is a full-fledged citizen, taking part in all local affairs and reading his home paper. He renewed a few days ago.

EMMA DEE HALL who is attending the University of Missouri at Columbia, Mo., will receive the paper during her stay there, as her father, Dr. C. M. Hall, orders the subscription a short time ago. She is well pleased with the University and her work there, and we hope she finds some news from her old home to keep her from getting lonesome while attending school.

H. D. HAUGHT, Iredell, Texas, writes: "Editor, News Review, Hico. Kind Sir—Please find enclosed $1.00 for which renew my subscription for one year, and hope they enjoy reading the paper."

MRS. R. C. EPPERSON, Box 125, Hico, came by the office last Thursday morning and gave us some news, at the same time subscribing for the paper. They have recently moved back to Hico from Clifton. Her husband is chief engineer of the Texas-Louisiana Power Company plant here.

W. B. SWEATMON, who has been living in Hico about a month, moving here from his Hicoan in every way, and came in last Friday morning to subscribe for the paper. He has a nice ranch where he has been living, which embraces about 2250 acres of land and on which he has about a thousand head of sheep and about a hundred head of cattle. Hico citizens will welcome him and his wife to this city.

A. H. GLOVER, route 5, Hico, is one of our readers who gets his money's worth out of his subscription. He took advantage of our special Trade Merit offer last week end, and for his dollar will get 15 months time for the price of 12.

C. W. BLACKBURN also got a bargain through the Trade Merit offer last week end, sending the paper to his daughter, Mrs. J. F. Collins at 804 W. Wheeler St., Breckenridge, 15 months for the price of 12.

T. B. PERRY, who resides on Route 4, Hico, cheered our hearts and augmented our funds by a dollar last Saturday when he came in to take advantage of the Trade Merit Special subscription offer. He had brought a bale of cotton in, and was supplying some of his needs at the local stores. Mr. Perry related some of the facts concerning "the good old days" when cotton brought from 35c to 40c per pound, comparing that with present prices. He used good judgment then, and made a payment on a small place during that time, later paying it out, then bought another adjoining which he paid out, and now is happy to know he owns it. He believes in diversifying, and while cotton will be a little short this year, he has some turkeys which will help out on income.

E. A. KOONSMAN, who resides near Iredell, was in Monday to renew and pay a little account for advertising with us. He stated their chickens were doing fine, and a number of them would be sent to the Cotton Palace again this year. Each year for the past several, he has received prize money for his birds. Mr. Koonsman said they had quite a number of turkeys although about 100 were killed by early hail. He will make about 12 bales of cotton on 100 acres, where he made 35 last year. MRS. R. H. CHANDLER, drove up in her car Monday and handed us $1.00 for the paper for a period of one year. They have been off the list for a while, but want to continue again now.

W. L. THOMPSON was in Wednesday morning to renew for another year. He is a blacksmith, his shop being located near the Alpine Hotel, and says he enjoys reading the paper.

MRS. G. A. DANIEL told her husband to make some arrangements whereby she might read the News Review each week, and he conveyed the message to us Wednesday. We are entering their subscription for one year, and hope they enjoy reading the paper.

M. L. WHISENANT, local agent for the Sinclair Refining Company, desires to keep up with Hico, where he has been living since last December, and gave us a check this week to pay for subscription. He reports a nice business in his line, and states that he enjoys living and working in Hico.
