HICO, TEXAS, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1930

NUMBER 20

Here In HICO

There is a Republican candidate for the governorship of Texas, He wages a weak and futile fight for the office, but he has seized upon the opportunity to do Texas a mighty favor.

He is using his campaign thunder in a cause far more important than the winning of the governorship. He preaches the doctrine of "What Texas makes, makes Texas," and by example lays the educational foundations for the building of a tremendous industrial empire.

Newspaper reports indicate that he is dressed entirely in clothing of Texas manufacture. His suit, shirt and socks are said to have been manufactured in Sherman; underwear, necktie and handkerchiefs at McKinney; shoes at Ft. Worth, and the hat at Dallas.

He warns us that the further we send our money away from home, the longer it takes it to get back to us; that the greatest encouragement we can offer Texas industry is to buy Texas manufactured products.

What Texas needs is an "I Bought It In Texas" club. Enroll three million Texas men, women and children in such an organization, obligate them to demand a Texas label on every purchase and how the wheels of Texas industry would grind! How many thousands of idle men and women would be summoned back to office and factory! What prosperity would descend upon the State!

The foundations for a giant industry are contained in the practices and precepts of Colonel Talbot, sacrificial lamb for the Republican "organization" in Texas. It is to be regretted that his time and talents cannot be turned directly into the constructive channels for which he evidences such a predilection.

Establishment of the nation's only antimony smelter at Laredo opens up for Texas another industrial opportunity. Antimony is a metal which was first extracted from the ore in 1490 by Basil Valentine, a monk of Erfurt. It is of silver-white color, strong lustre, and of peculiar taste and smell. Its texture is radiated and fibrous, and the metal is so brittle that it may be pounded to powder in a mortar. Antimony is found on both sides of the international river in Big Bend county. Peculiarly enough, antimony cannot be used alone for any practical purpose, but combined with other metals it forms very valuable and useful alloys. As an instance, with lead and tin, the former found in and near Texas, commercial quantities, it makes the metal from which are cast linotype slugs, type faces and stereotypes, all used in the printing of your newspapers.

Helium—the gas which, because it is neither inflammable nor explosive, makes giant air-craft safe and practicable—is found in the other extremity of Texas, in the Amarillo section of the Panhandle, where it is recovered from the flow of natural gas wells. Amarillo likes to be called "The Helium City" because it is the only helium-producing center in the United States. Which, it appears, makes Texas unique among the states in another very important respect.

Since for some reason, or no reason at all, we've got to talking about Texas' unusual natural resources, probably we should mention that chemical anomaly which occurs way out in West Texas, at Mica (near El Paso). Here are mined non-metallic silvers, bronzes and other colorful substances that are being extensively used in continental Europe for the beautification of concrete construction. Nothing like this, so chemists and engineers inform us, anywhere else in the world.

Who knows when Texas will cease to startle us by pulling out of her bag of wonders some newer, stranger resource? Though she be fifth in population, first in agriculture, and high in the industrial ranks of the United States, Texas remains one of the magnificently mysterious areas of the Western Hemisphere. The man has not yet been born who can estimate the extent of the natural wealth to which her sons are heirs.

Opportunity has never ceased to pound at the door of the Texan who has not stopped his ears so that he could not hear her summons, and blinded his eyes so that he could not follow where she led him.

On Honor Roll.

Word has reached Hico that Rev. and Mrs. D. D. Tidwell, students in Howard Payne College at Brownwood, were on the honor roll for the past month.

Fairy Residence Destroyed by Fire Tuesday Morning

According to Mrs. W. L. Jones, the News Review correspondent at Fairy, the home of Pricie Cox about a mile southeast of that place was destroyed by fire about the middle of the morning Tuesday. Some of the contents were saved, but the dwelling itself was a complete loss. It was understood that Mr. Cox had about $2,000 worth of insurance on the house, and none on the furniture and contents, or at least not nearly enough to take care of the loss.

Mr. and Mrs. Cox have been living there by themselves lately, their daughter being in school at Stephenville, and Mr. Cox was away from the house at the time the fire started. It is thought to have caught in a closet, and the structure was a complete loss on account of inadequate fire-fighting equipment.

Simpson, special agent of the Department of Commerce in Hamilton county, there were 6592 bales of cotton, counting round bales as half bales, ginned in the county from the crop of 1930 up to October 1. This is compared with 9,144 bales to the same date last year.

AMENDMENTS TO BE VOTED ON IN THE GENERAL ELECTION

Tuesday, November 4th, will be election day again, this being the date set for the general election, and then the fireworks will all be over until year after next.

The ballots for Hamilton county have been printed, and everything is in readiness for absentee voting which begins in advance of the regular election. The ballot this year is a large one, containing the list of candidates in the Democratic, Republican and Socialist parties, and two other blank rows, one for the Communist party and one for an independent party of whatever designation the voter chooses. A sample ballot appears on page six of this issue of the paper, and voters may acquaint themselves with same by inspecting it.

In addition to the party nominees, the ballot also includes the five constitutional amendments which are to be voted on at this election. These amendments are causing much discussion, and seem to be favored by a majority of the political authorities of the State. However we are printing the substance of them so that each voter may study them and make up his or her mind accordingly. They at least are deserving of this consideration and thought.

County Judge P. M. Rice has made the work of voting and counting the votes easier this year through a more efficient arrangement of the precinct offices on the ballot. There are three commissioners precincts and eight justice precincts in Hamilton county, and instead of having all appear on each ballot, only those to be voted on in the different precincts are on the ballot sent to that particular box. For instance, the Hico ballot is shown in this issue. Fairy votes on the same candidates as Hico. But other boxes in different precincts vote on other candidates, and the names of these appear on their ballots.

ESSENTIAL QUALIFICATIONS OR SOUL-WINNING

To win for Christ, the person should possess many qualifications but three qualifications are imperative in order to be a soul winner. First, a certainty of one's own salvation. An experience of personal relationship with God, secured through the atonement of Jesus Christ. Second, a consistent Godly life. A life which conforms to the life of Christ. Third, a spirit filled life. A touch of the dynamic energy of the Holy Spirit must be felt in the heart and life of the Christian in order to win men for the Master.

HON. JOE EIDSON OF Hamilton, paid the office a visit last Thursday and paid for his subscription for another year.

Mr. Eidson said he could not do without the Hico paper. He is busy most of the time and does not get to visit here as much as he would like, so keeps up with the news through the paper.

Mrs. MARY OLSEN, who has been a Hico resident for a year, in the employ of the Texas-Louisiana Power Company, got used to reading the News Review while living here and ordered it sent to her at Meridian for the coming year, where she has been transferred with the same company. The News Review and her many friends wish her success and happiness in her new home.

O. G. PINGLETON, Route 3, was in Saturday and had a nice chat with us about business conditions. He said they were not quite through with cotton in his community, and turkeys were not plentiful about his place this year, but according to farmers he had talked with he thought there would be a good crop around Hico. He considered the price now prevailing to be fair for this time of the year.

E. B. POWELL, agent for the Cotton Belt Railway at Carlton, wrote us to send the paper to him and enclosed a check to pay for same.

J. H. HARDIN, who is an expert when it comes to moving and hauling, ordered the News Review started to him again this week, having let his time run out recently and neglecting for a few weeks to get it started again.

J. C. LANE, city, was in Wednesday morning to renew his subscription for another year, as it is just now out.

Keeping Up With TEXAS

Texas will have a million and a half acres under irrigation when present projects are completed, tripling the irrigated area of 1920 which was a half million acres.

After tossing about in swirling floodwaters of the Canadian River for 10 miles Sunday, clinging to wreckage, Thomas L. Gill, 21, of Amarillo, was rescued by Borger firemen near the town of Borger, when they lowered a rope from a bridge in time to catch Gill's outstretched arms as he floated under the bridge.

Texas has more farm-owned motor vehicles than any other state in the union with 357,000 passenger cars and 42,600 trucks, according to American Research Foundation. Ohio is second, Illinois third, Iowa fourth, Pennsylvania fourth, Wisconsin fifth and New York sixth.

Fireman R. A. Short, Big Spring, was killed; Engineer T. B. Petty, 50, Dallas, was cut and a woman whose name was not immediately learned was hurt Sunday afternoon when eastbound Texas and Pacific passenger train No. 10 overturned after leaving the rails near Eagle Ford, west of Dallas.

Texas showed a gain of 6 per cent in electrical output for July, according to U. S. Geological Survey figures.

While his wife stood helplessly by, Finis C. Priestly, county clerk of Fannin County, burned to death beneath his automobile, which overturned Monday on the highway, nine miles south of Honey Grove, a cotton buyer of Honey Grove, whose name was not learned, came upon the burning automobile shortly after the accident occurred and rendered what assistance he could, but was too late to save the life of the imprisoned driver, who was a cripple.

Walter Coffman Jr. celebrated his first birthday by falling from a third story of a hotel at Denison Monday. He got off with only a few scratches.

Virgil Seahorn, a deaf mute of Rosewood, left home last Friday to visit his wife, who was on a visit to Freeport, Saturday morning he was found in a box car, beaten to death, his body being badly bruised all over. His money had been taken.

A hanging attempt made by a 36-year-old prisoner at the North Side police station in Houston was thwarted early Tuesday. Another prisoner called the jailers, who found the man with a rope made of a blanket around his neck. He had fastened one end to a cell bar and had jumped from a bank. The prisoner was not seriously hurt. He had been arrested on a charge of intoxication.

Flood waters that swept across Texas through rivers and creeks the past several days claimed three lives, it was revealed the first of the week. The victims were: R. W. Brown of Canadian, Earl Calhoun of Eldorado, and E. M. Duke of Del Rio. Brown was drowned when he tried to ford Gageley Creek on his horse, and Calhoun and Duke were thought to have perished Sunday night while trying to drive an automobile across the South Concho River at Christoval.

The Colorado River was three feet higher Wednesday than last week and is still rising. There has been no traffic across bridge on Pecan Belt Highway in the Goldthwaite section since early Tuesday. It is reported that the Colorado bridge at Regency is washed out.

Mrs. A. V. Bradley has just returned to her home at Godley after a 1200 mile trip through the West, and although past 90 years old, she found a decided thrill in an airplane ride over the mountain country of Colorado. Mrs. Bradley took up airplane in Canyon City, Colo. and was in the air for eight hours, seeing much of the scenic wonder of that section.

The total 4c gasoline tax collected for the fiscal year ending Aug. 31 was $32,221,529, according to the annual report of Comptroller George H. Sheppard, which is being prepared. The amount claimed as a refund was $2,292,535, leaving a total of $29,928,994 to be prorated to the highway and the available school fund. Three-fourths of it, or $22,446,745 will go to the highway fund, and one-fourth or $7,482,248 to the schools.

Texas cotton growers who have delivered cotton to the Texas Cotton Co-operative Association to be marketed co-operatively have already this season been advanced the sum of $17,818,698.13, according to Harry Williams, general manager. This amount represents actual cash payments to association.

P.-T. A. President Makes Appeal For Cooperation in Work

"If a thing is worth doing, it is worth doing well." We come together now, whether in Parent-Teacher Association, in Mother's clubs or in other associations to study actual conditions and possibilities of improving them in home, school and community.

Let us first agree that no speech or discussion is of value to us which is not capable of being related to local needs and interests. No inspiration is worthy of the name which does not result in aspiration and in action. Every good citizen should be interested in the Parent-Teachers' movement. There is a positive side to good citizenship in any town. Generally speaking, this means that in order to be a good citizen of any town or community, one must be willing to do the things that help to improve our town or community.

The Parent-Teacher Association is carrying on a work that is worthy of notice. We are not only builders of human lives, but we are in truth, town, city and state builders. While the commercial interests for the purpose of increasing our population, are providing conditions which will attract and hold a desirable citizenship.

Good homes, good schools, a wholesome community life, are the objects of our concentrated effort, and these are the influences that guide parents in the selection of their home. For what grander, or holier purpose under heaven does a human being need knowledge than for the training of a child? And there is no better way to receive this training than through the Parent-Teacher Association.

Will not many wish to join our band to help on the good work?
MRS. PERRY G. HAYS, Pres.

SUGGESTIONS ASKED FOR METHODS OF ADVERTISING TEXAS AT WORLD'S FAIR

James C. Kennedy, Chairman of the Texas World's Fair Commission, the body appointed by Gov. Moody to see that Texas is adequately represented at the Chicago World's Fair, announces that requests are being sent to outstanding men in leading industries of Texas for suggestions for the best methods of advertising these key industries of the State in the proposed Texas Building at the Chicago Fair.

These requests are made not only of Texas manufacturers but also of producers of Texas' chief natural products, including oil, gas, cotton, sulphur, rice; also lumber, cement, food and other products.

Plans for Texas' participation in the Fair, along with her sister states of the Union, are rapidly maturing, according to Mr. Kennedy, who as head of a great utility company is one of the best known men in the state and also one of the best posted regarding the development and resources of Texas.

"The Fair management," said Mr. Kennedy in a recent interview, "has christened this celebration 'A century of progress exposition,' aiming not only to portray the hundred-years growth of Chicago but also to visualize the great development of the entire United States during the past century. This will largely be done by the presentation of its own progress by each state; and certainly no state can show such marvelous progress as Texas, or offer such unlimited opportunities for future development along myriads of lines.

"For Texas to fail to seize this great opportunity to advertise its resources is unthinkable," declared Mr. Kennedy. "Our Commission is now functioning and will soon present to the people of the state definite plans for their approval."

HALLOWEEN CARNIVAL

In Hico Friday night, Oct. 31. Mothers, make your children some kind of a little costume and let them march in the parade. You may have all the horns, whistles or bells you want and make all the noise you want to. Remember you can buy hot chocolate, cake, pie and chicken sandwiches, pop corn balls, hamburgers and peanuts. There will be plenty of amusements for every body. Be sure and come.

SUBSCRIBERS STILL COMING IN TO PAY UP

It is getting the time of the year when people begin to think about the cold, rainy days, and the long nights that are good for reading, and people who are interested in Hico and this section are taking advantage of the liberal share of news and fiction to be found in the columns of the News Review. The past few days have seen many renewals of subscriptions, with several new names added to our list.

It is the endeavor of the management to print all the local news that is worthy of the space, a liberal share of state and general news, and in addition the columns of the News Review each week carry a continued story, which is popular with many, and short feature articles by nationally known writers.

And just here let us give you a tip: If you are not reading the advertisements, you are missing an opportunity to save many times the price of a year's subscription each week. Hico merchants are determined to give the best values possible every day in the week and every week in the year, and are more and more coming to tell you about their offerings through the home paper. Nearly everyone recognizes this and this department of the paper is gaining in prestige.

W. R. HAMPTON, who lives on the old John Slaughter place, 2 miles toward Duffau on Route 4, was in several days ago with some butter to sell, and dropped by the N. R. office to get acquainted with the editor and subscribe for the paper. Mr. Hampton moved here about three months ago from Merkel, and says he has always taken the paper in the community where he makes his home. He seems to be quite a reader, and is well posted on all matters of the present day. We'll bet he is a cracker-jack good manager on the farm and about his home, too.

MRS. BARTO GAMBLE brought us a dollar recently to pay for the News Review for the coming year. She says they get double duty out of their home paper, for when they get through reading it they send it to their son, Doris, who is attending Baylor Medical College at Dallas.

JOHN GOLIGHTLY, well known to all Hico folks, who lives in the Clairette community, renewed his subscription recently for another 15 months. Mr. Golightly gets full benefit from his paper, for he reads the ads each week and finds that he saves money on many of his purchases. We know he reads them too, for he took advantage of the special offer we made recently of 15 months subscription for the price of 12.

J. R. MASSINGILL, city water superintendent, dropped in early Monday morning of last week and handed us a dollar bill to send him the paper for the coming year. He was so nice about the deal that we didn't even say a word or kick a bit when we paid our water bill a few days later.

L. J. CHANEY, who operates the Gulf filling station in the north part of town, was in Friday of last week to renew for the News Review.

ALLEN BENNETT, who gets his mail at Stephenville, subscribed for the News Review recently and got the bargain rate of 15 months for the price of one year's subscription, offered on Trade Merit Days only. Mr. Bennett is working in Hico with the store of Moser & Son, who recently bought the Leach Variety Store.

MRS. W. G. SMITH sent in her dollar several days ago to pay for the News Review another year. She is a daughter-in-law of J. J. Smith. We hope she don't believe anything J. J. tells her about the editor of this paper.

R. H. ROBERSON, Route 5, Hico, renewed recently for another year. These old reliable subscribers are always welcome in the office, and we welcome them and appreciate their spirit in renewing promptly when notified that it is pay-up time again.

A. B. SAWYER writes from Iredell: "I received a notice that my subscription to the News Review expires next week, find check enclosed for $1.00 for which please send me the paper for 15 months. Am taking advantage of the Trade Merit Special." Those Iredell people are faithful friends, too, and we think a lot of their friendship. If we should leave Hico to find a better place in which to run a newspaper, we would sure give Iredell a look-see. Not that we intend to do so, however, for we enjoy their trade and friendship to a large degree as it is, being close neighbors to them.

WALLACE RATLIFF, meat dispenser and general manager of the Sanitary Market, paid up last week for six months. He takes the paper regularly, but subscribed for the short term so that his subscription would run out at the same time as that of his father at Running Water, which he also pays for.

J. H. HICKS, Route 3, Hico, was in last Wednesday to renew for his paper. He came in early so that he might not miss a copy of the paper. Mr. Hicks reported a good rain in his section, which wet the ground well and will help to make a good season.

Sixth Installment

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Giles Chitttenham swears to avenge the death of his young half-brother Rodney, driven to suicide by the notorious Julie Farrow who had spurned his love. He will make Julie love him, then throw her aside as she threw Rodney. He meets her in Switzerland, goes with her to the hotel on the St. Bernard Pass, and succeeds in winning her love. To his amazement, he discovers that he has fallen overwhelmingly in love with her himself! And he is married, to an American girl with whom he has nothing in common.

Then he discovers that this girl is not the same Julie Farrow who ruined Rodney, but her cousin of the same name. She scorns him when he confesses his love and his inability to marry her. They meet later in London, where she is going the pace that kills. Another man, Lawrence Schofield, wants to marry her, in spite of her wild life.

Through his friend Lombard, Giles Chitttenham meets the "other Julie," the notorious woman who had ruined Rodney's life.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

She sat beside him, and her voice and her laugh, and her little tricks of manner sometimes made it seem impossible that she was not the same woman who had come so happily to his arms in the cold, bleak room of the little hotel high up in the mountains.

She told Giles frankly that she had been a little nervous of meeting him.

"I thought perhaps the family hatred had extended itself to you," she said bitterly. "Life is very unkind to some of us, Mr. Chitttenham. I am glad you do not hate me as badly as I had expected you would."

Chitttenham hesitated.

"When I was on the other side of the world my hatred for you was a very real and vital thing," he said gravely. "I used to hope for an opportunity to, well—"

He shrugged his shoulders and smiled. "Avenge" is such a melodramatic word, isn't it?"

"There is no other word that gives quite the same explanation," she answered. "Don't you still hope for it?"

"No."

"What made you change?" Giles looked away from her down the crowded little restaurant and in an aching imagination he saw again the bare, ugly room of the mountain hotel, and heard the wind howling as it flung the soft snow against the windows.

"Something happened—"

She did not answer at once, then she said quietly:

"Well, whatever it was, I am glad I don't want to be hated any more. I don't think any one—even your mother—could hate me any more if she knew what I know."

"What do you mean?" Julie levered her voice.

"If you would like to drive home with me afterwards I will tell you."

"What is it you were going to tell me?" Giles asked after they got into her car. He felt an immense curiosity in this woman, and also an inexplicable pity for her, which somehow angered him.

According to all accounts she was worthless and heartless, and yet—once before he had blundered into tragedy through listening to and believing the things other people said.

The car stopped.

"We are just home," Julie said. "Come in, and I will tell you."

Julie threw herself down into a big chair with a half sigh.

breath as if of pain. "Some one really loved. There was a man I once really loved, Mr. Chitttenham."

"I am sure there was."

"He died—"

"He died—"

as people have made out. It was not my fault about—Rodney. I told him so many times it was useless—why, he was only a boy compared with me—a spoilt, weak boy."

"I am afraid he was."

"So don't think too badly of me. She drew her hand gently away. "And now—please go. I'm so tired."

She did not look at him or rise from her chair, and Giles walked reluctantly to the door, pausing when he reached it to look back. It seemed horrible to leave her like that—alone! Horrible to think that all of her friends and lovers she had known there was not one to stand by her now and hold her hand as she went through the dark valley lying before her.

A day or two later he saw a small announcement in a newspaper to the effect that she had gone abroad, and would be absent for some time, and that no letters would be forwarded. It was the same night that his mother rang up on the telephone to inform him that she was giving a party.

"When?" he asked ruthlessly cutting short her voluble explanations.

"To-night. Twelve midnight. Giles. There'll be ham and eggs and hot coffee about four."

"Good Lord!"

"Don't talk like that. It will be such fun. Every one coming?"

"Who is everyone?"

"Boris, of course—she's bringing a party. And Lawrence Schofield—"

"What made you ask him?"

"To please Miss Farrow, of course. They're always together! I really believe they will make a match of it."

"I thought you didn't like Miss Farrow?"

"Well, just between ourselves, I don't. But I find that one must be broad-minded in the matters. You see, it takes all sorts to make a world."

"It certainly does. Who else?"

"A lot of people you don't know—"

She rang off and Giles turned away from the phone with a shrug of his shoulders. It was only when he was in his mother's house that he suddenly realized that in all probability Sadie would be there also. For a moment he hesitated, a sudden chill feeling at his heart, then he philosophically pushed the thought aside and went on.

She was almost the first person he saw when he entered Mrs. Ardrot's crowded drawing room.

She was talking to a group of people which included Julie Farrow and several others whom Giles knew slightly, and it was Julie who first caught sight of him and waved an airy hand.

Giles went straight across to her. He did not know in the least what reception to expect from his wife, but after he had greeted Julie and the others whom he knew, it was she who said in her insistent way:

"Present your friend."

It was Julie who obeyed.

"Mr. Chitttenham, Miss Barrow—"

"Pleased to meet you," Sadie said impudently.

There was a twinkle in her eyes for which Giles could have shaken her.

Schofield was with Julie, beaming happily upon every one.

"We haven't met lately, Mr. Chitttenham," Julie was saying.

"Where have you been hiding? So kind of your mother to ask me here to-night."

"So kind of you to come," Giles answered formally. He could see that Sadie was manoeuvring to reach his side, and presently they were a little apart from the rest.

"Isn't it a scream?" Sadie demanded. "Fancy meeting you in your own mother's house, and she not knowing that she's entertaining a daughter-in-law unawares?"

"You are at perfect liberty to tell her if you choose," Giles answered coolly, though inwardly he was raging. "I have no doubt that you have told other people already."

Sadie gave a little scream of repudiation.

"Tell any one! Not me! It would cook my little goose once and for all if it was known that I'd got such highly respectable relations. No, thanks. Freedom for me all the time, and if there's anything left over, freedom again."

"Why have you come to London?"

Her face changed subtly.

"Not to find you, my lambkin, so don't worry! I've come to have a good time, and don't you interfere, or it will be the worse for you."

"Sadie, the situation is impossible—"

"Rubbish! Don't pretend that you want me to come back to you."

Sadie shrugged her naked shoulders. "Times change!" she said. She moved away from him, her slim, scantily-clad body swaying with a little impudent movement.

Giles watched her with hard eyes. And this was his wife! This common little—she pulled his thoughts up sharply, ashamed of them. After all, he had once thought her good enough to marry.

Giles turned again to Julie.

"I suppose it would be utterly useless for me to ask you to drop this damnable play-acting?"

"My dear man, what on earth do you mean?"

"What I say. You're never natural for a single moment. You hate this sort of—of piffle—as much as I hate it. You—you despise people like—like these people here—"

AN HONEST MAN

A man died the other day in New York whose business record contained not a single blemish. Daniel Guggenheim and his five brothers, sons of Meyer Guggenheim, made money by literally tens of millions. They made it in one of the three fundamental industries. There are three lines of business which increase the world's basic wealth and only three; they are farming, fishing and mining. The Guggenheims were miners, owners of the world's largest source of copper.

They let others share the profits of their mining enterprises, but they never let anyone share their losses. If a mining prospect "pettered out" before it had returned the money invested in developing it, the Guggenheim brothers shouldered all the loss; if it made money, every investor got his share in proportion to his investment. In one instance they sold more than $1,500,000 to investors, out of their own pockets, because the mine in which they had invested did not turn out as well as had been expected.

It was Daniel Guggenheim's money, $2,500,000 of it, which went to finance the extensive experiments made in the past three or four years, looking toward making aviation safer. In many other ways he was a public benefactor. But he will be remembered all over the world—for his operations were world wide—primarily as an honest man, whose pride it was to deal justly with his fellow-men.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES

Anybody who has been reading the reports from the world's grain markets lately must find himself puzzled by the different standards by which wheat is measured in different countries.

Our bushel of wheat, weighing 60 pounds, has to be translated when the wheat goes into the export trade. England measures wheat by the "quarter." A quarter is 480 pounds; everybody has forgotten what it is a quarter of. It may contain eight English bushels or sometimes eight and a quarter. Germany deals in wheat by the quintal, but a quintal may be anywhere from 101.28 pounds, as in Argentina, to 220.46 pounds, which is the metric quintal, one-tenth of the metric ton of 1,000 kilograms, equal to 2,204 pounds. France sticks closely to the metric weights, but German grain merchants talk also in terms of sentners and double sentners, while in Scotland and Ireland the way of 41.282 bushels is the standard wheat measurement, the quarter being theoretically one-quarter of that.

Russia, whose activity in the wheat market has revived interest in these world-wide variations in measurement of wheat, deals in pecks. A peck is 35.113 pounds, and like everything else Russian it seems to have no relation to any standards known outside. But whether wheat is measured in tons, quarters, pecks or bushels, makes little difference to the grower who must sell it at a loss.

THE RIGHT COLOR FOR A BARN

What is the best color to paint a barn? That question is agitating some of the Eastern newspapers. Some think that to keep up with the times farmers ought to paint their barns white. They must be referring to "agriculturists" rather than to farmers. An agriculturist is a man who earns his money somewhere else and spends it on his farm. There are many such in the East, city men who keep up country estates.

"Which will you have, milk or champagne?" asked one of these "gentlemen farmers" of a guest. "They cost me the same." The real controversy is not over a question of white paint, which any practical farmer will tell you is too expensive in both first cost and upkeep, when the area of the barn's exterior walls is considered, but whether a barn should be painted at all. There is one school which holds that a red barn is not only an attractive thing to look at but that it will last longer than an unpainted barn. But the opponents of this view proudly point to the unpainted barns which dot the Eastern landscape, which have stood, many of them, for a hundred years and then some, and whose white pine boards are still sound and weatherproof.

The unpainted barn, its advocates declare, becomes a part of the landscape; it is nearer to Nature than if it were painted in any color at all. Grant that, and the question still remains a practical one rather than one of beauty. From the farmer's point of view, it would seem to be a question of climate and the kind of wood used in building the barn. Some lumber will stand a century of unpainted exposure, other kinds of wood will speedily decay unless painted.

It is not an important question, but it has its amusing suggestions. What if we were to paint barns in the gay pinks, blues and yellows which the peoples of some European countries effect for their buildings? Or why not decorate their exteriors, if not with landscapes, then with "modern" art in strange bands, triangles and curlicues of vivid reds, greens and purples? If the purpose is to add to the gaiety of the scene, why not?

There was a time when most of the barns, in some sections of the country, were at least partly painted. What has become of all of the advertisements of cereals for man and beast which used to decorate the farm outbuildings? Farmers today don't tolerate the use of their property for such useless advertising. About the only signs we see on the progressive farmer's barn are the owner's name and the announcement that he is a member of the Farm Bureau and his cows have been tuberculin tested.

AUTOGIRO

Before the gas engine was invented, before anybody had ever believed the airplane possible, Thomas A. Edison invented a flying machine which was to be lifted into the air by a horizontal windmill propeller, the power derived from a series of gun-cotton explosions.

The other day Mr. Edison saw James Ray and James Faulkner land at Newark after a flight from Philadelphia in a machine they called an "autogiro" which, except for the engine, was just like the early Edison dream. It is entirely possible that the autogiro, which can rise vertically, land "on a dime" and fly as slow as 20 miles or as fast as 115 miles an hour will be the airplane of the future.

LONDON

The municipality of London is still the largest city in the world, with 7,849,000 population, compared with New York's 1930 Census figure of 6,981,927. But in the area known as "circled New York" the territory included in a radius of 19 miles from the City Hall, which takes in part of New Jersey and three New York counties, not included in the city proper, there is a population about 1,400,000 greater than in the so-called "London traffic area" which extends nearly thirty miles from the center of London.

Contrary to the general idea, the average height of buildings in London is higher than in New York. The many huge skyscrapers rising from 30 to 60 stories, in New York, and counter-balanced by the tens of thousands of buildings only three or four stories high, London has only two or three buildings more than seven stories high, but very few under five stories. The London County Council recently refused an application for permission to build a new hotel ten stories tall, and fixed nine stories as the limit.

FOOD

Food fads and faddists cost the American farmer millions of dollars a year, according to Henry Stude, president of the American Bakers Association. Mr. Stude's organization is trying to get people to go back to the habit of eating bread—not whole wheat bread or Graham bread or any kind of "health" bread, but just ordinary white bread.

There is a good deal in the suggestion that many persons have been frightened away from bread by the idea that it is fattening. The craze for slenderness is not confined to women; men must have been taught that fat is dangerous. The real danger is in not eating enough nutritive food to supply the necessary bodily energy. "Eat what's set before you," was the rule for children, when I was a boy. It is still a good rule. Most of us can digest anything and the wider our range of diet the more healthy we are likely to be.

WHEAT

In every state but Georgia the August price of corn was higher than the price of wheat. Such a state of things occur only once in a long time, wheat usually being the highest-priced grain. This year there is a big wheat surplus and a short corn crop.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture and the Federal Farm Board are advocating using the wheat surplus to feed livestock. It is figured that the food value of wheat is so much higher than that of corn, that with corn at a dollar a bushel the farmer can afford to pay $1.12 1-2 for wheat for feeding.

Many farmers have reported their experience in feeding wheat in the past, for cattle, hogs and poultry, with uniform satisfaction. Some say that it fattens hogs faster than corn does. It would be strange if wheat

Teaching Personality

New York University announces a new course in "personality" for business men and women. Edward J. Kilduff, assistant dean in the school of commerce, accounts and finance, says: "Studies have shown that success, even in such technical lines as engineering, is due approximately 15 per cent to technical knowledge and about 85 per cent to those human qualities which have to do with successful dealing with people."

RAILROADS

George Gould's ambition was to own a railroad system which would stretch from the Atlantic to the Pacific. He died with his ambition unrealized. E. H. Harriman, James J. Hill and Commodore Vanderbilt failed in their similar efforts. The Canadian Pacific and the Canadian National systems run from coast to coast in Canada, but only this year the first system under one control to cover the whole United States was completed.

In 1916 the Van Sweringen Brothers of Cleveland wanted a right of way for a trolley line to their real estate development, Shaker Heights. They could get it only by buying the decrepit Nickel Plate railroad, which they did, mostly on credit. That gave them a line from Buffalo to Chicago and soon they were up to their ears in the railroad business. Now, after 14 years, they control also the Erie, the Chesapeake & Ohio, the Hocking Valley, Pere Marquette, Wheeling & Lake Erie, Chicago & Eastern Illinois and Missouri Pacific.

Their 18,000 miles of road is the largest railroad system in the United States. It is capitalized at $808,000,000 and valued at over two billions. That is going a long way in 14 years.

Don't Know Who Won

It was a rousing good game. The score and the name of the winning team will be announced later. I'll also try to find out who it was that lost. I haven't had a chance to buy a newspaper yet.

The most exciting feature of the contest took place in the third inning—or do you call it a quarter?—when a near panic occurred in the grandstand. A small boy, dispensing soft drinks to the crowd, became confused in making change and yelled:

"Whose dollar is this?"

Dead and wounded are as follows. It all brings to mind the gag about the fond mother who was visiting her freshman son at college.

John had showed her the campus and the stadium. "Now, mother," he said, "we'll take a look at the polo field."

"Ah," exclaimed the mother rapturously, "what could be nicer than fields of waving polo!"

Other sets have an automatic mechanism that changes the phonograph records. Everything but rock the baby... and meet the monthly payments. Those gaudy, epauletted ushers who glitter like rear admirals in Broadway movie temples are giving way, in many cases, to girl employees.

Girls are obtainable at much lower wages. And box offices, like everything else, are feeling the pinch of depression. Besides, say the managers, girls are more efficient and attentive.

A gasoline filling station near Jersey City features girl attendants exclusively. They look right fetching in their white jumpers and white caps, worn jauntily over one eye.

Leaders in the industry predict that more and more homes will have radio sets in several different rooms. Many new homes will have them built, concealed, into the house walls.

Special to Hico News Review

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Since scientists discovered that the health producing substances called vitamins come from sunlight, careful studies of the effect of the sun's rays upon livestock, as well as human beings, have been made by the Department of Agriculture. It seems to be proved that exposure to the direct rays of the sun not only keeps animals healthy but pays in other ways, Hens lay better when they have plenty of sunshine; hogs and sheep and beef cattle assimilate their food better and take on weight more rapidly, moreover, parasites and diseased germs do not multiply so freely under the rays of the sun as they do in darkness.

The part of the sunlight which carries the health giving vitamins is the short rays which are invisible to the eye, known as the ultra-violet rays. The problem of exposing domestic animals to these ultra-violet rays in the winter is a difficult one, because these rays do not pass through ordinary window glass, and in most sections of the United States shelter from the cold is more important than exposure to the sun.

Many glass manufacturers are spending huge sums in the effort to produce a glass which will let the ultra-violet rays pass through. If this can be accomplished, at a cost which will not be prohibitive, the progressive farmer of the future will build his barns and poultry houses with the south front of the buildings entirely of glass, like a hot-house, so that his livestock will at once be protected from the weather and exposed to every available bit of winter sunshine.

The United States Bureau of Standards has been making thorough tests of all of the different kinds of glass so far produced with this end in view. One manufacturer, according to Dr. W. W. Coblenz of the Bureau of Standards, has succeeded in making glass which will let upward of 60 per cent of ultra-violet rays pass through, and will not deteriorate with time. All of the other kinds of glass which let the ultra-violet rays through when the glass is new, gradually lose their quality, because of the presence of a minute quantity of iron in the glass. Only one manufacturer so far has learned how to eliminate all traces of iron.

As yet, this new glass is too expensive for general use, costing about $2.00 a square foot, or about six times the price of ordinary window glass. It seems probable, however, that with increased use and larger production the cost will be materially reduced. Even at the present price, experiments which have been made indicate that the use of ultra-violet glass may be profitable, its cost being more than offset by increased egg production, speedier fattening of hogs and cattle, and, in some newspaper published in your county, to appear at the next regular term of the County Court of Hamilton County, to be held at the Court House thereof, in Hamilton, on the third Monday in October 1930, the same being the 20th day of October 1930, then and there to answer a petition filed in said Court on the 2nd day of August 1930, in a suit, numbered on the docket of said Court No. 977, Dorein Anna L. Plaintiffs further alleging that on the 5th day of April 1926, the defendant made, executed and delivered to said McKinley Brothers another note in the sum of $27.50, due and payable to said McKinley Brothers on the first day of October 1926, with interest from date of maturity at the rate of ten per cent per annum and ten per cent additional as attorney's fees if placed in the hands of an attorney for collection.

Plaintiffs alleging that they are now owners of both of said notes having acquired same in due course and for a valuable consideration. That both of said notes are long past due, and that defendant, has failed and refused to pay said notes, or either of them, to plaintiffs damage in the amount now due thereon. SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

International Sunday School Lesson for October 19 SIMEON AND ANNA Luke 2:25-39

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D. Sins in adult life engulf many who are able to overcome all the temptations that come with growing youth and middle age. One reason may be that there is an overconfidence with the advancing years. Two Bible characters help to show us how to grow old safely and gracefully. Simeon and Anna accomplished this, in part, by continuing purposeful during every year. Simeon must have been a Temple character. For years he had been noted by all who came up to worship there. Evidently his piety was not a matter of affection. Real religion is as noticeable today.

Reference to the Holy Spirit is most significant. Like the Second Person in the Trinity, the Third Person was co-existent with the Father from the beginning though there was a special manifestation of Himself and His office work in time. Through the communion of the Spirit Simeon understand that he was to remain in this earthly life, until he had seen "the Lord's Christ."

Triumphant in his faithful waiting the old saint takes the babe in his arms and praises God in the NUNC DIMITTIS: "Now lettest thou thy servant depart, Lord, according to thy word, in peace."

Anna is another prophetess, named with Miriam, Deborah and Huldah of Old Testament record. She, too had been faithful in her Temple activities during a length of years. She was now 105 and had been a widow for 84 years. Because she did not absent herself from the Temple that particular day she was honored in thus coming into relationship with the Life that has become the greatest force in all the ages.

HUMORETTES "What's the sixth sense?" "That must be the one that's used for looking into the fourth dimension."

Mother: "I don't like to shout at you, Harold." Little Harold: "And I can't say that I like it, either, mummy."

THE NEW TEXACO MOTOR OIL

"...more than meets the requirements of today's high compression engines," says the HOCHSTADTER LABORATORIES, INC.,

A STUDY of this report reveals a number of interesting facts about this new lubricant. It is definitely shown that the new Texaco Golden Motor Oil has a higher viscosity at high temperatures and a lower viscosity at low temperatures. It is an oil with a flatter viscosity curve, which means greater heat-resisting qualities and a longer-lasting body.

It will hold its lubricating qualities throughout the entire range of engine temperatures with a very low oil consumption. This was substantiated and proved in a nation-wide road test under extremely varied driving conditions in which the thirteen test cars averaged 790 miles to the quart.

The new Texaco is manufactured in 5 grades: C, D, E, F, and G, conforming with Society of Automotive Engineers viscosity gradings. Sold in all of our 48 States under the Texaco Red Star with the Green T. 30c a quart (35c for Grade G).

Dear Sir:

We are enclosing herewith a detailed report of our laboratory tests on low viscosity motor oils. The tests of the five grades submitted to a laboratory station which included all of the standard tests stipulated for determining the lubricating value of Motor Oil.

Summarizing the results of these tests, we find:

That this new oil conforms with every requirement for quality specified by the individual automobile manufacturers.

That this oil fully meets the requirements of all of the conditions specified in the specifications for gasoline engine oils.

That, considering the nature of the combination of all of the conditions, this oil more than meets the requirements of today's high compression engines.

Sincerely yours,
Hochstadter Laboratories, Inc.

THE UNDERNOURISHED

I believe it is the practical thoughts that benefit mankind most; the ideas that folks can assimilate to a full appreciation of their worth. There is plenty of instructive matter in the field round about us, if we only pause long enough to observe intelligently.

The pig is a marvel in his capacity to take on avoirdupois; our lean and lanky brethren could, it seems to me, learn more from a study of the lowly porker than from many pages of words about the elusive and mysterious vitamin and calory.

The pig is not a thinker; he is neither saint nor sinner; he worries not about the yesterday or the tomorrow; he just lives as God intended that he should; he does not worry and never squeals unless something interferes with his comfort; and, he never has indigestion, jaundice, appendicitis, diabetes, melancholia, paralysis, insanity, flat-foot, anaemia, psittacosis, cataract, glaucoma, "female trouble," or rheumatism or neuritis.

Neither would humanity if it lived as sensibly as the average pig does. I fail to see the wisdom of rushing frantically after "science" when we might learn so much from the common American pig.

The splendid rose attains perfection in the proper sort of atmosphere, soil, light, warmth, moisture and dryness in right proportion, with hours for repose. The human being expects to be healthy by taking no thought, and violating nine out of ten of nature's laws; men know they require eight hours of sleep; it takes that much to repair the worn-out cells that come from the day's work; they rush on, often with four hours of fitful unconsciousness, awoken by the alarm clock, and rush on the more. They become starvelings, harassed by shattered nerves, tortured by indigestion, reduced by bodily sin against right living.

Thousands of men are rushing on, forgetful of penalties.

You say, "What has this to do with me? I am not a millionaire." The fact is that you, an average American, have more money today than you used to think you'd ever have. Are you giving any?

The muscles of the soul are like the muscles of the body. If you say, "Some day in the future I'll take physical exercise," you find, when the time comes, that you can't. The muscles have a trophied life. If you say, "Some day when I have more I will begin to give," you will never give. The habit requires cultivation.

We are about to have new standards in this country. Our day of worshipping wealth is past. Money no longer confers distinction; a millionaire is no more uncommon than an automobile, and not nearly so uncommon as a horse. The givers will be the heroes of the future. And the time will come when those who merely get will be held up to scorn. And their children will hang their heads.

Konjola Ends Neuritis and Other Ailments

Fort Worth Lady Eagerly Praises New Medicine That Brought Quick Relief—Others Failed.

MRS. LOUISE LEE

"My health was in a bad condition for over a year," said Mrs. Louise Lee, 2922 South Main St., Fort Worth. "I was very nervous and the least noise upset me. I did not sleep well at night. I had neuritis in my shoulders and arms and often found my housework more than I could do. My stomach was weak and food fermented causing heartburn and headaches. My kidneys were affected and my back was stiff and sore all the time.

"Konjola certainly gave me the surprise of my life. By the time I had finished the third bottle, my nervous condition had been righted. Neuritis pains and soreness have vanished and there is not a trace of that ailment now. My food digests perfectly and I can eat anything I wish. My kidneys are again normal."

It is of just such endorsements as this that the record of Konjola is made up. It is recommended for ailments of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness.

Konjola is sold in Hico, Texas, at Porter's Drug Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

ATTENTION!

There will be a cemetery working at the Duffau cemetery Wednesday, October 22. Let every one come that is interested, and bring dinner. There are about 40 graves that are sunken and some Johnson grass to cut. We do not want to lose what we have gained. J. E. ARNOLD.

Hints for the Home

by Nancy Hart

The expert home salad maker becomes quite as efficient in using up odds and ends of certain sorts as the soup maker does in disposing of certain other left-overs in the making of soup. But there is always danger of making this sort of salad look like a repository of left-overs—salvage from the kitchen garbage can—unless great care is taken in the making.

Extreme daintiness is required in using left-over vegetables. If left-over spinach is used it should be drained and moulded carefully, not piled in a moist mass on the lettuce leaves. Left-over peas should be whole, and added to the salad with apparent design.

Never use any olive oil that is not of the very best quality and perfectly fresh. It is better to use a fresh can of cheaper salad oil than any olive oil that is not up to a high mark. The same applies to vinegar. Only a very little vinegar should be used in dressing salad—the cost for each serving of salad being almost inconsiderable—and it should therefore be of the best quality.

Some salad makers insist that neither lettuce nor endive should ever be cut with knife or scissors, but always pulled apart by the fingers.

Most salads are best if dressed and put together just before being eaten. However, preparation for the salad maker should begin far enough in advance to provide chilling of vegetables and fruit to be used raw. This is especially true in warm weather.

Vegetable Pies

A vegetable pie is another vegetable dish that makes use of left-overs. To make it, prepare a mixture of cooked vegetables in a baking dish, and season them liberally with pepper and salt. Over them pour some thickened vegetable stock, of any kind. Then cover with a rich crust and bake until the crust is brown.

The combinations for this pie are legion. You might try lima beans, whole small onions, green peas and diced turnips; or tomato, corn cut off the cob, diced green pepper and pimento and diced new potatoes; or diced new potatoes, diced beets, sliced onions and asparagus tips. Or boiled pared radishes, green peas, string beans and small onions. A sprinkling of minced parsley adds to the flavor-ness of one of these pies.

"WOULDN'T YOU LIKE TO KNOW?"

By John Godfrey Saxe

I know a girl with teeth of pearl, And shoulders white as snow; She lives—ah, well, I must not tell— Wouldn't you like to know?

Her sunny hair is wondrous fair And wavy in its flow; Who made it less, One little tress? Wouldn't you like to know?

Her eyes are blue—celestial blue And dazzling in their glow; On whom do they beam With melting gleam? Wouldn't you like to know?

Her lips are red and finely wed, When lilies fairest grow; Whose hand do they press With fond caress? Wouldn't you like to know?

Her foot is small and has a fall Like snowflakes on the snow; And where it goes— Beneath the rose— Wouldn't you like to know?

She has a name, the sweetest name That language can bestow; 'T would break the spell If I should tell, but Wouldn't you like to know?
