Her aunt will be in Waco and she will go on with her. She will go to school there. Several of her friends were at the station to see her leave. She is a fine little girl and will be missed very much by all. She graduated here this last year. Her friends hope she will like there. Edward Turner spent the week end with J. D. McElroy, and had a fine time. The Meridian Baptist Association met here Thursday and Friday with a large crowd and good sermons by some of the preachers. Over three hundred people were here the first day. The Baptist ladies certainly know how to feed people who come here. Everyone enjoyed the association very much. Mrs. Mino Laughlin is recovering from a tonsillitis operation which was performed by Dr. Calhoun of Meridian a few days ago.

Carlton By MRS. ARTHUR REDDEN

The first bale of cotton was brought into Carlton Friday, the 18th, by Charlie Bramblett, of the Wilson community, and was ginned by the Salper gin. The bale was bought by Dock Finley, a small premium being given to Mr. Bramblett by the business men of Carlton. Those visiting in the O. E. Young home last week were: Misses Gena Bennett, Max Luckes, Mamie Womack of Gorman and Mrs. G. W. Cole, daughter and son of Gorman. Mr. Vaughn and wife, Witt Lacey and wife, and Roy Blakley and son of Agee attended the baseball tournament here last Saturday. Madeline Brown went home with her uncle, M. W. Wallace, to spend the week. Luther Caudle and family of Corpus Christi and Rosser Caudle and two sons of Avoca visited their parents, B. T. Caudle and wife over last week end. Turner, wife and daughter Frances were Waco visitors the first of last week.

A National League shutout record which has stood the wear and tear of twenty-five seasons, was broken the other day when Carl Hubbell, chief magician of the New York Giants, held the Boston Braves without a run for five innings and achieved a total of forty-six consecutive scoreless innings. The former record was held by Ed Reulbach, of the Chicago Cubs, in 1908, with 44. Jack Crawford, of Australia, is ambitious to win the American singles tennis title at Forest Hills, New York, in September. He is already champion of Australia, he won the French title by defeating Henri Cochet, he won the Wimbledon title by triumphing over H. Ellisworth Vines, Jr., the American champion. If he wins the American title he must be recognized as the champion of the world.

The weather is cooler this week. Mr. and Mrs. Claude Henderson and children, Wanda Marie and W. C. and Mrs. Vivian Cole and two children of Fort Worth spent the past week end with their sister and aunt, Mrs. Jim Luckie and family. Jim Henderson who has been visiting in Fort Worth returned home. Mrs. W. L. Simpson and children, Cleora and William, and Odell Luckie, spent Sunday afternoon in Morgan with Mrs. Simpson's sister, Mrs. Mon Hall and family. Mr. and Mrs. Andy McElroy and daughter of Abilene, spent Friday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. McElroy and family. Clifford and Miss Ruby McElroy, Leroy Hatchcock, Judson Cole and Mr. Bradley and children left Tuesday to go near Arlington to pick cotton. John Blue, who has been ill for several months, died Tuesday night at 10 o'clock. The family has the sympathy of the community. The Mt. Zion Home Demonstration Club met Thursday with Mrs. Cole. This was the month for a picnic, so ice cream and cake was served to the members and their families at the close of the meeting. The following program was rendered: Song, "The Rock that is Higher Than I;" Club prayer; Roll call, "If I Could Raise Only One Vegetable in My Garden What Would That Be?" The majority chose tomatoes, because they are considered as a fruit and a vegetable, and the food value of the tomatoes is not lost when they are cooked or canned. Mrs. Mangold read two interesting clippings from a magazine. One was an article on the Religious Building at the Century of Progress, and the other was entitled, "Are Times Really Hard?" Mrs. Mangold showed how the sheep skin house shoes were made and how the skin could be tanned at home. Mrs. G. W. Hooper is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Charlie Caudle of Altman. Fred Ross, Joe Harris and Colquitt, Wesley Bullard and Jim Luckie were in Meridian Saturday. Jim Luckie and son, Cecil, and Fred Ross were in Hamilton Wednesday. Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Watts returned home Saturday after a visit in Hico. Mr. and Mrs. Jim Luckie and family, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Henderson and children, Mrs. Vivian Cole and children of Fort Worth, Jim Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Simpson and family, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. J. Kidd, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Cole and family and Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Cole ate supper on the river Saturday night. Using the same club and the same ball, Tony Harmon in the last three days has made two holes-in-one on the same 80-yard No. 2 hole at the Yankee Run course, Sharon, Pa.

Texans! Heed this 1933 War Call from the Economic Front

A historic Texas institution is in a fight and invites you to pitch in!

The history of Texas is a romantic story of courage and thrilling adventure. The early settlers had first to make Texas a free land for free men. Then came the prolonged struggle against the virgin wilderness, to convert Texas into the modern and glorious state she is today. But the path of progress was not always strewn with roses. Economic reactions of the past interrupted but could not retard the determined advance of a determined people. So, the history of Texas is also a tale of strife against odds, dogged persistence and rigid self-discipline. Her people have always clung together in a community of spirit, so the world acknowledges a loose-knit fraternity among Texans—without formal membership, but irresistible when aroused.

Today, though the strife has been transferred from military to economic fronts, the spirit of Texas citizenship will rise again in defense of an institution which is as much a part of Texas history as Sam Houston, Davy Crockett or James Bowie. That institution is the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Lines.

The same independence and freedom from outside domination that is born in the blood of every Texan is also an inheritance of the Katy. That independence and that freedom is now threatened by pressure from without and the pioneering Katy, which played so rich a part in the conquering of the wilderness and making Texas the home land it is, comes directly to her people for support. The Katy has been self-sustaining and self-supporting throughout the last four disheartening years. With heroic determination and supreme effort, the Katy has fought to avoid seeking help from any quarter. Now, with victory in sight—the economic skies clearing—one final effort must be put forth. One course would be to appeal to the Government of the United States for money from the public treasury, and so increase the national burden. The other way is to appeal to the men and women of Texas. This is done here, directly and straightforwardly, without hesitation, apology or sacrifice of pride. For, has not the Katy contributed its full share to the pioneering and developing of this great land, and does it not stand today a Texas institution devoted to the service and welfare of Texas people? Texans! Only a little cooperation is asked. Route every available shipment via Katy Lines—patronize Katy trains when you travel. The resulting increase in revenue will enable the Katy to remain self-supporting— independent, free from the need for outside capital which charges as its price the sacrifice of identity and freedom, which this generation of Texans holds as near and dear as their fathers before them. Never in the past has Texas refused to rise in defense of her native and traditional institutions. She will not refuse now!

They went from here to Oklahoma, where they will visit relatives of Mrs. Anderson before returning to the Golden State.

Mrs. Willie Platt is keeping step with the improvements being made by citizens of Hico, having recently had her home repainted all white. As the painter, Wynson Graves, completed the job, he remarked that it looks like a "snow-job." Mrs. Platt's home did not need the paint as badly as some others in the city, but she says it preserves it as well as adds to the attractiveness of a place.

Bride-Elect Is Guest at Luncheon.
Honoring Miss Katherine Randals, whose wedding to Mr. Charles W. Shelton of Hico was scheduled for Thursday of this week, Misses Katherine Smith, Mildred Hooker, Jeanette Randals, Laurel and Mildred Persons, Pauline Driskell and Annette Culbreath entertained Tuesday morning with a bridge luncheon at the home of Miss Randals. The room decorations were red lilies, zennias, and at the time of serving small baskets of lanterns were placed in the center of each table.

Six tables of bridge were enjoyed. Winners of high and cut prizes presented them to the bride-to-be, and she also was presented with another gift.

The luncheon was served in three courses, namely: Fruit cocktail; creamed chicken on toast, asparagus salad, carrots and peas, hot tea rolls, iced tea; chocolate ice cream and sugar cookies.

Besides the honoree and hostesses, the personnel included Mesdames H. N. Wolfe, C. G. Masterson, Roland L. Holford, Claude Culbreath, C. I. Woodward, H. F. Sellers, H. E. McCullough, T. A. Randals, A. I. Pirtle, and Mrs. A. Marguerite Fairley, Emma Dee Hall, Saralee Hudson, Lois Boone, Marie Pirtle, Doris Sellers, Hansie Lee Richbourg, and Elizabeth Pratt of Stamford.

Nearly-Weeds Complimented With Canned Goods Shower.
The younger set of Hico complimented Miss Katherine Randals and Mr. Charles Shelton with a canned goods shower at the Bluebonnet Country Club Saturday night in honor of their approaching marriage this week. The guests arrived at an early hour and decorated the living room and placed the gifts in the kitchen, tied with a strong cord.

At a later hour, the honorees arrived and when asked to pull the string, found a huge amount of canned goods of every variety.

Bridge and dancing formed the remainder of the entertainment for the evening, after which punch was served to those present.

Besides the chaperone, Mrs. H. F. Sellers, the following formed the personnel: Misses Mabel and Wynama Anderson, Inez Burleson, Doris Sellers, Laurel and Mildred Persons, Hansie Lee and Quata Richbourg, Marguerite Fairley, Marie Pirtle, Martha Porter, Lois Boone, Flossie and Jeanette Randals, Mayo Hollis, Mary and Katherine Smith, Annette Culbreath, Mildred Hooker of Stephenville and Elizabeth Pratt of Stamford; Messrs. Clifford Malone, Doris and Emory Gamble, S. E. Blair, Jr., D. F. McCarty, Jr., L. E. Williamson, Earle Harrison, John B. Sampley, Ralph Boone, F. M. Richbourg, Harry Hudson, Kelley Thomas and Jack Hooker of Stephenville.

Miss Doris Sellers Host to Members of Bridge Club.
Late Spring flowers were used to decorate the open rooms in the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Sellers Wednesday afternoon when their daughter, Miss Doris Sellers, entertained the members of the Tuesday Contract Bridge Club and a few guests.

Mrs. C. G. Masterson was high score winner. Invited guests were Misses Katherine Randals, Mildred and Laurel Persons and Mildred Hooker, the latter being from Stephenville. Members present were Mesdames C. G. Masterson, C. L. Woodward, H. N. Wolfe, F. M. Mings, H. E. McCullough, Roland L. Holford; and Misses Emma Dee Hall and Saralee Hudson.

Refreshments were prune cottage cheese salad, ribbon sandwiches, pickles, potato chips, brownies and iced tea.

Bride-to-Be Complimented With Novel Party
Miss Doris Sellers complimented Miss Katherine Randals, bride-to-be, with a kitchen shower at the Sellers home last Thursday afternoon. The horoscopes of the bride-to-be, groom-to-be and each guest were presented, which enlightened all concerning the future.

A contest on ages pertaining to marriage was then held and the winner of this was to present the honoree to a new-found friend in the adjoining room. Miss Saralee Hudson was winner and introduced Miss Randals to a skeleton bride. The bridal finery consisted of kitchen utensils of every variety. Her hand wore rubber gloves, and her train was covered in gifts. Each gift was wrapped in brown paper and tied with gingham strings.

Following this the hostess served a salad course to about twenty-five guests.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Griffiths and son, Frank, left Sunday morning for Burk Burnett, where they planned to visit for three or four days with their daughter, Mrs. Jones Ellis and family. They drove through in an automobile. While in the News Review office reporting his news, Mr. Griffiths mentioned the fact that he recently attended the Annual Hico Reunion for the fortieth time, and that he thought this year's affair a very creditable entertainment.

Miss Elizabeth Pratt of Stamford returned to her home Friday after several weeks' visit here in the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Richbourg.

Free... a book that plans your meals for a year

This new book—the first of its kind ever written—completely and permanently solves the problem, "What shall we have to eat?" It is not a recipe book, but a meal planning book. It gives well-balanced menus for breakfast, luncheon, dinner—tells how to avoid monotonous repetition—explains new and appetizing methods of using left-overs—points out ways to save money in buying food—plans your meals for a whole year.

Nothing like this book has been published before. After you've used it you'll wonder how you ever got along without it. And it's free. Be sure to visit our showroom this week and ask for it.

WHISPERING ROCK BY JOHN LEBAR

SYNOPSIS: Ruth Warren, who lived in the East, is willed three-fourth interest in the "Dead Lantern" ranch in Arizona by her only brother who is reported to have met his death while on business in Mexico. Arriving in Arizona with her husband who has ailing lungs and their small child, they learn that the ranch is located 50 miles from the nearest railroad. Old Charley Thane, rancher and rural mail carrier agrees to take them to the "Dead Lantern" gate, 5 miles from the ranch house. As they trudge wearily through a gulch approaching the ranch house a voice whispers "Go back! Go back!" At the ranch house they are greeted suspiciously by the ranch partner, Snavey, and Indian Ann, a herculean woman of mixed negro and Indian blood. Snavey is difficult to understand but regardless, Ruth asks up the task of trying to adjust their three lives to the ranch and its development.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

As soon as supper was over the girl asked Ann if she might help with the dishes. The black Indian eyes flashed to where Snavey stood in the doorway before their owner replied that "dishes is my work."

But Ruth would not be put off; she was determined to make Ann her friend, or at any rate to get a little behind that protective shell with which the clearest had covered her real self. At times it seemed to Ruth that the real Ann might be more like a wistful little girl than anything else—if she could be found.

So half an hour later Ruth entered the kitchen and asked Ann to come to the adobe as soon as she could and help with the unpacking. Snavey had come down to the corral, and Warren and David were inspecting a newly arrived calf who was wondering aloud on the strangeness of earth in a gully not far from the oak tree.

Ann soon came to the adobe. "Well, Ann, there really isn't much work but I wanted your advice. I have a dress or two which are rather good—how can I keep them clean—the dust, you know—and, do you have moths in this country?"

Silently, the great woman left the adobe and returned a few minutes later with a roll of wrapping paper.

"Splendid!" said Ruth, who had been wondering whether Ann had not left her for good. "That's just what we need—we can make a sort of paper sack around the hanger."

Slowly the rigidness which always enveloped Ann was softened as the two women busied themselves. The girl chatted away about clothes, shaping her talk by the growing spark of interest in Ann's eyes. Once she carelessly tossed a piece of heavy silk lingerie on Ann's bare arm and went to hang something in the closet. When she looked again, Ann was stroking the silk with lingering fingers. The girl watched silently. "That is nice, isn't it?" she asked, coming forward.

"God, yes!" replied Ann slowly. "I seen fitmy things on cheap girls—nothin' like this—this here quality, jes' quality."

"I wish it were bigger," said Ruth sincerely.

"What fer?"

"So that you could try it on—you'd look well in it."

"Me?" Ann's hand tightened upon the silk on her arm and her eyes searched the girl's face. She shook her head. "Quality, such as that, ain't made fer no-ox like me."

"Oh, nonsense! You can get them in as large a size as you want—im sure—"

Ann interrupted with a gesture, which included the silk and the dresses in the trunk. "It's me—I ain't fer such as them."

There was a tone in Ann's voice which Ruth could not understand and she made no reply.

Some time later while Ruth was again hanging a dress in the closet, she heard a low sound, a slight, guttural word, almost a moan. Peeking around the edge of the closet door she saw the clearest crouched before the trunk tray which had been set to one side on the floor. Ann's attitude was almost one of adoration; one huge hand lay upon her breast, the other was outstretched over a compartment in the tray. Slowly the outstretched hand was lowered, softly the fingers came to rest. For a full minute the clearest did not move. The girl watched, fascinated. Suddenly Ann seemed to remember that Ruth was some where near. The spell was broken and the clearest arose. Without turning her face in Ruth's direction, Ann left the adobe.

The girl hurried to the tray and looked in the corner compartment. She saw that it contained David's first pair of shoes and his first hood of lace and ribbon.

The girl had almost finished unpacking before Ann returned. She handed Ruth a baking powder can. "I want to git these here," she said gruffly.

Ruth opened the can; it contained moth balls. "Oh, that's right, Ann, I forgot about them. Let's see, I suppose we'd better put some in the pockets of Mr. Warren's suits and in that woolen dress."

The last of hangable things had been taken from the trunk when Ruth came upon her ribbon board. She opened the box. "Here, Ann, wouldn't you like some of these? They're just scraps—I don't know why I keep them around."

Ann looked silently into the bright nest of twisted colors, her eyes shone. Carefully she pulled out a band of golden silk. She felt in between her great thumb and finger, then held it close under the lamp. "Quality," she murmured, "as fine—as fine—like gold hair from a little white girl."

"Take anything you want, Ann—all of them if they'd be of any use to you. They'll spruce up a dress wonderfully."

"I don't never spruce up," replied Ann quietly, "but I'll take a little of this gold one if you want."

"No," Ann took the scissors and reverently cut about twelve inches from the band.

"Well, if you ever want any more, you'll know where to find the box, Ann. What will you do with that piece?"

For the first time since Ruth had known her, Ann smiled. It was the most expressive smile the girl had ever seen. Ann looked to ranch dwindled and for a day he found nothing to interest him. Then suddenly he discovered the fascination of rhyming. With boundless optimism he gave David over to the complete care of Ruth and went joyfully at the business of a poet.

Ruth was glad. Somehow, poetry suited Kenneth better than anything.

In the evening of the day on which Kenneth Warren became a poet, he hidged about until David was comfortably slowed in the section of horse-manner, and then produced a sheet of paper. He had not gone riding that afternoon and had been moody during supper. Ruth composed herself to listen to the three short stanzas—she had expected thirty—her face automatically settled into the expression of one who will praise satisfactorily.

Not until his trembling voice had ceased on the last line did Ruth Warren's eyes come back to her husband's face. Warren expected more animation, but he shrugged and smiled apologetically. Then he saw that his wife was crying.

"Why—Ruth—"

"Kenneth!" With a rush her arms were about him. "Kenneth—Oh, Kenneth—"

"What's the matter, it's not a sad poem—just supposed to give a picture of the old oak tree; what it's seen, and felt and thinks—"

The clinging girl shook her head violently. "Oh, Kenneth!" was all she could manage.

Late that night Ruth Warren lay awake. Her husband—Kenneth—had done something really big. Those three short stanzas—three magic patches of words. . . . It seemed to Ruth that she had always known him to be a poet at heart; his visionary, impractical ideas had a poetical soundness about them, every one.

The next morning after breakfast Warren stopped Snavey on the way to the barn. "Can I get up on top of that mountain?" he asked, pointing to the tallest of the several peaks which rose to the west.

"If you mean, can you go horse-back?"

"Yes, of course."

Snavey regarded him a moment. "What do you aim to do there?"

"I intend to spend the day—look around—may write a little."

"Oh, sure, Yep, old Sanchez'll tote you all right—only, don't push him none—let him take his time."

Warren thanked him, and Snavey added that he would catch Sanchez while he was getting his own horse and leave him at the saddle shed.

Ruth protested against Warren's trip. But he was sure he could stand the ride and he would have all-day in which to rest before the return journey. He was determined to go—he was going to climb upon the peak where he could see the whole world and he was going to write.

As she watched him ride away she was a little envious of the bundle tied to the back of the saddle, for besides the lunch was a pad of paper, and some of those sheets were going to be very fortunate.

As Ruth worked she was more nearly happy than at any time since coming to the ranch. She even hummed a vague little tune while she stirred the cloths in the tub which sat on two stones, over a mesquite fire near the back screen door. Washing in this manner did not seem such a hardship now. She amused when she remembered the electric washer, wringer, dryer she had once owned, and with which she had had no concern except to make sure her laundry was understood how it worked.

The weather was cooler than usual and now and then a silver cloud slid under the sun, bringing a welcome shade. The windmill worked slowly methodically repeating its squeak and click.

By noon the sky was solid with white clouds; little rushing winds came and went suddenly, the some of the birds included a new note, expectant and gay. All the desert awoke from its long sleep in stupefying heat and mingled its fragrant, spicy breath with the little gusts of wind.

CONTINUED NEXT WEEK

Fairy

By FAIRY CORRESPONDENTS.

We are having very threatening weather at this writing.

A number of families are busy picking cotton and in another week most all of the cotton will be ready for first picking. The crop will be short, due to small acreage.

Rev. Nance of Hamilton filled an appointment at the Methodist Church Sunday morning and evening.

Miss Bernice Talley of Fort Worth who has spent the past few weeks in Hamilton as a guest of relatives, returned Saturday to the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Belts, where she has been visiting since early Spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Allen and Mrs. Leora Garren of Fort Worth were week-end guests of relatives here.

Mrs. Minnie Cashon and daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Alva Poteet of Hico were visiting last Thursday week in the home of their daughter and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Hermal Richardson. Mrs. Cashon remained until Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Richardson accompanied her home Sunday.

Rev. G. E. McCallie of Clinton will preach at the Church of Christ Sunday morning and evening. We cordially invite you to attend these services.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Hargraves accompanied by Mrs. Ed Allison and children spent Sunday visiting in the home of Mr. Hargraves' parents at Jonesboro.

Albert Gieser and family have moved into the Prentiss Newman dwelling. Dewey Wilson and family have moved recently into one of the Mount Young dwellings.

Sunday is our regular singing day. We are expecting to have one of the best singings we have ever had. We are expecting a number of visiting singers including the Hico class, members of the Honey Grove class and also Ole Brothers of Dublin. We especially invite your attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Richardson accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Clayton attended singing at Honey Grove last Sunday.

Work on the P. L. Cox home is progressing rapidly. Mr. D. Graves of Hico has charge of the rock work and Mr. Schurmack of Mossheim has charge of the carpenter work.

Mrs. Laura Newton of Fort Worth and Mr. and Mrs. John Huckaby of Walnut Springs spent Saturday night with the ladies' mother, Mrs. B. A. Grimes, and son, Henry. They, together with Mrs. Grimes and son spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Grimes and children of near Hico.

Miss Ruby Parks who has a position as clerk in her father's store, is enjoying a vacation this week in Cleburne, as guest of her aunt, Mrs. Otto Jordan, and family. Her father, M. E. Parks, accompanied her to Walnut Springs Sunday afternoon where she was met by Mr. and Mrs. Jordan.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Clayton and family visited last Saturday in the home of his sister and family, Mrs. Lynch, at Stephenville. Mr. Lynch, a nephew and cousin of the family, accompanied them; home and is spending a few days in the Clayton home.

Reswell Wright of Dallas has been a recent visitor in the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Wright, and other relatives.

Friends and acquaintances of Mrs. Maggie Deaton of Hamilton were very grieved to learn of her sudden death which occurred last Friday afternoon about 2 o'clock. She was the mother of J. E. Blackwell and also a sister of Mrs. A. R. Hoover and Mrs. George Gann and daughter of E. M. Hoover, all of near Fairy. She and her husband had made frequent visits here in the interest of their farm property near Fairy. Her late husband, Rev. Deaton, was pastor of the Abee Baptist Church for a number of years. They have many friends in this and adjoining communities who are deeply grieved to learn of her death. She possessed a very lovable nature and to know her was to love her. She is survived by her husband and step-daughter, and three sons by a former marriage. Two sons preceded her in death, one dying in the training camps during the World War. The other, Art as he was known here, of Silver City, New Mexico, died of an infected limb a few years ago. Her son, J. E. Blackwell, and wife of this place had spent last Thursday in the home of his parents, and had left his mother apparently as well as usual, although she had suffered a few heart attacks recently. She had them promise her they would come back the following Saturday, and they left with the parting words that they would be right there. The following day she died suddenly of heart failure. The funeral was set for 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon. When this hour arrived her son, Harvey Blackwell of Silver City, New Mexico, had not arrived, and the funeral was postponed until Sunday afternoon at 3:30. The son did not arrive until 10:30 Sunday ward the door. "Sugarfoot," she called.

The little dog arrived at once, and Ann, still smiling, tied the brighter ribbon about his neck. Then she tilted her head to one side. "Aw, Mr. Sugarfoot, ain't you jes' the classiest little dog now!"

Ruth Warren felt moisture in her eyes. "Ann," she said impulsively. "Take something for yourself—I know you want to—please!"

Ann's black eyes looked into the earnest hazel ones before her. "No—thank you kindly."

For Ruth, the next two weeks were days of bewilderment. She could not realize her isolation; it was impossible for her to accept the fact that beyond that distant horizon there was only more horizon.

She wanted desperately to understand her surroundings; she forced herself to study everything which might aid to her knowledge of the country and the operation of the ranch. Snavey was no help. Each morning he rode away very early—to watch the cattle, she supposed—returning late in the afternoon. And when she was able to speak with him his pale eyes regarded her contemptuously and he answered in monosyllabic replies. Only once or twice did he reply at any length and then to dwell upon the discouraging features of the ranch and the dangers of the country to those unacquainted with it.

With the passing of the days Warren's health improved noticeably. At his repeated request, Snavey grudgingly turned two horses over for the use of the family, and in the cool of the evening Warren found that he could take short horseback rides with his wife and son.

As Warren's cough seized him less often, his mind freshened; he became the eager, buoyant, impractical, lovable boy Ruth Grey had eloped with six years before. His old zest for the concocting of dreams, which he believed to be plans, returned. He thoroughly considered the possibilities of the ranch. Calling Ruth's attention to the low hills in Oklahoma where he had seen oil derricks. It might, he thought, be worth while to have a geologist come out and look around. And while the geologist was there, it wouldn't hurt to have him prospect for gold and other mineral wealth in the mountains—Arizona was famous for mines. There was perhaps only one use of the twenty-thousand acres upon which Warren did not speculate—their use as a cattle ranch.

In her heart Ruth knew that this was the only real value of the land. Just how valuable a ranch it was, or how valuable it could be made, she had no idea. She wished she could talk to Old Charley about it.

Fall Term of District Court Convened at Hamilton Monday

The fall term of the District Court of Hamilton County convened Monday morning, and the Grand Jury for the term was charged by District Judge R. B. Cross and began their duties. The following gentlemen constitute the grand jury: Lusk Randa, O. F. Anderson, Coy C. Parks, R. D. Foster, G. C. McAnelly, O. B. Dunn, G. J. Baize, Elmer Richey, W. W. O'Bannon, Herman Schrank, Otto Schwartz, and W. P. Tindall. Mr. R. D. Foster was appointed by the court as foreman of the Grand Jury.

Judge Cross, in an able charge to the Grand Jury, outlined their duties, elaborated on the meaning of the oath which they had taken, which he said was first devised by the founders of our state government and could not be improved upon, complimented the county and district on the type of people who constituted its citizenship, but emphasized the necessity of the utmost cooperation of all good people at this time in the enforcement of the law and in bringing about more respect for the law.

ON TEXAS FARMS

By W. H. DARROW,
Extension Service Editor

Secretary Wallace Says Farmers Have "Worked Too Hard"

COLLEGE STATION—"We have worked too hard in this country," declared Secretary of Agriculture Wallace in an address to Extension Service workers explaining how the Agricultural Adjustment Act will bring farm people not only balanced abundance but also a more balanced leisure and a greater opportunity for individual growth.

"It was a new country, ours for the taking; so overwork was natural," Mr. Wallace said. "We made a virtue of intemperate greed and effort. Our march of pioneer conquest, if you examine it candidly, was not unreservedly glorious. The youngest of us who grew up west of the Alleghenies and on farms less than a century subdued know all too well how bitterly some of those largest, finest farms were cleared and won. Many a pioneer patriarch wore down and killed two or three wives by the time that, having progressed in ownership from a quarter section to two or more full sections, and loans to half a township, he died. And that was not the whole story of his triumph. He often made slaves, perfectly legally, and with sanction of church and society, of his children. "And he himself died, very often, before he or his family had learned how to live. A country was here to be occupied and subdued. Toil was holy. It was wrong to sit in the shade and dream; it was wrong to go fishing in working hours; it was wrong in thousands of farming communities for a farm family to stop overworking and gorging the market. It still is considered a little shameful in thousands of communities for a farm family to burn gas on a pleasure trip to the sea or up into the mountains for a week or so.

"We have believed that leisure is wrong. There was a reason for this. In old days the utmost activity paid manifest returns. Those returns often were dearly bought; health was broken; imagination was stunted by needless drudgery; children came into the world crippled and weakened because their mothers while carrying them had worked too hard. I do not know now that we are fit for leisure; but I believe that now that we are turning our minds around, and discovering that overwork does not pay, neither in money nor in any other sense, we will not continue to make a fetish of overwork. We shall learn as individuals to value and to improve ourselves. We shall see that it pays to sow less, and take better care of it, and take better care of ourselves and our children. We shall learn to rest part of our land and to rest ourselves part of the time. "I do not think that we shall have to plan or organize the new leisure which an organized turning away from headlong pioneer expansion of enterprise will bring to America. The thought of organizing another man's or woman's private and personal existence is repugnant to me. But I think that all men and women should have the chance to do and think and dream as they please part of the time, not for money, not for fame, but simply because they want to; and I believe that most of us, once the opportunity is afforded, will discover within ourselves a wide variety of stimulating and pleasant things to do."

Your growing daughter will be proud to start school in a smart cape ensemble like this one, with the cape and the skirt made of woolen, with a batiste blouse, or the entire model of cotton.

The blouse has a lengthened shoulder, forming a short sleeve.

and a boyish collar and tie complete the neck edge. The skirt, a two piece model, is made with plates that outline narrow panels at the center of front and back. Designed in five sizes: 8, 8 1/2, 12 and 14. Size 14 requires 2 3/8 yards of 32 inch material for skirt and cape, and 1 1/8 yards of contrasting material for the blouse. The cape alone requires 7-8 yard, the skirt alone 1 5/8 yards of 32 inch material.

Poisoning grasshoppers by Extension service methods has meant the difference between a crop and no crop to E. M. Ball, Young county farmer, who says he uses from 300 pounds to 1500 pounds of poison bran mash every year.

Buying a farm abandoned because of poor yields on the banks of the Rio Grande near Laredo three years ago, Chester Smith has brought up production by use of manure until he recently filled a trench silo 40 feet long, 8 feet deep and 11 feet wide from 8 acres of corn. He is a dairyman aiming to produce milk cheaply.

Irish potatoes grown on fertilized land doubled the yield of unfertilized potatoes for W. V. Ellis, Ola community, Kaufman county. He produced 95 bushels on less than two-thirds of an acre. The No. 1 potatoes brought $85, says the county agent in reporting the demonstration.

Overcoming natural difficulties caused by having a sharply sloping gravel yard in which nothing would grow because water could not be had for irrigation, Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Teague in Childress county have developed one of the prettiest farm yards in that section. Water was pumped into a concrete tank, then pumped across the road into another concrete tank, then from there piped back to the house. The yard was levelled and held in place by a stone retaining wall and Bermuda grass was sodded in. Shade trees and foundation plantings around the house completed the job of making this a real yard demonstration.

The price of wool was more than doubled in Hardin county this season by the newly organized wool growers' association which the county agent says paid 10,500 pounds that brought 31 cents per

EVERY DAY PRICES COUNT

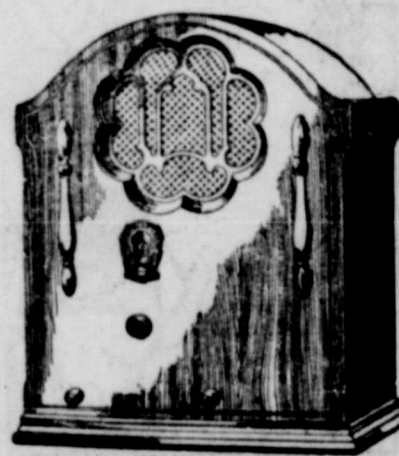

It is not the low special one day prices that count when considering the month's grocery bill. It is the same every day price that keeps the bill at the end of the month from being higher than it should be. You will find our prices in accord with others—prices that rise or fall as the market rises or goes lower—low one day and high the next several days.
