Twelfth installment
THE STORY SO FAR
Nancy Gordon trades herself in marriage for fifteen thousand dollars—the price of her family honor—and the freedom of her brother, Roddy, who stole for a woman, that amount from the bank in which he works. Nancy, desperately in love with young Page Roemer, nevertheless agrees to a secret elopement with Dr. Richard Morgan, and with the money he loans her prevents Roddy's arrest. Dr. Morgan is loved by Helena Haddon, a sophisticated young married woman, but he adores Nancy and hopes to win her after marriage. In Washington they are married. Nancy is Richard's bride—and afraid of him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
Then, either the visitor had found out all she wanted to, or she was tired of it; she was actually going. Nancy heard their movements in the hall. Mrs. Gordon came back, panting.
"Oh, Nancy, do you think she knows anything?"
Nancy shook her head doubtfully. "How can she? Unless— There was Beaver, but Nancy would not believe that. It was too much. 'I think she only wanted you to talk about Richard.'"
Mrs. Gordon's face changed. "I didn't know that he—that they had ever been engaged," she said blankly. "Anyway, he's in love with you, Nancy. I know that!"
A strange smile twisted Nancy's lips.
"Perhaps he isn't now," she said briefly, "perhaps he doesn't like a secret in the family—and I— she laughed wildly—'I threw myself at his head, Mama.'"
"Oh, Nancy," her mother blushed like a girl.
But Nancy did not blush, she turned suddenly white to the lips and caught at Mrs. Gordon's hand convulsively.
"There's Page Roemer coming in the gate—oh, Mama, what shall I do? What shall I do?" cried she.

"You'll leave this house, sir. That's what you'll do."

You're sorry you did it—you want to keep it secret because you can't bear it! You— he came nearer, suddenly he flung himself down beside her. "Nancy, you're not living with him—you're here—you're not actually his wife!" he gasped. "Not!" she cried passionately. "no, no!"
Excitation leaped into Roemer's face. He had suffered agonies of shame because Richard had taken her away from him that night! "Nancy!" his feverish eyes searched her face, his answer he—have you ever been his wife—except in name?"
She drew a deep breath. "No," she whispered. "never—never, I came home!"
Page gave a great gasp of joy. "God," he cried, "God, I'll take her away from him yet!"
The fury of his passion transformed him; his handsome smooth young face was furrowed—not with love but with hate, his hatred and his jealousy of Richard. Nancy saw it something in his very passion was selfish and cruel. It reached her suddenly, shaken as she was, she thought of Richard. Would Page have spared her as Richard had?
"You mustn't say such things, Page," she said weakly. "and I—I mustn't hear them, I— she could not finish her sentence.
He caught her hands almost roughly in his.
"Answer me," he gasped hoarsely. "tell me the truth—you don't love him—did you have to marry him, Nancy?"
Page Roemer's look seemed to her only the mad passion of his love.
"Yes," she answered faintly, not understanding. "I had to marry him, Page." She was too clean souled to understand.
Richard would have known it, but Page dropped her hands and rose to his feet, tramping up and down the room like a madman. He had loved her, loved her deeply, and Richard had robbed him. Richard must have done what he would have never dared to do. She—God, was she worthless? He could not believe it, yet she said so. Yet—he drew an agonized breath, he couldn't give her up, he'd get her away from Richard yet, damn him!
He—Page clenched his fist, he would like to shoot him, but if he did, if it came out—poor Nancy! She—? He stopped short in his walk and stood thinking; was she worth the struggle? The world would say "no." His own selfish ego cried, no, not now! Then he looked at the girl.
She looked like a broken lily. All the blood in his body surged up into his head; he turned hot with rage. Damn him, he shouldn't keep her!
"Nancy!" he flung himself down beside the girl, hot with his rage and passion. "Nancy, I love you, he cried, "I adore you!" he seized her poor shaking little hands and covered them with kisses.
The girl quivered at his touch. His hot lips on her hands sent her blood back to her heart. Love—dumb, agonized, denied—struggled in her breast.
"Oh, Page!" she gasped. "I—I thought no one cared any more!" Nancy felt the fierce intake of his breath, she seemed to feel his love enfolding her, crushing her. A wild thrill of happiness, of love.
"Page, you mustn't! I—oh, I've behaved like a bad woman!" she wailed, "you've got a right now to despise me, to think I'd— I'd do anything when I behave like this— why, Page I—I'm married!"
"Married?" he snuffed his fingers "that for such a marriage! I'll break it—listen to me, Nancy, I'm a lawyer, I'll break it—I'll— You'll leave this house, sir. That's what you'll do!"
They both recoiled. Mr. Gordon was standing in the door, looking at them, his face on fire, his eyes bloodshot, his iron gray hair standing up in a frill on top of his head.
"Do you hear me, sir, you'll leave the house."
Roemer swung around, facing the older man, for a moment he glared.
"Mr. Gordon, I can't bear this! I know the truth, Nancy told me—she's been dragged into a secret marriage. If it were right, if she loved him, I—I could stand it. As it is I'm here, I'll always be here, ready to serve her, to get a divorce for her, to set her free."
Mr. Gordon made a furious gesture with one hand. "That's plenty! I understand. Now—go!"
He was shaking with rage and Nancy saw it, she looked at Roemer imploringly.
"Please go now, Page!" she pleaded.
He hesitated and then he turned took her hand, kissed it and went out passing Mr. Gordon with the air of a conquering hero.
"Good day, sir, I'm sorry you misunderstand."
"I don't misunderstand, Mr. Gordon thundered, "good day, sir, and good riddance!"
The front door closed sharply. Nancy drew a long breath. Mr. Gordon came slowly into the center of the room and stood staring at her.
"Is that your idea?" he demanded hoarsely. "to marry one man—for money—and let another make love to you?"
The girl lifted her head and looked straight into his eyes.
"You're my father," she said simply. "look at me—do you believe I'm like that? That I'd be so—so base? If you do," she cried passionately, "I—I might as well kill myself!"
Her father's face worked, there was something like tears in his eyes.
"Nancy, my girl!" he held out his arms.
She flung herself into them with a low cry of anguish, pressing her face against his shoulder.

"I—I loved Page!" she gasped. "I'm wicked—I love him still!"
It was only two or three days later that Nancy—unable to endure the wretchedness of her plight at home—determined to go to Angie Fuller. She could not tell her own secrets, but there was a soft, plant sympathy about the girl that was like balm to a sore heart.
Angie met Nancy in the kitchen; she had gone there for some hot water for her uncle.
"He's got one of his awful attacks of goul, Nancy," she explained, flushing a little at the sight of her visitor. "he's as cross as two sticks, but I'm sure he'd like to see you."
The old man was huddled up in a big Morris chair.
"My soul!" he let his eyes rest on the pair with a twinge of approval as sharp as his twinge of goul. "Where'd you drop from, Nancy, Virginia?"
Nancy smiled more naturally than she had for days.
"I've come to help Angie take care of you," she said.
The major chuckled. "I'll soon scare you off!"
Nancy sat down on a low stool beside the old man's chair.
"I've come to thank you, major," she said faintly, blushing and paling by turns, "with—all my heart!"
"Eh?" he gave her an angry look, his brows down, "what for?"
"For buying our house—"
He snorted. "Glad to get rid of it then?"
She shook her head. Speech was going to be very difficult. "You've—let us stay in it!"
The major settled back in his chair, staring hard at her quivering face.
"Your father's paying rent," he remarked dryly. "I'd call him a pretty good tenant—says he'll make his own repairs."
Someone else might have turned as out and out. Nancy's voice broke so that Angie dropped down on the floor beside her, holding her hand. "We all love it!" she faltered.
The major stirred his tea. "Where's Roddy?" he asked abruptly. "still doing well?"
Angie felt Nancy's quick intake of breath; the girl full of her own thoughts of Roddy divined that there was something wrong.
"I had a letter from him yesterday," she said, hurriedly, forcing lightness, trying to be unconcerned. "he's—he's all right major."
Angie felt Nancy trembling now and she jumped up suddenly.
"Why, there's Dr. Morgan, uncle," she said, "he must have just got back—he's been out all night!"
"Go let him in," the major set his cup down. "Here, Nancy, stay! I won't be left alone with a doctor, Dick's enough to kill me anyhow."
But Nancy was on her feet in a panic.
"I've got to go," she panted. "I only came in to thank you—to ask how you were, major!"
But he had hold of her hand and he kept struggling, until the door opened for Richard.
"I want you to tell this doctor of ours to treat an old man decently," he said chuckling. "He's starving me to death!"
It was the first meeting since that night when Nancy refused the offer of his name and his home.

"I've come to thank you, Major," she said faintly, blushing and pale.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD SATURDAY FOR MRS. WELLS AT DAUGHTER'S HOME HERE

Funeral services were conducted Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Bowles for Mrs. Bowles' mother, Mrs. R. N. Wells, who passed away Friday evening. Services were conducted by Rev. L. P. Thomas, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Hico.

Mrs. Wells received a fall several weeks ago from which she never recovered. She would have been ninety-one years of age had she lived until July 5th, as she was born July 5, 1843 in Macon County, Alabama. She was married in that state to Mr. Wells Jan. 1, 1867, and they moved to Hamilton County, 1-1/2 miles east of Hico, and resided there until Mr. Wells passed away 14 years ago. Since that time she has made her home with her daughter, Mrs. Bowles. Five children were born to this union, but only three are living. They are Mrs. R. M. Bowles and Mrs. Ida Faber of Hico, and B. F. Wells of Marion County, Alabama. Her son was not here for the funeral, but made a visit here Christmas with his mother and sisters. Grandmother Wells was a member of the Baptist Church, having joined when a young girl. She believed in the old type of religion and practiced her belief. She was quiet and unassuming, but gained friends among both the young and old. She was loved by everyone who knew her. She will be greatly missed by all her relatives and friends.

Why Children Need a Liquid Laxative

The temporary relief children get from unwise dosing with harsh cathartics may cause bowel strain, and even set up irritation in the kidneys. A properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement. There is no discomfort at the time and no weakness after. You don't have to give the child "a double dose" a day or two later. Can constipation be safely relieved in children? "Yes," say medical men. "Yes," say many mothers who have followed this sensible medical advice: 1. Select a good liquid laxative. 2. Give the dose you find suited to the system. 3. Gradually reduce the dose until the bowels are moving regularly without aid. An approved liquid laxative (one that is widely used for children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. The mild laxative action of this excellent preparation is the best form of help for children—and grown-ups, too. The dose can be regulated for any age or need. Your druggist has Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Member N. R. A.

CWA Workers Unearth Mastodon Skull

CHICAGO . . . CWA workers, while digging near Aurora, Ill., unearthed the skeleton head of a huge Mastodon, the extinct species which roamed the North American continent some 20,000 years ago. The head is 4 ft., 9 inches high and 2 ft., 10 inches wide and weighs 350 pounds. Prof. C. R. Smith of Aurora College, pictured above with mastodon skull, classifies the skull as a rare find.

Mail Robbery Charge

CHICAGO . . . Mae Blalock, (above), who claims to be the wife of Basil Banghart, Toughy gangster who was sentenced to 99 years for kidnaping, must herself be returned to Nashville, N. C. to stand trial for connections with a $105,000 mail-truck robbery there.

Ice Skating Queen

May Get Farley Post

WASHINGTON . . . Rumor here has it that Major George L. Berry (above), of Rogersville, Tenn., is the man slated for the job as Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, which post is soon to be vacated by Postmaster-General James A. Farley.

Major League's Oldest

MIAMI . . . Above is the newest and most recent picture of Connie Mack, part owner and manager of the Philadelphia Athletics (A.L.), who is conditioning his players for the start of his 31st year as manager of a major league baseball team. Mack is the dean of all baseball managers.

Democratic Treasurer

WASHINGTON . . . Walter J. Cummings (above), Chicago broker, is the new treasurer of the National Democratic Committee. Mr. Cummings is the man who put into operation the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Gets His Chance

NEW YORK . . . Max Baer (above), giant Californian who knocked out Max Schmeling last summer, gets his chance at Primo Carnera's world heavyweight championship, brought about by a series of circumstances which forced the Madison Square promoters to deal with Baer and concede percentages to take care of Jack Dempsey's contract with Baer. The Baer-Carnera title bout is scheduled here June 14.

Secretary to Mouse

LOS ANGELES . . . When Miss Carolyn Shafer (above), is not rushed to death answering movie fan mail for her boss, she is rather proud that she is the only secretary in the world to a mouse. His name is Mickey Mouse . . . and what a boss.

Colgate Scientist Shows Sleep Improved By Choice of Foods and Bedtime Snacks

THE type of food eaten before retiring has an important influence upon the quality of both child and adult sleep, according to the findings of Dr. Donald A. Laird who has just completed a five-months sleep investigation at Colgate University where he is Director of the psychological laboratory.

The sleep of children was improved 12 per cent by substituting for their ordinary supper a light supper in which the main dish consisted of the familiar, easily digested corn flakes and milk. Adults who like to raid the pantry just before going to bed now have scientific sanction for their habit, for a bedtime snack consisting of the same easily digested dish improved their sleep almost 6 per cent.

Eight children between four and a half and eight years, and eight adults were used by Dr. Laird as subjects for the investigation. A complete record of each night's sleep was obtained by a number of delicate scientific instruments, including the new somnokinograph, the most delicate sleep recording instrument known. The instrument was developed at the Colgate laboratories.

Proper Food Important
"Children," Dr. Laird said, "usually go to bed soon after eating their supper. Sufficient data already existed to show that child restlessness during sleeping hours is frequently due to failure to digest properly the evening meal. In our studies with children we were concerned with discovering to what extent this restlessness could be overcome by giving them only the more easily digested foods for their last meal of the day."

"In conducting the study of adult sleep we were confronted by a different problem. The average adult goes to bed at a time when his stomach is practically empty of the foods eaten at dinner. An empty stomach is subject to rhythmical hunger contractions. There were grounds for believing these contractions to be strong enough at times to cause restless sleep. We sought to discover to what extent we could promote more restful sleep by a light snack before retiring."

"When a light cereal supper of corn flakes and milk and easily

The recording instruments on the subject's bed are read by Dr. Laird in the morning. From left to right: the thermograph charts the temperature of the sleep chamber; the kinetometer shows on its dial the total inches the top of the mattress has been moved by the subject during the night; the chronokinometer registers the exact number of minutes and seconds the subject was moving while in bed.

(Left) Little Lorna MacQueen, one of the child subjects, is intensely interested in the record written by the somnokinograph which Dr. Laird explains to her. The instrument is connected with the beds of the sleepers and registers on the strip of paper just when and how much the subjects moved.

digested accessories was eaten, the children moved 26 per cent less than when a supper with selected hard-to-digest foods was used, and 14 per cent less than when they were given the supper they were accustomed to in their homes. All of the children gave the same results, differing only in magnitude. All showed most movements after the hard-to-digest supper and fewest after the cereal supper.
"It is apparent that the food eaten at the last meal before retiring has a marked effect upon the quality of the sleep of children, and in the studies of adults the same tendencies were shown, although the difference was not so great. After a hard-to-digest late supper the adults' movements were 6 per cent more than when no food was taken before retiring. After the cereal bedtime snack they moved almost 6 per cent less than when no bedtime food was eaten."

The studies of child sleep were conducted in the children's homes, while the adult sleep study was conducted in the recently completed sleep laboratory.

TODAY and TOMORROW

FARMERS success rule

My friend, Charles F. Collisson, who knows more farmers than any other man I know, and who writes in the Minneapolis Tribune more horse-sense about farming than any other writer with whose work I am familiar, printed a piece the other day which bears out my comments that most of the trouble farmers find themselves in arises from the same source as most of the troubles the rest of us are in—ourselves.

Charlie Collisson tells the story of John Linster of Elm Grove Farm, near Northfield, Minn. John Linster has been running the same farm for 34 years. He is so far from being discouraged that he has bought another 160 acres, over in Wisconsin, for his son. The secret of this farmer's success is the secret of anybody else's success; he never spent any money until he had it, never borrowed money until he knew where it was going to earn something for him, never discarded anything old for something new merely for the sake of change, and kept a strict record of every cent received and spent.

Those rules, coupled with knowing one's trade or business thoroughly, are all there is to success. Anybody can succeed who follows them.

JEWIS another view

I have never been able to share the prejudice against Jews as a race that a good many of my Christian friends exhibit. I have no sympathy with the Hitler persecution of the Jews in Germany. I think a good deal of the anti-Jewish feeling arises from the fact that their manners frequently do not conform to Anglo-Saxon standards, and most folk judge others superficially, by their manners.

What the world owes to the Jews is suggested by a motion picture I saw the other day. It is called "The House of Rothschild," and the star actor is George Arliss. It is quite a wonderful picture apart from its Jewish connotations. Produced at this time, when the Jewish world is aroused over the situation of its race in Germany, it may have been designed as a clever piece of anti-Hitler propaganda. But it is an authentic bit of history, and splendidly done. Everybody who wants to understand the finest manifestations of the Jewish character ought to see it.

LAWIS that we like

The older I get, the more I am impressed with the fact that any law is only as good as the public sentiment behind it. If the people like it, it is a good law; if they don't like it, they won't obey it.

If every motorist who disobeys the local speed laws were arrested there wouldn't be jails enough to hold them. But no police force could be maintained large enough to enforce the speed laws strictly. The best laws are those which leave people freest to do whatever they like to do, restraining them only from infringing on others' rights and punishing them promptly and severely for doing anything which results in injury to another's person or property.

ENGLISH 1,000 words

More than five hundred million people, a quarter of the world's population, either speak English or live under the flags of the two great English-speaking nations. Our language is the most widely spoken of all.

It is not as easy for those bred to other tongues to express themselves correctly in English as in some other languages. For that reason, as I have pointed out before in this column, efforts are being made on both sides of the Atlantic to organize a simple vocabulary of less than a thousand English words by means of which any idea can be expressed.

This, it seems to me, is far more sensible than the various attempts to create a new "universal language," such as Esperanto or any thing else which is not already familiar to millions.

PRAYER its purpose

I heard a woman say not long ago that she had lost her faith in religion. She had prayed and prayed for something she wanted and hadn't got it. It struck me that there was something decidedly wrong with the church or the teacher of religion from whom this woman had got that selfish idea of the use of prayer. I never have found anything in the Bible to suggest that one can petition the Almighty for personal benefits and expect to get them.

Those who profess faith in God but try to dictate to the Supreme Being as to how every detail of their lives should be shaped have a totally false idea of the teachings of religion, says my friend Harry Fosdick, whose sermons draw the largest crowds in New York. I agree with him that many people regard themselves as the center of the universe, and what they need most is the sort of faith that assures them that all they need to do is to live up to the Golden Rule and take what comes without whimpering.
