THE DIVORCE COURT MURDER

BY MILTON PROPPER

Eighth installment.
SYNOPSIS: Six persons are in an inner office of the law firm of Dawson, McQuire and Locke at Philadelphia. A master hearing in the divorce case of Rowland vs. Rowland is under way. Mrs. Rowland, represented by her lawyer brother, Mr. Willard; Mr. Rowland, the defendant and his attorney, Mr. Trumbull; the court clerk and Mr. Dawson, the master, are the six persons. There is a new development in the case. After failing to defend himself against the charge of adultery in earlier hearings, Mr. Rowland digs up evidence and asks the court's permission to produce witnesses and resist the suit. Judge Dawson overrules the heated objections of Mr. Willard, and orders Mr. Trumbull to bring in the first witness. Rowland's lawyer goes to get the witness but finds her dead—chloroformed. She is Mrs. Barbara Keith, wife of a prominent Philadelphia business man. Judge Dawson phoned for the police. Detective Tommy Rankin is assigned to the case. He is now questioning all of the parties involved in the case.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
 Rankin nodded in appreciation of the diabolical effectiveness of the late Tom Marshall's measures. "So, with the divorce goes the management of the estate," he summarized. "But I thought Harvey Willard had means. Both he and your wife inherited from Peter Willard's estate. Why should he need the trusteeship?" The young man shook his head. "He's not rich any more, and anyhow Adele was willed most of it. Willard's share all disappeared in poor investments and the stock market. And Marshall's will permitted him to spend for his own benefit the thirty per cent he didn't need to transfer to his sister—about fifty thousand annually. I happen to know he is hard pressed by creditors. Unless he can obtain plenty of funds before July first, he's a ruined man; they will close in and force him into bankruptcy. Adele is too smart to throw good money after bad and won't lend it to him. Only a prompt divorce decree can save him."

"Still," the detective pointed out, "if your wife intends to marry Campbell shortly, what good will that do him? As her husband, he then becomes the Marshall executor, and Willard's situation isn't bettered at all." "Even with temporary control of the estate," Rowland returned, "he might manage to slide out from under." He extinguished his cigarette. "Besides, he had no more idea of Adele's intentions in that direction than I had until my spying brought results."

He paused, and after a brief moment for reflection, Rankin acquiesced. "Yes, I can understand that. Now, what did you discover by watching Mrs. Rowland?" "Two weeks ago I obtained the evidence I needed," Rowland resumed his narrative. "It was on the Wednesday evening after the last hearing. I had learned several days before from the chauffeur that Campbell was back in town; and for some evenings I continued my usual watch and trailed them. Then that Wednesday, May 24th, Finley reported he had been dismissed for the evening and also added this significant item: Adele's maid had casually informed him that she was instructed to pack an overnight bag for her."

"Well, right after supper, I took up my watch by the entrance of the Willard estate. Campbell, driving a Cadillac coupe, arrived at eight o'clock, and Adele joined him with her overnight bag. But in the early part of the evening, they did nothing more remarkable than on other occasions. First, they went to the Forrest Theater. At 11 o'clock, they visited the Organdy Club on Broad Street, but I didn't dare follow them in. Instead, I parked near Campbell's car, looked into it and saw that he too had brought an overnight bag. He and my wife remained in the night club until midnight. And perhaps twenty minutes before they appeared, Mrs. Keith came out of the place by herself and—"

Rankin's interruption was abrupt. "All alone?" he demanded sharply. "She was at the Organdy unescorted?" "Yes, and it puzzled me too," Rowland replied. "I called her and she explained that she had been to the opera for which Mr. Keith did not care. Because the club was so close by, she went in to see the floor show. I realized, for a married woman in her position, the story didn't ring true. I didn't question her, as it was some of my business and beside the point. I was too thankful for her appearance just when I needed a witness to worry about it."

"You were well enough acquainted with Mrs. Keith to enlist her aid in such a personal matter?" The young man made an apologetic gesture. "I'm afraid I wasn't fair to her and took advantage of her lucky appearance," he explained persuasively. "You see, I asked her to join me, but didn't tell her why I wanted her; I only said it would be an important service to me and urgent. I was excited and that made her curious and desirous to help me. It wasn't until we were already trailing my wife and Campbell away from the club, toward city limits, that she fully realized the predicament I placed her in. But it was too late then and she was sporty enough to see it through; for my sake, she agreed to risk the publicity and gossip and give evidence. If I had ever dreamed it would end like this."

He left the sentence unfinished, compressing his lips with a sigh, shaking his head dolefully. An awkward silence followed until Rankin asked: "Then you and Mrs. Keith were good friends, Rowland. How long have you known her?" "I met her two winters ago, at Palm Beach, though, like all Philadelphia society, I had heard of Mortimer Keith. She stayed at the Royal Arms Hotel, where Adele and I were, and because he was too busy to join her, she was a grass widow and needed company. That, her social position and her attractiveness made her welcome with all the young men at the resort. I did my share to entertain her; I rode and visited the casino with her, and several times attended the dog races. Even Adele acted fairly cordially toward her."

"Mrs. Keith and I could make out they were drinking in the living room."

"Well, what happened the night here you followed your wife and Campbell?" the detective prompted. "Where did they lead you?" "Out the Park Drive and left on the Ridge Pike," Rowland said. "We passed through Roxborough and Norristown. At Collegeville we caught up and followed them off to the right, along the narrow country road paralleling Perkiomen Creek. At the end of five miles, they halted finally at a substantial stucco bungalow along the creek. It was then one-thirty. "Again I drove my car past, about two hundred feet, and parked where a clump of trees fringed the road and hid us from the cottage. Campbell produced a key and unlocked the door; then he turned on the lights. I have inquired about it since and learned it belongs to Nick Albert, the manager of the Organdy Club, a friend of Campbell's. Adele was then cautious enough to pull down all the blinds. Still watching silently in the darkness, Mrs.

Keith and I could make out they were drinking in the living room. At two-thirty they started to retire and a half hour later Campbell turned out the lights. I considered I had gathered enough confidence against Adele to enter a defense to her suit; so I retraced the trail with Mrs. Keith back to the city."

The speaker concluded his narrative and fell silent until Rankin asked: "And at no time did your wife or Campbell see you or become suspicious of your presence?" "I'm practically certain they never realized they were being followed."

"Then they and Mr. Willard had no idea in advance with whom they had to reckon? Mr. Trumbull felt reasonably sure they hadn't identified Mrs. Keith as your chief witness before she arrived at the hearing this afternoon?" Allen Rowland pondered a moment. "That's right, unless Adele noticed her at the night club," he offered at length, "and she probably didn't; her arrival there that night must have been one of the reasons Mrs. Keith left without waiting for her date."

"Yes, I suppose that's possible," Rankin frowned uncertainly. "And you have no other proofs of your wife's infidelity? Your entire case depended on her?" "Mrs. Keith's death doesn't leave me a leg to stand on," Rowland replied, a harsh note in his voice. Abruptly, the detective shifted the subject. "Now just one more point, Mr. Rowland," he said. "About the night of Wednesday, February first, when Mrs. Rowland caught you and Miss Edmond together at the Sunset Inn, I've found out that immediately after the interruption, Mrs. Keith's husband arrived there. Can you tell me how he came to be there or what his connection was with...?" he paused delicately, "your intrigue?" But as Jill Edmond had done, the young man professed to be unable to account for the manufacturer's appearance. He had never met Mortimer Keith, he said; though, having seen him several times, he had recognized him when he entered the room. He could add no explanation or detail to the secretary's description of the incident.

Concluding his questions on this circumstance, Rankin thanked Rowland and dismissed him. His next step was to examine the dead woman's checkbook. Except for two stubs, her accounts seemed in perfect order; her expenditures, with the date, purpose or name of payee and amount, were carefully audited. The sums she spent were comparatively small and far from commensurate. Rankin wondered at her low balance, which never exceeded five thousand dollars, and at present came to less than one.

The two check-stubs which were not identifiable as to purpose, however, indicated exceptionally large sums. One check had been drawn about three months ago, and the past Thursday—for two thousand and three thousand dollars, respectively.

The only clue to the reason for these withdrawals was the word "personal" written on each stub. Before the detective could ponder the significance of these entries, a knock interrupted him. At his command, the policeman he had sent to locate Mortimer Keith opened it and entered the room. "Yes, Cottman," Rankin greeted him. "You've been gone a long time. Is Mr. Keith with you?"

The officer shook his head. "No, I haven't found him; he isn't in town at all," he replied. "It was too late to visit his offices, so I called at the Aldwich Apartments and learned from his butler, Stanley, that he had gone away—on business, he thought, to Washington."

Rankin pursed his lips in disappointment. "Washington? I suppose you discovered what business took him there and communicated with the people he went to see, Cottman?" the detective inquired. "No, I didn't, although I tried to; that's what took me so long. The secretary said it had something to do with the New Ray Silk Company. Neither he nor the butler had any idea at what hotel Mr. Keith might stop tonight." "Hotel? Then he isn't expected back today?" "The policeman shook his head. "No, not until tomorrow," he answered, "when he's completed his business."

"Well, I imagine we can wait and give him a chance to turn up according to schedule," Rankin said, dismissing Cottman. Johnson entered as Cottman left. "Finished, Johnson?" asked Rankin. Johnson did not reply until the officer had gone. "I've taken everybody's fingerprints, Tommy," he said, "but I can't make a detailed report until I've had time to study them—say tomorrow morning."

Victimizing the Tourists Motor tourists who have been told of the experiences of their friends with Pennsylvania traffic traps are this summer avoiding that state of beautiful hills and more lovely valleys.

The favorite Pennsylvania device for mulcting the unwary visitor centers around a system of road signs calling here and there for a dead stop. The signs are of dimensions that would do little credit to a peanut stand, and set low on the ground, are easily over looked by the stranger.

Instead two officers idle away at the curb a quarter of a mile around the bend and up the grade in front of the palatial headquarters of the State police.

All of this on a hot Sunday afternoon, with the wife and kiddies covering in the tonneau, while Paw, who for 25 years has been driving cautiously to safeguard his own anatomy back home in Toledo or Miami, is wondering where they will all sleep the night if the fine runs more than $29.60.

But there is no fine. Fiously His Honor explains that under the law of the Sovereign Commonwealth of Pennsylvania no trial can be held on Sunday or sentence imposed. So it will be necessary for Paw to post a forfeit, say seven dollars and fifty cents.

Many a non-resident motorist suffers this modern refinement of highway robbery little suspecting that he is elected only because he is a non-resident. But the other Sunday the absence of Pennsylvania cars among the many parked in front of the Alderman's house attracted the attention of the waiting wife of one victim.

THE RED CROSS STEPS IN There is one American institution which stands as a model for the whole world. That is the American Red Cross. The peculiar function of the Red Cross is to bring aid to sufferers from physical disasters.

There is no delay about Red Cross aid in times of emergency. No red tape has to be cut. No politicians or other self-seekers have a finger in the pie.

We think that the administration of the huge relief funds set up by Federal and State Governments in times past could have been entrusted to the Red Cross for administration with more efficient and economical results.

WORK SELDOM KILLS Every year about this time we begin to see reports in the newspapers of farmers dying from "sunstroke" while working in the fields.

About this time of year, also, we begin to notice frequent reports in the city papers of men dropping dead on the golf course. We have seldom heard anyone suggest that the golfer's life must be a terrible one, because so many men die at the game.

There is a wide-spread belief that all work is dangerous to health and longevity, while all play is beneficial. We have heard— we don't know how many— sentimental stories, and have read innumerable jokes and magazine articles, all conveying the implication that work in itself is a life-shortening, crippling and generally unwholesome thing.

On the sidewalk eight feet from the gutter and the exhausts of hundreds of taxicabs are tables in a "sidewalk cafe" on 42nd Street in Times Square. Strangely enough, it seems to be well patronized.

Science has made available a great range of information valuable to rural citizens in making more profitable use of the raw materials grown by them.

MID-SUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM — by A. B. Chapin

RAMBLING 'ROUND NEW YORK with HUGH KENN

The commencement of Hobo College may have only five graduates instead of six this year, because Boso Clarke might not get out of Bellevue in time to take his diploma.

Supposedly sophisticated Broadway stared wide-eyed recently when about a score of liveried waiters ran a race carrying a tray, a bottle of whiskey (geau-line) or a champagne bottle (water) and two glasses each.

Reports have it that New York this year is supporting more young men with no more to recommend them than affable manners and tall coats than for years. The "spongers" pride themselves on "setting around" to the gay haunts of the night with somebody else always footing the bill.

Down in New York's lower east side, many tenement dwellers have more love for goat's milk than they have for the law which makes keeping live animals with out a permit an offense.

Two thousand five hundred and seventy six! That's the number of officially reported accidents from fireworks in New York.

On the sidewalk eight feet from the gutter and the exhausts of hundreds of taxicabs are tables in a "sidewalk cafe" on 42nd Street in Times Square. Strangely enough, it seems to be well patronized.

COTTON SPORT FROCK

Pattern 8453—When summer comes all young athletes are in their element and they make haste to the beaches to acquire that much desired and much admired thing—a deep coat of tan.

The back of this frock is well designed, so that the straps stay in place in the midst of a furious game of tennis. A panel ending in kick pleats makes the front interesting and the back closing at center also has a pleat, for plenty of action.

Gay buttons and a stitched belt completes this stunning frock. This style would be good in pastel or white linen, or white silk crepe.

TIMELY TOPICS

Private beaches don't even raise an eyebrow at the one-piece bathing suits for women this summer, and the halters that leave the entire back exposed to the sun are the order of the day.

Summer shoes in light, cool, open fabrics are included in the mode this year. White and navy checked fabric with white kid yoke and heel; sackcloth with rus set calf trim in an English gillie; oxfords of brown calfskin with an open cotton mesh in the vamp and side inset. All there are being shown.

The abbreviated shorts recently shown for men have been in such demand for women that one manufacturer, at least, has produced a special design in this brief underwear, shorter than any panties you've ever seen, and made of a porous, cool, woven yarn.

An aluminum ball, generously perforated, is a new gadget that works beautifully for cooking rice. It hinges at its diameter. Fill it partly with rice. Drop it into boiling water. When done, hang it up by its chain to dry. You'll find the rice fluffy, separate kernels and free from starchy coating.

A biochemist has announced that spinach tends to curb irritability.

Advancing meat prices have doubled the sales of fish in one small community we know quite well. And, we might add, to the great benefit of the teeth of both adults and children, who need a good supply of phosphorous and calcium—which are the good assets of fish in the diet.

"The Changing Country Life" is the theme around which all the Short Course programs and demonstrations have been built. Ox-cart ideas do not keep up with the procession in an automobile age whether in town or country. So it is well to recognize that country life is changing.

Sunday School Lesson by Rev. Charles E. Dunn

JOSIAH Lesson for August 4th. 2 Kings 22 and 23. Golden Text: Matthew 4:10. Josiah, who was proclaimed king of Judah when he was but a little lad 8 years old, is one of the most attractive figures in the sacred record. "Like unto him," says the Bible historian, "was there no king before him; neither after him arose there any like him."

AN IMPORTANT TRANSLATION On March 24, 1844, a German scholar, Lobegott Friedrich Konstantin Tischendorf, arrived at St. Catherine's monastery on the Sinaitic peninsula.

There are only a few of these extremely old manuscripts, and the three most precious of them are the Sinaitic, the Vatican, at Rome, and the Alexandrian, presented to Charles I. of England in 1628 and placed in the British Museum upon its establishment in 1753.

The FAMILY DOCTOR by JOHN JOSEPH GAINES MD

MANAGEMENT OF FEVERS Probably four-fifths of our human ailments exhibit at one time or another a rising temperature above the normal. It is called "fever." The elevation may vary from a barely detectable increase to a raging flame that menaces life itself.

To attempt to demolish every fever the moment we encounter it must never be attempted. We have remedies for reducing temperature, but they must be used with the utmost care and watchfulness. The fever may be kept within safe limits, but just that, while the CAUSE of the disturbance is being eradicated.

Take the case of measles, scarlet fever, small-pox, or any other self-limited disease. To rush the temperature to normal at my first visit would be utterly stupid and an ignoble end through the hand of an assassin. The task facing the new young king was tremendous, but into it he put the energy of ten men. He knew that the nation was in a most critical condition. The thorough-going reformation of Josiah was inspired by the discovery by Hilkiah, the High Priest, of the Book of Instruction, or Deuteronomy, in the temple where it had long gathered dust. Its warnings neglected, its laws allowed to become obsolete, the king was so disturbed by the contents of this forgotten volume that he read it publicly to a great assembly, following which both king and people entered into a solemn covenant to act in accord with its provisions. Pagan altars were removed, fakirs were barred; lewd practices stamped out; the Mosaic Law restored.

LETTER FROM JAPAN SENT TO PRISCILLA RODGERS

Following is a letter received in Hico written to Miss Priscilla Rodgers from Japan:
Yokohama, Japan,
May 30, 1935.

Dear Miss Rodgers:

Thank you very much for your letter. I think you are getting along all right. When I received your letter, the cherry blossoms were in full bloom, but now they are all gone, and peonies and wisterias are at their best.

Thirteen years ago the city of Yokohama was miserably destroyed by the earthquake. It was doubtful whether the city might become again prosperous, but, by the strenuous efforts of the citizens, it is reconstructed and revived, and now it is much better than before. In order to commemorate this successful city-reconstruction, we have the Great Exposition in our city. I wish I could show you the grand sight of the Exposition. The airplanes looped the loop for the occasion. The people in every place in the country celebrated May 27th as "Naval Day," as it was the 30th anniversary of the Battle of the Japan Sea in Russo-Japanese War.

The rainy season has set in in Japan and we can seldom see the blue sky. How is the weather in America in June? When July comes, my school gives us special practice for swimming. Do you have swimming lessons in your school?

I am awfully sorry that I am so late answering. How many brothers and sisters you have? I am fourteen years old. Please remember me to your parents and to your teachers and friends in your school.

Wishing you happiness and excellent health, I am
Your friend,

—REPORTER.

If you are coaching young children in reading, this summer, give them the primary requisite—confidence—by making up short sentences of words of one syllable for sight reading. Then very gradually lengthen the sentences. And after still add a word of two syllables to a short sentence. And if the child stumbles badly, go back to words of one syllable, and add a word of praise for any valiant attempt though the results may be mediocre. Confidence is the prime requisite.

The Story of the Constitution

by CALED JOHNSON

THE SEED FROM WHICH GREW THE CONSTITUTION

Somehow the states struggled through the first five years of the Revolution under their loose and ineffective alliance, centering in the Continental Congress. In the meantime, plans for a permanent government were being debated. Such a plan had been drawn up in 1776, immediately after the signing of the Declaration of Independence. This plan was embodied in the Articles of Confederation.

The Articles of Confederation were ratified by the thirteen states in 1781. The smaller states, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware, had held back, fearing that the other states, all of whom claimed territorial rights extending westward to the Mississippi River, would dominate by their mere size. Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, both of the Carolinas and Georgia, at last agreed to let their westward lands be carved up into new states. The others ratified the Articles of Confederation.

Under this new form of government each State remained completely independent. Congress could act only on:

- 1. Declaring war or peace, and superintending the conduct of war.
2. Building a navy.
3. Controlling diplomatic relations.
4. Coining money and emitting bills of credit.
5. Establishing Post Offices.
6. Regulating trade with the Indians.
7. Adjusting boundary disputes between the States.

There was no executive authority, no Federal judicial system. The Congress could, if it desired, set up a court of appeal. No vote could be carried in the Congress without the assent of a majority of state delegations. On all important measures the votes of nine states were required.

This plan did not bring about national unity. When the War of the Revolution ended, in 1783, the State of Great Britain signed a treaty recognizing each of her former American Colonies as an independent State, but gave no recognition to the United States as a nation.

In 1784 the States claiming Western lands, ceded 430,000 square miles, lying north of the Ohio River, to the Congress. (This Northwest Territory later became the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin). In the meantime, however, the government under the Articles of Confederation had practically collapsed. The Congress in 1786 reported the Federation "broke," with a debt of $42,000,000 and no credit.

The States had to work out their own problems. Since there was no Federal regulation of commerce between the States, each began to set up protective restrictions against goods coming in from other states. This confused inter-state commerce situation was the seed from which grew the Constitution and our Federal Government.

In 1785 the States of Maryland and Virginia appointed delegates to work out a plan of regulating commerce on Chesapeake Bay and the Potomac River. The delegates met at the home of General George Washington at Mount Vernon, Virginia. They came to a satisfactory agreement, and proposed a meeting of commissioners from all the States, to work out a system of regulating commerce between all of them.

A convention was called to meet in 1786 at Annapolis. Only five states sent commissioners. The Annapolis convention asked the Congress to call on all of the States to send commissioners to a convention in Philadelphia the following Spring, "for the sole and express purpose of revising the Articles of Confederation."

The call was made, and on May 25, 1787, fifty-five delegates, representing all the thirteen States, met in the hall, under the shadow of the Liberty Bell, in which the Declaration of Independence had been signed eleven years earlier, and drew up the document upon which our Federal Government rests and from which it derives its powers, the Constitution of the United States of America.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

Washington, July 30.—About the only person in Washington who is not completely worn out by work and worry in the jungle heat of a Capital Summer is the President of the United States. That fact is noted here to dispel rumors that the President's health is failing.

Washington's "silly season" always produces a crop of gossip and rumor about whoever happens to be occupying the White House. Sly whispers are exchanged, passed on and magnified in the passing, about the incumbent President's morals or his health. These get circulated around the country, until a lot of people who ought to know better than to credit irresponsible gossip, get to believe that there is something seriously wrong.

This year's gossip touches the President's health. Nobody is whispering about his morals, but you can hear in any bar or club, at almost any social gathering or even on street corners "inside" but false information to the effect that Mr. Roosevelt is physically in a bad way. The gossip mongers will tell you that the infantile paralysis, which has deprived him of the use of his legs for the past fourteen years, is creeping upward, affecting his nervous system and his digestion and causing his doctors alarm, etc., etc.

President Spikes Rumor. That is not true, but the rumor has become so persistent that the President himself took notice of it, and at a recent press conference called attention to his robust physical condition and the calmness of his nerves.

While he cannot take any form of exercise that involves the use of his legs, such as riding, golf or tennis, he gives great attention to keeping fit, gets his exercise by swimming in the White House pool for half an hour every day, and is probably now in better general health than when he took office.

He plans to demonstrate the truth about his health to the whole nation next month, when he will cross the continent and make several speeches at strategic points.

The President has one advantage over Congress, in that he sleeps in the same building that he works in, and does not have to expose himself to 100-degree temperatures in passing from one air-conditioned room to another.

LET'S TALK ABOUT CLOTHES By a "Young Modern" DENYTON, July 16.—Smartness is a quality that every young modern desires to attain. It does not present a difficult problem. On the contrary, a simple one, for detail accessories present the solution. We've discussed the principles of essentials of a well-groomed individual, and now let us turn to the minute details.

Have you thought much about the use of flowers in connection with your summer wardrobe? They present a variety of uses and pleasing effects. A clever adaptation for a summer evening night included a head ornament of flowers. Weave a cluster of poppies or some frail blooms into a spray and let it outline the contour of your head just above a row of curls. It will give you a delightfully fresh appearance.

You may now wear flowers in your ears. And it's not a gag. Some of the newest earrings shown in the shops consist of small fabric flowers such as a single violet or a cluster of forget-me-nots mounted on a clip. Young moderns at Texas State College for Women (CIA) are wearing them to accentuate the color note of their costume.

Mother of pearl has come into its own in the line of accessories for summer. It is shown in hand-bag clasps, belt buckles, buttons and in tiny monogram clips for the dress or bag.

Petit point vanities are in the ascendancy just now, and especially for evening. Vanities are also being shown in metal with a lacquered portrait of yourself on the lid. The makers suggest a color caricature of simple line drawing for the best results. There are linen covered vanities ornamented with tiny bouquets of flat ribbon flowers or embroidered with your monogram. Linen hand-bags, made on the slip cover style so they can be washed, are featured in colors to match every costume.

ON TEXAS FARMS Trench silos are getting filled this month in Texas. Corn, red top cane, seeded ribbon cane, he-gari, kafir, milo, and a few more such crops are going into them.

E. R. Eudaly, Extension dairyman, says these crops had better be ripe because if they are cut too green the silage will contain a surplus of acid and as a result scour the cattle if fed liberally.

He says that the leaves on the upper half of the stalk should be green—but the riper the crop the greater the feed value of the silage.

But that isn't all. Each cow should be supplied with one ton of hay and one of feed per year. He says cannily, "Remember, the more roughage the cow will consume, the less of grain mixture will be required. Hay and silage are cheaper than corn and cottonseed meal."

PROPOSED AMENDMENT NO. 2 PROVIDES FOR TEMPORARY COMMITMENT OF INSANE

Proposition No. 2 on the August 24th special election ballot has to do with the temporary commitment of insane persons, preliminary to a trial by jury, according to an analysis of the Seven Amendments submitted by Secretary of State, Gerald C. Mann.

Under the present Constitution whereby everyone is guaranteed a jury trial, it is impossible to commit a mentally ill person to an institution for treatment or observation without the necessity of a jury trial. It has been pointed out that this is often very inconvenient and embarrassing.

The proposal, according to Secretary of State Gerald C. Mann, if passed, would authorize the Legislature to pass such laws as would permit mentally ill persons to be confined by County Courts in institutions, presumably, or under the care of physicians or experts for a period of ninety days prior to a jury trial. It is presumed that the ninety day period of confinement would be for the purpose of observing such person.

The provisions would apply only to persons not charged with a criminal offense.

The Amendment specifically sets out that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, but that in the particular case of insane persons a confinement period of ninety days for observation may be prescribed without the necessity of a jury trial. At the end of that time a jury would be had.

MENUS AND RECIPES DENYTON, July 16.—Many a housewife has a mind full of petty worries, for instance, what to have for supper on such days as Sundays, holidays, and evenings after the matinee. This problem is easily solved with the modern equipment found in the electric shops of today.

If a few minutes are given for meal planning and an emergency shelf is at hand, a most delightful supper may be prepared and served to six or more in a surprisingly short time.

Dishes such as omelets, souffles, fondus, rarebits, scrambled eggs, bacon, creamed meats and other such delicious ones may be cooked on an electric grill. Toast made of various breads may be prepared on an electric toaster to accompany these dishes. The toasters are now made so as to be automatic in action, that is, when bread is placed in the toaster and proper degree of brownness is reached the current is automatically turned off, thus keeping a watchful eye for the toast.

Moulded salads, desserts, puddings and wafers made the day before may be served with the above dishes.

Suppers are more appetizing if served with a beverage. During the summer season cold beverages are preferable, tea being a very popular drink.

MENUS (Suppers) Welch rarebit, buttered toast, pineapple salad with marshmallow and nut dressing, butterscotch ice-cream cookies, iced tea, sugar.

CREAMED EGGS AND ASPARAGUS. Toast points, chopped-fruit salad, pistachio parfait, sponge cake, iced cocoa.

RECIPES WELCH RAREBIT: 1 tablespoon butter, 1-2 pound American cheese, 1 cup evaporated milk, paprika.

Melt the butter and finely cut cheese. Add the evaporated milk slowly, and cook mixture until slightly thickened. Season with paprika and serve on toast.

PISTACHIO PARFAIT: 1-3 cup sugar and 4 tablespoons water in saucepan, stir until sugar is dissolved and boil until syrup spins a thread when dropped from tip of spoon. Remove from stove.

Beat 2 egg-whites until stiff. Add syrup slowly, continuing to beat mixture until light and fluffy. Chill stirring, occasionally. Beat: 1-2 pint cream until thick, add 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, bit of green coloring, 1-3 teaspoon almond extract, 1-4 cup finely chopped pistachio nuts. Beat again in egg mixture with a few turns of the egg beater. Freeze in an electric refrigerator.

Here are some... Cold Facts about Natural Gas Cool...

Kitchens are as cool as the parlor with natural gas. Housewives may go on with their meals unconscious of additional heat. Those who have worked over the old fashioned coal and wood ranges can really appreciate this fact.

The savings on natural gas during the summer months are nothing short of sensational. Even with the continuous use of the stove in canning, preserving and cooking during the summer months the economy of natural gas stays at a minimum cost.

Convenience is paramount in the use of natural gas... no fuss, no bother, no mess... just turn the burners and an instant hot blaze is yours for the effort.
