VOLUME LII

HICO, TEXAS, FRIDAY, AUGUST 28, 1936.

NUMBER 14

Here In HICO

Borrowed from a contemporary: "Knock, knock." "Who's there?" "Gladys." "Gladys who?" "Gladys election is over."

And who's not? Hot, dry August weather is not an ideal time to stage an election anyway. It's hard enough to keep cool and control one's temper and disposition without having to contend with politics.

Of course the winners are satisfied with results, and are glad their campaigns have come to a successful close. And the losers, we'd wager, are glad the two Democratic primaries are behind them and that there is no further necessity for mounting the platform and canvassing the countryside in search of elusive votes.

So far as the News Review is concerned, the election is over. The people have spoken, and we pursue the Democratic custom of bowing to the majority's will. While many distasteful matters came up in the recent campaign, we tried to take none of them too seriously, having always noticed that political campaigns bring forth more venom than sincerity. Under other conditions some of the things said and done would incite righteous wrath. But as we have said before, this should be considered and anticipated before one gets involved in a campaign, and if one can't take it, he'd better go to the marks about this time every two years.

For our support of any candidate during the primaries we have no apology to offer. Whether our favorite won or lost (and we'll have to admit that we frequently lose our vote) is not of an great consequence, now since it's all over. Whatever position we took was taken after due consideration of the issues and the merits of the candidate, and we were sincere in trying to cast our vote for the right man in every case. It was not our motive to crawl on anybody's hand wagon, even were our foresight good enough to pick a winner every time.

On the other hand, we don't think the country necessarily will go to the hazy woods just because our man didn't get elected in every instance. Elections have been lost before, and the country has rocked right along.

Yes, the election is over. Now let's get out the cotton and fatten the turkeys for market.

Speaking of lost causes, we've been overruled on another matter recently, and are not disgruntled about it either.

For the past two or three years there has been considerable discussion about taking the light standards out of the center of the street. While we had reconciled ourselves to the fact that perhaps the heavy standards and their big bases were blocking progress on the highway, our contention all along has been that on Pecan Street there is no necessity for clearing a roadway for the further convenience and safety of drivers who already are in too big a hurry.

Many reasons were offered to support our contention that the lights ought to remain. But all in vain. This week a crew of workmen began demolishing the structures, and now the principal thoroughfares are clear of lights in the center. To make a clean sweep of it, the large flagpole in the center of town has been removed, thus relegating to the discard a landmark which has stood through the years, and probably did excellent service during the late war.

But the streets do look wider now, and will look a lot better when paving is completed. And maybe the war clouds won't close down on us and we won't have any particular use for a flagpole any more. So again we bow to the will of the majority (one councilman stating that he thought ninety-nine per cent of the people were for taking out the standards) and will not stand in the way of progress—if that be progress. Perhaps our position was influenced too much by sentiment, for we have found it a hard matter to throw away old magazines and various other bric-a-brac around the house and confess to a weakness along the lines of preserving things of a historical or sentimental nature.

The only request we make of the way-makers-for-progress is that the old lighting system be supplanted with one equally as good, if not better. For it would indeed be a shame to go backward while trying to advance.

The street paving work is progressing at a rapid rate, and the engineers state that he will have the job done around the first of the year. While this seems impossible to many who have been disappointed at the slow progress to this date, these same persons admit that things are moving along faster now.

First Bale Brought In Last Thursday By A. J. Adkison

Bringing its owner a total of $105.92 for his efforts and success in having the first bale of 1936 cotton ginned in Hico, a load of seed cotton arrived at the Kight Gin last Thursday afternoon about the time the paper went to press. The bale when ginned weighed 568 pounds. It was sold to the Kight Gin at 12.75 cents per pound, making a sum of $72.42, less 25c for weighing. The seed brought $13.75, and Mr. Adkison collected the premium of $29.00 offered by the Hico Chamber of Commerce for the first bale this year. It was ginned free by the Kight Gin. Both Hico gins are ready for the fall run and although receipts have been slow since the arrival of the first bale, the operators state that when the cotton starts moving it will be ginned out very fast, provided the hot, dry weather continues.

Faculty Completed For School Session To Open Sept. 14

With opening of the Hico Public Schools scheduled for Monday, August 14, the superintendent and board have been busy with preparations for the new term.

The new members of the faculty this year are Miss Mason of Justin, Texas, fourth grade teacher; and Miss Iris Wagstaff of Laneville, Texas, teacher of Home Economics and Mathematics. Miss Wagstaff will probably teach second year Algebra; Mrs. Segrest will have Plane Geometry, Bookkeeping and Algebra I. The Civics and Economics classes will be taught by C. G. Masterson.

Supt. C. G. Masterson makes some announcements and gives information below which will be of interest to patrons and pupils:

Patrons of Hico Public Schools are requested to keep up with the announcements in the Hico News Review regarding the various questions about school work which will arise from time to time. High school pupils will be interested to know of some of the changes which are being made for their benefit. The Home Economics department will occupy the eighth grade room across the hall from the Vocational Agriculture room. The home room of the eighth grade will be in the Science lecture room. The library will be moved to the cloak room next to the study hall and all books will be given to students while they are in the study hall. Typewriting and Bookkeeping will take the old library room. Home Economics and Vocational Agriculture III will be offered as new courses this year.

There will be two sections of Home Economics so that girls in all grades may take the subject if they desire to do so. The program of recitations will probably appear in next week's issue of the News Review.

Pupils are invited to visit the office at almost any time after 9 o'clock and talk about their work for next year, provided that they do not come to the office in the afternoon. Pupils are invited to attend to this requirement in the bulletin on classification and accrediting of high schools.

"High school pupils should carry only four subjects at a time and should be required to do intensive work in each of them. Only exceptionally strong pupils should be permitted to take more than this amount of work."

The Jones Fine Bread Co. of Waco, Texas, is furnishing the school Wafers book covers this year along with the Coca Cola Bottling Company of Abilene. We want to thank these people for being so generous and we will do our very best to make the book covers serve their purpose. Each company furnishes a good grade of book cover.

Pupils from other schools which are not accredited will be allowed eight credits only. Credit for other work must be gained by examinations.

Several of the pupils of Hico High School have asked me if the NYA program would be in force during the coming year. I am glad to answer their questions in the affirmative. Besides earning expense money many of the pupils may get some valuable experience in office work, library work, and in other work. I have not as yet been informed as to the requirements of students who may get on the NYA payroll but do not think there will be many changes over last year's rules.

C. G. MASTERSON.

F. F. A. MEETING.

All V. A. and prospective V. A. students who wish to attend the Texas Centennial at Dallas next Tuesday and Wednesday will please meet at the Hico School building at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

All students are urged to go, as the trip will be educational as well as entertaining.

All who wish to make the trip must attend the meeting Saturday evening, as it is necessary to find out how many are going.

F. F. A. PRESIDENT.

Clyde L. Garrett of Eastland Wins In Congressional Race

Clyde L. Garrett, county judge of Eastland county, will be the next congressman from the 17th district, representing 12 counties, including Hamilton.

Retiring from the national political arena is Thos. L. Blanton, Abilenean, who has represented parts of the district for 20 years with one brief interlude when he was not a candidate. In Saturday's democratic primary Garrett inflicted crushing defeat on Blanton—the third time the Abilenean in his long and memorable career has been on the losing end. The first was in his initial campaign for congress when he was defeated by Congressman W. R. Smith; and the second in 1928, when he ran for the United States senate.

The Vote. The district Saturday polled approximately as many votes as in the first primary of July 25—a remarkable showing in view of the short ballot and absence of state and county races, and testimony of the enormous interest aroused in the bitter struggle between Garrett and Blanton. Tabulations of the vote, as released the first of the week, gave the following results:

Garrett 33,386
Blanton 18,337

Blanton carried only two counties of the district, Shackelford, his former home, and Hamilton, farthest county in the district. In this county he received 1650 votes to Garrett's 1440.

The Blanton vote was nearly 2,000 less than that he received in July; Garrett's was much larger, indicating that the Eastland man inherited virtually all of the Townsend organization vote polled in the first primary for Fred O. Jave of De Leon.

Judge Blanton lost his home county, Taylor—a stunning upset. His home town, Abilene, also gave Garrett the heavy end of its vote.

Garrett's Statement. Garrett, the victor, made this statement on the result:

"I am deeply grateful for the overwhelming majority which my friends made possible by their work and loyalty in the run-off campaign. I have learned the value of friends and that their loyalty means to a man.

"The people of this district have shown a faith in me which is deeply appreciated and which I shall endeavor to merit by the work and service I shall strive to render them.

"This majority of 15,000 votes overwhelms me with gratitude and humbleness of spirit and a deep abiding faith in the goodness of my fellowman. I approach my new task with a willingness of spirit and a determination to render the best service within my power to all the people of this congressional district and the nation.

"Toward those who did not see fit to support me in this race I hold no ill feeling but pledge my friendship and best effort to serving them as well as my most loyal supporters.

"My heart is filled with gratitude to each and every one who contributed in any way to my victory. It is your victory as well as mine."

Blanton's Statement. From Blanton, the loser, came this statement:

"I take my defeat on the chin. I am disappointed, but am neither disgruntled nor dismayed.

"For the real friends who have loyally worked and voted for me in this run-off campaign, I have deep affection, and appreciate their every effort and thank them from the bottom of my heart.

"The result is accepted by me with a genuine feeling of relief and satisfaction. For the first time in many years I feel free and unobligated. I am happy in the thought that I now have an opportunity to devote the rest of my life to my family.

"I now intend to take a much needed vacation to which for a long time I have been entitled. Thereafter I shall resume the practice of law."

Sketch. Clyde Garrett, congressman-elect, is 50 years of age. He was born in Eastland county in a log cabin, still standing, near Gorman, one of 11 children of W. V. Garrett, a Confederate veteran. His first job was as railroad section hand, and he had schooling in Hankins training college at Gorman. He taught school, kept books, sold insurance.

Garrett entered public life as a deputy tax collector of Eastland county, and was also a deputy sheriff and deputy county clerk. He was elected county clerk in 1912, serving three terms. After a short banking career he was made city manager of Eastland in 1918. In 1928 he was elected county judge and has been reelected every two years. He is now state president of the county judges' association.

The congressman-elect is married and has five children whose ages range from four to 22 years. He is a member of the Baptist church, a Mason, a Knight of Pythias, and member of Eastland Lions Club.

Wear a smile, and you will hide an abundance of old clothes.

One who is afraid of the future deserves to die now.

Light Poles Moved From Street Center Ahead of Paving

Leveling of main street will begin soon as the flagpole in the center of Pecan Street is removed according to U. D. Brown, new project superintendent who has moved here from West to supervise paving. Ditches will be filled within twelve inches of the curb and then topped with six inches of white caliche. Favorable weather will rush the project to completion. Brown said he thought specifications had been changed where by no asphalt could be applied when the temperature reached a minimum of 45 degrees. He expects all paving to be finished within six months.

Other work has advanced rapidly this week. Hico's flag pole is expected to fall soon. Streets in the main part of town have been torn up considerably due to the digging up of conduits. Plans at present call for using the same Storm sewer for the project which has been under construction several months is practically complete. All hands will then be available for work on the streets.

BLANTON WILL PRACTICE LAW IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

Abilene, Aug. 24.—Congressman Thomas L. Blanton, defeated for renomination in Saturday's primary, announced today he will enter the practice of law at Washington, D. C.

Blanton issued the following statement: "Immediately after taking a long delayed and much needed vacation, I shall open an office and enter the practice of law in Washington, having been widely solicited to do so."

Democrats of Texas Enter 1936 Campaign With Enthusiasm

Austin, Texas, August 25.—With the second Democratic primary concluded, plans for an intensive, state-wide campaign for Roosevelt and Garner were being rapidly shaped up this week, drives for campaign funds, drives for votes, and already there has been much response, Texans realizing the people of this state must help out in the National picture even if Roosevelt is assured of carrying Texas.

James Farley, Democratic National Committeeman, is expected to be in Texas in September for a round of conferences and will attend the Democratic convention in Fort Worth September 8. The Young Democrats will hold a National convocation or conference in Fort Worth and Dallas immediately after the convention, while O. C. Christie, leading the Young Democratic drive, announces that three sound trucks will be used over the state and that his organization has set out to obtain $50,000 for Roosevelt and Garner's war chest.

In the meantime, due to certain remarks made by John D. M. Hamilton at Dallas, Texas Confederate veterans have become aroused. Hamilton is Republican National chairman and in his Texas speech compared Roosevelt with Santa Anna, saying the Republicans are fighting Roosevelt as the early Texans did Santa Anna and the Mexican yoke.

This displeased the old veterans, and despite their years, last over 90, they came to state headquarters for the National campaign, supported by crutches and canes, but the fighting spirit still existed in their breasts, for they insisted on all Texas taking up the fight on Hamilton and Landon.

The veterans from the Confederate Home here were J. M. Prescott, 92; M. L. McCurdy, 94, and J. H. Kennedy, 92. All of them gave $1.00 in cash and a million dollars in fighting spirit.

"The least we can say about Hamilton is that he doesn't know anything about Texas history," McCurdy said. "Santa Anna oppressed and tyrannized the Texas farmers and ranchers until they had to revolt, while Roosevelt saved them during the depression. There is a great contrast, but Hamilton doesn't know it. Someone ought to send him a history of Texas."

"Roosevelt has preserved states rights because he has sent to Texas and other states relief and other monies on which to live in our most trying times. We are ready for another fight, if need be, for Texas, and we don't like to see ourselves and Roosevelt misrepresented. If no one else takes the lead merely because they think this state will go Democratic anyway, then we will gladly take up the scrap where we left off back in the sixties. Everybody should contribute something to the Roosevelt-Garner campaign."

Whereupon McCurdy, Prescott and Kennedy pressed altar bills into the hand of Miss Amelia Malloy, secretary of the campaign committee.

There have been other notable events the past week. Down at Galveston Paul Page, Jr., fourth assistant Postmaster General, made the principal address at the corner-stone laying of the new Federal building, in which speech he paid high tribute to Roosevelt. Page is a native-born Texan. He told the crowd, as a reminder, that while Roosevelt had been President only eight banks over the United States failed, while during Hoover's administration 1242 banks failed. "Andrew Jackson himself showed no more courage than has Roosevelt," Page said. Attending the ceremony was Governor Alfred who asked for a copy of Page's address. Alfred is to campaign in other states for Roosevelt and Garner.

Now, while Alfred and Page were at Galveston, R. B. Creager was in Houston addressing a small Republican gathering, and believe it or not, as Ripley would say, Creager said Texas is going Republican.

Creager is Republican National Committeeman for Texas, and strangely enough, told his Republican friends that Texas Democrats ought to bolt. He overlooked saying that many Texas Republicans will bolt to the Democratic camp, in gratitude for the benefits Roosevelt has extended to Texas, regardless of politics.

Roy Miller, State Campaign Director, is expected back from New York in a few days, where he was called by Jim Farley to take part in a conference of Democratic leaders from all over the Union. While in the East, Miller made this laconic statement: "Well, I reckon Texas is a doubtful state as the Republicans claim. Sure, it is doubtful whether the vote will be seven to one or six to one in favor of Roosevelt."

Kelly On Expo Pole. Dallas, Texas.—Shipwreck Kelly, veteran flagpole sitter, finally has reached the Texas Centennial Exposition. He had been one of the few celebrities "out of pocket." He announced his intention of "seeing the show through."

368 Ballots Cast In Local Run-Off Election Saturday

Slightly exceeding preliminary estimates of balloting in the local box, a total of 368 voters visited the polls last Saturday and registered their choices in the run-off Democratic primary. This was considerably under the number of voters in the first primary, when the total ran to 595.

The results, as announced shortly after the close of the polls at 7 o'clock by W. M. Cheney, president of the primary, were:

For Railroad Commissioner: Ernest O. Thompson, 198; Frank S. Morris, 159.

For Commissioner of Agriculture: George B. Terrell, 173; J. E. McDonald, 179.

For Congressman: Clyde L. Garrett, 230; Thos. L. Blanton, 135.

For State Senator: W. A. (Son) Shofner, 118; J. Manley Head, 244.

For Representative: John E. Miller, 155; Earl Huddleston, 159.

For District Clerk: Karl E. Jackson, 177; C. E. Edmiston, 182.

Head Voted Senator, With Edmiston and Huddleston Elected

First-of-the-week reports on the race for State Senator of the 21st District, composed of Bell, Coryell, Bosque, Erath and Hamilton counties, gave J. Manley Head of Stephenville a lead of around 2,500 over his opponent, W. A. (Son) Shofner of Temple. The count was given as 13,981 for Head to 11,514 for Shofner. The Senatorial post is that now held by Roy Sanderford, who ran for Governor. Head led in the first primary by around 2,000 votes.

In the race for State Representative of the 94th District, Earl Huddleston of Coryell County, present incumbent, defeated his opponent, John E. Miller, who was a late entrant in the run-off primary through delay in deciding the outcome of a tie vote between the latter and Dr. Livingston of Hamilton for second place.

The only run-off race in the county office, that between C. E. Edmiston and Karl E. Jackson, high-vote candidates in the first primary, resulted in the nomination of the former. Unofficial returns gave Edmiston a lead of around 600 votes over Jackson.

S. A. Clark, who led the ticket for Commissioner of Precinct 3 in the first primary over a field of four opponents, was unopposed in the run-off, although not having received a majority on July 25. The candidate receiving the next highest number of votes, Lawrence Lane, withdrew from the race before the ballots were printed.

FAIRY SCHOOL TO OPEN NEXT MONDAY, AUG. 31

Beginning earlier than usual, the Fairy School will open next Monday, August 31, for the 1936-37 term, according to announcement this week by Superintendent W. M. Horsley.

Mr. Horsley states that school probably will run for two or three weeks, then close down for cotton picking season, and resume after a few weeks for the duration of the school term.

Further information will be carried in an article which is being prepared for next week's issue of the News Review.

Sells Car At Auction.

Providing a pleasant change from the political speeches of the past few weeks, and relief from the unprecedented heat, W. M. Joiner staged a public auction on the streets last Friday afternoon, at which time a car belonging to a finance company was disposed of to the highest bidder.

The car, which has been in storage here since it was wrecked several months ago, went at a price of one hundred and ten dollars, after vivid description and earnest exhortation on the part of Mr. Joiner, and lively bidding by members of the large crowd assembled for the event.

Kids to See Cavalcade. Dallas, Texas.—So important does the Cavalcade of Texas, historical review at the Texas Centennial Exposition rank, that Gov. James V. Allred and State Superintendent L. A. Woods are maturing plans to insure the attendance of 1,500,000 school children during the autumn months. They assert it is worth weeks in the school room in the teaching of history.

Keeping Up With TEXAS

Hearing on a petition for injunction to prevent Erath County from issuing warrants to pay the salary of a county agent was set Monday afternoon by District Judge Sam M. Russell for Sept. 2. The petition was filed by a group of Dublin business men. For 13 years Dublin interests have paid the county's share of the expense of maintaining a county agent and the office has been established at Dublin. This year the county commissioners voted support of a county agent, but proposed to issue warrants to cover the cost.

Robert A. Hallmark, 29, former WPA supervisor at Lampasas, on last week was en route to the federal reformatory at El Reno, Okla., where he is to serve a sentence of a year and a day on four counts.

Gov. James V. Allred Monday proclaimed Aug. 27 as World Peace Day in Texas and urged "the people to give much thought and study to methods of permanently outlawing war by taking the profit motive out of international conflicts and to exert their influence to this end." Aug. 27 marks the eighth anniversary of the signing of the Kellogg peace pact.

"This is the most fun I've ever had," Mary Ellen Twitty, 16, said one afternoon last week when as Centennial's 3,000,000th visitor she was feted with every thrill the exposition affords. "I don't know what I liked best," she said. "Everything was grand." She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bryce L. Twitty, 5943 Mercedes, Dallas. She entered the grounds at the main gate at 1:16 p. m. Fred Florence, Centennial Corporation president, headed a group of Exposition officials who greeted her, placed her in command of the magic city and informed her that all it contained was hers for the day.

First bale of 1936 cotton in Erath County was ginned in Stephenville late Tuesday afternoon. It was brought in by J. E. Cooper of the Black Stump Valley community. Cooper had 25 hands engaged on Tuesday and the entire bale was picked by 3:30 p. m.

Steamship owners reported last Tuesday that the revolution in Spain had practically stopped all shipping from Texas to the straits-torn country. The operators said the war had stifled the demand for cotton, the principal commodity moved from Houston to Spanish ports, and that insurance rates had been hiked, reducing the volume of shipping. Two lines operating steamship service from Gulf ports reported they had no vessels definitely berthed for Spanish ports. The withdrawal of ships was described as being the result of no offer of cargo.

Fire of unknown origin Monday destroyed the filling station and home of Henry Barrow, father of Clyde Barrow, desperado who terrorized the southwest for a long time. The elder Barrow's home and business were in West Dallas.

Secretary of State R. B. (Dick) Stanford was appointed last week to fill the unexpired term of the late Judge Sam R. Scott, of 19th District Court at Waco. "I am happy to offer this appointment to Judge Stanford, as I consider it a well deserved promotion," Governor James V. Allred said. Governor Allred lauded the work of Stanford as Secretary of State. He went to Austin during the 44th Legislature as chief attorney for the Secretary of State. Governor Allred has tendered the appointment of Secretary of State, but would not reveal the appointee until he accepts.

A coop of bantam chickens from Vice President John N. Garner's stock at Uvalde arrived recently at Austin for Jim Boy and David, the governor's sons. They join a paint pony and dog as the children's live playthings. They also join a flock of hens that furnish the family egg supply at the governor's mansion.

Art Wilke, of Austin, who was chosen the safest driver in Texas, left there Tuesday to take the er-penses-paid trip to a New York safety conference given him for having no accidents and no police traffic record over the years he has been driving. The American Automobile Association of Texas is paying his expenses. He says he thinks his profession has a lot to do with his being careful. He is an undertaker.

Charley Lockhart, dimutive state Treasurer, returned to his desk Tuesday after a post-election vacation in New York. Lockhart attracted much attention in New York because of the distinction of being the smallest Treasurer of the largest State. He is only forty-six inches tall.

EXPRESSION OF APPRECIATION

Words fail to fully express my sincere appreciation for the large vote given me in the run-off primary on Saturday, August 22, assuring me of the nomination for the office of District Clerk of Hamilton County.

There is nothing finer than true, loyal friendship and such friends as those who gave me a majority of more than six hundred votes over my opponent, and I shall always treasure those friends as riches beyond compare.

I have no ill feeling for those who voted for my opponent, as that is a privilege I consider the inherent right of every citizen.

If elected in November general election I shall endeavor to discharge the duties of District Clerk in an efficient and satisfactory manner and with courtesy to each person commanding my services.

Again thanking each one who cast their vote for me, or in any way helped in my race for District Clerk, I am,

The friend of all,
C. E. EDMISTON, Nominee,
District Clerk, Hamilton Co.

Practical Cookery

Department of Home Economics
Texas Home College for Women (C.I.A.)

Denton, August 25.—Elderly people do not need as much food as the younger person. This is due not only to an actual decrease in the internal processes. If excess food is eaten the body has difficulty in caring for it.

Other difficulties lie in the inability to chew food properly and in the decreased flow of the digestive juices. Therefore it is suggested the use of milk and soft-cooked eggs or finely minced meats are better than roasts and the like. Crisp toast softened in milk or soup aids in the digestion of breads. Rich sauces and foods should be eliminated.

BREAKFAST: Fruit juice or apple sauce, well cooked oatmeal with thin cream, toast with butter, soft-cooked egg, tea or coffee with cream and sugar.

LUNCHEON: Cheese souffle or scalloped salmon, buttered spinach finely chopped, baked potato, toast with butter, chilled fruit soup.

SUPPER: Chicken or broiled beef cake, steamed rice, buttered carrots, toast, soft custard, tea or coffee with cream and sugar.

SCALLOPED SALMON: 1 can salmon, 1 c diced cooked potatoes, 1 T butter, 1 T flour, 1 c milk, 1-2 t salt. Melt butter, add flour and cook until cheesy. Add milk slowly stirring briskly to prevent lumping. Season. Combine flaked salmon and diced potatoes in baking dish. Cover with cream sauce and bake 15 to 20 minutes in a moderate oven (325).

BROILED BEEF CAKE: 1 lb. raw beef, 1 slice dry bread, 1 egg, onion, seasoning. Scrape beef or grind very fine. Soften bread with warm water. Squeeze dry and add to beef. Add whole egg and onion and seasoning to taste. Beat ingredients thoroughly. Shape in round cake one-half inch thick and broil under flame or bake in a hot oven.

CHILLED FRUIT SOUP: 1 medium apple, 2 T sugar, 1 qt. water, 1 egg, 1 T minute tapioca, salt. Cut apple into quarters, removing core. Boil in water until quite tender. Press through sieve to remove peeling. Return to fire, add tapioca, salt, and sugar, and cook over hot water 15 minutes. Remove from fire and chill. Serve in soup bowls or sauce dishes topped with stiffly beaten egg white sweetened to taste. Apple peellings alone may be boiled and the juice sweetened and slightly thickened with tapioca. This is an excellent dessert for small children.

Second Installment
SYNOPSIS: Maris Trevor is discouraged because Rod O'Rourke spends all his money developing an invention which he hopes will provide an income so that they can marry. Maris thinks they should enjoy the present rather than deny themselves for the future. She becomes uncertain of her love for Rod. Perhaps there would be more happiness with someone else.

"I've never spoken to him," declared Maris stoutly. She wondered why Patsy seemed to have an almost uncanny intuition about her thoughts.

"Maybe not, but I bet you're watching every minute for that very chance."
"Well, it's a long one, anyway. Miss Riggs gives out all the work, and it's only the tried and trusted—not a newcomer like me—who are allowed to work for the boss or the boss' son. What chance have I to get acquainted with young Fayson?" she questioned, nonchalantly taking another roll. To herself, however, she confessed that she would make the chance soon if it didn't come along naturally.

"Well, Maris, I haven't worked around hotels for the last few years without learning a thing or two, and remember young fellows like Fayson may play around with girls like us, but that's all there is to it. They don't want us for wives."

"Who said we wanted to marry them? You take things too seriously."

"No, Maris, but when you've a perfectly good boy friend, I can't see why you want to break up with him on the chance that young Fayson will take a shine on you. Why don't you call Rod and tell him to come around? I bet he's wishing you would. Go on," begged Patsy.

"Why should I? That young man needs a lesson."
"But, Maris, it seems so silly to break up a worthwhile friendship just because Rod won't get a new car! You know he'll get one later on—once he puts his invention over—and then you'll be mighty sorry if it's some other girl who goes riding in it instead of you."

"Oh, go on, Pat; you needn't think you'll frighten me into calling him up. When Rod comes to his senses again there'll be time enough to talk to him. Say, if you want to get to the hotel early you'd better be stirring—at least if you want to sample your chocolate cake first."

"But the dishes?" countered Patsy.

"Never mind the dishes, I'll do them, only I want to take my time over this sumptuous cake and coffee," said Maris, rising and turning on the radio.

The velvety click-clicking of twenty noiseless typewriters echoed in Maris' ears. She was sitting at her desk in the stenographers' room the next morning. There was no sheet of paper in her machine, nor no dictaphone going at her side, for she had just finished a batch of letters and Miss Riggs, her chief, had not given her anything else to do.

Her eyes were not on her machine nor on her fellow workers, but her gaze wandered along the corridor to the glass-encased office where young Stanley Fayson was seated at his desk. His coming had caused a wild flutter of excitement in many of the girls' hearts. Some of the youthful stenographers had openly discussed their chances of catching the wealthy young man who, like many another college boy, had assured his friends he was going to revolutionize his father's business.

But so far, in spite of a reputation that had preceded his arrival—that pretty girls were his specialty—he had apparently not learned of their existence. Or perhaps, as Miss Riggs suggested when queried by one of the girls, he was to meet his father now, to start anything.

As Maris gazed at him, she noticed his sleek black hair, his swarthy complexion and his restless, dark eyes. When he lit a cigarette the gleam of a jewel in the quaint ring he wore on his small finger, caught her eye, while she felt a glow of satisfaction in his immaculate clothes.

"I bet he pays at least a hundred dollars for a suit," she thought to herself, noting his smartly cut morning suit, "and he has a different one on a every day. They say he gets them all made by some grand London tailor, and he wears imported shoes and hats. Oh, gosh, doesn't he look swell!"

A faint frown of discontent twisted her dainty lips. A girl would be lucky to get a man like that along with all his father's millions. Didn't someone say his grandmother had left him a million, too? Gosh, some folks have the luck!

"Now," she thought, "if only I had the money to dress like the girls he goes around with. I'm sure I'd look just as well. Oh, wouldn't it be grand to marry a man who could give you gorgeous clothes and jewels and cars? Someone who would take you to Europe and anywhere you wanted!"

Then a far-away look came into her eyes, for swiftly she remembered Rod. But then she pouted. Why didn't Rod bother more about his clothes? Often she wished he would wear them better, have them pressed oftener, and . . . But a wistful smile crept around the corners of her rosy lips. Rod was a dear. He had been good to her. That time when she had the flu he had nearly bankrupted himself sending her flowers. He knew she loved them.

is the last one down the corridor. He's at his desk."

Quickly the girls turned. "Oh, there he is!" The small, dark girl turned again after she spoke, and smiled to Maris. Then she said, "Thanks so much. I'm afraid we must seem awfully dumb."

"Of course we are," rejoined the other girl, "though I bet you'd be mad, Rowene, if I told you so." When they hastened down the corridor, Maris' eyes were riveted on the girls. Where had she heard the name "Rowene" before? Then suddenly she remembered what one of the girls had told her—that Rowene Quirk's mother was crazy to have her daughter marry a rich man.

His coming had caused a wild flutter of excitement in many of the girls' hearts.

Again a look of discontent crept into her eyes. If she married Rod she'd have to live in some cheap little bungalow, for he had told her he wanted to live in the country even if he had to become a commuter. Well, Maris wasn't so sure she liked the idea. She loved the noise and excitement of New York. The country kind of gave her the blues. It was so quiet. Maybe she could make Rod change his mind about that.

But suddenly she pulled her thoughts together. Why should she be thinking of Rod when Stanley Fayson—the warm color flooded her cheeks at the very suggestion of his name—might fall in love with her?

The creaking of a door disturbed her thoughts, and she turned to see two giggling debs coming free they seemed; how stunnngly free they were dressed! Again Maris made in her cheap printed silk frock. One girl was dark, with snappy brown eyes and stemed vividly electric in all her gestures; the other was a languorous blonde, but even her somewhat uninteresting face was transformed with laughter.

"Can you tell us where to find Mr. Fayson—Mr. Stanley Fayson?" questioned the small, dark-eyed girl.

Maris was suddenly glad that her desk edged the draughty corridor. "It's like walking through a maze to find your way through all these passages," laughed the blonde girl.

Maris said, "Mr. Fayson's office

Well, she'd evidently lost no time in having her meet Stanley, for when they entered his office she perched casually on his desk, lit a cigarette and chatted lightly and heartily with him. She was a Western girl—fairly rich too—and folks said her mother was crazy about money.

Sudden jealousy seared Maris' heart. Why was a life of hard work to be her lot when she was just as cute as those other girls who didn't know what it was to hit the keys of a typewriter, to toil all day in an office, and sell their freedom for a paltry pay envelope?

It wasn't fair. No, it wasn't! Then Stanley rose and took his hat from the rack, holding the door of his office open. The girls passed down the corridor accompanied by him. A dull fury swept through Maris.

But even as they passed her desk and Maris noticed the coy glances Rowene gave Stanley, Miss Riggs put some records on her desk.

"You've got to be very careful with this letter," she told the girl. "There are a lot of figures in it, and as quotations on piece goods are being given at frightfully low prices, you must be sure and get them all right." She paused beside Maris for moment. "You'd better let me go over this after you finish, for a slip in any of these quotations might mean a terrible loss for the house."

"All right," answered Maris, slipping a sheet of carbon between the letter-head and second sheet before she put them in her machine. But even as she put on her ear-phones and started the machine going, her thoughts followed Stanley and the young society buds who had lured him from his desk so easily. While her slender fingers transcribed the words that she heard, back in her mind her thoughts were busy contrasting her life with that of the girls who evidently thought an office was merely another amusing place.

Hour after hour she worked, with but a short breathing space for lunch, for many of the salesmen were in from the road, and the correspondence room was deluged with their work. She glanced at the clock. Five minutes to five. Well, she'd not be in too great a hurry to finish the letters she was working on, or Miss Riggs might give her some more.

The five o'clock whistle sounded. The hum of marching feet echoed all around. Maris raised her eyes. The last cylinders had been given out. She would turn her letters in now.

But when she reached the desk, Miss Riggs said, "Oh, just a minute. We've got to check over that letter with the quotations. I put it to one side here it is."

Gradually the room emptied as the girls hurried from their desks. At last Miss Riggs said, "I guess that's all right," and rising, hurried with the letter to the vice-president's office. Maris went back to her desk and covered her machine. She was just putting away her eraser and carbon paper when she heard a light footfall beside her.

Glancing up, she saw young Stanley Fayson coming down the corridor. He tipped his hat as he passed her and said, "Surely you're not still working?" "No, I've just finished," she answered.

With another smile the young man passed through the swing door. "He's a dear," whispered Maris to herself as she gathered up her bag and hurried to the cloakroom. "I bet there's nothing to all those stories of his wildness at college. Gosh, but hasn't he the fine manners!"

If only she could let the girls know that the proud young boss had spoken to her! They'd be jealous, all right, especially Milly Tremaine who felt she was the star office vamp.

But when she reached the dressing room, there was none of the giggling and chattering that usually greeted her ears. She opened the door. All the girls had gone. It seemed too bad that she couldn't find even one for an audience. Well, perhaps it was better so. There might come a day when she could calmly speak as though Stanley were an old friend of hers.

One way to be somebody is to be right when everyone else is wrong. For every trouble maker there is at least one trouble taker.

ENTRIES TO FRONTIER CENTENNIAL SHOW MUST BE RECEIVED BY SEPT. 4

Fort Worth, August 25.—Entries to the Frontier Centennial Livestock Show must be received by September 4 in order to compete for the $75,000 in premiums being offered, says D. G. Talbot, manager of the livestock department. The show will be held in Fort Worth, October 3-11.

A number of entries are now on file in the show office, and Talbot is expecting a large entry list before the closing date, September 4. Owners of choice livestock from all sections of the United States have written for premium lists and entry blanks.

Breed classes entitled to compete for premiums include the following: Breeding classes for Herefords, Shorthorns and Aberdeen-Angus cattle; carloads of fat steers and carloads of feeder cattle, dairy cattle, sheep and goats, swine, draft horses, mules, jacks, jennets and agricultural exhibits.

The show will be held on the grounds of the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock show. A modern new show barn for cattle, with every convenience for the livestock exhibitors and visitors is under construction. Because of the amount of premium money, the largest amount ever offered for a livestock show in the Southwest, it is expected that the best animals from all the different breeds from all sections of the United States will be represented.

Following the feeder cattle show, there will be an auction of feeder cattle on October 6. Coming at a time when Northern feeders will be making purchases for their winter feedings, it is expected that many Corn Belt buyers will be present to bid. There will be an auction of registered Jerseys on October 9.

GROUP OF MURALS RANK WITH NATION'S BEST

Dallas, August 25.—Heretofore Texas murals have occupied a rather inconspicuous part in national art but when Centennial visitors view the Dallas Centennial Exposition they will see a group of murals that will take rank with the nation's best.

The West Texas room, one of the two halls in the spacious north wing of the Hall of State will be especially attractive to West Texans, not solely on account of its interest but on account of the creator of the fine murals that adorn its walls. They were painted by Tom Lea, a native Texan and are typical of the ruggedness and picturesqueness of which Texas is so closely identified.

Tom Lea was born in El Paso in 1907. In 1924 he enrolled in the Chicago Art Institute and his success as a painter came quickly. His reputation as an artist of the West brought him the call to paint the murals in the West Texas room of the great Hall of State. Diligently and earnestly Tom Lea set out to express on canvas the true senses that are understood better by none than the Westerner. His task has been commensurate with the grand memorial to the pioneer of yesterday and the rugged action of today—both typical of the West.

Centennial Exposition officials are making extensive plans for dedicatory ceremonies on the day when the Hall of State will be officially opened. Contractors have indicated their work will be completed by September 1.

Famous Pony III Dallas, Texas, August 26.—When "Tynmite," diminutive Shetland sister of Peruna, famous mascot of the Southern Methodist University football squad, became ill at the Texas Centennial Exposition, the PRX was swarmed with calls for information. "Tynmite" registered as a celebrity of the first rank. She is now on the road to recovery.

Nuns See Calvalade Dallas, Texas, Aug. 25.—So important is the historic spectacle "Calvalade of Texas" at the Texas Centennial Exposition that cloistered nuns of the Catholic church have been given permission to attend. It is one of the few exceptions to the cloistered rule on record.

Brothers Meet Again Dallas, Texas, Aug. 25.—Two brothers, separated for 35 years, accidentally met on the grounds of the Texas Centennial Exposition. They were W. A. Campbell, 64, of Tinsley, Okla., and John F. Campbell, 99, of Dallas.

SAVES LIVES OF MANY CHILDREN

Austin, August 26.—Education of the public to the value of diphtheria immunization has resulted in lowering the incidence of this dread disease, but Texas still loses over 400 of its future citizens each year from this preventable disease, according to records in the Texas State Department of Health.

"It is a generally accepted fact among public health authorities," Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer, said, "that any community may control its death rate from diphtheria. Immunization has been proved a safe and effective preventive measure. Wherever immunizing treatment has been extensively used, diphtheria has steadily decreased.

"The most forceful weapon in the control of diphtheria is prevention through immunization, rather than cure of the disease after it has developed. Children can be protected against diphtheria by the use of what is known as toxoid. Young children are particularly susceptible to the disease. Accordingly, as soon as a baby is six months old, the parents are advised to take it to the family physician and have it immunized—protected, by the use of toxoid. Older children in the family who have not had the protective treatment, should be immunized also, and this should be attended to now before the school season begins. This immunizing agent is absolutely safe to administer; there is only a slight reaction, and practically no constitutional or troublesome after effects. It confers a life time immunity in the majority of cases. To be certain that immunization is complete, however, the child should be taken back to the physician six months after the toxoid was administered, and given the Schick Test.

"It is within the power of the parents of this State cooperating with their physicians and public health departments, to eliminate diphtheria from Texas."

Pattern 8732: This frock has a way of "fitting into the picture," whether at home or in the office. One must admit that it looks business-like in its clean cut, well defined proportions. And still it's obvious that there's the dash and modishness required in youthful styles. Therefore we class 8732 as a heavy odds favorite to please all style conscious, activity minded women. There are probably fifty or sixty billion buttons on clothes in American wardrobes and on American people—men averaging around 450 buttons each, women less than that. A man's business clothes are held on by about thirty buttons. A woman may have none at all.

And yet a good button is not nearly as common as one might think. It should have certain definite characteristics. The back—just behind the holes—should be reinforced or built out a little; the holes should have rounded edges so as not to fray the thread and the bridge between the holes should not be too thin. These points any woman can detect for herself when she buys buttons. Unfortunately, she cannot tell how the button will launder. Buttons today are made of many substances—wood, leather, bone, plackon in gay colors, "vegetable" ivory, metals and cloth.

Stores report that cotton crocheted thread outfit itself in sales for summer fashions. There is a cotton for every purpose. For the gossamer blouses so important with your suit there is a fine mercerized crocheted cotton which comes in the important new colors. For soft outer sweaters there is knit-crocheted, the mercerized knitting and crocheted cotton with an added deep luster. All these threads are strong and practical; they do not stretch and will wash beautifully.

HELLO, OSCAR TAKES TEXAS LIKE EPIDEMIC

Austin, Texas, Aug. —"Hello, Oscar," the fascinating new game that originated in the minds of Texas Centennial Department of Information heads has spread over Texas like an epidemic almost overnight.

The prime purpose of the new game is to make Texans conscious of the great number of out-of-state cars traveling over Texas during Centennial year. The novel pastime is similar to the game children play known as "stamping horses." The rules are not compulsory but may be altered according to the wishes of the players.

"Hello, Oscar" is a derivative of "Hello, Out-State-Car." As many persons as care may play. The first to spy a car bearing an out-of-state license shouts "Hello, Oscar" and thereby gains one point. Should a player see two out-of-state cars pass each other he is given five points. Of course, there is a penalty of one point when a player cries "Hello, Oscar" when there is no out-of-state car in sight.

Some opine "Hello, Oscar" is another step toward insanity, but everybody's playing it. It's surprising the number of out-of-state dars to be seen in Texas everyday.

Sunday School Lesson by Rev. Charles E. Dwan

Beginning of World Missions. Lesson for August 30th. Acts 13:1-12. Golden Text: Mark 16:15.

The original missionary movement found a convenient base in the ancient city of Antioch where the disciples were first called Christians. The third city of the Roman Empire, called the "Queen of the East," with a population of over half a million, it abounded in wealth and energy. But it also supported every form of decadence and licentiousness. In their shameless contempt for the fundamental principles of morality the people seemed hopelessly corrupt. Yet Antioch, rather than Jerusalem, became Paul's headquarters.

... Don't shout for bolts. Meetings in my old friend, Strickland Gillilan, the humorous philosopher, I asked: "How are things going?" This was his answer: "They are going the same as ever which is to say, swell. Of all men living, I have the most unique and interesting source of income. I live on bolts from the Blue. If ever the good old Blue runs out of bolts I will be in a jam. Fortunately no shortage ever has occurred. There never has been a year since I was grown up that I knew where all of next year's living was to come from. Often working on a salary really too small to do what a married man's salary is supposed to do, I never finish a year short and never have run into debt. In every pinch, the heavens have always opened and down has come a bolt.

... Try a Sideline Survey. Going down to the depot to meet a friend from the West, I found he had miscalculated his time of arrival, so there was an hour to wait. Ten years ago, this would have annoyed me. In those days I felt that my time was very important; delays made me impatient, and the inefficiencies of other people ruffled my disposition. Since then I have travelled around the world, spending several months in the Orient where time means nothing, and where philosophy of the people has been best expressed by old Omar Khayyam: "And fear not lest Existence closing your Account, should lose, or know the type no more; The Eternal Sakl from that Bowl had pour'd." Millions of Bubbles like us, and will pour."

... I am not uneasy as to the future. I see no more clearly today than I have seen in previous years the source of my next twelve months' income. But it will appear. From here and there will come the invitation—is it always here-for me to practise my favorite income-providing sport, which is public speaking. Somewhere a committee is saying right this minute: "How about inviting old Strick?" I look ahead a month and say: "No income visible so far—wait! And while I wait I get right on working, and I lo and behold there is a telephone message or a telegram or a letter from an editor ordering a piece, and the Gillilan family is safe for another while."

In Treatment of Varicose Veins. Of course you know what I mean: Those large, crooked vessels just beneath the skin of your legs, below the knee. They deform, and do not look good through a thin stocking; besides, if very large, they may be painful after you have been on your feet a while. Varicose veins may occur in several different localities. Some forms of rectal disease are only varicose veins, but I shall confine this talk to such veins below the knee.

done by the physician, but results are very satisfying. A point is selected where the swelling begins, that is, nearer the ankle—not at the top of the vessel treated. A solution is thrown into the vein that obliterates the canal, of course, that vein is done for, and deeper veins must do the work, and will. The diseased vein becomes as fibrous cord—it is cured. Your physician will tell you all about it. Go get well.

The cause is usually inflammation of the vein itself—its walls. This weakens the vessel so that the blood-stream distends it more and more. Over-feeding on highly seasoned foods and eating too much are remote causes, and aggravate.

These, indeed, relieve immediate distress, but only while they are worn; they never cure. Chinese heal the veins into short sections, drain, and heal the wounds. Rough but radical. Surgeons remove the veins that are troublesome, but it's a bit of cutting, and people hate cutting, you know.

EROSION CONTROL METHODS BEING WIDELY ADOPTED ON 3 STATES OF SOUTHWEST

Fort Worth, Texas, Aug. 25.—Erosion control methods and practices instituted on the land of cooperating farmers with the Soil Conservation Service in the 20 project and 57 soil conservation camp areas in Region 4 are being adopted as a part of regular farming operations by a large number of farmers throughout Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas. This information gathered in a recent survey made by project managers and technicians in charge of camps on the spread and use of erosion control practices on farms not under cooperative agreement with the Service.

Statistical information on the spread of erosion control practices gathered during this survey, and compiled in the regional office at Fort Worth, bring some most interesting facts to light, according to Louis P. Merrill, regional conservator. The spread of practices may be contributed largely to visits made to project and camp areas by individuals and groups of landowners and farmers where they had an opportunity of seeing the actual field application of the coordinated erosion control program on the land of cooperating farmers.

The recent survey brings out that one or more approved erosion control practices have been adopted on 3,266 farms representing a total of 245,535 acres of land. Adoption of the different practices was found to be as follows: On 896 farms improved crop rotations have been adopted on 62,893 acres; 22,544 acres on 518 farms are protected from erosion by definite systems of strip cropping; contour cultivation has been instituted on 1,938 farms representing an acreage of 103,972 acres.

Terraces are being to protect 11,339 acres of cultivated land on 1,938 farms; approved outlets have been constructed for terraces on 16,445 acres of land on 404 farms, 7,890 acres on 280 farms have been contour furrowed for soil and moisture conservation. Gully control work has been done on 490 farms representing 7,304 acres. A total of 6,915 acres of land that was eroded or was too steep for safe cultivation have been retired and revegetated for erosion control on 433 farms.

Much credit is due to vocational agriculture teachers and county agents for this spread of Soil Conservation Service erosion control methods and practices. Mr. Merrill states, "Vocational agriculture teachers and county agents have brought thousands of farmers and landowners to project and camp areas in order to give them an opportunity to study erosion control methods and practices in actual operation under field conditions. Advice and help given to farmers by the teachers and county agents for institution of these practices on their farms have been invaluable in spreading the use of erosion control practices on farms outside of project and camp areas and on farms within the areas but not under cooperative agreement with the Service," Mr. Merrill says.

GREAT TREASURE HUNT UNDER WAY IN TEXAS

(Special to the News Review)
Austin, Texas, Aug. 27.—The greatest treasure hunt in the history of Texas is underway from the Gulf to the Red River and Louisiana to New Mexico. Back of this unique search is the Mineral Resources Committee, a unit of the Texas Planning Board, which is seeking the location and character of every mineral deposit in the State.

Preliminary work discloses that Texas is exceedingly rich in minerals. Mineralogists in the employ of the Committee have located and classified most of these minerals but in Hamilton County there are deposits of clays which haven't been fully located.

Residents of Hamilton County who know anything about these deposits can render a great service to the State by sending full information to the Texas Planning Board, Austin, Texas.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

E. E. Dawson, Pastor.

Our revival is going along in a fairly satisfactory way. It could be better, but we are grateful for the response so far evident. It will continue over next Sunday, with two services a day, one at 10:30 in the morning, the other at 8:00 in the evening.

Our most cordial invitation is extended to everybody to attend, whether for one service, or for every service. The services begin on the spot, and do not last very long at any time. Mr. Sam Cluck directs the music in an effectual way, and his solos are enthusiastically received.

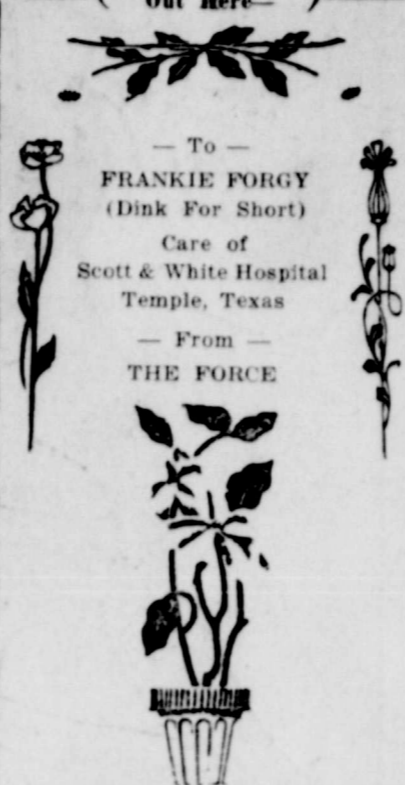

The preacher undertakes to set forth the cardinal facts of our holy religion in a plain and appealing way, without any fanfare or bluster, and in love. Effort is made to heal all wounds possible, and not to open any new ones.

THE FORCE

During the absence of Mrs. Forgy, who has been in Scott & White Hospital at Temple since Monday of last week, things have gotten in a mess around the News Review office. Last week D. F. McCarty, Jr. came up as a pinch-hitter for her column which for the past several months has made up a very important part of the paper. But D. F. drew the line this week (there's the line he drew) and that's as far as he got.

A letter from Mrs. Forgy's sister Thursday morning stated she was improving nicely from her operation, and was getting a lot of pleasure from the many nice letters sent her by friends here.

Some apology may be due on account of the looks of the above bouquet, but it's the best we can do. Nobody can say the things she does about local people and get by with it except herself. And it's too hot to fight, so the editor dares not tread further on sacred ground. Please, Mrs. Forgy, come on home. The advertisers are getting sulky (some of them) and we know the readers would appreciate getting some news again.

Haste Chief Cause of Accidents

The chart above shows that last year 31 per cent of the deaths resulting from accidents involving mistakes by drivers were due to exceeding the speed limit; 17 per cent were due to drivers operating on the wrong side of the road; 15 per cent were due to the failure of drivers to exercise caution when the right-of-way was involved; 14 per cent of the deaths were due to drivers going off the roadway; 13 per cent were due to acts of recklessness, and 10 per cent of the deaths were due to miscellaneous errors by drivers. Statistics by the Travelers Insurance Company indicate that 9 out of every 10 accidents for which the driver is to blame result from undue haste—haste to get through the next intersection before the light flashes red, haste to pass a few cars ahead when it's impossible to do so without using the wrong side of the street or road, haste in going through an intersection when the other fellow was in the intersection first, haste while traveling on the highway.

Home-Made Jellies and Jams Adorn Cupboards of Cinema Stars' Homes

Juvenile Players Love Sweet Spreads, Mothers Say

COME along for a visit to the homes of two lovely little cinema juveniles, Juanita Quigley and Jane Withers, that charming leading lady, Maureen O'Sullivan and that splendid character actress, Jane Darwell.

In the kitchens of all four, you'll be struck by this fact—that all boast attractive jam cupboard with jars and glasses of various sizes and shapes filled with home-made sweet spreads.

Like women everywhere, the mothers of Jane and Juanita know the value of jellies and jams in the diet of children. They're aware that besides being wholesome and nourishing, these foods satisfy the natural child craving for things made with a plenteous of sugar. Small wonder both women put up generous jelly supplies when fruits are ripe.

Since you are probably planning to do likewise, here are a few timely recipes for your guidance. They have been thoroughly tested and are completely reliable.

Blueberry Jam

4 cups (2 lbs.) prepared fruit
5 cups (2 1/2 lbs.) sugar
1 box powdered fruit pectin
To prepare fruit, crush about 1 1/2 quarts fully ripe blueberries. Add juice of 1 lemon. Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure prepared fruit into a 5- to 6-quart kettle, filling up last cup or fraction of cup with water if necessary; place over hottest fire. Add powdered fruit pectin, mix well, and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. At once pour in sugar, stirring constantly. (To reduce foaming, 1/4 teaspoon butter may be added.) Continue stirring, bring to a full rolling boil, and boil hard 1 minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about 9 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

Cinnamon Candy Jelly

3 1/2 cups (1 lb. 2 oz.) sugar
1 1/2 cups (3/4 lb.) water
1/4 pound cinnamon candies
1/2 bottle fruit pectin
Measure sugar, water, and cinnamon candies into saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add bottled fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1/2 minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once. Makes about 30

SOMETHING new under the sun is the men's cooking class organized by a big gas company in New York City to equip their sales force with practical knowledge of housewives' problems. Forty salesmen were divided into five groups and each week-day morning, from 10 to 12, Francis McBeath, head of the home economics division, instructed them in such practical tasks as broiling steaks, cooking vegetables and baking simple cakes.

Early in the summer, one of the lessons covered jelly making. To be sure, Miss McBeath taught the modern, rapid boil method. Can you imagine men making jelly the old way, watching over the long, tedious boiling of fruit juice? Well, hardly!

The men were surprised to find jelly making such a simple thing completed in so little time. The fruit was prepared rapidly, measured, sugar added, the combined ingredients set on the gas stove, the boil timed—only 1/2 minute—and presto, the jelly was ready to be poured into glasses.

Miss McBeath was guided by these recipes:

Apricot and Blackberry Jam

2 1/2 cups (1 1/2 lbs.) prepared fruit
4 1/2 cups (2 1/4 lbs.) sugar
1 box powdered fruit pectin
To prepare fruit, pit (do not peel) about 1 pound fully ripe apricots. Cut into small pieces and crush thoroughly or grind. Crush thoroughly or grind about 1 quart fully ripe blackberries. Combine fruits. Measure sugar into dry dish and

Mint Jelly

3 cups (1 1/2 lbs.) tea
1/2 cup sugar
Green coloring
3 1/2 cups (1 3/4 lbs.) sugar
1 box powdered fruit pectin
1/4 to 1/2 teaspoon apricot extract
To prepare tea, pour about 3 1/2 cups boiling water over 2 teaspoons tea leaves, steep 3 minutes, and strain. Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure tea and vinegar into a 3- to 5-quart saucepan and add green coloring to give desired shade. Use coloring which fruit acids do not fade. Place over hottest fire, add powdered fruit pectin, mix well, and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. At once pour in sugar, stirring constantly. Continue stirring, bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1/2 minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once. Makes about 5 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

And he lost his cow in a poker game.
A cyclone came one summer day
And blew his house and barn away;
Then an earthquake followed to make it good
And swallowed the ground where his house had stood.
And then the mortgage man came around
And heartlessly claimed the hole in the ground.

Freight trains nowadays act like express specials. New freight schedules are so fast, sometimes wonder if everything has to be delivered day before yesterday.

Many of our passenger trains are running faster schedules, too. Well, one thing is sure. We make faster runs, but the first railroad commandment is still "Safety First." That's one rule they won't change.

Western railroads and allied industries provided jobs for 750,000 workers last year. Some of them live in our town. Good neighbors.

Passenger fares are now the lowest in history with substantial reductions on round trips. And no more surcharge for riding in sleeping cars.

This new Free pick-up-and-delivery of less than carload freight—I heard some traveling salesmen talking about it on the train yesterday. They said it saves shippers a lot of money and centers all responsibility on the railroad. The railroad picks up the freight at shipper's door and delivers to receiver's door. Of course, local delivery men get the haul from door-to-car and car-to-door at both ends. The railroad handles the whole transaction.

When railroads are busy, I notice towns along the railroad are prosperous. The merchants put more ads in the newspapers.

Wear proud of railroad achievements, appreciate the public's good will and increased patronage, and please continued progress.

MODERN WOMEN

CHARL ORMOND WILLIAMS, President of National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc.

I am writing this article from Paris where I am attending the meeting of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. Frances Perkins, the first American woman to serve in a member of a President's cabinet, having been appointed by President Roosevelt as Secretary of Labor, is also here for the gathering.

So is Lena Madeson Phillips, New York lawyer, who is president of this great organization. I have just delivered an address on the topic "The Way Forward." And my answer to this riddle is education and cooperation. So may the nations of the world live at peace with one another.

Mrs. Vilet McCurk has a job in British Guiana which no other white woman has ever undertaken. She has a trading post 175 miles inland, where she lives. She buys gold and diamonds from the natives and employs a number of natives to sluice gold from river beds. She inaugurated a tourist service to the famous Kaitere Falls, which are five times higher than Niagara. Houses have been built at the falls by the Government and Mrs. McCurk escorts her parties by rail and boat, the round trip taking a week.

Miss Anne Marie Driscoll of Washington, D. C., national supervisor of the Federal Housework-ers' Training Project, says that housework has attained the status of a career for women. When housework is put on a business basis and the standards are satisfactory to both employer and employee, it takes a new place in our country.

Recently I wrote of the retirement of my old friend Ellen Fitz Pendleton as president of Wellesley College. Now I must comment on her death. Retired at seventy-one from the leadership of this great eastern women's college she did not long survive, but passed away at Newton, Mass., on July 26. Thousands of women all over the country will mourn her.

Early next month Florence Lowther, professor in the zoology department at Barnard College, will return to the United States after seven months' work in Central Africa, studying the pygmies. Woman's place is certainly in the world today.

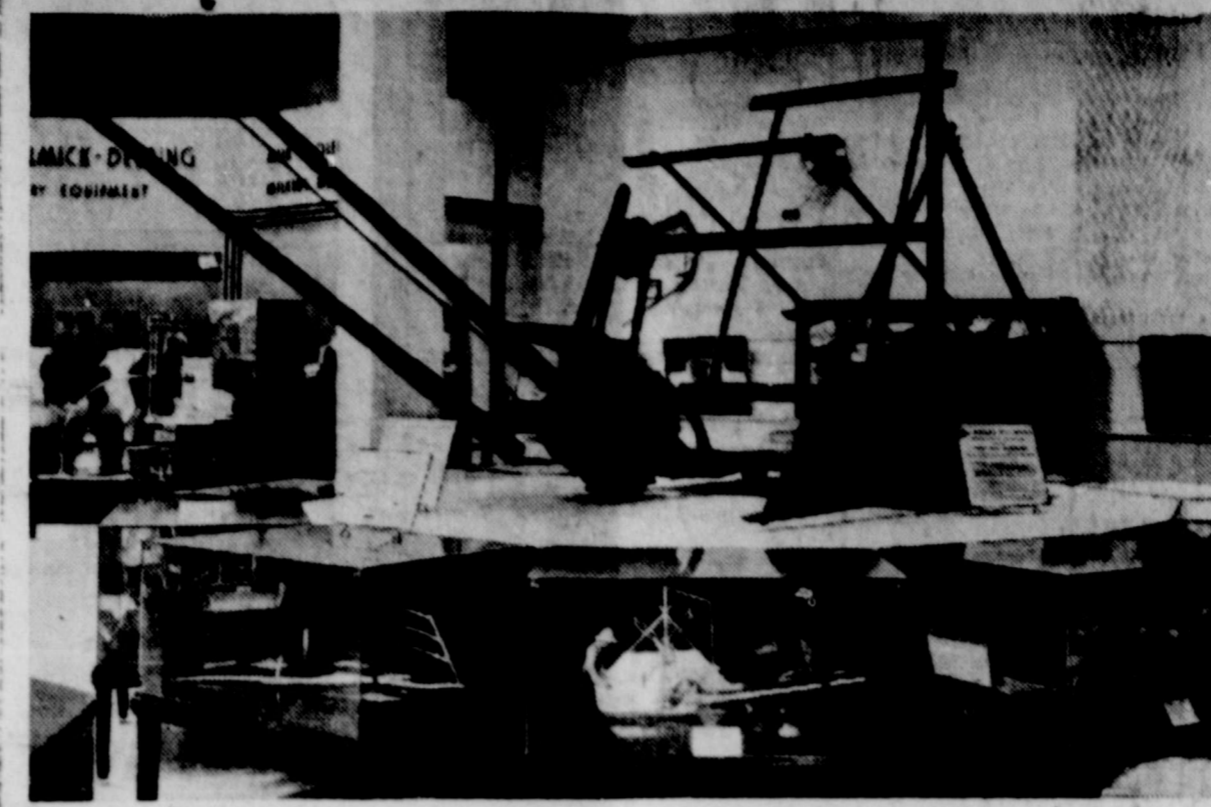

Katherine Cornell, the actress, has received an honorary degree of Doctor of Letters from the University of Wisconsin.

Who Should Propose? The old argument about whether or not the woman should propose is brought up again in the current Progressive Farmer, and a contributor who signs herself "LittleHattie" offers the following warning to the ladies. "Regardless of how much you like him and no matter what kind of a glamorous glow the moon casts over his faults, let the man propose! Even though the roses have never smelled so sweet, come down to reality, put on your specs, and look into the future. Just visualize this same gallant hero, all reared back in patched overalls saying, 'Children, this is the place your ma asked me to marry her.' Red wouldn't be the color of your face and you'd feel, oh, so mortified, because he'd be telling the truth! However, this wouldn't be the first time this subject would have been brought up.

"But let's think of the present for awhile. Suppose you were to walk up to your Prince Charming and say, 'I think your eyes are beautiful. Will you marry me?' Then, just suppose he were to answer with a superior smile, 'No, a thousand times, no! The moon would go behind a cloud, the roses would smell bitter, and you'd say with me, 'Let the man propose.'"

Bullfight For Centennial. Dallas, Texas.—An unusual bull fight is scheduled at the Texas Centennial Exposition by Sidney Franklin, American bullfighter. There's a State law against the real thing. In the event planned the matador will take all the chances of a usual fight, while the bull takes none.

World's First Reaper

WORLD'S FIRST REAPER SHOWN AT CENTENNIAL

The International Harvesting Company's exhibit in the Transportation Building, Dallas, Texas, is one of the most outstanding show places on the Centennial grounds.

Many machines and devices which are evolutions from inventions many years past, even a century ago, are being shown. One that is attracting much attention and being studied by thousands that swarm the exhibit, is a replica of the world's first reaper built by Cyrus Hall McCormick in 1831. In show cases surrounding this reaper platform, one may see in miniature form, grain harvesting machines showing details of its construction and development at different periods from 1750 up to the present day.

McCormick's invention stands out among the other triumphs of human ingenuity and progress because it touched the most basic of all human needs—the need of food. As one looks at this old reaper, he wonders just what industrial progress would have been made in the last century if Cyrus Hall McCormick had not had the determination required to accomplish this achievement.

Storms Fill Gates. Dallas, Texas.—A modern Cinderella departed from the Texas Centennial Exposition the other day to try for fame in Hollywood. She was Geraldine Robertson, West Texas ranch girl from the town of Lamesa, crowned Queen of the Centennial in a statewide competition. The 17-year-old platinum blonde was described as a perfect screen model.

Notes From Office Of Hamilton Co. Home Dem. Agent

Husbands A-C Entertained. Let's have a party for our husbands," said Mrs. Oscar Sorley, president of the Goar Valley Home Demonstration Club in the regular meeting of the club August 5th.

Meeting Of Sponsors. All 4-H clubs sponsors are requested to meet in the office of the Home Demonstration Agent August 29th, at 3:00 p. m. for the purpose of organizing a Reporters Association.

Perival Demonstrator Gives Report. Two hundred and forty containers have been added to my pantry shelves," quoted Mrs. W. N. Bridges, food demonstrator for the Perival Home Demonstration club. In further conversation with Mrs. Bridges it was learned that these containers are filled with green, leafy and yellow vegetables, corn, pickles, fruit juices and preserves.

4-H Club Girl Makes Good Record. "I have done most of my preservation to reach my food goals," said Pauline Ferguson, 4-H club girl from Pottsville. Pauline was elected production demonstrator when her club was organized and has made a good record. The goals for the 4-H clubs this year in their production demonstration were to plant green, leafy and yellow vegetables, serve them fresh on the table as often as three times each week, and to preserve at least 30 containers. Pauline turned in the following report at the last club meeting: 5 bu. peaches, 8 qt. black-eyed peas, 5 gallons berries, 2 qt. pickles, 50 cans corn, 12 cans beans, 60 cans tomatoes, 15 half-gallon plums. This more than reaches her goals, and the family table will profit by work next year during the non-productive months. These foods will supply the vitamins, minerals and bulk that every person must have in an adequate diet.

Big Attendance At Council Meeting Held Saturday. "It is a privilege and a duty to be a 4-H Club sponsor," stated Mrs. Eric Adams, in a talk before the Hamilton County Home Demonstration Council, Saturday, August 15, in the County Court Room. Mrs. Adams' talk was on "The Fountain of Youth" and was given from Food Demonstration Gives Report. "I will be ready for achievement day soon," stated Mrs. Leonard, Farm Food Supply Demonstrator of the Goar Valley Club to her club members in the home of Mrs. Jim Adams on August 19, an achievement day is held for the purpose of exhibiting what has been achieved during the year in the two demonstrations that are being carried. It is usually had in the home of the food demonstrator as on that day her pantry is exhibited. Mrs. Leonard has 140 containers to date with twelve varieties of fruits and vegetables on her pantry shelves. Because of unfavorable weather conditions she does not have some of the leafy, green or yellow vegetables to complete her pantry, but plans to have them from her fall garden.

Achievement Day. The Goar Valley Home Demonstration Club will have their Annual Achievement Day on August 31 at 3:00 p. m. in the home of Mrs. Leonard Sorensen. Adjoining clubs are invited to attend.

Reporters To Meet. Reporters from both Home Demonstration and 4-H Clubs are requested to meet in the office of the Home Demonstration Agent August 29th, at 3:00 p. m. for the purpose of organizing a Reporters Association.

Meeting Of Sponsors. All 4-H clubs sponsors are requested to meet in the office of the Home Demonstration Agent August 29th, at 3:00 p. m. for the purpose of organizing a Reporters Association.

Perival Demonstrator Gives Report. Two hundred and forty containers have been added to my pantry shelves," quoted Mrs. W. N. Bridges, food demonstrator for the Perival Home Demonstration club. In further conversation with Mrs. Bridges it was learned that these containers are filled with green, leafy and yellow vegetables, corn, pickles, fruit juices and preserves. By having this variety of foods, Mrs. Bridges will find that meal planning during the winter months will be an easy thing. It is the duty and responsibility of every home maker to plan meals that meet the needs of her family, by following the plans set up by the Extension Service and worked out in the Home Demonstration Clubs, club women are finding that the proper kinds of foods served as needed help to keep Johnny well and strong. These goals are being reached in homes throughout the country, by the aid of home demonstration girls and women.

4-H Club Girl Makes Good Record. "I have done most of my preservation to reach my food goals," said Pauline Ferguson, 4-H club girl from Pottsville. Pauline was elected production demonstrator when her club was organized and has made a good record. The goals for the 4-H clubs this year in their production demonstration were to plant green, leafy and yellow vegetables, serve them fresh on the table as often as three times each week, and to preserve at least 30 containers. Reporters To Meet. Reporters from both Home Demonstration and 4-H Clubs are re-notes that she took while attending a lecture at the Annual Farmers Short Course at A. & M. College. In her talk she stated that we as leaders should make suggestions to our club girls and let them make the decisions, and that when we get to the point of having no patience or sympathy with girls that we are growing old and need to visit the Fountain of Youth that Ponce de Leon searched for.

This was just one of the many good points brought out in the meeting. Summer parties was discussed by Mrs. Ernest Brummett and her key note was, "Let's have a few parties along with our Home Demonstration Work." Mrs. Belva of the Liberty Club gave an interesting talk on the Home Demonstration work in Porto Rico, small as the Island is there are eight home demonstration agents there helping to better living conditions.

In the demonstrations given after the general assembly, the one on table service, given by Pauline Morgan of the 4-H club at Carlton, and the one on reading and writing in my own room by Clara Parrish of the 4-H club at Liberty, seemed to attract more attention. Mention must be given to the programs on yards by Mrs. Hubert Viertel of Goar Valley, poultry by Mrs. Edwin Lund of Tonwaka and quilts by Miss Margaret Rutherford of Jonesboro, all were short, concise and to the point. Attendance was good at the meeting, 15 of the 17 women's clubs were represented, and 4 of the 7 girls clubs, with 100 in attendance. Miss Zetha D. McInnis, District Agent, attended the meeting and her lecture on duties of the Committee Chairman was very good. Miss Lora ne Gordon of Hamilton, and Miss Josephine Parrish of Liberty were in charge of the Sing-song part of the program and gave 15 minutes to the program that each member enjoyed and took part in. —SALLY JONES Home Demonstration Agent

CENTENNIAL SWELLS TEXAS TILL FROM GASOLINE TAX

Austin, Aug. 26.—Sponsors of the bill passed in the state legislature to appropriate $3,000,000 for the celebration of Texas' 100th anniversary pointed out in their fight for the bill's passage that the state treasury would be reimbursed that amount with increased gasoline taxes during 1936. Their promise has been more than fulfilled during the first 7 months of the Centennial year.

From January 1 through July 31 the state gasoline tax bill has been swelled by $3,148,749 over and above the amount collected for the same period last year. Taxes from the sale of gasoline to residents and visitors to Texas have already shown a profit of $148,749 to the state on its appropriation of $3,000,000 for the first seven months of 1936 and fall tourist promises to add substantially to the tax revenue by the end of the year. Centennial officials anticipate increased travel into Texas from out-of-state during fall months and if such is true revenue provided by gasoline tax will run the amount past the $6,000,000 mark for 1936, thereby showing a profit of $3,000,000 to the taxpayers on their Centennial investment.

Two men bearing famous names were injured in automobile accidents on Houston streets over the week-end. Sam Houston, 24, of Yale and 17th, was slightly injured at 1:45 a. m. when the car in which he was riding collided with another, George Washington, negro, fell in front of a car on Leeland Avenue at 6 p. m. Saturday and was slightly injured. H. C. Little, the driver of the car, said the negro slipped.

JOHN E. MILLER THANKS VOTERS For the many courtesies and the splendid support of Hamilton County I wish to thank every one personally but I must take this method of expressing my gratitude for the many favors shown me. Majority rule is the custom of Democracy, and my hat is off to the winner. I will not say I did not have an even break, but a little more time before the run-off would have been to my advantage, I believe. Respectfully yours, JOHN E. MILLER.
