

The Hico News Review

VOLUME LIV

HICO, TEXAS, FRIDAY, JULY 8, 1933.

NUMBER 6

Here In HICO

The Dallas News, re-arranged editorially last week when The Dallas Journal, offspring of the parent Belo publication, was merged with The Dallas Dispatch under the financing of Karl Hoblitzelle and the guiding genius of Lewis Bailey, is itself undergoing a few changes.

Not the least, perhaps not the greatest, but the most noticeable to newspaper-minded folks is the front-page column capably conducted by Lynn Landrum under the apt appellation, "Thinking Out Loud."

Mr. Landrum is a good writer, but a poor hand to keep out of trouble if he continues along his charted course. With his column not a week old, he got out on a limb in a discussion of the Governor's race, and had to "eat crow" the next day. However he performed this feat very admirably, without sacrificing any of his spunk, and personally we look upon his corner as one of the most interesting departments of the News.

May his nerve stay steady, his position secure, and his thoughts as straight as they seem now. He'll have lots of trouble, we predict, but he can take it. And along with the cares will come plenty of fun. He sets forth a code of ethics which seems applicable to present-day journalism, in the following:

"Remember this with regard to this column and future crowd-crowling parties: If anything set down here sounds personal and angry, it isn't meant that way. If in the haste of newspapering, something like that slips in, sit right down and write in your say-so. That is more than your privilege—it is your right."

"Life is too short to hate anybody and too sweet to court anybody's ill will. Personalities pass; only principles endure."

"If we think out loud, we must think straight. If we think straight, we must think principles instead of personalities."

Warning to John Sullivan of the Hamilton County News: There are cowans and eavesdroppers listening in on our personal feud. So let's call it a day, a week, a month, and forever.

In return for your gallant and generous offer of part-time use of the walnut-mounted emblem you found, Mister Sullivan (you called us Mister, and we always believe in reciprocity), we are arranging for a pass entitling you to bathing privileges in the Bosque River during the Hico Reunion. Put on your bathing suit, and come to the picnic.

Ken, know-it-all newswriter in the field of national magazines, scoops the world with a particle as follows:

"PREDICTION: Josephus Daniels, Ionesome for home and his old newspaper, will shortly resign ambassadorship to Mexico; 20 to 1 shot job will be filled by Gov. Jas. V. Allred of Texas, who is passing up third term, wants brief rest before plunging again into politics. Although a Texan, the governor is known as friendly to Mexico.

It will be remembered that when Jimmy made his first campaign he said he was going to run all the major oil companies out of Texas. Wonder what he will work on in Mexico, where the major oil companies already have been run out by governmental decree?"

Yes, it's hot. We acknowledge the fact, corroborate public opinion, reiterate and elaborate on the subject. So it won't be necessary to remind us of it every fifteen minutes. The best way to endure the heat is to forget it, say officials of the State Department, who have a batch of suggestions on promoting comfort.

To begin with, they say, a whole lot depends on the mental attitude. Folks who are always thinking and talking about high temperatures just naturally feel hotter than those who don't. Therefore, rule No. 1 on how to be happy though hot is to quit thinking of and looking at the thermometer.

Here are others:

Seek cooling breezes, but avoid drafts when overheated and when walking some distance choose the shady side of the street.

Wear clothing light in weight, light in color, porous and loose on the body. Light colored clothes reflect rays of the sun better than dark, while loose, porous garments allow the body to "breathe." Clothing should be exchanged as soon as it becomes damp with perspiration for in that condition it interferes with proper evaporation from the body surface.

Drink plenty of cool water (some authorities say a little salt added is beneficial to help replace in the tissues that lost by excessive perspiration), but drink water slowly if it has been iced.

The diet should be balanced, but light, with emphasis laid on fresh vegetables, fruits, salads and milk. There should be reduction in the

Plans For Hico Gym

Received Here This Week By Supt. Ray D. Brown; Work Will Start Soon

Architects' drawings for the new gymnasium and home economics cottage, construction on which is expected to begin within the next six or seven weeks, were received here this week by Ray D. Brown, superintendent.

Easterwood & Son, architects, of Waco, have anticipated every need of the local athletic groups, vocational agriculture students and home economics girls in executing the plans for these two buildings.

A committee in Waco Thursday conferring with Mr. Beasley, district supervisor of the WPA, reported that application for federal aid was to be made this week and approval usually was granted within five or six weeks.

The gym plans call for a rock building, 125 feet by 82 feet, with a seating capacity of 700 people. Besides a playing floor 82 by 46, the gymnasium will contain classrooms for the band and for vocational agriculture work and boys' and girls' dressing rooms located under the bleachers.

The home economics cottage will be of frame construction, 44 by 38, with an all-purpose laboratory 44 by 24 containing four built-in cabinets and sinks, and sewing and fitting rooms at the opposite end.

The gym will be located directly south of the high school building, facing the same way, and the cottage will be erected on the slope between the grammar school and high school on the west side.

Repair work on the grammar school building, including replastering and repainting all the classrooms, will begin Monday, as WPA labor is not being used on that project.

Warning to John Sullivan of the Hamilton County News: There are cowans and eavesdroppers listening in on our personal feud. So let's call it a day, a week, a month, and forever.

Week-End Deaths

On Texas Highways Fall Under Pre-Holiday Estimate

AUSTIN, July 5.—State police officials noted with pleasure Tuesday that holiday week-end deaths on Texas highways fell eight short of their pre-holiday prediction based on recent trends.

Reports to the Public Safety Department showed eight persons died in traffic against 16 they feared might be victims of speed, recklessness and carelessness.

There were only two reported drownings, as compared with an estimated five.

Last year 12 persons died in road-wrecks, and the year before that, 22.

Nine persons died as a result of crashes this year, but one occurred on a race track and was not classified as a traffic fatality.

Capt. Homer Garrison, Assistant Public Safety Director, attributed the reduction under past years to more cautious driving which, he said, probably resulted in part from widespread publicity given pleas by the department and local authorities for safer driving.

The record is all the more impressive, he said, because traffic was estimated to have increased 25 per cent over normal.

How Far Will It Sink?

Students of a new science last week began a check upon the towering San Jacinto battlefield shaft, to determine how far it will have sunk into the soil after it has stood for six centuries. The students are pursuing the new course in scientific engineering at College Station, and are known as "mechanics of the soil." The measurement of the rate of sinkage of the San Jacinto shaft will be continued over many months as one of their experiments.

Kind Deed Costs Cash

A kind deed by W. M. Neely of Olney Sunday cost him the wreath of a holiday. A man came to his door at 3 a. m., asked for a drink of water, and as Neely turned to oblige, the visitor seized him and took his purse from his pocket. Neely, whose income consists of state-old age assistance, said there was $54 in the purse.

Exercise frequently, lay off of arguments, exercise in moderation, rest awhile, if possible, in the hottest part of the day, go on about your daily routine of business, be cheerful.

Golden Gate Bridge Wins Highest Award

Selected by a jury of leading engineers and architects as the most beautiful bridge built in America during the past year, the Golden Gate Bridge (shown above), across the Golden Gate at San Francisco, Calif., won the highest award, Class A, for monumental bridges. The award is made each year by the American Institute of Steel Construction. Prize awards for smaller bridges were—Class B: Little Hell Gate, Low Level Bridge, New York City—Class C: Chesterfield-Brattleboro Bridge, over Connecticut River—Movable Bridge Class: Marine Parkway Bridge, over Rockaway Inlet, New York City.

LOCAL GOLFERS

Invited to Tournament at Glen Rose Next Sunday

Several Hico golfers have received invitations from the Glen Rose Golf Club to an all-day Invitation Tournament to be held Sunday, July 10, in Glen Rose.

Three attractive prizes will be awarded and dinner will be served on the grounds. There are no green charges, but an entrance fee of one dollar will cover the entire day's entertainment.

"We are looking forward to seeing you and your friends enjoy a wonderful day in the beautiful city of Glen Rose," says Bill Roden, a member of the Glen Rose Golf Club.

BUCKHORN CAFE

Now Under Management of Penn Blair, With Changed Personnel

As a result of transactions completed last week, Penn Blair obtained a lease on the Buckhorn Cafe, which opened under his management the first of the month.

Oswald Olson has been employed as chef, and Mrs. May Jones is assisting temporarily in waiting on the trade. Several changes have been made in the service, according to Mr. Blair.

Mr. and Mrs. Oby Young, employed at the Buckhorn since its opening by S. E. Blair, are taking a vacation pending their return to Hico and announcement of their plans for the future.

FUNERAL

Held Tuesday For Mrs. John Howerton, Who Died Suddenly

Mrs. John Howerton, 60, who died suddenly Monday afternoon after having spent the day fishing, was buried Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock in the Millerville Cemetery, the Rev. Caudle, Primitive Baptist pastor, conducting the burial rites.

Mrs. Howerton has been in ill health for several months, but her death came as a shock to friends and relatives of this section. Besides her husband, she is survived by six sons and five daughters, all of whom were present at the funeral except Mrs. Ruth Esperites and Charlie Howerton, both of California. They are Bloof, Cisco; Johnnie, Iredell; Harvey, Hico; Raymond and Arthur, both of the home; Mrs. Pearl Holler, Hico; Mrs. Ruby Cook, Carlton; Mrs. Estelle Pruitt, Iredell; and Miss Aretta, Cisco.

Two daughters, Mrs. Anna Chambers and Mrs. Luddie Leitaker, preceded her in death. Other survivors include one brother, two sisters, and thirty grandchildren.

Miss Ara Anna Hollis was born near Duffau on May 26, 1878, and was married to John Howerton on February 6, 1895.

GRASS FIRE

Caused Run By Fire Department Wednesday Afternoon

The Hico Fire Department answered a call Wednesday afternoon to a grass fire on the lot west of the grammar school, directly opposite the W. F. Gandy residence. Several trees were scorched, but no other damage was done.

Don't brag about your honesty until you have bought a baby grand piano or the latest ice box on the installment plan.

SUBSCRIBERS NEWS AND VIEWS

By way of the mail from Dallas comes a card directing us to keep the paper coming to Kal Segrist. He writes: "Keep sending me the home town paper and I'll be down right after the election and pay you in full for another year. I am as ever, 'always pulling for Hico,' Kal Segrist."

E. C. Allison, Jr., of Webster, Texas, came by Wednesday to subscribe for the paper for himself and Mrs. Allison, the former Miss Mildred Evans of Fairly. They now have a young son, 14 months old, named Kenneth Wayne, who will soon be big enough to read the paper with them. E. C. says that he has been reading his brother's paper, but D. E. lives in League City and sometimes it is difficult to contact him.

S. C. McKeage, Route 3, Stephenville, was right worried Tuesday about whether we were going to send the paper to him at that address or not. He cautioned us to not fail, because his wife has the same opinion of the paper that he has, which he expressed as more important than a meal. "We would rather go without eating than miss the paper," he declared. On your toes, circulation department. Don't fail us.

Mrs. W. D. Gage, City, has been off our list for several weeks, but decided that she had done without the paper long enough. Having the beer business visiting and attending the wedding of her son, J. D., Mrs. Gage is back home now to keep up with what is going on locally.

Mrs. A. J. Woods, City, who was notified of the approaching expiration of her subscription, came by the office at first opportunity and paid up promptly for another year's time, as is her habit. If all our people were as loyal as Mrs. Woods, we wouldn't have many worries in getting out a paper.

CITY COUNCIL

Accepts Equalization Board's Figures at Regular Meeting

Confronted with a report of the equalization board's action after its recent session, the City Council in regular meeting Tuesday night reviewed the report and accepted it. The 1933 tax rendition of property was given at $699,249, several thousand dollars lower than last year's figures, and the body discussed ways and means of making ends meet in anticipation of preparing a budget for next year's expenses. The tax rate will be set between now and August 15th, it was decided, and the city secretary was ordered to give legal notice of same.

The meeting, presided over by Mayor Lawrence Lane, was attended by Aldermen Leeth, McCullough, Cheney, and Holford, the other member, C. P. Coston, being out of town.

Routine business connected with accepting officers' reports and allowing bills and accounts was dispatched. The matter of sending a delegate to the State Firemen's Training School at College Station was presented, and the council voted to pay the delegate's expenses provided it meant sufficient credit on insurance, as claimed.

Other matters coming before the council were referred to various committees, and the meeting adjourned at an early hour.

STRAW VOTE

Taken Here on Governor's Race Shows O'Daniel Leading

Figures submitted to the News Review late Thursday afternoon by John L. Wilson and Wiley Roberts showed O'Daniel leading with 96, McCraw second with 28, and Thompson trailing with 23. Scattered votes were recorded for three other gubernatorial candidates.

The canvass was made by secret ballot, it was stated, and only qualified voters were contacted.

ATTEND FUNERAL

In Cleburne Monday For Mrs. Matilda Burrow, 80

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Massingill were in Cleburne Monday attending the funeral of Mrs. Matilda Burrow, 80, who died Sunday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. M. L. Doty, in Cleburne. Mrs. Burrow was an aunt of Mrs. Massingill's and lived here for some time with her sister, Mrs. S. A. Smith.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the North Cleburne Baptist Church by the pastor, Rev. W. C. Kirk, and burial was in the Alvarado Cemetery.

Mrs. Burrow, a resident of Jermyln, was visiting in the home of her daughter when she was fatally stricken. Survivors include a son and five daughters.

$35,000 BONDS

Voted For School At Stephenville in Election Tuesday

STEPHENVILLE, July 6.—Stephenville property owners Tuesday voted in favor of a $35,000 bond issue to finance half the cost of a new ward school building here. A total of 579 votes was cast.

The taxpayers also voted to raise the school tax from $1.00 to $1.25 on the $100 valuation to finance the bond issue.

For the bond issue the vote was 355 and 229; for the tax rate, 300 and 240.

Application already has been made to the WPA for assistance in financing the $70,000 structure, which will contain 14 classrooms and a large auditorium. A cafeteria will be installed in the remodeled basement of the present ward school building.

Mgr. Cheek Working On Many Innovations for Big August Picnic

Keeping Up With TEXAS

Fully dressed, A. M. Moss of Dallas was thrown into his own gravel pit Tuesday night when he demonstrated with half a dozen unidentified young boys who were swimming without clothing or permission. Still wet from his enforced ducking, Moss told his story to Deputy Sheriffs. "I was standing on the bank talking to three or four of them," he explained, "when a boy suddenly leaped on my shoulders and rode me into the water like a horse." The swimmers fled.

A Fourth of July picnic near Jefferson ended in a tragedy when Marie Gray, 15, a Texarkana girl, drowned in Big Cypress Bayou in the afternoon while attempting to save Frankie Louise Scott, 8, Atlanta. Miss Gray with her aunt and a party of friends, was picnicking at a spot on the bayou 7 miles from Jefferson. She was wading with Frankie Louise when the child's foot slipped. Attempting to save her, Miss Gray lost her footing and was carried under. Help arrived in time to save the child. Miss Gray's body was recovered in a short time, but attempts to revive her proved futile.

"Man bites dog" is news, but when "chicken bites chicken snake" it's even better news, think the boys out near Emmett and Brighton in Dallas Betty Lou is a neighborhood hen who just grew up, cared for by Herbert Bushong, Richard Crisp, and Douglas Boyd. Recently Betty Lou was observed attacking something in the street. Investigation proved it to be a young chicken snake the hen had killed. Betty Lou then decided to eat the snake.

A Dallas News picture and story came home to roost Monday, right through the U. S. Mails. Addressed to "The Reporter Who Wrote This Story," the envelope had pasted on it a picture clipped from a recent edition of the News, portraying Billy Joe Keeler, his dog, Queenie, and his sister, Miss Montana Keeler. Within was this note, in boyish hand: "Dear Mr. Reporter: Please won't you help me find my dog. She and her little puppy disappeared last night. The puppy's name was tippy cause she had a white tip on the end of her tail."

The high plains country is short on tall hats. As a matter of fact, a plains-wide search has revealed there are not enough Western hats in the country around Amarillo to use as headgear for the band which will play for President Roosevelt July 11. A cowboy band of 6,000 pieces is being assembled to greet the President with "The Eyes of Texas Are Upon You." The biggest problem first was to find the necessary 500 drums, and no one had thought to worry about hats until requests began pouring in.

Howard Hughes, the lanky Texas millionaire, is in New York wearing a brown felt which has seen better days, and presently he is going to fly to Paris just for experience. Whether he will go on around the world, he says, depends on how things look when he gets to Europe. The only man who ever has flown from New York to Paris is Charles A. Lindbergh. For two years Hughes, who is known as the only independent movie producer from the "outside" who ever got out of Hollywood with his shirt, has had stores of gasoline buried at strategic points on the globe for just such a flight.

Joe Jean Lazarowitz, king of the Rambling Hoboes of America, Inc., visited in Fort Worth Wednesday and announced that that city had been chosen official headquarters for the upper district of Texas of the 5,879-member organization. En route to national headquarters in Paterson, N. J., Lazarowitz hitchhiked into Fort Worth because he learned via the "grapevine" that brakemen and special officers in the railroad yards there were "tough."

The most varied and extensive entertainment ever offered visitors on the opening day of a Hico Reunion will reach a climax this year with the crowning of the Reunion Queen to reign over a court of attending beauties from Stephenville, Hamilton, Dublin, Iredell, Carlton, Clairette, Duffau, and a number of other neighboring towns, according to S. J. Cheek, Reunion Association manager.

Members of the Review Club, which has charge of arrangements for the pageant, met Thursday afternoon to select the queen and complete plans for the Queen's Ball at the Bluebonnet Country Club, honoring the Queen, her escort, and the visiting duchesses.

Parade First Day

A mammoth parade of floats and decorated cars will launch the 4-day celebration on August 10. Mr. Cheek stated that plans had not been completed, but that the Association was working to make this parade the most elaborate in local history.

Other Attractions

Other feature attractions during the four-day festivity of Hico's 56th Annual Reunion will include an old fiddler's contest, and an old-time singing. A booth with plenty of ice water, shade and chairs will be maintained on the grounds for the purpose of registering all th old-timers.

An innovation in the form of a booth sponsored by the Hico Club of Dallas, in which will be displayed products manufactured in Dallas and wholesalers' products of interest to Hico merchants, will be of interest to both old and young, according to Miss Marguerite Pierson, secretary to the Dallas Club, who wrote that Manager Cheek this week seeking the Association's approval of this plan. Miss Pierson has explained that no retail products will be exhibited, since the club feels that this should be done by Hico merchants.

"It is the plan of every member to attend the Reunion," said Miss Pierson in her letter to Mr. Cheek. Further activities concerning the Dallas group's participation in the picnic are to be discussed in detail at the next quarterly meeting, July 10, at Kidd Springs.

Program and Circular

Mr. Cheek has begun preparation of the big four-page circular which will as usual carry a program of events, and individual invitations from merchants, professional men and candidates. Space is already being reserved in same, which will be distributed throughout this entire section broadcast, and run as an advertisement in the News Review.

The Bob Hurst Shows, carrying six rides, six shows, and a number of concessions, will play the Reunion stand again this year. This popular outfit has pleased crowds in the past, and advances notices from Mr. Hurst indicate that there will be a number of new features never offered locally before.

METHODIST REVIVAL

The annual revival of the Hico Methodist Church is scheduled for July 17 to 31. Rev. Herman L. Cochran of Fort Worth, and his singer will lead in the work. This evangelistic team has had around 2000 conversions this year in meetings in different states of the Union.

This pastor has just received a letter from Rev. E. N. Scarlett of Comanche inquiring as to the date of our revival. He says: "There are several here who want to come over and hear him while he is at Hico." He also says: "We had a great meeting here. Cochran is the best I have ever had."

It looks as if Methodism of Hico might fumble a rare opportunity if we do not have a great revival. We sincerely hope for a meeting that will lift the spiritual tone of our whole community life. We here and now cordially invite all who are interested in such a meeting to come over and have part.

Next Sunday we will have our regular morning services. Church school at ten o'clock, preaching by the pastor at eleven. The evening service will be dismissed in honor of the revival, being conducted at the Christian Church.

May this preacher call to your attention that you are missing some really great messages if you are not hearing Dr. Clingman. Also the gospel in song is being brought in an effective way by Rev. and Mrs. Bradshaw. Hear them.

Weldon Burney Candidate For Representative CORYELL AND HAMILTON COUNTIES

Some voters have remarked that I was too young to be a Representative. I am not as young as I appear, being 34 years of age at the present time. I graduated from the Hamilton High School in the Class of '26 and have been engaged in business with my father in Evans and interested in farming and ranching since that time. I feel that my experience places me in a position to represent the people of this district in a capable and efficient manner. I have tried to see as many voters in the different districts as possible, but find it impossible to contact everyone. I am making the race for Representative on issues that are facing the people of Texas today and not on personal friendship altogether. As your representative in the Legislature I would face the same problems which would confront the Governor, as laws and changes in laws originate in the House of Representatives. Although my opinions and things for which I stand may not meet with the entire approval of every voter of this district, I will constantly be on guard and stand for the things that will be of benefit to the people of my district—and I will not vote accordingly, but I will use my best efforts to put through legislation of interest to my constituents. I would expect to be a "doer" instead of a "voter." I haven't any past political record to offer you, as this is my first time to ever ask for public office, but I will appreciate your vote and influence in the coming election and promise if elected to make a "live" representative. (Political Adv.)

Several weeks ago J. B. Pool earnestly launched his campaign for county judge, and since that time he has been all over the county, making a sincere effort to see every man, woman and child. Explaining that he is the "card-giving man" in Hamilton County, Mr. Pool says that he has had a lot of enjoyment campaigning and that one thing he has noticed in his county-wide travels is an improvement in the appearance of farm women. Without an exception they have greeted him at the door dressed attractively. He also says that practically every family in this community reads the Hico paper thoroughly, as they were all aware of the fact that he was making the race for county judge. The heat is not keeping people from taking politics seriously, he says, for everyone is intensely interested in his platform and very desirous of talking things over with him.

Headline in a Fort Worth paper: "Wild Life Meeting Planned in Temple."
S. J. Cheek, happening into the office this week, was innocently extolling the virtues of Ernest Thompson, in whom he has his faith as gubernatorial timber, and was very much embarrassed when we asked, "Are you trying to influence our vote?" Just over Mr. Cheek is divided between two interests—the Reunion and the governor's race. Definite announcements concerning the former will likely be made in the next two weeks, but there is nothing definite about the latter yet.

With the holiday death toll reaching 576 to establish a new high as the costliest Fourth of July holiday in history, we recollect a bit of strategy on the part of the state Public Safety Department which, several days before the holiday week end, published a report of the number of deaths that would occur from traffic accidents, drowning, plane crashes, fireworks, and other mishaps, and even went so far as to say exactly how they would be killed. This report was, of course, based on previous figures. The fact that the state death toll fell eight short of their pre-holiday predictions may have been due to the concerted efforts of holiday trappers, one of whom said: "I didn't want to be a statistic, so I took special pains to drive with care."

Frank Morris of Dallas County, candidate for Railroad Commissioner, tells nearly everyone he meets about his "rabbit's foot," which he says brings him luck. Morris comes from Wood County, the home of James Stephen Hogg, the creator of the Railroad Commission of Texas. That body was created in 1899, the year in which Morris was born. The election this year will be held July 23, which happens to be the date of Frank Morris' birth. He was accompanied on some of his local rounds by W. M. Cheney who, by the way, was born and reared in the same section of East Texas which Mr. Morris claims as the scene of his nativity.

He's Stuck With This Story

This is E. S. (Tippy) Sheets' story and he was stuck with it two hours Saturday afternoon. At 2 p. m. Proprietor Sheets of a restaurant at the intersection of Highways 75 and 22 south of Corsicana, was tinkering with a faucet at the soda fountain. He took off the handle, but accidentally dropped a nut into the faucet. He stuck in the little finger of his right hand to retrieve the nut, but instead the finger stuck. Mechanic John Storrie was paged. After two hours' work with wrenches, pliers and hacksaws, the faucet was freed from the fountain and Sheets, Storrie and the faucet were then taken to his shop, the faucet opened with a hacksaw and the finger released.

Gum-Dipped Tire 760

FOR AS LITTLE AS $7

FIRESTONE cuts the cost of Tire Safety

just at the time when you need a new set of tires. At this time of the year you should replace tires that are worn and smooth for greatest safety during the summer driving season. Tires may look alike on the outside — but inside they are different. The name FIRESTONE on a tire is your assurance of extra safety and long mileage because only Firestone Tires are built with these patented and exclusive construction features:

- Gum-Dipping, the Firestone patented process by which every fiber of every cord in every ply is saturated with liquid rubber, counteracts tire-destroying internal friction and heat which ordinarily cause blowouts. Nine extra pounds of rubber are added to every 100 pounds of cord.
- Two Extra Layers of Gum-Dipped Cords under the tread, another patented Firestone construction feature, protect against punctures.
- Scientifically-Designed Non-Skid Tread made of tough slow-wearing rubber, assures safer stops and longer non-skid mileage.

Now that Firestone gives you all of these safety and economy features at these low prices, you cannot afford to take chances with unsafe tires this summer. Come in today and join the Firestone Save-A-Life Campaign by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Convoy Tires—the safest tires that money can buy at these low prices.

Streamlining the Pedestrian

The Process The Product

One out of every four pedestrians killed last year was crossing the street between intersections, according to latest figures released by The Travelers Insurance Company. More than 4,800 pedestrians met death in this manner and nearly 49,000 were more or less seriously injured. It was the greatest single cause of pedestrian deaths. Of the 49,000 persons killed in traffic accidents in 1932, the records show, 17,410 were pedestrians.

The 1938 automobile is a marvel of speed, power and safety, but the 1938 pedestrian is the same plodding individual he was hundreds of years ago. He has no all-steel body; nor has nature streamlined him so he can move any faster in this age of speed.

He has one advantage, however, if he will use it. He can make up for his slow feet by his quick wits.

Mollie Campaigns for Father

A New Use for Ear-Muffs

The speed demon who boasts of his driving exploits, to the indigestion of his safe driving friends, is pilloried in The Travelers Insurance Company's latest highway safety booklet entitled "Death Begins at 40." The "40" refers to speed, not age.

PERSONALITIES IN MUSIC

FRED E. AHLERT, A.S.C.A.P.

Building A Song House

COMPOSER, pianist, educator and lecturer on Indian music, Charles Wakefield Cadman, A.S.C.A.P., holds a distinguished place in the roster of American composers.

Johnstown, Pa. saw him first, descendant of a long line of Revolutionary War patriots. His music line descends from great-grandfather, Wakefield, builder of the first pipe organ west of the Alleghenies. He was church organist in Pittsburgh, music critic of the Pittsburgh Dispatch, director of music at the Wolcott Conservatory in Denver and the University of Southern California. Educated almost entirely by Pittsburgh music teachers.

His interest in Indian music took him to the reservations at Omaha and Winnebago. Collaborates most frequently with Nelle Richmond Eberhart, A.S.C.A.P., with whom he composed "At Dawning," "From the Land of the Sky Blue Water," the grand opera "Shanewis" and many other works.

Performances by great symphony orchestras over large radio networks maintain his high standing in the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers (ASCAP), which licenses his compositions for public performance for profit. He is also a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters, and Doctor of Music at University of Southern California and Wolcott Conservatory of Music, Denver. Now resides in San Diego, California. His latest orchestral work, "Dark Dancers of the Mardi Gras," with Cadman as pianist, was played twice by the Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra, the Detroit Symphony Orchestra and the New York Philharmonic.

Cadman says, "Only one-fifth of all Indian thematic material is valuable in the hands of a composer, and is suitable for harmonic investment."

The FEUD at SINGLE SHOT

By Luke Short

Eighth Installment
SYNOPSIS

With his partner, Rosy Rand, Dave Turner is on his way to his ranch at Single Shot. Both are returning from prison where they have served sentences for unjust convictions. On the train, which is carrying a large sum of money, Rosy's quick action and straight shooting foils a hold up while Dave saves the life of Martin Quinn, a gambler, who is being threatened by a desperado. Stopping at Single Shot, the sheriff tells Dave he is not wanted. Quinn defends Dave but Dave and Rand go to Soledad to meet Mary, Dave's sister, and proceeds on horseback to the ranch. Mary reveals she is married and tells Dave that the ranch is doing poorly, being beset by nesters and involved in a claim dispute. Suddenly a shot from the darkness topples Dave from his horse. Rosy fires and kills the unknown assailant and they rush to the ranch to treat Dave's severe scalp wound. Next morning, at breakfast, Dave and Rosy discover that Mary is now cooking for the ranch hands—a bad sign. After discussing financial matters with Mary, Dave and Rosy saddle horses and leave for Single Shot to deliver a corpse to the sheriff and see the town banker. Identity of corpse reveals him to be an ex-employee of Hammond's. Dave, Rosy and the sheriff immediately confront Hammond with facts. Fight between Hammond and Dave prevented by sheriff. Dave plans to raise alfalfa on his land and use money to pay off the mortgage. Someone blew up the lake. Hammond thought it was Dave and the latter suspected Hammond or his men.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:
In a great, screeching shudder the main building upended and was dissolved in the flood. He could hear the water slap against the far bank of the creek bed a hundred yards below the mine.

Then it died, almost as suddenly as it had begun. He could hear the arroyo running loud and full, but the bulk of the water had passed. He waited, his ankle throbbing viciously. Were any of the men saved? Was Dorsey?

"Better stay here," he thought dully. "If I try to move I'll fall and will just as likely as not fall face down in a pool of water and drown."

All the horror and desolation and cruelty of it was increased tenfold by the weak dawn light. A murderous fury filled him. Turner would pay for this with his life as long as a drop of Buck Hammond's blood ran red. In his rage, he clutched at the jagged rocks until his hands bled.

They found him there unconscious. "It's gone," Dave said, looking at the boulder-strewn ground where the mine had been. "Insurance," Rosy said bitterly. "Insures the mine, then blows a lake out of the top of it."

As they piled down into the mouth of the arroyo they saw men working frantically. One of the men spied them and waved them over. "Give us a hand, will you?" the man asked, his face streaming with sweat.

"There's seven men down this mine shaft. The mouth's clogged with boulders and mud and there's a chance they may be alive. They was down there when the lake went out up above."

Rosy looked at Dave, who turned to the man. "Hammond isn't down there, is he?"

"No. He's in town, I reckon. He got hurt a little."

"How bad?"

"Not bad. I heard. Can you give us a lift?"

"Sure," Dave said.

They worked with crowbars and shovels for an hour.

Hammond had been taken to Dr. Fullerton's and they rode through town to the main corner, turned left at the Free Throw and easily found the doctor's house a half block above. It was a frame house, neatly painted white, with a deep yard and a huge glassed-in porch at the side. This was the Single Shot hospital.

"Is Hammond in here?" he asked the woman opening the door.

"Yes. What do you want?"

"On the porch?"

"Of course. But he can't see anyone."

Dave simply shouldered past her.

"I thought so," a flat, toneless voice said.

Dave stopped. It was the sheriff's voice.

"I got guns thrown on you," the sheriff said. "You better hand over your own."

"Get out of the way," Dave said briefly, and took a step forward.

"I wouldn't go no further," the sheriff said flatly, and there was a deep, warning menace in his voice.

"Give me them guns," the sheriff said, recognizing his advantage.

"Talk to him all you want, but give me them guns. There's a woman in there."

Dave sighed loudly.

"All right, Hank," he said bleakly. "But I'm warnin' you. You and all the deputies you can swear in seven years ain't goin' to keep me from killin' Hammond."

"I know that," the sheriff said. "I'm just tryin' to put it off until the fight's a little more even. Now hand them guns over, both of ye."

He received the four guns and Hammond blow the dam out and ruin his mine and drown seven men? He turned to Hammond. And you, Buck. You're older. You should have saw it all along. Turner thinks that lake is his, whether it is or not. Would he blow out that dam and spoil every drop of water on his spread—ruin it—just to ruin you?"

Hammond looked at Dave, then at Rosy.

"You mean," Rosy said slowly, "that some one else did it?"

"That's it," the sheriff granted. "The hombre that did it wanted Turner to think Hammond done it, and wanted Hammond to think Turner done it."

Dave sank weakly on a bed and stared at Hammond. The guilt had been so obvious to them both that they stared at each other, trying to collect their wits. Dorsey was sobbing, and Dave, for the first time, noticed her. He blushed, but said nothing.

"I reckon we're a couple of fools

then," Hammond said.

Dave nodded.

"There, there," Hammond said, patting Dorsey's shoulder.

"Might have killed you. They might have shot you."

"And I might have shot them," Hammond said.

"But you're an old man. In bed. Without a gun." She looked at Dave. "Is that a trick you learned in jail?"

"You contemptible, sneaking jail birds!" Dorsey said, then started to cry again.

"Stop it, honey," Hammond said.

Hammond looked at Dave. "I reckon she's upset and don't know what she's sayin'."

"I—I guess I lost my temper," she said. "I'm sorry."

"That's all right," Dave said, quietly. "There may be a lot of truth in what you said."

Again Dorsey flushed, but held her tongue.

"Mr. Hammond," Rosy began, "I reckon we owe apologies all around. We've all been barkin' up the wrong tree. Let's get together and try to settle this."

Dave nodded glumly. "We're in the same boat. The spread ain't worth the grass on it now, and your mine is just a pot-hole, from the looks of it."

"And it'll stay that way," Hammond said. "I couldn't raise the money to have the water pumped out of it."

Hammond groaned in his rage.

"You couldn't get the lake, so you had to ruin it for me," Dave continued, his voice slow and thick. "Ruin it, and drown seven of your own men doin' it. Just for revenge."

"That's a damned lie," Hammond thundered, suddenly, finding his voice. In spite of his pain, he lunged up in bed and pointed a blunt finger at Dave. "You did it yourself! You blew that lake out to ruin the Draw Three because you know that water was mine!"

Dave's mouth slackened in amazement at Hammond's words, and he looked dumbly at Rosy, who was standing just beside him.

"Why—why?" he looked back at Hammond and his face was black with fury—"you think I—why—damn you!"

"Killed seven men!" Hammond roared. "Seven men, and you ain't fit to wipe the boots of a one of 'em!"

Dave lunged, Dorsey screamed and the three men lunged at the sheriff.

"Get those guns, Dave!" Rosy cried out, and he crooked his elbow around the sheriff's neck.

"I did it! I did it!" the sheriff roared, half strangled.

These damning words, shouted at the top of the sheriff's lungs, tested Rosy and Dave. The sheriff twisted out of Rosy's arm, his hand streaking to his gun. "Thanks, Rand," he said dryly. He looked at Hammond and Dave. "I wondered when you two jaspers would tumble to this."

The three men looked at each other blankly.

"You damned knot-headed fools," the sheriff said. "Calm down enough to look at it. Why would wedged them in his belt, then opened the door and backed through it onto the porch. "Now come on," he said quietly.

Dave stepped through the door. There were four beds on the porch and in the far one Hammond was lying propped up on a pillow. Dorsey was sitting on the foot of his bed, but Dave did not even see her.

He walked across the room slowly.

"You murderin', bushwhackin', water-thievin' skunk!" Dave said slowly and distinctly, his voice quivering with contempt. He had hardly finished speaking before Dorsey was on her feet facing him. She slapped him sharply across the face, but Dave did not stir.

Hammond groaned in his rage.

"You couldn't get the lake, so you had to ruin it for me," Dave continued, his voice slow and thick. "Ruin it, and drown seven of your own men doin' it. Just for revenge."

Again Dorsey flushed, but held her tongue.

"Mr. Hammond," Rosy began, "I reckon we owe apologies all around. We've all been barkin' up the wrong tree. Let's get together and try to settle this."

Dave nodded glumly. "We're in the same boat. The spread ain't worth the grass on it now, and your mine is just a pot-hole, from the looks of it."

"And it'll stay that way," Hammond said. "I couldn't raise the money to have the water pumped out of it."

"You contemptible, sneaking jail birds!" Dorsey said, then started to cry again.

"Stop it, honey," Hammond said.

Hammond looked at Dave. "I reckon she's upset and don't know what she's sayin'."

"I—I guess I lost my temper," she said. "I'm sorry."

"That's all right," Dave said, quietly. "There may be a lot of truth in what you said."

Again Dorsey flushed, but held her tongue.

"Mr. Hammond," Rosy began, "I reckon we owe apologies all around. We've all been barkin' up the wrong tree. Let's get together and try to settle this."

Dave nodded glumly. "We're in the same boat. The spread ain't worth the grass on it now, and your mine is just a pot-hole, from the looks of it."

"And it'll stay that way," Hammond said. "I couldn't raise the money to have the water pumped out of it."

But who could have done it?" Rosy said. "Some one did. Was they wantin' to ruin you, Hammond, or us?"

"Dave and me don't know many people around here. Dave's been away eight years. I'm new. It looks like some one wanted to ruin you off that mine. Hammond—clean off. You got any enemies you think might do it?"

Hammond shook his head. "I know people that don't like me and I don't like. Like Pearson, for instance. But that's nacherel enough."

"We were almost partners once. I got the Draw Three on a tip from a minin' man I did a favor for once. I was ranchin' about a hundred miles to the south then, and I sold my spread and come up here. I tried to borrow money from Pearson. I had the option bought up, but I had to get the money to swing the deal. He wouldn't have anything to do with it at first, but he finally sent for a minin' man to come and look the property over. I never heard what the man said, but Pearson come around and said he wanted to buy up my option when it expired. I told him that I wouldn't sell, and that if I couldn't get the money to mine it myself, I was goin' to sell the option to a minin' company."

"Well, that brought Pearson around. He agreed to put some money in it. Pearson kept puttin' money in until I tumbled to what he was tryin' to do. He was tryin' to put so much money in it that he'd get control. Loan me out of the mine, so to speak. Well, I set my foot down. Pearson didn't like it, and he hasn't been here since."

"Think he's forked?" Rosy asked.

"No," Hammond said immediately. "I don't think so. He's a sharp business man is all. He wanted the mine. He tried to get it in a legitimate way. He couldn't and we disagreed. Some of his money is still in it."

"Then that's out, on that score alone. He wouldn't want to lose his own money," Rosy said.

Dorsey patted her father's arm. "Dad, why not sell out to Crowell? Take that offer he made you this morning and buy the ranch back."

Dave leaned forward. "Sell out to who?"

"Crowell," Dorsey said. "He's been interestin' in the mine. He happened to be in town last night and when he heard about the accident, he came over this morning and wanted Dad to sell to him."

"You—?" Dave began, then looked at Rosy. He shook himself and leaned forward, talking rapidly. "Listen to this. For the past year, Mary, my sister, has been gettin' letters from a gent by the name of Crowell, askin' her to put a price on the D her T spread. Those letters came about the time she was havin' that trouble with you, Hammond, over the lake. She thought it was you writin' the letters under the name of Crowell. And you folks didn't write the letters at all?"

"No," Hammond said.

"And you didn't have this Crowell try to buy the D Bar T for you?"

"Turner, I couldn't buy it,"

DISPELLING THE FOG

By CHARLES MICHELSON

Director of Publicity, Democratic National Committee

It must have been a source of great surprise to the public to learn that Chairman John Hamilton of the Republican National Committee and Colonel Knox, who with Governor Landon carried Maine and Vermont in '36, did not approve of President Roosevelt's recent fireside talk. I don't remember seeing much about another statement in the newspapers, but I am reasonably certain that ex-President Herbert Hoover feels the same way about it.

National platform once came out against monopoly.

Apparently, all President Roosevelt would have to do would have been to rely on the Republicans in the House and Senate to have effected all the New Deal legislation. Isn't it curious that all the progressive sentiment that Chairman Hamilton has discovered in the Republican party should have been unsuspected for so long a period? Isn't it amazing that the Liberty League, which took charge of the Republican campaign of 1936, should have poured out all the money and all the evidence that was expended in trying to make the country believe that President Roosevelt's program meant only the destruction of American enterprise and the substitution of a reign of communism in the United States?

By Their Votes

You Shall Know Them

Isn't it surprising that on the Farm bill, for example, all but five of the Republican members of the Senate voted against it, and that in the House of Representatives all the Republicans except a handful from the prairie states likewise voted "No"?

So with the wages and hours bill. A large majority among the Republican members of the House opposed the measure.

On the Relief bill, the G. O. P. Senators voted about 2 to 1 against the measure.

We might go further back in the record and we would find that the Republican members of the national legislature furnished the backbone for all the opposition to the New Deal measures.

Not all the members of his party appear to approve of either Mr. Hamilton himself or of his policy. For on the same day that the Chairman's statement was printed, Representative Hamilton Fish announced that the National Chairman had lost the confidence of members of Congress and the public. Mr. Fish also said that if the Republican National Committee would turn over some of the thousand dollars a day which it is spending on nothing, to the Senatorial and Congressional committees, "we could elect ten new Republican Senators and at least 100

Stamping Out 54-Year Mine Fire

NEW LEXINGTON, OHIO... The federal authorities' theory that the 54-year-old mine fire which has been raging with the force of a score of blast furnaces could be stopped by fighting it with wide tunnels of mud, has met its first test and proved successful.

Additional Republican Representatives in Congress this fall.

These things are bound to happen in a party that has no policy, no leader, and no clear idea beyond railing at whatever the party in power does. In all the miles of campaign literature that have been issued by the Liberty League, under its various aliases, and in all the flood of words from the spokesmen of the minority party we have yet to hear one constructive suggestion. The whole point of their argument is merely that they could do the job much better than Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Colonel Knox took another tack in voicing his disapproval for the President's fireside talk. He objects to the President's figures which recounted the gain of $29,999,999,990 in the national income since 1932. I think most people will agree that the President of the United States is in a better position to give correct figures than the mournful Chicago colonel, who was the tail of the Republican kite two years ago.

LANGUAGES

The people of the world speak 2,796 different languages, according to an estimate made by the French Academy. The time may never come when all people will speak the same language, but I can think of nothing which would do more to avert international misunderstandings than for all people to speak the same tongue.

The North American Continent—the United States and Canada—is the largest area in the world where practically everybody speaks one language. In all the South and Central American countries but one, the white population speaks one language, Spanish. But a large part of the population of South America consists of Indians who speak their native tongues, and in Brazil, the largest of the nations to the south of us, the national language is Portuguese.

Several attempts have been made to invent a universal language. One of them, Esperanto, has come into considerable use for international business correspondence, but English and Spanish are spoken and understood by more people than any other tongues.

RACES

Different races of people have different ideas and points of view, even though they speak the same language. The principal differences are in their moral concepts. The standards of the Japanese people are so different from those of the rest of the world's peoples that unless they are changed, Japan will always be a source of danger.

The Japanese, as a people, are firmly convinced that they are superior to all other races. That idea is based upon their implicit belief that the Mikado partakes of the nature of God, and that they live under the shadow and direct guidance of Divinity. Whatever they do as a nation, therefore, is right, and no other nation has any rights which they need to respect.

It is less than a century since Japan was jolted out of its isolated barbarism by Commodore Perry's fleet. In a hundred years the Japanese have learned how to compete shrewdly with the rest of the world in industry and commerce, but it will take many generations before they develop standards of morals and honor such as to entitle them to the confidence of the rest of the world.

nation or group of people to learn how to govern themselves. That is proved by the whole course of human history. It takes only a couple of generations for a self-governing people to be reduced to servitude to a ruler or a government. That, too, is history.

There is always a large percentage of any group of human beings who place a higher value on present material welfare than they do on their inherent human rights to freedom of action, thought and speech. Every failure of democracy since time began, and there have been many of them, has been brought about by promises and gifts of material benefits, for which the mass of people have been willing to pay by surrendering their liberties.

Sooner or later, those nations which have yielded to that sort of spiritual slavery have revolted, and overthrown their rulers. They have kept their liberty until some great economic depression tempted them to tolerate once more the domination of ambitious leaders.

GOVERNMENT

Every formal organization of individuals for a common purpose calls for compromises in which all must surrender certain rights for the benefit of the group as a whole.

It is an axiom laid down by the founders of the United States that the best government is that which governs the least. Great pains were taken by the statesmen who drew up our Constitution and the Bill of Rights, that in organizing the new nation to accomplish things which called for united action, there should be the least possible infringement of individual rights. The less government the better.

Under the pressure of changing methods of business and transportation, laws were made to regulate many things which did not quite regulate in the early days. Gradually one group or inter after another began to demand laws for their special benefit, until the American people came to look upon Government not something of their own creation but as an impersonal power which could confer or withhold benefit at will. To me, the greatest danger America faces today is the growth and acceptance of this point of view.
