Nancy Hart's HOME NEWS

Warm spring showers are as beneficial to house plants as they are to May flowers, so take your house plants outdoors on mild days and let them enjoy the soft spring rain.

Here we are using sleeve boards again and doing up battiste and georgette blouses trimmed with tucks and insertion. My grandmother's sleeve board was stored away in the loft over the woodshed.

As I have stated, the press carried the main points that I think are of paramount importance to the people as a whole, which were: (1) If I am elected your Congressman, I pledge to you that I shall do every thing in my power to keep our country out of war.

Since it's sandwich season with a vengeance now that "summer is a' cumin' in" be sure your knife is sharp and that the butter is creamed before you start to make a batch of sandwiches for picnic or tea.

When you are making boiled coffee over an open fire outdoors add teaspoon salt and 1/2 cup cold water as soon as the coffee has boiled as long as you want it to. Remove from heat and let it stand two or three minutes before pouring.

Paper towels and paper napkins will save hours of laundry work. There are attractive luncheon sets made of heavy water-proof paper that make charming summer tables.

Sam Russell's Message To Voters Of the 17th Congressional District:

My announcement for Congress was carried in the Press, in the Daily and most of the Weekly papers on the 19th day of January, of this year. However, the announcement was carried as a news item. This announcement is my personal message to you.

I was born and reared in Erath County, grew to manhood on the farm. My people were poor and by reason thereof, was forced to make my own way.

I went into the Army during the World War and I finished my law course while in the Army, and was admitted to the bar and licensed to practice law soon after I was discharged from the Army.

I believe that our country is in more danger now within its borders than it is without, and I am in favor of keeping all foreigners out of this country and give and make jobs for our home people.

(1) In case it becomes necessary for our country to engage in war, I favor a universal draft, that is, not only a draft of men power, but a draft of money power, a draft of machinery, and a draft of munitions and factories.

(2) I am in favor of prohibiting the advertisement of intoxicating beverages through the United States Mail, and I believe that the moving picture and radio industries should be prohibited from giving immoral programs.

(3) I am in favor of the Government encouraging and assisting the buying of homes for those who are homeless. This can be done without loss to the Government.

(4) Being a Southern Democrat, I naturally believe in the doctrine of State's Rights, and I am opposed to Federal Control of Private Business, and if I am elected your Congressman, I shall fight and oppose to the bitter end, Federal Control of the Oil Business in Texas.

(5) I am in favor of the lowest tax rate possible for the operation of our Government, and I believe that all taxes should be equal and uniform, and if they are such the ones most able to pay will be the ones who pay the most, and should pay the most.

those who could not help themselves, and I expect to work, if I am your Congressman, to see that this part of the program is carried out.

I am in favor, and shall work to have the discriminating freight rates against Texas and the Southwest eliminated.

(6) I am opposed to the paying of a $25,000 a year Pension to the widows of the past Presidents. I am opposed to paying of pensions to retired Federal Judges.

(7) I believe in a strict economy in Government. Our national debt is now nearing the forty five billion mark, which is alarming, and shows that an economy program must be established.

(8) I am in favor of prohibiting the advertisement of intoxicating beverages through the United States Mail, and I believe that the moving picture and radio industries should be prohibited from giving immoral programs.

(9) I am in favor of the Government encouraging and assisting the buying of homes for those who are homeless. This can be done without loss to the Government.

Of course, there will be many other problems that we will be confronted with, and I will give each due consideration, and will at all times fight with all my might for the things that I think are right, and equally as strong against the things I think are wrong.

I sincerely ask your help, promising you that I will always be found at my post of duty, working and fighting for the welfare and glory of our people and country. Sincerely yours, SAM RUSSELL, Candidate for Congress, Seventeenth District (Paid Political Advertising)

ONLY ONE "ISM" NEEDED

The State of New York, in a law passed by this year's legislature and just signed by the Governor, has taken a long step in what must seem to most Americans as the right direction.

There is no better text book in the fundamental principles of Americanism than is contained in the first ten Amendments to the Federal Constitution.

It is to be hoped that the rest of the states will follow the example of New York and make the teaching of Americanism through study of the Bill of Rights, compulsory in the public schools.

THE CASE OF THE INDIAN

The people of the United States have not very much to be proud of in our national record of the treatment of the Indians by the white men.

In recent years there has been a great deal of change in the attitude of the American people and our Government toward the Indian.

What has brought about the change in the white men's attitude toward the Indian has been the discovery that there is no essential enmity between the two races.

Marjorie Hope Nicolson, Dean of Smith College, is the first woman to head Phi Beta Kappa since its establishment 164 years ago at William and Mary College, Virginia.

The new head is a brilliant educator. She has been a Fellow of both Johns Hopkins and Yale and was one of the early Guggenheim Fellows in Europe where she found material for "Conway Letters," one of her publications.

Mrs. H. E. Briggs, Minneapolis housewife, has won a prize of one thousand dollars in a contest, and instead of accepting a free trip to California, she has decided to take the money.

Putting aside the temptation to accept the trip to the Pacific coast Mrs. Briggs said she would rather have the money because recently she and her husband built a small house on very little capital and she thinks it would be wiser to help pay off some of the obligations they assumed.

Slenderizing Dress With all the detailing on the bodice, so that it's particularly good for bridge parties and luncheons, this charming dress (8656) is subtly designed to make you look much slimmer, as well as very elegant.

The narrow yoke effect ends in a soft bow, and the stitched detailing gives correct fit over the bust. You'll like the way the front of the skirt is cut high in order to flatten your diaphragm, and the smooth, slim effect made possible by the side belts, fastened in the back.

Not too dressy for general wear, yet sufficiently soft for afternoons, this is the most useful type of dress you can make right now—and supremely becoming to those of you who have size to consider.

Make it of flat crepe, thin wool or rayon jersey, in navy, black, dark green or brown. Detailed sewing chart comes with your pattern.

Pattern No. 8656 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52.

PATTERN 8557—This practical pinfold apron (8557) has been so extraordinarily popular that we repeat it now in case you missed it when we showed it before. Easy to see why this design has been so successful! It slips on over the head, has a competent bib top so that it protects the bodice as well as the skirt of your dress. And it can't slip off the shoulders, either.

Pattern No. 8557 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48.

Thought For Memorial Day

'Garlands of the fairest flowers that grow We lay, with loving hand upon thy breast. Ours to feel the pain, the unlanguage'd woe, The bitter sense of loss—the vague unrest.'

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

Washington, May 23.—It is impossible for Washington to keep its mind off the European war. It is no secret that official sentiment reflects that of the American people, who are more than 95% hopeful that Germany will be defeated.

There is no question that the Administration has not taken the public into its confidence. There may be many good reasons for this. The basic reason, the best observers here believe, has been the fear that if the American people knew as much about the European situation as high officials do, that knowledge might start a war panic.

The plain fact is that neither the Administration nor the opposition party which is trying to gain control of the Government has any clearly defined foreign policy to furnish a guide in case the outcome of the present conflict is the opposite of what most Americans hope it will be.

Definite Precautions

Definite precautions being taken against anything like an invasion from abroad are far beyond anything that was anticipated a year ago. The United States is getting itself all set to fight. But the question which no leader in public affairs has yet answered is: Who do we expect to fight and what for?

In other words, neither the Administration nor the Republican opposition has developed, or at least proclaimed, a national policy of foreign relations under which our national position would be clearly understood by our own people and by the whole world.

A victory for the British-French alliance would call for no change in our foreign relations. A victory for Germany might call for a radically new foreign policy. If Italy should decide that her interests run with Germany's, that would certainly have a definite effect upon our relations with the Mediterranean countries.

It is clear enough that neither the Democratic party as such, nor the Republican party, has an official party program on foreign affairs. Among themselves, the leaders of each party have so little comprehension of the views of other leaders that they hesitate to put forth their own ideas for fear of stirring up party dissensions which might impair their chances in the election.

No Clear-cut Policy

It does not seem likely now that anything like a broad, clear-cut statement of foreign policy is to be expected from either party before election. What may happen between now and election to swing public sentiment in the matter of the war and our part in it nobody can guess. The foreign policy of the United States will be the personal policy of one of the two candidates for the presidency, and his advisors.

The election itself may easily turn upon some event occurring in Europe. Should a great and unexpected victory by one side or the other occur a few days before election, it might determine which party is to control the United States Government for the next four years.

It would be exaggeration to say that official Washington was jittery over the war possibilities. There is much less nervousness in the atmosphere here than there was last Fall. There is a greater feeling of confidence that the American people are not going to be stampeded into ill-considered participation in hostilities. And there is a growing sense of confidence that any nation which may be trying or contemplating "Trojan Horse" tactics in this country is not going to get very far.

The disclosure that the German occupation of Norway was facilitated by the work of Nazi secret agents, who had been planted by the thousands, months ahead of the event, has turned public attention more seriously toward the disclosures brought out by the Dies Committee of Nazi and Communist efforts in America.

He Didn't Have A Sheepskin

Very soon about 150,000 young people in the United States will be awarded college degrees. Think of that! Degrees' Sheepskin that will tell the world how smart they are!

He had to work incredibly hard to get it. He studied so late at night, with a poor light, that he almost went blind. His eyes got so bad that he had to give up study and get a job putting up telephone poles. The outdoor life helped his eyes, but did not cure them. Finally he went back to college and hired another student to read to him.

He graduated from Ohio University in 1904. It had taken him six years to get through. He took the college diploma home with him—and threw it into the wastebasket! Then he said, "Now I'm going to start out and try to learn something."

Well, that was America's greatest living inventor—Charles F. Kettering.

His salary is $353,755 a year. His official title with General Motors Corporation, is "vice president in charge of research." All his life he has had a passion for knowledge—yet when he was going to a little tumbledown, one-room school 50 miles north of Columbus, Ohio, his teacher said he was dumb. Not only that, but that he was "the dumbest boy in school." He had his own way of getting information, and it did not coincide with the teacher's.

Finally he became a country school teacher. One day an early X-ray machine was brought to one town near where young Kettering was teaching. He told his pupils all he knew about it, then said, "That machine is going to be important. The way for you to know about it is to see it." But the machine was ten miles away. He locked the school house door and walked the children the ten miles to see the machine. The farmers were hopping mad. No machine in the world was worth walkin' kids that far to see! A local preacher got so mad about it that he started an agitation to fire the nitwit school teacher. Fortunately he didn't succeed.

Farm Security Administration

Now is the time that most progressive farmers are looking forward to the hatching of the young broods. Chicken raising is a fascinating industry to most of us, yet it ceases to be interesting and becomes very disgusting when we are careless enough to let the brood become infected with some preventable disease and the major part or all of them die.

Baby chickens are harder than most people think they are, yet they must be surrounded with sanitary living conditions. First, before we buy our chickens let us find out something of the record of the parent stock. We can not expect a baby chick to develop into a profitable layer if the parent yet it ceases to be interesting and in selecting our baby chicks, let us go to the hatcheryman that can show us certificates of good breeding and certificates that the parent stock has been tested for communicable diseases. If this chick is bought, we then have an even break with all the unknowns in raising a good percent of the flock.

The success that is attained from this point is entirely in the hands of the caretaker. Brooder houses should be tight and warm and the brooder house is one of the most common places for the chicks to contract diseases. Water should never be allowed to run under the brooder house floor, for it seldom dries out and creates a very unsanitary condition. Floors made of flat rock or thoroughly dried concrete offer a very desirable condition. The floor should then be covered with some good absorbent material, of which there are several commercial brands on the market. Extreme sanitary conditions must be practiced from now on, even after the pullet becomes a layer. Feed hoppers and especially the drinking fountains are a continual threat to the health of the chick. They should be cleaned daily and scalded thoroughly.

ENVIRONMENTAL SANITATION

Sanitation problems are old but the recent approach in the form of an Environmental program is new and deserves some careful thought in order to bring about the most good from a limited supply of funds.

The Farm Security Administration has allocated a stipulated amount of money to be used, in cooperation with the State Department of Health and the County Health Officers, in such communities that will do the most good. This condition may be reflected by the records of preventive diseases, such as malaria, hookworm, typhoid fever, dysentery, diarrhea, and many others.

The House of Hazards By Mac Arthur

Six Inch Sermon

REV. ROBERT H. HARPER

Jeremiah Announces the New Covenant.

Lesson for May 28: Jeremiah 31: 31-37.

In the preceding lesson we saw the tragic figure of a man vainly trying to avert his people's ruin, thwarted by lying prophets and hated and persecuted by those he sought to save. The world might say his life went out in the dark.

But in today's lesson we see Jeremiah looking beyond the imminent ruin of his people, and seventy years of captivity before them, and looking beyond the centuries to the new covenant God would make with men. It would be a covenant written in the heart. More clearly than other prophets Jeremiah realized that righteousness is of the heart.

In the distant time of which he wrote the knowledge of God would be universal and the well-being and happiness of God's people would be assured by the might and goodness of the heavenly Father. And as long as his power upholds the universe God will not cast off the posterity of Israel. The preservation of the Hebrew race in all lands of the world and through all the vicissitudes of the ages is one of the remarkable things of history.

For instance, take this meat loaf. In cold weather it is savory served even-hot, accompanied by gravy and cooked hot vegetables. But for bright springlike days let us bring it to the table sliced cold and garnished with raw green pepper rings and radish roses. Start the meal with a stimulating hot soup, such as chicken soup, end it with fresh fruit and you have a delicious meal from start to finish—and a satisfying one, too.
Mushroom Meat Loaf
1 pound veal, ground
1 pound smoked ham, ground
4 tablespoons tomato catsup
4 tablespoons green pepper, finely chopped
2 eggs, beaten
1 can condensed cream of mushroom soup
1 small onion, finely chopped
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
Mix the ingredients in the order given and pack into a loaf pan. Bake in a moderate oven (350°) for one hour to one hour and fifteen minutes. Serve 6.

Al Pearce
Cash Got Him Into Radio

Al Pearce, heard Fridays at 7:30 p. m. EST, over CBS, for the sponsor of Ika Chase, Grand Ole Opry and Blondie, owes his long and successful career to the market crash of 1929. Pearce was a salesman but when the real estate business roomed to the ground in 1929, Pearce assembled a group of entertainers and started broadcasting. This month he is celebrating 11 years in radio with his lovable "Elmer Blurt" character rated as a national figure and his catch phrase, "I hope, I hope, I hope," ranking with Fibber and Molly's "Tain't Funny, McGee," as one of America's ten most popular taglines.

Rudy Vallee is inaugurating a research department to be employed in producing the historical fantasies which he is presenting on his Thursday NBC program. The Vallee production staff, headed by Vick Knight, is employing John Rider, research expert, to dig up historical incidents Vallee can utilize with original music for his show.

A few weeks ago lovely Gertrude Warner was an unknown living in Hartford, Conn., but a New York talent scout saw her, gave her a radio audition, and now she's winning network plaudits for her excellent work on "Light of the World," the Biblical series broadcast Mondays through Fridays at 2:00 p. m. EST, over NBC. This series, sponsored by the bank-roller of "Beat the Band," the music program featuring Ted Weems' orchestra, is transplanting the Bible into modern prose under the direction of Dr. James Moffat, of the Union Theological Seminary, Columbia University.

Edwin C. Hill has "covered" a lot of territory in his time. He has covered every presidential convention for the past 32 years and was dubbed "The Unofficial Member of Teddy Roosevelt's Cabinet" by none other than Teddy himself. This year Hill will cover still another convention—one which may upset tradition by electing a third term president, also named Roosevelt! Mr. Hill, whose Human Side of the News is heard over the CBS network Mondays through Fridays, is writing a book containing little known human facts about the great and near great he has interviewed over a period of 27 years, the conventions he has covered, the earthquake he reported, the interviews he has had with Mussolini, Lloyd George, Ramsay MacDonald, etc.

Consider the EGG

suggests Dorothy Greig

CAN you imagine what a terrible place an eggless world would be? Half the things we would try to cook would fall flat and the other half would fall apart. And think what a gap in our daily menus the absence of eggs would leave. That neat, compact little item known as the egg is just about the most useful, nourishing and altogether valuable food we have.

Eggs baked in tomato sauce and served with crisp bacon and corn sticks.

There's no waste to it. It can be eaten by everyone, young, old and muddling. And the ways of using it and serving it are infinite in their variety.

Eggs should be cooked slowly and at low temperature. That keeps them tender. Even a hard cooked egg intended for salad or garnish should be brought to its firm state by slow, gentle means.

The traditional "four minute egg" is a better tasting egg if it reaches that particular stage of doneness by resting peacefully in water just under boiling temperature for eight minutes instead of boiling vigorously for four.

For Sunday breakfast, or for luncheon, eggs cooked this way are a tasty bite.

Eggs baked in Tomato Sauce
Butter individual ramekins or shirred egg dishes. Then into each one spoon two or three tablespoons of condensed tomato soup, thick, just as it comes from the can. Now drop an egg into each dish on top of the soup. Bake in a slow oven—325 degrees—until the eggs are set which will be in 14-17 minutes. Serve with strips of crisp bacon and fresh hot corn sticks.
