VOLUME LVI

HICO, TEXAS, FRIDAY, AUGUST 16, 1940.

NUMBER 12

Here In HICO

One of the greatest pleasures in running any type of business is in knowing that services are appreciated. This applies particularly to the newspaper business.

There are several ways of running a newspaper. We've tried most of them in the past, and we ought to know. But after trying several different methods we have concluded that the hard way is the best way. That is, trying to get out a little better paper than we are paid for.

Of course there are times in the still of the night, when everyone else has gone to rest, that it occurs to us that we are plain daffy. It takes time to chase down news items, assemble them into copy, and then get the whole thing set into type and printed creditably so that the natives may have something to read which they didn't already know. And nine times out of ten the only reward we get for our efforts is getting a bawling out for missing one name out of a score or two in some particular news story; getting the wrong person in the wrong place; or making some minor error which was unavoidable.

However when the sheet is out and we walk down the street and see people engaged in reading what our staff has written—or hear from some good soul that he enjoys reading the paper at home and believes it is worth all and more than its cost—then is when we have a feeling of pride in our work and renew our determination to procure and print all the legitimate news that originates in our community.

Reunion time is a particularly trying season on nerves of news hounds. Not only during the annual celebration in Hico are there throngs of visitors, but most family reunions occur along about the same time, and each one carries with it the responsibility of assembling information, dates and names without number. Try your own hand at setting down in writing what happens at any one of these affairs, multiply this by most any number you can think of which will compare with the many similar events the News Review is called upon each week to handle, and then see if you think this is an easy task.

Of course we have always recognized, and herewith publicly acknowledge our indebtedness to our kind friends, subscribers and readers, who are so courteous and considerate in providing all the information and all the assistance they can toward complete news coverage. Without them our task would be an impossible one. Those who have been so loyal in turning in the news to us will have our eternal thanks. And sometimes we believe that the public in general is getting more thoughtful all the time in this one particular. In the past few weeks contributors have been of untold assistance in submitting typewritten accounts of gatherings, with a full and complete list of guests.

Of course the business is not a bed of roses, as we have said before.

Occasionally—not too often, thank goodness—someone gets all riled up because they think we have not done what we should, or have done what we shouldn't.

But those with whom we have worked for so long, who appreciate the fact that the management of the paper has always attempted to be fair in every instance, ignoring personal likes and dislikes, always come to our rescue when we are falsely accused.

During the time we have been at the helm of the News Review we have, we must admit, been accused of making mistakes with an ulterior motive. When a situation of this kind arises, we have learned that the least said about it will be the best in the long run. We seldom try to explain or justify an error, for the simple reason that the explanation should not be needed. If we have created the impression that we have the proper motives in all of our efforts, our friends will take up for us and defend us to the last ditch. If we have left the opposite impression, no amount of explaining would change the notion in the mind of an accuser that we had been unfair.

Our intelligence has frequently been questioned, for which we have no defense. We learn a little all the time, and with the passing of years may yet gain our usual portion of knowledge and judgment. But our integrity has been attacked very seldom, and as yet it has never suffered from such an attack, for without fail the one who was of a disposition to think we were doing the wrong thing has always admitted later that he was wrong in his accusations.

Thanks again to all our friends for their assistance in making the News Review a better paper.

ATTORNEY GENERAL GERALD C. MANN FILLS SPEAKING ENGAGEMENT

Attorney General Gerald C. Mann reached Hico shortly after dusk last Friday, the third day of the 58th Annual Reunion, to deliver his sixth talk of the day on his "stewardship" tour of the state, to fill an engagement to address the large crowd assembled at Reunion Park pavilion. After apt and flattering introduction he declared, "It is my deep and abiding desire that the office of attorney general shall stand in the eyes of the people as a symbol of respect for the law."

"I have only one political ambition and that is to do well the job to which you have elected me," Mann added. "When you elected me two years ago I told you I would stay on the job. I told you that the laws of our state would be obeyed not only by the governed but by those who govern."

"I have stayed on the job. The most gigantic corporation and the humblest citizen have been given a square deal by the attorney general. This same corporation and this same citizen have been prosecuted when they have violated the laws."

"I assure you there will be no change in my declared purpose, in my determination to follow the law, no matter who it affects or offends."

Mann reviewed the record of his office before the courts, saying in the past 18 months they have appeared before the United States supreme court five times and won four of the cases, before the State supreme court 19 times and won 17, and before the courts of Civil Appeals 78 times and in 60 cases the decision has been in favor of the state.

"Though unopposed for reelection, I am seeking your renewed faith and confidence in my administration. When this tour is over I shall return to my desk and devote my full time to my official duties," the speaker said.

Mann was accompanied on the local visit by Gordon Pulliam, and they were escorted by Mr. and Mrs. Roland Hoford to Stephenville, where he was slated for an address the following morning.

Above are pictured two prominent personages who were among the thousands of visitors here last week end to attend the 58th Annual Hico Reunion. At the left is a snapshot of Congressman Clyde L. Garrett of Eastland in the parade lineup Wednesday afternoon, astride the handsome Palomino horse provided for the occasion by L. E. Bredberg, new owner of "Rancho Pancho" in the Chalk Mountain section of Erath county, formerly the Wardlaw ranch. Mr. Garrett was attired in true Western style, and addressed an audience at the pavilion in City Park following the parade. At the right is a likeness of William Thomas Wright, 100-year-old long-time citizen of this section now residing at Lytton Springs, who occupied a seat of honor in the parade. "Uncle Willie," who expects to celebrate his 100th birthday Sept. 7 of this year, has been visiting at Carlton with one of his daughters, Mrs. J. O. Pollard.

HICO CLASS OF 1925 HOLDS FIRST REUNION HERE LAST FRIDAY

Interesting episodes of years ago were recalled by members of the Hico High School Class of 1925 when they held their first reunion on August 9, 1940, at 10 a. m. Nine of the nineteen living members were present and found their old seats in the High School Building, Mrs. D. C. Arthur (formerly Miss Office Barnett) was the only teacher present and called the class roll of twenty members.

The nine answering present were: Mrs. Alvin Young (Jean Smith), Mrs. Paul Russell (Beatrice Langston), Mrs. Clancy Blue (Edna Wolfe), Mrs. Ras Proffitt (Letha Wilson), Mrs. John G. Lightly (Iva Jordan), Mrs. George Griffiths (Lucille Trimmer), Rev. D. D. Tidwell, Mrs. D. D. Tidwell (Thelma Turner), and Truman Holladay.

A business meeting was held and Truman Holladay was elected active president and Mrs. Duncan Tidwell secretary. It was voted that the regular class president, Leroy Guyton, and secretary, Mrs. Wm. Lennox, be retained as honorary officers. A motion was made and carried that the meeting be an annual affair to be held at the Hico High School building on Saturday during the Hico reunion in August. The following committee was named to make the necessary arrangements: Mrs. Ras Proffitt, Mrs. John G. Lightly and Mrs. George Griffiths, Duncan Tidwell was asked to draw up resolutions of respect in memory of Houston Powers.

The program consisted of "Lessons" in History and English. Those present gave an interesting account of the main events in their lives since leaving high school, and letters from absent members were read.

A basket lunch was served in the Home Economics building to the class members and their families.

Brief History of Class Members Since 1925

PROFFITT'S SERVICE STATION CELEBRATING TWELFTH ANNIVERSARY

The twelfth anniversary of D. R. Proffitt at his present location at the Magnolia Service Station on Highway 281 near the railroad is one anniversary that is not hard for Mr. Proffitt to remember. The date always comes just after the Hico Reunion, which is an appropriate time since Mr. Proffitt has become an old-timer in the service station business.

Twelve years is a long time, as far as staying in one location in the filling station business, Mr. Proffitt admits, but every anniversary, even with its accompanying thoughts of all the hard work that's been expended, brings pleasant thoughts of his business associations during those years.

Keeping step with modern improvements has not been easy, but a comparison of the station today with its appearance twelve years ago would indicate that Mr. Proffitt keeps on the alert for changes that might be made to better his service to the motoring public. Among those made within the past few years have been the installation of electric pumps, an invention which has greatly simplified the operation of a service station, the erection of an attractive neon sign, and during the past few months, the painting of the station.

Other changes also are noticeable. Mr. Proffitt now handles nationally-known brands of tires, batteries, radios and some automobile accessories.

Now, as in past years, Mr. Proffitt has set aside the remainder of this month to observe the anniversary, and he has a special greeting elsewhere in the paper, inviting his many friends in this section to stop by and visit him.

Returns From Hospital

Mrs. W. E. McAnelly was taken to the Stephenville Hospital about midnight Monday in the Barrow ambulance, and was carried from there to Baylor Hospital in Dallas Tuesday morning. Mrs. McAnelly has been confined to her home since her recent return from Baylor Hospital where she had been taking treatment. Her condition was described as critical.

New Improvement At Home

Watt Ross has made a number of improvements on the lot south of the high school building which he recently purchased and to which he has moved the old Whittlesy home purchased from George Jones.

A fence and rock wall have been erected and the yard terraced, and as soon as the work of moving has been completed Mr. and Mrs. Ross and family will move to the residence.

Texas has a total of 22,500 miles of highway maintained by the State Highway Department.

This work will include hygiene, fundamentals in handling, passing and kicking football, and team play. Each boy is requested to bring towel and soap to use in the shower room.

58TH REUNION GOES DOWN IN HISTORY AS A DECIDED SUCCESS

Hico's 58th Annual Reunion passed into history Saturday night after a successful 4-day run which brought throngs of attendants from neighboring towns, along with a great number of former citizens who had come back to mingle with old friends at the picnic.

S. J. Cheek, this year's manager of the annual celebration, stated that the affair was a success in every way. His financial report showed a small margin of profit when all bills were paid, in spite of increased expenses through prize distributions and in promotions. Crowds on hand Saturday night exceeded those on similar preceding nights of previous years, he said, and parking cars was a gigantic task. In spite of the immense crowd, however, good order was maintained through the assistance of local peace officers and the cooperation of Sheriff Houston White, Deputy Henderson, and State Highway Patrolman John T. Cope.

Many Speakers Present

Visiting speakers came this year in numbers exceeding any recent year, and the program arranged by the committee composed of Lawrence Lane, J. N. Russell, and Dr. H. V. Hedges, kept something of interest each day for crowds gathered under the pavilion. Band concerts by the Hico Band, conducted by J. I. Grimland, provided pleasant musical interludes and introductions to the programs.

Clyde L. Garrett, congressman from the 17th District, introduced by Mayor Lane and Kai Segrist, spoke at 3 o'clock the first day, immediately after the parade. An account of his talk was carried in last week's paper, issued a day early.

Thursday night County Judge Karl L. Lovelady of Meridian, a candidate for State Senator from this district, made a talk in behalf of his candidacy. Mr. Lovelady gave a report of his record in the office he now holds, and presented a part of his program if elected to the office he seeks.

Friday afternoon J. N. Russell presided for the purpose of introducing two Stephenville men, candidates for office. Rev. M. P. Walker was presented to the audience, and introduced in glowing terms the first speaker of the afternoon, District Judge Sam Russell of Stephenville, a candidate for Congress from the 17th District. Judge Russell, in opening his talk, pointed out that he was fired by an urge to serve the people who had been so good to him in the past in his efforts to represent them in Congress. Born and reared in Erath County, between Hico and Stephenville, he attributed part of his success to being "born on the Hico road." That day was his birthday, and the following day was his mother's, the speaker said, and he considered the privilege of addressing Reunion crowds as a fitting birthday present. Judge Russell reviewed his past record which led him through service in various local offices, culminating in that of district judge, in which he had served for 12 years. He then reviewed his platform, which he said was published last November, and promised that if elected he would work faithfully to discharge the duties and fulfill the trust placed upon him. His talk contained numerous references to national defense, throughout which frequently were interspersed patriotic utterances which drew applause from his large and interested audience. He referred to his World War service record, and especially thanked the people of this section of the district for the nice vote given him in the first primary.

Following Judge Russell's talk, State Senator J. Manley Head of Stephenville told of the problems he had encountered during the time he had represented the people of this district in Austin, and explained his method of handling them. He said he had been willing and anxious at all times to render the type of service he thought the people of the district deserved, and asked that he be returned to Austin for a second term to continue the program which had been initiated, as he knew that some progress had been made and was anxious to carry it off to a successful culmination.

Friday night Attorney General Gerald C. Mann filled an engaging moment before Reunion crowds with his sixth speech of that day. General Mann, an account of whose address appears in a separate column of this paper, was greeted by a large audience who had gathered to hear from this distinguished guest.

Preceding the attorney general's appearance, which was delayed a few minutes through inability to reach Hico until about 8 o'clock, several others who were not on the program were heard from, including H. T. Pinson, newly-elected superintendent of Hico schools, Earl Huddleston of Oglesby, a candidate for state representative from the 94th district, Hamilton County Judge J. B. Pool, and District Attorney H. William

by Vincent Richards

CHAPTER II

SYNOPSIS
Len Rollins, tennis ace, is torn between two desires. He dreams of going to Europe with the Davis Cup team to help win the cup for America; and he is in love with the rich Grace Worthington, who is willing to defy her family and marry him if he will give up tennis. Fate seems to decide the matter for him when in a match game he injures an ankle so seriously that the doctors say he can never play again. He gets a job at Talbot's sporting goods shop—selling tennis equipment—and sends for Grace.

There was sudden activity at the train gate. Len's heart thumped against his chest. People were filtering out. He scanned each individual eagerly, his height making it possible for him to peer far down the runway.

And then Len saw her! She was dressed in chateausse, a shade particularly becoming to her unusual coloring. Over one arm she carried a light coat. A porter followed her, a bag in each hand.

Then she saw him! She hesitated for the fraction of an instant, as if realizing that her next step was the most momentous of her life, then came quickly forward.

He held both her hands in his. "Oh, Len!" There were tears in her eyes.

"Grace, honey!" His voice was husky.

They walked, automatically, across the rotunda toward the taxi-stand, her hand tucked under his arm. Strangely silent, each wanted to speak, but, embarrassed, did not know how to begin.

"When I first saw you," he said in the taxi, "I thought you looked a trifle pale, but I guess it was just my imagination. You look marvelous, sweetheart."

She laughed, but her voice was serious. "You'd be a trifle pale, too, I suppose, if you were running away from home to get married."

"So it's like that?"

She nodded. "Yes, like that. They were furious. Threatened to cut me off without a penny and all that sort of thing. I told them it didn't matter the least bit. And here I am. With two bags of clothes. But I'm not at all afraid. Len, funny, isn't it?"

He held her close to him. "You'll never regret it, Grace. Never."

From his coat pocket he shyly extracted a little box, took the ring from it, boyishly demanding that she close her eyes. Flushing, he slipped the tiny solitaire on her finger, allowed her to open her eyes.

They decided that the next day they would look for an apartment. Until something that was both comfortable and within their means was found Grace would stay at the St. Andrew. Len saw her settled in a room two floors above his and then explained that because this was Saturday he had to be back on the job at seven. She insisted on having tea and a sandwich with him at the drug store on the corner.

They sat on high stools at the counter and made plans for the immediate future. During Len's Monday lunch-hour they would dash down to the Municipal Building and get the license. They would go to the church not far from the hotel and arrange with the minister to be married some time during the week. He kissed her and strode off toward Fifth Avenue and Talbot's, whistling merrily as he walked.

How good it was to have someone to kiss before going off to work! And to know she'd be there waiting for him when he came home. Something to work for.

At five minutes after ten, having finished serving a middle-aged dowager who had beamed a constant smile upon him, Len took his hat from the locker and walked hurriedly back through the brightly illuminated New York City streets to the St. Andrew hotel. Grace was waiting for him in the lobby.

The buses were crowded, but they finally got a top bench and sat close together, hands interlocked, the touch of the small diamond giving him a sense of possessiveness. Shoulders touching, they rode thus through the night.

When Len returned from lunch on Monday, Carey said: "There's someone waiting for you up front. Wants Mr. Rollins and no one else but."

Dal Worthington rose from a chair at Len's approach. Len steered himself. He would be pleasant, listen patiently to what Grace's father had to say. He offered his hand, said: "Hello, Mr. Worthington."

"Hello, Rollins." Dan Worthington ignored the outstretched hand. "You have a few minutes? What I have to say won't take long. There's no use beating around the bush. For some fool reason my daughter seems to have become infatuated with you. We can't persuade her to change her mind, but we're sure if she would consider the utter futility of the whole situation—"

"Futility?"

"Yes. You know she'll never be happy with you, Rollins. She's been used to such things as you never possibly can give her. Soon she'll miss them, then—" he shrugged, "I want to spare her that if I can, I quite appreciate what you're doing, but you must admit that it's all too hazardous and poor a life for a girl like Grace."

"She's happy," Len said quietly. "Every girl thinks herself happy when she is in love. That's Grace's trouble. Of course I may be wrong. You two may actually be deeply in love and it may last forever. But I don't think so. I ask you to talk it over with Grace, persuade her not to marry you until—well, until after you've reached a position where you can take care of her as she's always been taken care of. Ask her to come back home; give up this—this gamble, Rollins."

Len's eyes bored into Worthington's. "If you wish," he said grimly. "I'll tell you where Grace is staying. You can go to see her. We've already discussed the entire situation from every possible angle. Mr. Worthington, but the

"I—I was afraid of that, Len. What did he want?"

"He wants me to give you up. Send you back to Easthampton. Think I can make you see things differently. He asked me to point out to you that, cut off from them and entirely dependent upon my twenty dollar a week salary you'll soon become restless and unhappy. That our marriage is doomed to failure."

"And what did you say?"

"Not very much. Told him he could talk it over with you if he dared to, but that I wouldn't try to change your mind because you seemed perfectly happy with things as they are. Then he offered me money if I would consent to give up the thought of marrying you. If he'd been anyone but your father I'd have kicked him down the stairs. He pushed this into my hand as he left."

Len took from his pocket the small folded paper, passed it over the table to Grace, busied himself coclusion is always the same. We love each other. Somehow nothing seems to matter but that. And nothing in the universe, I'm sure, can change us."

"Nothing can change us," Len said.

"Nothing in the universe, Rollins?" The words were clipped, decisive, confident. "Not even—thirty thousand?"

"Nothing!" Hoarse, vibrant, threatening.

But Dan Worthington was undaunted. Len watched, held speechless and immovable, fascinated, as he watched the older man's pen slide quickly over the check book. Without emotion Dan Worthington tore out the check, folded it and thrust it into Len's hand. Then he turned quickly and, disdaining the elevator, disappeared down the stairs.

Len laughed. Why, it was just like the movies. Yet here it was happening to him in real life. He could see the tabloid headlines: "Wealthy Father Buys Daughter From Former Tennis Star"—"Tennis Ace Sells Fiancee to Father."

Then anger transcended all else; anger that made him feel like lashing out, hurting, maiming, killing. He was glad Dan Worthington had gone.

Should he rip the check to shreds or first show it to Grace? He decided almost instantly to show it. He opened the folded white paper, looked at it for a long time. A tremor raced through his body, shaking it as a sudden draught causes a chill. The check was for fifty thousand dollars.

At dinner that evening in an uptown restaurant Len said: "Bet you can't guess who was in to see me this afternoon."

"Who?" The smile she attempted was thin. "Father?"

"Yes."

lighting a cigarette so that he would not embarrass her as she opened it.

"Len!"

"They must want you back an awful lot," he said.

She answered softly: "You could have had all this money. But instead—"

He took the check from her hands, tore it in half, then into small pieces. These he put into his pocket.

"When we get back to the hotel," he said, "we'll put them in an envelope and return them. Now let's go to the movies."

Hard, driving rain slanted down as the cab rolled to a stop before the church. Grace raised her eyes to Len. "This is the last chance you'll have to kiss me as a single woman, Len. All I ask is that you will always keep me as happy as I am now. Remember, darling, you're all I have. Never, never stop loving me."

He kissed her, held her close, felt her heart beating against his. "I'll always love you," he said quietly. "Always."

To Len the minister's words formed a series of meaningless phrases. Occasionally he heard something reminiscent of other weddings he had attended. But for the most part the kindly clergyman's voice was only a vague and nebulous chant which would make Grace his wife, and him her husband.

But of Grace at his side he was acutely conscious. Conscious of the soft, irregular rise and fall of her breasts; her shoulder touching his arm; the faint aroma of the small bouquet; the perfume of her hair. Grace's hand found his as they rose to their feet. He kissed her. And he realized that those two kisses—the one in the taxi and this one here in the church—were probably the most important ones of his life. He had arrived at the church free, a boy, he was leaving as a man, with all a man's responsibilities. A wife to look after, a home to maintain, perhaps in time children.

Side by side they made their way up the aisle. She was trembling. But the trembling ceased as they reached the vestibule. The taxi was waiting. They ran again quickly through the driving rain, this time from the comfort and safety of the church to that of the interior of the cab. Thunder growled and lightning reached down toward them. But they just laughed.

A little later the car stopped before the building which housed their thus-far uninhabited apartment. Len paid the driver. They walked through the hall and up three flights of stairs. The door closed behind them. They were in their new home. Grace said, "Well, we've done it, darling. We're now married!"

He nodded, smiled, could think of no reply but to take her in his arms. She responded to his kiss as she never had before. Her body seemed to flow into his. He could feel her trembling, but could not control himself. Her arms were about his neck, her lips warm and moist against his, her body soft and yielding. "How I love you, Len!" she breathed. "So much. So terribly much it hurts—way deep down in me somewhere."

His hands, though he was unaware of it, were gripping her bare arms, his lips were brushing hers. He drew her still closer to him. There was a deep roaring in his ears, as if of the sea. Her breath came sobbingly.

The rain continued to beat against the windows.

Len was halfway through lunch in the late autumn when two young men entered, big coats belted about their bodies. One was short and slim. They recognized him even as breathlessly, happily, he recognized them. Frank Wheatley and Don Clark!

"Get the Feel of That Wheel—There's No Other Tractor Made That Handles Easier Than a JOHN DEERE."

YOU'LL DO BETTER WORK AND FEEL FRESH AT THE END OF THE DAY

YOU don't have to put up with the hard, disagreeable job of handling a horse-drawn cultivator—no, sir, not as long as we're selling easy-steering, accurately-controlled John Deere General Purpose Tractors, and the integral equipment that's made for them.

A John Deere has to "toe the mark" even when operating in extremely rough conditions, because the irreversible worm and gear won't let it get out of line—you couldn't get backlash and whip of the wheel if you tried.

When you drive a John Deere down the rows, you'll know what we mean by effortless steering, easy dodging.

You'll get this same easy steering in a John Deere for years to come because, should any wear occur after long usage, a simple adjustment enables you to take care of that.

EDUCATION — INFORMAL

One day 100 years ago, in East Poutney, Vermont, an event happened that has a big effect on your life. No one paid any attention to the event then, but it was destined to have a profound effect on the history of this nation. What was it? Just this:

A fifteen-year-old boy went into a newspaper plant and applied for a job. He was the most unlikely looking specimen of farm boy that had ever wandered across a newspaper threshold. He wore crude homespun, his trousers were far too short, his coat was shapeless, on his head was something that vaguely resembled a hat, but on his feet were no socks. His hair was a peculiar pinkish blond. In fact, he looked more like a stage character than like a real boy.

"I hear you need a boy to learn the printing trade," said the grotesque-looking creature.

The publisher looked him over. Sure, he needed a boy, but this greenhorn—no, no, he wouldn't do. Instead of hurting the boy's feelings, however, he thought it would be easier to let the boy discover for himself that he was not fitted for newspaper work. So he asked about his education.

"My parents were poor, and I got to go to school hardly at all," the boy answered frankly. "But I've tried to make up for it by reading and studying every moment I could get."

The publisher decided to ask some questions which would settle the matter in the youngster's mind. He was a member of the school board, and was accustomed to quizzing students. So he began firing questions at the green boy.

To his surprise the boy answered the first one correctly. He got the second one right, too. The publisher tried him on history, geography, current events, and even politics. The boy had correct answers; and on the political questions he had clear-cut opinions. The pitying smile faded from the face of the publisher. "How did you get all this information?" he asked the boy.

edited, waiting for it to come off the press to read his opinion on some current topic. One of his sentences became famous. It was "Go West, young man."

Horace Greeley was denied a formal education, but he made up for it by reading and studying; by trying to evaluate the problems of the day. Don't worry if you haven't a college education. The important thing is to make the best of your time and opportunity. Learn something every day. Don't merely read. Study! Do this and you will make up for lack of a college education.

IF BRITAIN SHOULD FALL

The pattern of Hitler's projected world revolution steadily becomes more clear. It is apparent to anyone that this is not a war in the traditional sense, in which Germany, if she wins, will be satisfied with reparations and colonies and economic power. What the Nazis obviously intend is to destroy the British Empire, which for hundreds of years has held the balance of power in Europe and a large part of the rest of the world. And following that, if the Fuhrer's astoundingly frank Mein Kampf is to be believed, the rest of the democracies will receive similar treatment.

Nowadays, the only democracies left save England are the American Republics. And of the American Republics, only the United States possesses sufficient wealth, resources and potential armed strength to be a serious obstacle to the aims of National Socialism. Men who were once close to Hitler have been describing what he plans if and when England falls and the glittering Empire on which the sun never sets crumbles away. They say that Hitler has no intention of launching an immediate attack on the United States and the New World. If he did that, he would be courting disaster.

Finally, if it becomes necessary, Hitler's great army will attack us—depending largely upon internal unrest and disunity to make the job of his soldiers and sailors and airmen comparatively easy. This may sound fantastic, but it seems to be the Nazi plan, and Hitler realizes that if he is to achieve a world revolution unopposed in history, he must have at least one ally. It must be admitted that he has so far been successful in getting them. It was said for years that National Socialism would come a cropper when it ran into its old arch foe, communism. But today German-Russian relations are apparently of the best, and Soviet spokesmen have been denouncing the U. S. and England and praising the Reich. Italy was a world war ally—today she is Hitler's partner, and Fascist authorities have been extremely outspoken concerning Axis plans for dismembering England and giving the U. S. a dose of harsh economic medicine. Last, Japan—also a world war ally—seems to have gone Axis-ward whole hog. The new government is pro-Fascist and 100 per cent anti-Democratic. English rights in the Far East are being ruthlessly abrogated and Britain had to swallow a humiliating pill recently when she agreed to Japanese demands to close the Burma road, principal source of supplies for beleaguered China. And Japan's S. S. relations have rarely been in a worse state.

According to Nipponese authorities, Japan will pursue her "Asia for Asiatics" policy—a policy which is about as cruel and imperlialistic as any in history—whether we like it or not. U. S. protests will not be seriously considered. And say the Japanese sword-wavers, the Land of the Rising Sun will go to war with us if necessary. So far as Europe is concerned Japan is solidly in favor of German-Italian plans and actions.

American naval authorities have lately said that our navy could destroy the Japanese fleet in a few weeks in open warfare. But, if we went to war in the Pacific, the Atlantic would be wide open to the axis, and we would be in no position to adequately fight the Nazi-Fascist economic aggression south of the Rio Grande. That explains why most authorities believe we will do little even if Japan does seize Indo-China, property of totalitarian-ruled France, and the Dutch Indies. Moral pressure is about all we can afford to use right now—and moral pressure gets few results in the world of today.

If Britain is able to survive Hitler's attacks, the picture will be drastically changed. The U. S. as a democracy will not fall if England falls—but the future of democracy will be immeasurably brighter if England lives.

SAVE THE CHILDREN FROM WAR

Two hundred thousand or more British mothers have asked the women of the United States and Canada to take care of their children for them while their homes in Britain are endangered by air raids. Several million American families have offered to take care of the little ones from across the seas. If ways can be found to bring them over, what mother can resist such an appeal on behalf of the children?

Several hundred children from Britain, France and other war-torn nations of Europe have already arrived to safety in America. Our Government has let down the immigration restrictions, requiring only that those who agree to take care of the children from abroad must show that they are able to provide for them. It is not a matter of adopting foreign children, but merely of taking care of them until the danger is over and their families can either follow them here or take them back home.

The chief obstacle to bringing over all the youngsters between five and sixteen whose parents want to send them, and for whom American homes are ready, is that there aren't ships enough. Under our neutrality law, no American ship may enter the ports of a belligerent nation. But there have been exceptions made to that in case of American vessels which lately brought home American citizens who had been stranded abroad. Their errand of mercy was respected by all the belligerents.

Now a group of well-known and influential women has been formed to appeal to Congress for an amendment to the neutrality law to permit "mercy ships" to go across the Atlantic to bring these children over. We have plenty of ships. It is hard to believe that any nation, however brutal, would hesitate to give ships bent on such an errand a clear passage, un molested.

The fear that sending such "mercy ships" would involve the United States in war seems absurd. It should not stand in the way of the amendment of the neutrality law so as to enable Americans to render humanitarian service to the children of a friendly nation.

PATRIOTISM NEEDS ENCOURAGEMENT

Young Americans have been holding youth meetings and declaiming against most of the things in which an older generation was taught to believe. They make so much noise in proportion to their numbers that it frightens many good people who think the nation must be going to the dogs. There would be cause for alarm if such an attitude were general among the youth of the land. It is disturbing enough, to be sure, to have men and women in high places sponsoring such meetings, and so helping them to get newspaper headlines which give a false impression of the extent and the validity of the so-called revolt of the modern youth. But we are of the opinion that most of it is the talk of the sort we have referred to is just "showing off" by kids who enjoy getting attention.

Some of the unpatriotic attitude has been reflected in the schools. It is time we returned to the American tradition of making education in Americanism a basic part of every child's schooling. Madame Horthy, wife of Admiral Horthy, Regent of Hungary has started large-scale winter relief work for the people of her country. She organized the prompt and effective system of distribution it employs and personally supervises every phase of the fund's activities. The relief workers have headquarters in the Royal Palace on Buda's Castle Hill. In this suite of rooms gifts are sorted, packed, and distributed. Not a penny of the donations is spent on the administration of this fund. She has a large staff working with her, most of them volunteers.

Over fifty courses in oil operating methods are now offered by the Texas State Department of Education in co-operation with Texas oil companies to enable Texas oil workers to train themselves for promotion.

Chilly Is The Wind

TODAY and TOMORROW

IMMUNITY provided

There is one place and one place only in the United States where men can say anything they please, true or false, about anyone else, without being called to account. That is the Congress of the United States. The constitution provides for Senators and Representatives which, if printed in a regular newspaper, would give a ground for libel suits. That is not to say that most members of Congress are liars, but many of them say things for political effect that reflect upon the character of people who are unable to come back at the standers.

SUMNER beaten

There's nothing in the Constitution or the law to forbid any member of either House from calling another to account on the floor. That has more than once taken the form of a physical encounter. In recent years the galleries of the House and Senate have not often been treated to the spectacle of seeing their chosen representatives beat each other up or even draw pistols; but that happened often in the early days of the Republic.

BYOIR accused

The ordinary citizen has no recourse at law when he incurs the ill-will of a Senator or a Representative, but sometimes he is smart enough to find a way to turn the tables on his accuser without resorting to the use of violence. That happened only a few weeks ago in the case of my old friend, Carl Byoir. I worked with Carl, an old-time Iowa-born newspaperman, who is in the publicity business now. One of his clients a few years ago was the German National Railways, trying to attract American tourists to Germany. One day last Spring a member of Congress, Representative Wright Patman of Texas, arose on the floor of the House and accused Byoir of being the head of "the greatest espionage and spy system ever organized on the face of the earth."

VINDICATION assured

Carl Byoir didn't take it lying down, however. He had been libelled in a way which kept him from bringing suit. But he could demand an investigation and he did. The Department of Justice is concerned with all allegations of espionage and the G-men were put on the job.

LAWLESSNESS notorious

The disregard of some members of Congress for the rights and privileges of ordinary citizens is notorious in Washington. Most of the Senators and Representatives are well-behaved enough, but there is always a percentage who take advantage of the immunity from arrest which the Congress guarantees them, except for breaches of the peace. A few Congressmen for example pay attention to red lights at the crossings, to speed laws, or to the parking rules. They can't be arrested for such minor infractions, and some regard themselves as above the law in many respects. There was a Congressman from Washington, a few years ago, by the name of Zioncheck, whose public behavior was such that people thought he must be drunk or crazy.

The probability is that he was insane, for he committed suicide by jumping out of a hotel window in Seattle. But tirades on the floor of either House against citizens who have no come-back are not always evidence of insanity.

HITLER'S SECRET WARFARE?

We don't like Hitler in this country and we don't like his socialist form of government; and in fact we are not in love with the German people. They just "don't speak our language"—any more than the Russians do. But we've learned lots from Mr. Hitler in the last year or two and we are taking advantage of his lessons. We are neglecting, however, to do anything much about the most important of them all—the systematic physical development of our youth.

Every day we read expert opinions upon Germany's almost unbelievably quick conquest of Poland, of Belgium and of France. Every reason given has some merit: the overwhelming number of tanks or airplanes; the hampering of the Allies' defense by their own fleeing civilian populations; the Fifth Columnists, etc., etc., and infimum. But seldom a word to explain the terrific driving power of the German soldier.

Up to 1933 and 1934, when the Nazi government took over control, the health of the German people had not recovered from the ravages of the First World War. But from 1934 on, the transition was remarkable. The city children were sent to the farms for a period, following their school graduation. Farm children were sent to the mountains and forests, and the children of the industries were made to leave the factories and work or play in the open country.

The period of enforced "health acquiring" is really very short, but the results have been so startling as to cause comment, by those who have been in the habit of traveling through Germany from time to time.

Is this Hitler's famous "secret weapon"? Is this the reason his armies never seem to tire on their exhausting advances? Possibly so—because in no other recorded period in history has a nation so systematically built up the health of its youth as Germany did prior to this war; and in no other war has an army maintained its advances so consistently and untriflingly as did the German army.

from the day it marched into Belgium, to the day of the surrender of the French army. Our people are waking up to the fact that we are due for a general overhauling if we expect to keep abreast in the current competition among nations. This overhauling will embrace our social life, our economic life and our political life. It will mean a new start in many phases of our existence and to be successful that start will have to be followed through by a succeeding generation of healthy human beings whose thinking machinery has been expanded beyond the Hitler-bug mentality of much of our 1940 youth.

Just as we follow the example of Mr. Hitler and build more tanks and more planes and more guns—so we must meet his health regime with a health regime of our own. Just as he has stamped out subversive influences in Germany—at first with concentration camps and firing squad, then with a health and patriotism program—so must we stamp it out with the more democratic means at our disposal. Health and the common sense that it breeds, would soon put an end to the activities of the pinch-cheeked, goggle-eyed, self-sufficient morons who today exhale the halitosis of Stalinism from the "prosternums" of some of our youth societies.

It angers good Americans to read the left wing vapors of these children—but we shouldn't blame them if we don't start them on the right path. Some of them will just naturally take the wrong detour.

If each generation of "grown-ups" would take a little less trouble over their own comforts, and more over the present and future of the youth which is to succeed it—the decadent Gods which we are learning to follow would soon fall before the onward march of the ambitions born of health and good sense.

Youth is not a "side issue," a "by-product"; it is the biggest issue there is. For the progressive lifting of both mentally and physically—of youth, is the very fundamental of civilization.

TWO SIDES To Every Question

COMPULSORY MILITARY TRAINING

"Compulsory military training" has a sinister sound, but so has "compulsory school attendance" and "compulsory jury duty" and everything else "compulsory." It sounds like dictatorship. But there is a vast difference between regimenting ourselves and being regimented; between self-imposed regimentation in time of danger, and dictatorial regimentation in time of peace.

In moments of danger, a nation's government—no matter what its political nature—is given extraordinary powers. This happened here during our Civil War and during the first World War. It has happened in Britain since this war started. Today the British government has the power of life and death over its people, and if it had not been given these dictatorial powers, it would be in poor condition to carry on the present struggle.

In democratic countries, these powers are given to the government by their people, to be used while an emergency lasts, and to be abandoned when the emergency has passed. It is the purest form of democracy when the people have the power—through their representatives—to restrict and regiment themselves in any way they see fit; and to throw off those restrictions whenever they deem it expedient to do so.

Our country may be facing a physical danger in the future. A preponderance of opinion seems to lean in that direction. But if there is only so much as a tiny suspicion that we may have to defend ourselves, then we should prepare to the utmost and in every branch. The term "compulsory military training" is on many tongues today. Some tremble when they speak of it as though it were some upheaval brought about by a disintegrating world. They shudder at the very idea of American youth having to leave home for a year and go through all the physical discomforts of camp and drill ground.

As a matter of fact, the physical exercise, the broadening social intercourse with other men, the discipline (which young Americans could use very handily), the required mental effort and the many other advantages of military training, are considered by many to be of such tremendous value to growing youth that these parents often stint themselves in order to send their sons to military schools and summer training camps. We spend billions to train the minds of our children. We regiment them and force them to go to school. But we don't spend a nickel to regiment our children in an effort to build up that greatest of all fundamentals—health.

This nation must adopt some sort of compulsory military service in order to bring the armed forces up to the strength required for the war's defense in case of need. This emergency service should not be looked upon as undemocratic or as a hardship, but as a rare opportunity to serve one's country and for another to add to one's storehouse of health, character and experience. France has for many years certainly been a democracy—if ever there was one—and the French looked upon compulsory military training as a perfectly normal, healthy feature of their democratic life.

Just because the interventionists have quit beating the tom tom since France quit fighting, don't mean that they have given up. They are waiting for another opportune moment and if it comes, we may still find ourselves in this war, by the side of Britain—or alone.

Participation will be up to the people; and by now they are talking the trouble to tell Congress what they want. But whether it is war we want, or just plain common preparedness, let us—in the name of all that makes sense—rush out military and naval programs with every ounce of young, old male and female strength.

And let us have men to handle the war machinery which the factories will shortly be turning out in large quantities. It will be powerful machinery, but it won't be very effective without men who know how to handle it. When we do have the combination, however, we won't have war. And don't forget that economic strength and military strength go hand in hand.

Mrs. Dorothy Strouse Keur, who headed an expedition to the Guadalupe Canyon in New Mexico last summer, has continued her work this year but this time in the mountains northwest of Albuquerque. She is interested in excavating sites abandoned by the Navajo Indians in order to find cultural links with the Indians of the southwest.

She has conducted the excavation of ninety-five house sites on a mesa which she located by the old fire pits and then mathematically figured where the stone bases of their simple conical houses should lie. She also uncovered fortifications and caches which had never been mapped before. Her expeditions have the support of the Smithsonian Institution and Columbia University.

A 10-year plan for development of airports was studied Monday at Waco by approximately 75 representatives of Texas cities in a hearing before the State Aeronautics Advisory Committee. The plan is basically for civil aeronautics development, it was explained, but it will tie in with the national defense program. The group studied a map drawn up by Maj. Edward W. Hartzel of Fort Worth, showing the location of proposed ports, the type recommended, and priority in the 10-year plan.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Autrey Celebrate 50th Anniversary

The open house, planned by their daughter, Mrs. Claude R. Viola May Barrow and John William Autrey were married August 14, 1890, in Graham. They have two daughters, Mrs. Huddleston and Mrs. C. M. Langham of Miami, Arizona. The latter was not able to attend the celebration.

Waynez Dyer Married To J. W. Jordan Jr.

Miss Waynez Dyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Dyer of Carlton, and J. W. Jordan Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Jordan, were married in a quiet ceremony Thursday morning, August 8, at the home of Rev. J. M. Hays, pastor of the Carlton Methodist Church, who officiated in the ring ceremony.

The bride wore a wine chiffon velvet suit with a white lace blouse. Her jacket was fashioned with a white lace collar and tiny cuffs, and her accessories were black and wine. Her corsage was of lilies-of-the-valley and maiden-hair.

The bride is a graduate of Carlton High School and of North Texas State Teachers College at Denton. After receiving her degree she taught for two years at San Saba, and for the past two years has taught in the Carlton schools. Mr. Jordan is a graduate of the Carlton High School.

After a wedding trip to Galveston they are at home to their friends at Carlton.

DIETITIAN DECLARES NEW LOAF OF JONES BREAD IS HEALTH CONTRIBUTION

Mrs. Truett Grant, dietitian of Baylor University, declared recently that the new, vitamin-enriched Jones Fine Bread, containing "the life germ of the wheat," is a real health-giving contribution to families in Central Texas.

Presented with the first loaf of the new Jones Fine Bread by George O. Jones, president of the Jones Fine Bread Company, when it was introduced to Central Texas last week, Mrs. Grant told Jones, "Because I am a dietitian by profession, I am pleased to find, in this new Jones Fine Bread, a more delicious, more healthful white bread, which should be of material benefit to the public health—especially the health of children."

Jones explained that the more costly white flour from which his new loaf is baked, gains its richer flavor—and many valuable minerals and vitamins—from the wheat germ now refined directly into the new, special flour. In addition, Jones pointed out that this flour is the only flour which has been enriched with vitamin D by irradiation, under the famous process developed by Dr. Steenbock, of the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation.

"I am glad to make these new health benefits available at no increase in price," Jones stated.

Judge Lovelady MAKES STATEMENT TO THE CITIZENS OF THE 21ST SENATORIAL DISTRICT

Dear Friends: Due to the fact that my political enemies have "ganged up on me" and are now reverting to the age-old custom of "mud slinging" some of my friends have been coming to me and almost demanding that I retaliate by exposing the record of my opponent in order to offset the malicious statements made against me. I cannot, however, make myself say one word about my opponent and if my success in this campaign depends on my exposing my opponent's record then I will have to fail. The only way that I know how to campaign is by placing my platform before you along with my past record as a public servant, and the promise that when elected I will endeavor to serve to the best interests of all the people. I cannot betray the trust that my friends placed in me by voting for me in the first primary, which placed me in this second primary with practically an even vote with my opponent, by lowering myself through criticism of my opponent. It is your privilege to elect me or reject me on my record and merits and not the demerits of my opponent. Trusting that you will remember to vote for me on August 24, I am

Your friend,

The LETTER-BOX

INTERESTING LETTER FROM FORMER TEXANS IN IDAHO

Emmett, Idaho, July 15, 1948.

Dear Editor and Readers:

After an absence of three years we are back again to tell how much we are enjoying the H. N. R. and all of life in general. For some time we had thought of re-subscribing to the "Home Town Paper" but had neglected to do so—but our good old Dad, J. R. Griffiths, there didn't neglect to do it for us. So now we have him to thank for our paper and my, how we do appreciate his thoughtfulness.

We are still in the Valley and after more than three years of this country we still say it's great. There is nothing to beat this Idaho climate and scenery—nor the fruits we raise.

The Winter just past was one of the mildest Idaho has ever known and when we read of the terribly cold weather there in the Sunny South we were happy to be 'way up North—where the climate was warmer. We had an unusual amount of rainfall this Spring and the dry land farmers appreciated it. Coming from old Texas we could be glad for them and with them, although we do not depend on the "rainy seasons" any more.

Our Spring season was ideal for strawberries so we had an unusually nice variety to eat and to preserve. We enjoy this luscious, delicious fruit every Spring—and the irrigation system is perfect for these berries.

We had a June of long, warm days and cool nights (much too short)—roses and ripe cherries. Emmett, as usual, had her cherry festival, June 20. We attended and enjoyed the parade of beautifully decorated floats, band concerts and other attractions. We also attended Payette's Apple Blossom Festival which was celebrated the first week of May. At that time the trees and surrounding country are beautiful and the days just pleasantly warm. It is a festive occasion and all the neighboring cities and schools close their doors to attend. The Governor comes annually to crown the queen, to the accompaniment of a dozen bands—all in colorful uniforms.

As we are only thirty miles from Boise, our capital city, we there often for business and for pleasures and can truthfully say it is one of the cleanest and most beautiful cities in the United States. The capitol building is of especial interest. We were happy to be on hand for Idaho's celebration of fifty years of Statehood, and she has made wonderful progress in those fifty years.

We have many friends here—from many of the 48 States, some from Canada and others from across—but all Americans! They come from every walk of life—some desirous of fruit and others of work—many of them just Idahoans but most of them grand people. We have had first-hand information on how the rest of this old U. S. lives and we have learned that people are the same the world over. Several races are represented here, too. Also our neighborhood offers a wide selection of religions and a church for each. The Mormon religion seems to be spreading rapidly as new churches and temples are going up in many towns not represented before.

We have just finished harvesting apples and the packing plants and dryers have been running day and night. Our producer has his own plants and evaporators and ships many cars of fruit to the East and South. The prune harvest begins the latter part of August and runs well into September—then there's no delay in to the apples which lasts through the Winter. We have been fortunate in having our job last through these years and hope to continue. As foremen we've had long hours and responsibilities—but there are advantages, too.

The Idaho Sheep King lives near Emmett—so you see this is a sheep country, too. The mountains are the sheep men's paradise. It is interesting to see the shepherds and trained dogs taking the bands up in the Spring time—always followed by the faithful pack mules. These mules carry all camping provisions and follow the bands without a driver or even a halter. This Fall we will watch for these huge bands to return for the Winter months—the shearing and then Springtime again.

This December will be time for our every-two-year visit to Texas, but we are wondering if we shall make it. We have a lad entering school this Fall and he must have his chance. Too, our responsibilities have increased in our work so that we may not be able to get away. But anyway we get the Texas fever too often to ignore it and although Idaho has given us health and all the necessities of life we still have a longing to live somewhere nearer those we love most.

Good luck to the Hico News Review and its readers.
MR. AND MRS. H. A. GRIFFITHS AND SONS.

Six Inch Sermon

REV. ROBERT H. HARPER

God's Care of His People.
Lesson for August 18: Psalm 23.
Golden Text: Psalm 23: 1.

Notwithstanding the appalling demonstration of the war machine's might, we find in David an example of the fact that "the pen is mightier than the sword". The kingdom of David the warrior long ago passed away, while his Psalms have been the fit language of devotion for believers in all ages.

A current magazine carries a picture of Indian boys leading their flocks to scant pasturage, just as did shepherds of Israel over 3,000 years ago. Jesus, in calling himself the Good Shepherd, indicates that the ancient shepherd knew all his sheep and called each by name. He would risk his life for his sheep. He is a simple yet beautiful symbol of the heavenly Father.

David wrote of pleasant hours in green pastures and beside still waters. When changes came, he feared no evil and walked through the valley of the shadow of the rod and staff of God comforted him.

God's people are happy, not because of what they have, but because of what they are. They are not promised release from the ills of life. A great thing is a fearless heart. They who follow the Good Shepherd will fear no evil. And they will walk through the valley of shadows. Though a dark valley, it is not strewn with the forms of the saints. Trusting in God, they pass beyond, to the light.

In Psalm 23 the poet wrote out of his own experience. Though he walked through many valleys of shadow ere he exchanged his shepherd's crook for a sceptre and established a great kingdom, he came to the assurance that goodness and mercy would follow him all the days of his life. And the best thing he has left is the world is the promise of an untroubled heart to those who walk ever in the light—in the shadow of the Almighty.

EVERY ONE FILLED WITH PLEASANT MEMORIES OF OUR ASSOCIATIONS WITH YOU

Twelve years ago we started out to give you the kind of service that we believed you wanted. Now, after a dozen years in the same location, we think we have accomplished that aim, and look back over those years of pleasant memories with a certain degree of satisfaction.

Changes in automobiles have made servicing them a science, and we can conscientiously say that we have made an honest endeavor to keep in step with these changes, improving our service and equipment each year when it would have been easier to leave things as they were.

Now, on the occasion of our twelfth anniversary, we want to thank our friends for the part they have played in our success. If we have pleased you, we are happy!
