Has Texas really had more than six flags? How has the relationship of rural and urban population changed since 1920?

New census figures on population, manufacturing, agriculture, wholesale and retail trade and service businesses are included.

It's Great to Know Folks says Houston Gate, traveling representative of a paper company with offices in Fort Worth.

Some people boast of having lived for years next door to neighbors without exchanging more than a formal how-do-you-do.

Country folks are wiser and more natural in this matter. They know they must depend upon their neighbors.

Perhaps Chesterton is right. A month's forced acquaintance with our neighbors, a heart-to-heart knowledge of their wants, necessities, sufferings, joys, dreams, hopes and fears would be the most tremendous and thrilling experience of our lives.

Unless we know our neighbors, know their smiles, their tears, what they think of current events, what they eat for breakfast, how they manage their wives and husbands, how they train their children, if we don't know all these and many more things about our neighbors, and if they don't know as much about us, we have missed a big part of life.

It's great to know folks—even plain folks—and to be one of them. He who stands aloof separates himself from a world of joy.

Local Organization On Defense Savings Continuing Efforts

Austin, June 18.—The county and local organizations of the Defense Savings Staff in Texas continue their work with many innovations that are getting excellent results.

Chairman Lowell Lafferty of the Tarrant County Committee reports that Craig Wood, winner of the American Open Golf Tournament recently held at Fort Worth's Colonial Golf Club, displayed the fine American spirit of today by investing a substantial portion of his prize money in Defense Bonds.

Jefferson County Chairman A. E. Weaver reported that full hour's radio program was put on one Sunday afternoon by that county's three radio stations under the direction of Beaumont Chairman R. F. DuBois.

The Fort Worth National Bank is featuring Defense Bonds and Savings Stamps exclusively in the plugs that accompany their giving the correct time for their audience to some 15,000 daily inquirers.

Hico Youth Hikes With Marines On Regimental Test

SAN DIEGO, Calif., June 16.—During a test of the physical stamina of troops on a practice march over the trails of California, Private Robert Q. Anderson of Hico, Texas, took part in the 150-mile hike made by the Eighth Regiment of U. S. Marines.

The object of the march was to acquaint the Marines with the conditions they would be required to meet under campaign conditions, and every phase of a mass movement of troops was worked out in detail.

Marches of from 15 to 15 miles a day were made for a 12-day period, while armored cars screened the front and flanks of troops to prevent an imaginary enemy force from interrupting the planned schedule.

Signal companies kept the regiment in touch with the armored cars and airplanes, while combat engineers repaired and maintained bridges and roads. They also prepared camp sites and provided a water supply for the overnight stops.

Approximately 2,000 officers and men of the Eighth covered most of the "back country" of San Diego, including a number of lake districts as well as mountainous regions. In what proved to be a highly successful field maneuver which gave ample proof of the fitness of the men.

Erath Farmers Market Busy

Erath County's 1941 fruit season now is under way, with early peaches and plums being marketed. The offices of the Stephenville Chamber of Commerce and the Erath County agricultural agent, located in the basement of the courthouse, again will cooperate with both growers and buyers by registering those who turn in their names, types of fruit grown, and ripening dates.

The farmers' market shed, two blocks east of the square of the Fort Worth highway, again is operating a variety type of fruit and vegetables are offered to the public by growers.

Second Call for Youths For Military Training; Must Register July 1st

State Director of Selective Service, General J. Watt Page, in announcing the second registration of young men eligible for military training on July 1, said today that local boards and their assistants would handle the registration in most sections of the State.

General Page added, however, that additional assistance will be required in some of the densely populated sections, and that all local boards are authorized to enlist and accept, if necessary, any voluntary assistance in handling their registration problems. He said:

"Most of the local organizations, as well as individuals who assisted in the first registration last October have volunteered their services for the second registration. Texas has been fortunate in the patriotic response of both organizations and individuals in this connection."

General Page emphasized that "all local boards are authorized to make their own arrangements for registration, and permission or approval from State Headquarters in this instance will not be necessary."

Many of the counties having more than one local board will arrange for joint registration at some central point, he said. Other counties having more than one local board, but each board having a well-defined geographical area within the county, will provide separate registration places.

New forms are being sent to all local boards since slight changes have been made in the procedure since the first registration last fall.

General Page indicated that there would be approximately 65,000 men registered in Texas on July 1. Registration will be conducted between the hours of 7:00 a. m. and 9:00 p. m. he said.

Civilian Pilots to Train This Summer At Tarleton College

STEPHENVILLE, June 19.—John Tarleton Agricultural College was again selected by the Civilian Aeronautics Administration as one of the institutions to instruct civilian pilots during the summer semester, E. A. Blanchard, Tarleton professor in charge of the Civilian Pilots Training Course, announced Tuesday.

Blanchard declared that he had just received a contract authorizing the summer teaching of the course and providing that it should begin on June 21 and terminate on September 17.

Blanchard will interview prospective students this week. These young men must be nineteen years of age, and have one year of college, and be able to pass a physical examination. The cost for the entire course is $12.50 which includes insurance and medical fee.

"Fellows," Blanchard said, "who are in the draft age will be deferred from military training while in this flight program and are subject to enter the U. S. Army Air Corps at $75.00 per month with all expenses paid upon completing the course. Any young man interested in primary flight training should contact me immediately."

Upon completion of the course in September, students will be issued a certificate of aeronautical knowledge and a private pilot's license.

The ROAD to BAGDAD

CHAPTER IV

SYNOPSIS
On board the Orizaba, Camilla Dean, beautiful American girl, has many admirers but is especially interested in Ronald Barker who comes on board at Marseilles. He is half American, educated at Oxford and interested in the Palestine situation. When Camilla discovers that he is also El Kerak, an Oriental Robin Hood in the East, she seals her promise of secrecy with a kiss. That night she and other voyagers are roused by the sound of shots through Barker's window. The captain questions passengers for alibis. Barker explains he had been warned of danger and had taken precautions. He was lying on his lounge. The would-be assassin had aimed at his bed.

"Have you any suggestions to offer which might lead to the criminal?"

"No, sir. None."
"You received a wireless message yesterday, didn't you, a message which contained the words 'dog' and 'Saguache'?"

"I did."
"Would you mind translating?"
"Not at all. Saguache was the name of the man who sent the message. The word 'dog' is just a symbol. It clarified my plans of operation for my visit to the Tigris where a certain moon-shaped like the head of a dog was to guide me."
"All right, Mr. Serrano. Will you hold yourself in readiness to help me in this investigation by answering further questions, if necessary?"

"Of course, sir."

"Mr. Mark Aronberg."

A tall young man with a long nose and pale face stood up beside the captain's desk. He had a husky voice and regarded his inquirer with heavily lidded eyes.
"You were on a deck last night just after one o'clock?"
"Yes, sir. I had been sitting aft by the smoking room listening to Mr. McManus, singing in the bar."

"Oh! Was anyone with you?"

"Yes, Mr. David Levinstein."

"Did you hear any shots?"

"Yes, sir. Two or three shots very fast, just as we went down to E deck to go to bed."

"Did you pass anyone on the stairway to E deck?"

"No, sir. I saw nobody until I came up to the saloon and joined the rest of the passengers."

"Did you ever hear of Mr. Barker before?"

"Not until he came aboard at Marseilles."

Mr. Levinstein confirmed his friend in every particular. They were traveling together. Their destination was Haifa.

Near the door a man got up. He was tall, his hair tightly curled and auburn, his complexion the color of a horse-chestnut and polished as highly.

"You are an Egyptian?"

"I am. My grandfather was a cousin of the late Khedive."

"Good enough credentials, Mr. Daoud."

"You know of Mr. Barker?"

"Of course. Who in Cairo does not?"

"Mr. Daoud," Simpson went on, "a wireless message came to this ship after we left Marseilles. It was in code. Here is the message. The wireless operator thought it was intended for you."

Mr. Daoud took the paper and glanced at it. "Yes, I saw it. Why should he think it was for me? My name is not Mohammed Ali."

"You can sit down, Mr. Daoud."

After a few more perfunctory questions of Slim McManus and Michael Gay, Captain Simpson dismissed all of his visitors except Camilla and Ronald Barker. "Was it possible for you to recognize any of these men, Miss Dean, by their appearance of voices?"

"Not their appearance certainly. It was too dark. I seemed to recall certain tones of voices, but I couldn't attempt to identify them."

"Mr. Barker, could you say that any of these men bore a resemblance to the man you fired at?"

"No, I couldn't, sir."

On the deck outside Camilla said to her companion, "Mr. Barker—"

"Ronnie," he corrected.

She flushed prettily. "Did you tell Captain Simpson of your theories in regard to those wireless messages?"

"There was no need to. I'm already in wireless communication with Cairo and London. I've found out what I wanted to know. By this time James Robinson of Harwich Crescent is watched by Scotland Yard."

Camilla walked rapidly aft because she didn't want any talk that would recall their intimate moment last night. Everything was different in the garish sunlight of the morning. But his long stride caught up with her before she had gone

"I'm going to trust you with my secret—with my reputation—possibly my life," he told her.

"Please don't go," she heard him say. "I still need your help."

She paused. His eyes, she discovered, were a bright blue as if accustomed to reflecting the sky, and there was an uncompromising frankness in them. "If you're not bored, you can still help me."

Ronald Barker and Camilla were quite alone on the upper deck.

"What is it you want me to do, darling?" she asked him impudently.

"Yesterday morning you and I were just shipboard acquaintances. Last night you placed me under lasting obligations. We swore an eternal friendship. Do you still believe in that?"

"Yes, I do."

He lighted his cigarette. He lowered his voice as he came closer to her. "I'm going to trust you with my secret—with my reputation—possibly with my life. I hope you're not frightened."

"No."

"It's just this, Joseph Asad, whose friendship you made on the Atlantic crossing from New York, is not Joseph Asad, but Hassan Isar, a man known throughout the Near East for his devotion to the Moslem movement. He is the son of one of the most important sheiks in all Arabia, Arif-el-Arif, who is one of the richest men in Damascus. Joseph Asad has told you probably that he was in New York to attend to his business. But Hassan Isar had another more important object in going to America. He went to Washington to visit two of the European embassies where he spent a great deal of time. He was after both money and influence for his cause, which means nothing less than an attempt to end the British mandate in Palestine."

"That's all very surprising and interesting."

"He thinks I don't know this. I have reason to believe that Hassan Isar has had something to do with the escape of Osman Khalil from the Mosque of Omar in Jerusalem. It was Osman Khalil who incited the terrorism in Palestine, the riots against the Jews and against the British who were trying to protect them. That's why we locked him up. It all happened when Asad was in America."

"Very clever. Nobody would suspect him."

"The Dome of the Rock is just like a rabbit warren. Osman Khalil went past the guards like a wraith and disappeared—vanished like smoke in the desert."

"He showed suddenly as a thought came to her. "Do you think he knows who did the shooting?"

"Who did it?"

"I can't accuse anyone. When I do he'll have to be put in the brig until I'm safe ashore."

"Stephanov?"

He smiled. "You're not guessing so well today. Try and think of the wireless message that began with the word 'dog.'"

"And what of that?"

She gasped in amazement. "Serrano?"

He nodded. "I've had word about him from the Home Office. His profession of Assyriology is just a blind, a hobby. I'm trying to find out if he knows Hassan Isar. He's really a dangerous anarchist and they had a lot of trouble getting him out of England. So you see for the present I'm going to watch Serrano. I'm going to leave Asad to you."

"To me?"

"Don't you appreciate the flattery of this assignment? Every agent of the British government in Palestine is looking for Osman Khalil. They've gone over Palestine and Syria and they can't find him. He has moved on into Arabia. Do you follow me?"

She smiled. "I think I'm a little ahead of you. You want me to find out how Hassan Isar where Osman Khalil is hiding."

"If it isn't too much trouble—" he spoke in the easy tones of one thanking another for the light of a cigarette.

"No trouble at all," she said. "You just want me to vamp the cleverest man in Asia so that he'll tell me what you want to know. Have you thought how distasteful this commission might be to me if I really cared—for you. Or do you think my caring for you ought to be all the more reason why I should do what you want?"

"Oh, I say, Camilla..."

But she had fled down the companion ladder and away from him.

Mrs. Trimble had reached the age when she had to try very hard to hold her men by her rather sumptuous charms when younger ladies matched their wits with hers. From the vantage point of her seat beside Ronald Barker at the captain's table Kitty Trimble had a chance to study him at close range and she was not disappointed.

But Barker, treating her with the politeness he might have given a maiden aunt, ignored her advances and suddenly devoted himself to Josephine Holloway, who seemed to have displaced her cousin Camilla in his regard.

Of course, Kitty Trimble couldn't understand this. Had she slipped so far that a man of the world like Ronald Barker who knew something of women should choose a Quakerish little ingenue like Josie Holloway in preference to her own wily and palpable charms? By the time the ship had passed the snow-capped Apennines and headed later out of Naples she was smoldering like Vesuvius but giving no sign. To Josie Holloway she showed a placid front while she watched Camilla and Asad, always together now, carrying on what seemed to be a very desperate flirtation up and down the decks, in the smoking room over cocktails, to which Asad did not even invite her.

Joseph had the reputation of being very susceptible to women. Kitty Trimble said.

"Why do you say that?"

"Oh, nothing. Just to make conversation. There are things that can't be explained." She paused. "I was just thinking of Ronald Barker. Do you know anything about him?"

"Just that he is an agent of the British government with a roving commission in Egypt and Palestine."

"That shouldn't make Joseph very fond of him."

"They are both playing a game."

"In which Camilla Dean has a part?"

"Having dropped her poison in his ear, she gave a laugh, and turned to go in to dress for dinner."

Stromboli was putting on a show as they approached the Straits of Messina, and Camilla and Asad stood at the rail watching the cone of rock shoot its fireworks into the plume of smoke above. Apparently their relationship had grown closer with the hours, closer than Stephanov had dreamed of. For Asad had now seemingly fallen again completely under the spell of Camilla's attractions.

Why had she undertaken this job? In a moment of pique? Or hadn't it been really a generous response to Ronald Barker's confidence in her, a spirit of adventure in a game that had something more than a mere shipboard flirtation as an object—the fate of a nation perhaps. A little of each, she admitted, added to a purely feminine taste for conquest.

Hico Graduate Gets Diploma From Ft. Worth Hospital

Miss Naomi Jones, who was graduated from Hico High School in 1937, received her diploma recently from the Harris Memorial Methodist Hospital School of Nursing in Fort Worth, where she finished the three years' course last February. The attractive young nurse had been on duty in Graham since completing her school work.

The graduating exercises were held at the First Methodist Church and Dr. J. R. Score gave the class address before a group of 35 young nurses ready to go out into lives of noble service.

Miss Jones has many friends and former classmates in and near Hico who will be glad to learn of her receiving the diploma and of her success since completion of her studies.

Mrs. W. C. Rogers visited in Hico last week as a guest of Mrs. Minnie Sikes and son Cecil, and Mrs. R. Wright.

Mrs. Frost returned home Sunday after spending a week with relatives. Her daughter, Miss Charlotte Frost, accompanied her home.

Don't Take Chances With Your Poultry

Many farmers and poultry raisers have learned in recent years that much of the expense in poultry raising lies in the dead or diseased hens—and all agree that it is easier to protect their poultry by the proper remedies than it is to buy and raise others to take the place of those lost.

Our stock of remedies is one of the most complete in this section and we handle only the best and safest remedies so that you may feel fully secure in giving them to your poultry.

GAS-LESS SUNDAYS

To the people in Hico who like to go motoring on Sunday or who use Sunday as a day to drive out to see relatives and friends, it would be a definite sacrifice to leave the car in the garage all day.

There are many of us who find Sunday driving one of the relaxing pleasures of the week that we may look forward to.

There are others who find it inconvenient to leave their businesses during the week to spend the day with relatives or friends.

During the emergency now confronting us, it is necessary that most of us stick to our jobs, and as most of us work on a six-day week, Sunday is the only day we may drive without missing work.

As far as the people of Hico are concerned, gas-less Sundays would be taken in stride and there would be little complaining. But the large group of local citizens who happen to be in the gasoline business, running service and gasoline stations, would suffer real hardship if their most prosperous business day was taken away from them.

The purpose of gas-less Sundays would be to reduce our consumption of gasoline and oil and that means taking dollars out of the pockets of the gasoline dealers. They, too, must be considered in this all-important question.

We believe that some other means may be found as a solution to this problem and hope that such may be the case.

Any action which penalizes one group without affecting others is always distasteful to Americans. We know that one group after another, during the present emergency, will be called upon to sacrifice, but we hope that none will be asked to do so unnecessarily.

STILL ANALYZING THE U. S. OF 1940

The U. S. Bureau of Census is still compiling those facts which everyone in Hico, as well as in every home throughout the nation, gave to the census-taker some months ago.

For some time we have known what they found Hico's population to be. We also have seen a lot of other information on incomes, population by age groups, foreign population and so on. But there's really just the beginning.

It must be rather a thankless job, handling the census. For after completing the tremendous task of tabulating all sorts of figures on the whole country, when it is all done our first reaction is apt to be, "That's old stuff. Things have changed since then."

That is particularly true in relation to the 1940 census. Because of defense there have been great shifts in population and great changes in the unemployment situation.

The men in the Census Bureau realize all that, but they pay no attention. Their sole job is to give an accurate detailed picture of the United States of 1940, and the many changes which have taken place since then must be entirely ignored.

This Week IN WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C.—(NWNS)—The rebellion of vital groups in the labor army against their own union leaders, against government mediation and against law enforcement agencies, has overshadowed everything else in Washington as it becomes increasingly evident that Communist and anti-American groups have a strong grip on defense industries.

Since the President's speech to the nation, in which he said that industrial disputes must be settled "without stoppage of work," there have been more strikes started than before his speech, serving a challenge to him to do something about it. With many labor groups getting out of hand, and new strikes developing in our most necessary defense industries, plant seizures and the use of the army to force men to work can be expected until the situation is in hand.

The public began demanding immediate government intervention in the strike situation when C. I. O. strikers at the North American Aviation company's California plant left their national leaders by refusing to work while negotiations were being conducted. President Roosevelt's secretary saying, "The armed forces will not break our strike. Bombers can't be made with bayonets." This defiance of the President by a union in a company which has $200,000,000 in defense orders, was considered by most commentators to be "a last straw" and an invitation for the government to use every power at its command to curb such unruliness.

The danger of the situation was made glaringly apparent when the strikers bowed their union's national director, Richard Frankenstein, and refused to listen to his pleas to continue working. Mr. Frankenstein then admitted that "the vicious underhand maneuvering of the Communist party was apparent in the strike." Declaring the strike to be a "wildcat strike" opposed by C. I. O. leaders, Mr. Frankenstein expressed the feeling of most officials here when he told the strikers, "Your action today has made one man the happiest in the world—that is Hitler."

While strikes are seriously disrupting defense production, capital experts are insisting that our production must be speeded up to a point far above previous goals if we hope to compete with the present $3,000,000,000 a month production schedule now in force in Nazi Germany. Following testimony to this effect before the senate defense committee, Senator Connally of that committee commented: "All we are doing is advertising to Germany and the world that we are in a mess on this program. What we need is fewer statistics and more action."

There has been considerable heated debate over the administration's bill which would give the President the right to seize all kinds of property, either personal or industrial plants, and pay for them what he considered a fair price. Even the President himself expressed surprise over the drastic terms of the bill, saying that he had not read the measure as prepared by the war department. He seemed to agree that some limitation should be put on the seizure of necessary property, saying that he had had no thought of the government taking permanent possession of property, as provided in the bill. Indications are that the bill, with some toning down, will be passed by congress, as are practically all administration-sponsored bills having to do with defense. Passage will give the President more dictatorial powers than have ever been held by any other President, it is generally agreed.

The threat of gas-less Sundays, as made by Secretary of Interior Ickes who has been made czar of the oil industry, has stirred up a good deal of opposition both in Washington and in the state governments. The first reaction of the populace was that it would be glad to use less gas if that would aid defense, but study of the facts showed the supply of gas and oil is plentiful—that the whole problem is one of lack of ships for getting gas and oil to the East coast. State and federal tax experts pointed out that taxes on gasoline have been a leading source of revenue, and a cutting down of gasoline sales would necessitate passage of new revenue-producing measures.

The solution, most congressmen believe, is to build pipelines for carrying oil to the East coast. Two pipelines from Texas, which it is believed could be built in a year, would carry 475,000 barrels a day to the East coast, whereas the reduction in tankers has caused a daily decline of only 200,000 barrels. Thus, even with increased shipping problems, it is believed, the pipelines would keep a plentiful supply flowing to the East.

A lot of guesswork is going on here as to whom the President will appoint to fill the two vacancies on the U. S. Supreme court. The resignation of Charles Evans Hughes, effective July 1, was considered by both New Dealers and anti-New Dealers to be a great loss, but it did not come as a surprise since Mr. Hughes is now in his eightieth year.

HOW 'TO GET A JOB'

Would you like to have the ten best job-getting rules in the world? Of course you would! They have been worked out by the man who has helped more people get jobs than any other person living. He is Sidney W. Edlund, originator of the "Man Marketing Clinic."

- 1. I asked Mr. Edlund to put into short form the very essence of job-getting. Here it is:
1. Develop an interest in work. Ask others about their work, how they have solved office problems. Then you will begin to develop an interest in some special line, and that may become your future work.
2. Decide on the kind of work you want. Analyze your own likes and skills. If there is a psychologist, or vocation counselor, near you, ask him to help you.
3. Dig out your hidden assets. It is not enough to say you have graduated from some school. If you have ever been elected head of a club, or team, tell your prospective employer. It may be evidence that you have qualities of leadership. Don't expect to find all your hidden talents in half an hour. Answer these questions: "What is the best thing I have ever done? What have I done that has attracted the most favorable comments?"
4. Plan a campaign to get the kind of job you want. Make lists of prospects and add to them: write to some, see others in person, get friends to introduce you. Use employment agencies. Leave no stone unturned.
5. Talk in terms of the possible employer. Forget your own problems, and try to show how you can help him solve his. If you are successful at this, you'll get the job. He'll want you as much as you want the job.
6. Be specific about what you want, and about your qualifications. For instance, don't say, "I got advertisements for our school paper." Say, "I got 15 pages of ads, including two national accounts," and show him the magazine.
7. To get attention, be different. An ad appeared in a newspaper calling for a secretary. One girl telegraphed the box number saying that she "believed a secretary's first duty was to conserve an employer's time, and that she would help him sort the replies to his ad." She got the job.
8. Be sincere in your desire to serve well.
9. Enjoy your work. If you enjoy your work, you will do good work.
10. Approach every logical prospect. Get coverage. To get the job you want, you may have to get in touch with 50, or 100, or 1,000 prospects by mail, telephone, telegraph, or by personal calls.

MELTING THE ICEBERG

Do you want to know how to make friends with the man on the other side of the desk? You know how cold he appears. Why! he could snap a ten-penny nail in two. But there's a way to get on his good side. He's probably as eager to be friendly as you are, but it's probably up to you to make the first advance. And it can be done!

- Here are nine specific ways to get on the lee side of icebergs. I took them from a number of "Your Life" magazine. They may be helpful to you:
1. Regard the person you are talking to as more important than your business with him.
2. Take a real interest in the other fellow, his views, his needs, his pleasures, his problems; remain just as interested even though he turns you down.
3. Don't resent snubs, pity them; that makes you bigger than they are, big enough to see behind their masks.
4. Be direct and simple in your approach; don't be clever or meaninglessly polite.
5. Don't waste the time of busy people trying to establish intimacy; express your friendliness without intruding.
6. Never push your own grandiose qualities in the other fellow's face—he will don a mask instantly to hide his unpleasant feelings.
7. Remember there's one human quality shared equally by great and small—a love of sincere appreciation.
8. Rich and exalted people, like less fortunate humans, are more interested in little items of personal pleasure or pain than in vast, remote enterprises.
9. Don't dig or slam the other fellow needlessly; every time you do, you add another layer to his protective mask.

ABOVE the HULLABALOO

By LYTLE HULL Profit Sharing Industry

With increasing production, the profits of industry are growing steadily. Heavier and heavier taxation is cutting into the Net Returns—but still the Net Returns increase.

Labor wants part of this growing Profit, so it "strikes" in order to force the employer to raise its fat-rate wage. These strikes cause delay in the production of defense materials with tragic results to our program of aid to Britain and defense of the Western Hemisphere. Soon the government will step in and take away from worker and employer the freedom to strike or to bargain with each other. Labor will do what it is told to do by the wage it is allotted by government decree. Employer will work for government and not for himself.

This is the natural result of our present industrial system in which the God-made desire for gain creates a contest between the two elements in industry—Employer and Employee. This result has been growing steadily before our eyes for many years. "Labor Troubles," from a small beginning, have grown into the most serious problem in our National Life and today are creating near havoc in the very blood stream of the Nation.

Whether the government wishes to do so or not, it will very soon have to "take over" all essential industry. This does not mean for the duration of the war only—it means for many years thereafter, or until such time as the world has recovered from the desperate sickness which this war will bring down upon the nations of the world.

Internal conflict must of necessity create Dictatorship if it continues long enough and destructively enough. A couple of very apt illustrations are Germany and Italy. Are we going to force our government to take away from us our freedom of action? Or are we going to get at the cause of this sickening disease in our body Politic and cure it at the source?

IMPORTANCE OF HEALTH CARE

The regular visit to the doctor which is an accepted part of your baby's monthly program, and which even the baby seems to enjoy hugely, may mean in later years the difference between abounding health and a constant fight to keep fit. Weaknesses may be detected in time to forestall their development into actual health handicaps, and crippling childhood diseases may be avoided by taking proper preventive steps. Two of these diseases, smallpox and diphtheria, have been almost eradicated through inoculation against them. Whooping cough, which is actually the cause of more deaths in childhood than all other contagious diseases, is gradually yielding to the science of immunization although the method of treatment is not entirely out of the experimental stage as yet. Infantile paralysis is still a dread question mark but since the infecting virus is known the concentration of scientific minds on the problem is bound eventually to relieve childhood of this blight. Moreover, in simplifying the daily health care of your child the doctor's advice is invaluable. He will help you plan a diet which will provide the child with all the food values he needs and yet will burden the foods to which he may be allergic and to which his taste persistently objects. This works in several ways to assure the comfort of both yourself and the baby. For if he gets the foods he should have he will not be easily upset by the occasional things he shouldn't have when circumstances, including grandmothers and dotting aunts, introduce them into his diet. The doctor will also assure you that the plump babies of yesterday were not as a rule as healthy, and certainly not as immune to disease, as your streamlined infant. So you needn't worry if the amount of food your youngster eats doesn't measure up to the quantities of potatoes and gravy his grandfather claims to have consumed. Certainly we do not want anemic children, nor will your doctor allow this to happen! But he will be just as much on the look-out for the dangers of over feeding, which are as real in childhood as in middle age. After the first year and until school age every six months will be often enough for the doctor's check-up of a well child, though one who does not seem to be thriving will need closer attention. Having brought him from infancy, through the pre-school years, to a sturdy school age the doctor will dismiss his charge for all but a yearly examination. But this annual check-up should be continued after he is on his own and no longer your immediate responsibility. For the rest of his life, to be exact.

All WPA Workers Listed Are Available For Private Jobs

WPA District Manager W. H. Beazley today reiterated his reminder to farmers and other private employers that all WPA workers are listed with the Texas State Employment Service and are available for private employment.

WPA workers will be released from projects wherever needed to make farm help available, Beazley declared. "Prospective employers should consult local representatives of the Texas State Employment Service," he explained, "as this is the duly-constituted agency for referring WPA workers and other persons seeking private jobs to employers."

Rolls of the WPA are constantly open to private employers, Beazley emphasized, and no worker who refuses a bona fide offer of employment will be retained by WPA. This regulation is based on the following section of the WPA appropriation act:

"No person in need who refuses a bona fide offer of private or other public employment under reasonable working conditions which pays the prevailing wage for such work shall be employed or retained in employment on works projects under the funds appropriated in this joint resolution for the period such private or other public employment would be available."

Currently employed on WPA projects in this district are 7,414 men and women and an additional 5,712 persons are certified as eligible for WPA employment and are awaiting assignment whenever jobs are available. All of these persons are registered with the Texas State Employment Service and are immediately available to private employers, Beazley stated.

CEREMONY SUNDAY FOR BRIDE AT HOME OF AUNT

Miss Mary Beth Clifton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Clifton of Carlton, became the bride of Mr. M. D. Manning Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Manning of Dublin, Sunday at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Eura Roberts, 510 Bowie Street, Austin, at 3 p. m.

Basil D. Shilling read the ceremony before an improvised altar of white roses, gladioli, carnations and ferns. Tall white candelabra holding white candles were placed at either side of the altar.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held. Serving the guests were Misses Myrl Clifton, sister of the bride, and Fay Manning, sister of the bridegroom.

Following a wedding trip to Houston, New Orleans and points East, the couple will be at home at 4101 Speedway, after June 23. For travelling the bride chose a black net redingote dress with white accessories and a corsage of white rosebuds.

Out-of-town guests for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Clifton of Carlton, Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Manning of Dublin, Misses Myrl Clifton of Carlton and Fay Manning of Dublin, Messrs. James Horace Clifton of Carlton, Billy Floyd Manning of Dublin, and Mrs. Earl Albin and Miss Mary Joe Albin of Comanche—Austin American-Statesman.

Elaborate Program For Possum Kingdom Dam Opening July 2

Celebration of initial public power on Possum Kingdom Dam by the Brazos River Transmission Electric Cooperative, which is constructing high voltage transmission lines to furnish 13 REA cooperatives in 26 counties, will be held July 2. It is announced. The program starts at 1:30 with parade from bands from each project headquarters. President Roosevelt will make a 5-minute talk at 2:15 p. m. Harry Stattery, administrator of REA, Dr. Craig, Mr. Settler, C. O. Faulkenwald, Arthur Gerth, and J. R. Cobb will make talks; also General Counsel for REA, Mr. Nickelson, will be there.

Each of the 13 cooperatives has selected a "Mr. and Mrs. Texas Farmer" to represent the cooperatives having the most attendance. The cooperative that has the most attendance will have the honor of having their "Mr. and Mrs. Texas Farmer" have impression of their hands imbedded in the cornerstone, along with those of the administrator, Harry Stattery. The Board of Directors of the Erath County Electric Cooperative Association selected Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Ramage, Route 1, Irodel, Texas, as their "Mr. and Mrs. Texas Farmer." Everyone is urged to go, so that Mr. and Mrs. Ramage may be official representatives of the Brazos River Transmission Electric Cooperative, Inc., and have the imprint of their hands in the corner stone.

Texas to Rank First In USO Units, With More Army Camps

Dallas, June 19.—Texas will rank first in benefactions to be bestowed by the United Service Organizations for National Defense. This is due to the fact that Texas will train more men in the service than will be trained in any other state. In addition to the training camps, Texas ranks high in the distribution of war defense contracts which are adding thousands upon thousands of workers to industrial payrolls, according to E. B. Germany, Dallas, U. S. O. regional chairman for four southwestern states.

Actual construction on service club buildings, has already begun in the North and it is expected that many of them will be built in Texas within the next few months, Germany said. These club buildings will be erected in towns and cities near troop concentration camps and in the districts where large numbers of defense workers are employed.

The first unit of the USO Service Clubs to be started is at Wrightstown, N. J., which is in the heart of defense and military concentration. All clubs are to be staffed by civilian workers under the direction of service organizations sponsored by the USO.

Texas is now driving to raise its quota of $400,000, to cover the first year's operations of the clubs. Three congressional districts have reported complete county organization, and many counties have already reached their designated quotas.

New Station Operator

C. E. Ogle, formerly associated with Ogle Bros., has taken over the Magnolia Station on State Highway 67 east of the business section, and is making arrangements to move the Central Freight Lines agency to the station. He plans to carry ice cold candy and cold drinks in addition to Magnolia products.

In moving his Central agency to the station, Mr. Ogle plans to enlarge and build onto the present building.

Johnny Ogle will take the position vacated by Clifford in Ogle Bros.

To the Editor

Hitchcock, Texas, June 15, 1941.
Mr. Roland Holford, Editor
The Hico News Review.

My Dear Mr. Holford:
I want to correct you on the article you published in your paper concerning my moving to Hitchcock. I did not move. I am only visiting. And I did not leave my home. I rented it by the month. I am going to expect a correction in next week's paper, please.

Very kindly yours,
MRS. GUY O. EAKINS, SR.

BACKWARD AND FORWARD

Hico, Route 5, June 27, 1941.
The Hico News Review:
A long, long time ago, some time after bark began to grow on black oak trees, the human race was distributed over a large part of the earth's surface in comparatively small groups (consult your botany and your anthropology for the exact date). Persons then were like humans now; they had different habits, customs, and environments. Perhaps one group would manage one way while at the same time another group in another locality would do some other way. They (none of them) had any wealth scarcely except their women and children and their hunting grounds.

Some of these groups had strong men who took possession of all the women and children and either killed or drove off all the other men. As their sons became old enough to compete against the "old man" they too were either killed or driven off. There was another type of human groups at the same time. There were no "strong men" among these men. All the men shared in the possession of the women, the children, and the hunting grounds. Perhaps one group practice was for a man and woman to pair off something like geese or pigeons do. That is, they both contributed to the welfare of the family. The man's chief function was to protect the family from outside enemies.

Sometimes war broke out between two groups and sometimes one belligerent was of the first type and the other belligerent was of the second type. How do you suspect one old man would "come out" against one hundred or more men? Maybe he was seven feet, six inches high and weighed four hundred seven in the shade. According to your moral lights, perhaps he was right; he was trying to do the best he could by his family (which consisted of the whole clan or tribe) but he just could not win, right or wrong.

Agas later wealth consisted of considerably more than women and hunting grounds. There were much larger groups of humans. There still were two widely different types of groups. One was an autocratic form, where a comparative few individuals owned and controlled the major portion of the wealth, while the majority possessed very little that they could call their own. They were allowed enough to rear a family and no more. There was another form where every man had somewhere near the same opportunity to own as every other man. War still persisted. (Maybe it was right and maybe not—read your history).

When war occurred between these two types of groups or nations, which do you suspect won in the end? Which had the best morale behind it? We are not talking about right or wrong, as you or I see it. Read your history. Strategy sometimes wins for a time, but remember morale always wins in the final. We said morale—not war hysteria—your history again!

Now comes our own time. The world is divided among a few gigantic, rich and powerful groups or nations of human beings. Wealth consists of much besides women and children. Who owns and controls the major portion of the wealth in this nation, that nation, or any other nation?

We are not saying that it is right or proper or otherwise for them to go to war against each other or that this one or that one or the other one is right or wrong according to my standard or yours or anybody's else, but when the worst comes to the worst, is history going to be a safe guide? If so, shall we be on the winning side? Is our morale superior to some other nation's morale? If so, we are justified in going ahead—according to history. (We said morale, not war hysteria).

Moral: Look backward before you leap forward.
ROY DERRICK.

TEXAS SOUTHWESTERN GAS COMPANY

June 18, 1941

Dear Friends:

More than a million young Americans are now in military training camps. Many local men are included in this number. They have given up good jobs for twenty-one dollars a month . . . comfortable homes for tents . . . personal freedom for rigid army discipline.

These young men are making sacrifices in order that you and I may be protected. Some few of them are, or will become, officers. Most of them, however, necessarily will remain in the ranks, constituting the great democratic army of a great democracy.

Many of these soldiers will be coming home on leave from time to time for short visits. We should greet and honor all of them with as much enthusiasm as if they were Colonels or Generals. There is no place in this new democratic military service for snobishness—no place for worship of high-sounding titles. The private soldier is doing just as much for us as is the high-ranking officer. His sacrifice is, in many instances, even greater. Isn't it up to us to realize this and to let the soldiers know we do realize it?

Sincerely
Albert S. Johnson
President
