

So far as we know, the News Review was the only business institution in Hico that closed last Friday afternoon for the opening of Camp Hood...

Elaborate ceremonies accompanied the opening, but the program started before we got there and we direct our readers to an account of the opening...

Leaving Hico we went through Hamilton at noon to Gatesville, where we hoped to call upon a comrade...

At McGregor we dropped in on Charlie Hall, editor of The Mirror and found him relaxing from acute fatigue...

At Temple we picked up Mrs. Rollie Forgy, and drove through Selton toward Killeen, spying Rollie and Morgan Moon in a large Army mobile unit...

Feeling the need for refreshment, we called upon Eugene Lane in his manager's office at one of the many cantoons...

Coming back through Belton we called upon the Joe Browns, who were also hosts to Geo. Goughly and Dink...

After we had dropped off the former brains of the N. R. back shop and his wife at Temple, Eugene made excellent company on the way back home...

Back home next day we had to do Friday's work and Saturday's too, but felt that the time off had been well spent...

WOMEN IN THE NEWS
BY JANET CUPLER

WOMAN OF THE WEEK: To free more men for active pilot duty the Army Transport Command has acquired a new unit—the Women's Auxiliary Ferrying Squadron. Directing the WAFS will be 28-year-old Mrs. Nancy Harkness Love, wife of Lieut. Col. Robert M. Love of the Transport Command. The daughter of a Hastings, Mich., doctor, Mrs. Love has been flying since she was 16 and has been a pioneer in the organization of student pilots. She received her commercial license in 1936.

GOING OVERSEAS: At the request of Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, four company headquarters units of the WAAC will probably be sent to England this year. Mrs. M. M. Hill introduced in congress at the recommendation of Secretary of War Stimson provide for pay raises for all members of the WAAC.

ONE IN FOUR: According to Paul V. McNutt, director of the War Manpower Commission, one out of every three or four housewives between the ages of 18 and 44 will, by the end of 1943, be employed outside the home in some kind of war work. He also said that one out of every six unemployed women over 18 will probably be similarly employed. In other words, about 5,000,000 more women must go to work.

IN AVIATION: Twelve stewardesses just graduated from the American Airlines training school will be the first to fly between the United States and Mexico when the new service is begun to Mexico City. All speak Spanish and are familiar with Latin American customs. . . . Adeline Gray—in case you're wondering—did successfully complete the first test jump with a nylon parachute.

BY ALL MEANS: A recent WPB release repeats the information that the government does not expect you to give up any kitchen fats or greases you put to good and economical use. The figures issued by the WPA (4 1/2 pounds for city dwellers and 2 1/2 pounds for those living in the country) represent the amount of kitchen grease usually wasted in a year. But if you really need yours, by all means use it.

WOMAN OF THE WEEK: During the first World War a woman who was once called "too old for war work" was the U. S. army's only woman food expert in France. She is Mrs. Caroline King, still known as "Mother King" to the men who ate her famous lemon pie and the ice cream she made from dried milk for a special Fourth of July celebration. Now an author and editor, she says the soldiers of that war will have better food and more of it.

CHILD HEALTH: "Many cities flooded with new workers in defense plants have most inadequate provision for maternal and child-health clinics and public-health nursing service," says Mrs. Clara Savage Littlefield, editor of Parents' Magazine, who urges that special attention be given to these problems during National Baby week, April 27 through May 3.

CANADIAN CORPS: The Canadian women have organized a volunteer army—the Canadian Women's Army corps. After a month's probation members agree to serve "for the duration plus one year." They are paid 95 cents a day. Recruits are called "guppies" and may be asked to perform almost any kind of non-combat duty. Uniforms are furnished by the corps, and make-up is permitted if used sparingly.

STAGE MANAGER: One of four or five successful woman stage managers in the American theater today, Charva Chester currently directs the backstage operations of one of the companies now on tour with the play "Blithe Spirit." She also likes to cook, argue and run her New Jersey farm.

DOODLERS ALL: Like to make queer marks all over your kitchen table? That's probably just "doodling." But if you were an airline hostess, it would be "applied psychology." Speaking before a group of college students in training to be airline hostesses, Prof. E. Richard Schmetler, head of the psychology department at DePaul university, explained that the sketches hostesses draw to help them identify their passengers are not only pardonable but often necessary.

SUNNY SIDE UP: American authorities have announced that they will grant the usual allotment for a wife to members of the A. E. F. who have married Australian girls. . . . Quincy, Mich., will have four woman constables next year. They were the unopposed Republican candidates for their offices.

INNOVATION: THE WAR HAS been opening up an increasing number of careers to women. Now TWA has decided to train college girls for work as stewardesses. Formerly, the airlines employed only trained nurses in this capacity, but nurses are needed for war service. Under the new plan only a minimum of one year of college will be required.

Lost and found columns of Tokio newspapers are crowded these days. Every time an American buys a War Bond, the Japs lose face. Buy your 10% every pay day.

COMMUNITY PUBLIC SERVICE CO.

GOOD LIGHT IS SPEEDING WAR PRODUCTION 24 HOURS A DAY

This Week IN WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C. (NWNS)—Having completed their unofficial summer recess, most members of the senate and house are now back in Washington preparing to cast their votes on taxes, on wage freezing, on farm price stabilization and other vital legislation.

Following the President's "you do it or I will" order in regard to stabilizing wages and farm prices in order to prevent further inflation, both houses of congress are showing how rapidly they can come to an agreement when it seems necessary. The President gave them a deadline of October for handling this situation and it now seems quite definite that by that date the President will have final orders from congress to freeze wages at what they were this summer and to put a parity ceiling on farm prices.

The speed with which congress has acted on this measure stands out by contrast with the stalling which they have done in regard to the tax bill. It is argued that in putting through the largest tax bill in history much time must be consumed to consider the arguments of all interested groups, but it is still the general opinion here that a lot of the delay has been caused by the desire of many congressmen to postpone final action on taxes until after the election.

Months ago the secretary of treasury pleaded for immediate action on taxes so that additional funds could be collected this year, but all talk of new taxes payable this year has now been abandoned. Most of the more recent pressure of the treasury department has been concerned with insisting on larger taxes than congress wanted to enact. It is still questionable whether a tax measure will finally be passed before the election, although some experts here think it will be difficult for congress to postpone final action for six weeks more.

At any rate, the taxes to be paid next year will undoubtedly be staggering as compared with other years and even those people with very low incomes will be required to share in taxes. If the 5 per cent Victory tax goes through, which is just a small part of the present tax bill, everyone earning $12 a week or more will have 5 per cent deducted from wages or salaries, part of which will be considered taxes and part a form of compulsory saving, to be refunded after the war.

As the tax proposals stand at present, a married man with two children and an income of $2,000 will pay a tax of $65. If his income is $2,500, the tax will be $163, if it is $3,000, the tax will be $275, if $4,000 the tax will be $528 and if $5,000 the tax will be $807.

Congress also is expected within the next two months to be asked to pass legislation for inducting youths of 18 and 19 years old into the armed services. Discussing the future selective service situation, Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national selective service director, said, "we can't have a recess in the war until people grow up to be drafted." The young men have proved most valuable to the army, particularly in aviation, and it therefore seems essential to our military leaders that they dip into the under-20 group, since the young men in their early 20s are most all in the armed forces already if they are not exempt because of physical unfitness or their necessity to war production.

General Hershey also said that married men with children would probably be called for military service next year. He pointed out that although he has issued instructions not to break up homes until necessary, there is no law or regulation which prevents the drafting of married men with children.

Pointing out the speed with which men are being mobilized—which is much faster than in the last war—General Hershey said that it may be necessary to mobilize between 10,000,000 and 13,000,000 men. "We will have to come to the realization," he said, "that there are not enough single men, that there are not enough married men without children" to mobilize such a force. "The supply of men is limited," he said, "even when you consider the 18 to 50 age group, because we are rejecting about 33 per cent of those called for duty."

A general tightening up of those things which are limiting production is also expected to be pushed rapidly. Donald Nelson, head of the War Production board, said that production of war supplies has increased 330 per cent since Pearl Harbor, but that even greater production must be speeded in order to turn the tide of battle in our favor. Longer hours of work in production factories, plus the steering of more and more materials into war production can be expected from now on.

The consumer will feel this tightening up as new steps are taken to conserve rubber by wider rationing of gasoline, and as more and more consumer goods become rationed or eliminated. The report of the rubber investigation shows that the rubber situation really is perilous and it appears likely that confiscation of rubber products, including tires, will be necessary unless the public shows a much greater willingness to co-operate than has been demonstrated so far.

THIS AND THAT

By JOE SMITH DYER

In an article in her "Listen World" column, Elsie Robinson addresses herself to Herr Hitler as follows:

"I'm wondering about you tonight, Adolph, and how you feel when you have left the balcony and gone away from the shouting mob into your own bedroom—alone. I wonder what happens to you when you take off your false front and come face to face with your real self? Does something catch up with you and grab you by the throat? I wonder if you think of your toppling dreams then and of the dreams you had of world power during your frustrated youth? We can hold off reality by day but when night comes something happens. Our front falls and we face the truth that we have been hiding all day. Do you face that truth when you sleep at night? One time you were poor and now, do you think of the countless poor that you have deprived of their last ounce of bread? Do you see the dead wagons of Greece carting off their daily toll of skeletons—bones covered with tattered skin? Do you see your own German peasants staring with sunken eyes after the trucks that have robbed them of their last bit of harvest? One time you were humiliated, Adolph. You had not known that you were unlike other boys. You had never guessed that you were born nameless. Remember when the other boys sneered at you? It was just a beginning because now the whole world is sneering and leering at you. Maybe you crept off and cried as any little boy would cry at cruelty. Do you recall your cries now, Adolph, when you hear the screams of thousands of helpless innocents that you have mutilated and murdered? At night do not their terrified faces circle around your bed? One time, Adolph, I wanted to kill you, I'm different now because I know that a straighter shooter than I will ever be will take care of you in his own good time. Someday you're going to face a reckoning from which no bodyguard or armored car can protect you and you will face it alone. Your struts will avail you nothing then, Adolph, your shrieks and sobs will not be heard or heeded. The world you ravished will have dropped away from you then, Adolph, and you will be alone with just God and your millions of dead! And, even as badly as I hate you, when that time comes I will pity you."

If you read just one book between now and Christmas let it be Herman Poweridge's "One More River to Cross."

It is a story of all the people who have fought, and still are fighting, for freedom. There are 498 big pages with small print but it's the kind of a book that you wish could just go on forever.

The clock men are going to remember Pearl Harbor right down to the exact minute. Delegates to a convention of watch and clock makers in Reading, Pa., voted to place in their show windows clocks with the hands set at 7:55 o'clock. In each window will be placed a card reading thus:

"This clock is set to remind us of the first shot at Pearl Harbor at 7:55 a. m. on December 7th, 1941. Do not ever forget the time of the crime."

It is safe to say that every patriotic American will always "Remember Pearl Harbor."

Keep your mind on your joys because your woes will make themselves felt often enough.

Follow Your Doctor's Advice

If you went to your doctor and he gave you a bottle of medicine or a package of pills it would probably never occur to you to destroy them the minute you reached home. On the contrary, you would take a dose at the first opportunity and be mighty careful to follow the directions on the label. But suppose that instead of writing a prescription in Latin symbols, the doctor told you in blunt English: "There's nothing organically wrong with you but you do need some exercise and we'll have to make some modifications in your diet." Would you be just as scrupulous about following his orders or would you, as so many do, go out of his office and promptly forget all about them?

It is just as stupid to ignore your physician's instructions as not to exercise, fresh air, diet, more rest or any other rule of hygiene as it would be to pour a bottle of expensive medicine down the sink. The doctor doesn't give advice to hear himself talk. He knows more about your physical requirements than you do. That's why you seek his help.

How in the name of common sense do you expect to feel better if you won't do the things he tells you to do? You complain of headaches, of frequent colds, of being tired, of sleeplessness. You are told exactly what to do to get rid of the trouble and because the remedy doesn't come disguised as a bitter tonic or a sugar coated pill that can be swallowed in an instant, it's too much bother.

Well, if that's your attitude, all I can say is that you certainly deserve to go on feeling miserable.

HOUSE AND HOME

by Mary E. Dague

By MARY E. DAGUE
Author of Sister Mary's Kitchen.

As we live and acquire we seem to need more and more storage space, and certainly it is not put things away if we don't have a place to put 'em.

Often in an old house an arched niche can be let into a wall, making open shelves just deep enough for small books and "objets d'art."

A larger and deeper cupboard can be made by cutting between the studs of the wall. The opening should be the right size to take the completely assembled cupboard with its outside edges flush with the wall.

If necessary a light frame molding or some covering strip can be used to hide the jagged break in the plaster.

Then of course you can always add the hanging and standing cupboards to a room without the benefit of a carpenter.

In a dining room a corner cupboard usually is divided in two sections; the upper part having glass doors and the lower, paneled ones. Frequently, drawers are set between the upper and lower sections.

Occasionally the upper section is left entirely open with an interesting scrolled facing around the shelves.

If a corner cupboard is put in a bedroom for the storage of clothes it's obvious that the doors should be of solid wood panels. Choose a corner cupboard in a bedroom only as a last resort because they are not "roomy."

The success of the cupboard will depend largely upon its finish. The room and its furnishings will govern the style as well as the color of the shelves and linings. You can build one and paint it the color of the woodwork or you can buy one to match the furniture.

When it comes to closets, be sure to have a light put in every one.

The height of the books is important, too. There should be a few in your own closet high enough to hang your long dresses and wraps.

In the downstairs hall closet and in the children's own, the books must be low enough for them to reach. A shelf for hats should be put up for children as well as one for the grown-up members of the family.

A shoe rack fastened on the closet side of the door will keep rubbers and galoshes off the floor.

If the closet is large enough to accommodate a set of low shelves, provide one for each child.

Add "tags and labels" to your shopping list for your next trip to town. Then when you begin to put summer things away for the winter you'll be armed with the wherewithal for marking boxes so you'll know what's in them without opening them.

It's several generations since tiny daisies were explicated as chimney-sweeps but such is infamously today as of yore and all wise house-holders see to its removal. Clear flues from furnace reduce the hazard of chimney blazes to a minimum and with flues out for the season there's no time like the present for cleaning pipes as well as chimneys.

It's a good idea to plan to have a continuous supply of quick maturing crops such as peas and green beans and spinach and the like. The rule is to start each successive row of seed as soon as the last row comes through the ground. This arrangement prevents a lack of fresh vegetables throughout the season and precludes an oversupply at any one time.

As soon as the early peas finish bearing pull up the vines and plant sweet corn in the rows.

Remember that the thinning out of crops is one of the most important duties of the successful gardener. Plants allowed to crowd become soft and spindly and never reach perfection. Frequently more than one thinning is necessary because the first one should be done when the plants are very small. It seldom pays to try to transplant the seedlings of vegetables removed by the process of thinning although if you have vacant spaces in the rows it's a good idea to fill them up with the thinnings.

The second thinning of beets usually provides greens for the table and baby carrots need never go to waste.

Just as soon as the early flowering shrubs have finished blooming they should be pruned. This is especially true when they are growing in hedge form. Incidentally, hedges of all kinds should be given the first shearing of the season now.

To go back to the early flowering shrubs and trees. Lilacs, as a rule, should have only the flower heads removed without much actual pruning of the wood. The cherries, dogwoods, almonds and magnolias are better left unpruned at all times.

The shrubs and trees need plenty of water at this time, too, to invigorate them after their blooming period. Turn the hose on the evergreens, too. Junipers and spruces especially that look dull may be afflicted with "red spider." A mild case of these mites can be washed off with a strong stream from the hose. A more effective treatment is to spray the trees occasionally with lime-sulphur or oil sprays at mild strength.

THE HOUSE OF HAZARDS

BLACK DAWN

by Victor Rousseau

CHAPTER X

SYNOPSIS

Dave Hogue, out of a job, arrives at Wilbur Ferris' Cross-Bar ranch. Curran, the foreman, promises him a job if he can break a horse called Black Dawn. When he succeeds he discovers that Curran expected the horse to kill him. A girl named Lois rises up, angry with Dave for breaking her horse to the rescue of her father, even when he uses his savings to pay off the mortgage on the small ranch she shares with her mother. Curran is shot and Dave is charged with murder. Lois saves him from being lynched. Wounded, she guides him to a mountain cave where the thought he will be safe from Curran and the sheriff's posse. A quarrel between Ferris and Judge Longergan reveals that Ferris had killed his partner, Blaise Rowland, many years before. Thoroughly scared, Ferris takes Curran into his confidence. Dave leaves Lois alone for a while, not knowing that Curran is hiding nearby.

When Dave and the horses had finally vanished behind the skyline, Curran jumped to his feet. He made his way along the ledge trail, past the place where his two horses were tethered, in the direction of the cave.

Crouching in the last clump of jackpine scrub, Curran watched Lois as she returned from the little pool and entered the cave. Then he crept on tiptoe after her.

It was the shadow of the man, faint across the floor, that caused Lois to look round. She thought it was Dave returned. For an instant the girl looked at the foreman, frozen with terror. Then she opened her mouth to scream.

That instant Curran had leaped upon her, clapping one hand to her mouth, stifling her cry before she could utter it. In that hand was a gag, which he thrust down Lois' throat. With his other hand he brought the strings behind her head. Holding her to him, so that she could not free herself, Curran pulled the gag down her throat, and she gagged. She half broke free. Curran grasped her in his arms again.

"Goin' to set the herd on me, huh?" jeered Curran. "I told yuh I'd get yuh, Lois."

"It was the work of a moment or two to slip the knotted ropes, which he had already prepared, over Lois' arms and to fasten their ends to the horn of his saddle. He set her upon one of the horses and sprung upon the other. Holding her fast, he started the two horses down the trail.

Still weak from her wound, half choked by the gag, utterly helpless to cry out or attempt to escape, Lois managed to keep her seat until the horses reached the end of the ravine. Instead of making for the trail that ran toward Hooker's head, Curran turned the horses' heads toward the mountains.

Lois, who knew the mountains like a book, had already guessed where Curran was taking her, and as the route confirmed her belief she started to scream. But Curran would never be able to hear her here, and she would be utterly at Curran's mercy.

His destination was a small shack, about four miles away, where a prospector had once lived while engaged in a fruitless search for gold in the mountains. Nobody had traveled in that direction. There was no path through the perpendicular cliffs that wallied in the blind canyon, which Curran was already entering.

The journey was nearly ended. The shack came into sight at the end of the canyon, down which a thin stream of water trickled. A cutting cradle still lay on the bank, and beside it a blade of a spade protruded from a mound of earth. Curran rode away with rust. Curran reached the shack, dismounted, and slipped the rope from Lois' arms and carried her inside.

The shack contained a small room and another smaller one, with a plank door between. In the first room was a table fashioned from splitting axes, and some iron stumps that had been used for seats. In one corner was a bunk with a rotting mattress. In the smaller room was another bunk, and nothing more.

Out of the first bunk staggered a Mexican.

"Well, yuh got here, Pedro," said Curran. "Did yuh warn Ferris to be here an hour after sundown?"

"Si, señor, I tell him, but he say he does not know the way, and I must go back for him."

"He was here," snarled Curran. "Ferris knows a lot more than he pretends to know, and he don't know a whole lot of things he thinks he knows. However, if that's his message, yuh'd best ride and bring him back. Yuh start back at seven pronto. Understand?"

"I understand," grinned the Mexican. Swiftly Curran seized Lois in his arms and pulled her to the door. He stood with his hands upon her shoulders, holding her fast.

"Are yuh goin' to marry me?" he demanded. Lois struck at him, and he laughed. She screamed—and suddenly, as if in answer to her cry, both of them heard the hoofbeats of a horse pounding along the rocky trail toward the ranch.

Curran released Lois with an oath, clapped his hand to his holster and crouched, listening. The sun was already behind the mountains and, though it had not yet set, the whole wild terrain outside was plunged into a shadowy twilight. For an instant the girl was on the point of throwing herself upon Curran, to wrest the six-gun from him, to save Dave's life.

But then she realized that this enormous horse was neither Black Dawn nor Hooker's, and with a little gasp of relief she sank back against the bunk. A moment later Curran straightened himself. He had seen the horseman rounding the curve of the trail and recognized him.

Daughter of Texas Revolutionary Soldier Buried Here Tuesday

Funeral and burial services were held Tuesday at 3 p. m. in the Hico Cemetery for Mrs. Emily Rachel Sellman, 85, who died Monday afternoon at the home of her son, W. C. Sellman, Rev. J. H. Baldrige, pastor of the Dublin Methodist Church, conducted the services.

Emily Rachel Sellman (nee Chamberlain) was born in May, 1857, in Mississippi, to Emily Marshall Chamberlain and Willard Chamberlain. Her father was a Texas Revolutionary soldier who, after the Civil War, returned with his family to Texas to settle upon the tract of land granted him for his patriotic services. Here she met Thomas Sellman whom she married and whom she bore an only child, Willard Chamberlain Sellman.

A few years later at their Rochelle ranch occurred the tragic death of her husband at the hands of wire cutters. She then returned home to her parents and continued to live in this particular section of Texas until her death.

She passed away quietly September 21, on the grant of land which had been in the possession of her family for ninety-two years. She is survived by her son, Willard Sellman of Hico, and two grandsons, W. C. Sellman Jr., of Dallas, and Collin Sellman of Los Angeles, California.

One daughter died at the age of four; Mrs. Eula Autrey of Hico, and Eddie Bills of Fort Worth survive, also eight grandchildren and one great-granddaughter, and many nieces and nephews.

WAR JOB FOR THE CHILDREN

The plan for putting the 30,000 school children of this nation to work on the salvage campaign is apt to be the step which will make a big success out of a campaign which so far has been very disappointing in its results.

TODAY and TOMORROW By DON ROBINSON

ELECTION... opportunity Let's stop bemoaning the fact that we have an election coming up. We're lucky to be having an election.

FAVORS... inflation It is true that many of our legislators in seeking re-election have attempted to do favors for their constituents at the expense of the rest of the nation.

PARTY... ability Because this is not a presidential election year, ordinarily the vote would be light and a large number of voters would be likely to look into the records of the various candidates.

DECISIONS... opinion It has always been a question whether a congressman's job is to express the opinion of his constituents or to take his election to mean that the people want him to make decisions for them.

You Can Make This Demure Dirndl For Your Daughter

YOUR little daughter will love the grown-up look of a dirndl and this two-piece version gives slenderizing lines to tubby little figures. You can easily make this simply constructed design at home in time for school's opening, and the pattern requires only 1 1/2 yards of cotton print and 1/4 yard white pique for size 6. When it comes to wear and tear, this practical fashion will have no equal, and if you make it of sturdy, washable cotton, you'll know it will keep its good looks after innumerable trips to the wash tub. If you would like further information about this pattern and a free leaflet on "Gathering and Shirring" which will be helpful in making a dirndl dress, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Needlework Department of this paper specifying leaflet No. 22.

CAMP HOOD

Command, and Gen. Bruce spoke briefly. Col. John B. Hood, son of the man for whom the camp has been named, was introduced from the speaker's stand, where Representative Hatton W. Summers of Dallas was seated with the Governor and other state officials. General Donovan, Major Gen. Harold Bull, Major Gen. Harry Twadler, Brig. Gen. Richard C. Huebner, Brig. Gen. Ward Marls, Brig. Gen. R. C. Spraggins, and Adjt. Gen. J. Watt Page of Texas also were present.

Then the deadly vicious show was staged by the tank destroyers. This correspondent long has associated the Texas jack rabbit with speed and the lowly mule with power and stamina. If you can conjure up in your imagination a creature with the speed of a full grown jack rabbit and the toughness of a Texas road camp bang-tail, you will have some idea of a tank destroyer soldier in action. Hard-Hitting Units

There is no swarming of men in this school of warfare, the units are small. But, or, how they can hit!

Watch a clump of bushes. See a self-propelled 75-mm. cannon jump out and jerk a vicious salvo into an enemy tank before the dust has settled, and then disappear again with nothing but dust and a derelict tank left to mark the movement. Note a rustle in the grass and see it explode into a grenade-carrying soldier who has death in his eyes—death for the enemy.

These are only episodes—passing incidents—of the school day for the men who are training to be stalkers of tanks, most fearsome of the armed hordes that United States soldiers are destined to fight.

It's a tough job, stopping a tank. They know it here as well as it is known to the Russians who are locked in grips with Hitler's blitz at Stalingrad. These Camp Hood officers know it and are doing something about it.

Even as far away from Camp Hood and Killeen as Temple—even as far as Waco—the visitor begins to sense the atmosphere of strength that these destroyer soldiers emanate. They work hard every day and when they get a trip to town they step high in the confidence of their own ability. One can note them on the train or in a bus or standing on a street corner.

Never, after a visit to Camp Hood, will any man say that Young America can't take it. These men, day after day, put in a chore of hard labor that would do credit to a champion longshoresman and they like it. There were some mighty sweaty men in front of the reviewing stand when Friday's show had ended, but none of them slumped in fatigue.

"This is a Winning Army"

There is a lot more to the story of the tank destroyer center, tales of obstacle courses, where men must swim and climb and crawl, scale seemingly impossible heights and make impossible jumps under the load of their full field equipment; tales of the simulated deserted village, where two-man teams go in to mop up, one armed with pistol and the other with Tommy-gun, and suddenly are confronted with targets in such startling array that their weapons must beat out a death march in staccato monotone if they win through to pass the test. And there is a lot that may not be told, things that are to be a surprise for the Japs and the Germans.

This can be said—When his Undersecretary of War goes back to Washington to report to the Commander in Chief on Camp Hood, he will have to tell the President: "This is a good Army. This is a killing Army. This is an Army that will go out and hunt down the enemy. This is a hard, tough Army that will not be balked by obstacles. This is a winning Army."

These men can take it, true. But oh, how they can G-I-V-E!

ARE YOU A GREASE WASTER?

Every time a housewife throws away drippings from the frying pan or broiler she wastes an essential war material. Glycerine is obtained from grease, and glycerine is one of the important elements in making high explosives needed to win the war.

Experts claim that two billion pounds of cooking fat have been wasted in American kitchens every year. There's enough explosives material in that fat to bomb many a Nazi stronghold. Ordinarily we import much of the fats and oils used in making glycerine. But the war has stopped most of that and it's up to the women of America to get all of the grease out of their frying pans and broilers and get what is not usable as food into the hands of manufacturers who can extract the glycerine from it.

If you don't intend to use the salvaged grease for cooking, get a clean coffee can and cover it with a double thickness of clean cheese cloth. Pour the drippings through it and put the can in the icebox to keep the grease from becoming rancid. You can put all kinds into the can—bacon, lamb, beef, and so on. When the can is full, take it to your grocer or butcher, who will pay you for it.

If you're saving fats to use in cooking you should use individual containers for each kind of fat. When you're saving for the butcher don't use glass jars or paper containers.

The more fat you use in cooking the less you'll have to buy, and the less fat will have to be diverted from war use to consumer use. Also, you'll be saving money.

Ratliff's Grocery in Hico has agreed to purchase this grease at current price of 4c lb. GWENDOLYNE JONES, Hamilton Co. Home Dem. Agt.

RUSH ORDER!
COOKED BY GAS!

The little blue flame that cooks your meals, that warms your house... is a roaring giant in wartime. It is helping turn steel into weapons of war... at a rate that's smashing all records for speed. It is "cooking" whole battleship turrets at one time in ovens as big as a five-room house. It is helping make 155 mm. shells three times as fast as formerly.

Tanks and guns and bombs and bullets . . . torpedoes and planes and gas-masks and ships . . . Gas is used to make them all! And for the very same reasons 85,000,000 Americans prefer Gas for cooking.

Because it's fast, saves time. Because it's economical and clean. Because it's flexible, instantly adjustable to exact temperatures. Because it's famous for greater dependability!

GAS IS SAVING time, money and food in every cooking operation. It is helping preserve food safely in silent Gas refrigerators. But don't forget that it is vital to war production. Use what you need for cooking, refrigeration, water heating and house heating—but use it wisely, don't waste it.

has received a commission as an ensign in the Naval Air Corps, and is awaiting a call which will send him to some college for advanced training before he enters active service. He is a graduate of the College of Mines at El Paso, and has been working at Shafter, Texas, since his graduation. He expects his future work in the Naval Air Corps to be connected with the field of meteorology.

John W. Jordan Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Jordan Sr., Route 2, Hico, was recently promoted from the rank of Corporal to Sergeant. Sgt. Jordan is stationed at Camp Barksley. He enlisted the last of March and has been stationed there for six months at Camp Barksley.

Mrs. Sam Abel recently received a letter from her son, Sam Jr., who is in the United States Navy. Sam is getting along all right, and recently made another rating, according to his brother, George, who was in the office Monday renewing the service man's subscription to the home paper.

L. E. Williamson, with an Air Corps mechanical detachment at Boise City, Idaho, in a letter this week to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Williamson, said he had hopes of being transferred back to Texas soon. He received his initial training at Sheppard Field, Wichita Falls.

Mrs. V. R. Leath wrote from Dallas last week to renew the subscription of the paper now going to First Sergeant Harold A. Leath, Hq. & Hq. Sq., 51st Troop Carrier Wing, A. P. O. 519, Camp of Postmaster, New York, N. Y. She said she had received a letter from Sonny in which he expressed a wish for the paper, also a box of candy, on which they are rationed there. "You know he is in England now," she wrote, "and I am trying to gratify those two wishes at once. He writes us he is seeing many wonderful sights, of which Westminster Abbey is one. He is in the ordnance department of the Air Corps." It's hard to realize that this Sgt. Leath is the same Sonny who used to caddy out on the Bluebonnet Golf Course, but golfers who were associated with him will realize how he made the rating. Maybe he'll have some of the duffers under him as privates soon, then he can take out his shabby tricks they were in the habit of pulling on good-natured caddies out on the golf grounds.

ACTIVE AT ELLINGTON

Grady Brown, stationed at Ellington Field near Houston, last week wrote to his parents here, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Brown, telling something about what he's doing, and enclosing some interesting clippings from the base's weekly newspaper, "Tailspin." One of the clippings was a cartoon carrying a caricature of Grady, with the inscription beneath, "Cpl. Grady Brown has a secret ambition to raise a football team of his own."

Grady said in his letter that he expected to be transferred to Waco soon, and that he and his wife, Nancy, were getting along fine. His letter continued in part:

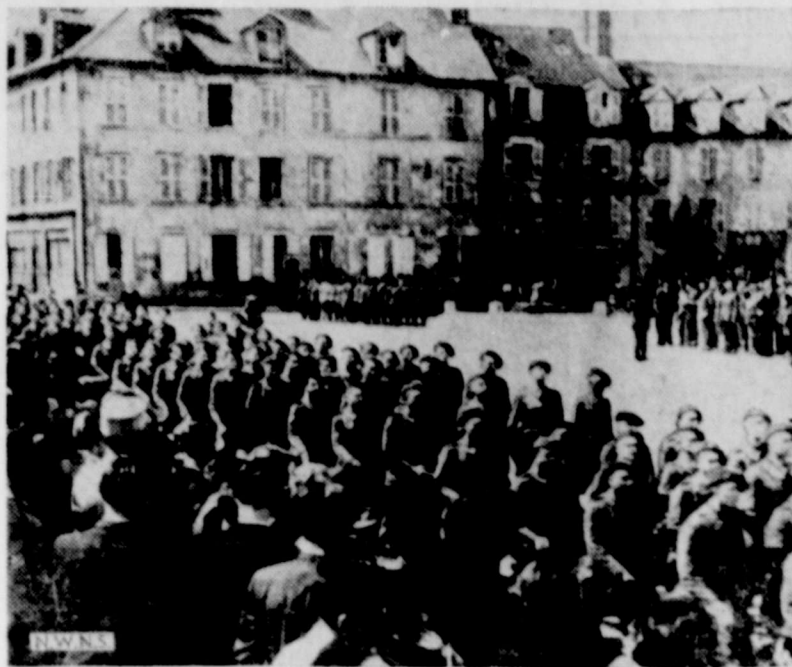

"I am in charge of athletic supplies, and am supposed to encourage the boys to take an interest in games such as football, baseball, and all games that are played. Sometimes I want to discourage them so I won't have to work so much in keeping up with the equipment. I have to keep up with everything from a ping-pong ball to all kinds of uniforms. It looks like we will have a few fights, as we got 75 pairs of boxing gloves the other day. I don't guess you are interested in football, but I sure wish I could stay here and see them play. We have four All-Americans and several that were All-American mention. We take an interest in wrestling also. The other day I was sent out in charge of several boys to get a wrestling ring which will be used tomorrow night by some professional to put on three bouts. He was a player at Notre Dame when Knute Rockne was coaching there and he is wrestling now. He gave me an enlarged picture of Rockne and himself, with Rockne's signature. I sure am proud of it."

"Nancy had some good pie made when I got in tonight. Say, if we had some of those cracklings when you all kill hogs, it would be fine. Thinking about that crackling cornbread makes my mouth water. Nancy said she wished you all could come down and try her cooking. She sure enjoyed the cooking up there. I hope that we can come to Hico soon and see you all."

Grady sent along a piece from the "Tailspin" telling "What to Do in Case of an Air Raid" which may be new to some of our readers:

1. As soon as the bombs start dropping, run like hell. (It doesn't matter where, just run like hell.)
2. Take advantage of the opportunities afforded you when air raid sirens sound for the attack warning. For example: (a) If in a bakery, grab some pie or cake. (b) If in a tavern, grab a bottle. (c) If in a movie, grab a hanger.
3. If you find an unexploded bomb always pick it up and shake it. (The firing pin may be stuck.)
4. If an incendiary bomb is found burning in a building, throw some gasoline on it. You can't put it out anyhow, so you might as well have a little fun. (a) If no gasoline is available, throw a bucket of water on it and lie down, you're dead. (b) The properties of the bomb free the hydrogen from the water, causing rather rapid combustion. In fact, it will explode with a helluva crash.
5. Always get excited and holler bloody murder. It will add to the fun and confusion and scare hell out of the kids.
6. Drink heavily, eat onions, hamburger cheese, etc., before you enter a crowded air raid shelter. This will make you very popular with the crowd in the immediate vicinity, eliminating any unnecessary discomfort that would be more prevalent if people crowded too closely.
7. If you should be the victim of a direct bomb hit, lie still, don't go in pieces, you are.
8. Knock the air raid wardens down if they start to tell you what to do. They always save the best seats for themselves and their friends, anyway.

Premier Laval's 'Legion Tricolore'

Premier Pierre Laval of France has formed his own special troops, the Legion Tricolore, which is similar to the famed Nazi S. S. troops. A parade of these men, who may volunteer for fighting on the Russian front, was recently held in Vichy. Here is a general view during the parade of the Legion Tricolore.

The idea was to scare the U. S. internees. That's why Japanese military press officer Matsuda paraded the prisoners and read to them the news of the fall of Singapore. Nobody faints. All knew that the U. S. would come out at the bell for the next round. This is one of the photos published in "Freedom," Jap propaganda magazine published in Shanghai in the English language.

Women Tackle Men's Jobs in England

Road gangs made up of men have a tough job ahead. It was difficult some time ago to imagine women doing this rough work on the railroads, but that's what they are doing now in Great Britain. Women surfacemen are jacking up and packing the railway lines, using muscle and technique in the same fashion as the men.

NYA Increasing Number of Women Training for War

J. C. Kellam, Regional NYA Administrator, said today that the National Youth Administration in Texas will move at once to comply with the request made by J. H. Bond, State Director of the United States Employment Service, this week that War Industry Training and NYA officials increase the number of women being trained for War industry by an even greater percentage than the steady rise of the past six months.

In a recent statement, Mr. Bond explained that the addition of Texas women to War industry payroll is increasing volume is a certainty as production soars and the reserve of qualified male workers dwindles.

Marvin Lamar, NYA Project Manager at Waco, said that young women would be assigned in increasing numbers to the Waco shops in Aircraft Sheet Metal, Machine Tool Operations, Radio and Electrical and Industrial Sewing.

Both boys and girls are referred to NYA Work Shops by the United States Employment Service. Young people interested in securing NYA jobs should apply direct to the nearest UNES office or to David E. Williams, local Youth Personnel Officer, Box 1129, Waco, Texas.

Mr. Lamar stated that during the past thirty days 140 Texas girls have gone from the NYA shops at Waco to War industries in Texas.

Included among these were Willodean M. Loyd, Star Route, Hamilton Texas, who went to work for the Waco Army Flying School, Waco, Texas; Adella E. Looney, General Delivery, Hamilton, and Margaret J. Oustad, Route 3, Hamilton, Texas, both of whom went to work for Consolidated Aircraft, Fort Worth, Texas.

Texas ranks sixth among the states in production of lumber.

Restrictions Made In Car Purchases Under Rationing

Under a change in rationing regulations, new automobile purchase certificates will not be granted hereafter to applicants who have disposed of cars adequate for their needs since January 1 of this year. Jess Brown, chairman of the Hamilton County War Price and Rationing Board, announced recently.

"The test of the adequacy of such a car will be the same as it would be if the car were now owned by the applicant," Mr. Brown emphasized.

Mr. Brown also directed special attention to provisions of this amendment which change the conditions under which men in the armed forces may dispose of automobiles.

"Hereafter, unrestricted sale of a new car by an inductee into the armed forces will be permitted only when it becomes certain that the seller actually will enter the service," he said.

"Previously an inductee with a 1942 model car could sell it, even to a buyer who could not qualify for a certificate under the rationing regulations, as soon as the seller received notice to report for induction.

"If the seller was rejected on final physical examination but meanwhile had sold his car, he would have done so under a provision of the regulation that was intended only for those who actually go into the service."

This has now been changed, he explained, because of the greater number of rejections on physical examination at the induction point.

Another change, also, is that hereafter, members of the armed forces who acquire new automobiles after entering the service will be permitted to sell them thereafter only to certificate holders or to members of their own families.
