Cattle jam the Chicago Stock Yards Tuesday. The flow of stock into the yards began about midnight when trucks began lining up at the gates. # Texas To Observe Independence Day In Gala Mood

By The Associated Press Texans began celebrating Wednesday what promised to be the most carefree and happy Fourth of July since pre-war days. In many towns and cities the festivities scheduled Wednesday, Thursday and on through the weekend were the first since 1940 or 1941. Arrangements committees spared no efforts to make up for the lost time.

The end of rationing saw auto races, boat races, air shows, motorcycle races, and just plain sightback on entertainment schedules.

Texas Safety Association statisticians projected Independence Day traffic figures and estimated 28 persons would die in highway accidents.

Philippine Independence Day

On the 170th anniversary of American independence, and a day short of the first anniversary of its official liberation from the Japanese enemy, the Philippine Commonwealth becames an independent republic of sovereign equality among the nations of the world.

The happy occasion is made doubly happy by the circumstances of its occurrence. The date of Philippine independence was decided upon 12 years ago. No one then could have imagined the tragic period which lay ahead for the commonwealth and its protector nation. Or, if that period could have been foreseen, few would have believed that the promise of independence could be realized now.

But that promise survived through the black days of defeat in the early months of 1942. Those black days served to bind the United States and the Philippines more closely. Bataan and Corregidor became enshrined in the hearts of Filipinos and Americans alike through the exemplary heroism of the men of both nations who defended

Nor did the Filipinos' courage fail with the departure of the Americans and the subsequent occupation. Neither the Japs' cajolery nor their brutality could break it. The Filipinos fought with the courage of the free men which they were then in spirit and have now become in fact.

The Philippines' independence day dawns upon many parts of the world where freedom and independence are RETURN FROM VACATION still in doubt. On their own side of the globe the Filipinos see civil strife in a free neighbor nation and serious day from a 10-day vacation in unrest among the colonial peoples of the East. Elsewhere Colorado. Their time was spent in the world the pressure of the strong upon the weak is principally at Pagossa Springs and not abated. All of which must make their complete freedom even more precious.

For America this day of Philippine independence is almost as proud an event as it is for the islanders themselves. It marks the complete success of our one great colonial venture and the complete vindication of the policies employed.

During more than 50 years the Filipinos have advanced, under our guidance, from a woefully low estate to a level of literacy and living standards unmatched in the Orient except in Japan. And the end of that half century finds the mutual friendship and admiration of America and the Philippines stronger than ever before.

Today we are accused by some of being imperialists and harboring colonial ambitions. Against these untrue charges stands the independent Philippine Republic to refute in fact what has been charged in apparently malicious fancy.

The early days of the new republic will certainly be difficult. The loss in lives and property during the Japanese war was grievously severe. But recovery is slowly going forward. And the courage with which the islands citizens withstood the Japanese aggressor, with the help that the United States stands ready to give, may be counted on to see them through the trying times ahead.

And so America says to its friends in the far Pacific: Long live the Philippine Republic! National independence has never been given or received more proudly.

The Philippine Islands have joined the world family of independent nations, and the Philippine flag, above, will henceforth supplant the Stars and Stripes there. Known as the Kapitunan, or Insurgents' flag, the banner was first carried by Filipi-nos who revolted against Spain two years before the Spanish-American war. The islands were ceded to the U.S. after that war, and the American flag has been official ever since, although the Kapitunan flag has also been in use since 1920.
