Jury selection begins Monday for two local trials

By STEVE REAGAN

Staff Writer

Two criminal cases are scheduled for the 118th District Court jury docket this week.

Jury selection begins Monday for cases involving defendants Rosendo Franco and Eladio Zubiate, Howard County District Attorney Hardy L. Wilkerson said.

Franco will stand trial for the second-degree felony charge of aggravated assault causing serious bodily injury.

The state will allege that Franco and three others were riding in a car with victim Geraldine Rodriguez on the evening of Oct. 22, 2006.

"It appears that the victim was riding in a car with the four individuals en route to a get-together," Wilkerson said earlier this year. "In the course of the ride, an altercation occurred which resulted in the brutal beating of the victim."

Rodriguez received injuries to

"serious" bruises to several portions of their body.

Aggravated assault is punishable by a term of 2 to 20 years in prison and a fine not to exceed $10,000.

Zubiate, 30, of Big Spring, will stand trial on the charge of burglary of a habitation with her jaw and scalp as well as intent to commit sexual assault, a first -degree felony punishable by a term of 5 to 99 years or life in prison and a fine not to exceed $10,000.

> Wilkerson said the state will allege that Zubiate entered the home of a Big Spring woman

You might call it a one-two punch. Or maybe even a seven-eight.

Either way, The Knockout battle of the bands will take the stage at Municipal Auditorium Sunday with eight bands from all over the region competing for a spot on the 2007 Rock the Desert

According to Jim Koerber, president Scars Entertainment and promoter for the show, the competition has been a tremendous success, both in Big Spring and abroad.

"It's just been great," said Koerber. "It's just been

Horns, Aggies roll to first-round regional wins

The Associated Press

ROCK ROUND Fuller's two-run homer in the bottom of the sixth helped Texas to an 8-2 win over Brown in the first round of the Round Rock regional Friday night.

Texas (45-15) took a 3-2 lead with Fuller's home run, and a four-run eighth inning put the game out of reach. Kyle Russell hit his 28th home run of the season in the first inning.

But the Longhorns' offense stalled over the next four innings. Brown (27-20) strung together five consecutive singles in the fourth that drove in two runs and gave the Bears a 2-1 nine over seven innings as Texas Louisiana-Lafayette on Saturday,

Robert Papenhause went 2-for-3 and drove in one run for the Texas reliever Joseph Krebs (9-1) entered the game in the fifth inning and had seven strikeouts. He allowed only two hits.

Brown starter Jeff Deitz (9-4) took the loss, allowing a seasonhigh 14 hits.

Texas will face UC Irvine on Saturday night.

Little Hawks basketball camp starts Monday

By ERIC RODEWALD

Special to the Herald

Howard College head women's basketball coach Earl Diddle will be hosting a total of three camps at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum with two of the three camps starting Monday.

The Little Hawk Camp begins Monday morning at 9 a.m. with pre-registration beginning at 8:30 a.m. and is designed to introduce the game of basketball to girls entering kindergarten through third grade. It is a four-day camp that begins at 9 a.m. each day and finishes at 11:30 a.m. The focus is to develop a basketball foundation that will equip them with the basic skills to begin their progression of becoming a complete basketball player.

Coach Diddle referenced the theory in education that you learn everything you need to know in kindergarten, noting the drills used in camp are very similar to those used during the Hawks' practices.

"We teach the four basic ball skills that are essential to play the game of basketball at any level," Diddle said. "To become a really good player, it takes time and effort to see improvement in skill and to develop confidence, which will better enable young players to understand the simple concepts of the game. This allows them to progress as a player and tackle some of the more advanced skills. There is always more to learn about the game if a player is willing to work at it."

The four basic ball skills of basketball are shooting, passing, catching and dribbling. Diddle stated that of these four skills shooting is the most important skill, and it's a skill that he focuses on in camp.

"I've coached basketball for 36 vears and we dedicate a lot of time in our program on each player developing a shot. One shot that they can shoot and take ownership to succeed with," Diddle said.

In those 36 years Diddle has had the fortune of coaching some great players including Boston Celtic great Larry Bird. Although Diddle has coached more than 15 players who have played in the NBA and numerous other players who have gone on to play professionally, he says teaching young players the skills of the game is a true passion of

"I enjoyed working with players the caliber of Larry Bird, who spent a lot of time developing into a Hall-of-Fame player, His success didn't just happen overnight." Diddle said. "It's exciting to have the opportunity to work with the youth and help them develop their skills and interest in basketball because you never know how far those kids will progress in the game of basketball."

In addition to the Little Hawk Camp, Diddle hosts Individual Day Camp that is for girls entering the fourth through eighth grade and also begins on Monday. Pre-registration begins at 12:30 p.m. with the Individual Day Camp running through Thursday from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. each day.

"We really enjoy working with the youth of our area during camp, but it's most rewarding to us to see them after camp and their excitement for the game of basketball," Diddle said.

Diddle stressed that walk-ins are welcome for camp. For more information call Diddle at 264-5043 or 816-4327.

Associated Press Writer

Detroit Pistons and Cleveland Cavaliers on Friday were trying to recover the day after their double-overtime thriller, while also preparing for Saturday's Game 6 of the Conference Eastern finals.

Meanwhile, 1,500 miles away, the San Antonio Spurs were taking a second straight day of rest as they waited for their NBA finals opponent.

"We're just watching the games in a businesssense to see what we would do against each team," Spurs coach Gregg Popovich said Friday.

Game 5 matchup certainly gave the Spurs something to watch.

LeBron James scored a playoff career-high 48 points to lead the Cavs to a 3-2 lead in the Eastern Conference finals with a 109-107 double-overtime win.

were playing," Popovich said. "But at this point it's important for us to pay attention to both teams and not care who you play."

The Cavs have a chance SAN ANTONIO — The to close out the series Saturday at home. If they don't, Game 7 will be Monday in Detroit.

> "It was a great game," Popovich said. "A very competitive game and pretty amazing to watch LeBron do what he did."

Popovich was returning the compliment to James, who on Thursday after Cleveland's win held up the only two other teams left in the playoffs as the gold standard.

"When you look at San Antonio and you look at Detroit, that's what you want to be at a certain point in your career. They've done it year after The Cavaliers-Pistons year after year after year after year after year," James said.

The Spurs became the Conference Western champions on Wednesday by beating the Utah Jazz in Game 5.

The week of rest they are getting before the finals open in San "We wish we knew who Antonio on Thursday could do them good.

> Whenever 36-year-old Robert Horry, a 15-year veteran with six champi onship rings, is asked about the value of days off, he often points out jokingly, as if no one else ever notes it, that the Spurs are the "oldest team in the league. I like to throw that out there now and then."

Starter Bruce Bowen turns 36 on June 14 and Michael Finley, who started 16 games during the regular season and all 16 of the Spurs' playoff games, is 34. It's the 12year veteran's first trip to the finals.

"It's great to see guys in the finals that haven't been there before, Popovich said. "Obviously we've got a few of those guys but Fin is the one who's been working longest at it so it's a real thrill to have him there. To try to complete it and get the ring for him would be a great thrill for all of us.'

Popovich said that to be able to keep up the pace when the finals start, some of those practices will have to be tough.

"A couple of times during this layoff we'll have to do it," Popovich said. "And cross our fingers that nobody gets hurt.'

Legends & Legacies

'Fenced In Together' By Carole Berry

Painted from an original photograph which was donated to the museum by Wade Choate. The black and white photograph was taken from the late 1800s and shows a buffalo along with a Texas longhorn in a pen.

So much Texan

You can't get more "Texan" or more "Howard County" than works of art that make up the paintings to be on display during the Heritage Museum's annual Legends & Legacies Fish Fry and Historical Painting Auction.

The works are from five local artists — Sue Bagwell, Carole Berry, Estelle Howard, Kay Smith and Leada Wood. They illustrate historical buildings and homes, or a pen in one case, home to a longhorn and buffalo.

WINE AND CHEESE RECEPTION

The public is invited to a wine and cheese reception and preview show from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. Thursday, June 7.

Those who attend will have an opportunity to not only study the works, but to meet the artists themselves.

It will be an opportune time to view the paintings and learn about other items up for auction during the Legends and Legacies fundraiser.

LEGENDS AND LEGACIES

The auction fundraiser is set for Tuesday, June 19, at the museum, and will feature the paintings as well as a number of other items, including a Howard County historical knife and a Totally Texas Basket. This basket, acutally a painted horse trough, is filled with "everything Texas." Items include a rodeo night on the town, including jeans, boots, rodeo tickets and a hotel stay; a floral painting by Kay Smith; candy and treats from Susie's South Forty; Yahoo Cake and Jeanie's Fancy Pralines; a trip to Fredericksburg with a meal and wildflowers to plant; a trip to Austin with a tour of the Capitol and to the LBJ Museum; various Texas books, cookbooks and wooden signs.

Plus, there will be an opportunity to enjoy a stay at Lajitas for a family retreat.

"Legends" begins at 6 p.m. with a reception, fish fry and auction. Tickets are $25 each, available at the museum.

Vanderbilt 2, Austin Peay 1

Ryan Flaherty scored on pitcher Ben Wilshire's error in the bottom of the 11th inning to give top-ranked Vanderbilt a 2-1 victory over Austin Peay in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

With runners at second and third, Shea Robin tapped a grounder to Wilshire, who mishandled the ball. Flaherty, who had singled, scored from third Vanderbilt (52-11)faced Michigan on Saturday, while Austin Peay will play Memphis in an elimination game.

Vanderbilt's David Price and Austin Peay's Shawn Kelley engaged in a pitcher's duel most of the night. Price shut out the Governors until the top of the ninth, when Tyler Farrar's home run tied it at 1 and forced extra innings.

Price struck out 17, matching high. career Casey Weathers (12-2) earned the victory in relief, striking out five in two innings.

Kelley pitched 10 innings, surrendering five hits and striking out nine. His wild pitch in the sixth allowed Brad French to score from third base.

Andrew Walker and Bryan Kervin homered in the seventh inning to lead TCU (47-12). Walker snapped a 1-1 tie with his 12th home run of the season, a solo shot off Jeff Mandel. One out later, Kervin sent Mandel's 2-1 pitch over the wall in right-center for a two-run lead. Sam Demel (7-1) pitched the final three innings for the Baylor dropped to 34-26.

Rice 5,

Prairie View A&M 0

Tyler Henley hit a two-run homer, and Matt Langwell (7-1) pitched seven scoreless innings for Rice (50-12)

Bobby Bramhall pitched two innings of one-hit relief, striking our four of the seven batters he faced. Prairie View (34-24) made six errors.

Michigan 10, Memphis 7

Nate Recknagel and Doug Pickens each drove in three runs for Michigan (40-16), and Zach Putnam (8-4) pitched eight innings and had a two-run double in the seventh.

Memphis dropped to 36-26.

Clemson 3, St. John's 2

Brad Chalk's two-out RBI single in the bottom of the ninth gave Clemson the win.

The Tigers (39-21) scored two runs in the ninth. Doug Hogan tripled and came home on a wild pitch to tie it at 2.

That set up Chalk's winning single off Colin Lynch (1-2). The ball skipped off shortstop Jeff Grantham's glove and slowly rolled into left field, allowing Wilson Boyd to score just ahead of the tag.

Chalk, who returned last week after missing a month with a stress fracture in his lower back, was 3-for-5 with two RBIs. Addison Johnson also had three hits and an RBI.

Alan Farina (6-3) was the winner in relief.

St. John's is 40-18.

Coastal Carolina 7, VCU 1

Bobby Gagg (12-2) allowed just an unearned run in 7 1-3 innings, and Coastal Carolina (49-11) scored five runs in the third, all after what was supposed to be a sacrifice bunt by Dom Duggan fell for a single.

Virginia Commonwealth (37-22), committed three errors, all in the infield. Before Friday, VCU had committed just three errors in its previous 20 games.

III.-Chicago 4, Long Beach St. 1

Micky Pingree hit a two-out, two-run double in the eighth to add to the Flames' 2-1 lead.

UCLA 7.

Pepperdine 3

Tyson Brummett (10-5)pitched 8 2-3 innings, and Cody Decker homered and had four RBIs to lead UCLA (31-26) past Pepperdine (35-21).

Tim Murphy came on with two outs in the ninth with the bases loaded and got Donald Brown to pop out to end the game. Pepperdine sent nine men to the plate and scored three times in the ninth before Murphy quieted the rally. Ryan Herov hit a two-run homer in the ninth for the Waves to cut UCLA's lead to 7-3.

Police investigating suspicious death of Big Spring man

By STEVE REAGAN

Staff Writer

Big Spring police are investigating the suspicious death of a 59-year-old local resident Friday.

The body of James David Boettcher, 59, of Big Spring, was found near his residence in the 900 block of W. Fourth Street early Friday morning and he was subsequently declared dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Kathryn Wiseman at

Cause of death was an injury to the head, although it was inconclusive whether the injury was a result of natural causes or trauma, Wiseman said.

Wiseman ordered an autopsy, which was performed Friday at Texas Tech University Medical Center in Lubbock. Preliminary results were still inconclusive, she said.

"(The unofficial autopsy report) showed the possibility of both an aneurysm and a skull fracture," Wiseman said, adding she will await final autopsy results before ruling on a cause of death.

Big Spring Police would only confirm they are investigating the death and declined to give any other details into the investigation.

Band students reap gold at state contest

Herald Staff Report

Big Spring High School students came home from Austin this week laden down with medals.

A dozen medals were won by BSHS students performing in state solo and ensemble competition, said proud Rocky Harris, band director.

Ward Crystal received Division I ratings and gold medals for her flute solo and piccolo solo. Marshall VanPet received a Dvision II rating and a silver medal for his French horn solo.

Ryan Harris received two gold medals for ensemble. Students receiving a single gold medal for ensemble were Royce Perez, Bridgette Rodriguez, Alyssa Rains, Eddie Vaquez, Ricky Nunez, Jacob Martinez and Desmond Garcia.

Some 68 BSHS students participated in the May 28 contest.

"Coming home with 12 medals was exceptional," said Rocky Harris. "It was a great competition and all of the students performed very well in Austin not just those who won medals."

Prosecutors: Four from New York billed insurance company for 20 brain operations

NEW YORK (AP) — Four people billed a health insurance company for 20 brain operations that were never performed on them, sometimes for the same person on multiple occasions, authorities said.

One 36-year-old man from New York City claimed nine brain surgeries for himself, along with his wife and two sons, receiving reimbursements from New York-based Group Health Incorporated totaling $142,268, federal investigators said Friday.

GHI paid out more than $300,000 in reimbursements to all four defendants, based on the claims.

Besides the 36-year-old man, an indictment filed in federal court alleges that a 39-year-old man from Mount Vernon, a 42year-old woman and a 37-year-old man, both from New York City, defrauded the insurance company.

Three were in custody and are likely to be arraigned next week. The 36-year-old man remained at large.

The indictment alleges that the Mount Vernon man, an employee at a medical billing company, altered claims to the insurance company by swapping the names of people who actually underwent brain surgery with two others charged in the scheme.

The fraudulent claims were then sent along with altered postoperative reports to the insurance carrier for reimbursement, the indictment alleges.

Ilene Margolin, a spokeswoman for GHI, told The New York Times that her company's own internal investigators first noticed the defendants' unusual claims before turning over its findings to the government.

BUDGET

William Crooker said.

For the next three hours, commissioners probed the budget request, eliminating or trimming anything they considered non-essential.

By the end of the session, they had trimmed more than $300,000 from the "wish list," which still left the new budget $532,000 above current figures.

"I don't know about v'all, but this has been a fun afternoon," Crooker said somewhat sarcastically at the end of the session.

Commissioners will meet again on June 11 to try to trim even more from the budget, a process County Auditor Jackie Olson called vital.

"We can either find more to cut or find new sources of revenue, and there aren't any new sources of revenue out there," Olson said. "I think the taxpayers of this county are just about strapped ... and I don't know how we can go back to them and ask for (increased taxes).'

another avenue to satisfy conditions of their proba-

"This will help them toward paying their fines and court costs ... as well as satisfying their comservice," munity Minchew said. "I think the more opportunities we can offer them to do so, the better things will be for all of us."

Unlike regular community service, which is unsupervised, largely county officials would oversee work done under the new program.

Welling would supervise the program for those currently incarcerated, while Bobby Roever would be responsible for tive I've heard to taking overseeing work conducted by probationers.

County Judge Mark Barr said the program will be ideal for prisoners or probationers who are currently unemployed.

"Usually, when you sentence those people to a fine or community service, you're setting them up to fail," Barr said. "This is the best alternacare of people in that situation.'

Cost estimates for the program range from between $20,000 $50,000.

Barr said officials will continue to refine plans before formally instituting the program. No timetable has been set for its debut.

PARIS Maria Sharapova reached the fourth round of the French Open for the fourth time in her career Saturday, coming back from 4-1 down in the second set to beat Alla Kudryavtseva 6-1, 6-4 despite an apparently bothersome right shoulder.

The second-seeded Russian needed only 28 minutes to win the first set, breaking her opponent's serve three times. But Sharapova was broken three consecutive times in the second set, before winning five straight games.

"I was making a lot of unforced errors," Sharapova said. "Not a lot of people are going to let me get away with that. It's a good reminder for the future not to let that happen again."

Sharapova, who lost in the fourth round last year and reached the quarterfinals at Roland Garros in 2004 and 2005, will next face either No. 14 Patty Schynder or Karin Knapp and could also meet No. 5 Amelie Mauresmo in the quarterfinals.

Earlier in the tournament, she said she still felt soreness from a shoulder injury that caused her to miss about two months action. Against Kudryavtseva, Sharapova stretched or flexed her right shoulder between points.

"Like I said, I can't expect a lot from my shoulder this week," Sharapova said. "At times I still feel it during the match."

No. Svetlana Kuznetsova of Russia, a finalist last year, beat Dominika Cibulkova of Slovakia 6-2, 6-3.

Also Saturday, No. 7 Ana Ivanovic of Serbia advanced to the fourth round after beating qualifier Ioana Raluca Olaru of Romania 6-2, 6-0.

"I didn't feel as comfortable out there as the other matches," said Ivanovic, a quarterfinalist at Roland Garros in 2005. "My serve was not working as well."

Last month, the 19-yearold Ivanovic won on clay at the Berlin Open.

"I think getting confidence winning Berlin Sharapova, who has 15 helps a lot," Ivanovic

On Friday, Williams advanced to the fourth beating round by Michaella Krajicek of the Netherlands 6-3, 6-4.

"For me, it's just another Slam," said Williams, who won her only French Open title in 2002. "I don't make it a big deal.'

Serena's sister, Venus Williams, is one of 18 American men and women who have come and gone from the tournament. She lost to fourthseeded Jelena Jankovic 6-4, 4-6, 6-1.

Justine Henin, trying to win her second straight French Open title and third overall, also won, and top-ranked Roger Federer eased into the fourth round of the men's draw by beating Potito Starace of Italy 6-2, 6-3, 6-

Despite her relatively routine win over Krajicek, Serena Williams was still concerned about her game.

"I didn't think I played trying not to peak too soon, but at some point I need to start playing better."

Federer is playing just about as well as anyone, but the 10-time Grand Slam champion could face some familiar opponents if he gets past No. 13 Mikhail Youzhny and makes it to the quarterfinals.

No. 29 Filippo Volandri could be waiting in the last eight, and No. 19 Guillermo Canas is a possible semifinal opponent. Both Volandri and Canas beat Federer earlier this year, giving him three of his four losses this sea-

"I'm just happy that things are going well," said Federer, who also lost to Nadal this year. "I haven't lost a set (at the French Open). I'm feeling well, anyway.'

Volandri, who beat Federer in the third round of the Rome Masters, upset No. 7 Ivan Ljubicic of Croatia 6-4, 6-7 (4), 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, and Canas defeated Kristof Vliegen of Belgium 6-2, 6-2, 2-6, 6-3.

Nikolay Davydenko and No. 15 David Nalbandian also advanced. They will face each other in the fourth Joshua M. Ayers has received an Air Force ROTC (Reserve Officer Training Corps) college offer to scholarship attend a selected host college or university.

The cadet was selected to receive the scholarship certificate on the basis of comprehensive tests, high school scholastic achievement and extra-curricular activities. The majority of Air Force ROTC scholarships cover college/university tuition, provide textbook allowance and pay most laboratory or incidental fees. In addition, at least a $250 tax-free monthly allowance is paid to recipients during the academic year. The estimated value of the scholarship depends on the student's choice of school and type of scholarship offered.

Upon graduation from college and completion of the ROTC program, the cadet will be commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Air Force.

He is the son of Donna K. Ayers and stepson of Dan Winkler of Brazoria. His father is Michael A. Ayers of Big Spring.

Ayers is a 2007 graduate of Sweeny High School.

OUR VIEWS

Chorus members for Pops in Park set for rehearsals

he Big Spring Symphony Chorus is looking for a few good voices. Well, maybe more than a few. The Chorus is set to begin rehearsals for its performance at Pops in the Park 2007. Dr. Keith Graumann, conductor of the Big Spring Symphony Orchestra and Chorus, has announced rehearsal times will be each Tuesday in June from 7

"We have another wonderful patriotic program planned again this year," Graumann noted. "The chorus always plays a huge part in the program, particularly the patriotic ceremony."

p.m. to 8:30 p.m. in the First United Methodist Church choral rehearsal room. Enter from the west side.

Linda Lindell will accompany the chorus during rehearsals this year, and Graumann said those interested in joining the chorus are encouraged to be there for the first rehearsal on Tuesday night.

"New members are very welcome to participate," Graumann said. "This is a very good time for those who have wanted to participate but could not commit the time required during the regular concert season to be a part of what has become a Big Spring tradition."

With only four rehearsals, however, Graumann says the chorus will have to "get things together in a hurry," but will "have a lot of fun as well."

We encourage those in our community with vocal talents to consider joining the chorus this summer and help make the 2007 Pops in the Park something special for all of us.

TO THE EDITOR:

Well, I am expressing my opinion yet again.

We are doing the recycling and there is no plastic bin for our plastics. There is for paper and cardboard. Midland has the capability to do it, so why doesn't Big Spring?

I want to urge the city to push and get this thing started. Gas is not cheap and we should not have to take our plastics to Midland to dispose of them. This is going to take everybody in this city to make this stuff happen. Utilize the bins available. Utilize dump and the compost place.

I drive around and see dumped stuff in a lot of our outskirted fields. Shame on you, whoever you are, that does the dumping! Do the right thing, go to to dump and get rid of your trash there.

We are not only keeping our city pretty by using the proper resources now, but making it to where our children have a clean place to live in in the future. This also includes all our parking lots in the

A SMALL PRAYER

by K. Rae Anderson

Help us, Lord, remove the pain and thorns in our side from life through our prayers.

Amen

Death for child rapists has downside

'm a mom of a 10-year-old son. I'm also opposed to the death penalty. That's why Texas' version of "Jessica's Law," recently passed by the legislature, which would make twiceconvicted child rapists eligible for the death penalty, is a conundrum for me.

If Republican Gov. Rick Perry signs the bill, Texas would become the sixth state to add the death penalty for child rape cases. Under it, the accused rapist need not kill the victim to be considered for execution.

The "mom" in me agrees unequivocally with Jessica Marie

Lunsford's dad, who told John Evander Couey, the suspect accused of raping and murdering Lunsford's daughter, "I hope you rot in hell." Couey, previously convicted of a sex crime against a minor, abducted 9-year-old Jessica in 2005 from her Florida home, repeatedly raped and buried her alive in a shallow grave, where she suffocated. A jury later found him guilty of first-degree murder, kidnapping and sexual battery and sentenced Couey to death. Couey is now appealing his case to the Florida Supreme Court.

Hell, eternal damnation, would be insufficient, if, heaven forbid, the victim were my son. I can envision of all sorts of vile and despicable torments and tortures I would want inflicted, repeatedly, on any person who raped and murdered my only child.

Honestly, I wonder if I would be able to restrain myself from the grief, the anguish.

Sentencing a child rapist and murderer to death would be an unworthy exchange for my son's, or any child's, innocence and future. I would not extend forgiveness to or offer pleas for leniency on behalf of the convicted. As my son's mother, I say eviscerate such people from the earth.

As a mother, I would want, demand, vengeance for his suffering. After all, I am a mother, above all else that I am in this life.

But the quieter, less emotionally wrought side of my soul asks, "Does it do good to execute child rapists and child murderers?" Retribution satisfies, in a primal, base way. It just would feel so damn good. It's an emotional quid pro quo our humanity can comprehend and a legal one we can justify. It doesn't, however, restore these most precious of victims. Stick a needle in the offender's arm, send him off to oblivion or immortality and I'll leave the viewing area of the death cham-

But where are the child victims when their families return home? Still violated. Still dead.

My analytical mind thinks there are too many people on death row in the state, currently 383. That would comprise a small town in East Texas.

Death sentences are so common, so expected in Texas. Executions are so "every day."

Texas has executed 14 prisoners so far this year, on-target to match or exceed 2006's total of 24 executed, as if more state-sanctioned deaths is a desirable goal. Not to worry those of you eager for blood — you "eye for an eye" literalists — though, five prisoners are on the hit list for June alone, and another seven scheduled for execution during the rest of the year.

So do we really need more people on death row in Texas? By making twice-convicted child rapists death-penalty-eligible, the legislature created the possibility, and likely, ensured the probability that more people will end up on death row in Texas. Death row won't be limited to murderers when child rapists join that exclusive but notorious club.

By expanding the use of the death penalty, we're eliminating any legal deterrent that may prevent child rapists from killing their victims. Either way, they will be eligible for the death penalty, so add murder to the mix, the warped criminal mind may insanely reason. The unintended consequence of this, and similar, legislation is that the accused may kill the one person, the rape victim, who could testify against him.

Sometimes our philosophies don't represent the entirety of our personalities. Mommy me is fighting political me on this one, hard.

I intuitively feel, though, if night fell on a personal tragedy,

I would be able to say, "Fry the SOB," and sleep, my struggle reconciled.

Fixing our broken food system

he recent discovery of an industrial chemical in animal feed and pet food imported from China has added to the mounting criticism of U.S. food safety agencies. But this case represents much more than simply governmental incompetence. It exposes the inherent weaknesses of an industrial global food system designed to benefit multinational agribusiness companies at the expense of public health.

Last year, the United States imported about $10 billion more in food, feed and beverages than it exported. Imports came from 175 different countries and represented a 60 percent jump over the last decade. Food and Drug Administration

(FDA) inspectors were simply overwhelmed. They were only able to examine physically 1.3 percent of food imports last year, about three-quarters of the already minute portion examined in 2003.

HARKNESS

Our food system's increasing dependence on imports is no accident. Import dependency is a defining characteristic of an industrial food model driven by U.S. farm and trade policies over the last half century on behalf of agribusiness. U.S. farm policy has encouraged the mass production of only a few cheap crops largely used as food ingredients, animal feed and exports. U.S. trade policy has aggressively pushed for the removal of trade barriers paving the way for the global food trade.

model is a national priority to pro-

Missing from this industrial duce healthy food to feed Americans. For example, most rural Midwest supermarkets, surrounded by farms, import nearly all their food from elsewhere in the country and around the world. Taken to an extreme, some chicken grown in the United States actually is sent to China to be processed and then re-exported back the United States!

We have built a system of production and trade that treats food the same as computer parts. Cracks in this system manifest themselves in different ways, including the loss of family farms in the United States and worldwide, declining soil and water quality, and a rise in food-related health problems including obesity. But food safety dangers get most of the headlines, because these can be quickly fatal.

The tainted animal feed case is a stark example of these vulnerabilities. Feed contamination in China found its way to the United States food supply through hogs in at least six states and at least 2.5 million chickens.

Within the United States, food contamination incidents on one farm or processing plant have hit large parts of the country. E. colitainted spinach from a California farm affected people coast to coast, killing three and sickening nearly 200. Salmonella-contaminated peanut butter from a Georgia ConAgra plant sickened at least 329 people in 41 states.

These breakdowns were accidental, but what about intentional contamination of food? As Tommy Thompson, former director of the Department of Health and Human Services, said in 2004, "I cannot understand why the terrorists have not attacked our food supply because it is so easy to do."

In the near term, we must boost the number of food safety inspectors, employ cutting-edge inspection technology, and strengthen oversight to rely less on industry self-regulation. But systemic changes are just as badly needed. A more decentralized food system that supports local production and consumption would greatly limit the impact of broad-scale contamination. Quite simply, we should set policy priorities to produce more of our own food, both nationally and regionally.

Consumers already endorse this approach. Locally grown products can be found on more and more store shelves. The number of farmers' markets around the country has skyrocketed. And many mainstream supermarkets are taking steps on their own to give consumers more information about where their food comes from.

Congress is writing a new Farm Bill. It's an opportunity to accelerate the transition toward a more locally based food system by funding greater crop diversification, incentives for local purchasing in schools and other government institutions, and full implementation of country of origin labeling in 2008. It's time to put the public's interest ahead of agribusiness in setting our nation's food policy.

Firm's printing wizardry could change the industry

BOISE, Idaho — Bill McGlynn spent more than two decades at Hewlett-Packard as the once-small company grew into a printing powerhouse. He was part of the team that brought the country the first LaserJet printer in 1984.

Now, he is chief executive of a little Idaho company you've never heard of, Memjet Home and Office, marketing new printer technology that an analyst says could change the printing industry.

Memjet-powered printers shoot ink through 70,000 nozzles to print a color, 8.5x11 page in a second. Blink and you'll miss it. The company promises fast, laser-quality prints at a third of the cost of LaserJet printers.

McGlynn insists his year-old company is no David to HP's Goliath indeed, he hopes to gain HP as a HP will be forced to pay attention, says Steve Hoffenberg, director of consumer imaging research for Lyra Research, which monitors the digital imaging industry.

"What Memjet is offering blows away anything else out there," Hoffenberg said.

Memjet did not develop the technology — an Australian company did — but it's McGlynn's job to spread it to companies that could use it to sell printers under their own brand names. That could include companies like Dell, Sony and Kodak, though McGlynn won't he Natural Gas Supply Association has predicted supplies will be adequate for the summer of 2007. The producer group believes this summer's heat won't match that of last year's. However, we note, their analysis also assumes summer production will not be hurricane-impacted.

Last week in Alaska, the state legislature passed a bill from Governor Palin to build a North Slope gas pipeline. If built, the pipeline would ship Alaskan North Slope gas to the lower-48 states.

The majors are opposed to the current bill saying it is too prescriptive and it "fails to address the fiscal terms for developing the gas fields." The bill doesn't have a long-term freeze on the gas-production tax. The majors want to see this before bidding on the project and investing upwards of $30 billion, the projected cost.

According to the Energy Information Administration (EIA), world natural gas consumption is expected to increase about 1.9 percent per year through 2030.

Quick news...

• The EIA recently released their International Energy Outlook 2007. The Department of Energy group anticipates energy consumption will increase 42 percent during the next two decades. To help meet that demand, the EIA expects Mideast producers will increase their oil production and non-conventional supplies will play an increasingly important role.

• The EIA expects coal's share of world energy to increase to 28 percent in 2030 from 26 percent in 2004. As coal plays a more important part in the global energy supply, the EIA suggests its carbon dioxide emissions will be greater than that of oil by the end of this decade.

 While coal is the fastest growing energy supply source, renewable consumption is expected to increase from 7 percent in 2004 to 8 percent in

• According to numerous oil executives cited by the New York Times, the push towards biofuels is a deterrent in expanding refining capacity whether at existing plants or in the form of new plants.

Last year, plans for some 1.7 million barrels per day of new capacity to be added over the next five years were outlined in front of Congress. Less than a year later, plans now only call for a capacity increase of around 1.0 million barrels per day. The decline may reflect a hesitancy to invest because it's not ultimately clear what incremental demand the biofuels industry will be able to offset.

• There is a new inflation-adjusted record gasoline price. The new mark is $3.292 per gallon. Previously, the Energy Information Administration used adjusted prices based on 2006 Consumer Price Index data and said the record was $3.22 per gallon.

Because prices last week matched the previous record set in March 1981, the EIA decided to revisit the measure and adjust prices using a projected CPI for the current month. The EIA said the price

Presidential material?

Even future presidents can get bad grades in school

By ANN SANNER

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Any kid can grow up to be president. Just look at their report cards.

Lyndon Johnson got a D in his third-grade grammar class. John Kennedy scored a 55 in eighthgrade Latin. George H.W. Bush's high school transcript shows marks in the 60s and 70s for many classes.

"We want to believe that there is a class of people who emerge early on as heirs to the throne, so to speak, but that's not the case," said Timothy Walch, director of the Herbert Hoover Presidential Library.

The youthful days of presidents are the subject of "School House to White House: The Education of the Presidents," an exhibit at the National Archives.

Through their own accounts, the cursive script of their early writings, report cards, playbills and photographs, the exhibit highlights just how normal most of them were in their youth.

Most attended public schools where math, reading and science were the core of their education. Some were also graded on citizenship and physical training. Franklin Roosevelt, Kennedy and Bush attended prestigious boarding schools.

Outside the classroom, they were athletes and performers.

Johnson, Roosevelt and Richard Nixon showed their talent in school plays. Bill Clinton was the drum major of his high school marching band. Gerald R. Ford captained his high school football team.

Dwight Eisenhower's competitive streak ranged from the class spelling bee to baseball diamonds and football fields. Spelling was his favorite subject in grammar school. "Either because the contest aroused my competitive instincts or because I had learned that a single letter could make a vast difference in the meaning of a word," he wrote.

Each had his own vulnerability.

Jimmy Carter was shy, but a high school encouraged him to join the debate team. Roosevelt wrote home from boarding school almost every day and spared no details. In one letter, the father of the New Deal revealed he had gained pounds and several "blackreceived no marks." He also asked his family to send grapes or other fruit.

Some were known for their behavior — good and bad.

Herbert Hoover's teacher described the 10-year-old as "a real boy, loved play, but his lessons came first." She said she never had to tell him to redo work or punish him boys who failed to is why I am urging you to meet the school's do the best you can," standards. Joseph Kennedy wrote. "I

He was nearly expelled during his senior year for his antics as a Mucker at Choate School in Connecticut. He broke up the group and was allowed to stay.

Kennedy's father once told him to step up his efforts in class. Instead of working hard in all subjects, Kennedy mainly focused on his favorites —

favorites —
English and history.
"It is very difficult to make up fundamentals that you have neglected when you were very young, and that do the best you can," Joseph Kennedy wrote. "I am not expecting too much, and I will not be disappointed if you don't turn out to be a real genius, but I think you can be a really worthwhile citizen with good judgment and underd was standing."

Punctuality was a probletter, lem for Johnson, whose ninth-grade report card shows that in two months he was tardy eight times.

Eisenhower could have skipped a grade if it weren't for his bad manners. "My conduct was not the equal of my reading ability," he once to- wrote.

Some of their junior is high school writings up show glimpses of the leadou ers they would become.

Nixon contemplated a career in politics even as eighth-grader.

"I would like to study law and enter politics for an occupation so that I might be of some good to the people," he wrote in a class autobiography.

Harry Truman's writings show his idealism but not a knack for appropriate punctuation. "A true heart a strong mind and a great deal of courage and I think a man will get through the world," he wrote in an English theme book in the archives' collection, a reproduction of which is on display until Jan 1, 2008.

In a classroom filled with eager students, picking out a future commander in chief is impossible, Walch said. "There's no way that you can identify some young man in the fifth grade and say he'll turn out to be president."

from now on will be adjusted using monthly forecasts, so, "We're going to have a moving target."

• Partially because of the biofuels boom, Financial Times reports food prices may experience their largest annual price increase in some 30 years.

 As corn prices continue to stand at near-record levels, feed costs are high as well. To cut down on their livestock production costs, a result of the boom in ethanol production, farmers are looking for alternative feedstock. The Wall Street Journal reports those include: trail mix, cookies, licorice, cheese curls, candy bars, french fries, frosted wheat cereal, peanut butter cups, grape skins, lemon pulp, tater tots, hash browns, waste cocoa, wafers from Kit Kat bars, Ramen noodles, etc.

• In Alaska, Prudhoe Bay oil field production was cut by 100 thousand barrels per day because of a discovery of a small leak. Recall last year, a shutdown of production sent crude prices higher, and it caused spot prices on the West Coast to spike. This new leak appears to be minimal, and off the announcement, crude prices continued weaker.

• As China attempts to reduce their trade surplus, the nation has announced it will cut tariffs on fuel imports to less than 3 percent from the current 6 percent. This could lead to more Chinese imports. Last week representatives with the EPA met with China's government. The talks are part of the U.S.-China Strategic Economic Dialogue discussions. The discussion centered on responsible economic growth that protects the environment.

• In New York City, all taxis are to be hybrids within five years. Michael Bloomberg, the mayor, claims the change will reduce emissions by one-half within the next decade. Currently, of the 13,000 cabs in NYC, only 375 are hybrids.

ton options with excellent fiber quality, high-yield potential and earliness. NexGen Roundup Ready Flex varieties are currently sold out, but there is still a good supply of Roundup Ready varieties, including NG1553R, NG2448R and NG3969R.

"Additionally, germplasm divested from Delta and Pine Land will be used to develop new cotton products under the Americot brand for the Midsouth, Southeast and the Southwest regions. This germplasm will complement our Americot cotton portfolio that includes the widely adapted AM 1532 B2RF, which is a Bollgard II/Roundup Ready variety. We will have one of the largest germplasm bases available to which we can combine with the latest and best biotechnology traits from across the world to benefit U.S. growers. We will have the freedom to stack anybody's technolo- Bollgard II with Roundup gy traits in future varieties. In 2008, Americot will launch two new Ready Flex products and three Roundup new Ready Flex products."

The acquisition is subject to approval by the Department U.S. Justice and is expected to close as soon as practical.

Dear Margo

When the Boss Is Lower Than a Snake's Belly

Dear Margo: I have been working for a company for about two months, and I really liked my boss at first. My boss is one of my boyfriend's best friends, so I had no trouble trusting him to begin with. Recently, though, he has been putting me in situations that are uncomfortable.

For example, he had a job training with just him and me, even though three other people needed to get the same training. (He trained the rest of them together.) He keeps trying to put me in situations where I am alone with him, and he is extremely friendly. When my boyfriend is around, though, he doesn't even look at me or talk to me.

Recently I heard of different incidents where he started doing this to other women at work and then propositioned them touched them inappropriately. (He is married.) I don't know whether I should quit my job, because I need the money, or if I should stick it out.

I almost want him to try something with me so I can get him fired and so his wife would find out he is a creep, because she deserves better. Could you give me some advice? — Creeped Out

Dear Creep: Guess what? This lech is not such a great chum of your boyfriend's. Between vour experiences and what you've heard, it is quite clear that sexual what's harassment is going on.

I would not even consider quitting, but I stop sleazebucket in his tracks one of two ways. You could tell him that you are quite aware of what's going on, and if it doesn't stop, you might have to guess whether you have mind. Or you might consider telling your boyfriend.

And the idea that when you are all together just frosts me. What a Margo, disgustedly

Troubled by a Neatnik

Dear Margo: I have been married for almost 20 years and have three children. My husband history of has a obsessive-compulsive behavior that I've managed to cope with until recently.

He organizes the freezer weekly, pulls weeds daily, has the house perfect when I get home from work — complete with dimmed lights and lit, scented candles, etc.

I have told him that managed with counseling medication. He has attended counseling in the past and has no desire to return. My problem is that I cannot mentally handle this

Is this lack of tolerance on my part a legitimate issue? I frequently remind him that Felix of "The Odd Couple" was the antagonist, charming but annoying. — Mrs. Unger (Going Felix Under)

Dear Mrs.: I do not wish to belittle OCD or your difficulty with it, but I do not exactly see where the problem is. Given what you write, there is something else bothering besides you your organized freezer, weedfree lawn and perfect house. If I were in your shoes, I would teach this man to cook and do laundry and consider myself reeeally lucky.

Because he has gone to counseling and has no desire to return, I think it's your turn. Some of your health issues have an emotional component, and I would hazard a guess that your unhappiness does not stem from what your husband is doing, but from some underlying trouble in the relationship.

It is time for an overhaul, and with good guidance I hope you can return to being the other half of a happy "odd couple." Margo, interpretively

When a Youngster Feels Rejection

Hi, Margo: I recently got engaged to the most wonderful guy, and we inform someone. Let him live together. My son's real father wants nothing his wife or his boss in to do with him and has let him know it. (He hasn't seen him in over a year.)

My fiance wants to adopt my son and for us socially he ignores you to be a family. The problem is that my 5year-old will not respect him. I have tried to have them bond and do things a kid would do with his father. My son says he "doesn't want a daddy." What do I do? — Wanting Peace and Harmony

Dear Want: It might be useful for the little boy to talk to a child psychologist. It is quite clear that he feels his father's rejection and probably thinks there is something wrong with him. It is understandable that he would be wary about another man in that position.

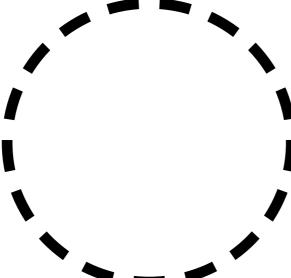

It is hard for any child to process a father's this is a disorder that can rebuff, let alone a 5-yearold. I do think time and good guidance will solve this problem. In the meantime, tell your intended not to move in on your son in terms of showering him with attention. Proceeding gradually and subtly works well in this type of situation.

Good luck. — Margo, unhurriedly

Corpus Christi police chief keeps job after being accused of rape

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Corpus Christi Police Chief Bryan Smith will keep his job after being accused of sexual assault by an ex-girlfriend, but he must submit to random alcohol tests and see a psychologist under an agreement reached with the city.

Smith will end a voluntary leave of absence when he returns to work Monday, more than a month after his 32-year-old former girlfriend alleged that Smith forced her into sex after showing up outside her apartment at 2 a.m.

A grand jury last week found there was not enough evidence to indict Smith, 46, who became engaged to another woman two weeks before the alleged sexual assault.

"There is no doubt that I used poor judgment in my personal life through my interaction with a former girlfriend," Smith said. "As a result, I embarrassed my fiancee, my family, my fellow police officers and myself. ... I blame no one but myself."

Smith has denied the accusation from the start, saying any sex was consensual and that the accuser was jealous over his recent engagement.

Smith became police chief last summer after 26 years with the force, which city manager Skip Noe said was a factor in the decision to not fire him.

"The guy made a mistake," Noe said. "There's no doubt about that and he admits that."

Under the agreement with the city, a 20-day suspension will be deducted from Smith's vacation time. He must also begin treatment with a psychologist, and faces being fired without appeal if psychologists deem that Smith can't perform his duties as chief.

Smith is also prohibited from drinking alcohol "to excess in public" and must submit to random alcohol tests for five years. Smith's accuser told police he was intoxicated when he arrived at her apartment, but Noe said there was no proof Smith was under the influence of alcohol.

Three more from high school test positive for TB

ARLINGTON (AP) — Three more people have tested positive for tuberculosis after they were exposed to a high school student who was diagnosed with the disease, the Tarrant County Health Department said Friday.

So far, seven people have had a positive TB test but none have an active case of the disease, said Gerry Drewyer, division manager for tuberculosis elimination in Tarrant County.

The cases are not the dangerous, extensively drug-resistant strain of tuberculosis like that carried by an Atlanta lawyer who was quarantined by the U.S. government this week.

Health workers began screening for the lung disease after a Bowie High School student was diagnosed in late May with an active case of pulmonary tuberculosis, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported for Saturday editions.

About 500 students and teachers believed to have had contact with the student were urged to get tested for TB. The health department has screened 175 people for the lung disease so far.

Health officials plan to return to Bowie High School on Monday to read tests performed Friday.

TB is caused by bacteria that can attack the kidney, spine and brain, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. The disease can be fatal if left untreated.

Most healthy people exposed to TB do not get sick. About 5 percent may develop the disease after exposure, according to a notice on the Arlington school district's Web site.

Three Texas soldiers killed in combat this week

FORT HOOD (AP) — Three Texas soldiers were killed this week by roadside bombs in Iraq, the Defense Department announced Friday.

Sgt. Bacilio E. Cuellar, 24, of Odessa, died Wednesday; Cpl. Jonathan A. Markham, 22, of Bedford, died Tuesday; and 1st Lt. Kile G. West, 23, of Pasadena, died Monday.

West and four other soldiers were killed on Memorial Day when their vehicle was struck by an explosive in Abu Sayda. All five were assigned to the 6th Squadron, 9th Cavalry Regiment, 3rd Brigade Combat Team, 1st Cavalry Division in Fort Hood.

Cuellar and two other soldiers were killed when their vehicle struck an explosive in Baghdad. All three were assigned to the 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 1st Infantry Division in Schweinfurt, Germany.

Markham was killed in a blast in Abu Sayda. He was assigned to the 6th Squadron, 9th Calvary Regiment, 3rd Brigade Combat Team, 1st Calvary Division in Fort Hood.

Texas man accused of carrying Uzi on street

NUEVO LAREDO, Mexico (AP) — A Texas man was arrested when police found him carrying a submachine gun under his arm while he walked along a street in this border city, Nuevo Laredo police said Friday.

Steven Newman Ryan, 30, of Houston, tried to toss the Uzi and run when he spotted police before his arrest Thursday, police said in a news release. Ryan faces charges of violating Mexico's federal weapons law that sharply restricts possession of guns.

Police said Ryan had refused to say

Body of missing girl found; search left game warden dead

GLEN ROSE (AP) — The body of Stephenville girl was found in the Paluxy River in Glen Rose on Friday, three days after she vanished while swimming in the river.

Courtney Butler was to have turned 17 on June 21. She was found before dawn Friday in the Big Rocks Park swimming area, which is about 10 miles downstream from where she vanished on Tuesday

A state game warden participating in the search drowned Tuesday when a boat he and another searcher capsized in the river. Teyran "Ty" Patterson was 28. A fellow game warden who was in the boat with Patterson was injured. Fifty-eight-year-old Danny Tuggle was released from a Fort Worth hospital after treatment.

Five state game wardens have drowned since 1919.

Ex-general manager of company pleads guilty to fraud

LUBBOCK (AP) — The former general manager of Wool Growers Central Storage Co. in West Texas faces up to 10 years in federal prison after admitting Thursday that he swindled his employer out of about $2 million.

Donovan Frank Laughlin, a former citizen of the year in Ozona, pleaded guilty in federal court in Lubbock to misappropriating more than $2 million between March 2000 and May 2006, according to a release from the U.S. Attorney's Office.

Laughlin, 60, of Lubbock, had worked as general manager since 1991.

The accusations first became known after suspicious producers alerted the company's board of directors, Texas Ranger Brooks Long has said.

Laughlin was named Citizen of the Year by the Ozona Chamber of Commerce in 2004.

Besides prison, Laughlin could be fined $250,000 and ordered to pay restitution

On May 3, Tonya McGuire Stalcup, a former bookkeeper at the company, pleaded guilty to swindling her employer out of about $200,000. She is awaiting sentencing.

Chairman of Texas Tech board of regents dies at 55

LUBBOCK (AP) — J. Frank Miller III, chairman of the Texas Tech University System's Board of Regents, died unexpectedly Friday, a school spokeswoman said. He was 55.

Texas Tech University spokeswoman Sally Logue Post did not have information about what caused Miller's death.

"This is devastating news for all of us in the Texas Tech family," Chancellor Kent R. Hance said in a statement. "Frank Miller was one of the best men I've ever known. He loved God, his country, his family and Texas Tech."

Miller was chairman and chief executive officer of JPI Companies, a national apartment development company he helped found. He served on the boards of several industry organizations and community groups, including the Dallas Chamber of Commerce and the Dallas Citizen's Council.

Triumph of Mind Over Matter

North 1 NT Pass Opening lead — jack of clubs. Declarer sometimes runs into a totally unexpected distribution of the missing cards. There is nothing he can do about rearranging the adverse cards, but if he keeps his cool, he can occasionally overcome unfortunate distribution and demonstrate that bad luck is not always fatal.

Consider this deal where South got to four spades and West led the club jack. Declarer won with the queen, and the only question seemed to be whether he'd make four spades

But when he led a trump to dummy's king at trick two, West went up with the ace, and East surprisingly showed out. It now appeared that West would score four natural trump tricks to defeat the contract, but South thought the matter over carefully and found a way to salvage his game

He took West's ten-of-clubs return at trick three with the ace, cashed the Q-J of hearts, then played dummy's ace of hearts and trumped it! Now, pursuing his aim to reduce his trump length to equal West's, declarer cashed the A-K of diamonds and ruffed a diamond.

By this time nine tricks had been played, and declarer was down to the J-9-8-6 of trumps while West had the Q-10-7-3. South had already won eight tricks — two hearts, two diamonds, two clubs and two ruffs and West had taken only one.

Declarer now led the spade nine, and whether West won with the ten or not, there was no way he could prevent South from scoring two trump tricks to make the contract. The two ruffs declarer had carefully maneuvered while reducing himself to the same number of trumps as West turned out to be the ideal medicine to overcome the 5-0 trump division. Never give up!

FBI nabs 3 in bank robbery that left bank teller dead and 2 wounded

CHICAGO (AP) Three suspects have been arrested in a bank robbery that exploded into gunfire and left a teller dead and two people seriously wounded, federal officials announced

The FBI has been investigating since the gunmen burst into the Illinois Service Federal Savings and Loan on May 22, got into a gunfight with a guard and fled by car with what authorities called a small amount of cash.

FBI spokesman Ross Rice said the three suspected bank robbers were in FBI custody but did not release their names. One man was arrested earlier this week, the second was arrested early Friday morning and the third arrest came Friday night, according to Ross and a release from the FBI's Chicago office.

All three men were expected to be charged with felony armed bank robbery, which carries a sentence of up to 25 years in prison, Ross said.

The bank teller, 23-yearold Tramaine Gibson, was struck in the back killed in the and exchange of fire. A female customer and a male security guard also were wounded.

The FBI had offered a $50,000 reward in its fiveweek hunt for the robbers.

The FBI said at least one of the men would have an initial court appearance Saturday.

Europeans may bristle over President Bush's Iraq policy, yet he spent the week rolling out initiatives they can more easily embrace — ones that address global warming, AIDS and the humanitarian crisis in Darfur.

"In all these endeavors, the American people can be proud of our global leadership and generosity," Bush said Saturday in his weekly radio address. "Our nation is delivering aid and comfort to those in need."

Bush leaves Monday for Europe, where he will visit six countries and attend a three-day meeting in Germany of the leaders of the world's industrialized nations. Unlike earlier summits chilled by discussion of Iraq, the Group of Eight agenda this year will focus on other international problems.

so directed of S+ Bush also Secretary Condoleezza Rice to meet with allies to draft a new U.N. Security Council resolution that would impose multilateral pressure on Sudan. Bush wants the resolution to impose new sanctions, expand the arms embargo and prohibit the Sudanese government from conducting offensive military flights over the troubled region.

On Wednesday, Bush urged Congress to authorize an additional $30 billion to fight AIDS in Africa over five years, doubling the current U.S. commitment. The money would provide treatment for 2.5 million people under the President's Emergency Program for was global warming. The president proposed that the United States and other nations that spew the most greenhouse gases meet and — by the end of next year — set a long-term strategy for reducing emissions. The president's proposal addresses "life after" 2012, the expiration date for the Kyoto Protocol, which the United States didn't sign.

Bush wants to bring India, China and other fast-growing countries to the negotiation table. He On Thursday, his topic envisions that each country will set goals on how they want to improve energy security, reduce air pollution and cut greenhouse gases in the next 10 to 20 years.

Critics said Bush wants to set unenforceable targets for curbing greenhouse gas, not specific limits on emissions. They contend his proposal ignores other international efforts on climate change that are already under way, and say he is trying to avoid taking action until he leaves office.

"The president has had six and a half years to enact meaningful limits on global warming pollution, and he has failed," Rep. Ed Markey, D-Mass., chairman of the House Select Committee on Energy Independence and Global Warming, said Saturday. "In fact, he hasn't even tried: Under President Bush, United States refused to even participate in the international effort to control global warming."

U.S. defense chief urges more help for Afghanistan from Asian nations

Gates on Saturday urged Asian nations to do more to defeat a global terrorist threat and to ensure that Afghanistan not be allowed to slip back into

His remarks to the annual Shangri-la conference on international security touched only lightly on China, whose military buildup had been a central focus of previous conferences. And while he mentioned the war in Iraq he focused more on broader themes of terrorism and U.S. commitments in Asia.

"In particular, the challenge posed by terrorists inspired by radical ideoloing to U.S. efforts to build a lasting coalition.

In remarks later in response to questions from his audience, Gates said that while the United States and other countries have made progress against al-Qaida and affiliated terrorist organizations, it is too early to judge which side is winning. And he said that the terrorist networks are continuing to expand.

"We have not made enough progress on trying to address some of the

SINGAPORE (AP) - root causes of terrorism," Defense Secretary Robert Gates said, whether it be despotism or poverty. "The danger remains very great.'

After Gates spoke, a Chinese general addressed the conference and said, in response to a question from the audience, that China expects a agreement in final September on a longstanding U.S. proposal to establish a "hotline" between the two countries' defense leaders for use during crises.

Zhang Gen. Lt. Qinsheng, deputy chief of China's General Staff and the highest ranking Chinese officer to participate in the Singapore conference, said technical gies cannot be overcome issues had held up a hotby any one nation — no line agreement. He said matter how wealthy or he would be attending powerful," he said, allud- meetings in Washington in September where "we will finalize" a deal.

In a speech notable for the absence of sharp jabs at other countries, Gates cited the largely peaceful conclusion of the Cold War as an example of how international cooperation can overcome a shared threat.

Gates emphasized the broad scope and historic basis of American interests and obligations in Asia and the Pacific.

"Some people have suggested that the United States may be neglecting Asia, because we have been too focused on Iraq, Afghanistan, and other hot spots. In reality, far from neglecting Asia, the United States is more engaged than before," he said.

"We have been extraordinarily busy in recent years as we reshape and strengthen our security ties based on shared interests."

He mentioned as examples a strengthening of military ties with India, Pakistan and Indonesia, as well as a U.S. push for a regional approach to addressing humanitarian crises and to countering terrorism.

"Based on this record it should be clear that the United States is not neglecting Asia, and will not do so in the future," he said. "We are an Asian power with significant and long-term political, economic and security interests. Our commitments elsewhere notwithour commitments in Asia." standing, we will fulfill

In his exchange later with members of his audience — primarily government officials and security experts — Gates was asked how long U.S. intelligence agencies think it will take Iran to build a nuclear weapon.

Annie's Mailbox •: Advice for those in need

Dear Annie: I have nine siblings ranging in age from 42 to 59. We have our ups and downs and I've usually been able to remain neutral in most of the skirmishes. My mom always called me the peacemaker.

Two years ago, my younger sister, "Donna," had a falling out with my older sister, "Marsha,' with whom she used to be very close. As far as I'm concerned, they were both wrong. Marsha apologized to Donna in an email that was copied to the entire family. Donna accepted the apology, and we all thought the storm was over.

Unfortunately, Donna continues to be hurtful and disrespectful toward Marsha, to the point where she won't sit in the same room with her. I've had numerous discussions with Donna about burying the hatchet, but she will have no part of it.

Recently, I received a birthday invitation for at me"? Donna's 5-year-old daughter. I found out Marsha has not been invited. I am having a hard time accepting this invitation because it feels as if Donna is forcing me to choose sides. Marsha has told me to go anyway and not upset Donna or her daughter. My other siblings are split 50-50.

My 4-year-old wants to go to her cousin's party, but my inclination is to decline and send a gift. But if I tell Donna why I'm not coming, I know she will become angry with me. I think it's worth the risk if it helps put an end to all this nonsense. Am I right to take a stand, or is it not my battle? — No Elephants in

Dear Annie: A few years to watch my big mouth when asked, without negago, I learned a lesson the hard way. I lost a dear friend because of gossip. Numerous times "Sue" confided in me about her unhappy marriage. One day, I told my husband about Sue and her problems. My loving husband has never gossiped in his life, but he ran into a friend mutual and blabbed the whole story to him. To make a long story short, this so-called friend called Sue. Of course, she was hurt and devastated. I apologized repeatedly, because I never intended for any confidence she told me to leave my lips, but it wasn't enough.

Dear Ohio: We're sure husband feels your absolutely rotten. We hope Sue will see your letter and forgive you.

Dear Annie: I am a registered nurse and work in a very busy hospital. I have put together a few suggestions for hospital visitors to help make things better:

1. Your loved ones are in the hospital for a reason, and they need our care. Please do not use their hospital room to hold a family reunion. 2. Please do not argue with us when we ask you to follow hospital policies. 3. Please leave the room ative comments or cold stares. The patients' privacy is more important than your comfort.

4. Please let the patients speak for themselves, if they are able.

5. Please realize that the nurses are extremely busy. We don't purposely make our patients wait, but we have to prioritize our tasks.

6. Don't shower the patient with flowers, posters, plants or other paraphernalia. Cards are nice, but bigger items should be sent directly to the patient's home.

7. When your family member has a roommate, be considerate of the patient. They other deserve privacy and a quiet atmosphere.

8. Don't bring trays of food into the room or have pizza delivered and expect the nurses or other staff to clean up after you.

9. And finally, to the patients: Don't tell me how much you wish you had gone to another hospital instead. I am doing the best job I can. — Burning Out Fast

Dear Burning Thanks for the useful suggestions. Please don't burn out too quickly hospitals need all the nurses they can get.

packed with Memjet components. A document printer blasts out 60 pages a minute. A photo printer delivers a 4x6 print every two seconds.

An $800 laser printer can produce 16 color pages per minute. A Memjet document printer will cost $300 to $500, and a photo printer will start at $150 — prices Lyra says are unmatched.

After 24 years with HP, McGlynn retired in 2005 and now is working to carve out a niche in a field dominated by his former employer. But he's not intimidated.

"I've had the good fortune to be involved with two revolutionary technologies that have changed the way people work," McGlynn said. "And we think this will do it in a bigger way than the original LaserJet."

The original HP LaserJet was a defining moment in the history of printing, ushering in the laser printing age. HP grew rapidly and today is the undisputed titan of printing in an industry with well-known makers like Canon and Epson. HP's Printing and Imaging Division in Boise is one of the best-performing divisions for the California-based company.

Ten years of research and development by Australian-based Silverbrook Research created the technology for the printer. Memjet licensed the technology from Silverbrook.

Like the LaserJet, the Memjet technology can print full-page copies at once.

Most inkjets use printing heads that move back and forth across the page dropping ink until the print job is complete. The back and forth motion limits speed.

Memjet uses a page-wide array of nozzles on 11 silicon chips with 6,400 nozzles each — 70,400 nozzles in all. The ink flows from the nozzles as the paper moves below it. The nozzles are so small that it takes an electron microscope to see them. Larger pages can be printed the same way by adding additional chips.

Using less-expensive inkjet technology with many nozzles keeps costs down, McGlynn said.

The company hasn't reached a deal with a printer manufacturer yet but is talking with well-known electronics companies not yet in the printer business, McGlynn said.

"Basically, what we're advocating is a new business model where we will provide the components to anybody who wants to build a printer," he said.

HP isn't impressed.

"It's not a breakthrough technology," said Glen Hopkins, HP's San Diegobased vice president for research and development for inkjet printers.

Hopkins said HP has introduced full-page inkjet printers in its Edgeline series printers that use large, stationary printheads — arranged in a line — to dispense ink across the entire width of the page as the paper passes beneath them.

That method produces printing speeds as fast as Memjet's, but at much higher prices. Edgeline printers start at just under $19,000.

Hopkins said the Edgeline is for serious businesses that need both speed and quality. He says the Memjet product sacrifices quality to keep the price low. "They're coming at it from a different angle and are assuming people want really fast speed but don't care that much about image quality and product robustness," he said. "They're making tradeoffs that we have not made in the past and don't anticipate making in the future."

Not so, says Kim Beswick, Memjet's vice president of marketing. Beswick said the company is achieving high quality and speed.

Beswick said Memjet has no plans to compete with HP's Edgeline products, but sees a niche for its technology with small and medium businesses and consumers who want speed and economy.

Hoffenberg said HP is wrong to dismiss Memjet so quickly.

"I've seen a good amount of what Memjet is doing, and it is definitely a substantial technology, and there are clearly people involved who do know the business," he said. "Inside the executive level of HP, they need to actively figure out what they can about Memjet."

AMR defends executives' sales of $19 million in stock

FORT WORTH (AP) — Top executives at AMR Corp., the parent of American Airlines, wasted no time cashing in stock bonuses they received, a rush that analysts said may reveal insiders' worries about prospects for the company in a tough environment.

Within five days of getting the bonuses in April, Chief Executive Gerard Arpey and four other top executives cashed out shares worth about $19 million. In some cases, it was one-third of their AMR stock holdings.

"This was the highest level of (insider) selling in any quarter in about five years at AMR," said Ben Silverman, research director at Insiderscore.com, a Princeton, N.J., firm that tracks insider transactions.

"Not only were they getting the shares, they were taking profit right away," he said. "It sends a signal where they thought the stock was going to go in the short term."

Mark LoPresti, an analyst who tracks insider trading for Thomson Financial, said it often foreshadows a further decline in the stock price when executives, with significant knowledge of the company's operations, sell while the stock price is falling.

AMR shares closed at $31.96 the day the stock bonuses were paid. By April 23, the last day of insider selling, they had fallen to $27.78. They ended Friday at $28.47, up 12 cents on the day.

A spokesman for AMR, Andrew Backover, said the stock awards helped make up for salaries and cash bonuses below those of comparably sized companies. More than 800 managers got the awards, with values tied to the rise in AMR stock from 2004 through 2006.
