Firefighters with the Big Spring Fire Department inspect a portion of the building at KBYG Radio — located in Comanche Trail Park — following a fire at the facility early Tuesday morning. According to emergency officials, the fire is believed to have started near the building and spread to a grassy area. Damage was minimal.

Gulf Coast braces as Dolly approaches

By CHRISTOPHER SHERMAN

Associated Press Writer

McALLEN — Texas mobilized National Guard troops and residents along the Gulf Coast near the Mexican border were buying plywood, flashlights and gasoline as Tropical Storm Dolly gained strength early Tuesday over the Gulf on its way to becoming a hurricane before it hits land.

Hurricane warnings were in effect for parts of the Texas and Mexico coasts, meaning hurricane conditions were expected in those areas by the end of Tuesday.

Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami said Dolly's winds were expected to strengthen before landfall to hurricane force, which would mean at least 74 mph.

At 8 a.m. EDT, data from a NOAA plane indicated maximum sustained winds had increased to near 65 mph with higher gusts.

Dolly was expected to make landfall later this week and bring with it high winds and up to 15 inches of rain and coastal storm surge flooding of 4 to 6 feet above normal high tide

Emergency officials feared major flooding problems and urged coastal residents to prepare. Gov. Rick Perry activated 1,200 National Guard troops and other emergency crews and Shell Oil said it was evacuating workers from oil rigs in the western Gulf of Mexico. Shell said it didn't expect its production to be affected by the storm.

Even as far up the coast as the Houston area, Harris County officials told residents to be ready in case the storm changes course and heads their way.

The National Hurricane Center issued a hurricane warning from Brownsville north to Port O'Connor. Meanwhile, a tropical storm warning was issued from north of Port O'Connor to the San Luis Pass, a strait south of Galveston.

Mexico also announced a hurricane warning from Rio San Fernando north to the U.S. border. A tropical storm warning and a hurricane watch were also in effect from La Pesca to Rio San Fernando.

Forecasters said Dolly was expected to make landfall late Tuesday or early Wednesday as a Category 1 hurricane, which has with sustained winds of 74 mph to 95 mph.

Texas officials said they wouldn't order evacuations along the coast unless Dolly strengthens to a Category 3, with sustained winds of at least 111 mph. At 8 a.m. EDT Tuesday, the center of Large-item pickup scheduled for Friday

By THOMAS JENKINS

Staff Writer

After collecting more than 10 tons of garbage in Big Spring's District 3 last month, officials with the city of Big Spring hope participation in Friday's large item pick-up in District 4 is just as impressive.

"It's the most we've ever collected in a district," said Assistant City Manager Todd Darden. "On average, we only get about 3 tons each time we do this, so we were very pleased with last month's numbers. It's participation and accomplishments like this that make the effort city employees put into the program worth it."

The program, which aims to help area residents remove large, cumbersome items from their property they might not otherwise be able to transport to the landfill, began in April in the city's District 1, and is slated to can vas District 4 — represented by Councilwoman Gloria McDonald — Friday.

"We're not sure why we were able to collect so many items last month," said Darden. "However, we're hoping to see good participation from residents Friday as well."

While Darden is hopeful city residents will take advantage of the annual effort, residents do need to be aware of what can and cannot be picked up, he said.

"Some of the more typical items we pick up are appliances that don't work anymore, couches and mattresses," said Darden. "Those are the kind of things that we can take to our landfill and we're allowed to pick up. However, we can't pick up any household hazardous waste. That means any kind of chemicals including lawn

BSHS, CHS bring new faces into coaching ranks

New Steer coaches with local ties | Coahoma excited about late hires

By JONATHAN HULL

Sports Editor

In coaching, changes are very common-

Big Spring High School made some changes last week, bringing in two new faces to head up their volleyball and girls' basketball programs and promoting a familiar name as the new head coach of the softball program.

Meghan Blake moves to Big Spring from Denver, Colo., to take over the volleyball program. Mike Warren, who is a 1976 Big Spring graduate and the son of Dr. Charles Warren, will be the new leader of the girls' basketball team. Finally, John Sparks, who has been the assistant coach of the softball program for the past three years, has been promoted to head coach.

Blake, who attended Big Spring High See BSHS, Page 2B

during her freshman, sophomore and junior years before moving away, has been coaching one of the upper levels of traveling teams in Colorado.

"Meghan brings good experience to our volleyball program. She's been coaching at a level we'd like to see our girls reach," said Big Spring Athletic Director Phillip Ritchey. "She's a fireball as far as coaching volleyball goes."

Blake replaces Amanda Whitaker, who coached the Lady Steers for two years and has been reassigned to the junior It's also a homecoming for Warren, who Ritchey is very familiar with.

"I've known Mike for most of my life," Ritchey said. "He's got a ton of experience in the basketball ranks. We hired Better late than never.

Coahoma High School made some late hires in the head coaching ranks, but Athletic Director Kim Nichols is confident in the three new faces the administration has brought in to head up four different programs.

"I feel very good about the people we brought into our system," Nichols said. "We think we hired the right people for the job."

Joining the Coahoma coaching staff is Stacey Martin, who comes from Comanche to take over the football and boys' track programs; Randal Petty, who takes over the girls' basketball program after heading up the same sport at Big Spring; and Shane Fuller comes from Muleshoe to head up the baseball team.

Martin, son of Moss Elementary School Principal George Martin, takes over the football program and will also be the head track coach. He replaces Jay Kennedy in both positions. Kennedy remains at Coahoma, but solely as the school's principal — a position he took over officially Jan. 18.

"We wanted to bring in someone we were somewhat familiar with to coach the team because we were having to hire so late in the summer," Nichols said. "Jay coached Stacey when he was in high school at Big Spring. So there was a good level of familiarity with him."

Martin was previously a defensive coordinator and head track coach at Comanche High School. This will be his first head coaching job in football, though. He'll

Rangers plaster Chicago

Hamilton, Blaylock homer in 6-1 win

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — A rare day off helped Josh Hamilton recharge himself after a long week.

Hamilton homered in his first career at-bat at U.S. Cellular Field, hitting a three-run shot, and Hank Blalock added a tworun homer to power the Texas Rangers to a 6-1 win over the Chicago White Sox on Monday night.

After getting a day off Sunday, Hamilton hit his 22nd homer, a 422-foot blast to straightaway center, in the third off Javier Vazquez. He has 24 RBIs in his last 25 games and 98 RBIs through the team's first 100 games.

"Well, he certainly looked fresh tonight," Rangers manager Ron Washington said. "I think his concentration was a lot better. He didn't chase as many pitches as he was chasing.'

Hamilton starred at Yankee Stadium last Monday night, slugging a record 28 home runs in the first round of the Home Run Derby. This night, he needed just one.

"I would never take a day off," Hamilton said. (Washington) has been in the game long enough to know when his players need a day.

Giants send Shockey to New Orleans

By BRETT MARTEL

AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS Jeremy Shockey caught more passes for more yards as a rookie — the one season when New Orleans Saints coach Sean Payton was his offensive coordinator in New York than any other.

The Giants, meanwhile, proved they didn't need their disgruntled star tight end to pull off one of the most stunning playoff runs in NFL history, winning three postseason contests on the road and then beating previously undefeated New England in the Super Bowl — all while the injured Shockey watched from afar.

So the Giants sought to do both themselves and Shockey a favor on Monday, cutting ties with the four-time Pro Bowl selection in a deal the Saints had been trying to pull off for months.

The Giants will get second- and fifth-round picks in the 2009 draft in exchange for sending Shockey to the team he wanted to play for most. The trade must be approved by the league and is contingent on Shockey passing a physical.

"I have had a relationship with coach Payton and I appreciate what he has done as a head coach," Shockey said in a statement released by the Saints. "The Saints have a him for a lot of the same reasons we hired Meghan."

Warren has been a head coach of the boys' basketball programs at Anson and Sudan and was most recently as assistant coach at Lubbock Coronado.

He replaces Randal Petty, who left after one season at the helm of the Lady Steers to coach the girls' basketball program at Coahoma. The Lady Steers suffered through a winless season last year.

Sparks is the husband of Howard College President Dr. Cheryl Sparks. He's been a part of three playoff teams with the Lady Steers during his tenure with the program.

He takes over for Jennifer Reyes, who resigned from the position for the second time in the past three months. Reyes originally vacated the post after the end of the Lady Steers' playoff run last season. However, she asked the school board to reconsider and the members obliged by reinstating her.

Reves stepped down a second time last week and the administration moved quickly to hire Sparks.

"John was the best option we had," Ritchey said. "He's done a great job with the program."

Ritchey said the most important part of the hiring process was to bring in coaches, who would be willing to invest more than just a couple years into their programs.

"We wanted coaches with ties_____ to Big Spring. All three of the head coaches we hired have a background here," he said. "We want people who want to stay here for a while and try to build our programs."

also assist with powerlifting.

Petty endured a rough season at Big Spring in which the Lady Steers didn't win a single game. However, that didn't thwart Nichols and the administration from wanting to bring him in.

"He had a tough year at Big Spring, but we think he handled it well," Nichols said. "After his interview, it didn't take long to see that if he was interested in us, then we were definitely interested in him."

The coming year will be Petty's second as a head coach of a girls' basketball program. He replaces Chris Sumrall, who left to head up the Clyde girls' basketball Sumrall led the team. Bulldogettes to the playoffs all three seasons he was there and posted a 73-30 overall record. He won his 200th game while at Coahoma.

Fuller led Muleshoe to the playoffs in baseball for the first time in that school's history. He played college baseball at Lubbock Christian University. He'll inherit a Bulldogs' team that returns eight starters.

"We knew when we started searching for someone to take over this job that we wanted to bring in someone with head coaching experience," Nichols said. "What Shane did at Muleshoe was impressive and we think he's a nice fit for us."

Fuller replaces Brad Harman, who was 112-48 in five seasons at Coahoma. Harman left after this season to take over the baseball program at Llano High School. He took the Bulldogs to the regional semifinals twice during his tenure.

All three coaches inherit programs that are heading into what is viewed as a tougher district, including Ballinger, San Angelo Grape Creek, Wall, Colorado City and Tuscola Jim

"We know we're headed into a tougher district, but we felt like we brought in coaches that are ready to handle that," Nichols said. "We're ready to attack it."

The All-Star break kind of wore me out, it really did. I think it was good for me."

Blalock added his fourth homer in the eighth and Texas (52-48) tied its season-best mark, at four games over .500. The Rangers took two of three from the White Sox before the All-Star break. Chicago (55-43) has lost three straight, a season-worst slump at home.

White Sox outfielder Carlos Quentin led off the bottom of the fourth with his 24th home run, but Chicago missed several opportunities to score, hitting into three double plays against Scott Feldman. They also committed two errors. White Sox manager Ozzie Guillen kept his decision, but looked pretty cool after the game, but with the trading deadline approaching, he warned his players to shape

"It seems like a couple players aren't comfortable," Guillen said. "I'm not going to make it comfortable for anybody. If you don't do the job, we'll see what we can do with you.

"My time, my clock, it goes by minutes now. I don't want to be negative about the ballclub because we're playing well, we're still in first place, even if we're not playing good. But it's time for people to start stepping up and play better."

Vazquez (7-8) isn't one of the players Guillen is targeting. Vazquez struck out 10, tying a season-high, and gave up three runs and walked two in seven innings. He lost his third straight sharp.

"Hopefully I'll start rolling from now on," he said. "I felt Guillen said, "Javy threw the ball unbelievably good. If Vazquez continues to throw the ball good, it will be a great second half for us."

Feldman (4-3), recalled before the game, won his third straight decision. He replaced Eric Hurley, who was scratched with stiffness behind his left shoulder. He gave up one run on four hits in six innings. He walked three and struck out one, throwing just 85 pitches.

Feldman pitched himself out of several jams. In the second, he gave up a one-out double to Paul Konerko and walked Nick Swisher, but Joe Crede grounded into the White Sox's first double play. Feldman then got dou-

"I sort of got into trouble a couple times, but I was able to make a good pitch and get a ground ball," he said. "I was trying to get ground balls and when you're doing that you have to have a good defense, and we had a great defense tonight turning those double plays."

Jarrod Saltalamacchia singled with one out in the third and Vazquez walked Michael Young. Hamilton then took a 2-0 pitch to deep center to make it 3-0.

David Murphy doubled with two outs in the eighth on a bloop to center and Blalock took Boone Logan's first pitch to right for his first home run since April 18 sacrifice fly in the ninth.

Shockey caught 74 passnamed Rookie of the Year the stands during a playoff in 2002, his lone season working with Payton, whom he'll be reunited with on the practice field this week.

The Saints report to training camp in Jackson, Miss., on Wednesday, when Shockey will join several other tight ends on New Orleans' roster, including last year's starter, Eric Johnson, along with Billy Miller and Mark Campbell.

Shockey, who spent six seasons with the Giants, broke his leg against the Washington Redskins on Dec. 16.

He is known for his receiving ability more than his blocking, and was unhappy even before the injury — he was asked to block in addition to catch. Once hurt, he didn't like the fact that much was made of the Giants winning with rookie Kevin Boss in his place.

"Jeremy brought great energy to the game every time he stepped on the field," said Giants team president John Mara, son of the late Wellington Mara, a longtime owner of the team. "He had a close relationship with my father from the time we drafted him, and I had a couple of long conversations with Jeremy this Darcy spring and summer. From Michael Matthews. those conversations, it was apparent to me that a fresh start was the best thing for us and for Jeremy."

The Giants, a proven winner without Shockey in the lineup, cut ties with a player who provided plenty of excitement on the field and plenty of distractions off it — once es for 894 yards and was throwing a cup of ice in game in San Francisco, criticizing Giants fans for leaving a game early, blaming Giants coach Tom Coughlin's staff for a loss in 2006 and skipping voluntary team workouts in favor of an offseason program run by his agent.

> The Giants also unload the remainder of a fiveyear, $31.2 million contract extension that Shockey signed in 2005.

Shockey had 371 catches for 4,228 yards and 27 touchdowns with the Giants.

He was drafted out of Miami with the 14th overall pick in the 2002 draft and was the first tight end taken that year..

The Giants' comments about the trade were complimentary of Shockey as if to echo the sentiment: "No hard feelings."

Coughlin called the departing tight end "an outstanding football player who plays the game full speed and plays the game the way it was meant to be played."

"I wish him the best," the coach added.

The Giants still have five tight ends, including Boss, who started the last six games of last season. The others are rookie Eric Butler, Jerome Collins, Johnson

"We have five young kids who are all vying for the position," Coughlin said. "The tight end position will be a very competitive position in training camp."

The Saints have been seeking a tight end who is a downfield threat. Eric Johnson, who started 12 games for the Saints last season, caught 48 passes for 378 yards and two touchdowns.

"Jeremy is a player that we are excited to have on our roster. He is someone I am familiar with as a player," Payton said. "He brings a skill set to the position that I feel will be Rosenhaus, called last seaa tremendous benefit to our offense."

in any row, column or box.

The Saints' offense has been among the best in the NFL during Payton's first two seasons as coach, with Brees eclipsing 4,000 yards passing in each of those season in New Orleans.

The hope in New Orleans is that Shockey's addition as a receiving threat, when combined with receiver Marques Colston and Reggie Bush coming out of the backfield or lining up in the slot, will give Brees the options he needs to move the ball, no matter what defenses attempt.

son a difficult one for his client, who was looking for a change of scenery. "He's been one of the most successful tight ends in NFL history, but now I think he's going to be more prolific in the Saints' offense," Rosenhaus said. "I don't think Jeremy could ask for a better situation."

The bidding: North East South West Pass Pass Pass Opening lead — king of diamonds. Every so often a hand arises where there's a distinct disadvantage to being a good player. The expert who sees all and knows all sometimes makes plays that wouldn't occur to a lesser player, and as a result occasionally pays a price for his superior knowledge. The moral is that ignorance is sometimes bliss.

Consider this deal played in a national pair championship. South quickly got to six spades, and West led a diamond, taken by dummy's Declarer, a well-known expert, played two rounds of trumps and then four rounds of hearts, discarding a diamond from dummy. The diamond discard wasn't important as such, but it was by no means a haphazard play. South had a very shrewd purpose in mind. Declarer next led a club, and West, also a top-notch player, stepped right up with the ace. That ended the play, and declarer made the slam.

Had West followed low on the club lead, South would have had a difficult guess as to whether to play the king or the jack from dummy.

Whether he would have guessed correctly no one will ever know. In the actual layout, declarer succeeds by playing the king, but if West has the queen and East the ace, the jack is the winning play South's method of play would probably have been a waste of time against an inferior West player. Declarer intentionally went out of his way to show West he had started with six spades and four hearts.

By cashing his hearts and discarding a diamond from dummy, South hoped to persuade West that he had started with two diamonds and one club. The actual West swallowed the bait, apparently believing he'd lose his ace unless he took it while he had the chance.

Extradition process under way to send Radovan Karadzic to U.N. tribunal

BELGRADE, Serbia (AP) — A judge finished interrogating former Bosnian Serb President Radovan Karadzic early Tuesday, triggering a procedure to hand $over the \, accused \, mastermind \, of \, Europe's \, worst \, mass acre \,$ since World War II to a U.N. war crimes tribunal.

Karadzic, a psychiatrist turned die-hard Serbian nationalist politician, was arrested by Serbian forces and taken before the country's war crimes court on Monday, indicating imminent extradition to the U.N. war crimes tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands.

"The questioning is over," investigating judge Milan Dilparic said Tuesday, referring to the first step in a legal process that includes presenting Karadzic with the indictment and allowing three days for him to appeal any decision to extradite him.

While Serbia braced for a possible reaction from ultranationalists who are believed to have helped shelter Karadzic over the years, Bosnian Muslims jammed the streets of Sarajevo early Tuesday in celebration of the queasy about a federal rescue of mortgage giants Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac are coalescing around the idea of letting the government slap limits on the multimilliondollar pay packages of their executives.

Key lawmakers — puzzling over how to explain to constituents why they voted to bail out the troubled government-sponsored firms — see new curbs on compensation for the top officers as a crucial measure to cut down on the cringe factor.

At a time when Fannie Mae's and Freddie Mac's troubles have investors worried and the government ready to jump in with untold sums of cash, the lavish pay of the two companies' executives is increasingly difficult to defend, they say.

Sen. Bob Casey, D-Pa., says Fannie and Freddie "have had their hard-won credibility undermined in recent weeks," on the heels of major accounting scandals at the firms in 2003 and 2004.

FDA finds salmonella strain in jalapeno at Texas plant, prompting new warning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government inspectors finally have a big clue in the nationwide salmonella outbreak: They found the same bacteria strain on a single Mexican-grown jalapeno pepper handled in Texas and issued a stronger warning for consumers to avoid

But Monday's discovery, the equivalent of a fingerprint, doesn't solve the mystery: Authorities still don't know where the pepper became tainted — on the farm, or in the McAllen, Texas, plant, or at some stop in between, such as a packing house.

Nor are they saying the tainted pepper exonerates tomatoes sold earlier in the spring that consumers until last week had been told were the prime suspect.

Still, "this genetic match is a very important break in the case," said Dr. David Acheson, the Food and Drug Administration's food safety chief.

For now, the government is strengthening its earlier precaution against hot peppers to a full-blown warning that no one should eat fresh jalapenos — or products such as fresh salsa made from them — until it can better

Indian lawmakers gather for confidence vote, determine fate of U.S. nuclear deal

NEW DELHI (AP) — India's government faces a tooclose-to-call confidence vote Tuesday that could scuttle a landmark nuclear energy accord with the United States and lead to early elections.

The vote caps a week of intense politicking that has seen the government rename an airport for a lawmaker's father, promise a high-level job to another, and — two rival politicians allege — hand out millions of dollars to many others in an effort to survive.

But hours ahead of Tuesday's vote, observers said the Congress Party-led coalition that has governed India since 2004 was anywhere from one to 10 votes short of the 272 it needs in a full house and was banking on as many as 10 opposition lawmakers to abstain.

Keenly aware that another government fell a decade ago after losing a confidence motion by a single vote, both the Congress party and its opponents were doing whatever they could to muster their forces. Hospitalized lawmakers were being wheeled into Parliament to vote and a handful jailed for crimes ranging from murder to extortion had been temporarily released from prison.

If the government loses, the nuclear pact — seen as the cornerstone of a budding strategic partnership between New Delhi and Washington — will likely be finished, and early elections will probably be called for later this year, months before the government's term ends in May.

Nominees to top Air Force jobs say they'll try to regain public's trust after nuclear mistakes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The two men nominated to replace the ousted Air Force leadership say they'll work to restore trust and confidence in the beleaguered service, under fire for poor handling of its nuclear duties and other missteps.

In documents obtained by The Associated Press, Air Force Acting Secretary Michael Donley and chief of staff nominee Gen. Norton A. Schwartz also defended the branch's much-criticized purchasing system, saying it needs improvement but is "not fatally flawed."

Their comments were made in questionnaires each submitted to the Senate Armed Service Committee, which was to hold their confirmation hearing Tuesday.

Senators want to hear what Donley and Schwartz will do to take the Air Force in a new direction. But some are skeptical about whether the leadership change can solve systemic problems at the service.

OUR VIEWS

Senate's holdup was shameful

he Federal Election Commission, the regulatory agency that enforces campaign finance laws, convened for a meeting on July 10. It was the first assembly of the six FEC commissioners in more than six months.

If that seems unusual for an election year, it

The election watchdog should have been investigating and enforcing statutes during this critical period that covered the party primaries — party primaries that took in record amounts of money.

Instead it was dormant, ostensibly because of a partisan impasse on Capitol Hill. Senate Democrats objected to one of President Bush's five nominees.

Traditionally, the Senate votes on presidential nominees to the FEC as a group. The FEC requires a four-person quorum to operate. So without Senate approval of the nominees, FEC chambers sat empty.

Members of both parties, however, had an interest in keeping the FEC in suspended animation. Ethics rules that Congress passed last year require members to disclose how much money big lobbyists so-called bundlers are raising for their campaigns. But the rules can't be enforced until the FEC draws up the regulations to implement them.

Hans von Spakovsky, the disputed nominee, removed his name from consideration in May. The Senate finally voted to approve the nominees in June, and the first meeting of the FEC and its five new commissioners took place this month.

The bundling disclosure laws can't be enforced until 90 days after the FEC finalizes the regulations, which means there's no chance they'll take effect before Election Day.

That's only one of the political shenanigans accomplished by the Senate holdup.

Finally, the FEC is on the job in 2008. But the Senate deserves no gratitude for doing what it should have done months ago.

Dealing with death is never going to be easy hen my father died, so many years ago, my heart was broken. And then it got broken again. In the hours and days after his death, I was comforted by family and friends. But I couldn't help but notice who was missing, people I cared about, people I thought cared about me, who didn't call, didn't come, weren't there. Later, much later, I asked a few of those people why: Where had they been? Why didn't they come? And the answer was always the same.

They didn't know what to say. They didn't know what to do. So they didn't say anything. They didn't

Here is the truth. It isn't hard. It isn't scary. Death is not contagious. The answer is: Go. Say you are sorry. Tell a funny story. As my friend Jack used to say, 90 percent of life is just showing up. In hard times, it's probably closer to 99 percent.

It's easier, of course, when the person who died was very old, when they lived a good life, had the chance to follow their dreams and see their children and even their grandchildren grow up. Then you can say, it is God's will, the way of the world, a life well-lived. Then you can smile and say, look what they left behind, all the children who live on. Let's drink to him. Then you can say, if you're younger still, this is not about me.

My father died at 54. There were children, not grandchildren. My best friend died at 53. Her mother was still alive. Her oldest grandchild was a baby. God's will? I don't

I am sitting on a plane flying to my friend Tony Snow's wake. He was 53. He had a wife he loved, three children he adored. In a business that is full of snakes and sleazebags, of cheaters and charlatans, he was a sweetheart, a decent and honorable man who loved his family, his country and his work. Why him? Because his mother died of the same disease when she was 37? Bad genes is just not a good answer.

Here is what I know. You never stop missing the people you love. It never gets "all better," the way the scrapes and bruises of childhood do, the way career disappointments and broken romances do. It never goes away. It just becomes part of your history.

It was my friend Patrick who told me that, after my father died. At a time when others were pulling away, he would sit with me. His brother had died when he was a kid. His family was ripped apart. And then time passed. Life went on. And his brother, and his brother's death, became part of his history, a scar and not a gaping wound.

After my father died, I was sad all the time. I worked and I cried. I looked at the world through tearstained eyes. I took pills to sleep. I tried not to dream. I put one foot in front of another and tried my best not to fall.

I would see people laughing, partying and having fun, and think, that will never be me. I will never be happy again.

And then one day, I realized I had gone a whole hour without reliving my father's final days, without feeling angry with every middle-aged man I saw. An hour became two. I started being able to remember my father as he had been when he was well, when he was truly alive and not lying in a hospital bed with tubes everywhere.

When I quit smoking for the last time, I thought about cigarettes all the time — when I had my first cup of coffee or my second, when I talked on the phone, when I got in the car or ordered a drink or finished dinner. And then I started getting used to doing all those things without my trusty Marlboro. I went an hour without thinking about smoking, and then two hours and then a whole day, and then I was an ex-smoker, someone who used to smoke and not someone who does.

Death is harder. I never stopped missing my dad. It never went away.

The list of those I miss just keeps growing. But life goes on. I became who I am. Tony will live on in Jill and their children, and in all of us he touched with his kindness and decency.

There should be more to say, but for now, that will do. I will be there. It is not so hard.

Security measures must match threat level

magine that Savana is your 13-year-old eighth-grader, an honor student sitting in math class when the assistant principal pulls her down to the office.

On the assistant principal's desk is Savana's planner, which she had lent to classmate Marissa. But there also are some knives, cigarettes and a lighter. None of those extras belong to Savana, but she owns up to giving Marissa the planner to hide cigarettes from her parents. Then there are the ibuprofen pills found in Marissa's pocket. As is typical, Savana's school prohibits bringing prescription or over-the-counter drugs on campus. Not mine, Savana says. But the assistant principal doesn't believe it because Marissa said she got them from Savana.

P.

Savana agrees to a search of her backpack, which turns up nothing. Not satisfied, the assistant principal tells his aide and the school nurse to strip Savana to her underwear. When they don't find anything in her shoes, socks, jacket, T-shirt or pants, they have her pull out her bra to the side then shake out the crotch of her panties.

No Midol or Aleve falls out, but Savana is humiliated, on the verge of tears.

Absolutely outrageous, you say? Incredibly intrusive? Completely unjustified?

As her parent, that's a no-brainer. But put yourself in the assistant principal's place.

At the first school dance, there's a whiff of liquor around some of the students, including Marissa and Savana.

A liquor bottle and cigarettes turn up in the girls' bathroom. They aren't linked to Savana.

But more than a month later, a student named Jordan tells you that he got sick after taking pills he got from an unnamed classmate. Jordan also says that Savana's mom bought alcohol that students drank at her home before the school dance. (Savana and Mom deny that.) A week later, Jordan tells you that Marissa gave him prescription-strength ibuprofen and that other kids planned to pop pills at lunchtime. That's when you take Marissa out of class, and she tells you Savana gave her ibuprofen and Naprosyn.

Well, you'll be darned if you're going to have students bringing dangerous substances to school and endangering others. So you go after Savana to get to the bottom of it.

A reasonable reaction? Maybe. But a strip search? Until last week, federal courts in California had ruled that officials at Safford Middle School in Arizona were within their authority.

Thank goodness the 9th Circuit came to its senses when the full court reconsidered the case.

The Court of Appeals (which covers California and other western states) said school officials violated Savana's Fourth Amendment right against unreasonable searches and seizures, meaning Savana's mother can proceed with her civil rights lawsuit.

A student search in a school setting is considered reasonable when it is "not excessively intrusive in light of the age and sex of the student and the nature of the infraction."

But, Judge Kim Wardlaw wrote for the majority, "the public school officials who strip searched Savana acted contrary to all reason and common sense as they trampled over her legitimate and substantial interests in privacy and security of her person."

But only six of 11 judges agreed. Two judges said that the strip search was unreasonable but that the law wasn't clear enough for the officials to have known that, so they shouldn't be held liable.

Three other dissenters said school officials get wide latitude to protect students' health and safety and neutralize danger.

The problem in this case is that no one explicitly implicated Savana as a drug supplier behind the pill-fest planned for lunch. The most officials had was the word of a classmate who apparently was protecting her own behind. And nothing but the assistant principal's own suspicions suggested that Savana would be hiding ibuprofen in her undies. Zero-tolerance policies that ban even over-the-counter medication for pain and headaches seem overzealous.

At the same time, it's naive to think that some teenagers won't abuse even the most innocuous drugs - and invite their classmates to join in.

A locker search is one thing. A backpack or purse search somewhat more intrusive. But snooping inside a 13-year-old's underwear, for a common painkiller no less, that's a technique that belongs in a jail, not in a school nurse's office unless there's more evidence of a grave and immediate threat.

Bird Poop: Young wrens able to find paradise eard him was her description of the petite songbird as it darted around in the barn. Watching the male bring twigs and sticks he had gathered outside, she knew it was building more than one nest to tempt a mate. Soon debris could be seen under the center of a saddle tucked away on a shelf. Unable to locate another nest, she assumed the bird was content with that area. It wasn't until a week later that she noticed activity coming and going from a row of pipe stacked near the entrance. Once the bird had left, the woman decided to check the ends of the pipes. Finally, she found the newly placed nesting materials tightly interlocked in one of the openings. Knowing courtship would soon begin, she looked forward to watching the couple's antics.

Outside, the newly arrived female lit on a fence post. Wings quivering, she greeted the male. With his tail and wings spread, he approached her with his head held back. His song left no doubt of his intentions.

Introducing his intended to the nest he had built, the male had already established his territory. Telling other birds through song that the barn was taken, he dominated his domain with persistent singing and occasional scolding when other birds came too close.

When the woman checked on the nest a week later, she marveled at its construction. Except for its narrow opening, it was well concealed. Previously, she had noticed the female arriving with bits of dry grass, small leaves, weeds, and feathers.

With a flashlight, she saw two of several eggs inside. Cream-colored, and totally speckled with tiny dots of cinnamon-brown, the eggs promised a future generation.

After two weeks, the coming and going of the parents increased, with innumerable trips to supply the appetites of the newly hatched. Watching the parents arrive with moths, butterflies, spiders, ladybugs, and small grasshoppers, the woman knew the nestlings were well fed.

Her appreciation of the parents grew even more as she happened to notice that the young were fed more in the morning than during the heat of the afternoons. During the lull, the parents rested.

Compared to other wrens, the house wren is considered the plainest. About 5 inches in length, with a 6-7 inch wing span, the bird is so aggressive in defending territory it will destroy the eggs of other wrens. The adults, however, sometimes feed and care for the young of other species.

Suddenly, the woman's life and that of the birds changed. A phone call and a predator prompted a late evening conversation I could never have anticipated.

Not expecting to be informed that a relative in Phoenix was near death, the woman was making hurried plans for the long drive when she decided to check on the family in the barn. Wanting to wish them well, she was horrified to see a large snake slithering away from the pipe and into a stack of hay. Her alarm came from the noticeable bulge of whatever it had just swallowed.

With only one parent remaining, the woman felt it would be impossible for the young birds to receive enough food. She wanted to bring us the nestlings the next day. After being asked where she lived, the frustrated lady answered, "Paradise."

My mind went blank.

"Where is that?" I asked. "We're south of Decatur. We need to head to Weatherford, straight down Interstate 20 to you, and on to Phoenix." Informing her that she could take the nestlings to a rehabilitation center in Dallas, she said that would be going in the opposite direction. Besides, there was all that traffic. She had to reach Arizona in a hurry.

When I agreed to meet her at the truck stop the next day, the distraught woman was relieved. "Call you when I'm a few miles away," were her parting words.

Fortunate to be in the care of someone who fed them during their westward journey, four house wrens greeted me with open mouths and insatiable hunger. From a sparse natal down, brownish in color, the nestlings were beginning to feather. Soon they would be brownish above, a paler grayish-brown below. Their rufous flanks would be especially noticeable when their blackish barred wings and tail were spread.

After the woman continued on her journey, we welcomed the travelers with small crickets. Their parents had completed a critical phase of their development, and the kind mentor had insured their survival.

At the wildlife center in Lubbock, the director and volunteers continued to meet the demands of the growing foursome. Upon release, the little wrens someday might breed as far north as southern Canada and winter as far south as Mexico. With nature's insects and freedom, they had found another paradise.

Parent's Corner: Two to make ready and four to go ave you ever read a story that in your mind's eye you can just "see" it happening? Well the other day this happened to me. I am still chuckling about it. even as I write. I hope this story leaves a bright spot in your day. This is told as a true story about a pastor who had a kitten that climbed up a tree in his back-

vard and was afraid to come down. The pastor coaxed and offered warm milk, but the kitty would not come down. The tree was not sturdy enough to climb, so the pastor decided that if he tied a rope to his car and pulled it until the tree bent down, he could then reach up and get the kitten. So, that's what he did, all the while checking his progress from the car and noticing that he needed to go just a little bit farther so the tree would be bent sufficiently for him to reach the kitten. But as he moved the car a little farther forward, the rope broke. The tree went "boing!" and the kitten instantly sailed through the air, out of sight. The pastor felt terrible. He walked all over the neighborhood asking people if they'd seen a little kitten. No. Nobody had seen a stray kitten. So he prayed, "Lord, I just commit this kitten to your keeping," and went on about his business.

A few days later, he was at the grocery store, and met one of his church members. He happened to look into her shopping cart, and was amazed to see cat food. This woman was a cat hater and everyone knew it, so he asked her, "Why are you buying cat food when you hate cats so much?"

She replied, "You won't believe this," and then told him how her little girl had been begging her for a cat, but she kept refusing. Then the child had begged again, so the mom finally told her little girl, "Well, if God gives you a cat, I'll let you keep it." She told the pastor, "I watched my child go out in the yard, get on her knees, and ask God for a cat. And really, Pastor, you won't believe this, but I saw it with my own eves! A kitten suddenly came flying out of the blue sky, with its paws outspread, and landed right in front of her!"

"Well", said the pastor, "Never underestimate the power of God and His unique sense of humor!!" Speaking of humor, let me tell you the story of an 80-year-old lady who was being interviewed by a local news station because she had just gotten married for the fourth time. The interviewer asked her questions about her life and what it felt like to be getting married again at 80 years old. He continued his questioning by asking her about her new husband's occupation.

"Oh, he's a funeral director," she replied. "That's very interesting," said the newsman, "would you mind telling our listeners what your first three husbands did for a living?"

She paused for a few moments, needing time to reflect on all those years. After a short time a smile appeared on her face and she answered proudly, explaining that she'd first married a banker when she was in her early 20s. then a circus ringmaster when she was in her 40s, later on a preacher when in her 60s and now. in her 80s a funeral director. The newsman looked at her, quite astonished and asked her why she had married four men with such diverse careers. She smiled and explained, "I married one for the money, two for the show, three to make ready and four to go!"

ASTROLOGICAL TOP-ICS: The lion is associated with the noblesse oblige of royalty; lions have been on roval crests and shields for ages. If you've ever wondered how the lion earned her royal position, you can look all the way back to Egypt for that answer. Egypt played a central role influencing modern astrology in a big way, and it was also Egypt that elevated the wild animal/rodent: to domestic servant, household pets, to ultimately godlike status. They even mummified and built temples for the cats (you can bet your fancy feast the cat never forgot this royal treatment). Sekhmet, one fierce lioness goddess of ancient Egypt, was the protector of pharaohs and said to be so powerful that her very breath created the desert. Incidentally, she also had a city named after her: Leontopolis, the "City of Lion" -- which makes me think of Hollywood for some reason. Nowadays, you could almost say rock star royalty has replaced the aristocracy in the Western world. All-powerful Leos like Madonna and Mick Jagger appear to command the entertainment kingdom, but high rank accompanies high standards: to act with honor, kindness, generosity and dignity. You could say it's in their pedigree.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: With the sun, Mercury, Mars and Venus in the charismatic, expressive sign of the performer, growing up a child star in the public eye has suited Daniel Radcliffe. Daniel's recently taken to the stage and been lauded for playing a more mature role. No need to worry about this guy holding his own; Leos are perfectly comfortable dominating, then owning whatever environment they are in.

ter-in-law has disciplined them and they think she's funny, too. I'm starting to think they have some kind of mental disability.

Another problem is, we have a small compact car and family outings mean there's no room for me. My husband has promised one hour out of every week so we can have time for the two of us, but it's been 12 weeks of nothing. I'm sinking deeper into depression, and my doctor has put me on antidepressants.

Our friends say they miss me, but enjoy my husband's sister. He likes showing her off to our friends. I'm sick at heart. What can I do? --

Neglected Wife Dear Wife: The novelty of having your sister-inlaw around will wear off eventually, but for the moment, you will have to find ways to deal with the situation. Is this a temporary visit or a permanent arrangement? If it's temporary, put up with as much as you can. If she is planning to remain in the United States, help her apply for a green card so she can get a job and her own apartment as soon as possible. We doubt the children have suddenly become mentally disabled. Discipline should include having privileges removed or being confined to their room. They also should do chores to repay the cost of broken items. Then put your foot down with your husband. He needs to know your marriage is suffering, and he has a responsibility to work on it. He's put his sister first for 12 weeks. It's vour turn.

Dear Annie: I am a 23year-old man, still in school. I am asexual, and what bothers me is the number of people who automatically assume that because I don't go running after girls, I must be gay.

I prefer hanging out with my friends, male and female. Even so, my parents, siblings and friends have all asked at some point whether I am gay. I tell them the truth, but none of them believes me. I've tried to make a joke out of it, but it's starting to get annoying. How can I make them understand? Interested

Dear Not: People generally understand "gay," but they have trouble with "asexual." You shouldn't need (or try) to defend who you are, but you can educate the people closest to vou. Contact AVEN. the Asexuality Visibility and Education Network, at asexuality.org for information and support. Dear Annie: "Totally Lost" was finding it hard not to flirt with other women because his wife had put on weight and refused to exercise.

I, too, am in my early 40s, have a lovely wife, three kids and a great job. Has my wife's appearance changed? Of course. So has mine. While I exercise and am fit, I certainly don't look like I did the day we met. What I realize is that together we are raising three great kids and as "a team" we make the world go round. Even though my wife's appearance has changed, I think she is as beautiful as the day I met her. Maybe more.

I agree he needs to see a counselor, but mostly to help him see what he has right there in front of him -- a beautiful woman who works hard all day in order to make sure he, the kids and the household are taken care of. What more could anyone

ask for? -- Lucky To Have It So Good

Dear Lucky: We are sure many women would love to clone you.

Dear Annie: My husband has suddenly become extremely jealous. For the last six months, he has been accusing me of having an affair with his best friend of 40 years. Nothing I say alleviates his fears, and he takes any casual comment or innocent action as confirmation that I have strayed. The constant accusations and late-night discussions have left me so emotionally exhausted that I have left the house His friend knows nothing of this and my husband has cut him off, leaving him and his wife bewildered. My husband has also insisted I not contact either of them, but they are my good friends, too. How can I get my husband to stop this? We are seeing a counselor, but there has been no change. I don't want a divorce, but I can't go on living with him like this, either. -- True Blue True Irrational and unfounded accusations of cheating usually are caused by one of two problems: Either your husband is guilt-ridden over his own indiscretions, or he has a medical problem and needs to be evaluated by a physician. If he's willing to see a counselor, he should be willing to see his doctor. Inform the doctor about the problem beforehand and ask for help.

Shared knowledge from Animal Control The Leash Law

It's a good thing for dogs and people.

For the safety of your animal. The safety of other people and animals.

Obeying the leash law makes for good neighbors and good pets.

The leash law means contained inside a fence or dog run on your property, or on a leash held by the

It keeps an animal under control and out of traffic. It prevents damage to other people's property.

Loose dogs and cars are a deadly combination. Very few dogs survive being hit by cars and most of our dogs have learned that cars are safe, fun places to be. And so, they have no fear of a moving Dogs are pack animals and when allowed to run loose will seek another dog or two to roam with. Now there is a pack of dogs, and the hunt is on. Sweet little Fluffy and Max become a hunting pack, looking for prey. Prey can be a leaf or paper blowing in the wind, a kitten, or puppy playing in a yard. It could be a child running and playing. It could be someone's chickens, goats, sheep, even large animals like cows and horses are fair game. Anything that attracts the attention of the pack becomes prey.

The game becomes dangerous when the pack becomes over excited and the prey, be animal or human runs and screams. Now the pack reverts to the instinct of the wild dog and moves in for the kill. Fluffy and Max just became dangerous animals.

The instinct to chase is inbred in dogs, be it a tiny toy breed or a giant working breed. Spayed and neutered animals are less likely to want to roam. Reproductive urges are strong in unaltered animals and both dogs and cats will go to great lengths to escape during their breeding season. A male dog or cat can detect the odor of a female in season up to a mile away. They are much more aggressive at this

In our love affair with dogs, we have forgotten that the sweet loving pet we live with is still an animal with hunting instinct and very sharp teeth. They are safe loving companions only as long as they are under the control of a responsible owner.

The Leash Law is all about a well-trained pet and a responsible pet owner

Firefighter killed in apparent ambush

MAPLEWOOD, Mo. (AP) Firefighters became victims of what appeared to be an ambush Monday when they were fired upon from a house as they worked to put out a vehicle fire across the street, police said. One young firefighter was killed, two police officers were wounded and the house where the shots were fired later

It was unclear whether the gunman died in the house fire; authorities searching were the remains of the brick bungalow, St. Louis County police spokeswoman Tracy Panus said.

burned to the ground.

"The suspicion is he's in there," Panus said. "He didn't get away. We have no indication he got out of the house."

Little was known about the man who lived in the cer was treated for a gunhouse in Maplewood, a suburb just southwest of St. Louis. Neighbors described him as quiet and man Eric Clark said.

reclusive.

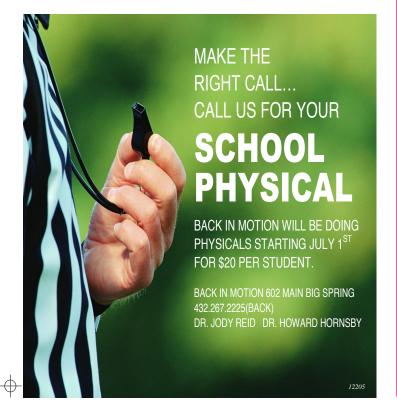

Someone began firing shots from the house when firefighters arrived in response to a 5:40 a.m. report of a pickup fire.

The city identified the slain firefighter as 22-yearold Ryan Hummert, son of former Maplewood Mayor Andy Hummert. Officials said he was shot to death as he got off the fire truck.

The firefighter had graduated from paramedic training in August and from the fire academy in March.

"He had been with the fire department for only 10 months but knew it was his calling," Fire Chief Terry Merrell said as he fought back tears. "It's impossible to say in words the emotion and pain we are feeling right now."

CHS finishes hiring star

Special to the Herald

Monday, July 14, Coahoma High School finished hiring its last faculty and staff members. This ended a summer with an abnormal amount of resignations and departures. However, every member that left expressed that they felt that the job they took was advancement in their careers and that they were happy and proud of the time they'd spent at Coahoma High School.

Stacy Martin was hired to be the head football and track coach and social studies teacher. Coach Martin comes from Comanche High School where he was the defensive coordinator and head track coach. He is a graduate of Big Spring High School, where he was a standout in football and track. He went on to play and coach at Sul Ross State University.

Shane Fuller is the head baseball coach, the varsity assistant football coach and science teacher. Coach Fuller comes from Muleshoe High School, where his 2008 baseball team advanced past bi-district for the first time in the school's history.

Randall Petty has taken over as the head girls' basketball coach, cross country coach, head girls' track coach and special ed. teacher. Coach Petty is a native of Westbrook and has spent the last two years coaching and teaching at Big Spring High School.

Raul Sanchez is the new varsity assistant football, basketball and track coach as well as a social studies teacher. Coach Sanchez has spent the last three years as a varsity assistant at Grape Creek High School.

as the junior high football coach, varsity assistant basketball coach, head tennis coach and junior high technology teacher. Coach Faught is a graduate of Angelo State University. He graduated from Ozona High School, where he was a standout basketball player, as well as a state qualifier in tennis. Cassie Petty is the girls' varsity assistant basketball and track coach. Coach Petty is the wife of Randall Petty. She was the head girls' basketball coach for the past several years at Westbrook High School.

Edie Niblett was hired to be the junior high girls' athletics coach and special education teacher at the high school. Coach Niblett comes from Eldorado High School. She has spent the past several years build-Derrick Faught was hired ing the girls' junior high program there.

Gayla Paige is the new consumer science teacher at the high school. She comes from Big Spring High School, where she has taught and coached.

These faculty members join Maria Mashburn, who will teach math at the high school, and Josh Kelly, who will teach social studies at the junior high and coach at both the high school and junior high. These members of our faculty were hired earlier this spring.

Elementary Coahoma hired two new faculty members: Melinda Hall and Taylor Osborn.

All employees of Coahoma ISD received a raise.

Registration dates will be announced soon. Look for school supply lists on the Coahoma Web site, along with enrollment info.
