living within the Big Spring city me," said Kilgore. "You know, you say the word 'tax' to anyone around here right now, and we're all a little gun shy. I don't feel like it was understood (by the voters) very well. We felt like it was worth a shot to see if we could get another stream of income coming in, but it wasn't very well explained. Overall, this is about what I expected."

While the defeat will effectively nix the estimated $250,000 a year the new tax could have put in county coffers, Kilgore said the failure to launch the tax should have little or no impact on the county budget in the coming years.

"It shouldn't have any effect on it," said Kilgore. "The only reason I supported it was to give

Lady Buffs top Big Spring in scrimmage

By JEFF LANE

Special to the Herald

FORSAN — With the start of basketball season only a couple weeks away, it is time for teams to begin fine tuning its game and preparing for regular season openers.

The Big Spring Lady Steers and Forsan Lady Buffs got a chance to see how their squads were sizing up Tuesday night, scrimmaging at Buffalo Gym. Forsan ran away with the win, 65-27.

strength, however, as Big Spring was missing several players due to volleyball playoffs and Forsan also had some out with injuries.

"This was just a chance to see where we were early on," said Lady Buffs Head Coach Robert Hilger. "You don't want to make too much of it, but it is encouraging to see your team doing some good things on the floor."

Hilger said his squad has the advantage of some real experience this year and that Neither team was at full they are recognizing the little things happening in a game much quicker than before. He was pleased to see them moving in a positive direction and liked the hustle on the court.

Lady Steers Head Coach Mike Warren said he saw some positives in the scrimmage, but there were a few things to work on.

"We are just learning to play man-to-man defense," said Warren. "It is new to them, but they are picking it up and we are going to utilize that sort of pressure. We need to improve on blocking out and breaking the press, but we got some good work tonight, despite missing a few girls with volleyball.'

Big Spring opens the season Nov. 15 at home against Snyder, while Forsan travels to play Colorado City on Nov.

The Lady Buffs were led by three players in double figures as Kelsey Jones scored 15 points, while Tori Gauer and Amanda Longoria both scored 13. The Lady Steers were led by Linzee Yarbar and Lauren Porras who netted 6 each.

Ready for a rematch?

Stars could align for Tech-UT II with BCS Championship at stake

as there been a better football game this season than the exhibition the Texas Longhorns and Texas Tech Red Raiders put on Saturday?

The answer to that question, no matter what your opinion may be, is no. Tech's last-second upset tops this season's Texas/OU matchup. The only other game that comes reasonably close this year is Oregon State's unlikely upset of USC. Still, even that contest can't match the drama emitted from Lubbock this past weekend.

Even at the pro level, it's hard to find a game able to rival the Showdown on the South Plains. Dallas and Philadelphia played one of the most entertaining games of the season in Week 2, on Monday Night Football no less. What holds the Cowboys shootout victory over the Eagles back from equalling Tech-UT is the lack of meaning behind the game.

HULL

Tech could have just killed any hopes Texas had at a national title. Meanwhile, the Red Raiders have been propelled into the BCS conversation.

Well, at least for now.

Upsets happen on a weekly basis in college football and now the Red Raiders are the ones with an unfamiliar target on their backs.

However, let's assume for a moment Tech can survive the next two games hosting No. 8 Oklahoma State and then making a trip to Norman, Okla. to face No. 6 Oklahoma. Of course, then the Red Raiders have to avoid a feisty Baylor squad led by the country's best freshman quarterback, Robert Griffin.

Accomplish that and it's on to the Big 12 Championship, where the Red Raiders will match up with a struggling Missouri team or a Kansas squad Tech already humiliated, 63-21.

Should Texas Tech make it through that gauntlet, then a berth into the BCS Championship is a given.

Who would be waiting for the Red Raiders? Why, it could be none other than the Longhorns.

Texas has just Kansas, Baylor and Texas A&M remaining on the schedule. All three contests should translate into easy victories for the Longhorns. They should finish the season 11-1 and will avoid having to play in the Big 12 title game if Tech wins out.

After that, Texas needs just a little more help. It starts this weekend. LSU must upset current No. 1 Alabama Saturday, since it is unlikely Mississippi State or an underachieving Auburn team can do the job. The Crimson Tide would still most likely qualify for the SEC Championship game, though, with Florida as a likely opponent.

The Gators are one of the hottest teams in the country right now, but the

Lady Steers season draws to a close with straight sets loss

By JONATHAN HULL

LEVELLAND — Big Spring's Lady Steers simply didn't have a big enough stone to take down the giant they met in the Class 4A bi-district volleyball playoffs Tuesday.

No. 1 ranked Hereford pounded Big Spring into a straight sets submission, 25-7, 25-10, 25-10, bringing an end to the Lady Steers' season.

Still, Big Spring Head Coach believes the Lady Steers could end up coming away from the loss with several positives.

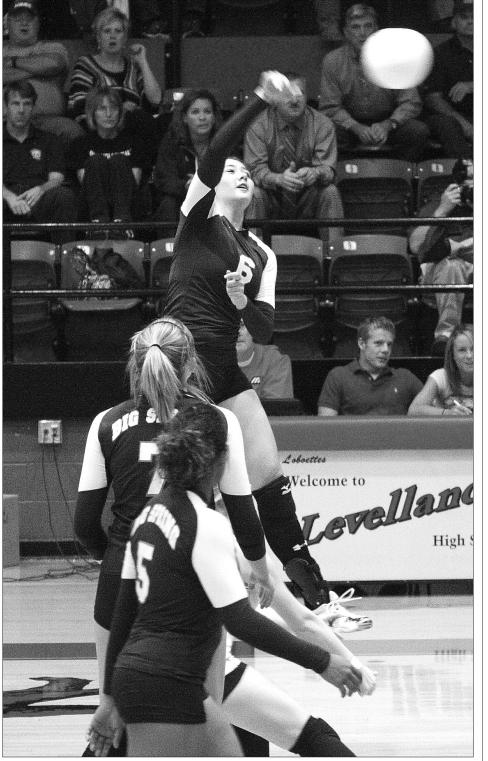

"This was a good experience for everyone involved, but especially for our freshmen and sophomores," commented Blake. "I'm very proud of this team to just get to this point. It would've been very easy to quit on this season.

"To play a team like Hereford gave us a chance to see how a quicker offense is ran and what it takes to play at that level," she continued. "Hereford really had no weaknesses. They played good defense. They're a very good serving team. They also do a great job of getting into their system. We can really learn a lot from the way they play on the court."

The Lady Steers finish the season 7-30 in what was Blake's first season in charge of the program. Only three seniors — Andrea Claxton, Baylea Fox and Mirella Torres — depart from this team, meaning several key players return next year.

"I'm very excited about next season," said Blake. "We can't go down from this point. I think we'll only get better. Even since we started in August, this team is much better. Our record may not show the improvement, but if anyone who played us at the start of the season were to play us now, they'd see loads of improvement.

"I really hope our seniors can say they grew as

Wounded Texas tries to regroup after loss

By JIM VERTUNO

AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — Colt McCoy lifted his upper lip to show what had caused him to spit blood in Texas' loss to Texas Tech. On a hit in the third quarter, the little piece of skin that connects it to the gum had been ripped.

When the Longhorns quarterback went to the sideline, a team trainer slipped a pair of tweezers in his mouth, grabbed the dangling skin and pulled it out with quick tug.

"I don't think it really does anything anyway," McCoy said Monday.

McCoy's bloody mouth was an example of just how painful the Longhorns' 39-33 loss to the Red Raiders was Saturday night.

The defeat not only knocked Texas from No. 1 to No. 5, it also left the Longhorns a game behind Texas Tech in the Big 12 South division. Texas (8-1, 4-1) must not only win its last three games against Baylor, Kansas and Texas A&M, it also needs the Red Raiders to lose one or two games just to have a chance to get to the Big 12 championship game.

Texas is fortunate that it only fell three spots to No. 4 in the Bowl Championship Series standings, meaning it could still be a factor in the national title chase if things fall the right way.

Coach Mack Brown, who sizes up the league and national title picture for his team on Sundays, said he knows his team is hurting after the loss.

The Longhorns had been sitting at No. 1 for nearly a month in a season they weren't even expected to play for the Big 12 title.

"We'd better not worry about the national stuff," Brown said. "We have to quit pouting ... So much talk has been about the end (of the season), I told them 'You all have been the college football darlings the last three weeks, now let's get back to

Brown said he expects one of his toughest weeks of coaching in the days ahead.

He not only has to massage bruised egos and heal wounded bodies, but keep his team sharp against an improving Baylor team that nearly upset No. 13 Missouri last weekend. Two key players who were hurt against Texas Tech, defensive end Brian Orakpo (knee) and wide receiver Quan Cosby (back) will be evaluated this week to see if they can play against Baylor.

"We're emotionally down and physically down," Brown said. "Baylor will be pumped."

Against Texas Tech, the Longhorns fought back from a 19-point deficit to take a 33-32 lead with 89 seconds left, only to watch the Red Raiders win on a touchdown pass from Graham Harrell to Michael Crabtree 88 seconds later.

When it was over, the Longhorns were stuck in the middle of thousands of Red Raiders fans who stormed the field to celebrate the biggest win in school history.

"Losing right now after we've done so much, it hurts," defensive tackle Roy Miller said. "But we're going to fight. The good thing is, guvs don't quit."

expected back December after surgery to repair his left ankle.

"Uncharted territory for us," Duncan said of the 0-3 start. "We've played some bad basketball so far, to say he least.'

After trailing by seven at the end of the first quarter, the Spurs cut Dallas' lead to 30-27 on Parker's 20-foot jump shot with 8:34 before halftime.

But the Mavericks quickly shot out to a double-digit lead with two jumpers from Terry and a 3-pointer by Antoine Wright.

"Jet (Terry) really came out," Nowitzki said. "We definitely need his offense in our group. Whether he starts or is off the bench, we need his shooting and we need his scoring.'

Leading 41-31 with 3:33 to go in the second quarter, the Mavericks finished the first half by hitting five of six shots.

Nowitzki had three of them, including a 3-pointer, and Dallas went up by

"They came out with a lot of energy, they shot the ball well and executed," Spurs coach Gregg Popovich said. "We did the opposite, and that put us in the hole."

Dallas was 4-of-8 from the 3-point line in the half. San Antonio was 3-of-11.

Combined, Howard, Nowitzki and Terry scored 73 points on 33-of-56 shooting for the game.

It was just one night ago in Dallas that the Mavs lost by 19 to Cleveland. Nowitzki was 3-of-11 in that game.

"I think we didn't compete hard enough yesterday and got embarrassed in our building," Nowitzki said. "We had a long meeting this morning, and we just had to get back to playing hard on both ends of the floor. I think today we found a good rhythm."

Kidd hit a 3-pointer on the first shot of the second half. and the Mavericks were 10-of-19 from the floor in the third quarter. The Mavericks led by 23 points as late as 5:49 left in the third quarter.

But the Spurs cut it to 80-73 with 7:29 left in the game on two free throws by first-round draft pick George Hill. But Nowitzki then scored six points to help Dallas open up an 88-73 lead.

The Spurs couldn't take advantage of a big edge from the free throw line. San Antonio made 14-of-20 from the foul line compared to 5-of-5 for Dallas.

Notes: Spurs C Fabricio Oberto checked in for the first time 9:14 into the game and played 14 minutes after missing the first two games of the season with an irregular heartbeat. ... After spraining his left thumb in the preseason, Hill saw his first action of the season when he checked into the game with San Antonio trailing by 19 points late in the third quarter. ... Spurs F Anthony Tolliver returned to the team after the death of his mother, but he was listed as inactive.

Longhorns must cheer for Alabama to knock them off. Should Florida take down the Crimson Tide, the Gators would absolutely jump Texas in the BCS standings. Of course, it's possible, although less likely, that Alabama could pass Texas up as well.

The biggest bump in Texas' road to face Tech in the national championship is Penn State. The Nittany Lions have a very easy schedule, but also the respect of the voters. Iowa could present Penn State with a challenge Saturday since the Hawkeyes do boast a strong defense.

If the Nittany Lions survive Iowa, then Texas' final hope rests on Michigan State pulling off the upset.

It's a lot to ask for, but doesn't everyone in Texas want to see a rematch of Saturday's epic?

For the first time in severai years, 1 - an admitted Longhorns hater will be cheering for Texas to run the table and for all other intangibles to clear the path.

After all, nothing could be sweeter than seeing Texas fans get their hopes up again for a national title, then watching Tech take the wind right out of their sails. I couldn't ask for a better late Christmas present.

By THOMAS JENKINS

Staff Writer

While some candidates surely walked away from Tuesday night's election unhappy, at least one will have the chance to file a grievance with the Texas Secretary of States Office, as his name was inadvertently left off the Howard County ballot.

Lauren Poindexter, the Libertarian candidate for the District 31 seat on the State Senate, had his name accidentally left off the ballot in Howard County. Poindexter was the lone challenger of the seat's incumbent, Republican nominee Kel Seliger, who easily won the election Tuesday night with 90.2 percent of the vote.

According to County Elections Administrator Saundra Bloom, the mistake could trigger a do-over of the race in Howard County.

"Poindexter's name was inadvertently left off the ballot, and for that we sincerely apologize," said Bloom. "I spoke with officials at citydesk@bigspringherald.com from the Secretary of State's office this morning, and they said he will have the chance to file a grievance with their office, and if they wanted to force a new election for the race in Howard County, they probably

"However, because of the margin of Poindexter's defeat across the district, even if he managed to take every vote in Howard County, it still wouldn't even come close to effecting the outcome of the race. So they seem doubtful he will file the grievance. We'll just have to wait and see what happens."

Bloom said the mistake wasn't discovered until this morning.

Seliger won the election with 179,774 ballots to Poindexter's 19.510 ballots, which accounted for less than 10 percent of the vote in the district.

Police investigate assault, impersonating an officer

HERALD Staff Report

Big Spring police are investigating an aggravated assault that resulted in a man receiving a knife wound to the arm Tuesday after-

BSPD Sgt. Tony Everett said police responded to the 300 block of Dundee just after 4 p.m. Tuesday after a local man reported being attacked by a man with a knife.

"The wound was very minor and didn't even require stitches ... and the victim refused medical treatment," Everett said. "We'll be following up on this incident."

Also Tuesday, police were called to Northcrest Apartments, 1002 N. Main in response to a report of someone impersonating a law enforcement official.

"Apparently, someone at the apartments was flashing a badge to people, claiming to be a police officer," Everett said. "We'll be following up on this incident as well to see what we can find."

Republicans keep seats in top two Texas courts

By MICHAEL GRACZYK

Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — The decade-long Republican grip on the state's top two courts is continuing.

Despite a Democratic plea for a straightticket vote and nearly $1 million in TV ads aimed to break the GOP's exclusive hold on the Texas Supreme Court, voters Tuesday returned three incumbent Republican judges to the state's highest civil court. Voters also returned the three Republicans to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, the state's highest criminal court.

"There's been a lot more uncertainty this time than there has been for the last elections," said Supreme Court Justice Phil Johnson, who defeated Democrat Linda Yanez. "The Democratic Party has made a hard push this

"They've had our attention this election cycle."

The defeat was the second for Yanez, a regional appellate court judge from Edinburg who lost in 2002 and was attempting to become the first Latina to hold a seat on the state's highest civil court. Johnson is a former appellate chief justice from the Panhandle who's been a Supreme Court justice for three

No Democrat has held even one of the nine seats on the Supreme Court or one of the nine on the Court of Criminal Appeals since late 1998 when George W. Bush's landslide victory that year gave him a second term as governor and swept fellow Republicans with him throughout the ballot.

On Tuesday, Chief Supreme Court Justice Wallace Jefferson led the GOP triumph by defeating Democratic state District Judge Jim Jordan of Dallas.

"I am gratified that my leadership on the court so far has been ratified by the voters of Texas and I expect to continue that service for the next six years," said Jefferson, who became the first African-American on the court when Gov. Rick Perry appointed him in 2001. He was elected the following year and became chief justice in 2004.

In the third Supreme Court race, incumbent Dale Wainwright, looking for a second term, overcame the catchy historic name of Democratic lawyer Sam Houston. Houston is a partner in a Houston-based law firm and was seeking his first judgeship.

"Texas is a state that believes in conservative politics and judges who believe in judicial restraint," said Wainwright, who six years ago became the first African-American to make it to the court through an election without having first been appointed. "Sometimes people try to use numbers and statistics to skew the reality of what our court is doing and that concerns me. It's an attempt to politicize our judiciary and that concerns me.

"Nothing about my job involves politics. After getting elected, it's about applying the rule of law fairly to everybody."

In Court of Criminal Appeals races, Tom Price, who came to the bench in 1997 after stints as a criminal court and state district judge in Dallas County, defeated Houston lawyer and former federal prosecutor Susan Strawn.

Paul Womack, a former assistant prosecutor in Travis and Williamson counties, won a third six-year term, topping Democrat J.R. Molina, a Fort Worth lawyer and former prosecutor making his fourth attempt for a seat on the court.

And GOP incumbent Cathy Cochran, on the court since 2001, had no Democratic opponent and cruised to re-election, trouncing Libertarian William Strange of Dallas. Cochran is a former defense lawyer in Houston who also worked as an assistant district attorney in Harris and Fort Bend counties.

In 1998, Democrat Raul Gonzalez would have remained on the Supreme Court but he retired in midterm at the end of that year. Bush replaced Gonzalez, who was the last Democrat to hold any of the 29 statewide Texas offices.

"You know, everything is kind of a surprise," said Parker with a smile. "I don't know how to predict these. It's like I told everyone, that I was looking for 50 percent, plus one vote. That's all I was after. I'm happy with the numbers and I'm proud of that. We got out and worked hard on this election, and I'm very happy with it."

Parker said campaigning was tough on him and his family, but the end-result made it all worth while.

"It was tough. We've been doing this for more than a year now," said Parker. "I made the decision to run in January of 2007. It was really a lot of work — a lot more than I thought it would be — but it really paid off in the end. I had a lot of financial support and the support of my family. My mom and dad got out and worked hard, my wife and kids worked hard and a lot of friends got out there and helped, and I can't thank them enough. Everyone who helped in this campaign, I just can't thank them enough. It means a lot."

When asked what his plans were for the office, Parker said he expects to get the ball rolling soon.

have some things in mind I don't have anything official yet - but we're working on that," said Parker. "I'll start finalizing some things in the next few weeks and we'll just go from there."

According to Carter, the deciding factor in the sheriff's race wasn't necessarily politics or platforms.

"It was a lot of work. It was fun, however, and there were some good parts to it," said Carter. "I had some great people behind me. There wasn't a lot of money, but there was moral support. You have to spend a bunch of money to win this race.

"I hate to say the politicians are bought, but if you don't have the money, you aren't going to win. And I didn't have it. I'm disappointed, but it all comes back to the money. When you spend three times as much and only win by double the amount "We're working on it. I of votes, it's just numbers. It doesn't mean much."

In a much closer race, Republican nominee Joshua Hamby unseated long-time County Attorney Mike Thomas, taking 5,036 ballots (53.27 percent) to the incumbent's 4,418 votes (46.73 percent).

"I believe we got our message out about what we wanted to do, and the voters felt we needed a change here in Howard County," said Hamby. "I just feel like they went to the polls with that in mind."

Hamby said he was thankful to see the candidates in the Howard County contests run clean

"It was tough. Fortunately, in my race and all the other races I saw, everyone kept a good clean campaign," said Hamby. "I was very happy with that. There wasn't any mud visions and qualifications were, so I feel like it was a good campaign."

Hamby said his plans for the county attorney's office are simple.

"Like I said during my campaign, we have to get something done about crime, and that's going to be my focus. I'm going to help law enforcement and get together with them so we can do something about the crime in our town," said Hamby.

In the race for the Precinct 1 seat on the Commissioners Court, Democratic incumbent Emma Brown held on to her office with 730 ballots (53.09 percent) against Republican challenger Edwin Ware, who garnered 645 votes (46.91 percent).

Republican nominee Jimmie Long won the Precinct 3 seat on the Commissioners Court, receiving 1,222 votes (55.05 percent) slinging. The campaigns to Democratic opponent were based on what their Dick Dubose's 998 ballots (44.95 percent). Incumbent Bill Crooker opted not to run for re-election.

A Republican also took the race for County Constable Precinct 1 Place 1, as challenger Kneel Stallings took the nod from voters with 4,635 ballots (65.73 percent) against Democratic incumbent Bill Holden's 2,417 votes (34.27 percent).

Howard County District Attorney Hardy Wilkerson, County Tax Assessor-Collector Kathy Sayles and Justice of the Peace Bennie Green — all of whom ran unopposed — were also reelected during Tuesday's income, something that could become very helpful if the legislature puts caps (on county tax rates) in the coming year. All the revenue we have right now is coming from property taxes and fines, fees and those types of things. We don't have any other money coming in from the state or federal government, or anywhere else."

Kilgore said proposed legislation to cap tax rates has many county officials across the Lone Star State looking at similar programs to increase non-tax revenues.

"Especially where the growth counties are, the property taxes are rising. Say you own a house that's worth $300,000. Tomorrow it could be worth $400,000," said Kilgore. "So they are wanting to cap the tax. It's different here in Howard County, because most of our tax revenues come from oil and agriculture, so we're not growing and the values aren't changing. So if oil (values) go down, you'd have a really hard time getting them (tax rates) back up where they should be."

Kilgore said there has been little talk among commissioners of putting the sales tax before voters again if it failed, but it's certainly not out of the question.

"There's a possibility that we could," said Kilgore. "I feel like we could do a better job of explaining it to the voters and let them know it could help on the decision."

Historic election in tough times

s the vote totals rolled in Tuesday night for Barack Obama, people around the globe realized that history had shifted its course in a way that many never expected to see in their lifetimes.

The United States — which has agonized since its birth over racial injustice — has chosen a black man as its 44th president.

It is a proud moment that will stand out in our nation's story long after most of today's worries and controversies have been forgotten. As Republican John McCain noted in his gracious concession speech, Obama's election offers compelling evidence that America has moved beyond the bigotry of its past.

Yet with Americans fighting abroad and struggling with economic difficulties at home, race did not dominate this year's campaign.

An unhappy public demanded a fundamental change in the nation's direction. Obama won the election because he spoke persuasively to that demand — while inspiring millions with his calls for a greater sense of national unity.

Hundreds of congressional candidates, including many incumbents, also promised voters more energetic and effective government. Now it will be up to the winners to work with the next administration to deliver on those promises.

As Obama noted in his victory speech, the problems facing the nation are difficult and "the climb ahead will be steep."

And these problems are often not just complex but interwoven. Environmental hazards increase medical spending, for example, and deficiencies in the health care system hurt American competitiveness in the global economy. Difficulties in Iraq continue to hinder the U.S. effort in Afghanistan.

Obama must focus on the urgent task of ensuring the stability of the financial system and encouraging economic recovery. The Bush administration owes him its full cooperation to ensure a smooth transition.

If larger short-term deficits are necessary to get the economy moving again, so be it. But one of the most important changes that the country needs is greater long-run fiscal responsibility, a goal that received too little attention in this year's campaign.

That includes long-delayed repairs to Social Security and Medicare so they can continue to serve older Americans well — without overburdening younger generations.

Obama and his party certainly have a mandate to improve the U.S. health care system. Sick Americans should be able to count on decent medical care — without suffering financial ruin.

There is a mandate, too, for the next administration to quickly wind down U.S. involvement in Iraq and get badly needed support to the U.S. troops in Afghanistan.

Obama knows that he will need to rebuild America' image abroad after the many mistakes of the Bush administration.

Failure would mean increased economic, environmental and military risks.

It is a long and daunting agenda, requiring wisdom, courage, cooperation and effective leadership from Tuesday's winners, and above all the next president. We must all wish them well.

—THE KANSAS CITY STAR

We the people should be proud

"For the first time in my adult lifetime I am really proud of my country. And not just because Barack has done well, but because I think people are hungry for change."

—Michelle Obama, Feb. 18, 2008 always thought I understood what Michelle Obama was trying to

You are familiar, of course, with what she actually did say, which is quoted above. It provided weeks of red meat for her husband's opponer husband's opponents, who took to making ostentatious proclamations of their own unwavering pride in country.

But again, I think I know what the lady meant to say. Namely, that with her husband, this brownskinned guy with the funny name, making a credible run for the highest office in the land, she could believe, for the first time, that "we the people" included her.

It is, for African Americans, an intoxicating thought almost too wonderful for thinking. Yet, there it is. And here we are, waking up this morning to find Barack Obama president-elect of these United States.

In a sense, it is unfair — to him, to us — to make last night's election about race.

Whatever appeal Obama may have had to African Americans and white liberals eager to vote for a black candidate, is, I believe, dwarfed by his appeal to Americans of all stripes who have simply had enough of the politics of addition by division as practiced by Karl Rove and his disciples, enough of the free floating anger, the holiday from accountability, the nastiness masquerading as righteousness, the sheer intellectual dishonesty, that have characterized the era of American politics that ends here.

But in the end, after all that, there still is race.

And it would be a sin against our history, a sin against John Lewis and Viola Liuzzo, against James Reeb and Lyndon Johnson, against Fannie Lou Hamer and Martin Luther King, against all those everyday heroes who marched, bled and died 40 years ago to secure black people's right to vote, not to pause on this pinnacle and savor what it means

It would be a sin against our generations, against slaves and freedmen, against housemen and washerwomen, against porters and domestics, against charred bodies hanging in southern trees, not to be still and acknowledge that something has happened here and it is sacred and profound.

For most of the years of the American experiment, "we the people" did not include African Americans. We were not included in "we." We were not even included in "people."

What made it galling was all the flowery words to the contrary, all the perfumed lies about equality and opportunity. This was, people kept saying, a nation where any boy might grow up and become president. Which was only true, we knew, as long as it was indeed a boy and as long as the boy was white.

But as of today, we don't know that anymore. What this election tells us is that the nation has changed in ways that would have been unthinkable, unimaginable, flat out preposterous, just 40 years ago. And that we, black, white and otherwise, better recalibrate our sense of the possible.

There was something bittersweet in watching Michelle Obama lectured on American pride this year, in seeing African Americans asked to prove their Americanness when our ancestors were in this country before this country was. There was something in it that was hard to take, knowing that we have loved America when America did not love us, defended America when it would not defend us, believed in American ideals that were larger than skies, yet never large enough to include us.

We did this. For years unto centuries, we did this. Because our love for this country is deep and profound. And complicated and contradictory. And cynical and hard.

Now it has delivered us to this singular moment. Barack Obama is president-elect of the United States. And we the people should be proud.

Open arms, impossible expectations ongratulations Presidentelect Obama. Welcome to a world that will greet you with open arms — and expectations that will be impossible to meet

Late last month pollsters judged opinions of the two presidential candidates among people in 22 nations. More than 22,000 people on four continents participated in the survey, and by a margin of four to one, these people preferred Obama over

JOEL Brinkley

John McCain.

That shouldn't be much of a surprise.

President Bush is so despised in much of the world that the Democrats could have nominated a horned toad, and in this poll it would probably have come out ahead.

What is more, many of these countries are home to darker-skinned people who certainly find it reassuring to see a black man win the most important job in the world. Even in India, where Bush is widely admired for his plan to sell the state civilian nuclear technology, those polled preferred Obama over McCain by a 9 percent margin.

In Egypt, where virulent anti-Americanism hangs in the air like humidity, in a poll last week among 500 business leaders, 85 percent preferred Obama over McCain. In fact, billions of people around the world – regardless of skin color, gender, ethnicity, nationality or political viewpoint – are certainly smiling with admiration for America right now as we transcend two centuries of bigotry, injustice and subjugation.

In Washington, new presidents can expect a honeymoon that lasts about 100 days, at most. In much of the world, that honeymoon is likely to end much sooner. Many people in the Arab world, for example, expect Obama to end the Iraq war and resolve the Israel-Palestine dispute almost overnight.

"People have high hopes," Khalen Dakhil, a political sociologist in Saudi Arabia, told Cox newspapers last week. "They expect Obama to withdraw American forces from Iraq" and "to have a more evenhanded policy in the Arab-Israeli dispute."

More than likely, Obama will begin withdrawing troops from Iraq soon after taking office. But the Arab-Israeli dispute is another matter. This is the Arab world's perennial grievance with America — though the U.S. provides far more aid to the Palestinians than most any of the Arab states.

For a new American president, the odds of settling this decades-long dispute are small, and no effort to solve it will succeed unless Washington is willing to pressure the Israelis, not just the Palestinians, to do things they don't want to do. The common political wisdom is that playing tough with Israel will cost a President his re-election — given the large number of Jews and fundamentalist Christians in key states who support Israel. So on that issue, President Obama will likely disappoint the Arab world.

Several of the other problems are no more easily solved. In Afghanistan, for instance, Obama and McCain both promised to dispatch more troops. But that is unlikely to solve anything. As long as the Taliban and al Qaida maintain safe havens in Pakistan from which they can dispatch endless numbers of fighters, Afghanistan will remain an open wound. And as long as Afghan government officials continue enriching themselves from opium-fed corruption (Afghanistan is now classified as the world's fifth most corrupt nation) the crop will flourish unchallenged. The Taliban, then, will continue exacting their own tax on the opium farmers to pay for their insurgency. All of that makes the solution much more complex than Obama has let on.

North Korea, Iran, Syria, Venezuela, Bolivia — all of these are complex dilemmas defying easy solutions. But Obama could strengthen his hand immeasurably by taking a few steps that are less complicated. Without consulting any other nation, for example, he could close the prison at Guantanamo.

He could take a clear and unequivocal stand on torture, unlike his predecessor who liked to declare that the United States does not condone torture — even as his people committed torture.

He could step up to the climatechange challenge rather than avoiding and evading the problem. By taking the lead, the United States could create new and profitable green businesses and market their products worldwide — just as Denmark has captured a large part of the world market for wind-powered energy, while Bush pretended that the climate problem did not exist. Most of all, I have no doubt that President Obama will treat other leaders in a manner that shows he respects their views — even when he does not agree with them. This, as much as anything, will allow him to hold onto the admiration, even affection, the world is offering him

No. 8 Cowboys' trusty Robinson often overlooked

By JEFF LATZKE

AP Sports Writer

STILLWATER, Okla. — Zac Robinson went into his last game against Texas Tech with his job in question and the Oklahoma State program at a crossroads.

As the teams prepare to meet again Saturday with the Big 12 South race and a possible BCS bowl hanging in the balance, it's clear he's led them down the right path.

Robinson was a little-known. unproven commodity when he replaced Bobby Reid last year after the second impressive relief performance of his career.

But what followed in his first career start was a mistake-filled performance in an embarrassing road loss at Troy that started out with Oklahoma State trailing 41-10 before a couple of late touchdowns.

Still, Robinson got a vote of confidence from coach Mike Gundy before the Red Raiders came to town for the Big 12 open-

"That was my first start at home and I wasn't really sure what position I was in, whether I was going to continue to be the starter," Robinson said Monday. "I hoped that that was the case, but I needed to go out and per-

Robinson followed his threeturnover debut with an impressive display of his dual-threat abilities, running 13 times for 116 yards and two touchdowns and passing for 211 yards and the winning 54-yard touchdown pass Brandon Pettigrew in the final 2 minutes.

"I know that we told him that it was his job and he had an opportunity to go out and play, and if he continued to play well that he would keep it," Gundy said. "I don't know how guaranteeing that is, but I think that's kind of the way we handled it at that particular time."

What might have happened had Robinson struggled in a second straight start will never be known, but his solid perfor-4-1 Big 12) in the direction that now has them ranked No. 8 heading into a much more important showdown with second-ranked Texas Tech (9-0, 5-0).

Oklahoma State's 49-45 win against the Red Raiders last season, when both teams were unranked, is probably best Oklahoma State quarterback Zac Robinson (11), left, looks at teammate Beau Johnson (2), right, in the first half of an NCAA football game in Stillwater, Okla. at Boone Pickens Stadium mance started Saturday. Robinson had 395 yards passing in Oklahoma State's the Cowboys (8-1, 59-17 win over lowa State.

Looking back, the victory was also a turning point for a program that has since made it into the top 10 for the first time in 20 win for us. They played their butts off, and fortunately made enough plays at the end." Robinson said. definitely gave us some confidence that we could finish off some games that we hadn't in the past."

Since then, Robinson has earned his place in the Big 12's impressive stable of quarterbacks.

His sheer numbers aren't as impressive as Tech's Graham Harrell, Oklahoma's Sam Bradford, Texas' Colt McCov or Missouri's Chase Daniel but none of those players also has the nation's fifthbest rushing offense at his disposal.

Robinson's strength, as compared to the other star quarterbacks, has been his efficiency — he's second in the nation in quarterback rating — but he can also provide the big game. Last week, he threw a career-best five recognition."

"That was a big touchdown passes in Oklahoma State's 59-17 win against Iowa State.

"I just think he's a pretty complete player. He throws it pretty well, he can run it a little bit and he's kind of a physical guy," Texas Tech coach Mike Leach said. "I've always thought the fact that he's fairly tough and physical, I don't know if that's understated but it's something that I don't hear but I believe it is a fact."

Robinson doesn't get the attention that the league's other quarterbacks have received, even after outperforming Daniel in the Cowboys' win at Missouri and keeping Oklahoma State in it until the very end in a loss at

And Harrell has become even more prominent after his closing-seconds touchdown pass to Michael Crabtree sealed a 39-33 win against the top-ranked Longhorns on Saturday.

Robinson could get his turn in the spotlight if the Cowboys can pull out a win against the Red Raiders, but the 6-foot-3 junior from Colorado said he's not concerned with being overlooked in a league of extraordinary quarterbacks.

"I'm comfortable with where I'm at," Robinson said. "Obviously with our team's success, we're getting a lot more

Allen scores 29 in Celts' win over Houston

By CHRIS DUNCAN

AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Celtics coach Doc Rivers chatted with Rockets general manager Daryl Morey after Boston's 103-99 victory over Houston on Tuesday night.

"Y'all are going to be great," Rivers said. "I'm telling you."

Maybe so. But the defending NBA champions showed the Rockets how far they still have to go.

Ray Allen scored 29 points, Kevin Garnett added 14 points and 11 rebounds and the Celtics shut down Ron Artest and Yao Ming to hand Houston its first loss of the season.

Tracy McGrady scored 26 points, but couldn't rally the Rockets down the stretch.

The Celtics arrived in about their 95-79 loss to Indiana on Saturday than the buzz they've heard about the Rockets.

"With Artest coming here, I know they see what we did the previous summer in having three guys who really can play and really can score," said Allen, who hit 11 of 15 shots. "You have a tendency to get caught in the hype of the wrong team and you start to believe it. What we did, we came out here, we lost the last game, and we needed to come out here and do the things we do that make us successful."

The Celtics led 101-97 when McGrady rose for a 3-pointer and was fouled by Tony Allen. McGrady landed awkwardly and grabbed his sore left knee as Rivers protested the call, claiming McGrady was trying to pass. He was given three foul shots and Houston thinking more made two, cutting Boston's lead to 101-99.

How many of vou remember the Nancy Drew books? They were thrilling, yet safe, mysteries of a plucky young heroine. Here's a review from Publisher's Weekly of

McCright

Stephanie Karpinske's book "Blues for Real Life" (813.52 KAR S):

A smart and capable heroine, girl sleuth Nancy Drew provided a progressive role model for girls in 1930s America, where women had recently won the right to vote. Today, her thoughts on being a woman, dealing with boys, solving crimes and staying fashionable make for deliciously dated browsing. In chapters like

"Career Clues," "Mysterious Men" and "The Style Sleuth," Karpinske has amassed fun, shamelessly old-fashioned (read: non-PC) bon mots like, "Do nearly faint upon being rescued so you can be picked up and held by good strong arms!" from The Secret in the Old Attic. Also included are quizzes and sidebars, numerous illustrations from original publications and even a chapter of recipes for Drew's favorite foods, but the most interesting part is the first chapter, which looks at how Drew was created and how she's changed through different authors and times. But unless you're a die-hard fan, the endless list of quotes can prove wearying, especially for their occasional impenetrability ("Using transparent aliases ... might just get you locked in a hallway!"), an abundance of exclamation points and casual sexism ("There's safety in numbers, especially when they're men!").

Women, do you stand at the closet door and wonder what you are going to wear today? Do you pull out the old faithful outfit, day after day, week after week? Betty Halbreich rides to the rescue with her new book, "Secrets of a Fashion Therapist" (646.34 HAL B). From the book flap: With simple instructions and witty asides, Betty takes her years of experience working at Bergdorf Goodman's (large department store in New York City,

I think) and puts that experience into your hands. Follow her through the vears of fashion ups and downs and learn how to navigate "casual Friday" and how to breakup with the color black. A neat book.

I have never really understood the attraction of chanteuse Celine Dion. In her autobiography, "Celine Dion, My Story, My Dream" (B DIO C) first published in 2001. Apparently this book is a very readable and eminently enjoyable account of her life. Celine talks about her youth in Quebec, her idols, her family, her rise to fame, her chase of Rene, and much, much more. If you have been a fan for years, it is not much new, but it gives new insight into who Celine is. If you are not really a fan, read this and see what the buzz is about. The only person capable of limiting your potential

The time and date were listed. As I inquired with the others in the office I found that each of us received the same notice, so all of us decided that we should attend the funeral.

We were saddened that of one of our colleagues had died, but none of us could figure out who it was. So many folks gathered for the funeral that security guards were ordered to control the crowd.

As people stood in line to view the coffin they were filled with curiosity. Everyone was thinking, "Who was this person hindering our progress? Maybe we should be glad he's gone."

As each person went up to the coffin and looked inside they suddenly became speechless. Everyone was shocked and in silence, as if someone had touched the deepest part of their soul.

As I went to the coffin gazed in, I understood the dismay.

Inside the coffin was a mirror, and as I looked inside I could see myself. A sign was next to the mirror that said, "This is the only person who is capable of limiting your potential. It is you.' At that point I awoke, but the dream continued to haunt me. I knew what the dream was telling me. I must strive to live up to the potential I have been given. I must not allow the things around me to influence my life in negative ways.

I must go beyond my limiting beliefs and expand myself. I must not be afraid of difficulties, impossibilities and losses, I must face them, survive them and conquer them. I must examine myself and remember that it's the way I interpret and respond to the things around me that makes the difference.

I must have courage and strength to move ahead and the belief that all will work out right. There is an old proverb that states, "When we come to the edge of the light and we have to take the next step into the dark unknown, we must believe that one of two things will happen. Either there will be some-

America. His mastery of the Internet matched the rise of a new information age. And his push into formerly Republican states in the South, Midwest and West marked a new political landscape possibly emerging.

After an epic struggle, the first-term Democratic senator from Illinois defeated Republican John McCain, 72, a hero of the Vietnam War and a four-term senator from Arizona.

"It's been a long time coming, but tonight, because of what we did on this day, in this election, at this defining moment, change has come to America," a triumphant Obama told a cheering audience of an estimated 125,000 supporters in Chicago's Grant Park, alongside Lake Michigan.

abroad, he said that, "a new dawn of American leadership is at hand. To those who would tear this world down — we will defeat you. To those who seek peace and security we support you."

He lauded his wife, Michelle, and saluted Mc-Cain, calling him a "brave and selfless leader."

McCain conceded the election in a call to Obama at 11 p.m. Eastern time. Obama responded that he looked forward to working with McCain in the Senate. "I need your help. You're a leader on so many important issues," Obama told him.

McCain then faced his disappointed supporters under clear skies outside a Phoenix hotel.

"The American people have spoken and they have spoken clearly," McCain said, his wife, Cindy, at his side.

for his success and noted his unique triumph as an African-American. "I urge all Americans who supported me to join me in not just congratulating him, but offering our next president our good will and earnest effort to find ways to come together," he said.

He also lauded his running mate, Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin, who would have become the nation's first female vice president.

PresidentBushalsocalled Obama shortly after 11 p.m. in Washington. "You are about to go on one of the great journeys of life," Bush told the president-"Congratulations and go enjoy yourself."

Obama was at the vanguard of Democratic gains across the country that promised him a solid working majority in both the House of Representatives and the Senate.

Democratic challengers ousted Republican incumbent Sens. Elizabeth Dole in North Carolina and John Sununu in New Democrats Hampshire. also picked up open Republican Senate seats in New Mexico and Virginia.

However, they failed to oust Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, apparently dashing their hopes of gaining a filibuster-proof 60 votes in the Senate.

Eager for a popular mandate to reshape the government, Obama appeared well on his way late Tuesday night to become the first Democrat to take a majority of the popular vote since Jimmy Carter won 50.1 percent in 1976.

Obama sealed his victory by holding all the states that went Democratic in 2004, then picking off Republican states including Colorado, Florida, Virginia, Iowa, Nevada, New Mexico and Ohio.

Ohio was particularly important: No Republican has ever won the presidency without Ohio. No Democrat had won the White House without it since John Kennedy.

There as everywhere, the faltering economy dominated voters' minds and tilted the political landscape solidly against the Republicans as the party of power - and responsibility - in the White House.

Interest was intense. More than 40 million Americans already had voted by Tuesday morning, and total turnout was expected to top 130 million. The turnout rate was likely to rival the modern record of 67 percent set in 1960, the highest since women were granted the right to vote in 1920.

The Democratic wins came at a moment of history when the country eight years of a Republican presidency are ending with an economy sinking into recession, markets in turmoil and U.S. troops at war in Afghanistan and

He voted earlier by absentee ballot in Texas, where he expects to move after leaving office on Jan. 20.

Bush loomed large over the election as both Obama and McCain vowed to change course.

From the start, Obama ran on the promise of change, both in policy and political style. Unknown outside Chicago just four years ago, he seized the national stage with a keynote speech to the 2004 Democratic National Convention that gave voice to a hunger for a less confrontational and divisive politics.

That appealed particularly to a new generation of young Americans, drawn into politics in large numwas unusually anxious, as bers, who helped Obama defeat New York Sen. He also promised to raise taxes on the wealthy to help finance his expansion of programs for the poor.

McCain, too, promised change. He urged voters, particularly independents, to consider his long tradition of maverick reform that often challenged his own party." I am not president Bush," he insisted.

But it was all but impossible for McCain to shake the Bush legacy - a burden made worse when Vice President Dick Cheney decided to issue a public endorsement of McCain on the final pre-election weekend. It was the subject of one of the final ads of the campaign - aired not by a proud McCain, but by Obama. Flying home to Phoenix Tuesday afternoon, McCain and his aides sounded a sentimental note about the campaign.

"We've had a great ride. a great experience, and it's full of memories that we will always treasure," Mc-Cain said as he spoke with reporters on his plane.

McCain's chief campaign strategist, Steve Schmidt, later told reporters that McCain was already facing a hostile political landscape as the face of the Republican Party when Wall Street collapsed in September and voters grew even angrier.

"We did our absolute best in this campaign in really difficult circumstances," Schmidt said.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

WINTER IS JUST AROUND THE CORNER

In Texas, the seasons sometime overlap. Fall is here, but believe it or not, winter will be here before you know it. Use the following tips to save on your energy bill during those cold months.

- Weather-strip doors and windows
- Locked windows are tighter and more draft resistant
- Add attic insulation most homes don't have enough
- Keep shades & curtains open during the day and closed at night
- Service your heating system annually & change furnace filters monthly
- For every degree you lower the thermostat, you save about 2% in heating Don't block radiators or vents - close vents & doors in
- unused rooms
- Turn water heater down to 120 degrees If water heater is older, add water heater jacket
- Replace bulbs in high-traffic areas with compact fluorescent bulbs

Tomorrow's Horoscope

BY HOLIDAY MATHIS

The Capricorn moon gives way to the wiles of Aquarius. When the moon in

Aquarius, she's a zany, giddy girl and ever so fickle. Fanciful one moment and petulant the next, you never know what mood

she's going to be in, though usually some brilliant insight is born during her watch. There will be surprises.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Too much restraint will undermine your confidence now. So don't be modest. Give yourself props for the small acts you execute. If you do a little thing well, you can do a bigger thing well, TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Daring physical challenges are part of the fun. Of course you don't have to risk your health in order to be impressive, but doing something a little dangerous will have a thrilling result.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You've come a long way. You hear about your colleague's promotion and are happy without being the least bit jealous. Your career is progressing at a satisfying pace, too, and you will also have the success you seek.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Friendly relationships shift. You could become closer friends because now you have more in common, or maybe you start doing business together. The new turn will be excellent for both of you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Someone is crazy about you and it's an important notice. thing to Occupying a person's psychic space is an honor one doesn't get every day. For whatever reason, you do it for this person and it's nice to be adored.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). It's a wobbly emotional state you're in now. One minute you're laughing until your sides hurt and the next you're gazing out the window at nothing in particular for extended amounts of time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Should you settle an old score or write it off? The sure part is that you have to do something because this problem is taking up way too much mental space. A truthful and brief conversation will put the issue to rest.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). A conversation that didn't make any sense vesterday is now so clear, you wonder how you could have missed it. It's amazing what a little sleep can do to reset the subconscious mind. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-

Dec. 21). There have been a few times in the past when you gave up too quickly, only to find out that if you had hung on for a short while longer you would have succeeded. This time you have the tenacity to see it through.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Sure, you would prefer to be in charge, steering a project to its glory. Since that's not always possible, especially considering the politics at play in your current situation, you'll try hard to be adaptable.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You'll see someone and think, "If he can do it, so can I." And that thought is the truest thing you'll think all day. Find out the method. Others generously share the information you seek.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). People are expecting you to deliver a product, service or presentation. Something new is going on inside you -- you're not even nervous. It feels like all your life has prepared you for this.

ASTROLOGICAL QUES-TIONS: "I'm a 39-year-old Virgo. On the outside I'm a dutiful wife, a thoughtful friend and a good mother. I smile whenever I'm around people. But as soon as the door shuts, I have to admit life is overwhelming to Sometimes I think I can't handle it, even though I know that it's everything I wished for, since I was a small child. I have everything I always wanted and I'm not enjoying it. How can I? Signed, An Inwardly Desperate Housewife."

You have your thoughts to blame for this, dear Virgo. You really should stop believing in them. I happen to think they are not responsible for putting you in this plum position, so you simply must stop giving those thoughts all the credit. Virgos have a tendency to make their analysis a god, obeying the dictates of the constant ticker tape going through the head -- this is good, that is not good, you must please this person at the expense of your own happiness Ö It's all a lie. So how do vou enjoy life? By enjoying it. That's it. Stop striving and criticizing. Stop thinking so much. Your freedom is in accepting that you, and reality, are beautiful without all the extra mental input.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Kevin Jonas is a Scorpio with his natal moon in Taurus, which rules singing. No wonder he makes the young girls cry, both with his music and with his dating life. The fans prefer him not to have a girlfriend, keeping the fantasy alive. The popularity of Kevin Jonas and his brothers will continue to soar with the broadcast of their new television show.

Annie's Mailbox •: Advice for those in need

Dear Annie: I am a widower and recently got engaged to "Dyann." We are planning on getting married soon, but a few things have me puzzled.

My wife-to-be told me she had been married and divorced. She had a child living with her who I thought was her only child. I'd been seeing her for a few months when I found out she had three other children who were living with their father. When I asked her why she hadn't mentioned them, she said she didn't like talking about that part of her life.

When we applied for a marriage license, Dyann put down that she'd been married twice before, not the one time I knew about. I also noticed she hadn't been truthful about her age. I haven't said anything about these falsehoods, but I think they're odd.

Are these red flags I should be concerned about? -- Confused

Dear Confused: Your fiancee is a liar. There may be understandable reasons for her fabrications, but she owes it to you to be completely honest before you make a legal commitment. You are going to be her husband. If she refuses to answer all your questions truthfully and to your satisfaction, it means she is hiding something from the person she plans to share her life with. This is no way to start a marriage. Dear Annie: Four years ago, my grandfather died of a heart attack. At the time, he was married to his second wife, "Louise." Louise took excellent care of him, but since the funeral, I have had no contact with her. I regret that.

Before my grandfather died, Louise created a picture collage of my grandfather standing next to his father, alongside all of Grandpa's medals. would like nothing more than to have that collage, but since I haven't spoken to Louise for a good four years, it seems that asking for such an important memento would be terribly rude.

My husband says I was wrong to lose contact. My mother says I should write a nice letter to Louise and tell her what I want. Louise worked so hard to take care of my grandfather in his last days, and I don't want to be disrespectful. Don't you think it would be insulting if she suddenly got a letter from me asking for that collage after not communicating for so long? What should I do? --

Loving Granddaughter

Dear Granddaughter: It wouldn't hurt to reestablish contact with Louise whether you get the collage or not. Start by sending a letter. Ask Louise how she's doing. Tell her you are sorry you lost touch after Grandpa died and hope you can remedy that. Follow up with a phone call to chat. Once you are speaking to each other again, it is perfectly OK to mention the collage, tell her how much you admire it and ask if she will make you a copy.

Dear Annie: "DPN" asked why men cheat, and you printed an entire column of responses from guys. I read in astonishment their excuses for having affairs. Are they for real?

I am in one of these marriages, and believe me, the real reasons we do not "put out" enough for our husbands is way more complicated than being "overweight" or "inattentive" or all the other hogwash. Men simply need to find a way to reconnect with their wives. Not whine, complain or cheat. But maybe that would be too much work for these poor fellows. They think marriage just takes care of itself and doesn't require any effort on their part. --Michigan Corpse

Dear Michigan: You're right that some men don't want to do the necessary work to have a good marriage, but there are plenty of men who do -- and whose wives still treat them poorly. Often, those problems can be fixed with counseling and communication, but, unfortunately, not always.

Dear Annie: For the past 20 years, my family has spent Thanksgiving with my father, but last year Dad and I had a big blowup. We both said a lot of hurtful things. My mother is not around to help us reconcile. The only attempt my father has made to contact me was a letter that had more hurtful things in it.

I used to call him occasionally so my children could talk to Grandpa, but I no longer do that. So what happens Thanksgiving? My children are asking to see him. It is a seven-hour drive to his house, and we would have to stay there. I really don't want to go, even though this would be the first Thanksgiving without him. But do I hurt my children just so I can avoid Dad? -- Confused and Heartsick

Dear Confused: The longer you wait to reconcile with your father, the harder it will be. Unless you plan never to speak to him again, this is as good a time as any to face the music. You both said hurtful, angry things. Be the bigger person, pick up the phone and apologize. Don't expect Dad to admit fault. Simply tell him you're sorry for the awful things you said, the fight you had and the long silence, and ask if you can bring the children to see their grandfather for Thanksgiving. We hope he will say yes. (If it's at all possible to stay at a motel, we recommend it.)

Dear Annie: I read the responses to "DPN," who asked why men have affairs. I'm here to tell you it goes both ways. In the past 39 years, my husband has gained over 100 lbs. He thinks the television is his best friend. He is not interested in sex because of his size and medical problems. I have found myself attracted to men who think I'm interesting, smart and pretty. My affairs have caused problems in our marriage but have not encouraged my husband to drop a pound or read a book.

That column painted a bleak picture of women, but let's give men their due. They can be just as cold and distant. -- The Other Side

Dear Other Side: True. And neither gender has a monopoly on being wrong.

Heflin holds off GOP challenger

Howard County's representatives win new terms

By STEVE REAGAN

Republicans dominated West Texas politics this vear, but at least one Democrat is still standing

Joe Heflin, District 85 Representative. State fought off a determined from Republican challenger Isaac Castro to win re-election Tuesday night.

It wasn't quite the nailbiter as two years ago, when Heflin squeaked by Jim Landtroop, but it was still a tight contest. According to information on the Texas Secretary of State's Web site, Heflin out-polled Castro by almost 3,000 votes - 22,735 to19.836 — with seven ballot

"No. 1, the voters apparently see something in me they like, and they don't like negative campaigning." Heflin Tuesday's vote followed the same general trend as two years ago, with Heflin's strength in the Panhandle portion of the district overcoming the GOP's power base in the south.

As it did in 2006, Howard County went to the Republicans, although it Castro also took Glasscock County by a similarly close margin, 280 votes to 250.

saw that we were starting to gain on (Castro)," Heflin said. "Until we got the last votes in, I wasn't going to say that we were in ... but it was definitely more relaxed than last time."

Heflin attributed Castro's strong showing in the southern half of the district to traditional voting trends.

"I don't think it was Mr. Castro who did well, I thought it was Mr. McCain," Heflin said, alluding to the Republican Presidential candidate, who carried Texas in the election. "But I was pleased we gained a lot of ground (in the south half of the district). We lost by a lot Castro chalked up the election as a valuable learning experience.

"I want to congratulate Joe Heflin on a successful campaign," Castro said. "And I want to thank the hundreds of people who supported my campaign with time and money ... and I also want to thank the 20,000 voters who shared my vision for West Texas."

Castro said he was not ruling out another run in 2010, but wasn't about to declare for for the next election, either.

"Anything is possible," he said with a laugh. "I learned some very valuable lessons ... and I promise to stay involved and stay engaged."

As Heflin prepares for next spring's session of the Texas Legislature, he identified support of wind energy in this area as a big priority.

"We'll be working hard to make sure the wind freight train energy keeps running," he said. "We need that economic development out here."

Inotherstateandnational races involving Howard County representatives:

• U.S. Sen. John Cornyn (R-Texas) easily out-polling re-election, Democratic challenger Rick Noriega by almost 1 million votes in state-wide tallies, with Libertarian candidate Yvonne Schick running a distant third. Howard County voters went with Cornyn by a 6,557 to 2,601 margin.

· Randy Neugebauer (R-Texas) also had an easy timeatthepolls, dismissing Democratic challenger Dwight Fullingim to win another term as the District 19 representative for Texas in the U.S. House of Representatives. District-wide totals show Negebauer holding a 167,962 to 57,824 advantage over Fullingim, while Libertarian Richard "Chip" Peterson received slightly more than 6,000 votes.

• State Sen. Kel Seliger (R-Amarillo) won a onesided race to win another term to the District 31 seat, gaining 90 percent of the vote to easily out-distance Libertarian challenger Lauren Poindexter.

Voter turnout highest in almost a century

By SETH BORENSTEIN

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON America voted in record numbers, standing in lines that snaked around blocks and in some places in pouring rain. Voters who queued up Tuesday and the millions who balloted early propelled 2008 to what one expert said was the highest turnout in a century. It looks like 136.6 million Americans will have voted for president this election, based on 88 percent of the country's precincts tallied and projections for absentee ballots, said Michael McDonald of George Mason University. Using his methods, that would give 2008 a 64.1 percent turnout rate.

"That would be the highest turnout rate that we've seen since 1908," which was65.7percent, McDonald said early Wednesday. It also would beat the old post World War II high of 63.8 percent in the famed 1960 John F. Kennedy-Richard Nixon squeaker. The 1908 race elected William Howard Taft over William Jennings Bryan.

The total voting in 2008 easily outdistanced 2004's 122.3 million, which had been the highest grand total of voters before.

But another expert disagrees with McDonald's calculations and only puts 2008 as the best in 40 years. Different experts calculate turnout rates in different ways based on whom they consider eligible voters.

Curtis Gans, director of nonpartisan the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate at American University and dean of turnout experts, said his early numbers show 2008 to be about equal to or better than 1964. He said it looks like total votes, once absentees are tallied (which could take a day or so), will be "somewhere between 134 and 135 million."
