Chili cooks unite!

Fund-raiser set Jan. 3 for MHMR kids

By VALERIE AVERY

Special to the Herald

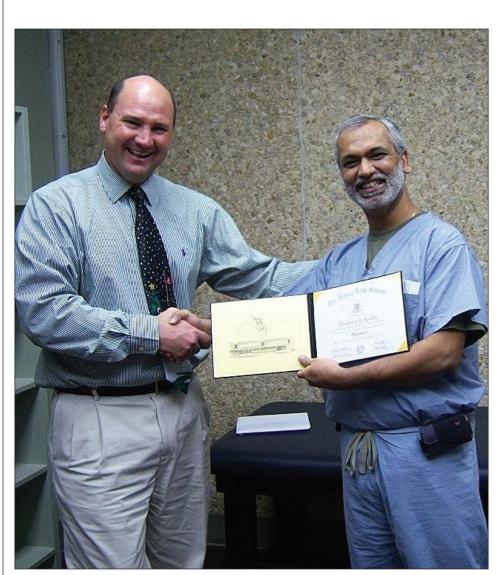

Aspiring chili cooks or those who just like to socialize while they stir the pot are encouraged to participate in the Seventh Annual Chili Cookoff Saturday, Jan. 3, at the Fraternal Order of Eagles Aerie No. 3188 building, 703 W. Third St., in Big Spring.

"A chili cook-off is only as good as the number of cooks who attend," said Landon Sturdivant, one of the organizers of the event.

"Luckily, we have had a very good track record for this event because of our past success. It is very well-organized, well-run, well-attended, distributes great prizes, and most of all, it's lots of fun. That's one of the

Body found

Believed to be that of local man missing since mid-October

By THOMAS JENKINS

Staff Writer

The body of a Big Spring man reported missing in mid-October is believed to have been found Sunday in a wooded area east of FM 700.

Edward Allen Welch, 53, of Big Spring, was reported missing Oct. 18, according to Sgt. Tony Everett, public information officer with the Big Spring Police Department.

"The sheriff's office received a call that a body had been found in a wooded area north of the Interstate Highway and east of FM 700," said Everett. "Deputies and police officers responded and located what is believed to be the remains of Edward Welch."

Welch was reported missing in October after his vehicle was found abandoned in a secluded area near where the body was found. According to police reports, the man was armed with a handgun and was believed to be suicidal.

A ground search, which included tracking dogs brought in by the Texas Department of Criminal Justice from Colorado City, turned up no evidence of Welch's whereabouts.

Star program aids elderly, disabled

Adult Protective Services is hoping to give gift-givers chance to shine this holiday season, as the annual "Be a Star" program looks to wrap up this week.

"A lot of people don't realize it, but the elderly and disabled population is the fastest growing in the state," said Darla Barton, community initiatives specialist for APS. "According to the last census, people 65 and older make up 12.4 percent of the population.

People between the ages of 21 and 64 with disabilities make up 15.1 percent of the population, and both of these demographics are the fastest growing in the nation. "Those same numbers are always higher for West Texas. In Howard County, 14.1 percent of the population is 65 or older, and 23.6 percent are between 21 and 64 years old with disabilities. So Big Spring and the surrounding areas have a very real stake in a program like this."

The program, which is being sponsored by First Bank of West Texas, will run until noon Saturday — the week before Christmas.

"All you have to do is go to any First Bank of West Texas location and pick out a star," said Bar-

Gas prices break streak as oil jumps over $49

By The Associated Press

Retail gasoline prices rose over the weekend for the first time in nearly three months and crude prices jumped Monday ahead of an OPEC meeting in Algeria, where oil producing countries are expected to announced huge production cuts. After hitting a low of $1.6559 gal on Friday, gas prices rose over the weekend to break an 86-day streak begun in July after prices topped

Price Information Service.

With average wholesale costs rising 20 cents per gallon or more since late November, "there's a sense that the Autumn low of $1.6559 gal may indeed represent the 2008 low water mark for street prices," OPIS analyst Tom Kloza said in a note.

Light, sweet crude for January rose $1.89 to $48.17 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. On Friday, the contract fell $1.70 to settle at $46.28.

In London, January Brent crude rose $2.42 to $48.83.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which accounts for 40 percent of global supply, has signaled it plans to announce a substantial reduction of output quotas at its meeting Wednesday in Alge-

"The extent of such cuts is still unclear and this uncertainty has been a source of continuing volatility in futures markets," said a report by analysts at KBC Market Services in Great Britain.

STANTON — For the second straight week, the Bulldogettes Coahoma found themselves in the finals of a tournament. Unfortunately, the results were the same as the Kermit Lady Yellow Jackets claimed the Hooptown Classic title in Stanton, 43-38.

It was a physical game from the start as both teams played suffocating defense, forcing a combined 16 turnovers in the first period with the Lady Jackets claiming the slim 6-5 lead heading into the second.

Kermit extended its lead going into into the half thanks to a defensive press frustrated Bulldogettes face-paced style, while the Lady Jackets turned two of three shooting from beyond the three-point line into a 17-11 advantage after sixteen minutes of play. Kermit pushed the score

ABILENE — Maybe the Big Spring Steers have finally turned the corner.

At least that's what Steers Head Coach Marcus Morris is hoping after the Steers won their final game of the Catclaw Tournament hosted by Abilene Wylie Saturday.

The Steers played a dominant third period, upending Jim Ned's Indians, who are ranked sixth in Class 2A,

The win came after the Steers dropped their first two games to Lubbock Trinity and Lubbock Cooper.

"We played a competitive game against Trinity, but had far too many turnovers against Cooper. There was almost a lack of interest in the second half of that Cooper game," said Morris. "We got down and just reacted in a completely non-competitive

"We played an entire game against Jim Ned," he continued. "Jim Ned was the same type of team Cooper was. The only real difference is we played a complete game. I think the guys are tired of losing and are realizing we need to play together. It's almost Christmas break and district will be here soon. Hopefully we can carry this momentum through this week."

The Steers travel to play Snyder at 6 p.m. today. The Lady Steers are set to play at Snyder at 4:30 p.m.

Woodson finally found some success on the ground in the second half. changing their scheme from a spread offense to a tighter formation. The Cowboys took the opening drive for their first and only score of the game as Jared Hutchens punched it in from 2 yards out.

However, the most pivotal coaching decision of the second half came just before play restarted. Borden County had deferred after winning the toss at the start of the game, giving them the right to choose possession or which side it would defend beginning the second half.

A strong wind was blowing out of the south and Borden County Head Coach decided he wanted the wind at his back in the fourth quarter. It paid dividends, allowing the Coyotes to focus solely on the Cowboys run game in the final quarter as the gust in their face prevented them from throwing the ball.

physical," Coahoma Head Coach Randal Petty said. "We got a bit frustrated and got the technical called on the bench. After that I wasn't allowed to leave my seat and it's hard to coach from there.' With the score sitting 41-31 late in the fourth quarter, the Bulldogettes finally found their groove running off a 10-2 run in the final five minutes, ending when Kylie Gee pulled down an offensive rebound and put back. The bucket pulled the Bulldogettes to within 3, 41-38, with six seconds left on the clock.

Shelbi Paige tied up the ball on the inbounds pass, resulting in a Lady Jackets turnover with three seconds left.

Ashley Montoya stepped in front of the pass intended for Paige, forcing the Bulldogettes to foul the 5'2 guard. Montoya iced the game from there sinking both shots from the charity stripe to give Kermit the win. "We called a timeout after we got the ball back and I asked the girls if they wanted to go for the three or try to get the two and hope for the foul and the said they wanted to get the three," Petty said. "We usually shoot the three real well so I thought it was a safe play. Unfortunately, we turned the ball over and that was the end of the game."

Gee led the Bulldogettes scoring 15 with Berkley Iden adding 11. Lucinda Quiroz had a game high 16 points for Kermit.

players on the field and the preparation you put in."

For the record, Romo's first pass was intended for Witten, an incompletion. Owens dropped a catchable deep ball on the next play, drawing more boos like he got during pregame introductions.

But on third-and-9 with 3 minutes left, Witten caught a short pass from Romo and surged ahead for the extra yards to get a first down. T.O. was there for a celebratory fist-bump, and Tashard Choice ran 38 yards for the game-clinching touchdown on the next play.

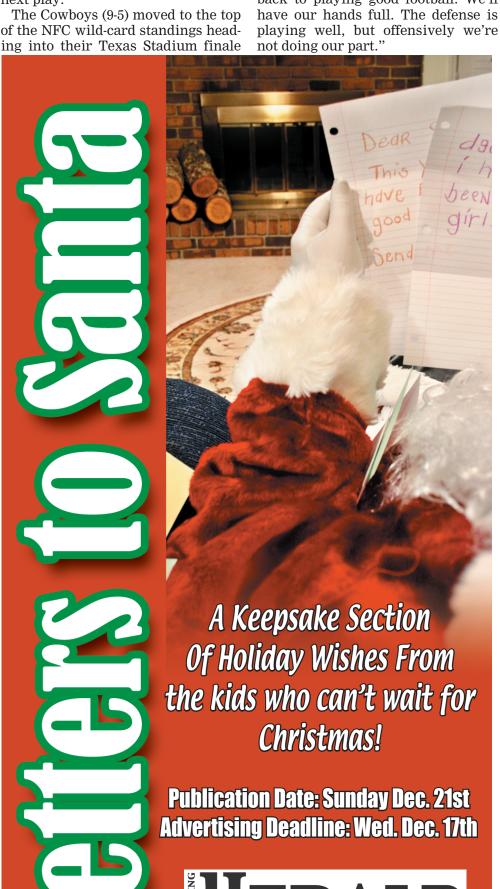

Saturday night against Baltimore. "It was just something we had to deal with," said Owens, no stranger to controversy. "We just stuck together. We knew what was important and that was the game today.'

New York (11-3) locked up the NFC East title last Sunday, but has lost consecutive games for the first time since starting 0-2 last season. Both losses have come since star receiver Plaxico Burress accidentally shot himself in the leg and was lost for the season. Still, New York can clinch the NFC's top playoff seed by winning at home Sunday night against Carolina.

"I'm disappointed, a little frustrated, but not concerned," said Manning, who was 18-of-35 for 191 yards with two interceptions. "We have to get back to playing good football. We'll

Ousting Gov. Rod Blagojevich high on legislators' to-do-list

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Republicans and Democrats alike are calling for Illinois lawmakers to begin impeachment proceedings against Gov. Rod Blagojevich, saying the step is necessary to restore public confidence in state government.

"The General Assembly must move to impeach Rod Blagojevich immediately," said DuPage County State's Attorney Joe Birkett, a potential Republican candidate for governor in 2010.

"We should have started yesterday," agreed Rep. Jack Franks, a Democrat.

Legislators were to meet Monday afternoon for the first time since Blagojevich was arrested last week on charges he shook down businesses seeking state deals and tried to profit from his power to choose a replacement for President-elect Barack Obama's vacant Senate seat.

The session's focus was supposed to be about considering a special election, but impeachment is likely to be the chief topic of conversation.

Gap in black and white colon cancer deaths widens, report says

ATLANTA (AP) — The racial gap in colon cancer death rates is widening, a new report says, and experts partly blame blacks' lower screening rates and poor access to quality care.

Colon and rectal cancer death rates are now nearly 50 percent higher in blacks than in whites, according to American Cancer Society research being released Monday.

The gap has been growing since the mid-1970s, when colon cancer death rates for the two racial groups were nearly equal.

"We have seen this enormous progress in whites. We could be seeing the same progress in blacks, if we could overcome disparities in access to health care," said Elizabeth Ward, who oversees surveillance and health policy at the cancer society.

Colorectal cancer is the third leading cancer killer in the United States. About 50,000 Americans will die of the disease this year, the cancer society estimates.

BODY

According to Everett, the gun Welch is believed to have gone missing with was recovered near the body.

"The remains were decomposed, but items found with the body indicate it is Welch," said

Everett. "Justice of the Peace Benny Green pronounced death and ordered an autopsy, which will be performed in Lubbock. Evidence at the scene suggests Welch took his own life. A .38 caliber handgun was found near the body, which was located three-quarters of a mile to a mile northeast of where his vehicle was found in October."

At the time of Welch's disappearance, police officials said it was likely he hitched a ride on Interstate Highway 20 or jumped a train leaving Big Spring.

Everett said the case will remain open until the autopsy is completed and a final ruling on the cause of death is made by Green

Big Spring Art Association

The Big Spring Art Association met Nov. 18 for its monthly meeting in the basement of the Howard County Library. regular business meeting was held and then Roger Albertson presented the evening's program. Roger has a master's degree plus 70 hours and is a retired art teacher from Illinois. His program was on "Perspective." He gave a great presentation, and 'tested' the group at the end. It was fun association members all came away a new way to look at their art.

Tuesday, the BSAA will hold its annual Christmas party. This year the host and hostess will be Bruce and Belle Schooler. The party will be held at their studio/ home, located at 6414 S. Service Rd., Big Spring. All members will bring finger foods, and a small "art" gift to exchange at the party. Visitors are welcome to come and meet everyone and find out more about the art association.

Monthly meetings are held at the Howard County Library, in the basement, the third Tuesday of each month at 7 p.m. All artists and those who love art are invited.

most important things to keep in mind when hosting a chili cook-off," said Sturdivant, who also serves as chief operating officer for West Texas Centers for MHMR.

The event benefits the West Texas Centers for MHMR Children In Need Fund and is sponsored by the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

Proceeds from the tasting and entry fees benefit the fund, which helps purchase school supplies, clothing, tuition for summer camps and helps meet other financial needs of special children who are receiving services from West Texas Centers for MHMR.

The Eagles group has donated more than $30,000 to the fund through its chili cookoffs over the past six years, West Texas Centers CEO Shelley Smith, LMSW, said.

"These funds have been instrumental in helping to address the unmet financial needs of children with mental illness and emotional disorders in West Texas," Sturdivant said. "These funds help the kids whose parents can't afford the specialized camps or other items that the kids need. Without the funds raised by the Eagles, most of these children and adolescents would go without these needs being met. The funding is absolutely critical to these kids."

Cooking begins at 8 a.m. Judging begins at 11:30 a.m., and sampling begins soon afterward.

"Most people who attend chili cook-offs do so to sample the culinary skills of all the cooks, but watching the rivalry and competition among the cooks is downright entertaining." Sturdioff should take the first step at the January event, Sturdivant said. "It's very low key and there are a lot of people around who can help you out. And it's for a good cause."

It's really not as difficult as some people think, he said.

"Anyone can participate in a chili cook-off. All you need is the proper cooking equipment, ingredients and a great recipe. All of these items vary, as much as the taste of the chili. Some cooks bring their stateof-the-art kitchens that they have taken years to build on a trailer. Yet, others only need only to bring an electric skillet and grandma's recipe to cook up an award-winning pot of Texas chili."

Team ribbons will be presented to the top 10 finishers. A showmanship award also will be presented.

Team participation is limited to two members at a cost of $10 a team. Entry into the event is $5 a person, which includes tasting all entries.

Putting polish on Lady Justice

n March 2005, a month after Alberto Gonzales became U.S. attorney general, Justice Department staffers sent to the White House a chart ranking all 93 U.S. attorneys in terms of their allegiance to President George W. Bush and his administration.

On that chart, Patrick J. Fitzgerald, the U.S. attorney for Northern Illinois, was ranked somewhere in the middle, below those federal prosecutors who exhibited loyalty to the administration but above the "weak U.S. attorneys who ... chafed against administration initiatives."

Two U.S. attorneys who got the same ranking as Fitzgerald later were fired in a White House political purge of nine federal prosecutors. Fitzgerald, who was serving a dual role at the time as special counsel into the leak of CIA operative Valerie Plame's identity, was insulated from the firings.

That proved to be a bad break for I. Lewis "Scooter" Libby, the former chief of staff to Vice President Dick Cheney who was sentenced to $2\frac{1}{2}$ years in prison for his role in outing Plame, and for then-New York Times reporter Judith Miller, who spent 85 days in jail for refusing to cooperate with Fitzgerald's single-minded pursuit of the truth.

On Tuesday, it also became a bad break for Illinois Gov. Rod Blagojevich, whom Fitzgerald charged with conspiracy and corruption for acts that reek of sleaze and stupidity.

That Fitzgerald survived the Bush administration's attempts to politicize the Justice Department turned out to be a break for the people of Illinois, who now have yet another golden opportunity to clean up the state's culture of corruption.

It is also a break for the Justice Department's 113,000 employees: Fitzgerald and his assistants and investigators put a little polish back on Lady Justice and her scales, which had been badly tarnished by people that one of Gonzales' flunkies called "loyal Bushies."

Newspaper reporters and prosecutors don't always see eye-to-eye, perhaps because both professions can attract obsessive people with chips on their shoulders. As Fitzgerald said to reporters Tuesday, "I will say this: As you guys know, you guys are in the information business of getting it and publishing it, and we're in the information business of getting it and using it."

Some journalists thought Fitzgerald went too far when he jailed Miller and threatened to jail other reporters who refused to cooperate in the Plame investigation.

Nor does Fitzgerald seem to care very much about politics. In New York, where he prosecuted mobsters and terrorists before Bush appointed to him to the job in Chicago in 2001, he was registered as in "Independent" until he found out that in New York, "Independent" is the name of a political party.

He put a Republican governor, George Ryan, in prison and now aims to do the same with a Democratic governor. He's received publicity and attention that any politician would kill for. He has been mentioned as a possible successor to Robert S. Mueller when the head of the FBI retires and even as a possible attorney general. Illinois Sen. Dick Durbin, a Democrat, wants him to remain as U.S. attorney in Chicago, and senators from the president's party generally get their way.

If Fitzgerald truly wants to clean up Illinois, he'd run for governor in 2010. We don't care if he's a Republican or a Democrat, a Whig or a Vegetarian. We'd just like to watch the panic in Springfield.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Draw the line on bailouts

f our government's economic experts really knew what they were doing, they wouldn't be frenetically experimenting with the people's money, treating billions like nickels. They wouldn't be so hellbent on dampening expectations and instilling fear as if oblivious to the real impact of public psychology on the economy.

I'm just not buying their doomsay-

ing anymore. Even if they're right and we do end up in

a full-scale financial meltdown, at least it will be finite and America's best days will still be ahead of us. But if we don't stop this panic-driven government intervention madness now, the chances are we'll still face a major meltdown and pass the point of no return into the bottomless pit of socialism.

The auto bailout and future proposed gargantuan government interventions must be rejected.

Government bailout architects ominously warned that unless we adopted their original "$700 billion" bailout proposal to purchase distressed mortgage assets, we'd face catastrophic economic consequences rivaling or exceeding the Great Depression.

Just weeks later, these same architects betrayed their own warnings and said their do-ordie plan would not work after all. Buying the troubled assets wouldn't inject capital into the banks quickly enough, so instead the government would have to distribute the money directly to major financial institutions.

But whatever happened to the government's mollifying assurance that if we pursued the original asset purchase plan, which involved buying the assets at a bargain, taxpayers might even make money on the deal? How about its promise that its involvement would be short-term? Obviously, the government's promises were more short-lived than its intervention.

Predictably, all kinds of sup-plicants showed up at government's doorstep looking for their own "rescue" funds. And we're just getting warmed up.

While Congress probably never should have authorized the original bailout plan, there is at least a plausible rationale to draw the line in the sand now. As others have noted, most bailouts to date have been to the financial sector. But once we open the door to the automakers, on what non-arbitrary basis do we deny future private industry petitioners, especially when their collective failure could arguably have a major impact on the economy?

Free market capitalism is obviously not perfect, but it's the least imperfect economic system, and its pricing mechanism does an infinitely better job of allocating resources and rationally picking winners and losers than government planners could do, even if they had the foresight of Nostradamus on his best day.

Keynesian interventionist types insist that the intrinsic weaknesses of capitalism require large-scale government interventions from time to time, such as FDR's New Deal. Nonsense. While there are certainly cyclical ups and downs inherent in market economies, there is usually scant justification for such major government adjustments.

Indeed, but for liberally biased historians, we'd understand that FDR's actions exacerbated and prolonged the Great Depression and that Obama's planned New Deal would do likewise. The financial meltdown was not caused primarily by too much capitalism but reckless government policies that interfered with the market's pricing mechanism, such as mandating uncreditworthy real estate loans.

Even if we draw the bailout line now, we must understand that we've still seen an enormous government intervention under a Republican president's watch, which will make future bailout proposals difficult to credibly oppose.

Some contend there is a silver lining in these bailouts, namely that their inevitable failure will teach the lesson that they don't work and cause our rededication to market principles.

But this ignores that a large percentage of the political class has no fealty to market principles. The Harry Reids and Nancy Pelosis of the world are licking their lips in anticipation of the opportunities for government intervention this crisis presents, as Obama's chief of staff, Rahm Emanuel, brazenly admitted.

In the typically arrogant spirit of social planners, they are poised to micromanage an industry they know less about than they know about balancing the federal budget. Worse still, they refuse to divorce their self-assigned mission of restoring financial stability to the industry from their policy and political goals of imposing environmental mandates and protecting their union voting constituencies.

It's time to take our medicine, even if that means bankruptcy and the restructuring of an industry whose wages have long defied market standards. Any resulting hardships are sad and troubling, but the alternative is worse.

If we don't stop this runaway freight train now, there might be no extricating ourselves from the government planning model, which would be disastrous for America's unique and world-leading prosperity and liberty.

Conservatives better start screaming bloody murder, or the market enemies soon to dominate two of the three branches of the federal government with a lust for the third could build a socialist momentum that would be difficult to restrain, much less reverse.

Enough is enough.

Free the California 52,000?

panel of three federal judges is holding a trial to determine whether to free 52,000 of California's 172,000 prison inmates to alleviate overcrowding. You might be asking yourself: Who elected these guys to run California?

One of the three judges, U.S. District Judge Thelton Henderson, determined in 2005 that California's prison health care system is so bad that it's unconstitutional. He put the system in receivership and appointed law professor Clark Kelso to oversee prison health care. Now Kelso is demanding $8 billion to renovate the system even though the state is spending about $14,000 on health care per inmate, according to the Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation. (California's total health care spending was $169 billion in 2006, the California Medical Association's Ned Wigglesworth told me, which divided by 37 million comes to about $4,600 per head — or a third of what is spent on the incarcerated.)

Here's the unfunny funny part: Criminal Justice Legal Foundation President Michael Rushford recently figured out that inmates live longer on the inside than on the outside, and they live longer on the inside than outsiders live.

He found a study, "Release from Prison — A High Risk of Death for Former Inmates," published last year in the New England Journal of Medicine, which shows that the mortality rate for Washington state inmates spiked more than 1,200 percent in the first two weeks after their release, and averaged 386 percent higher than inmates in prison during the two years after release.

The study also found that Washington inmates have a lower mortality rate than the general population. In that Washington state inmates have a mortality rate very close to the California rate, Rushford figured that the judges should beware that by releasing 52,000 prisoners, more inmates will die.

As the New England Journal

study noted, "the risk of death was sharply higher after release than during incarceration."

The leading cause of death for released inmates was drug overdose, followed by cardiovascular disease, homicide, suicide, cancer and motor vehicle accidents.

Apparently prison — even prisons with shabby health facilities — provides a healthier environment than what most criminals are used to. Behind bars, there are fewer ways to be self-destructive — and there's health care.

I do not intend to make light of any substandard medical care in California prisons. Henderson found California penal health care to be so "fraught with medical neglect and malfeasance" as to be unconstitutional. He cited filthy conditions and poor hygiene practices — including a San Quentin dentist "who neither washed his hands nor changed his gloves after treating patients into whose mouths he had placed his hands." Ugh. (If this were a "Law & Order" episode, prosecutors would have charged the dentist with a crime — and rightly so.)

The good news is that after Henderson stepped in, Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger worked to improve the prison health care system and poured money into the effort, with results to show for it. A 2007 analysis of prison deaths for Kelso reported that a number of health workers left the system, while state prisons hired board-certified professionals.

Does Kelso understand that 47 percent of the California prison population are repeat violent offenders, 33 percent are repeat offenders and many of the rest are first-time felons who committed serious crimes against people, like rape and murder? Do the three judges? As the Associated Press reported, one of the three, U.S. District Judge Lawrence Karlton of Sacramento, asked recently, "In the long run, does it make any difference to public safety if we release them 60 days earlier?"

WHO IS MARS?: Mars is acting out again, making it the perfect time to get to know this main player in the astrological story. Mars was the wellborn son of the highest gods in the Roman pantheon, Jupiter and Juno. This enfant terrible of the gods was not always a warrior. Initially he ruled fertility and was a lover, not a fighter. He kept the vegetation and guarded the cattle. He protected the fields and enforced the boundaries -- that's where the trouble began. As the Roman Empire started to value expansion, their view of Mars changed. They needed him to be a warrior to represent Roman dominance and honor the spirit of battle. erable outlook. Enough is And so Mars donned his DICATE, INC.

sword and jumped into the fight. The role suited him so well that he became a most beloved god ranking second only to Jupiter. The story of Rome was rewritten to place him as the father of the empire. It was believed that all Romans had a piece of the fighting god, as each and every Roman was a descendent of Mars. And the legend grew past Rome itself as other cultures like Celts, Iberians and tribes in melded Britain essence of Mars into their own mythology.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Happy birthday to the hilarious Tim Conway, who got huge laughs on "The Steve Allen Show" in the '60s and audiences have been howling ever since. From "The Carol Show" Burnett "SpongeBob" to "30 Rock," this quirky comic genius has the unbounded energy of his Sagittarian sun. The moon and Mercury also in Sagittarius drive Conway to an endless exploration of his talents.

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: I have been the bookkeeper for a small company for six months. The previous bookkeeper was embezzling money, and I now have to deal with a lot of micromanaging due to the office manager's trust issues. I do my job well and have proved myself trustworthy.

Due to my position, I am aware of how much money the embezzler was making and I am making significantly less. The owner also owns another company and recently fired the bookkeeper there for embezzling, as well. I was asked to help out until they hired someone else, and while going through the books, I discovered that she, too, was significantly making more money than I am.

I accepted a lower-thannormal wage when I began working here, with the understanding that I would be making more once I put in my time. I am coming up for my review and was looking forward to getting a raise. I have discovered through the grapevine, however, that the raise they plan to offer me is less than I was led to believe and much less than that of the bookkeepers who were embezzling. I should be worth at least as much as they were. I have more responsibility, rarely take a day off, do my work well and, most importantly, I'm not stealing from the compa-

I realize it's the owner's prerogative to pay what he feels is right, but am I justified in -- Feeling Stiffed?

While you are honest and doing a good job, the owner isn't going to pay you the same amount after six months as someone else earned after, say, six years. If, however, your length of employment is similar, you have a legitimate beef. When your raise comes up, let the boss know what you think is fair.

Dear Annie: I am an elderly widow with a debilitating lung disease and a recent breast cancer diagnosis. I live alone in my own home.

My neighbors and I share a backyard fence. They have a row of evergreen trees that drop needles all over. Yesterday I observed my neighbor using his leaf blower to scatter those needles into my yard. They kill my grass. I am in no condition to rake up these needles or blow them back into his yard. Any suggestions as to what I should do? --Tired and Upset

Dear Tired: Talk to your neighbor. He may not realize that his evergreen needles destroy your grass, or that you've noticed. If that doesn't help, contact your local homeowners or neighborhood association, or ask another neighbor to intercede on your behalf. You can, of course, call the police if he doesn't stop, but first we'd give him the opportunity to do the right thing.

Dear Annie: You told "Seoul, South Korea," the woman who enjoyed wearing perfume, to quit wearing it to work and save it for special occasions. So that means people like me now have to gag through concerts and shows?

Tell her if she enjoys wearing perfume to do so at home in the evenings and on the weekends. Chances are she's so immune to the scent, she has to wear more and more to notice it, making it even stronger for the rest of us. -- M.G. Dear M.G.: Perfume, in very small drops, can be lovely to wear, and many people enjoy catching a whiff. While it is never a good idea to wear it in enclosed spaces such as a work environment, a dab when going out for the evening should not cause anyone to gag.

The world is full of people who are sensitive to one thing or another, and it is not possible to accommodate every person's preferences potential reactions. We will qualify that, however, by saying that a small drop means just that. Any more is offensive to every-

Making the most of your doctor's visit isiting the doctor can be an intimidating experience, whether your appointment is for a routine check-up from your family physician or for evaluation of a more complex problem with a specialist. No matter how prepared you think you are, several factors can determine how you feel about the quality of your time with your doctor and the outcome of your visit: the reason for the visit, your doctor's communication style, and the amount of time you spend in the waiting room before your visit,

Dr. Scott

Most of us prepare for a doctor's visit much the same way: checking with our health insurance company to determine coverage, co-payments and necessary referrals; making sure we have insurance cards in hand; and, if our visit is problem-focused, researching symptoms through discussions with friends and family or on the Internet. But there's much more you can do to make sure your visit is a success.

It's important to be prepared with questions – and not be afraid to ask those questions. Although communication styles vary, your physician is there to serve your interests and make sure that you are informed. However, your physician isn't a mind reader; be prepared with any questions or concerns. Write them down so that you don't forget them once you're in the exam room.

Remember that you and your doctor are partners in your health care. Your preparation and participation are important determinants in how successful your visit will be.

Here are a few tips for guaranteeing that your next visit is informative and productive:

Keep your own medical journal at home. This means keep a log of the following: questions you have; a food and exercise diary; over-the-counter and prescription medications (including dosage) and herbal supplements; as well as symptoms you have/are experiencing, along with descriptions and dates/times of those symptoms. Review this information while you're in the waiting room so that it's fresh on your mind.

Bring blank paper to your visit to make notes during your appointment for later review.

Have a friend or family member to accompany you on your visit. Often, they can remember details that you may not recall.

If you anticipate that there may be a language barrier with your doctor, bring along someone who is proficient in medical terminology who can interpret for you.

Bring any magazine articles that pertain to your health condition, if you would like to ask your doctor about similar cases and treatment options covered in the article.

Ask the doctor what your exact diagnosis is, the recommended treatment plan, and when he/she would like to see you again (or if a visit to a specialist is needed). Don't be intimidated by medical jargon. Ask your doctor to explain things to you in easy-to-understand terms and don't be afraid to ask the doctor to repeat instructions or answers you don't understand.

Be an involved and informed healthcare consumer. Being prepared — and knowing how to talk to your doctor - will help you make the most of your time there and gain maximum benefit from his or her guidance. And remember, your relationship with your physician should be a partnership, not a dictatorship. If you are unhappy with explanations of your diagnosis or treatment plan, let your physician know. If your concerns aren't remedied, consider a second opinion. Our job is to insure quality of care and peace of mind. Make sure you get both.
