The Big Spring YMCA's new director is on the job.

VOLUME 104, NUMBER 180

Dallas native Dathan Jones formally assumed director responsibilities today. He succeeds Pete Thiry, who resigned earlier this year after more than a decade at the helm of the local Y.

There will be a reception welcoming Jones from noon until 1 p.m. Friday. The public is invited.

"The more the merrier," Jones said. "Anyone should feel free to just show up and pop in (Friday) and have some sandwiches, cake and punch. I would love to meet the public. I'd like to go door-to-door and meet everyone if I could."

Jones, 27, is originally from Dallas, but he comes to Big Spring after working five years at the Abilene YMCA and later McMurry University. His first day of work was Wednesday, but because of moving problems, today is his first actual day in the office.

Pool open at Forsan

Herald Staff Report

Big Spring's Comanche Trail Park Municipal Swimming Pool may be closed this summer but that doesn't mean there's no place to swim.

In addition to the YMCA facility, the Forsan Pool is open and welcoming residents from other communities.

The pool is open from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and, yes, that includes the July 4 holiday. Cost is $1 for Forsan and Elbow Elementary children and $2 for everyone else. Lifeguards are on duty at all times. Forsan Pool is located at Forsan High School in the almost 20 years educational experience, mainly as a teacher, coach and administrator.

After graduating from Eldorado High School in 1986, he enrolled at Sul Ross State University in Alpine to pursue his first love — playing football.

"I went to college to play football," he said earlier this year. "When I was out there, I started thinking, 'What am I going to do with the rest of my life?' I had a lot of teachers who were a big influence on me, so I decided to become a teacher and a coach."

He ultimately obtained his bachelor's degree from Sul Ross, then a master's degree in education from the University of Houston at Victoria before pursuing his career in the classroom and athletic field.

Making the switch to administration, he said, almost came about by accident.

"It's funny," he said. "I was teaching and coaching at Granado and was about to move to Crane to do the same thing there ... We had already sold our home and it was about two days before the moving vans arrived to haul our stuff to Crane when the (Granado ISD) superintendent came by the house and offered me the high school principal position.

"That's how my life as an administrator began," he added. "Is it destiny? Is it providence? Who knows? All I do know is that's what happened."

He stayed at Granado until 2005, when he accepted the assistant superintendent position at Lamesa ISD, and held that post until coming to Big Spring in 2008.

When the superintendent's post became vacant shortly after he arrived, Saldivar decided to try for the position.

"By already being here, I felt I had an advantage in that I knew the people and the system," he said. "Being on the inside definitely helped. I can't say I was scared or intimidated at the thought of becoming superintendent. I was more excited by the opportunity than anything else."

Not much changed during Saldivar's first official day on the job, he said. "It honestly didn't feel any different — and I think that's a good thing," Saldivar said. "Dr. Stevens is still here helping us out ... and we're dealing with the same issues, so, on my part, it really didn't feel any different." The major issue facing the district will be formulating a new budget. That task has been slightly hampered by the uncertainty of how much state revenue BSISD will receive.

"The templates we receive (from the state) keep changing," he said. "But that's just part of what working through the budget is about." Another major issue is making sure the district has a full complement of teachers and administrators for the coming school year.

"We've hired almost all of the administrators we'll need for the new school year and we've hired a majority of the new teachers we'll need," he said. "We're fortunate that we didn't have a large amount of turnover this year."

With Saldivar's promotion, along with the recent hiring of Assis-Superintendent Danny Farrell and Executive Director for Instruction and Personnel Anne McClarty, the BSISD administration team is back at full strength.

Local man charged with injury to child

By THOMAS JENKINS

Staff Writer

A Big Spring man was arrested Wednesday night following a physical confrontation that injured a 13-year-old child, according to law enforcement officials.

Bryon Payne, 23, of 1319 Sycamore, was arrested Wednesday by officers with the Big Spring Police Department on a charge of injury to a child – assault/family violence, according to PD According to Sgt. Tony Everett, public information officer with the BSPD, the altercation took place at Payne's residence Sycamore, where he is believed to have been living with the victim and the victim's mother.

"Officers were called to the scene at 9:24 p.m.," said Everett. "There had been a domestic dispute between Payne and the victim's mother, and the juvenile had jumped into it. The child suffered minor wounds and was not transported to the hospital at the time of the arrest.' Everett said Payne was arrested without inci-

Congress still needs to keep a close eye on rights in South famous question posed to prospective African American voters in the segregated South was this beauty: "How many bub-■bles in a bar of soap?" Officially sanctioned bigotry like voter literacy tests aimed at discouraging African Americans and other minorities from participating in elections in the South and Southwest only seems like ancient history. There are still plenty of people around who experienced it.

Their children — now well past voting age — literally grew up with those experiences, making for two generations of voters zealously protective of the voting rights guaranteed by civil rights-era legislation that scrapped literacy tests and poll taxes.

It's a safe bet that none of them were celebrating what appeared to be the U.S. Supreme Court's refusal to strike down the historic voting rights pro-

Ruling on a case rising from a tiny Travis County voting district, the court voted to exempt the Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District No. 1 from seeking permission to move its one polling place from a garage to a school. The ruling made sense, but in it lies a clear message that the 1965 Voting Rights Act is teetering on the verge of judicial ex-

The Voting Rights Act requires that state and local government units in eight states apply for U.S. Justice Department preclearance of changes in election law and procedure. Also covered are parts of Virginia, California, Florida, New York, North Carolina, South Dakota, Michigan and New Hamp-

"The preclearance requirement applies broadly to every political subdivision in a covered state no matter how small," U.S. Supreme Court Justice Roberts wrote in the majority opinion.

"Some of the conditions that we relied upon in upholding this statutory scheme unquestionably improved. Things are changed in the South. Voter turnout and registration rates now approach parity. Blatantly discriminatory evasions of federal decrees are rare. And minority candidates hold office at unprecedented levels."

All that is true enough, but experience in Texas with the unprecedented makeover of congressional districts in 2003 — done by a compliant Texas Legislature at the behest of then-Majority Leader Tom DeLay — shows that the willingness of majority parties to engage in partisan hanky-panky hasn't died, nor is that willingness showing signs of even the faintest of illness.

Some argue that a proposal to require voter identification in Texas is a revival of the poll tax. While that might be a bit of hyperbole, the viewpoint is understandable given the state's history of stepping on minority voter rights.

With due respect to the chief justice, things are better but not so good that the need for federal oversight of Texas elections is — like voter literacy questions — a thing of the past.

A SMALL PRAYER

by K. Rae Anderson

Our walk with You, Lord, makes every moment count.

Forget guns, I'll take a cell phone he Internet is a lot like the dreaded kudzu vine. Once introduced into a venue it doesn't merely grow, it explodes. It goes anywhere it wants, does anything it wants and generally takes over.

There are some bad things about this - it eats up newspapers like rabbits eat up vegetable gardens, for example — but there are good things too.

For one, it has made the police state, that staple of 20th century governance, obsolescent. Not obsolete, mind you — there are still a lot of them around — but their job is much harder now and, in the long run, impossible. We see it working its magic in Iran right now. Ten years ago the government would have stolen the election and immediately put a lockdown on information coming out of country. Some people would have protested and gotten beaten up, hardly anyone would have noticed and the world would have yawned. A three-day story, Instead we now have great numbers of people spilling into the streets to protest the fraudulent election of Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, energized by the information fed to them through the Internet. And the world has The police and the government's paramilitary thugs beat the protestors, shoot them, arrest them, but still they come. The government has banned foreign journalists from the streets. People with cameras are arrested and abused. Still the photos and stories of the government's brutality keep streaming out to the rest of the world.

It's enough to make a ruling despot long for the days when the Soviet Union could silence critics by confiscating all the mimeograph machines in Mos-The government has tried to stem the Internet tide but to little avail. Hundreds of photos of the protests have appeared on YouTube and thousands of messages from protesters have made their way to the outside world through text messaging, Twitter and all the other technologies I know nothing about.

Will it be enough to topple the government or at least to win new elections? Probably not. A police state still has formidable weapons at its command and the Iranian government seems quite willing to use them.

But its aura of invincibility has been breached, its moral authority fractured. It's become obvious that it's just another corrupt gang of thugs willing to do whatever it takes to hang on to power and damn the consequences.

The situation gives lie to the claim of the National Rifle Association and its fellow-travelers that the first thing "the Communists" do when they take over a country is to confiscate the guns.

Not true. The first thing insurgents do when they gain control is take over the radio and television stations. Then they close the newspapers. Guns are dangerous yes, but not nearly as dangerous as ideas.

Republicans are upset with President Obama for not making a more forceful protest against what's going on in Iran, but I'm not sure what they want him to do. Make faces at Iran's leaders? Call them names? (We've already used up our quota for wars this decade.)

Maybe the president could show them a picture of Dick Cheney smiling. That's pretty terrifying.

Beyond that, interposing the United States in what is, after all, an internal matter would do nothing but make the protesters look like pawns of the United States and weaken their posi-

He's playing it just about right, turning up the heat gradually.

The Republicans have gotten a lot of mileage out of talking tough to our adversaries, when they talk at all. Where has it gotten us? Pariah status in the very part of the world that we now seek to influence. What's happening in Iran now is important largely because Iran is a hostile country that is attempting to arm itself with nuclear weapons. Ideally, we'd like to get the rest of the world — countries like China, India, Japan — on our side in trying to prevent it from doing so.

For that you need not bluster but persuasion.

And the Internet.

Time for Congress to investigate lans are already being made for the 2010 elections for the U.S. Congress, and the Democrats would appear to have some advantages. They have a popular president, a 6-percentage-point lead in party identification and 9 points for a generic Congressional ballot. Majorities of the electorate see both Obama and the Democratic Party as pushing for a change from the failed policies of the past. The Republicans seem divided and confused over a recovery strategy, plagued by high-level defections (such as Sen. Arlen Specter) and spokespeople (such as Rush Limbaugh and Dick Cheney) that seem too extreme to win over the necessary swing voters.

But the president's party almost always loses Congressional seats in non-presidential-year · Provide a daytime telephone number, as well as a elections. And if next year's elections reduce the Democrats' margin, it would be even more difficult to make progress on important reform legislation, such as health care.

At the end of the day, the ability to deliver reforms that actually improve the lives of the majority of Americans will most likely determine their long-term success as a political party.

The 2010 elections will very likely be about who gets blamed for the current economic disas-

Even if the economy is recovering in the latter half of next year - and that is a big "if" — it will Amen not feel much like an economic recovery for most Americans. The labor market will still be very weak, with unemployment projected to pass ten percent and rising in the second half of next year. Millions will have lost their homes and their jobs, and many millions more will have lost most of the equity that they had accumulated in their homes the main source of retirement savings for most households. The party that gets blamed for the mess will be most likely to lose seats in Congress.

The Democrats have a chance to defy electoral history and increase their Congressional lead next year, and perhaps even push the GOP toward the status of a permanent minority party. Celinda Lake, one of the Democratic Party's leading pollsters and strategists, has recently found that 71 percent of voters want Congress to hold investigations into the "events leading up to the Wall Street financial crisis." More importantly, the proportion is just as high among swing voters.

A Congressional investigation, if done right, would probe the errors, excesses, fraud, corruption and other abuses that led to the country's worst recession since the Great Depression. There is plenty of blame to go around, but much of it would probably land on Wall Street and the country's bloated financial sector. The vastly overpaid executives, who made ever-increasing bets on the proposition that obviously over-valued house prices would continue to rise indefinitely, would come under fire.

Some of them were rewarded for their failures with high positions in government: for example, President Bush's Treasury Secretary Hank Paulson who made $164 million in 2006 at Goldman Sachs during the peak of the housing bubble, helped steer the economy into an iceberg, and then came to Congress to ask for a blank check of $700 billion to bail out his Wall Street friends. The most important policy makers, such as Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan — who has to some degree fallen from grace – but also current Chairman Ben Bernanke, might also be asked to explain how they failed to notice the biggest asset bubble in the history of the world as it swelled over a period of several years to obviously threatening propor-

The obvious analogy to such an investigation would be the famed Pecora commission during the 1930's, as some have pointed out. It was named for its intrepid chief counsel Ferdinand Pecora, who went after the Wall Street titans of that era and helped pave the way for the nation's most important financial regulatory reforms, such as the Glass-Steagall Act of 1933.

The Democratic Congressional leadership thus has a chance do something that could promote badly needed reforms, is desired by an overwhelming majority of voters, and could give them a big political boost.

But do they have the guts to do

We will soon find out.

As budget deficit grows, California set to issue IOUs

(AP) — California's controller will start paying many of the state's bills with IOUs as soon as Thursday after lawmakers failed to close the state's worsening budget deficit, adding a new measure of indignity to a state sinking deeper into dysfunction.

Lawmakers' failure to act on Tuesday, the end of the fiscal year, also widened California's from what already had been a whopping $24.3 billion — more than a quarter of its general fund.

The failure to balance the state's main checkbook and the looming IOUs prompted Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger on Wednesday to declare a fiscal state of emer-

Under the declaration, state offices will be closed three days a month to conserve cash. If the Legislature fails to solve the deficit within 45 days, it cannot adjourn or act on other bills until the crisis is resolved.

The partial government shutdown also will lead to a third furlough day for 235,000 state employees, bringing their total pay cut this year to about 14 per-

"California needed the Legislature to act boldly and with conviction. Their response was not a solution to California's budget problem but an invitation to actually a bigger financial crisis,' Schwarzenegger said.

On Tuesday, as the drawing to a close, the Senate rejected three bills designed to save $5 billion, including $3.3 billion in education funding cuts that had to be enacted. Passing those bills would have given the Legislature time to work out a broader solution to the deficit and delayed the need for IOUs.

Instead, the budget shortfall is set to grow even wider because of California's complicated school funding formula, meaning the state will not have enough money to pay all its bills.

State Controller John Chiang said his office is prepared to issue IOUs totaling $3.3 billion in Senate Minority Dennis Leader Hollingsworth said neither he nor his Republican colleagues wanted to see California resort to IOUs to pay its bills, but he said Democrats had refused make sufficient spending cuts to solve the shortfall.

It will be the first time since1992thatCalifornia will have issued IOUs. The move is almost certain to further damage the state's credit rating, already the lowest of any state, saddling taxpayers with billions of dollars in higher interest payments on bonds that have yet to be sold.

Issuing IOUs — formally referred to as individual registered warrants — also will have real-world consequences for those on the

"It really doesn't affect the million-dollar companies. It's the smaller ones that will get hit," said Paul Nguyen, director of Care Now Staffing, a Southern California company that employs a dozen medical professionals.

The IOUs also will be sent to California counties, which now must find other ways to fund a wide array of social programs, ranging from alcohol abuse and mental health treatment to services for the elderly and disabled. California's universities were evaluating ways to assist students whose grants will not be funded to pay education expenses.

It was unclear whether some of California's largest banks will accept the state's IOUs as payment. They would be paid back, with interest, but the state's precarious financial condition and legislative gridlock might be making some bankers nervous.

Bank of America announced Wednesday it would cash the IOUs. for its customers through July 10, bank spokeswoman Colleen Haggerty said. Schwarzenegger state officials asked other banks to do the same, noting that California has never defaulted.

"We will make those payments," he said. "We are responsible."

"Karl lived a rich, full life," Academy president Sid Ganis said. "He has the greatest and most loving family; a career that has spanned the spectrum of the arts from theater to film and television, to some very commercial famous work."

While he tackled a variety of characters over the years, he was often seen in workingclass garb or military uniform.

His authenticity in grittier roles came naturally: He was the son of a Czech mother and a Serbian father, and worked for a time in the steel mills of Gary, Ind.,

Thousands of Marines launch huge anti-Taliban drive in Afghanistan

NAWA, Afghanistan (AP) — Thousands of U.S. Marines poured from helicopters and armored vehicles into Taliban-controlled villages in southern Afghanistan on Thursday in the first major operation under President Barack Obama's strategy to stabilize the country.

The offensive was launched shortly after 1 a.m. Thursday local time (4:30 p.m. EDT Wednesday, 2030 GMT Wednesday) in Helmand province, a Taliban stronghold and the world's largest opium poppy producing area. The goal is to clear insurgents from the hotly contested region before the nation's Aug. 20 presidential election.

Officials described the operation

Khanjar, or "Strike of the Sword" — as the largest and fastest-moving of the war's new phase and the biggest Marine offensive since the one in Fallujah, Iraq, in 2004. It involves nearly 4,000 newly arrived Marines plus 650 Afghan forces. British forces last week led similar, but smaller, missions to clear out insurgents in Helmand and neighboring Kandahar province.

"Where we go we will stay, and where we stay, we will hold, build and work toward transition of all security responsibilities to Afghan forces," Marine Corps Brig. Gen. Larry Nicholson said in a statement.

North Korea test-fires two short-range missiles amid heightened nuclear tensions

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — North Korea testfired two short-range missiles Thursday, South Korea's Defense Ministry said, a move that aggravates the already high tensions following Pyongyang's recent nuclear test and U.N. sanctions imposed as punishment.

The missiles were fired from the eastern coastal city of Wonsan on Thursday afternoon, a ministry official said on condition of anonymity citing missiles were launched, but Yonhap news agency said they were ground-to-ship missiles.

North Korea had earlier issued a no-sail zone in waters off its east coast through July 10 for military drills. That designation has been viewed as a prelude to such missile tests.

The new launches are expected to exacerbate the tensions running high since Pyongyang's May 25 underground nuclear test and a series of missile firings. The U.N. Security Council adopted a tough sanctions resolution last month to punish the communist regime.

DEA joins Michael Jackson death probe; memorial plans still mystery

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The circumstances surrounding Michael Jackson's death have become a federal issue, with the Drug Enforcement Administration asked to help police take a look at the pop star's doctors and possible drug use.

Following Jackson's death, allegations emerged that the 50-year-old King of Pop had been consuming painkillers, sedatives and antidepressants.

The DEA was asked to help the probe by the Los Angeles Police Department, a law enforcement official in Washington told The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the investigation.

The federal agency can provide resources and experience in investigating drug abuse, illicit drug manufacturers known as "pill mills" and substances local police may not be familiar with, the official said Wednesday.

June jobless rate seen rising to 9.6 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Out-of-work with no place to land, the legions of America's unemployed

The Labor Department is scheduled to release a report Thursday expected to show the nation's Wall Street economists predict the jobless rate will rise to 9.6 percent in June from 9.4 percent in May. That would mark a 26-year high.

The rising rate comes as recession-weary companies continue to cut workers. Economists expect a loss of 363,000 jobs in June, up from 345,000 job cuts in May. Economists believe a chunk of those cuts will be tied to shutdowns at General Motors Corp. and fallout from the troubled auto industry.

Still, if economists' forecasts are correct, it would be consistent with the belief that the worst of employers' payrolls cuts have occurred. Companies are expected to keep shedding jobs through the rest of this year, but economists hope the pace will continue to taper off.

Senate Democrats call for public option health plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Determined to advance President Barack Obama's health care agenda, key Senate Democrats are calling for a government-run insurance option to compete with private plans, as well as a $750-per-worker annual fee on larger companies that do not offer coverage to employees.

In a letter outlining the details, Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., said their revised plan would cost dramatically less than an earlier, incomplete proposal, and help show the way toward coverage for 97 percent of all Americans.

The two senators said the Congressional Budget Office put the cost of the proposal at $611.4 billion over 10 years, down from $1 trillion two weeks ago. The revising also "virtually eliminates" an earlier forecast that the proposal would cause many companies to drop coverage for their workers, they Kennedy and Dodd wrote members of the Senate Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee on Wednesday. A copy was obtained by The Associated Press. They disclosed their plans as Congress neared the end of a July 4 vacation.

Blalock's blast gives Rangers 9-7 victory

Texas Rangers' Hank Blalock, center, is mobbed by his team after hitting a two-run home run to win the game against the Los Angeles Angels in the ninth inning of their baseball game in Arlington Wednesday. The Rangers won 9-7.

ARLINGTON — With their offense hitting the skids in June, the Texas Rangers were dropping fast in the division standings.

Texas broke out of its monthlong slumber in time to keep things interesting in the American League West.

Hank Blalock's second homer of the game, a two-run shot with two outs in the ninth inning, gave Texas a 9-7 victory Wednesday night and moved the Rangers within a half game of the first-place Los Angeles Angels in the division.

Texas was hitting .221 in June before breaking out with five home runs in a 9-5 victory Tuesday over Los Angeles.

The Rangers played small ball early to get a 7-1 lead, then used Blalock's blast to hold off the Angels.

"There will be times when things don't go right, and that was one of those times," Texas manager Ron Washington said. "Those guys never dropped their heads. We try to play the game the way it's presented to us."

WIMBLEDON, England — Most of the talk at Wimbledon has been about the likelihood of a final between Roger Federer and Andy Murray. It turns out another Andy is also making a strong title run.

Andy Roddick overcame former champion Lleyton Hewitt 6-3, 6-7 (10), 7-6 (1), 4-6, 6-4 Wednesday to set up a semifinal matchup against Murray. Five-time champion Federer will meet German veteran Tommy Haas in the other semifinal on Friday.

This is Roddick's best showing at Wimbledon since 2005, when he lost in the final to Federer for the second year in a row. He lost in the third round in 2006, the quarterfinals in 2007 and second round last year.

Roddick served 43 aces against Hewitt in a 3-hour, 50-minute match that swung back and forth until the American got the decisive break for a 5-4 lead in the fifth set, converting his second chance with an easy forehand into the open court.

"It certainly wasn't short on drama," Roddick said. "It was tough from a mental standpoint because Lleyton wasn't going away and there were a lot of ebbs and flows to the match. I'm just happy to be on the good side of it."

When it was all over, Roddick let out a sigh and raised a fist, then threw his racket down, sat in his changeover chair and covered his face with his hands. "It's a mixture of happiness, of relief," Roddick said. "In your mind, you're kind of trying to stay the course for four hours, constantly figuring out what you're going to do. Your mind is just racing for four hours. So then it's relief, happiness and almost kind of an instant shutdown

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Yesterday brought a storm of astrological aspects and today is like calm after the storm passes. Figuratively speaking, you might venture out and see if any tiles came off the roof and where all of the tree limbs fell. If you're like most people, you'll be quietly processing all that has occurred, perhaps making list of logical next steps.

you dare to sneak in where you're not invited, you will be rewarded. It's possible that you'll make a new friend, receive a stellar goody bag or have a terrifically terrible story to tell when you get back home. You really can't lose!

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). The comforting evenness of relationship is about to be interrupted by an unexpected twist in the plot. You'll have the sense that life is an adventure and the two of you are in it together.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). If you're going to procrastinate, do it big. Enlist others in your Get avoidance plan. everyone off track with distractions. delicious And try not to be too disappointed if, in spite of your efforts, you accidentally make progress.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You are curious as to why a certain person behaves as he does. You may never know this person's motives. benefits you to give up the study. Accept that he is the way he is and refocus on what you want.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (JULY 2). Chance favors you this year because you are prepared for good fortune to happen. You get lessons in leadership this month. You become part of the group so that you can understand the dynamic and then you take control of the situation. You'll be paid especially well in September and January. Gemini and Scorpio adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 30, 24, 38 and 14.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You get a premium opportunity — the chance to demonstrate your talent in a nonchalant way. No one will get jealous or think that you are showing off. Instead, people understand and respect your competence.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. There's uncanny simpatico between you and a Capricorn. You don't have to explain yourself around this person and you're perfectly understood. Let this person know you appreciate the connection.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You'll receive constructive criticism, which may sting like a punishment, but is actually a reward. Take a moment gather yourself and mature enough to apply the criticism.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You'll be around an extremely hospitable individual. Your satisfaction is a source of pride for this person. Your truthful observations will help this person hone his or her talent.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). There's excitement involving your relatives. Each person in your clan has a different awareness of the family dynamic. Be sensitive to someone whose experience vastly different from yours.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-

Feb. 18). Work may be the worst stress-fest you've seen in a while, but that doesn't mean there's no room for humor. Be the hero. Break the tension. Years from now, what people will remember about this day is your joke.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). What started as a friendly exchange could turn into more of a competition if you're not careful. It's better withdraw from the "competition" than take on your pal, especially if you feel you'll win.

Under the current busy stars, it's vitally important that you carve out your chill time and do it your own way. So which way is that? ARIES: In a salted, scented bath, preferably whirlwind with going. TAURUS: With a hot-oil aromatic massage by a bona fide expert. GEMINI: Chatting on the phone with a friend who has an excellent sense of humor. CANCER: In your quiet, peaceful room with the doors locked and no possibility of distraction. LEO: While being entertained. VIRGO: With your favorite beverage, across the table from a true friend. LIBRA: hands Holding strolling with your partner down a pretty road. SCORPIO: Cuddling up with a warm drink and a great book. SAGITTARIUS: Out of the country, or at least out of your environment. CAPRICORN: With people waiting on you hand and foot. AQUARIUS: Feeding off of the fun energy of a group of friends. PISCES: In a hammock, anywhere you can put your feet up and stare at the sky.

Did the fry die when trans fats got the boot? He's single ... and stridently so McDonald's, also rated

J.M. HIRSCH

AP Food Editor

If you want fries with that, the drive-thru won't be a disappointment even without the trans fats.

Now that nearly every major fast food chain has purged trans fats from their menus, Consumer Reports magazine tested the french fries at the three biggies Wendy's, McDonald's and Burger King and found they taste about the same as they used to.

The magazine had taste testers sample medium orders of fries from three outlets of each chain. The same testers previously had sampled the fries when trans fats were described as having a big potato flavor with a light crispy surface and a soft inside.

The fries at Wendy's came out on top with a rating of "very good":

very good, came second and were praised as flavorful and crisp, but needed to taste "more potato-y." Burger King's fries came last with a "good" rating. The magazine said they were decent, but tough and tasted more of oil than potato. Trans raises the level of bad cholesterol in the body and can increase risk of coronary heart disease. Lawmakers nationwide are considering — and some have passed — laws regulating or banning trans fats in restaurant food.

Dear Margo: I'm a single man, 41, and have successfully operated my business since I was

I have a lot of friends, ride a motorcycle, and own a classic car and my own home. There are not enough hours in the day for me to do all the things and see all of the people

I would like.

Margo

Between running my business, taking care of my home and possessions, traveling occasionally, and just seeing to the things we all must do in life, my life is full to the brim. I'm perfectly happy in every way.

I knew even in childhood that I was not husband or father material. I've dated here and there, but find the whole serious relationship idea repulsive, and every time I've tried it, this feeling is confirmed.

Most women my age are either after a father for their kids or a wellpacked wallet. I've also seen many close friends end up with vicious, expensive divorces, child custody battles, endless child support and alimony payments, deep wounds and hurt feelings.

For me, I come and go as I please and see whom I want, whenever I want. Why do people think being single is some horrible existence?

I believe having many good friends and being happy with oneself is the key to a happy life, and thankfully, I have that.

People who don't know me think I am gay or have some kind of problem. Why do they think everyone has to be married and miserable? Single and Loving It!

Dear Sing: You can stay single as far as I'm concerned, hon. Marriage is not for everyone.

And given that you link "marriage" with "miserable," and "relationship" with "repulsive,"

I feel certain you are doing some lucky woman a big favor. What I do find regrettable is that your exposures have been such that you see women as huntresses for sperm donors with ATM cards, and men as poor schnooks saddled with support payments and emotional scars.

Believe it or not, both good marriages and comfortable divorces are possible. — Margo, reflectively about children suffering from emotional or social disorders as in ADHD, autism Asperger's syndrome. Now, in my grandchil-dren's time, it seems that about 40 percent of their classmates are on some form of medication for behavioral/social/emotional problems or learning disorders. Can it be that "recreational drugs' or "junk food" eating on the part of the parents has produced this muta-

When I was a child and did something unacceptable, I was generally punished with a spanking or "grounding" that, although not life-threatening, made me think twice before I did the same thing again. Nowadays, when a "timeout" doesn't do the trick, it seems the next step is putting the child on some sort of drug regimen or a psychiatrist's couch. I really would like your opinion. Did the old saying "spare the rod and spoil the child" become an actuality?—Inquiring Minds Want To Know

Dear Inq: I, too, have wondered about the prevalence of the things you mention. They weren't routine at all a few generations ago. I don't believe an answer has been determined. My guess is that there are many elements mixed up in a possible explanation.

The disorders, causes and "cures" most likely have to do with a stew of environment, chemicals and reliance on pharmaceutical fixes, as well as some illnesses and behaviors that never had a name before. You are not the first person to wonder about the differences between childhood then and now. As for your conjecture about "spare the rod," my instinct tells me that permissiveness is not the major factor at work here. — Margo, specula-

Dear Annie: How do I talk to my adult children about divorcing their mother? I've been a good father and tried hard to be a good husband, but I knew early on that the rushed decision to marry was a mis-

I considered divorce 17 years ago and went to counseling, but my wife said I was the one with the problem, and things didn't change. I have had a number of indiscretions seeking companionship and intima-

When my wife said she would turn my children against me, I became depressed and had thoughts of suicide. She has said she will make my life hell if I leave her. But, Annie, we have no life as a couple, and I often wish God would take me.

My children are tremendously important, but I feel manipulated by them with their threats of keeping the grandchildren from seeing me if I divorce their

I plan to stay in the marriage a little longer for the sake of my youngest child, who will graduate next year, but I don't know how much more I can take.

My wife and I are both at fault for this broken marriage. I am guilty of many things and have apologized.

My children know their mother is difficult to live with. I want them to understand that the marriage is beyond repair and divorce could be a way to heal.

I am angry that my wife isn't thinking of the children when she bad-mouths me to them. What can I do? — Fearful in the Dakotas Dear Fearful: Most children, no matter the age, are upset when their parents divorce. And it is unfortunate that many spouses try to alienate the other parent from the children.

When you decide to file, get your children together for a discussion. Explain that you love them all deeply and have no intention of enumerating mother's faults or your own and assessing Things just haven't worked out, and you are both unhappy. No matter how difficult the situation becomes, it is important that you don't give up communicating with your children.

Dear Annie: A dear friend of mine has become quite the gum chewer and is terribly noisy with it — popping and cracking, etc. When I quit smoking some years back, I took up gum chewing and understand that chomping away can bring pleasure, but I don't do it in public.

"John," however, seems oblivious to his noise, no matter when or where. I've seen friends give him nasty looks, but he doesn't

I love John and can endure these noises, but some of our friends have begun to distance themselves and he can't understand why.

I don't want to hurt his feelings, so how can I tell him his gum chewing is the reason? Would Walk Across Croc-Infested Waters for

Dear Would Walk: Say, "Honey, I never realized how loud our gum cracking has become. When I do it, will you please tell me so I can stop? It must be really irritating to others. And I'll tell you when you do it, OK?"

improved to 5-1 against Los Angeles this season. The teams meet again for a threegame set next week in California.

"I don't know if it's a statement," said Rangers starter Kevin Millwood, who allowed four runs in 6 1-3 innings. "I think the statement is that our offense looks like it's back to where it's been in the past."

The Angels rallied from their six-run deficit by scoring three runs in both the seventh and ninth. Juan Rivera's three-run homer with two outs in the top of the ninth off Frank Francisco (2-1) tied the game at 7.

Los Angeles squandered other chances by having four runners thrown out on the bases, including Chone Figgins getting thrown out trying to leg out a triple leading off the ninth.

Yankees 4,

Mariners 2

Alex Rodriguez hit a tiebreaking homer and Andy Pettitte pitched seven strong innings in New York's seventh straight victory.

Johnny Damon and Melky Cabrera also went deep for the Yankees, who overcame Ken Griffey Jr.'s 621st home run to win their 10th straight home game against Seattle since Sept. 4, 2007.

Mariano Rivera saved his third consecutive game, increasing his career total to 502 and getting his 20th in 21 chances this season.

At Cleveland, Jose Contreras got a rare road win, pitching eight superb innings as Chicago won its fifth straight.

Contreras (3-7) improved to 3-2 with a 2.17 ERA since being recalled from Triple-A Charlotte after a monthlong demotion. The right-hander, who was 1-6 in his previous 10 road starts, allowed two runs and five hits with eight strikeouts.

Cleveland has dropped five straight and 13 of 15.

Red Sox 6,

Orioles 5

Boston used a four-run ninth inning to pull even, Julio Lugo singled in the tiebreaking run in the 11th and Jonathan Papelbon became the franchise's career saves leader.

Papelbon got three outs in the 11th for his 20th save this season and 133rd with the Red Sox, breaking the team record held by Bob Stanley. Less than 24 hours earlier, Papelbon yielded the key hit in the eighth inning of a game in which Boston blew a 10-1 lead before losing 11-10.

Ricky Romero pitched fourhit ball over eight innings, Rod Barajas, Adam Lind and Scott Rolen each homered and the Blue Jays ended Tampa Bay's seven-game winning streak.

Romero (6-3) matched the longest outing of his career in winning his third straight start. He walked four, struck out seven and lowered his ERA to 2.85. Romero allowed just two hits through the first six innings.

Twins 5,

Royals 1

Joe Mauer went 3 for 3, raising his average to .392 and backing pitcher Glen Perkins in Minnesota's victory.

After walking in the first inning, Mauer stroked three consecutive singles, driving in one run and scoring another as the Twins completed a 6-3 trip that began in Milwaukee and St. Louis. He was walked intentionally in the eighth.

Perkins (4-4) allowed one run for the second straight start, allowing 10 hits in seven innings. Joe Nathan got the final out for his 21st save in 23 opportunities.

Gil Meche (4-8), whose "dead arm" the previous two starts had created concern among the Royals, gave up three runs — two earned — six hits and five walks in six innings.

Athletics 5,

Tigers 1

Jason Giambi and Jack Cust broke out of funks with two-run homers, and Oakland's Dallas Braden ended a four-start winless stretch.

Giambi's drive in the sixth off Detroit's Justin Verlander (8-4) was career homer No. 407, tying him with Duke Snider for 43rd place.

Braden (6-7) pitched seven strong innings to win.

Silva retired Michael Bourn on a soft liner to first to open the fourth, then allowed singles to Miguel Tejada, Lance Berkman, Carlos Lee and Geoff Blum that gave the Astros a 2-1 lead.

After Ivan Rodriguez flied out, Darin Erstad walked to load the bases and Kaz Matsui singled in a run. Moehler hit a grounder to Headley, who hesitated and stutter-stepped. His throw to first skipped past Adrian Gonzalez, clearing the bases and allowing Moehler to take second.

"When I first fielded the ball, my first instinct was stop and go to the bag," Headley said. "I turned around and looked and I didn't think I had enough time. I rushed the throw over there trying to finish the play and made a bad throw.

"The right play would have been to just keep coming through and make the throw to first."

It was Headley's third start at third this year.

He's made 58 in left field.

"I saw him field the ball, it was in between hops, and I saw him like take a step to third, and at that point I kind of took off running,"

Murray holds a 6-2 edge against Roddick, including a straight-set win at Wimbledon in 2006.

"Andy has been playing great," Roddick said.

Murray, meanwhile, said he is trying to ignore the media hoopla and just focus on his tennis.

"I realize that if I don't bring my best game then I'm going to lose to guys like Hewitt or Roddick," he said. "I feel confident because I've won a lot of matches on the grass. But every day when I get up to play the matches, I know that I'm going to have to perform very well, and that gets the nerves and the adrenaline going and makes me better."

Federer reached his 21st consecutive Grand Slam semifinal by taming 6-foot-10 Croatian Ivo Karlovic 6-3, 7-5, 7-6 (3).
