BSFD officials say house fire was no accident

By THOMAS JENKINS
Staff Writer

Big Spring Fire Marshal Carl Condray said a report of arson early Saturday morning resulted in only minor damages to a home in the 1000 block of Nolan.

Condray said firefighters were on the scene shortly after 12:13 a.m. following a report of a structure fire at the residence.

"Firefighters found a small fire outside the home's crawl space access," said Condray. "The fire appears to have been set using mostly trash gathered outside the back of the home, on the alley side. The suspects piled the trash up near the crawl space access and lit it on fire, causing a great deal of smoke to travel underneath the home, moving up through penetrations in the home's floor, such as electrical outlets and such."

Condray said firefighters quickly ruled out any electrical involvement in the fire.

"They had to open a wall up

"Some neighbors said they saw some kids in the area about the same time the fire was set, and that's a common thread among the previous arson reports. Other than that, however, it's hard to say if they are related or not."

Glider pilots set to converge on Big Spring, expect ideal weather

By THOMAS JENKINS
Staff Writer

While many of the pilots planning to participate in the U.S. Hang Gliding Championship will arrive in Big Spring by cars and vans, a few may be coming by way of, well, hang gliders.

Terry Wofford, chairman of the local hang gliding committee that works with the competition's organizers, said many of the competing pilots in this year's championship — slated for Aug. 9-15 at the McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark — will be coming to Big Spring from a meet in Zapata, where they are hoping to break world records in the sport.

"They recently set a world record in Zapata, and from what I'm hearing now, that's going to be one of their goals this year, as well," said Wofford. "There's a chance a few of them may actually be hang gliding in from Zapata as part of that effort, which is really amazing. There's no guarantees, mind you, but

Big Spring man's death an apparent suicide

By THOMAS JENKINS

Staff Writer
A Big Spring man was found dead at a farm south of Knott Sunday evening after hanging himself, according to local law enforcement officials.

Robert L. 'Bobby' Beall, 55, was pronounced dead by Howard County Justice of the Peace Quail Dobbs shortly after his body was found by a family member at a farm in the northern part of the county.

According to Dobbs, Beall's death appears to be a suicide, but he won't make a final ruling on the incident until an autopsy is completed.

"You really hate to order an autopsy in a case like this because the family has already been through so much, and no one wants to have that done to their loved one," said Dobbs. "However, we have to be sure as to the cause of death, and I won't make a final ruling in the case until the autopsy results are in."

Dobbs said Beall's body was discovered by his wife, who went looking for him when he failed to return home.

"She went looking for her husband around 11 p.m. because she was worried," said Dobbs. "She went out to the farm where the family keeps their workshop."

"The sheriff's office was notified and I was called out to pronounce the death. There doesn't appear to be any foul play involved."

Funeral services will be held at 10 a.m. Thursday at the Nalley-Pickle & Welch Rosewood Chapel. Interment will follow at Trinity Memorial Park, Big Spring.

... He was kind of 'Mr. Coahoma.' When you think of Bill Read, you think of Coahoma."

Read and his family moved to Coahoma in 1961 when he helped establish Coahoma State Bank, where he served as president and chairman of the board until his retirement in 1992.

After leaving the bank, he remained active in the community, serving on the city council, then as mayor for 16 years, as well as being involved in a wide range of civic organizations.

During this time as mayor, he helped obtain federal and state funds that improved the infrastructure of the city, including a new water tower. In addition, he was instrumental in acquiring funds for a community housing development which resulted in the replacement of 19 older houses in Coahoma.

His civic contributions include being a long-time Lion's Club member and officer, president of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, serving on the Coahoma Independent School District board of trustees and as a board member of Christian Homes of Abilene and numerous other boards and committees.

In addition, he was an active in the Coahoma Rural Community College Initiative community development program.

Among his many friends was former Howard County commissioner and retired farmer Jack Buchanan, who served in the Lion's Club with Read for many years.

"My wife and I went on a trip to Alaska with him and (Read's wife) Darlene. That was a good trip," Buchanan said. "I consider him my best friend and it's hard to find a friend like that. And of course, he just did so much for Coahoma."

Buchanan's sister, retired teacher Loma Jean Wynn, also fondly recalled Read.

"He was a dear, dear friend of ours," Wynn said. "I taught both of his daughters in school and one of his daughters and my daughter became best friends.

"He was a great, great leader for this community and his church," Wynn added. "As mayor, he did so many good things for Coahoma."

Read is survived by his wife, Darlene, son Eddie, daughters Misha and Lori, five grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Funeral services for Read will be held at 10 a.m. Wednesday at the 14th and Main Church of Christ in Big Spring. Arrangements are under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home.

most common."

The fire caused minimal damage, according to Condray.

"There was very little damage from the fire itself. However, the smoke damage, along with the damage to the wall that had to be opened up and some water damage, would put the loss at around $3,000," he said.

Saturday's fire is the first in approximately two weeks since a rash of arson attacks sent damages in the same area of the city rocketing into the thousands of dollars. With arson attacks reported in the 700 block of S. Johnson, 800 block of Runnels and the corresponding area of Goliad reported in early and mid-July, Condray said it's unclear at this time of Saturday's fire is connected.

"Some neighbors said they saw some kids in the area about the same time the fire was set, and that's a common thread among the previous arson reports," said Condray. "Other than that, however, it's hard to say if they are related or not. The homeowner said there has been damage to his property in the past, so it may be a situation where the same people are targeting the home again.

"I would encourage anyone who sees something suspicious to report it. Even if it's just someone walking down the street at an odd time in the night, it could help us catch the person or people who are responsible. That's the only way we're going to catch these people."

Anyone with information regarding this or any other crime is encouraged to contact Big Spring Crimestoppers at 263-TIPS (8177) or 264-TIPS, the Big Spring Fire Marshal's Office at 264-2305 or the Big Spring Police Department at 264-2550.

there's certainly a chance we might see some gliders in the air as early as Aug. 7 or 8 if the weather cooperates."

Wofford said competition officials are expecting between 40 and 50 pilots to make the trip to Big Spring to be part of the annual contest, which will kick off with a special dinner for the participants Saturday, Aug. 8.

"We've reserved the Dora Roberts Community Center for the welcoming dinner Aug. 8," said Wofford. "We're really looking forward to working with them again this year."

Pitting the best and brightest wind-riders around the nation — and a few from foreign countries — against the West Texas sky, the annual championship has become something of a tradition in the Crossroads area, and according to event coordinator David Glover, it's that love for the sport and the men and women that pilot the gliders that keeps them coming back.

"We keep coming back because of the great people in Big Spring and the wonderful airport facilities," said Glover. "However, we have to admit it's especially the hang gliding weather conditions we love here."

According to Glover, it's the overall consistency of the weather in Big Spring that offers hang glider pilots some of the best flying in the world.

"The consistency of the conditions here means we can fly everyday," said Glover. "We're not winded or weathered out. The sun hits the ground and the ground heats up, so thermal layers of air go up. The base of the clouds are really high, which means we can fly up really high into the air and the thermals are strong, so you don't have to fly around too much before you hit a thermal that pushes you up.

"Our desire is to see how long we can stay up and then fly around a course as quickly as we can. It just has the right combination of meteorology and geography to allow us to fly for a long time and fly fast. The men and women who come here just love the flying. It's excellent."

Wofford said the competition will get under way Sunday, and while a race that takes place hundreds of feet in the air isn't exactly spectator oriented, watching the gliders take off is something to behold.

"The gliders and ultralights will be taking off on the taxiway just north of the airport terminal, and we'll have bleachers set up for the folks who want to come out and watch," said Wofford. "We'll also have a vendor there, selling all sorts of foods, from breakfast fare to things like hamburgers and hotdogs.

"As long as the weather cooperates, take-offs usually begin around 12:30 p.m. and wrap up around 1:30 p.m. Once they are up in the air, they will travel the course set for that day's tasks, which might take them far from the terminal and back, or may have them landing someplace else."

Though pilots who choose to ride the wind for hours at a time might seem like big-time thrill-seekers to most, Glover said nothing could be farther from the truth.

"The common perception is that someone that hang glides has to be a daredevil," said Glover. "In actuality, no one wants to get hurt. There are a few guys that fly in such a way they probably will get hurt sooner or later, but everyone wants to go up, fly safely and land safely so they can have some water or beer and see their family when it's done."

"There are very few adrenaline junkies in this sport. There are housewives, engineers, brick layers, insurance agents and real estate guys. It's really the whole gamut."

OUR VIEW

We should all be proud of our schools' ratings

It's called making the grade, and all of the Crossroads area's school districts did just that when the Texas Education Agency released its most recent accountability ratings.

Big Spring ISD, which was rated Academically Acceptable overall, was led by Kentwood Elementary's Exemplary rating, the highest possible. In addition, Moss, Marcy and Washington elementaries earned Recognized status, while Big Spring High School was moved back up to the Acceptable rating, joining Goliad Middle School and Bauer Elementary.

Big Spring's only Unacceptable rating was given to Big Spring Junior High School, which, despite improving in almost all areas, still must improve to reach Acceptable status.

Elsewhere, when the ratings were released Friday afternoon, area school districts received solid rankings.

The Sands and Grady school districts can take a well-deserved bow after having earned Exemplary ratings, as does the Glasscock County ISD, which was Recognized for a second straight year, with both the elementary and secondary campuses being rated Exemplary.

In addition, the Coahoma, Forsan and Stanton school districts were rated Academically Acceptable.

What that means, of course, is none of our children are forced to attend schools in sub-par districts.

It also means the public school teachers, administrators and staff throughout our area are doing a good job and not wasting our tax dollars.

To our way of thinking, that should put a smile on virtually everyone's face.

And we can't help but agree with Coahoma ISD Superintendent Randy Brown, who said his district's rating was not the result of "anything specific we did; it's just a result of hard work on the part of students, staff and parents."

Thus, we believe the ratings received by all of the Crossroads' public schools are cause for us to collectively celebrate.

While we here at the Herald are no where close to changing our minds concerning our belief that state law has put public schools in the business of teaching children to take a standardized test rather than truly educating them, we continue to be pleased that, at least by state standards, all of our schools pass muster.

We should all be exceedingly proud of the teachers, staff and students at our public schools. Collectively, they have clearly worked hard to live up to the requirements that have continued to increase in difficulty during the past few years.

In other words, they've all done very well and we encourage them to keep up the good work.

A SMALL PRAYER

May we meet aggravation and criticism, Lord, with Your love and forgiveness.

Bringing broadband to rural Texas

Today, driven by the incredible pace of innovation and the pressures of global commerce, demand for broadband, or high speed Internet access, is sweeping the nation and changing the way we live. Small businesses that once relied solely on walk-up business and local customers may now offer their goods and services in the worldwide marketplace through the Internet. Students whose learning opportunities were once confined to their local schools and libraries today can access information from all over the world. Families once separated from loved ones by hundreds or thousands of miles can stay connected through the many communication portals available online. And, communities that previously lacked critical specialty care and diagnostic services can now access these services through telemedicine made possible by advanced communications networks.

Unfortunately, too many of our communities and small businesses still lack access to broadband infrastructure, and many that have access do not subscribe to the services that are offered. In both cases, communities lacking adequate broadband availability face the prospect of lagging behind other areas in education, economic growth and even health care delivery. Rural communities are particularly susceptible to falling into the technology gap because broadband infrastructure simply doesn't reach them. This has serious ramifications for Texas, which is 80 percent rural.

In Congress, there is a bipartisan consensus that we must encourage nationwide broadband deployment. But, exactly how we implement this remains a point of contention. Recently, the Obama administration committed more than $7 billion in taxpayer funding for the deployment of broadband services to areas of the country lacking basic infrastructure. Yet, this money was put forward without a completed comprehensive map of broadband availability and before the Federal Communications Commission established a national broadband strategy. So much of the money allocated through these grants will be awarded before we know where the funds are needed most.

There is a role for public resources in bringing broadband to our unserved communities, but requiring additional taxpayer funding without a plan is the wrong approach. With that said, the stimulus funding has been allotted. This taxpayer investment will be maximized if grants are directed to unserved areas and focus on infrastructure for anchor institutions like schools, hospitals and libraries that can function as access points for many who currently lack broadband access. Doing so will make the stimulus funding for broadband an effective down payment on this national priority, which, moving forward, must be guided by a careful strategy.

Looking ahead, Congress must establish a comprehensive plan with three key components. First, we must complete a national broadband map so we can target and prioritize our efforts. Second, we must encourage broadband deployment in unserved areas and enhance existing broadband services through additional investment. To be successful, we must engage the private sector through investment incentives. Finally, we need to improve broadband adoption in communities across the country because of the power of this technology to expand education, improve health care delivery and open global markets for small and businesses.

To help implement this strategy, I recently introduced the Connecting America Act. This legislation is designed to stimulate investment and economic development activity over the next five years. The legislation would create limited duration tax credits that will encourage companies to make investments that they might otherwise delay due to the economic downturn. Targeted incentives will provide companies immediate access to capital and encourage broadband investment to maintain and improve infrastructure where we need it most. The bill would also create a technology-neutral bond program that will allow communities, rather than Washington bureaucrats, to raise funds for construction, assess their own infrastructure needs and adopt the broadband technologies that are most appropriate. Under the legislation, we would also reform and streamline the numerous federal programs supporting broadband to focus the funding in a coordinated manner.

For many, broadband may be as familiar a technology as cable television. Others may not be aware of the advantages high-speed Internet service offers. It can place adults in a virtual classroom and allow them to get a college or graduate degree from their own homes. It gives physicians and hospitals instant access to medical records and enables remote diagnostic medicine, which can help enhance health care delivery in rural areas. It can allow a rancher in West Texas to sell every head of cattle in an online auction, expanding the reach of his business and raising his earning potential without the need to leave his ranch.

More than any other technology this century, broadband has the potential to truly transform our lives. We cannot leave half of America behind in the process. We must work now and work smart to deploy broadband from coast to coast.

Colonialism, 21st century-style

So here's how it works. When Spain finally gave up Paraguay, much of the crown's farmland went over to the new government, which in turn rented it out to the peasants who had long worked the soil. Subsistence farming, with a little left over to sell.

Later, enter the World Bank, no fan of peasants. It pressured Paraguay to sell off that land to big investors for production of export crops. And so it was done. The investors brought in transgenic seeds and heavy equipment, reducing the need for peasants altogether, and hired private mercenaries to drive them off the land. The police and army helped out as needed whenever the natives got restless, and sometimes just for sport. Gen. Alfredo Stroessner, Paraguay's iconic dictator for 35 years, simultaneously maintained a reign of terror, torture and death that the country is still recovering from.

Not surprisingly he and his predecessors and successors were, and are, ably assisted by the United States. We train the uniformed thugs in repressive tactics at our School of the Americas in Georgia, cleverly renamed the "Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation," and send soldiers, trainers and spies to Paraguay as needed. We have also constructed and mothballed a huge airbase there to be ready just in case southern South America somehow gets out of hand. And since there conveniently happens to be a mosque just over the border in Brazil, we are already grooming the press with hints that this region looks like a coming hotspot for Muslim terrorists. Got to keep planning ahead if we're going to maintain world control.

Nor is all this military empire stuff just for fun. We also have real financial interests to protect. The chief export crop that the World Bank encourages is soybeans. The soil there is immensely hospitable to them, and little Paraguay is now the world's fourth-largest exporter. And wouldn't you know that by chance the bionic seeds that produce all that soy come from our very own hallowed Monsanto, as does the potent Roundup herbicide that those seeds are carefully bred to tolerate.

Likewise the main buyers for the soy are American agribusiness giants Cargill and Archer Daniels Midland. They peddle the beans around the globe as cattle feed, and they have successfully persuaded the Paraguayan government not to significantly tax them. This is not hard to do since that country's congress is a cesspool of conflicts of interest.

Meanwhile the agricultural system itself has proved remarkably efficient at disposing of the inconvenient small farms that remain. The Roundup-style herbicide used on the big spreads kills everything but the soy, and since much of it is sprayed by plane, the wind wafts it outside the plantations, ruining the small farmers' crops and poisoning their water, children and hormones. This in time forces them to go away and be impoverished someplace else, such as the cities or neighboring Argentina or Brazil. The World Bank's long-range goal is to lower the rural segment of the population from its traditional 37 percent down to 15 percent, though without suggesting any place for all those folks to go.

This long-distance gringo imperialism has understandably irked neighboring Brazil. It is also big and strong and wants in on some of the action. To that end it has supported its own major investors in buying up a gradually growing share of Paraguay's plantations, thus increasing the already tense relations between those two countries. It's bad enough to be oppressed by the remote United States, but by your own neighbor is worse, especially when you can't even beat them at soccer.

Hope did flame for a while last year with the election of leftist president Fernando Lugo, but while he does seem worthy, the malevolent real power still lies with the congress and the big investors.

This allows the United States to stay in the shadows while its multinationals prosper. Repressive police and rampant corruption make our job easier, along with the criminalization of any serious social movements. Who said colonialism was dead?

Bird Poop:

American kestrel released at SWCID

After unloading his tools and greeting the other workmen, the carpenter entered the two-storied frame building. Abandoned and almost forgotten after the air base closed, the structure would require extensive renovation before being used as part of the expanding campus for the Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf.

With every step he took up the stairs came the smell of dust and the past. Soon the tradesman would don his mask for yet another day of ripping damaged sheetrock off the walls. Opening the windows for the cool morning breeze was impossible. Years of paint had sealed them shut, and contributed to the insufferable, predictable heat of July afternoons.

As the carpenter walked down the narrow hall that halved the upper portion, a blurred image flashed past the side of his head. Startled, he turned in time to notice the swift movement of a small bird as it dove into one of the rooms.

Quietly approaching the doorway, he saw the colorful hawk-like being perched on a windowsill. After searching each individual pane for an exit, the bird took flight and buzzed the man's head again as it left the room.

Down the hall and disappearing into another room flew the winged creature. Looking into the empty room, the man saw the bird execute the same desperate attempt to leave the building and return to the sky.

With no doors on or in the structure, the bird had been allowed an entry into a maze of rooms with no apparent exit. As its frustration grew, it struggled against every window in search of freedom.

After several failed attempts at ushering the fast moving flyer from the second story to the first floor, the man sensed that he needed to get help. Otherwise, he and his men would do more harm than good in trying to get the bird out of the building.

"Mehan Hall," said the caller. Explaining the plight of the trapped bird, the representative for SWCID gave the location and seemed relieved to know we would come.

Greeting us with a welcoming handshake, the carpenter led us upstairs. After checking each room while trying to find the bird, we knew we needed a lot of luck. Since there were no doors, the unexpected visitor could fly from room to room with ease.

As we approached the last room, I could hear the bird hitting the panes of glass. "Do you need any help?" offered the carpenter. Thanking him, we indicated it might take us a while. He could help more by keeping everyone away from the area.

Cautiously glancing around the doorjamb, we saw the blue-gray on the wings and rufous tail of a male, American kestrel. Although it was the smallest of the falcons found in North America, it compensated with agility and speed.

Blocked in its first attempt to fly through the doorway, the raptor flew back and forth from one end of the room to the other. With a sudden, erratic maneuver, it managed to dip slightly below one of our nets and leave the room.

Finding it pressed against a window in another room, we again experienced its evasiveness. However, we could tell it was beginning to tire from its morning experience.

Courtesy photo

The American kestrel may be found as far north as southern Alaska and Nova Scotia. Its range extends south through the United States into Mexico, Central America and South America.

Patiently, we allowed it to fly within the room, land and then evade our nets. Each time we seemed to get a little closer to success. With Art at the door and me at the window, we stood still and waited.

Weary and stressed by its efforts to escape, the kestrel flew to the windowsill. Trying to look through the dingy glass, the bird paused for a moment. With our hand net used for fishing, I was able to press the raptor against the pane.

Quickly, Art crossed the room and kept the net in place. Protesting with shrill screams of "killy, killy, killy," the falcon warned of what might come next.

Slipping my gloved hand underneath the rim of the net, I felt its long, curved talons through the leather. Even for a small bird, its grip was threatening and painful. It took both of us to loosen its hold without hurting its feet.

Its blue-gray crown capped with deep cinnamon, and its white cheeks adorned with two black stripes, were outstanding in coloration. The falcon's rust colored back was barred with black, while its tail ended in a wide black band tipped in white.

Checking each wing, we saw the usual blue-gray lead to its blackish primaries. In contrast to its bold upper coloring, its belly and sides, spotted with black, were a pale buff with a tinge of light cinnamon.

After confirming that none of the workmen had seen the kestrel in any part of the building the previous day, we walked to a grassy expanse of the campus. As I opened my hand, the falcon immediately rose upward with quick beats of its long, narrow wings.

Recognizing its territory, the raptor flew with renewed vigor. Soon it would hover as it hunted for large insects in the grasslands adjacent to the buildings.

With the fall semester, some of the students would probably notice this falcon perched on utility lines. Pumping its tail as it maintained its balance, it would be watching for mice and sparrows as the first cold announcement of winter arrived.

Although the men and women would not hear its shrill call as they crossed the campus, they would benefit from its ability to thin the insect and rodent populations that frequent any community.

Williams ready to replace T.O.

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer

SAN ANTONIO — Day by day, kid by kid, Roy Williams is doing his best to replace Terrell Owens as the most popular receiver on the Dallas Cowboys.

Every afternoon of training camp, Williams plucks a youngster out of the stands to be his water boy (or girl) for the rest of the workout. They get to hang out on the field of the Alamodome for about an hour, dwarfed by all the huge guys and loving every second.

"It's a non-paying position," Williams says, smiling,

"but you've got first dibs on getting an autograph."

Although Williams did the same thing in Detroit, continuing the tradition here shows how comfortable he is in his new role as the No. 1 receiver. It's a good sign for the Cowboys considering how much they are relying on him now that T.O. is gone.

Team owner Jerry Jones pointed out again at the start of camp that "the decision to move on without Terrell was almost totally made" to get more out of Williams.

Grand jury indicts Plax

By KAREN MATTHEWS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Former New York Giants star Dexter Jackson was indicted by a grand jury on weapons charges for shooting himself in the thigh at a Manhattan nightclub and faces a minimum prison sentence of 3 1/2 years if convicted, prosecutors announced Monday.

The indictment charged the 31-year-old Burress with two counts of criminal possession of a weapon and one count of reckless endangerment, Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau said.

"The grand jury applied the law to the facts of this case," Morgenthau said. He said the accidental shooting at the Latin Quarter nightclub on Nov. 29 was treated "like any similar case against any other defendant."

Two-a-days practices for BSHS volleyball and football under way

Two-a-days for all Big Spring High School volleyball and football players — from incoming freshmen to seniors — began today.

Volleyball practices will last through Thursday, and will be held from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. each day.

All practices will be in the junior high gyms.

The week will end in the Lady Steers first scrimmage Friday in Big Spring. First game of the season is Aug. 11 at Sweetwater.

The first week of football two-a-days were held 8 a.m. and 1 p.m. today. They continue through Friday at the Athletic Training Center. The schedule for the second week of practices is not yet set.

The Steers play their first scrimmage Aug. 15 against Monahans in Big Spring.

Any student entering the ninth or 11th grades must have a new physical to participate in any sport at BSHS.

BSHS football season tickets going on sale at ATC offices

Season tickets for the upcoming 2009 Big Spring High School football season are now on sale for previous season ticket holders through Friday.

The general public can then begin purchasing season tickets Monday through Aug. 12.

Cost is $30 for a total of six home games. Tickets can be purchased from Kay Cook at the Athletic Training Center from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday during the dates allotted.

For more information, call Kay Cook at 264-3661.

BSCC schedules Over 80 Scramble to benefit Big Spring Shrine Club

The Big Spring Country Club will have an Over 80 Scramble, meaning the combined ages of each two-person team must be 80 or older, Aug. 15-16, to benefit the Big Spring Shrine Club.

Entry fees are $60 per player, plus golf cart rental. Private carts are welcomed, however.

Entry fees include barbecue on the course both days.

Practice rounds are available Friday.

Play will begin with a shotgun start on both days, and the field will be flighted by first-round scores. The number of flights will depend on the number of entries.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

The Capricorn moon goes void of course. What seems important early on will, as the day progresses, appear to be the product of overthinking. There's also a tendency to judge things too harshly. So when you're tempted to toss your work out to start anew, carefully set it aside instead. Wait until evening when you can make a better decision.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). The world seems like more of an emotional place. What you see will move you — make you laugh, cry or shout. And it gets more complex, colorful and interesting as the day progresses.

HOLIDAY MATHIS

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You dearly love a certain needy person, and yet you won't have the time to lavish attention on this person today. Once you return to focusing on your own plan, you'll return to feeling calm and in control.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You've no shortage of ideas about how to fill up your time. You also have a knack for finding the most exciting hot spots around. Invite a Libra or Pisces to share in your adventures.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You will be increasingly aware of the way you talk to yourself in your mind. Your reactions to mistakes will be softer. You'll find that you can be honest with yourself without being critical.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You'll be among serious people. This is your opportunity to show off. Come up with the ideas and go for it. Everyone will be entertained by your spontaneous sense of fun.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You phrase things in a way that makes yourself and others feel fantastic. You'll say the perfect thing in just the right tone. This occurrence is even sweeter because your message is appreciated.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You don't have to talk about yourself or what you've been up to. Your manners will tell the world where you are from and where you are going. You don't mind when others sum you up because you have much to be proud of.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You'll enjoy your work and have an easy time getting along with others. There's hardly a person around you can't find something nice to say about. That's why when it's time to team up, you'll be at the top of everyone's list.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Call the person who can calm you down whether or not you think you need calming. You do, by the way. Get connected to those who care about you and you'll suddenly be grounded and ready for action.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Life is out there for you on a beautiful display, but it's not going to serve itself to you. You have to be the one to reach out and take it. So drum up a little more grit and moxie. Take it you will.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You've a remarkable ability for winning people over. You have a fan who is willing to give what you ask. In fact, this person will be made happy by your mere request. So ask!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Being complimented will feel wonderful, even if you have to compliment yourself. It might come to that, as you will probably be working with younger or more inexperienced people who don't understand your greatness.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (AUGUST 4). Vitality increases this year. You'll spiff up your image, impress your loved ones and attract new friends. Shockingly good news comes in September. An effort to bring family together heals your heart in December. In the new year, you'll shift your perspective on work and suddenly make much more money in less time. Capricorn and Scorpio adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 41, 38, 4, 44 and 16.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Happy birthday to President Barack Obama, a Leo with natal Mercury and Uranus also in the sign of the charismatic cat. The fiery Leo energy in Obama's chart is balanced by a grounded Taurus moon and Mars in hard-working, humble Virgo. Virgo energy is all about efficiency and service. Other Leo presidents include: Benjamin Harrison, Herbert Hoover and Bill Clinton.

divorced him. Eight years have passed since then, and this man is now a teacher at the same school where my wife works. Two friends independently told me they saw my wife kissing this man and watched the two of them walk into the washroom together. When I confronted my wife, she confessed to the kissing but said they never had sex. I find that hard to believe. I no longer trust my wife and get very angry when I'm near her. I want a divorce, but I grew up without a father and would hate to leave my 14-year-old because I worry what will happen to him. My wife insists there is nothing going on, yet refuses to transfer to another school. She doesn't want a divorce. Please give me some advice.—Saskatchewan, Canada

Dear Canada: Get counseling immediately, and tell your wife if she wants to save the marriage, she must go with you. She is behaving foolishly and disrespectfully and either doesn't recognize how damaging that is or doesn't care. We are astonished this man was given another teaching position, and if their affair (or whatever it is) becomes known to the administration, they could both be fired. One of them has to leave the school or your marriage is over.

Dear Annie: My boyfriend and I just bought our first home. It's the first time we will be living independently since college. We'd like to have a housewarming party, but I don't want our friends or family members to feel obligated to bring gifts when we just want to celebrate our new home with them. However, knowing our friends, some of them will insist on bringing gifts anyway. My boyfriend and I work at a well-known retail chain and get sizable discounts. Is there a polite way to suggest that if they insist on bringing something, gift cards to our store would be appreciated? — New Homeowners

Dear New: Yes and no. You cannot put it in an invitation. If someone asks, you can reiterate that no gift is necessary or expected, but if they insist, you can recommend the gift cards. You also can inform one or two close friends or family members of your preference, and they can pass the word.

Dear Annie: My heart goes out to "Wish I Could Turn Back Time in N.J.," the mother of the paralyzed teen. As a person with a spinal cord injury, I offer the following suggestions: Contact the New Jersey Statewide Independent Living Council (njsilc.org) for a list of independent living centers in the area. All states have centers for independent living (CILs) that receive federal funding and are mandated to provide four core services, including peer support, skills training, information and referral, and advocacy. Her CIL should also be able to help find respite care and may be able to provide assistance in getting family counseling. If her son is not already working with the Department of Vocational Rehabilitation to assist in his education and employment opportunities, he needs to get in touch soon. She should encourage her son to become as independent as possible, while planning for when she is no longer able to take care of him. A visit with an attorney who specializes in estate planning for parents of special needs children would be helpful. — Hot Wheels Grandma in Missouri

Dear Hot Wheels: Thanks so much for your valuable information. We hope she and her son follow through.

Opening lead — four of clubs.

The first trick is of the most important one in the entire deal, both for the declarer and the defenders. As a case in point, consider this deal from a national championship where the play at trick one by both sides altered an outcome that appeared inevitable.

At first glance, it would seem that South must lose two diamonds, a spade and a trump trick at four hearts. But declarer found a way to lay a trap for the opposition, and once the trap was sprung, there was no escape.

The key play came when South played low from dummy on the opening club lead, posing a difficult problem for East. East could not tell from the lead of the four how many clubs West held, nor could he place the queen or ten with any certainty. Eventually, he decided to play the king, and from then on he was a dead duck.

Declarer ruffed, cashed the K-A of hearts and put East in with the heart queen. East could not return a club or a spade without handing declarer a trick, so he tried the queen of diamonds. South won with dummy's ace and returned a diamond. When the ten appeared on his right, he allowed East to hold the trick.

This sounded the death knell for the defense. If East retained the lead, his forced spade or club return would give declarer the contract. If instead West overtook the ten with the king, South would lose only one diamond trick instead of two, and again he would wind up with 10 tricks.

After South's crafty play at trick one led East astray, the outcome was inevitable.

There were other reasons T.O. had to go, but Jones is right.

The Cowboys sent first-, third- and sixth-round picks to Detroit for Williams last October, then gave him a $45 million, five-year contract extension. In return, he provided a measly 19 catches for 198 yards and one touchdown in 10 games. Owens had 213 yards in a single game last season.

"Everybody thinks I (stink)," Williams said. "I just have something to prove. It's not to prove that I don't (stink). It's just to be a consistent ballplayer."

At 6-foot-3, 209 pounds, Williams is a little taller and a little thinner than Owens. He's eight years younger, too. Williams may not be as fast, but the difference is not dramatic.

"I don't see a drop-off," tight end Jason Witten said.

The difference is results.

Williams' best year (82 catches, 1,310 yards) would be about fifth-best for Owens. The starkest stat is touchdowns: Williams has 30 over his five-year career; Owens scored 38 over three years in Dallas.

Then again, remember that few receivers in NFL history can match Owens' stats. Williams also has been hurt by playing on Detroit teams with few other offensive weapons.

"Roy is one of those players that feeds off momentum," said Jon Kitna, Williams' quarterback in his breakout season with the Lions and now his teammate again in Dallas. "When he gets a couple of catches and gets into the game early, he can become a real dangerous receiver, one that I've seen intimidate defenses. That's going to be a key. How can we get him comfortable? What are the routes he likes, that he's going to win 100 percent of the time?"

The Cowboys never figured those questions out last year.

Tony Romo was hurt when Williams arrived, then Williams was hurting once Romo was healthy. And, of course, there was T.O.'s looming presence and whatever behind-the-scenes trouble that was causing.

Whatever the reason, Romo hardly ever looked Williams' way. In fact, his lone TD catch was thrown by Brad Johnson. It doesn't matter whether the blame goes to Romo, Williams or offensive coordinator Jason Garrett. All three know they need to make this relationship work.

Romo and Williams started throwing together four weeks before the team's summer practices. A week into training camp, they are still figuring each other out. Another lesson came Monday when Romo threw a slant to Williams in the end zone, the ball arriving at the same time as cornerback Orlando Scandrick. A collision followed, with Williams' helmet flying off, although he insists that was only because he doesn't ever snap his chin strap for practice.

"(Romo) coaches me and I coach him and we're getting a good feel for each other," Williams said. "I don't think we can go out and play a game right now, but I think that in two weeks, three weeks, we'll be ready to go."

One comforting thing for the Cowboys is that Williams understands, accepts and even embraces his challenge.

Besides the kid-from-the-crowd trick, he's introduced a $10 fine for all passes dropped by receivers; they are tallied up in film sessions, with the money going toward a meal at the end of camp. He's also become perhaps the most-interviewed player in camp, patiently answering the same questions every day.

But it's one thing to act like a lead receiver in June, July and August. The Cowboys need to see it September through December and, they hope, all the way into February.

"That's the way this business works," Williams said. "You're supposed to produce in this league, especially if you're a high-profile guy. You've got to produce. And that's what I've got to do. ...

"Me and Tony have that trust now, so he can throw me the ball and I won't (stink) any more."

Burress' lawyer, Benjamin Brafman, said he was disappointed but not surprised by the indictment, which came after Burress testified before the grand jury and expressed remorse.

"When you have the mayor and the district attorney both publicly demanding a maximum prison sentence, it was perhaps too much to hope for the grand jury to conduct a sympathetic review of the unique facts of this sad case,"

Brafman said in a statement.

Burress' former teammate Antonio Pierce, who was with Burress in the club and drove him to the hospital, was not indicted.

The panel also did not indict the nightclub security guard who carried the gun to Pierce's car or the hospital staff members who failed to notify police that Burress had been shot.

Morgenthau said hospital personnel were guilty of "a screw-up rather than a cover-up" and the security guard exhibited "bad judgment in the first degree" but did not commit a crime.

Pierce, who also testified before the grand jury last week, was practicing with the Giants in Albany when he learned of the panel's decision.

Giants President John

Mara said the team was pleased that the linebacker was not indicted.

"We said last week we felt strongly that Antonio's actions did not warrant criminal charges, and obviously the grand jury, having heard all of the testimony, felt the same way," he said.

Pierce's lawyer, Michael Bachner, said, "By appearing before the grand jury for almost three hours and answering the grand jury's very direct and very considered questions, it was clear to us that they understood that Mr. Pierce acted as any citizen under extraordinary circumstances would have acted."

Burress was at the Latin Quarter nightclub Nov. 29 when a gun tucked into his waistband slipped down his leg and fired, shooting him in the right thigh.

Prosecutors said Monday that after taking Burress to the hospital, Pierce drove the gun to his own home in New Jersey — not to Burress' home, as was originally reported. They said he later arranged for it to be taken to Burress' home.

Assistant District Attorney John Wolfstaetter said the bullet that hit Burress narrowly missed a nightclub security guard who was standing inches away.

The bullet lodged in the floor and was recovered by a bartender, Morgenthau said.

The gun was not licensed in New York or in New Jersey, where Burress lived, prosecutors said. Burress' license to carry a concealed weapon in the state of Florida had expired in May 2008.

ANSWERS

- 1. False. A slap is a form of assault. Texas law specifies that assault of another person, including one's spouse, is illegal.
- 2. False. Battering (the same as assault) means causing bodily injury. Under Texas law, that includes causing pain. There does not have to be any visible injury at all.
- 3. False. Many people who are violent toward family members never drink or use drugs. Others drink or use drugs but never batter. So we cannot say that alcohol or drugs cause family violence. However, about 60% of family violence cases also involve substance abuse; and when both are occurring, both are harder to stop.
- 4. True. Children learn from their experiences-including violence. It is more likely that an adult man who was abused as a child or saw his mother being battered will abuse his wife or girlfriend.
- 5. False. Of all the abused adults with visible injuries, 95% are women. While it's true that some women do hit men, it's the other way around in most cases.
- 6. False. Battering causes more injury to women than auto accident, street mugging, and rape combined. More than one-third of women seen in emergency rooms have been recently battered.
- 7. False. Threats, harassment, and assaults often escalate just after a battered woman leaves her abuser. Leaving can be the most dangerous time in the relationship. That's why it's important for her to go to a safe, secure place such as a battered women's shelter.
- 8. False. Texas law permits immediate arrest for suspected family violence, and many police departments now make such arrests. An average of 75% of urban police time and 35% of rural police time is spent responding to family violence.
- 9. False. Arrest and jail alone are not usually enough to make a batterer permanently stop being violent. Counseling is also necessary. However, arresting and jailing batterers is important because it temporarily stops their violence and lets them know that our society does not tolerate battering.
- 10. False. One-half of American females experience family violence at some time in their lives; your daughter, sister, or neighbor could be next. That makes it your business. Family violence also touches your pocketbook. As a taxpayer, you are affected every time police answer a family violence call or a women visits an emergency room because of battering.

Dustin Nippert, who started in place of the injured Kevin Millwood, gave up a hit in five innings. He walked two and struck out five.

ing prospects, made an impressive major league debut by striking out the side in the top of the sixth in relief of Nippert. He retired all six hitters he faced.

Wilson entered the game with one out in the ninth. After giving up Cust's infield single, he struck out pinch hitter Nomar Garciaparra before giving up three consecutive hits, culminating in Davis' triple.

Right fielder Nelson Cruz came up limping after the final play and was helped off the field by a trainer.

Kurt Suzuki singled and Scott Hairston walked with one out in the first but Rangers pitchers combined to retire 22 of the next 23 hitters before Cliff Pennington singled with two outs in the eighth against Frank Francisco.

Blalock and Josh Hamilton singled around a walk to Andruw Jones opening the fifth. Anderson induced Jarrod Saltamacchia to ground into a double play, with Blalock scoring. Byrd singled home a run in the seventh.

NOTES: Rangers INF Michael Young singled in the fourth to extend his hitting streak to 10 games, the 18th time in his career he has hit safely in at least 10 in a row. ... The Rangers opened a stretch in which they play 25 of the next 36 games on the road. ... The Rangers moved Feliz from the rotation to the bullpen in Triple-A to prepare him for his debut. ... The A's won for the third time in 53 games when trailing after the eighth inning. ... Davis has 16 RBIs since the All-Star Break.
