Bird build-up forces compost facility to move

By THOMAS JENKINS
 Staff Writer

The city of Big Spring's Composting Facility is going to the birds.

More to the point, the facility — located on the McMahon Wrinkle Airpark near the municipal airport's crosswind runway — has already gone to the birds, causing a possibly dangerous situation for aircraft taking off or landing at the facility, according to city officials.

Col. Jim Little, director of the airpark, said some of the food-based items used in the composting process are attracting birds, and while the feathery friends may look beautiful riding the winds around the airport, they pose a definite problem for pilots.

"Anytime you have something that attracts birds in the area, they will begin nesting nearby," Little said.

"We've had a large number of birds — namely the large turkey buzzards — drawn to the composting facility, which is located near the airport's crosswind runway. These birds tend to stay on the ground until something approaches, then they fly up, putting them right in the path of planes taking off or landing here.

"The FAA (Federal Aviation Administration) has very strict rules about how close any food-type facility can be located from a runway. And while you certainly wouldn't think of a composting facility as a food source, it is for these and other types of birds."

Little said there have been no reports of damage or injuries as a result of the increase in number of birds in the airport area, however, it's a risk

"We're trying to be proactive about this. We don't want to wait until someone gets hurt or property gets damaged before we try to correct the problem."

VA marks special anniversary

By STEVE REAGAN
 Staff Writer

My, how it's grown. The Big Spring VA Medical Center celebrated its 60th birthday in understated yet dignified fashion Friday, saluting the veterans who are its prime reason for existence. The VAMC began as the brainchild of Big Spring civic leaders in the mid-1940s, according to remarks from radio personality Bob "Tumbleweed Smith" Lewis.

Lewis

"In October of 1944 a group of civic leaders in Big Spring decided to make application for a veterans hospital. After several negotiations, letters and telegrams, final approval was received in July of 1945," Lewis told the crowd. "Ground was broken in February of 1948 and the facility was completed in June of 1950. The first patient was admitted on July 17, 1950."

Today, the West Texas VA Healthcare System serves approximately 60,000 veterans in a

Molina hits for cycle in Rangers' win

BOSTON (AP) — When slow-footed Bengie Molina went to the plate needing a triple to hit for the cycle in cozy Fenway Park, his manager had a question for Michael Young.

"Where do you think he has to hit it for a triple?" Ron Washington asked his third baseman. "He said, 'Nowhere in this ballpark.'"

Ian Kinsler, the last Texas Ranger to hit for the cycle, was equally pessimistic.

"I would have bet everything I own that Bengie Molina would never hit for the cycle," he said with a smile. "Ever."

Molina surprised them both and powered Texas to an 8-4 win over the Boston Red Sox on Friday night, becoming the eighth player and first catcher since 1900 to hit for the cycle with a grand slam. The last player to do that was Minnesota's Jason Kubel on April 17, 2009.

Molina completed his feat in the eighth inning when he hit Ramon Ramirez's pitch to the deepest part of Fenway into the center field triangle 420 feet from home. The ball bounced off the glove of Eric Patterson for only the sixth triple of Molina's career.

"When I saw the ball going away from him, I just put my head down and kept going," Molina said. "For a guy who has been criticized for his speed for 11½ years and may be the slowest guy in the world, it was an unbelievable feeling."

Molina, obtained from the San Francisco Giants on July 1 to shore up a team weakness at catcher, looked over his right shoulder at Patterson as he rounded second and lumbered into third then smiled at teammates in the dugout. A few pitches later, he left the game with tightness in his right quadriceps after slipping rounding first.

He was replaced by pinch-runner Joaquin Arias, who scored the final run of the game on a sacrifice fly by Young.

Molina is the fifth player in Rangers history to hit for the cycle and the first since the cycle on April 15, 2009. The triple was Molina's first since April 29, 2009. The last catcher to hit for the cycle was Chad Moeller with Milwaukee against Cincinnati on April 27, 2004. And the last visitor to hit for the cycle at Fenway Park was Cleveland's Andre Thornton on April 2, 1978.

But Molina said the grand slam meant more. It came in the five-run fifth and broke a 3-3 tie.

"That was more special than the cycle actually, because it put us ahead," he said.

One night earlier, he capped a six-run first inning with a two-run homer and the Rangers went on to a 7-2 win.

"The last two nights every mistake we make he hits," Red Sox manager Terry Francona said. "He's knocking the ball all over the ballpark."

Molina's brother Yadier had a pretty good game himself for St. Louis on Friday, homering and driving in four runs in the Cardinals' 8-4 win over Los Angeles.

"He did? That's awesome," Yadier Molina said when told about his brother's big game.

The AL West-leading Rangers lost their last four games before the All-Star break but returned to take the first two of a four-game series against

Pacquiao-Mayweather deadline passes, no deal

(AP) — Manny Pacquiao reluctantly will look for another opponent for his next bout after promoter Bob Arum's deadline for a deal with Floyd Mayweather Jr. passed Saturday without a word from Mayweather.

In the latest improbable twist in the torturous negotiations for the most tantalizing prospective fight in boxing, Arum said Mayweather's camp simply hasn't responded to a contract proposal with no obvious points of contention.

Pacquiao already has agreed to extensive drug testing and an equitable split of the earnings from what's likely to be the richest fight in boxing history.

"Floyd, for whatever reason — and I'm sure he has some valid reason — didn't want to commit," Arum said.

Although Arum was careful not to criticize Mayweather, saying the fighter who calls himself Money could take the incredibly lucrative offer at any point in the next week or so, Arum plans to open discussions with Antonio Margarito and Miguel Cotto for a fight with Pacquiao in November.

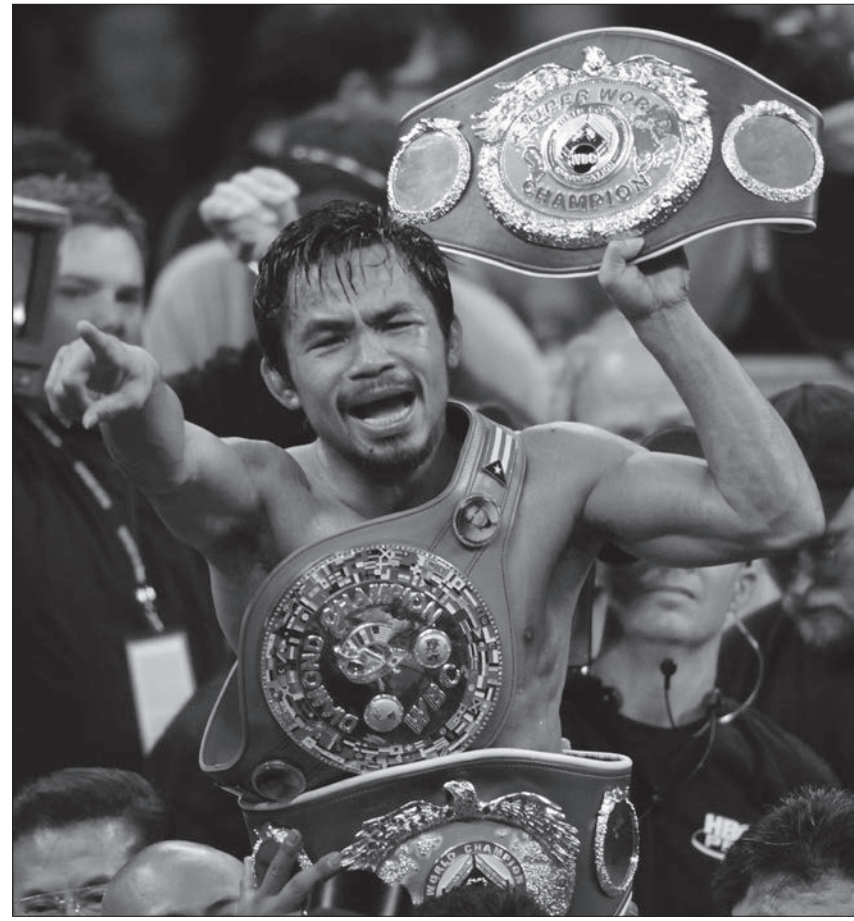

"(Pacquiao-Mayweather) is (Pacquiao) because we conclude a deal for Manny's fight in November," Arum said. "Then we're contractually bound to that fight, and we would look to do a deal with Floyd for next year. If Floyd emerged and said he wanted to do the fight (in November), then there would be nothing opposed to doing the fight."

Arum claims he couldn't wait any longer to start the time-consuming process of putting together a fight for Pacquiao, whose personal schedule has tightened up with his election to congress in his native Philippines this year. Arum said Top Rank needs several months to put together television deals and publicity tours for the bout.

Pacquiao and Mayweather are their sport's top two stars, and a meeting likely would be worth more than $40 million to each fighter. They've discussed a bout for several months since Mayweather's return from a brief retirement, but haven't

Watson says goodbye to Old Course but not British Open

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Tom Watson put one hand on the Swilcan Bridge, bent over and kissed the ancient stones.

This was no tearful goodbye. Rather, a fond farewell.

Watson played his last round in a British Open at St. Andrews on Friday, assured of missing the cut after shooting a 3-over 75.

"St. Andrews, when I first played here, I didn't like it," he said. "But I learned to like it. And, eventually, to love it."

Several hundred fans stuck around in the fading light for one last glimpse of Watson on the Old Course, and he didn't disappoint. With playing partners Padraig Harrington and Ryo Ishikawa well ahead so as not to steal his moment, Watson kissed the bridge and then took a late, nostalgic walk over it.

As applause and shouts of "We love you,

Tom!" rang out, Watson stood on top of the bridge, took off his cap and waved it at the crowd. He gave a thumbs up and then stood still, soaking it all in — just as his old friends and rivals Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus had done before him.

"It just seemed the right thing to do," Watson said. "I thought of Arnold on the bridge and I thought of Jack

DELICIOUS Summer Dishes

FAMILY FEATURES

Italian food is at the top of many people's list of favorite cuisines — and for good reason. Chef Fabio Viviani, "Top Chef" contestant and Owner and Executive Chef of Firenze Osteria Italian Restaurant and Martini Bar in Los Angeles, knows that the combination of fresh ingredients, flavorful herbs and healthy, high quality olive oil makes Italian cuisine a go-to choice for al fresco summer dining.

To bring families together for a summer meal, Chef Fabio has created delicious summer recipes that can be made indoors or on the grill while showcasing the versatility and flavors of Bertolli Olive Oil's premium line of olive oils.

In addition to these recipes, here are more easy ways to enjoy the classic Italian taste of olive oil every day:

- Serve a simple appetizer of fresh bread with extra virgin olive oil. Pour the oil in a bowl for dipping and season with cracked pepper or fresh herbs.
- Create a simple yet flavorful marinade of classico pure olive oil combined with either lemon juice or wine vinegar to flavor meats, poultry and fish.
- Toss your favorite unsalted nuts in a sandwich bag with extra light tasting olive oil to coat lightly, then add a sprinkle of salt for an extraordinary taste.

Olive Oil Health: Did You Know?

Not only revered for its taste, olive oil has long been a part of healthy cooking. Since olive oil is low in saturated fat and is naturally cholesterol-free, it adds flavor while boosting nutritional value.

Swap It Out: Using three-quarters of a teaspoon of olive oil for every one teaspoon of butter or margarine cuts the fat in recipes by 25 percent.

Get Rich: Olive oil is rich in antioxidants, also known as polyphenols, which have cancer-fighting properties, especially when consumed as extra virgin olive oil.

Roasted Tomato & Zucchini Salad

by Chef Fabio Viviani

Serves 4

- 6 Roma tomatoes
- 4 zucchini
- Bertolli Extra Virgin Olive Oil
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- Salt and pepper (to taste)
- 2 6-ounce balls of buffalo mozzarella, cut into 3/4-inch slices
- Approximately 10 large leaves of fresh basil
- Shaved Parmesan cheese

Dressing

- 1 tablespoon balsamic vinegar
- 1/2 cup Bertolli Extra Virgin Olive Oil
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1/2 teaspoon paprika

Cut tomatoes into 1/2-inch slices, and zucchini lengthwise into 1/8-inch ribbons. Season both with minced garlic, salt and pepper and drizzle with olive oil. Roast on grill with cut side up for about 10 minutes, or until nice and evenly roasted.

To assemble the salad:

Place the tomato, zucchini (folded) and mozzarella on top of each other, like a tower, with a basil leaf in between layers. Season layers with salt and pepper and a drizzle of dressing. Sprinkle with shaved Parmesan on top.

Grilled Chicken Skewers with Sausage and Pancetta

by Chef Fabio Viviani

Serves 4

- 3 chicken breasts (cubed)
- 5 to 6 sausages
- 8 to 10 thin slices of pancetta

Sauce

- 20 cherry tomatoes (cut in half)
- Handful of fresh basil (chopped)
- 4 tablespoons Bertolli Extra Light Tasting Olive Oil
- Salt and pepper (to taste)

Alternate pieces of chicken and sausage on metal or bamboo skewers and brush with olive oil. Wrap skewers with slices of pancetta, approximately two pieces per skewer.

Place on grill. Grill until chicken is cooked, approximately 5 to 10 minutes.

In a cast iron pan on grill, place cut tomatoes, basil and olive oil. Sauté until tomatoes are almost stewed. Season with salt and pepper.

Place the cooked skewers on a plate and top with cherry tomato sauce. Garnish with fresh chopped basil.

Note: If using bamboo skewers, soak skewers in water for one-half to one hour, to avoid burning on the grill.

Filet with Farro Salad

by Chef Fabio Viviani

Serves 4

- 1 8-ounce filet mignon
- 8 ounces farro or couscous
- 10 cherry tomatoes, quartered
- 1 zucchini, diced
- 2 tablespoons Bertolli Extra Virgin Olive Oil
- 5 to 6 leaves basil, sliced in half lengthwise
- 1 cup shaved Parmesan
- 1/2 cup pine nuts
- Salt and pepper

Season filet with salt and pepper and grill to medium rare. Let the meat rest. Slice meat when you are ready to serve.

Prepare farro by cooking in salted boiling water for 12 minutes and drain.

Mix farro with the remaining ingredients in serving bowl. Serve on plate and place sliced filet on top.

Texas got off to a fast start again Friday with two runs in the first off Felix Doubront (1-2). Leadoff hitter Elvis Andrus reached second on a two-base throwing error by the pitcher and scored on Kinsler's single. Nelson Cruz singled in Kinsler.

Boston tied it in the second against Colby Lewis (9-5). Kevin Youkilis doubled and scored on J.D. Drew's single. Drew took third on a single by Beltre and scored on a wild pitch.

The game was delayed by rain for one hour after the third inning, and Adrian Bel-tre's solo homer gave the Red Sox a 3-2 lead in the fourth. Then the Rangers went ahead to stay in the fifth.

Young singled, took second on a wild pitch and stayed there on an infield single by Vladimir Guerrero. Doubront then caught a hard liner from Josh Hamilton, but threw wildly to second trying for an inning-ending double play and the runners moved to second and third.

That kept the inning alive as Doubront was replaced by Fernando Cabrera, who was called up from the minors on Friday.

"We talk all the time about giving them extra opportunities," Francona said. "That probably played itself out to the worst it could."

Cabrera walked Cruz and David Murphy.

Nats' Strasburg shines again

MIAMI (AP) — Stephen Strasburg froze in his follow-through, starting at the plate umpire when a call went against him.

The rookie angrily snatched return throws from his catcher, stomped on the mound and hitched his shoulders as though out of sorts, which he was.

The Washington Nationals' young phenom hardly looked phenomenal in the early going Friday night, but he settled down to help beat the Florida Marlins 4-0.

Strasburg (4-2) needed 34 pitches in the opening inning. He allowed two baserunners in each of the first three innings, walking three and throwing the first wild pitch of his career. But he finished with seven strikeouts in six innings and lowered his ERA to 2.03.

"You're not going to go out there and feel perfect every single time," Strasburg said. "What separates the really good pitchers from the average ones is their ability to figure it out on the fly and make adjustments without really giving up too many runs. I was able to do that tonight."

Facing Florida for the first time in his eighth major league start, Strasburg was locked in a scoreless duel with Ricky Nolasco (9-7) until Josh Willingham hit a three-run double in the sixth.

Matt Capps, taking the mound for the first time since he was the winning pitcher in Tuesday night's All-Star game, pitched a hitless ninth to complete a four-hitter. The shutout was the third this year for the Nationals, thanks in part to Strasburg's first scoreless outing.

"As Stephen has done, he just got tougher and tougher as the game went along," manager Jim Riggleman said.

Pitching for the first time in a week because of the All-Star break, Strasburg battled rustiness as he walked two in the first inning, including Gaby Sanchez on 12 pitches.

33-county area, has 550 employees and an annual payroll in excess of $41 million, Lewis said.

Pertinent facts about the facility were on a fact sheet that VAMC Director Daniel Marsh put in a time capsule at the conclusion of Friday's ceremony. The capsule, which eventually will be buried near the flag pole in front of the hospital, will be unearthed during the VAMC's 100th anniversary in July 2050, said Iva Jo Hanslik, community relations director.

Among the dignitaries on hand for Friday's ceremonies were U.S. Congressman Mike Conaway (R-Midland), who serves 18 of the 33 counties in the VAMC catchment area, as well as representatives from the offices of Congressman Randy Neugebauer (R-Lubbock) and U.S. Senator John Cornyn (R-Texas).

Marsh formally recognized all veterans in attendance, and presented a special 60th anniversary commemorative coin to the 96-year-old Barney Echols, the oldest veteran in attendance.

Past and present employees also were recognized Friday, including three men who helped construct the hospital.

Dr. Cheryl Sparks, college president, said the dedication was particularly fitting.

"Don McKinney was on the board that determined in 1981 that the college had a need for a building that would provide classroom and lab space for what was then called vocational training programs," Sparks said. "During his 36 years of service, he was always a strong advocate of the vocational/workforce training program.

"He believed in the importance of those programs and felt they were a great benefit to the businesses of this community," Sparks continued. "The board determined that naming that building after Don would be a fitting tribute for his many years of service to this college."

During the trustee meeting, scheduled to begin at 10:30 a.m. in the student union building's Tumbleweed Room, trustees will hear an update on the various construction projects ongoing at the college's Birdwell Lane campus.

Although overall construction and renovation will not be completed for another year, Sparks said college officials are beginning to see the light at the end of the tunnel.

The biggest milestone this week will be removal of four 50,000-gallon underground storage tanks that provided water for the school's old chilling unit. Once that is completed, the myriad ditches and trenches that have criss-crossed the campus for most of the past two years will be filled in and college grounds crews will begin reseeding the landscape, while other crews will pour new sidewalks in various spots on campus.

"That will be a welcome sight," Sparks said of the upcoming grounds work.

Work on other projects continues apace, Sparks said.

- Renovation of the science building has begun in earnest and should be completed by March.
- Bids for the renovation of the practical arts building have been open and work on the facility should begin in early fall.

- Remediation of drainage problems on the east side of the campus should be completed in the next few weeks.
- Renovation of the men's and women's dormitories are on schedule to be completed by Aug. 13.

Fitting tribute to George Steinbrenner

NEW YORK (AP) — Nick Swisher and the New York Yankees paid tribute to George Steinbrenner with the type of thrilling victory the demanding owner loved.

On a night that began with Mariano Rivera placing a pair of long-stemmed red roses across home plate and Derek Jeter speaking a touching tribute to the hushed crowd, Swisher ended the evening in the Yankees' fashion.

Swisher's single with two outs in the ninth inning capped a night of comebacks, and the Yankees beat the Tampa Bay Rays 5-4 Friday night in the first game following Steinbrenner's death.

New York's players ran into right field on a sweltering night to mob Swisher as "I looked up and said, 'This is for you.' He wanted to win every game. 162-0 he wanted us to do."

Jorge Posada,
New York Yankees

fans responded with yet another prolonged ovation. It was their first "walkoff" win since July 4 — Steinbrenner's 80th birthday.

"I looked up and said, 'This is for you,'" Posada said. "He wanted to win every game. 162-0 he wanted us to do."

Manager Joe Girardi cried during a 15-minute pregame remembrance of Steinbrenner, who died of a heart attack Tuesday at age 80. The Yankees also commemorated public address announcer Bob Sheppard, who passed away Sunday at 99.

"We gather here tonight to honor two men who were both shining stars in the Yankee universe," Jeter said as teammates and the Rays stood ramrod straight, caps off, in front of their dugouts. "Both men, Mr. George Steinbrenner and Mr. Bob Sheppard, cared deeply about their responsibilities to this organization and to our fans, and for that, will be forever remembered in baseball history and in our hearts."

New Yankee Stadium, opened last year in one of Steinbrenner's final acts, could not have been quieter. Yankees executives in business suits watched somberly from behind the plate.

"Simply put," Jeter said, "Mr. Steinbrenner and Mr. Sheppard both left this organization in a much better place than when they first arrived. They've set the example for all employees of the New York Yankees to strive to follow."

New York's current players did just that.

Swisher hit a tying home run in the eighth, then lined a single that sent Curtis Granderson sliding home for the victory in a matchup of the teams with baseball's best records.

"On a day like this when we celebrate his life, got to take him out on a W," Swisher said. "Today was Mr. Steinbrenner's day. Regardless of the situation, regardless of anything, we went out there and we played that game as best we could for him today."

Old Yankee Stadium was famed for championship parties, and also was the site for solemn occasions such as Lou Gehrig's "luckiest man" speech, a dying Babe Ruth propped on a bat and bidding farewell, an empty catcher's box for Thurman Munson.

U.S. relay runners win Olympic medals appeal

GENEVA (AP) — American sprinters who were stripped of their 2000 Olympics relay medals because teammate Marion Jones was doping won an appeal Friday to have them restored.

The Court of Arbitration for Sport ruled in favor of the women, who had appealed the International Olympic Committee's decision to disqualify them from the Sydney Games.

The court said the IOC and International Association of Athletics Federations rules in 2000 did not allow entire teams to be disqualified because of doping by one athlete.

The IOC said the ruling was "disappointing and especially unfortunate for the athletes of the other teams who competed according to the rules."

In Sydney, Jearl Miles-Clark, Monique Hennagan, LaTasha Colander Clark and Andrea Anderson were part of the squad that won gold in the 4x400 relay. Chryste Gaines, Torri Edwards, Nanceen Perry and Passion Richardson were on the 4x100 bronze medal squad.

All but Perry joined the appeal.

"The panel found that at the time of the Sydney Olympic Games there was no express IOC or IAAF rule in force that clearly allowed the IOC to annul the relay team results if one team member was found to have committed a doping offense," CAS said.

Now that the case is over, Richardson can relax, her medal safe and secure in a wooden frame at the home of her parents in Florida.

"It's been a long three years, a long hard fight," Richardson told The Associated Press in a phone interview. "I wanted to believe they would do what was right, but there were some times where I wasn't as certain. Today, they did what was right."

Richardson spoke to Gaines and Miles-Clark and said that "everyone is extremely excited."

"Finally, the fight is over," Richardson said.

In 2007, Jones admitted she was doping in Sydney and also lost her individual golds in the 100 and 200 meters and bronze in the long jump. She spent about six months in a Texas prison in 2008 for lying about using performance-enhancing drugs and her role in a check-fraud scam.

She has since made a comeback in basketball with the Tulsa Shock of the WNBA.

"I've totally moved on," Jones told The AP on Friday in San Antonio, where the Shock were preparing to play the Silver Stars. "I'm moving forward."

Jones said she had not heard about the CAS decision and had not spoken to her former Olympic teammates recently. She declined further comment.

"She made some very poor choices. That's something she has to live with," said Richardson, who no longer has any ill will toward her former teammate. "We did what we were supposed to do and did it with fairness. You have to learn to forgive and forget."

The CAS panel of three lawyers acknowledged the ruling might be unfair to relay teams that competed "with no doped athletes" but added the decision "exclusively depends on the rules enacted or not enacted by the IOC and the IAAF at the time of the Sydney Olympic Games."

The CAS inflicted a further defeat on the IOC by ordering the Olympic body to pay 10,000 Swiss francs ($9,500) toward the athletes' legal costs.

Mark Levinstein, the Washington, DC-based lead attorney for the athletes, said there is still a lawsuit pending against the USOC.

"All they had to do was say, 'The rules are the rules, leave them alone,' and this didn't happen," Levinstein said in a phone interview. "To have your own national Olympic committee turn its back on you, it was sad."

The USOC issued a statement saying it respects the decision of the CAS.

"Although we continue to believe that the U.S. medals in the 4x100 and 4x400 meter women's relays were unfairly won due to Ms. Jones' doping, we have always recognized that the athletes who made up the U.S. teams might have a legal basis on which to defend these medals," said Patrick Sandusky, chief communications officer for the USOC.

"We are sorry that Ms. Jones' actions continue to have a negative effect."

NFL suspends Packers DL Jolly indefinitely

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — The NFL suspended Green Bay Packers defensive end Johnny Jolly without pay for the upcoming season and perhaps beyond for violating the league's substance abuse policy.

Jolly's suspension begins immediately and will continue through at least the 2010 season. He will be eligible to apply for reinstatement after the Super Bowl.

Jolly is facing drug charges in Houston after his July 2008 arrest outside a club for possession of at least 200 grams of codeine. If convicted, Jolly faces up to 20 years in prison.

"Johnny is a good player that loves everything about the game of football," Packers general manager Ted Thompson said in a statement. "We appreciate the contributions he has made to the Packers the past four seasons. His focus and priorities now lie elsewhere — our thoughts are with him during this difficult personal time."

The Packers said team officials would have no further comment.

It's a significant blow to a team that will go into the 2010 season expected to make a run at the playoffs and perhaps even the Super Bowl. A defensive end in Dom Capers' 3-4 scheme, Jolly played a key role as the Packers allowed a league-low 83.3 yards rushing per game.

Perhaps anticipating the possibility of losing Jolly to a suspension, the Packers used a second-round draft pick on Purdue defensive lineman Mike Neal in April.

Jolly, 27, was a sixth-round draft pick in 2006 and worked his way into a starting role the past two seasons.

A restricted free agent, Jolly signed before an offseason deadline the would have allowed the team to reduce the amount of its tender offer.

But Packers coach Mike McCarthy excused Jolly from the team's minicamp in June to deal with his off-field problems.

"There's a lot going on, and he needs to focus and make sure he has everything in line," McCarthy said last month.

should be too harsh on Floyd in this situation," Arum said. "I would have liked him to communicate, but I really believe that this issue with the uncle has an effect. Putting myself in their shoes, I would feel a lot of reluctance going into this big fight without my trainer."

made a deal. Although he hasn't spoken directly to Mayweather, Arum believes the former pound-for-pound champion might be reluctant because of the legal woes of Roger Mayweather, his uncle and longtime trainer. Roger Mayweather will go on trial in Las Vegas next month on assault charges stemming from an altercation with a female boxer last year.

The Rev. Shawn Petree of Seattle, Wash., performed the double ring ceremony. Paul Haney of Dallas, brother of the bride, served as reader.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of ivory taffeta. The sophisticated ball gown featured a jewel neckline and a ruched bodice complimented by a sweep train. Her full-length veil of illusion was held by antique faux pearl hairpins belonging to her aunt. The bouquet was of purple hydrangeas and white calla lilies with pearl accents.

LeAnn Brumley of Denton and Katie Kunkle of Lubbock attended as maids of honor. Bridesmaids were Elizabeth Duhachek of West Des Moines, Iowa, cousin of the bride; Ashton Evans of College Station; Kelsy Maskell of Spearfish, S.D., sister of the groom; and Michaela Maskell of Nashville, Tenn., sister of the groom.

Harrison Whightsil of Fayetteville, Ark., was best man. Groomsmen were Zach Meade of Spearfish, S.D.; Ben Lee of Wheaton, Ill.; Michael Maskell of Spearfish, S.D., brother of the groom; and Jimmy Seward of Belle Fourche, S.D. cousin of the groom. Ushers were Russell Stafford of Garland, cousin of the bride, Paul Haney and Jimmy Seward.

Vocalists were Elizabeth and Eric Duhachek of West Des Moines, Iowa, cousins of the bride. They were accompanied by Nancy Duhachek of West Des Moines, aunt of the bride.

The reception hosted by the bride's parents was held at The Hardware Store in downtown Big Spring. The bride's table featured a three-tiered cake accented by a large sheer bow. The groom's table featured a variety of cupcakes. Wedding guests were served a buffet prepared by Bonnie Franklin of Remarkable Receptions. Music for the dance was provided by Boyd DJ Services of Midland.

Following the honeymoon to South Beach, Fla., the couple is at home in St. Cloud, Minn., where in the fall the groom will attend St. Cloud State University and play football for the Huskies.

OUR VIEW

A tough time for those who represent us

Almost that time again... It will soon be one of the most excruciating times of the year for elected officials anywhere — that time when every entity which collects taxes, fees and other assessments is tasked with forming a budget for the coming fiscal year.

It means hours and hours of meetings with managers, financial officers and department heads in an effort to accomplish what sometimes seems all but impossible. As a matter of fact, some of those entities are already in the midst of that work.

Some of it is projection based on past history: How much water will city customers use? How many more miles can the school district rely on an aging 74-passenger bus? Will sales tax rebates remain steady? Will an air conditioning unit that supplies cool air to 150 students or 60 employees last one more year?

When needs are identified, they must be prioritized. Then choices must be made, based on revenue expectations.

We don't envy those who have to make these decisions — our public schools and college boards, city council members and county commissioners. At the same time they are the individuals elected to represent us and we expect them to make these decisions with us in mind.

That's not easy, because we are all different individuals who live in different neighborhoods. For some, resurfacing the street in front of our home is of paramount importance. Others see water quality as a big issue.

If we have children in school, public education seems to have more importance.

If we are on a limited budget, and many are, it's important that we don't have to endure a tax increase.

Our elected representatives have to take all of that into consideration and make the best decisions they can — sometimes with very limited resources.

That seems to almost always be the case for most of the taxing entities in Howard County.

We here at the Herald are like most, we want those representatives to search hard for ways to cut costs and improve services. After all, everyone wants more for less, don't they?

Rarely is that possible.

As a result, we all have to be realistic.

Therefore, we encourage the general public to be tolerant in the days and weeks ahead, and to remember that those representatives are faced with a very difficult and quite often thankless task.

We don't envy them one bit. We do, however, thank them for their service and think there is no better time than to let them know they are appreciated for the job they do for all of us.

YOUR VIEWS

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone who participated in the Coahoma Freedom Parade on July 3. Despite the threat of rain, we had great attendance at the parade, patriotic program and the barbecue.

Again, thanks to all of you for supporting our Independence Day Celebration and most importantly, for honoring our veterans.

A SMALL PRAYER

Where women are on top

The likely (and much deserved) confirmation of Solicitor General Elena Kagan to the United States Supreme Court creates an opening for one of the "Top 4" positions in the Justice Department. While there are many qualified candidates, the fact is that Kagan was the only woman in the top ranks at Justice. Even below that, men substantially outnumber women.

At a time when renewed attention is being focused on the progress — and lack thereof — of women to the top levels of the legal profession, the president has an opportunity to continue the progress he has made toward equality on the Supreme Court by appointing a woman to succeed Kagan as solicitor general.

As of now, the attorney general, the deputy attorney general and the associate attorney general are all men.

At the level of assistant attorney general, three of 12 — Anti-trust (Christine Varney), Environment and Natural Resources (Ignacia Moreno) and Justice Programs (Laurie Robinson) — are women. Had the president had his way, a fourth — Dawn Johnsen — would be heading the important Office of Legal Counsel. But her nomination ran into staunch opposition, and the "acting" head of that department is now a man.

A second level down, at the level of department heads, seven of 24 are women.

This is not about affirmative action, in the sense of quotas or special preferences. Just the opposite. If there is one field where equality should be the norm and not the exception, it is law — especially in government.

When I went to law school, a hundred years ago, fewer than 20 percent of my classmates were women. In the years since, however, those numbers have increased steadily to the point that many law schools have, for some years, been educating more women than men.

And while the grueling hours and intense focus on "business getting" (often through the still "old boys network") in private practice have led many women in mid-career to take themselves off the partnership track, government and public service have been the beneficiaries of many of these decisions.

Today, there are more women judges, more women with government experience, and more women within the varied careers of prosecutors, state government department heads, in-house lawyers and academics than ever before.

The Justice Department can and should set an example for the profession — an example in terms of excellence and ethics, and also in terms of diversity.

As a woman lawyer, it made me proud to think that the United States' top lawyer for the Supreme Court was a smart, articulate and experienced woman. For every girl who has the chance to see an argument before the Supreme Court and who dreams of someday being there herself, the fact that there will now be three women sitting on the bench is a wonderful inspiration, only made that much better if it is a woman standing at the lectern.

Back when I was a law clerk and the Supreme Court was comprised of nine men, there was one day during the term when both Ruth Bader Ginsburg (then a professor and now a justice) and professor Herma Hill Kay of Berkeley argued on the same day.

For the few women clerks, for the women in the chamber that day, for the secretaries and staffers, it was a red-letter day.

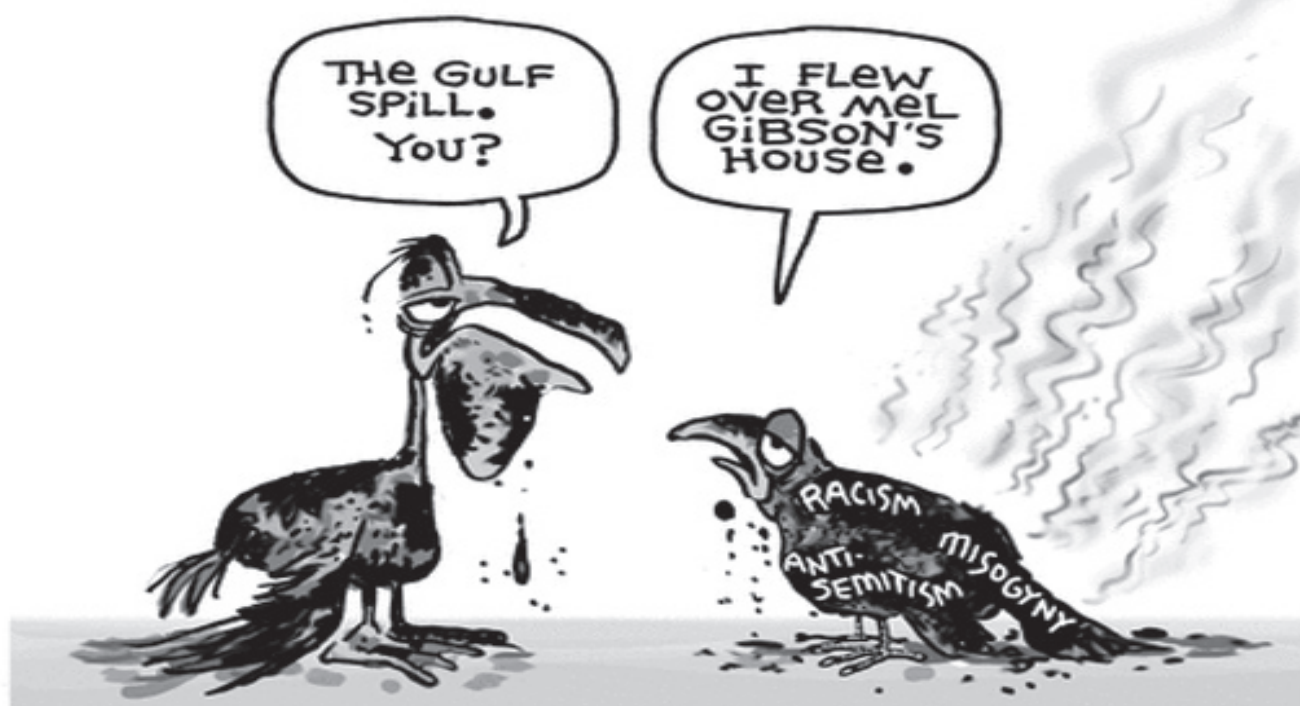

We crowded the courtroom to see not one but two women argue. Most days, there were no women at all. Justice William Rehnquist, noticing the rarity of two women arguing, quipped to one of them, "You mean, you're not satisfied with having Susan B. Anthony on the silver dollar?"

The answer, then and now, is no.

Not even close.

Looking at World Cup loyalties

When the World Cup tournament began, I was surprised by a question from a friend. "By the way, whose flag are you flying in the World Cup?" my friend Jim asked in an e-mail.

I thought it was clearly understood that I was rooting for the USA! After all, my native Cuba wasn't even in the tournament. But even if it had been, knowing that the Cuban communist dictatorship uses athletes as propaganda tools probably would have been enough for me to root against them. Unfortunately, the Cuban government doesn't separate sports from politics.

Besides, I wanted nothing more than to see my adoptive homeland catch up to the rest of the world in the passion it feels for soccer, and I knew that a good showing by the U.S. team could evoke enthusiasm that could last for years.

But once the U.S. team was eliminated from the competition in South Africa, as a Latino American, naturally, I had to cheer for my compadres from Mexico, Chile, Argentina, Paraguay and Uruguay. They not only are my hemispheric neighbors and my fellow Latin Americans but also share my native language and culture. We all have roots in the same motherland — España!

After Mexico also was eliminated from the tournament, I was pleased to see that five South American teams, including Brazil, were still in contention. It was a huge display of talent that made most U.S. Latinos, regardless of nationality, extremely proud.

Of course, Latinos were not alone. During the past few weeks, there were many hyphenated Americans waving foreign flags and rooting for Italy, Germany, Greece, France, Korea, England and other countries represented in the international soccer classic.

It's all about that nationalistic pride we feel when we see one of our own people do well. It's prevalent in sports; it involves every ethnic, racial and immigrant community, and there's absolutely nothing wrong with it. Even when some people root against the U.S. teams, no one should question their love for this country or their American patriotism. After all, these are athletic competitions — sports, not war!

Throughout U.S. history, even American sports figures have instilled nationalistic pride among hyphenated Americans. We've had many "Italian stallions" and "Irish sluggers" who have made their people proud.

In the United States, when we move from one city to another, we often remain loyal to the teams of the city from which we came. But it doesn't mean we dislike the town in which we have chosen to live. I grew up in Miami and still root for the Dolphins, but it doesn't affect how much I love New York!

Yet some people tend to resent the pride that the rest of us feel during the Olympics, the World Cup and other international sporting events. To the bigots who think hyphenated Americans are actually anti-American, sports allegiance to our ancestral motherlands — even after the U.S. is out of the competition — is an act of betrayal. Imagine how lonely they must have felt as they watched the World Cup and saw each game begin with star players delivering statements condemning racism — and the whole world applauding!

For me and many other U.S. Latinos, as the South American teams sadly kept being eliminated in the final rounds of World Cup competition, we naturally migrated back to our ultimate motherland.

And when Spain won the World Cup, even Latinos who still hold grudges against the conquistadors for what they did to the indigenous Americans some 500 years ago were singing, "Que viva España."

I was proud to be one of them. Our Spanish blood is undeniable.

By the way, in the beginning of the World Cup tournament, when I felt the frenzy of those who rooted for the U.S. team, part of what made me proud was knowing that we had fielded a team that was truly representative of this "nation of immigrants."

We had a midfielder who was born in Brazil and another one who was born in Scotland. We had a goalkeeper whose mother came from Hungary and a team captain and star player whose father came from Canada. And we had other players who traced their roots to Jamaica, Nigeria and several Latin American countries.

We had the most ethnically diverse team in U.S. soccer history and our best performance since 1930, and those were great reasons to be proud to be Americans.

Oosthuizen could be surprise at Open

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Now comes the hard part for Louis Oosthuizen.

The little-known South African had never contended in a major championship. Heck, this is only the second time he's made the cut. But there he was Saturday, teeing off with a four-stroke lead in the British Open.

Oosthuizen got off to a shaky start, rolling a 6-foot putt over the right edge of the cup for a bogey at No. 1. That dropped him to 11 under and pushed Henrik Stenson within three strokes of the lead.

The hard-charging Swede moved into second when he holed out from the fairway for an eagle at the 13th. He was 6 under for the day.

Also at 8 under: England's Paul Casey, trying to end Britain's 11-year drought in its home major. He birdied two of the first three holes.

There was no charge from Tiger Woods. Going for his third straight win at the Old Course, he played the front side in a 1-over 37, slamming clubs and muttering to himself as he remained eight shots behind Oosthuizen.

Even though the wind picked up Saturday afternoon, conditions were much more favorable for the third round than a day earlier, when 14 players — including first-round leader Rory McIlroy — shot in the 80s.

McIlroy's roller-coaster ride continued. He played the first 16 holes at 4 under, giving him a shot at the claret jug that appeared to slip away when he followed up an opening 63 — tied for the lowest score ever in a major — with an 8-over 80, the worst score ever from someone shooting so low the day before.

A double-bogey at the "Road Hole" put a damper on McIlroy's comeback, though he did bounce back for a birdie at No. 18 that sent him to the clubhouse with a 4-under 212.

Phil Mickelson also showed signs of rallying, getting as low as 4 under. But he, too, ran into late trouble: a double-bogey at No. 16 after he knocked his tee shot off the road and into the hospitality area far right of the fairway, then at bogey at the 17th when his approach landed up against the stone wall behind the green.

Lefty settled for a 70 and a 214 through three rounds, likely to leave him with too large a deficit on the final day to make a serious run at his first Open title.

Mark Calcavecchia wasn't able to finish what Greg Norman and Tom Watson started.

Playing in the final group with Oosthuizen, the 50-year-old Calcavecchia got off to a rough start with bogeys at the first three holes, knocking him seven strokes behind.

Norman and Watson were in their 50s when they contended at the Open the last two years. With Calcavecchia faltering, 51-year-old Tom Lehman moved up to become the top senior golfer at 5 under.

Thirty players had to return to the Old Course to finish up the second round after high winds forced a one-hour suspension on Friday. Facing only a cool breeze, British Amateur champion Jin Jeong birdied the 18th hole to complete a remarkable 2-under 70.

Of the last 105 players to tee off in the second round, only three broke par — Jeong, Alejandro Canizares (71) and Darren Clarke (70).

Everyone was chasing Oosthuizen (WUHST-hy-zen), a 27-year-old regular on the European Tour who's given South Africans another reason to beam — please, no vuvuzelas — on the heels of successfully hosting soccer's World Cup.

This is new territory for the player who's given name is Lodewicus Theodoros. This is the first time he's ever made the cut in four British Open appearances, and only the second time in nine tries that he's played on the weekend in a major.

His lead was large but so was the pressure. And so much depends on the weather, the most bedeviling defense at the seaside course.

Astros beat Pirates for 5-2 win

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Houston Astros certainly aren't the only team beating the lowly Pittsburgh Pirates. They're just the one doing it with the most regularity.

Jeff Keppinger homered and had three RBIs, Brett Myers allowed two runs while working into the eighth inning and the Astros remained unbeaten in seven games against the National League's worst team this season with a 5-2 win Friday night.

Myers (7-6) extended his club record for consecutive starts of at least six innings to begin a season to 19 by allowing two runs on five hits in 7 2-3 innings, striking out four and walking one.

"I'm just trying to do my job; I'm not really trying to go out there and overpower guys or anything like that," Myers said. "I'm just trying to throw strikes and get us into the dugout as quick as possible."

Matt Lindstrom worked a perfect ninth for his 22nd save in 26 opportunities.

Andrew McCutchen went 2 for 4 with an RBI and a run for Pittsburgh, which has lost seven consecutive overall.

Making his first start in exactly one month, the Pirates' Zach Duke (3-9) pitched five effective innings, allowing two runs on five hits with no walks and five strikeouts. But he lost for the ninth time in his last 10 decisions.

"I feel good," Duke said. "I felt like the stuff was crisp, the curveball was good, the changeup was good, the fastball was down, so I like where I'm at physically."

In the Astros' first game with former star Jeff Bagwell as their hitting coach, the team scored at least five runs for only the third time in its past 10 contests.

This despite being without cleanup hitter Carlos Lee, who was not in the lineup a day after he missed a voluntary team workout in Pittsburgh to end the All-star break.

Keppinger, 7 for 13 in his past three games, has hit three of his four home runs this season in his past six games. He also had an RBI double in the seventh and drove in Jason Bourgeois with a groundout in the first.

That meant the Pirates had allowed at least one first-inning run for the sixth time in their past seven games. This came without a ball reaching the outfield — an infield single, two stolen bases and a groundout.

"Those are the things we've got to do, get the big hits with two outs, and we've got to be able to move runners around," Keppinger said.

Houston took a 2-0 lead with two outs in the second when Humberto Quintero doubled in Hunter Pence.

McCutchen scored on Neil Walker's sacrifice fly in the fourth.

D.J. Carrasco relieved Duke in the sixth, and Keppinger took the first pitch he threw and hit it just inside the foul pole.

Liriano lifts Twins past White Sox

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Having tripped and fallen behind in the race, the Minnesota Twins started the second half with an important series against the division leading Chicago White Sox — with the packed new ballpark adding to the excitement.

Francisco Liriano is trying to avoid that amped-up feeling, but this time he figured out how to keep from overthrowing.

Liriano gave the sagging Twins a big lift on the mound in a 7-4 victory, and faulty fielding by the White Sox on Friday night led to the end of their nine-game winning streak.

"Exactly what we needed," manager Ron Gardenhire said. "A good dose of medicine."

Liriano (7-7) left with two outs in the eighth inning to a standing ovation from the Target Field fans on a warm and muggy night, deprived lately of this kind of dominant performance. The Twins had lost Liriano's last five starts.

"I was just trying to stay back and relaxed," Liriano said.

Steinbrenner had lorded over the Yankees since buying the franchise in January 1973.

Sheppard's elegant and booming introductions gave old Yankee Stadium its voice from 1951-07.

In his honor, there were no introductions of batters, and the often-obtrusive music that punctuates evenings in the Bronx went silent.

There was a 2-minute moment of absolute silence before the first pitch.

Opening lead — queen of diamonds.

If you make it a practice to play your cards well — even in relatively unimportant situations — you will in the process increase your chances of playing the cards well when it really matters.

Take this case where you're in four spades and West leads a diamond. There seems to be nothing to the play; apparently you'll make 11 tricks, neither more nor less. But as the play progresses, making 12 tricks becomes a real possibility. While it is granted that this is not an earthshaking development, you'll have something to talk about if you can accomplish the feat.

After taking the diamond lead with the ace and drawing two rounds of trumps, you play the king of diamonds and ruff a diamond. To your surprise, you learn that West started with seven diamonds. Moreover, when you next play the A-K-Q of hearts, discarding a club, West follows suit each time, and when you then lead the four of hearts, East discards a club.

All of this enables you to determine that West started with precisely two spades, four hearts and seven diamonds, so he simply can't have a club!

This knowledge of West's hand would ordinarily be useless — something like knowing that the square root of 998,001 is 999. But here you can take advantage of what you've learned by simply discarding your jack of clubs on the four of hearts!

This leaves West in an untenable position. He wins the heart with the jack, but because all his remaining cards are diamonds, he must lead one. You ruff in dummy, discarding your queen of clubs, and wind up making 12 tricks instead of the 11 you had expected to make at the start.

At rubber bridge, this extra trick might not matter very much to you, but keeping in practice on hands like these will serve you well when a more pressing need for such an effort comes along.

Tomorrow: Famous Hand.

Sharyland new electric utility to Cap Rock customers

Special to the Herald

DALLAS — Sharyland Utilities L.P. and Hunt Transmission Services L.L.C. jointly announced that the acquisition of Cap Rock Energy Corporation and its subsidiary NewCorp Resources Electric Cooperative Inc. has been completed. Sharyland Utilities now serves as the new electric utility for all customers previously served by Cap Rock Energy.

"We are pleased to join the communities that Cap Rock Energy serves," said Hunter Hunt, president of Sharyland Utilities. "Sharyland is strongly committed to customers service and reliability, and we look forward to serving our new customers that we are gaining through this acquisition."

Under the terms of the approved merger agreement, Hunt Transmission and its affiliates have acquired and now own all of the electric utility transmission and distribution assets of Cap Rock Energy and NewCorp, which are located in West Texas around the Midland area, in Central Texas around the Brady area and in parts of Hunt and Collin counties.

These assets will be operated and maintained by Sharyland Utilities and employees of Cap Rock Energy will become employees of Sharyland Utilities.

"From a customer service perspective, this transition will be seamless," said Hunt. "Electric rates will remain

AgriLife examines human immune response to virus at atomic level

Special to the Herald

COLLEGE STATION — A team of biochemists has identified the molecular mechanism by which an immune response is triggered by the invading viruses, according to recent research.

The results could eventually lead to new therapies for many different kinds of viral infections, from the common cold to hepatitis and AIDS, according to Dr. Pingwei Li, Texas A&M University's department of biochemistry and biophysics.

"This work provided insight into how our immune system recognizes viral RNA at the atomic level," Li said.

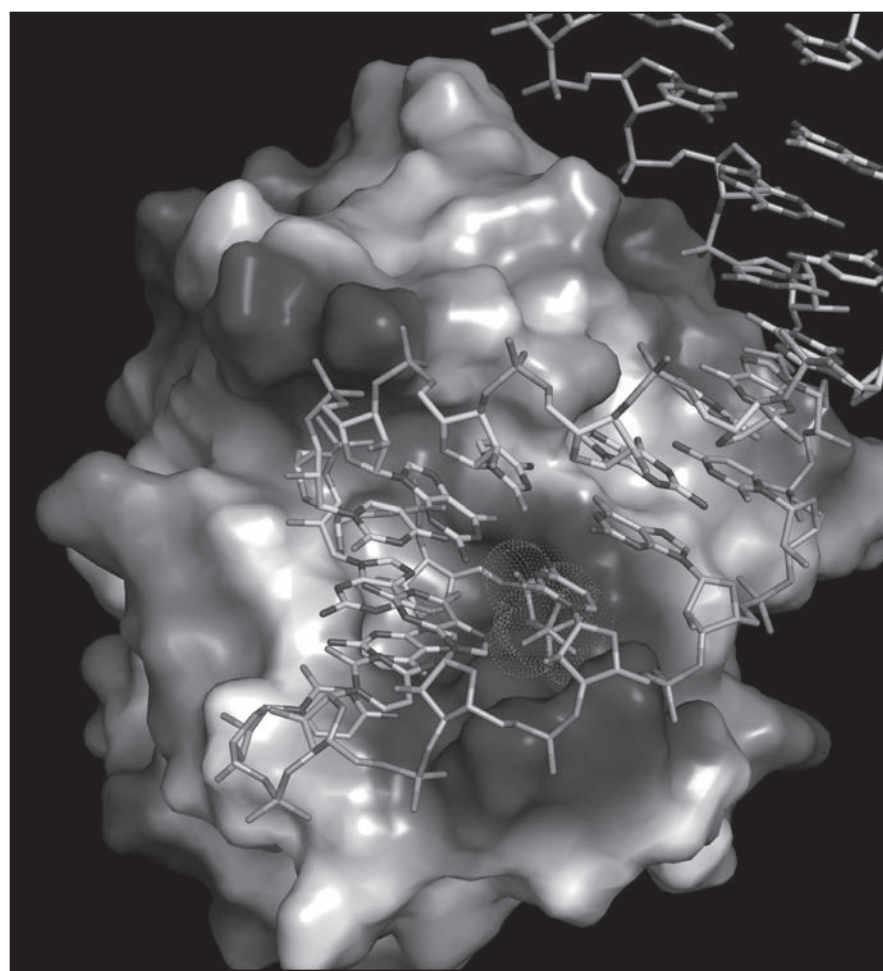

The results of the team's research were published on July 15 by Structure of Cell Press, a prestigious, highly-cited biomedical journal, said Li, who is one of a 10-member team, four of who are with Li's department.

In the last few years, Li's group studied an enzyme called "RIG-I" that senses the presence of foreign RNA and triggers an innate immune response.

Unlike an adaptive immune response, innate immune response gives immediate protection against infection. Adaptive immune responses are learned by the body — or "taught" as with inoculation, Li said. But innate immunity is built right into the cell's genetic structure and is ready to respond whenever a pathogen invades the host.

The innate immune system can rapidly respond to an entirely novel virus or bacteriological threat, while the adaptive immune system has to go through a kind of learning process that may take weeks to be effective sometimes. Just as important, the adaptive immune system is coupled to innate immunity, Li said.

Because of this connection to immune response, learning exactly how RIG-I senses foreign viruses promises great rewards in treating a host of diseases, he said.

"It is a very exciting and hot topic among researchers these days," Li said. "A couple of labs were racing to figure out how RIG-I works, but our team was the first to show how RIG-I recognizes the terminal triphosphate of viral RNA. We determined the structure almost a year ago and the result was presented at the Keystone Symposium for Structural Biology early this year."

Viruses contain RNA, which are molecules similar to DNA in many ways but which play different roles. The RNA molecules from virus often have structures that do not exist in human RNA. RIG-I specifically targets these unique structures and launches an immune response by triggering the secretion of interferon, Li said

Interferons are proteins produced and released by the infected cells to fight pathogens such as viruses or bacteria.

But exactly what was the mechanism by which RIG-I triggers the antiviral immune responses? Though there were some clues offered by previous research, it was not clear how it worked at the molecular level, Li said.

Researchers knew, for example, that the RIG-I enzyme specifically targets the structural unit called "5' triphosphate," which is unique to viral RNA. Furthermore, it was known what a particular part of the RIG-I binds to the viral RNA.

"This crucial part is its 'C-terminal domain,' a small RNA binding module capable of recog-Bhupen Agrawal is branch manager and a managing director — investments for the Wachovia Securities Midland office.

Bill Franks, AAMS, is a senior registered client associate and the senior associate to the branch manager.

The topic of a double-dip economic recession is now a hot topic. Another new term introduced to the investing masses last week was the "Death Cross." It refers to the relationship between an index and its 50- and 200-day moving averages.

The "death" occurs when a downward sloping 50-day moving average crosses below its 200-day moving average. This is considered a negative signal by many as it portends lower stock prices ahead.

Another term thrown around was a head-and-shoulders (no, not the shampoo) top that is forming in the major indexes. As the fear scenario went this past week, the triple whammy of slowing Asian growth, the Euro debt crisis and slowing United States economic growth are combining with the technical condition of the stock market and the result will be a double-dip recession.

Fears about slowing Asian growth were revived after a Chinese Leading Economic Index was revised lower. We believe this report was an aberration and not consistent with other Chinese economic reports that are indicating a slowdown in their economy to a more sustainable long-term pace.

The Group of 20 meeting ended June 27 with European nations committed to long-term deficit reduction and strong austerity measures. The stock market treated these commitments as if they were something new.

In fact, European governments — such as Spain, Portugal and the United Kingdom — imposed multi-year budget tightening months ago and accelerated the pace of reform in the spring, in response to the Greek crisis and far ahead of the G-20 meeting.

In the U.S., one of the biggest fears last week was that the sharp falloff in June consumer confidence was a signal of rapidly slowing U.S. growth.

Importantly, as discussed previously, we have been anticipating a slowdown in the U.S. economy as the year progressed.

Our economy is in much better shape now than when it entered the recession in 2008. Some of the conditions noted by our Economics and Equity Strategy team include that the economy is expanding, manufacturing is in a widespread upturn, capital spending has resumed, job creation is occurring, corporate profits are rising and leading economic indicators are growing, albeit at a slower pace.

In our opinion, the biggest factor contributing to the current stock-market weakness is the 13-month, S&P 500 80 percent rally. Investors are nervous and fatigued and the market needs time to work off some of its excesses. Thus, sentiment is very negative and the background news is magnifying the swings in stocks.

The breaking of key support levels and other technical stock price developments have increased fears of significantly lower prices.

The positive is that the 16 percent decline in the S&P 500 from its April highs has created a short-term oversold market. Also, many technical measures have reached extremes that have been coincident with, or very near, sizable stock-market bounces in the past.

However, we will let the stock market do the talking and respect its current action, which says there is no technical basis to call bottom, but we do not believe our readers should worry now about a double dip recession for the U.S. economy and place the risk at less than 20 percent.

Texas mayor who killed self had financial troubles

COPPELL (AP) — A Dallas area mayor who authorities believe killed herself and her daughter left a note saying the two were still grieving over the 2008 death of their husband and father from cancer, police said Friday.

"My sweet, sweet Corinne had grown completely inconsolable. She had learned to hide her feelings from her friends. But the two of us were lost, alone and afraid. Corinne just kept on asking, 'Why won't God let me die?' We hadn't slept at all and neither one of us could stop crying when we were together," read a typed note that police found in the kitchen.

The note, which also gave instructions on how to care for the family's two dogs and four cats, was among four that police found Tuesday when they discovered the bodies of Coppel Mayor Jayne Peters, 55, and her 19-year-old daughter, Corinne.

Both women had been shot in the head. The Dallas County Medical Examiners Office has ruled the elder Peters' death a suicide and the daughter's death a homicide.

Police arrived at the home after the usually prompt mayor failed to show up for a city meeting. They found an envelope taped to the door containing a house key and typed note that said: "To our first responders, Here is the key for the front door. I am so very sorry for what you're about to discover. Please forgive me. Jayne."

Another typed note left in the kitchen listed contact numbers of family members. It also said, "Please, please, please, no funeral, no memorial — just cremate us both." A handwritten note on the door of the bathroom where the mayor's body was found was signed by her and said not to resuscitate.

Along with her grief, recent evidence also revealed that the mayor had financial troubles.

At a Friday afternoon funeral service for the two, Peters' pastor said the mayor tried to hide her financial problems from her daughter after the death of her husband.

"Jayne was a deeply troubled and, finally, desperate soul," Rev. Dennis Wilkinson said during the service at First United Methodist Church in Coppell, adding that his comments had been approved by the family.

"When he died, they were left with no other resources," Wilkinson said. "She wanted to protect her daughter from knowing about her financial problems and thinking badly of her father."

City Manager Clay Phillips said he had been asking the mayor since November about at least $4,000 in questionable charges on her city-issued credit card. Phillips said there appeared to be personal charges for items such as clothing and pet supplies. He said he had sent her an e-mail about the issue on Monday and asked the city attorney to look into the matter on Tuesday.

City officials released a report for the second quarter of 2010 that included more than 40 items and services that the city paid on the mayor's behalf. Among them were three charges totaling more than $1,700 to a rental car agency in suburban Dallas and three charges totaling more than $500 at a Coppell grocery store.

The report also shows that Peter reimbursed the city for $361.

The Dallas Morning News reported Friday that the Peters' home, appraised at nearly $423,000, had been posted for foreclosure last July, but never made it to auction, according to the Foreclosure Listing Service.

Deputy Police Chief Steve Thomas said the weapon used was a Glock 17 9mm pistol, which he said the mayor borrowed from Cedar Hill Mayor Rob Franke. Thomas said that Franke told police after the shooting that Peters had asked about getting a concealed handgun permit and the two had gone to a shooting range for target practice July 8. Peters left the shooting range with his weapon, saying she wanted to borrow it for a class.

Franke did not immediately return a call Friday from The Associated Press. But he told the Dallas Morning News that Peters told him she didn't want to actually own a gun and just wanted the permit.

"You always go through thinking about the what ifs," Franke told the newspaper. "I just thought I was doing a favor for a friend."

Thomas said Franke would not face any charges.

The mayor had been a contract software developer who had served on the city council for a decade before being elected mayor in 2009.

Her daughter had recently told friends that she was heading to the University of Texas at Austin in the fall, but a UT spokesman said the school had no record of her applying.

Neighbor Diane Ianni said that Corinne was excited and had been wearing shirts with the university's long-horn logo and colors.

Thomas said a neighbor saw Corinne putting things in her car at 6 a.m. the morning before she was killed. Shortly after she placed them in her car, the elder Peters was seen taking the items back into their home, Thomas said.

Thomas said the investigation into the deaths is ongoing. He said a prescription for medication to treat depression was found at the home, but he wasn't sure for whom it was prescribed. He also said that the elder Peters' work and personal computers have been taken as evidence.

"This agency and this city is going to get as many answers as we possibly can," he said.

Texas paralegal gets 4½ years for VA scam

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A disbarred Texas lawyer has been sentenced to 4½ years in federal prison for stealing funds intended to help indigent veterans with their legal needs.

U.S. District Judge Fred Biery also entered a monetary judgment against Alvarado for $134,350.35 on Friday.

Court records state that Alvarado was a team manager for the Texas Rio Grande Legal Aid who was paid to travel across Texas helping low-income veterans and widows file Veterans Administration claims.

Prosecutors say from Nov. 2003 to Feb. 2006 he submitted over 500 fraudulent vouchers totaling $134,350.35 for purported business trips from his San Antonio home. Investigators say he faked client names and social security numbers to get travel pay.

Alvarado pleaded guilty to four counts of mail fraud last October.

Teen questioned in fatal beach stabbing

GALVESTON (AP) — Police are questioning an 18-year-old man about the fatal stabbing of another teen after both were found bleeding on a Galveston beach.

Seventeen-year-old Daniel Polk, of Galveston, died soon after being taken to a local hospital Friday morning with several serious knife wounds, including one to the neck.

Galveston Police Department Capt. Thom Karlok says the 18-year-old, who had cuts on his hands, is accused of stabbing Polk.

Police believe the man, who is also from Galveston, was injured when the weapon he held in his hands slipped, Karlok said.

The Houston Chronicle reports that they were questioning the man but had not yet charged him.

Top Texas criminal judge warned but keeps job

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The top criminal judge in Texas was spared her job but still punished Friday by a state panel that reprimanded embattled Judge Sharon Keller for turning away a death-row inmate's late appeal hours before his 2007 execution.

Keller, the presiding judge of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, had faced removal from the bench. But the State Commission on Judicial Conduct instead slapped her with a "public warning," one of the least severe sanctions at its disposal.

The resolution to what became a three-year saga seemed to leave neither side satisfied. Keller sought nothing short of an exoneration, and her critics grumbled over the panel letting her off with a light rebuke.

Death penalty opponents and observers had waited nearly three years to find out whether Keller would lose her job after famously saying "We close at 5" while attorneys for a twice-convicted killer scrambled to file a last-minute appeal.

Recommending Keller's removal would have amounted to a historically extraordinary move by the panel. But the 13-member commission didn't find her without fault.

Keller's actions constituted "willful or persistent conduct that is clearly inconsistent with the proper performance of her duties," the panel wrote in a 19-page ruling.

Keller was also found to have cast "public discredit on the judiciary."

Chip Babcock, Keller's attorney, said he was "gratified" the panel chose such a mild reprimand but was upset that five charges of judicial misconduct were not outright dismissed.

Texas officer appeals excessive force suspension

DALLAS (AP) — A white east Texas police officer shown on dashboard camera video slamming a black handcuffed suspect face first onto the hood of a squad car has appealed his two-day unpaid suspension, officials said Friday.

The arrest was the latest incident to spark outrage in racially charged Paris, about 90 miles northeast of Dallas, where the Nation of Islam and the New Black Panther Party led protests last year after murder charges were dropped against two white defendants accused of fatally striking a black man with a pickup truck.

The video shows a squad car pulling up to the site of a Nov. 10 roadside arrest. Paris Police Officer Jeremy Massey, who is wearing sunglasses, a cowboy hat and is not in uniform, is standing alongside his unmarked pickup truck holding a handcuffed suspect, 18-year-old Cornelius Gill.

The instant the squad car pulls to a stop, Massey slams Gill, who is 5-foot-4 and weighs 136 pounds, into the hood. Gill's upper chest and the side of his face appear to take the brunt of the impact. Gill's companion starts yelling in protest.

"We believe the use of force is reasonable," said Chris Barrett, Massey's attorney. "I know it's easier to look at the three seconds where Jeremy puts Gill on the car, but that would be grossly unfair to Officer Massey."

Massey is an 11-year-veteran of the Paris Police Department and has an otherwise clean record. He appealed his suspension during a two-day hearing before an independent arbitrator in June, Barrett said Friday. A decision is expected by the end of next week.

The suspension followed an internal affairs investigation that ended in February, Chief Bob Hundley said.

"Putting the individual on the patrol car to make sure he won't escape — I didn't have an issue with that," Hundley said. "What I had an issue with is the amount of force he used when he put him on the hood of the car."

Lead paint poisoning affects over one million children today.

Learning disabilities, hearing loss, speech delays, violent behavior and, in rare cases, seizures and even death: these are just some of the effects lead paint poisoning has on young children. If your home was built before 1978, lead paint on your walls, doors, windows and sills may be dangerous. And it's not just large paint chips that can cause damage. In fact, three granules of lead dust are enough to poison your child. Let's make all kids lead-free kids. To learn more about the simple steps you can take to safeguard your family, log on to LEADFREEKIDS.org or call 800-424-LEAD.

News in brief

BP tries to make sense of puzzling readings from busted well

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Engineers kept vigil Saturday over the massive cap holding back oil from BP's busted Gulf well, their eyes glued to monitors in a faraway control room that displayed pressure readings, temperature gauges and underwater images.

Their round-the-clock work deciphering a puzzle of data from undersea robots and instruments at the wellhead is helping BP and the government determine whether the cap is holding tight as the end of a critical 48-hour testing window approaches. Signs so far have been promising but inconclusive.

Saturday afternoon will mark two full days since BP stopped the oil from leaking into the Gulf and entered into the pressure-testing phase. At that point engineers could offer more definitive evidence that the cap is working, or call for more testing. At any time before then, they could also reopen the cap and allow some oil to spill into the sea again. Scientists are watching for leaks either in the well itself or the sea floor.

Kent Wells, a BP PLC vice president, said on an evening conference call that engineers had found no indication that the well has started leaking underground.

"No news is good news, I guess that's how I'd say it," Wells said.

Mexican drug gang uses car bomb for 1st time in deadly attack

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — A drug cartel has used a car bomb for the first time in Mexico's decades-long fight against traffickers, setting a deadly trap against federal police in a city across the border from Texas, the mayor of Ciudad Juarez said Friday.

Mayor Jose Reyes said federal police have confirmed to him that a car bomb was used in the attack that killed three people Thursday.

It was the first time a drug cartel has used a bomb to attack Mexican security forces, marking an escalation in a raging drug war that already is extremely deadly: On Friday alone, a dozen people were killed and 21 wounded in a series of gun battles between soldiers and cartel gunmen in the Mexican border city of Nuevo Laredo, the federal Interior Department said.

In Thursday's bombing, federal police and paramedics were lured to the scene by a phone call reporting that shots were fired at a major intersection and a municipal police officer lay wounded, Reyes told The Associated Press.

As the paramedics were working on the wounded man, a parked car exploded, he said.

Clinton to press Afghanistan on security, corruption

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid growing concerns about the war in Afghanistan, Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton is heading to South Asia on a mission aimed at refining the goals of the nearly 9-year-old conflict.

Clinton's visit comes with American lawmakers increasingly questioning the course of the war as the death toll of U.S. and international forces rises and also expressing concerns about corruption and the utility of massive assistance to both Afghanistan and Pakistan.

She will attend next week's international conference in Kabul where the Afghan government is expected to outline plans to bolster deteriorating security conditions, reintegrate militants into society and crack down on corruption. She also will stop in Pakistan to push greater cooperation between Islamabad and Kabul.

Clinton, who leaves Saturday, also plans travel to South Korea, where she will meet up with Defense Secretary Robert Gates for talks on dealing with renewed tensions over North Korea after the sinking of a South Korean warship blamed on the North. She will finish in Vietnam for discussions with regional leaders likely to focus on upcoming elections in Myanmar.

Jobs: iPhone isn't perfect, offers free cases to prevent reception problem

CUPERTINO, Calif. (AP) — A perfect iPhone? There's no app for that. Apple Inc. will give free protective cases to buyers of its latest iPhone to prevent reception problems that occur when people cover a certain spot on the phone with a bare hand.

CEO Steve Jobs apologized Friday to people who are less than satisfied with the iPhone 4, even as he denied it has an antenna problem that needs fixing.

"We're not perfect," Jobs said at a news conference. "Phones aren't perfect."

The more than 3 million people who have already bought an iPhone 4 can go to Apple's website starting late next week and sign up for a free case, he said. Apple can't make enough of its $29 "Bumper" cases for everyone, so the company will let people chose from several case styles.

New buyers through Sept. 30 will also be eligible. Apple will send refunds to people who already bought a Bumper.

Hayworth calls McCain a flip-flopper in Ariz. debate

PHOENIX (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. J.D. Hayworth had a much-needed opportunity Friday night to refocus Arizona's Republican Senate primary on incumbent John McCain, and he came out swinging.

McCain, Hayworth and political newcomer Jim Deakin squared off Friday in the first of two televised debates before Arizona's Aug. 24 Republican primary.

"It's really sad to see John McCain, who should be revered as a statesman, basically reduced to a political shape-shifter," he said, then turned to his opponent. "John, you've changed positions so much in this campaign maybe we'll have to set up an extra podium for you depending on which John McCain is going to answer which question."

And so it was for an hour as Hayworth lobbed a number of one-liners toward Arizona's senior senator, who has a comfortable advantage in fundraising and polling less than two weeks before early voting begins.

McCain's reply: "There he goes again. Facts are stubborn things." He touted his ability to lead and hammered Hayworth for his record in congress and his work as a registered lobbyist and infomercial pitchman after losing his re-election bid in 2006.

Feds launch largest Medicare fraud bust

MIAMI (AP) — Elderly Russian immigrants lined up to take kickbacks from the backroom of a Brooklyn clinic. Claims flooded in from Miami for HIV treatments that never occurred. One professional patient was named in nearly 4,000 false Medicare claims.

Authorities said busts carried out this week in Miami, New York City, Detroit, Houston and Baton Rouge, La., were the largest Medicare fraud takedown in history — part of a massive overhaul in the way federal officials are preventing and prosecuting the crimes.

In all, 94 people — including several doctors and nurses — were charged Friday in scams totaling $251 million. Federal authorities, while touting the operation, cautioned the cases represent only a fraction of the estimated $60 billion to $90 billion in Medicare fraud absorbed by taxpayers each year.

For the first time federal officials have the power to overhaul the system under Obama's Affordable Care Act, which gives them authority to stop paying a provider they suspect is fraudulent. Critics have complained the current process did nothing more than rubber-stamp payments to fraudulent providers.

"That world is coming to an end," Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius told The Associated Press after speaking at a health care fraud prevention summit in Miami. "We've got new ways to go after folks that we've never had before."

3-story parking garage partially collapses; at least 1 person trapped

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — Rescuers were digging through the debris of a partially collapsed parking garage early Saturday, hoping to find at least one person who was trapped after a glass canopy attached to a high-rise condominium building fell onto the underground structure two stories below.

A car was pulled from the rubble at around 11 p.m. Friday, more than 12 hours after the collapse, but there was no immediate word on whether anyone was inside.

Police at the scene declined to comment.

Using a remote camera and a robot earlier in the day, rescuers could see one victim in a car on the first level down but couldn't get to the person because they were concerned about the possibility of another collapse at the three-story garage, Hackensack fire Lt. Stephen Lindner said.

Fund benefits family of local Marine

Herald staff report

A local family got a $500 boost from the Veterans Family Fund, a local charity that collects donations from the community to be dispersed to Howard County men and women currently serving in the armed forces.

Marine Cpl. Bridget Rivas and her 19-month-old son, Camron Layne Rivas, were the recipients, with the funds going to the young Marine's parents, who care for Camron while his mother is away.

Rivas is a 2006 graduate of Big Spring High School, joining the United States Marine Corps in September 2007. Having taken her MOS training at Camp Johnson in South Carolina, she is currently stationed at Camp Pendleton, located near San Diego, Calif.

According to Rivas' sister, Anna, the young Marine has had a rather hectic time since her son's birth in 2008.

"She (Bridget) delivered Camron on Dec. 20, 2008," she said. "She came home to Texas for approximately one month after the delivery of her son. She had to get back to base in February and it broke her heart to have to leave her baby boy in Big Spring with my mother and father, but with her schedule as hectic as it is, there was really no other option.

"In September of 2009 she was deployed to Afghanistan for a seven month tour. My parents kept Camron and prayed for her safe return home while sending numerous care packages as often as possible. She arrived back in the United States in April 2010. She was able to stay for about three weeks before having to head back to get back to work. My mom and dad still have my nephew while she tries to get daycare set up for Camron."

Taking care of young Camron is a family affair, according to Rivas.

"My mother is not in the best of health, but she does her best to love and care for Camron, with all of his uncles and aunts helping as often as possible," Rivas said.

"My mom is the primary caregiver and loves this child as if he were her own, and I know it will break their hearts when my sister does take him to California with her. However, we know that he needs to be with his mom during these vitally important childhood years.

"I believe my parents are very deserving of this award for all of their hard work and dedication. Bridget has re-enlisted and we hope for a location closer to home for the next four years. I would like to thank my sister for her bravery and service to this great country of ours and for sacrificing the loss of precious time with her child to allow us to live in freedom. I would also like to thank my parents for the love and dedication they show my nephew while my sister is gone."

To make a donation to the Veterans Family Fund, send or take them to Woodforest National Bank, c/o Veterans Families Acct. 5901848.

Marine Cpl. Bridget Rivas, right, is serving in the military while her family is taking care of her son, Camron.

Two different moods will rule the day. The morning is friendly, fair and diplomatic under the Libra sun. Then the Scorpio moon takes over to fill the evening with intrigue and intensity. You might flirt and converse in the early part of the day, only to find that later in the day your patience for such things runs thin and you'll prefer to get right to the point.

HOLIDAY
MATHIS

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You are ever young. The proof is this: You know a person very well. And yet you are still able to look at this person as though you are seeing him or her for the first time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Each different sound inspires a feeling in you. Your ears will capture tones that bring about a deep feeling. Maybe this happens when you hear the name of a person you love.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You'll have a special power over the opposite sex. You will simply hypnotize them when you talk. You don't have to say anything astounding or particularly intelligent, either. Your talk of food and family will charm all.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). There will be more distractions than main attractions. It's as if you're sitting down to a banquet of appetizers. You might fill up on the bite-sized delights and still feel like you haven't really eaten.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22).

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Thanks to some well-informed and hopelessly trendy friends, you have the 411 on everything hip. This information will prove valuable now, as you take part in an activity that could only happen on this day in time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You could be further along on a project. Recent delays have pushed back your original plans to such a degree that you almost feel like you're starting all over. But no mind -- in the big scheme of things, you're right on schedule.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You have many talents and roles in life, and your activities reflect the many facets of your personality. Someone is trying to figure you out. It takes an equally diverse individual to truly understand you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). The one who has been assisting you will suddenly have other things to attend to. At first you may feel that this person is leaving you high and dry. But it will turn out that you can do quite a lot on your own.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Fruitful partnerships require a level of trust. Some degree of predictability is necessary. Your moods, attitudes and actions are consistent, and this will endear others to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The energy of desire makes life exciting. But too much desire is a burden, and one becomes a slave to the things one wants. Your inner strength and awareness will keep you safe from the dangers of excess.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-

Feb. 18). You know it is an act of love to listen to others, and yet some people are sure to go on and on about topics you care nothing about. Help these people find others who might share their interests.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Assume nothing. Take the time to sense and feel others. Before you interact, pause for a moment of stillness and observation. All communication will be improved.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 18). You become masterful at guiding your emotions and using your passionate energy to create personal charisma and momentum for your projects. August brings a financial bonus. There's a breakthrough in your personal life in September. December brings a grand event. March begins a lucrative professional venture. Libra and Pisces people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 4, 18, 23, 9 and 42.

FORECAST FOR THE WEEK AHEAD: For earthlings accustomed to a one-moon sky, 31 moons seem like an awful lot to keep track of. But that's how many moons Saturn is responsible for -- and there are probably a few more in orbit that we haven't spotted yet. For this reason and so many more, the ringed giant, Saturn, is our symbol of responsibility, commitment and discipline. Saturn's impressive presence demands to be admired and revered. Its magnetic field is extra-strong, as if to pull us all into an orderly line like it does the space rubble and ice that create its magnificent rings. This week Saturn glides into the realm of Libra, the scales of the zodiac. We will be encouraged in the months to come to bring a greater degree of justice to our daily practices. If a system is intrinsically unjust, it will become more obvious that something must be done, and there will be more people inclined to get involved. Diplomacy and harmony will become guiding principles in our interactions, especially on a societal level. We will realize to a greater degree our responsibility to community, state and country.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Chase Crawford took a career-aptitude test in high school that revealed he was best suited for a career in the performing arts. An astrologer would have told him the same thing by looking at his chart. This sensitive Cancer is in touch with the world of human emotion, as actors need to be. He was also born when the moon and Mercury were in Leo, the sign of show business.

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: I work in a relatively small office in California. One of my female co-workers moved out here "to live by the beach and hang with the movie stars." A year later, her husband left, and her daughter has little to do with her. My co-worker finally gave up her pipe dreams and wants to return to her hometown. The problem is, once reality set in, this individual has been sick with some sort of ailment every other day. She rarely finishes a week of work, and she faked a stroke several months ago and then unsuccessfully tried to sue the company. She is a complete drama queen, and worse, when she doesn't come in, we have to do her work. All of us are fed up with her self-indulgent behavior. Last summer, I had to reschedule my vacation twice because she had some desperate issue or was so lonely she needed to spend some time with her out-of-state friends. How am I supposed to deal with this? -- SoCal and So Long by becoming ill and otherwise preoccupying herself. She also is most likely depressed. Does your office have a supervisor or human resources department? Someone in charge should approach this woman and inform her that her on-the-job performance is inadequate and she needs professional help. If the people in charge are unaware of the situation, you and your co-workers can let them know.

Dear SoCal: Your co-worker is having trouble accepting that her fantasy is not real, and she avoids dealing with her situation

Dear Annie: My older sister is on her second marriage, and it is an unhappy, unfulfilling marriage at that. No one can figure out why she stays with this deadbeat. I have been married three times and now have met and am engaged to a wonderful man. My problem is, whenever my sister has the slightest opportunity to bring up my three prior marriages in front of other people, she seizes the moment with vigor. So far, I've been a good sport about it, laughing at the jokes, but it's truly getting old. I'd like to tell her to quit harping on my marriage record and concentrate on her own. At least I had enough sense to end something that wasn't working.

Please advise a nice but direct way of letting her know that this is really beginning to annoy me. -- No Longer Kissing Frogs

Dear Kissing: People who belittle others are often trying to cover their own insecurities. We suspect your sister harps on your multiple marriages in order to deflect attention away from the inadequacies of the one she has to live with every day. The next time she does this, take your sister aside privately. Tell her that the constant put downs are irritating and hurtful and, worse, make it seem as if she has something to hide in her own marriage. Tell her you are worried about her. Ask, with great sympathy, whether she needs the name of a good marriage counselor. That should settle her hash.

Dear Annie: I'd like to add my comments to the letter from "Want My Girls Home," who resents that her mother-in-law is pressuring her to let her take the 11-year-old granddaughter on a vacation alone. We have been taking our 12 grandchildren for individual vacations beginning when they reach 11 (perfect age), and it took us 17 years to do them all. They now tell us it was the highlight of their childhood and the best vacation they ever had. That mother should trust her 11-year-old daughter. She will learn so much and, under the guidance of wise grandparents, will grow up a wee bit because she has been allowed to make some choices on her own while traveling. Let her spread her wings. -- Been There, Done That

Dear Been There: You sound like loving grandparents, and it's good that your children understand that such vacations can be wonderful experiences for everyone. Annie's Mailbox is written by Kathy Mitchell and Marcy Sugar, longtime editors of the Ann Landers column.

Battling The Blob from Coast Guard post

HOUMA, La. (AP) — Inside a sprawling command post in southern Louisiana, The Blob is everywhere.

It stains the many maps tacked to white walls. Computer monitors beam satellite images of it floating in the Gulf of Mexico, a magenta mass that looks more like an island than the colossal oil slick that it is. It sometimes changes shape on these screens, or breaks off into bits and pieces, but The Blob itself never vanishes.

Coast Guard Capt. Roger Laferriere oversees this command center, coordinating the unprecedented cleanup of oil off of the Louisiana coast. There are other posts like it in Mobile, Ala., and Miami, but none has more manpower, equipment — or more of The Blob, as Laferriere and his staff have christened their enemy — than this base inside what once was a BP training facility for offshore oil production.

On any given day, some 40,000 people are working all along the Gulf Coast to track where the oil is headed, lay protective boom, skim what they can and clean shorelines; nearly half of them are under what is known as the Houma Incident Command Post.

Some are analysts who sit in darkened rooms at the BP warehouse, feeding satellite data into computerized maps that show where the oil is moving, what marshes have already been boomed and what areas skimmers are toiling.

Others — many of them shrimpers and fishermen turned cleanup contractors — work out of quaint docks converted into “forward operating bases,” hitting the water after sun-up to do the hands-on tasks necessary to contain and clear the oil. There’s displaced boom to be repositioned. Torn boom to be picked up, brought to shore and repaired. Absorbent boom soaked through on one side that must be turned or swapped out.

The spilling may have stopped at least for now, but their work goes on. Before a new cap fitted onto the busted wellhead corked the leak this past week, anywhere from 92 million to 184 million gallons of oil had gushed into the sea. Somehow, it’s got to be cleaned up.

Leading that effort for the Louisiana coastline is Laferriere, a man of boundless energy and confidence who holds a degree in environmental science and has worked any number of oil spills big and small — from Exxon Valdez to the post-Hurricane Katrina spills that dumped more than 8 million gallons.

Securing the leak does little to change his mission over the next weeks and months. “Even given that,” he says, “we’ve still got a lot of oil on the water.”

“We’re going to continue to push forward until all the oil is removed and the people of Louisiana can get back to their way of life. We’re going to be here until the end.”

Laferriere’s job is to not only coordinate efforts on the ground, but to meet with parish presidents, city councilmen and mayors, to answer their many questions, and to fend off criticism that not enough has been done to stop and capture the crude.

“Not enough” is something he’s heard a lot since arriving in Louisiana on May 22, almost a month to the day after the Deepwater Horizon explosion. It may be a complaint that there’s not enough boom, or not enough skimmers, or not enough boots on the ground to pitch in.

And so he’s made it his job to explain to anyone who will listen just how this all works — which methods clean the most oil fastest and the many obstacles out there to getting the job done. One day it could be a thundercloud that shuts down work. The next, high waves that prevent vessels from skimming. Or a full moon that makes sea states even more challenging.

Coast Guard Capt. Meredith Austin is Laferriere’s No. 2 and runs the daily operations of the command center.

“Normally when you do an oil spill response, you have a release of oil ... but at some point in the near term, the source stops and then you know: This is what I’m fighting. You’ve got to skim as much as you can and burn as much as you can, do protective booming and clean up what’s on the beach. This one, you’re doing that every day but you don’t know when it’s going to end” once and for all, she says. “We get up every day and say, ‘Who’s the enemy today? What does the blob of oil look like today? Let’s go attack it.’”

The surface slick from the oil covered 2,700 square miles on Thursday — down sharply from its peak on June 14 but still an area slightly larger than Delaware, says Hans Graber, who has been tracking its movements via satellite imagery from the University of Miami’s Center for Southeastern Tropical Advanced Remote Sensing. Although the heart of the slick has fluctuated with weather and the amount of oil coming out of the seafloor, Graber says 44,000 square miles of the Gulf have seen significant amounts of oil pass through.

Even if the cap holds and no more oil spills, Coast Guard officials say cleaning what’s left of the oil offshore could take anywhere from several weeks to several months.

Long-term restoration of soiled marshes and other affected areas could take years, depending on the extent of damage.

Barring bad weather, which itself can be a regular occurrence, the command post routine rarely changes: Mornings start with spotter flights to get a sense of where the oil is on any given day. While much of it remains amassed near the wellhead, other so-called streamers and ribbons have broken off and made their way into inlets such as Barataria Bay, forcing crews to constantly monitor the moving oil and shift resources as necessary.

Data integration teams update computerized maps to depict where the slick has spread and to help operations managers in Houma communicate with nine forward operating bases scattered across the coastal parishes to determine where skimmers and boom-tenders should focus their efforts. Weather forecasters keep an eye on storms and tides, to help decide whether it’s an optimal day to burn some of the oil closest to the explosion site or use chemical dispersants to break it up.

It’s a complicated effort that can be set off course merely by big waves or high winds. To understand how and why, consider the three primary ways the oil is removed from the water’s surface.

The first is skimming, and the Coast Guard has deployed a combination of vessels all across the Gulf Coast to help with the task. Closer to the source of the spill itself are some 19 to 23 Weir skimmers, which draw oil up through suction pumps and into tanks. Smaller skimmers, including ones that use drums to absorb the oil and others equipped with squeegee-like devices, work in shallow waters closer to shore.

Woman accused of public urination in bizarre spree

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Wichita police say a woman is in big trouble after going on a bizarre crime spree earlier this week. Police Capt. Darrell Atteberry says the woman pulled into the driveway of a home around 8:20 p.m. Wednesday, where she got out and urinated in the yard. He says she then slapped her 3-year-old son several times before driving to a second home, where she tried in vain to run over a man.

Police say from there she went to a third home and ran over a mailbox before being stopped in front of a fourth residence.

Atteberry says she was booked on preliminary charges of aggravated assault, child endangerment, child abuse, urinating in public, transporting an open container, drunken driving and possession of marijuana.

Two young children riding with her were taken into protective custody.

No more debating in your underwear in Colorado town

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — The days when a citizen could address the Boulder City Council wearing only underwear may be over.

The council will vote on new decorum rules in September, seven months after a resident stepped up to a microphone in his boxers.

The rules were already under review, but that incident led to a proposed ban on undressing during meetings.

It's not the first time the university town has wrestled with how much clothing is enough. In April, the city barred teens and adults from showing their genitals in public. That could put the wraps on two annual traditions that involve running or cycling naked.

But the council declined to outlaw topless females, despite complaints about a woman who gardens in a thong and gloves.

New Jersey man accused of using fake cash to pay bail

CINNAMINSON, N.J. (AP) — Authorities say a New Jersey man charged with shoplifting paid his bail with phony money and returned to demand a refund.

Twenty-five-year-old Ronald White of Camden was arrested July 7, accused of shoplifting at a clothing store and supermarket in Cinnaminson.

White was locked up for having two outstanding warrants and paid $400 bail in cash.

Police later realized the money was fake.

Before they could find him, White showed up and argued his bail should have been only $200. He wanted $200 back.

White was charged with counterfeiting and put in Burlington County Jail on $5,000 bail.

Is human trafficking a punishable crime?

Human trafficking is considered a federal crime in the U.S. under the Trafficking Victims Protection Act (TVPA) of 2000. The Trafficking Victims Protection Act was reauthorized in 2003 providing an additional $200 million to be spent on fighting domestic human trafficking.

Trafficking Victims Protection Act of 2000

The Trafficking Victims Protection Act of 2000 describes "severe forms of trafficking in persons" as:

- 1) sex trafficking in which a commercial sex act is induced by force, fraud or coercion or in which the person induced to perform such an act is under 18.
- 2) the recruitment, harboring, transportation, provision or obtaining of a person for labor or services, through the use of force, fraud or coercion, for the purpose of subjecting that person to involuntary servitude, peonage, debt bondage or slavery.

Do human trafficking victims qualify for benefits?

A person who is identified by law enforcement as a victim of 'severe forms of trafficking' may be referred for certification from the Health and Human Services Office of Refugee Resettlement.

They may be eligible for:

- Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF)
- Medicaid
- Health Screening
- Supplemental Security Income (SSI)
- Food Stamps
- Refugee Cash and Medical Assistance
- Refugee Social Services
- Immigration Relief-Protection includes T Visa, U Visa, or Continued Presence Status

Human Trafficking

The voice of sexual violence survivors in Texas.

National Sexual Assault Hotline
 Free. Confidential. 24/7. 1-800-656-HOPE

What is human trafficking?

Human trafficking (formerly known as trafficking in persons) is a form of modern-day slavery. It is the illegal trade in human beings through abduction, the use or threat of force, deception, fraud or sale for the purposes of sexual exploitation or forced labor. Victims include women, men and children.

What is the prevalence of human trafficking?

- Between 600,000 and 800,000 people are trafficked across international borders annually.¹
- Between 14,500-17,500 people are trafficked into the U.S annually.²
- Human Trafficking provides organized crime annual profits between $8-10 billion.³
- The U.S. is ranked as the third largest destination country for Trafficking.⁴
- Hundreds of thousands of U.S. citizens are estimated to be trafficked within the U.S.⁵

These are just best estimates. No one really knows the true numbers of trafficking victims.

 3 Ashcroft, 2004
 4 The Polaris Project. (2004). National Trafficking Alert System Criminal Justice Briefing Materials (Version 6), Washington, DC: The Polaris Project
 5 Ibid.

How To Identify a Trafficking Victim

- Why and how did the person come into the country? Many victims have come willingly when promised a good job.
- How was the person recruited? Many victims are recruited by acquaintances from the same ethnic group or country of origin.
- Does the person have identification papers? Many times the traffickers have custody of the victim's documents and identification papers.
- Does the person owe money to their "employer?"
- When encountering a group, does a "spokesperson" tend to speak on the group's behalf and not allow anyone else to converse with authorities?
- Does the person seem submissive or fearful?
- Can you detect any physical or psychological abuse?

Is there a state law prohibiting trafficking?

- The 78th Texas State Legislature passed H.B. 2096 (Penal Code Ch. 20A.02), which prohibits trafficking.
- The law became effective Sept. 1, 2003.
- The offense is a second-degree felony, with an enhancement to a first degree felony for involving a child younger than 14 years of age, or of any trafficking offense that results in the death of a trafficked person.

Why don't trafficking victims just go to the police?

1. Most victims do not speak English and do not understand American culture.
2. Most victims do not know what city or state they are in because they are often forced to move.
3. Most victims have a strong sense of distrust of authorities for fear of deportation or from prior experiences with corruption within the system.
4. Most do not identify themselves as a victim.
5. Confidentiality is vital for victims of human trafficking.

Vatican defends revised abuse rules

VATICANCITY(AP)—The Vatican spokesman defended on Saturday a revised set of rules on clerical sex abuse as an essential and lasting response to abuse cases, but acknowledged the church will need to show long-term commitment if it wants to eradicate the crime.

The Vatican issued its revised in-house rules this week, as it confronts one of the worst scandals in its recent history.

Revelations of rape or other sexual abuse of minors by priests, and of cover-ups by bishops, have been piling up for months.

The new norms target not only priests who molest children, but also those who molest the mentally disabled, and double the statute of limitations for such crimes. But the norms drew criticism by abuse victims.

Vatican spokesman the Rev. Federico

Lombardi maintained that with the new norms, "the church has taken an important step in addressing the question, with responses that will be lasting and have a profound impact."

In comments to Vatican Radio, he appeared to defend the absence of any mention of the need to report abuse to police — one of the main points of contention.

Lombardi said the church, like any large community, must have "clear and well-known laws" that are an "essential guide" and are separate from those of individual countries where the church is present. The rules, which cover the canonical procedures and penalties for the most serious sacramental and moral crimes, were issued Thursday.

But the new rules provide no canonical sanctions for bishops who cover up for abusers.

It's impossible to resist a friendly competition... especially in the kitchen! Oscar Mayer Deli Fresh challenged Boston Chef Chris Schlesinger of East Coast Grill and New Orleans Chef Brian Landry of Galatoire's to create a sandwich using Deli Fresh meats and fresh finds from their local farmers markets. Check out videos featuring Chef Chris and Chef Brian preparing their signature sandwiches on Facebook.com/OscarMayer.

Mayer Deli Fresh Shaved Beef Salami
3 slices Oscar Mayer Deli Fresh Shaved Turkey Pastrami
2 slices Oscar Mayer Deli Fresh Shaved Angus Beef Bologna
1 nine inch sub roll
6 slices of 1/4-inch thick fresh mozzarella
1/2 cup arugula

For Relish

(Makes 2 cups)
2 slices of one inch thick eggplant
1 red pepper, halved and seeded
2 slices of one inch thick red onion
Salt and fresh cracked

black pepper
2 TBSP extra virgin olive oil
1/4 cup balsamic vinegar
1 TSP minced garlic
2 TBSP chopped fresh marjoram

To make the relish, use a bit of the oil to coat the vegetables, then season with the salt and pepper. Grill over medium-high heat for 2-3 minutes per side until golden brown.

Remove and dice into small pieces. Add remaining olive oil, balsamic vinegar, garlic and marjoram. Season with salt and fresh cracked black pepper.

Open sub roll and lay the meat and cheese in equal proportions along the roll. Spread arugula on top and top with a 1/2 cup of the relish on the sandwich. Serve and enjoy!

Note: Be sure to save the leftover relish in the fridge for future sandwiches!

Creole Madame

Makes 1 Sandwich

1 ciabatta roll
6 slices Oscar Mayer Deli Fresh Shaved Honey Ham
1 TBSP Dijon mustard
1 oz shredded cheese or cheese curd
2 slices Creole tomato or other farmers market tomato
1 bundle pea shoots or other sprout
1 TBSP butter
Cooking spray
1 farm fresh egg

Slice ciabatta roll in half and spread the Dijon mustard on the roll. Layer the ham on the roll.

Next, spoon the cheese curd on top of the ham and lay one slice of Creole tomato on each piece of bread. Top the tomatoes with the pea shoots and fold the two halves back together.

Place the roll in a panini press sprayed with cooking spray and set on medium high. While the sandwich is heating through, heat a non-stick skillet over medium heat. Place one tablespoon of butter in the skillet. Once the butter has melted but not browned, crack the egg in the skillet and cook until medium. Remove the sandwich from the press and top with a fried egg. Serve warm and enjoy!

Note: Pea shoots are the young top leaves and tips of vines on a pea plant. They are usually sold in Asian markets or grocery stores.

Cheese Curds are small chunks of cheese solids which have been separated from the natural whey present in milk but not yet pressed into molds to make cheese. They can be found at many grocery stores.
