

Local Tech Ex-Students Organize At Dinner In Hereford Saturday

Approximately 45 Texas Tech ex-students celebrated Texas Tech Day with a dinner in the Jim Hill Hotel in Hereford Saturday, May 12th at 6 o'clock to organize a Tri-County Association composed of Tri-County, Deaf Smith and Pecos counties. Clint Formby of Hereford acted as master of ceremonies.

The ex-student body was elated over the fact that Tech had been voted into the Southwest Conference Saturday morning. A telegram of congratulations was sent to the officials who were responsible for Tech being admitted to the conference.

It was voted to have two meetings a year. One is for the Tri-County organization which is in connection with annual Texas Tech day, and the other is a county meeting, the purpose of which will be to enlist and encourage ex-students of the school. The Castro county meeting will be held in Dimmitt some time during the Christmas holidays.

Legion Auxiliary To Sell Poppies

Memory of those who gave their lives in defense of America will be honored here and throughout the nation on Poppy Day, May 26, by the wearing of America's memorial flower, the bright red poppy. Millions of Americans will wear the flower on that day as a personal tribute to the nation's war dead.

Plans for the local observance of Poppy Day are being completed under the direction of Mrs. Curtis Tate and Mrs. Ben Hill, Poppy Chairman of Greer H. Estes Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary. A large corps of volunteer workers is being organized to offer poppies on the streets of Dimmitt and Castro County throughout the day. Contributions will be received for the Auxiliary's work for disabled veterans and needy children of veterans.

The poppies which will be worn here have been made by disabled veterans at veterans' hospitals. The flowers are crepe paper replicas of the wild European poppy, which bloomed in such profusion "between the crosses, row on row" in the battlefield cemeteries in France and Belgium. This poppy was adopted by the American Legion and Auxiliary as the memorial flower for World War I dead soon after the close of that war, and now has become the flower of memory for all of America's war dead of all wars.

Cash Way Observes 9th Anniversary

Cashway Food Store in Dimmitt is observing its ninth anniversary this week and next.

The store was first opened in Dimmitt in May, 1947 with Mr. and Mrs. C. W. (Wimpy) Walker as managers. Mr. Walker and a brother-in-law later purchased the Dimmitt and Olton Cashway Stores and have been sole owners ever since.

Cashway Food Store was located for the first eight years in the present Harman's Department Store building and later in the building across the street south from Dimmitt Motor Company. Last September the store completed its new modern brick and tile building in North Dimmitt and moved to its third location.

It is one of the most modern super markets in any town the size of Dimmitt in the Panhandle. "Our business here has always been excellent," Mr. Walker said this week. "In fact, by and large, it has exceeded our expectations. During the past nine years myself and the Cashway staff have become strong boosters of Dimmitt, not only because of the business side, but I don't think we could have located in a better town."

The store is celebrating its anniversary with a sale beginning Friday.

Trash Can Lids To Be Sold Soon By Local JayCeers

Door to Door Selling Campaign to Curb Flies and Mosquitos

Dimmitt Junior Chamber of Commerce will come knocking on every door within the next ten days offering for sale trash can lids.

Geared to stop or at least slow down the swarms of mosquitoes in Dimmitt, the lids will be sold in the 55-gallon drums supplied by the city for waste disposal.

The lids are being manufactured especially for the Dimmitt JayCeers by the Speedy Manufacturing Company in Amarillo and will sell for about $2.50 each. Such a project has been a long-felt need in Dimmitt, not only for health purposes but to stop the spread of trash due to high winds. Such lids were not available in quantity locally, so the JayCeers inaugurated and are sponsoring the selling.

Made of sheet metal, the lids will have handles and will fit around the barrels. They were the most practical available to the JayCeers at a low price.

Exact date of the selling campaign has not been worked out, but is expected to be this weekend or the first of next week. However, if any resident is not contacted by Monday week and wishes to purchase one of the lids, he is urged to call Steve Taylor at telephone number 3, Doyle Thomas at 1 or Bascom Nelson at 88, or contact any local JayCee.

The Story of Nature's Own 'Miracle Fabric':

National Cotton Week: a Tribute to a Great Farm Industry

Although Castro County is in the center of one of the nation's top cotton producing areas, we know little of what happens to it once it leaves the gin.

National Cotton Week, May 14-19, is an opportune time to take note of the many stages cotton must pass through before we can wear it.

Mystery shrouds the origin of cotton's story. Its first written records go back to India in 3000 B. C., but scientists found cotton fabrics in prehistoric Peruvian graves and cotton itself in Utah excavations.

American cultivation of cotton began with the colonization of Virginia in 1607. From this small and simple beginning, cotton moved to today's million farms in 18 states and to scientific methods all along the line, from farm to finished product.

Take an evening dress worn at a local banquet and a man's shirt seen on Dimmitt streets on a Monday morning. Both came from cotton, and with a few variations both followed the same path from farm to retail counter.

Cotton is that versatile. The path began in the fall. A farmer chopped down old cotton plants with a stalk cutter. He turned this residue under to decay and in the spring disked or plowed and bedded the land into rows.

When the ground was warm enough, a mechanical planter opened a small furrow, dropped and covered seed, and packed earth on top. Fertilizer was applied at the same time.

Within 7 to 10 days, seedlings emerged from the soil. Squares or flower buds, formed a month to 6 weeks later. In another three weeks, creamy white blossoms appeared. After three days, each blossom withered and fell, leaving a young ovary. The ovary ripened, enlarged and formed a pod called a cotton boll.

Inside, moist fibers grew. The boll matured, became a giant raindrop in shape, about an inch half long. Between 45 and 65 days after it was formed, the boll opened and fluffy white cotton burst forth.

Many actions helped complete this cycle. When the young plants were a few inches high, part of the plants were thinned out so others would have room to grow. Later the hands probably returned to keep, with the help of several mechanical cultivations, weeds and grass from choking out the crop. Another fertilizer application, or side dressing, was made.

Airplanes or ground equipment may have dusted or sprayed poisons to control insects like boll weevils, thrips, leafworms or aphids.

Late in the season the farmer may have used a chemical to make the plant shed its leaves. This modern practice, called de-foliation, lets sun and air in to hasten boll maturity and make harvesting easier, especially if mechanical strippers are to be used.

Picking at the rate of 200 pounds of seed cotton a day, a laborer in five minutes harvested enough for the man's shirt. Operating at capacity, today's mechanical picker did it in five or six seconds.

At a modern version of the gin invented by young Eli Whitney, whirling saws with small teeth pulled lint from the seed and removed foreign material. The lint left the gin packed tightly into 500-pound bales bound with steel ties.

A cotton merchant examined a sample from the bale. He quoted a price based on color, fiber length and cleanliness of the lint. After the sale, the bale moved to a warehouse to await shipment to a mill. Other bales, destined for overseas shipment, were compressed into smaller sizes.

The textile mill fed cotton from the bale, along with that from several others, into a blending feeder to insure fiber uniformity. Machines called "pickers" removed foreign matter and formed the cotton into rolls, or laps, resembling huge rolls of absorbent cotton about 18 inches thick and 45 inches wide.

The rolls went into a carding machine. It straightened the tangled mass of fibers and shaped them into a thin web and finally into a sliver, a ropelike strand about the diameter of your finger. A comb also straightened and cleaned the slivers.

An action called "drawing" combined several slivers into a strand about the size of an original sliver. The condensed sliver moved to the "spinning" first of a series of machines called "roving frames," which twisted the cotton and drew it into a smaller strand or "roving". Finally the roving went to the spinning frame to be drawn out, twisted into yarn of the required size, and wound on bobbins—in a single operation.

Prior to weaving, the yarn was rewound from bobbins into cones or cheeses. Several hundred yards at a time were rewound onto large "warper beams", resembling spools 26 to 36 inches in diameter and four to six feet long. Yarns were coated with a thin layer of starch or other sizing material to prevent breakage and possible injury from chafing in the loom.

After sizing, warp yarns were drawn through the eyes of fine steel wires of the loom harness or tied to the remaining length of an unwoven warp.

From the harness were suspended needles or fine steel wires with an eye through which warp ends were passed at the weaving section of the loom. When one harness was lowered, the other was raised. At this precise moment a shuttle, containing the filling yarn, was driven at a very high speed through the opening between the upper and lower layers of yarns. This harness motion was then reversed. The upper set of threads became the lower, and vice versa, as the shuttle was driven back through the new opening, thus weaving the yarns into fabric.

The cloth—grey goods at this stage—was inspected, graded, and sent to the finishing plant to be bleached, dyed, printed or finished in other ways.

Singeing or gassing to remove loose threads was the first step in the finishing process. Next the cloth was washed to prevent ignition from the heat of the singeing process and to remove starch or other sizing. Another boiling and starching called "elers" and rinsing, and it was ready for bleaching in large stainless steel boxes. Then the fabric was treated with caustic soda in a process called "mercerizing."

Since the cloth had become irregular in width during these processes, it was restored to proper dimensions by "tentering." The damp fabric was run over a frame where it was grasped by tenter hooks on each side and stretched to the desired width.

To remove surface irregularities, the material was sheared by being brought into contact with a series of rotating spiral blades against which the surface was brushed as it passed.

After it was dyed or printed, and starched to impart the basic finish, the cloth was sprinkled and then put through a series of heavy rollers. This step, called calendering, removed wrinkles and gave it a smooth, ironed appearance.

Water spray, steam and heat shirt fabric so it wouldn't shrink, were used in "sanforizing" the fabric. Then it was ready for the manufacturer who cut the cloth and made it into a shirt, for the wholesaler who distributed it to the retailer—and finally for the customer.

Miss Louise Slough, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Slough, is in the Castro County Hospital for observation.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Estes and daughters, Kathy and Karen, visited her parents at Baydon, Oklahoma, last week-end.

The files of the Credit Bureau contain the credit record of every citizen, and every member of the bureau has access to this record.

We consider ourselves fortunate to be listed in "Who's Who" or the Social Register, but our credit record in the files of the Credit Bureau is far more important in our daily lives! In this "Who's Who" of Business are listed the credit records of the citizens of this community: How they pay the grocer, the butcher, the other stores, the physician and the dentist—every credit granter.

The records are constantly revised through reports from members, periodical check-ups, and a close watch over court records and other sources of information.

Here's Where the New Ideas Come From...

General Motors' new Technical Center—largest of its kind in the world—employs 4,000 engineers, scientists and stylists. These vast resources combine with Pontiac's own ultramodern engineering facilities to bring you America's greatest automobile value—Pontiac, a General Motors Masterpiece.

Watch "Wide, Wide World"—NBC-TV, Sunday, May 20—report on GM's new Technical Center.

...and Here's Where they GO!

You'll know the engineers have been up to something special the first time you ask this long, low beauty for action, for here's "go" you can't get anywhere else.

The "go" of the newest in high-compression, high-torque engines—Pontiac's Strato-Streak V-8, so advanced and so efficient it delivered more actual miles per gallon than any other "eight" in the Mobilgas Economy Run!

EDITORIAL COMMENT

WOLF AT THE DOOR . . .

The wolf of competition is knocking at the door of one of the country's greatest agricultural industries, and one that is important to the economy of Castro County.

Millions of dollars are being spent on research and promotion to capture the fiber markets traditionally claimed by cotton. The organized cotton industry, through the National Cotton Council, is fighting this threat head with the same weapons.

National Cotton Week, May 14-19, is sponsored each year by the Council to stimulate the sale of cotton products. Stretches throughout the country and communities all over the Cotton Belt join in this observance. This one of the Council's many projects aimed at protecting markets and expanding consumption of our most important agricultural commodity.

NEW CARS AND FARMS . . .

When an economist wants to find out how the country stands financially, he usually looks up some production figures from the nation's automobile manufacturers.

In our particular situation here in the United States, this is about the best criteria to go by, since most Americans will buy a car before any other luxuries. It is also the best criterion for measuring the degree of financial prosperity to buy a new car is apt to do so.

The same is true here in Castro County. For several years now the new car purchases here have fallen off considerably. This is apparently happening in similar rural-type areas all over the nation since manufacturers' warehouses are filling up.

Let's take a look at some of the figures, viz: Despite a cutback of about 30,000 units in car production during April, the number of new cars sold continues to increase. Meanwhile 130,000 auto workers have been laid off to date. Last year 600,000 more new cars were manufactured during the first one-third of the year than this, but the number in storage was lower.

Auto-makers are beginning to feel the wall against their backs. Pay-despite-layoff programs forced on them by the unions last year make it essential that they keep production and sales high with maximum employment. To start slipping could be disastrous.

It pays for us here in the Panhandle to keep our eyes on this not-too-small segment of our economy. When big business starts hurting it won't take it long to spread to us.

As we have said before, there is a weak link somewhere. President Eisenhower has continually camouflaged figures and said our economy remains at the highest level yet. He and Secretary of Agriculture Benson lauded the Republican farm program last year for bringing about an average farm family income of around $800 per year.

If the final analysis we might just find the weak link to be the farm economy. All though Castro County ranked 10th in the state in agricultural income, the net income remained low due to our high costs of production. Without this net income we cannot buy new cars or other luxuries.

With the buying potential of the nation's farmers lowered, then comes the lay-offs and curtailed production figures of our producers. When they lay off workers, this also takes their income out of circulation, causing even lessened buying power and further layoffs in other fields.

This one segment of our economy—farming—could touch off another depression much more severe than the '30's. Every major group must stay on the same plane to maintain the necessary equilibrium. The governmental administration has spent so much time bungling the job of trying to lower surpluses, they could very well cause a setback that would take years to recover from.

Just because Detroit is a long way off and we don't particularly care what happens to the new car producers, doesn't mean we can ignore what they are doing. A depression could cover a lot of distance in a hurry and these producers are the ones who are the key piece of the puzzle.
