"They only gave us one day of notice," Wiseman said. "According to Carl Rogers, the manager of the facility, there were a number of different reasons for the closing, the first being a lack of forensic pathologists in the area. He told me that between five nearby universities, there were no applicants for those classes. Hints from Heloise

A Renter's Guide

Dear Heloise: I have a few hints for people who are looking for a home to rent. There are so many out there, and it's hard to know which one is the best fit.

 Some landlords take care of the lawn for you, and some don't. If you don't have a lawn mower or other yard equipment, you will want to take this into account.

Heloise

Local/Features

• Furnished or unfurnished? Your landlord may not have the capability to take away and store a washer, dryer or refrigerator that is already in the house. If you have one, this may be a problem.

• Have pets? It might be best to find a house that doesn't have carpeting. Dogs can put some wear and tear on certain types of carpet, and you may end up having to pay for it to be replaced.

• Is an alarm system important to you for security? Be sure to factor this into your decision.

• How much can you afford? Be sure to consider whether utilities are included.

— Erin in Indiana

Good advice all around! - Heloise

Repurposing old tie rack

Dear Heloise: I repurposed a wooden necktie rack. It has 22 wooden pegs and a small hook at each end of the rack. The rack is attached to the wall in our dressing room. My casual, everyday-style necklaces hang neatly and safely out of the way but are easy to get to. The "fancy" jewelry still goes in the jewelry case. I wear my necklaces more when I don't have to hunt for them. — Mary, via e-mail

Quilter's storage

Dear Heloise: As a new quilter, I felt like I was spending a small fortune to get started: new sewing machine (mine was 30 years old), fabric, notions, patterns, classes, etc. The best tip I got came from the first class I attended. Rather than spending money on a nice plastic box to contain completed blocks before piecing, I purchased a new, unused pizza box from our local pizzeria for 25 cents! — Debbie, via e-mail

Travel hint

Dear Heloise: Our family takes a vacation at least once a year, and here is one of my favorite, easy-to-do travel hints. I take along plenty of anti-germ gel. I use it when we get into our motel/hotel room for door handles, toilet flusher, light switches, etc., to eliminate any germs that may have survived.

I also pack several plastic grocery bags for bathing suits, towels or shoes that may not be completely dry when we are ready to leave. At the next stop, I do a load of laundry to prevent moldy clothes. - Samantha S., via email

Quick bib

Dear Heloise: In taking care of an elderly lady who needed a bib, I cut a hole just large enough to fit over her head in the middle of an old towel. -B.G. in San Antonio a million-dollar mansion, a quaint lake house or a simple fishing cabin — say they hope to rebuild and get back to watching the wildlife and whiling away the hours with loved ones.

"Possum Kingdom is a state of mind," said Carolyn Bennis, whose dream house was destroyed in the fire that has charred nearly 150 square miles in three North Texas counties. "It's not necessarilv a place. It's just your heart and you just get addicted to it." Firefighters have contained about a fourth of the blaze, and U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman Janice Gakin said law enforcement officers will escort residents into parts of the area to view the devastation firsthand Friday. The fire that erupted a week ago near the lake about 70 miles west of Fort Worth has destroyed about 160 of the community's 3,000 homes — mostly belonging people who lived there on weekends or during the summer. "It will be years before this is back to what it used to be," said Palo Pinto County Sheriff Ira Mercer, standing near a blackened field where the smell of smoke was thick and wind gusts blew ashes in the air.

The blaze is one of several burning in the drought-stricken state, including two massive wildfires in West Texas. Since Jan. 1, wildfires have scorched more than 1.4 million acres in the state and led to the deaths of two firefighters.

Bennis' three-bedroom

Bennis and her husband will rebuild.

"Possum Kingdom is just a big deal for us," she said. "It's not just our house. It's where our heart is."

One home in the area was destroyed except for three scorched walls left standing — and its garage untouched by the flames. A stone fireplace was the only thing that survived next door. On another cliff across the cove, a fireplace towered over the heap that remained of the burnedout home, while an upscale house next door was not damaged. Some docks and boats in the lake below showed no signs of the fire. In some places, the blaze blackened fields down to the soil and charred trees, burning away even their branches. In others, trees and shrubs were untouched and a few wildflowers grew on the roadside. The fire also destroyed John McPherson's 1960s fishing cabin near Hell's Gate Cove — which he'd finally bought in December after leasing for about four years, he said. McPherson, who lives in Abilene, said it had the same great views as nearby mansions "without the million dollar price tag." Because he had no insurance, all he has left is eight-tenths of an acre, a dock and the scorched and warped metal roof he put on just last summer.

The mid-week cooler temperatures and high humidity that helped North Texas firefighters were expected to remain through the weekend.

lake house was atop a cliff overlooking Hell's Gate Cove at Possum Kingdom Lake, formed some 70 years ago by damming the Brazos River. Just last month she and her husband sold their larger home in Cleburne and moved their belongings and family heirlooms into the lake house, dividing their time between Possum Kingdom and a small condominium in downtown Fort Worth. She and her husband would watch deer nibble outside the kitchen window, or sit on the deck sipping coffee or wine as migrating pelicans and ducks flew overhead and children splashed in the crystal clear water below. They had a big Easter weekend planned, and her 4-year-old grandson cried when he found out about the fire because he feared he wouldn't be able to hunt eggs. Next year, she told him.

What a birthday to forget about

Editor's Note: This is the fourth part of the ongoing series "Should We Celebrate Our Quincentennial?" and the 23rd part of another series, "America's Hidden Hispanic Heritage." To read previous columns, go to http://www. MiguelPerez.com.

missed another birthday, and most of us didn't even notice!

Whose birthday, you ask? Our own!

On April 2, all Americans should have celebrated the 498th anniversary of the discovery of the land that came to be known as the United States of America.

I know. History books tell us that April 2, 1513, was the day Juan Ponce de León first sighted and named Florida.

But unfortunately, we simply assume that it was only the peninsula we now know as the state of Florida.

In fact. Ponce de León and his Spanish conquistadors discovered our country!

Yet instead of the national celebration this date deserves, instead of a federal holiday, what we get is a birthday that many of us tend to forget and the rest of us don't even recognize.

Sure, there are some good events in Florida. On April 2-3, at the Fountain of Youth Archaeological Park in St. Augustine, the living history group La Compañía de Juan Ponce de León, a group created to portray "The Company of Juan Ponce de León," presented a re-enactment of a 16th-century Spanish encampment, and there were lectures by distinguished scholars and special activities for the children.

Bravo! But unfortunately, these events are so small and so local that the rest of us are not even aware of them.

And two years from now, when we reach our quincentennial in 2013, will we be ready to celebrate our 500th birthday?

Shouldn't we be planning a big series of national events to commemorate our own American roots?

Could we be holding back because those roots are Hispanic? Could it be part of that centuriesold campaign to minimize the accomplishments of the Spanish conquistadors and their descendants — known as The Black Legend?

From the moment Ponce de León and his men first sighted the North American mainland on April 2, 1513, and first stepped ashore on April 3, European scholars and mapmakers used the word "Florida" to describe the territory now known as the continental United States. Yet nowadays, we limit their discovery only to the Florida Peninsula.

Why? Could it be that The Black Legend is still alive in the 21st century? Still hiding our Hispanic heritage in this country?

Of course, these are rhetorical questions.

Otherwise we would be getting ready for a huge quincentennial celebration, wouldn't we?

Instead, what we see is much more emphasis and preparation for the 450th anniversary of the founding of St. Augustine which doesn't even come until two years later.

Some background: The city of St. Augustine was founded by Spanish conquistadors led by Pedro Menéndez de Avilés 52 years after Ponce de León discovered the mainland. In 2015, St. Augustine celebrates the 450th anniversary of its establishment as the nation's first city. But in 2013, we celebrate the 500th anniversary of Ponce de León's discovery.

Yet there are bigger and better celebrations planned for 2015 than for 2013. How is that possible?

As wonderful as it may be that St. Augustine will be celebrating its 450th birthday and reminding this country that our first city has Spanish roots, how is the birth of our first town more important than the discovery of our nation?

And by the way, more than a celebration of our Spanish heritage, the 2015 events already are planned to focus on the cultural diversity of the city throughout history. You can't blame the city for wanting to recognize its historical diversity and the many ethnic groups that have lived there, but giving more attention to 2015 than 2013 allows The Black Legend to creep back into our lives and continue to minimize the contributions Hispanics have made to this great nation.

Amazingly, when you search online for any kind of reference to a 500th anniversary celebration in 2013, you usually find limited information (perhaps a paragraph) within an article mostly about St. Augustine's great plans for 2015. They tell you the city is planning four years of festivities starting in 2012, including 2013 events in recognition of Ponce de León's great accomplishments, but they make no effort to hide the fact that they are putting the cart before the horse and placing their emphasis on 2015.

This has been mostly the work of the First America Foundation. a nonprofit organization created by the city and geared primarily toward promoting tourism for St. Augustine. But even U.S. Interior Secretary Ken Salazar put the cart before the horse last week, when he named the members of a new federal "St. Augustine 450th Commemoration Commission" to oversee celebrations that, by the way (almost as an afterthought), also include Ponce de León and the discovery of our nation.

It's upside-down!

They are missing the big picture. This should be a huge national celebration, of which St. Augustine could be the center stage — but in 2013, for crying out loud, when they could ask all Americans to celebrate our Discovery Day. And our Spanish roots.

must admit that it took me at least a minute to figure out the Drudge _Report headline: "Paw

Had there been some gruesome animal attack somewhere, alligators eating little girls' arms in Florida, a train accident in Eastern Europe or something else I could worry about as my children travel to places that are literally beyond my world?

I looked at the picture quickly, and I didn't have a clue. Matt Drudge being tasteful about a grisly animal attack by picturing the zookeeper instead of the animal? Not likely.

It was, of course, Tim Pawlenty, putting some part of himself (presumably greater than a paw) in the 2012 presidential race.

I've heard many Republicans sing his praises as governor of Minnesota, and I have no reason to doubt his competence. But to misquote Mario Cuomo, the issue in this race is not competence but ideology — at least on the Republican side.

The candidate who would truly electrify 2012 is Sarah Palin. Like her or hate her, she is way beyond a politician. Snow White to the dwarves, as the Democratic field was referred to in 2007 before Barack Obama (never a dwarf) got in the race.

Here's my guess based on absolutely no inside information. She won't run. She may flirt with it for a while, keeping the press guessing and the cameras flashing, but there's not much talk of her meeting with top fundraisers and trying to lock them up or at least keep them neutral. Palin is making money and drawing crowds of admirers (and also getting paid for that) doing exactly what she wants to do. If she runs, she loses at least two out of three of those things and gains a hostile press corps and all the other candidates shooting at her, to boot. And, being realistic, do you really think she could beat Obama?

Which leaves Mitt Romney as the GOP frontrunner, if for no reason other than that no one can remember who the other potential candidates are.

Right now, Romney looks to be the strongest general election candidate of the group because of his experience with economic issues and his more moderate (Massachusetts) views on social issues. He's not a divisive general election candidate, which makes him a less than ideal candidate in the Republican nomination battle.

The Democrats did it first. The Republicans didn't even know they were doing it until the Christian Coalition had already taken control of the party-nominating apparatus — going to caucuses, voting in primaries, taking the power to pick delegates away from central committees, even as Democrats were attempting to give more power to the insiders. After you lose for a while, pragmatism reasserts itself over ideology.

The nomination process measures different strengths. Even today, with everyone seeing the same news, winning state caucuses and even primaries is a personal exercise. It's more like running for governor every week than it is like running for president. I am proud of the governor I worked for in 1988, and I think he would have been a much better president than he was a presidential candidate. The same may be true of Pawlenty. But getting elected in a national election, which is completely different from the primary process, is a prerequisite to being any kind of president.

Lee Atwater, the late and legendary Republican political operative, used to say there was a little boat with all the people Americans could imagine being president, whether they agreed with them or not. Getting into that boat is a necessary step to winning.

Obama is obviously already in that boat, as was Hillary Clinton. The Republican who is closest to the boat is almost surely Romney, but his nomination is anything but certain.

Fun and games to come, and definitely not the Disney sort.

First Baptist Church, Big Spring

6A

First Baptist Church will be praising the risen Savior Sunday at our 10:50 a.m. worship service.

Tuesdays and Thursdays our Mother's Day Out program provides a place for children, birth through four years of age, to learn about God and provide a time when the mother's can be out.

Wednesday evenings begin with a fellowship meal followed by recreation for the children, as well as RAs, GAs, Step Up and Mission Friends. All mission activities are for children 4 years of age through sixth grade. During this time, our adult and youth have Bible study. The adults meet in the chapel, and the youth have their time together (FLOOD Student Worship) in the youth wing.

Our church conducts services at Marcy Nursing Home on Tuesdays, Parkplace Retirement Living facility on Wednesdays and Parkview Nursing Home on Thursdays. All services begin at 10 a.m.

Sunday school, which offers Bible study for all ages, begins at 9:30 a.m. followed by the morning worship at 10:50.

AWANA, a program that encourages Bible memorization for children four years of age through sixth grade, begins at 5:30 p.m. The evening worship and youth Bible study are at 6 p.m.

Upcoming summer events include Vacation Bible School, mission camps for the children, and camp for our youth.

First Methodist Church

First Methodist continues Holy Week activities with this evening's Tenebrae service, which focuses attention on the last hours of Jesus' life. Beginning at 5:30 p.m. the service features the chancel choir and bell choir presenting traditional and non-traditional Holy Week music infused with elements of intense drama. The presentation will also include reading the stations of the cross scriptures and a 12-piece wind ensemble.

Easter morning services will be led by our pastor, the Rev. Sharon Wiese at 8:30 and 10:50.

A fresh flower cross will be decorated for each of the morning services. Flowers for the late service should be here by 10 a.m. Plan to bring flowers from your garden for this beautiful and personal expression of new life.

Both of the Easter services will include the Crown of Thorns praise team along with the chancel and bell hoirs singing an eclectic variety of celebration music for the resurrection of Christ. A 12-piece wind ensemble will also be featured. This group features current students and alumni from the College of Music at North Texas University, music department of Hardin-Simmons University and the Moores School of Music at the University of Houston; all are brothers in the Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonie Fraternity of America.

Sunday evening's snack supper, fun night, youth activities and Bible studies are cancelled for Easter weekend. The church offices will be closed until Monday. We gather at 5:30 p.m. for popcorn, fellowship and discussion. The movie begins at 6 p.m. followed with a brief discussion of the designated topic. Recent movies include: Ben-Hur (A Tale of the Christ), Apollo 13, Stagecoach, Dave, Zulu, To Kill A Mockingbird, Mr. Smith Goes to Washington, The Empire Strikes Back and Heaven Can Wait.

We continue to collect supplies for the Candalaria Medical Mission. The mission is in need of cough syrups (adult and children's), aspirin and Tylenol (adult and children's), band-aids, rice, beans and powdered milk among many other needs. A complete list can be found at the Church.

For more information about St. Mary's Episcopal Church call 267-8201. St. Mary's is located at 1001 South Goliad.

College Baptist Church

This past Sunday the youth of College Baptist led the morning worship services. They had spent the weekend in a group, going into different homes of youth leaders and volunteers. The activities, food served, music and mentoring was all geared to these young people. They came out of this weekend, renewed in faith and ready to reach out to others. This weekend is called, Disciple Now.

Our pastor's son, Johnathan McMeans, a young man studying to be a minister, preached the sermon Sunday morning. He reminded the church of the importance of keeping a close relationship between the youth and adults of the church.

Easter is Sunday and our adult choir, under the direction of Jamie Scott, will be bringing the musical,"The King is Coming" during the morning service and Pastor Ken McMeans will bring an Easter message. This will be a celebration of our risen Lord and you are invited to attend.

Never dangle a participle...

ops! It happened again. Another dangling participle made it into print, producing laughable results. While most people don't care where these verbs ending in "ing" or "ed" are hung in a sentence, English teachers everywhere rant and rave about such egregious errors. They even clip such blunders out of newspapers and magazines to show their students what can happen when participles are misplaced.

In all fairness to the reporter who dangled the participle to which I refer, the article was an emotional piece about an elderly rancher who had lost his childhood home in a recent West-Texas wildfire. The story in- on the back porch while cluded many quotes and porch with the family dog, playing the fiddle.

While I am certainly not an expert on canine behavior, I have never seen a dog that could play the fiddle. I shared the line in question with my English-teacher husband and we both laughed at the thought of a family sitting around the dog played the fiddle. We wondered if he sang along while he played.

We live in a society where the rules of grammar are taken lightly by some and totally disregarded by others. However, disrespect for proper grammar is only a symptom of a much larger problem. When we ignore rules and laws in any area of life, we selfishly show disrespect for authority and for other people. Rebellion is a small seed that takes root quickly and spreads rapidly, choking out the positive influences in our lives.

In the spiritual realm, the scripture encourages keeping God's laws: "How blessed are those whose way is blameless, Who walk in the law of the Lord. How blessed are those who observe His testimonies, Who seek Him with all their heart" (Psalm 119:1-2 NASB).

Perhaps dangling a participle isn't the most horrific mistake any of us will ever make, but we should all be concerned about our speech and our behavior. We are promised a blessing when we walk in God's law and seek him with all our hearts. Like the Psalmist, our goal should be to stand blameless in God's sight.

Reflections was twenty-nine vears old when my father died. Only hours before his death, I spoke with him. Our eyes met one another, the same eye contact I had with him from my birth. I held his hand

took his body from the hospital room where our family had waited through the night. My mother, brothers and I visited the funeral home and chose a casket. Shortly afterward other family and friends joined us to view his body lying still and quiet, dressed in his familiar suit, his hair combed. I stood by the casket and stared at his face. It was obvious another hand had combed his hair and another hand had tied his tie. He seemed to be sleeping. I almost imagined him drawing breath. Almost imagined him opening his eyes that sparkled once again with life, his lips parting in the familiar grin, the dimples reappearing in his cheeks. But he didn't move. We buried his body in the cemetery thirty-five years ago surrounded by friends who came to comfort us, many of whom are now buried beside him.

I asked myself the question Job asked centuries ago, the question every man and woman must ultimately ask when they stand where I stood on that day, "If a man die, shall he live again?"

Job's struggle with the question was not ter.com. about theology or philosophy. His struggle was like mine. It was personal. It is the struggle we all must face sooner or later when those whom we love die. "At least there is hope for a tree," Job said, "If it is cut down it will sprout again. .. Its' roots may grow old in the ground and its stump die in the soil. yet at the scent of water it will bud and put forth shoots like a plant. But a man dies and is laid low; he breathes his last and is no more."

The world will ponder Job's question this weekend when we gath er in Christian church es around the world. If Jesus was raised from the dead, the answer to life's most important question is clear. Luke wrote, "After his suffering, he presented himself to them and gave many convincing proofs that he was alive. He appeared to them over a period of forty days and spoke about the kingdom of God." John wrote "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked at and our hands have touched—this we proclaim concerning the Word of life."

After having pondered the question we all must ponder, Job foresaw the event we celebrate this week. He wrote, "I know that my redeemer lives, and that in the end he will stand on the earth. And after my skin has been destroyed, yet in my flesh I will see God; I myself will see him with my own eyes—I, and not another. How my heart yearns within me!"

Japan plans to build as many as 100,000 temporary homes for survivors of tsunami, quake

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's government proposed a special $50 billion (4 trillion yen) budget to help finance reconstruction efforts and plans to build 100,000 temporary homes for survivors of last month's devastating earthquake and tsunami.

The twin disasters destroyed roads, ports, farms and homes and crippled a nuclear power plant that forced tens of thousands of more people to evacuate their houses for at least several months. The government said the damage could cost $309 billion, making it the world's most expensive natural disaster.

The government approved an extra $50 billion (4 trillion yen) to help finance the rebuilding, in what is expected to be only the first installment of reconstruction funding. About $15 billion (1.2 trillion yen) will go to fixing roads and ports and more than $8.5 billion (700 billion yen) will go to build temporary homes and clearing rubble.

More than 27,000 people are dead or missing after the earthquake and tsunami hit northern Japan on March 11. About 135,000 survivors are living in 2,500 shelters set up in schools and community centers.

Army tests new uniform for women, works to develop body armor that better fits female GIs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Imagine U.S. combat troops and aviators wearing body armor that fits so poorly that it's tough to position a weapon to shoot, combat uniforms with knee pads that hit around mid-shin and flight suits that make it nearly impossible to urinate while in flight.

For many female troops, it's just another day on the battlefield as they wear clothing and protective gear designed primarily for men. Each of these issues is now getting some attention from the military.

Seven hundred female Army troops are testing a new combat uniform for women with shorter sleeves and knee pads in the right place for their generally shorter legs. A committee on women's issues has recommended that flight suits be redesigned for both men and women so it's unnecessary to completely disrobe before urinating. And engineers have been looking at ways to design body armor that better fits the contours of a woman's body.

Some military women are reluctant to embrace changes that would set them apart from their male colleagues, but several former and current military women said the changes certainly beat the consequences of the current one-piece flight suits or being unable to engage in battle or defend themselves because of uncooperative gear.

Female troops are about 20 percent more likely than their male counterparts to report musculoskeletal disorders, and poorly fitting body armor could at least in part be a factor. For female aviators, dehydration can be a hazard if they opt not to drink water before flights, and those who wait too long to use the bathroom can experience urinary problems.

Obama pushing long-term deficit plans while public still looks for short-term economic gains

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Barack Obama came to the West Coast looking to sell a longterm plan for reducing the nation's deficit. But he couldn't escape the reality that many Americans are still waiting for short-term solutions to their economic problems, from persistent unemployment to the crippled housing market.

Voters in California and Nevada did express both an interest and an understanding about the need for deficit reduction. Yet they made clear that the economic recovery that's given Washington lawmakers the space to start discussing longer-term fiscal matters still hasn't fully taken hold in ways that are meaningful to them.

Obama long has said he knows the economic recovery hasn't come to many parts of the country. But as he shifts into re-election mode, his challenge will be to show the public that he's still focused on issues like job creation, even as the conversation in Washington changes to how to bring down the nation's massive debt.

Dear Annie: Several weeks ago, something happened that keeps bugging me. My husband and I were riding in his car when I noticed a book he had been reading on the front floorboard. I picked it up and asked how he liked it. He said it was interesting and he was almost finished. I thought I might want to read it, too, so I flipped to the spot where he had marked his progress with a large card in an envelope. To my surprise, the envelope had his name written on it in a feminine hand with a fancy flourish. I asked what it was, and he said it was just his bookmark. I am ashamed to say that an hour later I went back to the car to check it out, but the card and envelope had been removed and a blank piece of paper was in their place. My husband and I have had marital problems based on his indiscretion with other women. I thought we had moved beyond that awful time, but now I am afraid he is again showing signs of fooling around. I hesitate to ask him about the card again. How can I regain confidence in our relationship and rid myself of the worry that is bugging me? I hate feeling like a mistrusting green-eyed monster. -- Barb Dear Barb: Spouses who have cheated in the past have a responsibility to be honest, transparent and forthcoming in order to regain trust. Your husband owes you an explanation. Otherwise, his behavior seems suspicious and undermines vour marriage. Don't let him off the hook. Ask him about the card. If he makes excuses ("I lost it") or turns the tables and accuses you of being jealous or irrational, it's time to see a counselor, with or without him.

niest guy you'll ever meet, but he has always been a friend to me and nothing more.

My best friend insisted that Patrick liked me as more than a friend, but I didn't believe her until now. Over the past several months, it has finally dawned on me that Patrick has strong feelings for me. All my friends pointed this out. They also said that Patrick had his heart broken before by someone who was painfully honest about not liking him back. He is often depressed because he doesn't have a girlfriend. I have tried to be a good friend to him, but that's not enough, and now I think it might be making things worse. Patrick texts me and tries to contact me every chance he gets. I don't want to hurt him, but I know it's inevitable. An audience member at Obama's town hall meeting at Facebook headquarters in Palo Alto, Calif., on Wednesday aptly summarized how the shift in economic emphasis looks to the public.

Obama's response, both at Facebook and in other appearances pitching his deficit-reduction plan, is that unless lawmakers address the nation's longterm fiscal health, further short-term economic gains could be difficult to come by.

Officials: U.S. missiles kill 25 in NW Pakistan, while militants kill 14 Pakistani troops

ISLAMABAD (AP) — U.S. drones fired a volley of missiles into a militant-held region in Pakistan close to the Afghan border on Friday, killing 25 people, Pakistani intelligence officials said. The strike came a day after Pakistan's army chief denounced such attacks, and could further sour deteriorating relations between Washington and Islamabad.

Ten missiles hit a house in Spinwam village in North Waziristan, a region home to Taliban militants targeting American and NATO troops just across the border in Afghanistan, as well as international al-Qaida terrorists, three intelligence officials said.

America has been regularly firing missiles into the border region for $2\frac{1}{2}$ years now, but does not formally acknowledge the CIA-run program. U.S. officials rarely comment on specific strikes but have said in general terms that they accurately hit militants.

Nevada Sen. John Ensign cites growing Senate ethics investigation in announcing resignation LAS VEGAS (AP) — Republican Sen. John Ensign of Nevada is turning in his official resignation letter Friday, a day after announcing he would step down amid a developing ethics probe he feared would result in further "wear and tear" on himself and his family.

The resignation comes nearly two years after the 52-year-old Ensign said he had an extramarital affair with a former staffer, an acknowledgement that has been surrounded by ethics allegations. Ensign insisted that he's done nothing wrong.

Senate Ethics Committee named a special counsel in February to look into the matter, after the Justice Department and the Federal Election Commission investigated and then dropped their cases.

Forsan's Holdampf state-bound

Herald Staff Report

ODESSA — Austin, here she comes.

Sports

Forsan High School's Sydney Holdampf punched her ticket to the University Interscholastic League's state tennis meet by winning the girls' singles title at the Region I-2A tournament Thursday at the Ratliff Stadium Tennis Complex.

Holdampf, a junior at Forsan, opened second-day play at the tournament by downing Lauren Zacketti of Comfort, 6-1, 6-1, in the semifinal round, then defeated Catherine Stout of Ingram Tom Moore, 6-4, 6-3, to claim the girls' singles title.

This will mark the first trip to the state tournament for Holdampf, who was the topseeded girl at the regional meet.

Her teammate, Kyle Stevenson, was denied a return trip to the state tournament when he was defeated by Jesse Guerra of Tornillo, 5-7, 6-0, 6-1 in the boys' singles semifinals Thursday. Stevenson, also a junior at FHS, then dropped his third-place match with Stefan Wilson of Ozona by a score of 6-0, 6-4.

Holdampf won't be the only area athlete at the state tennis tournament.

At the Region II-1A tournament in Abilene, Grady's boys' doubles team of Johan Wiebe and Anibal Medina placed first in their division, and they will be joined at the state tournament by teammate John Ramirez, who finished second in boys' singles.

Also qualifying for the state tournament was Garden City's mixed doubles team of Aaron Long and Taylor Hughes, who defeated Shane Teague and Kelly Cook of Grady, 7-5, 7-6, for the regional championship. Teague and Cook later lost a play-back match to miss out on a trip to the state meet.

Howard sweeps EPCC to keep pace in WJCAC

Herald Staff Report

The Howard College Hawks' softball team continued to keep pace with their fellow Western Junior College Athletic Conference leaders with a 3-2, 10-1 doubleheader sweep of El Paso Community College Thursday at Foundation Field.

Pitchers Sandra Serna and Selina Mitchell earned wins for the Hawks Thursday.

"We kind of had a slow start (Thursday), but we finally got going," Howard Coach Kelly Raines said. "Every win counts in this conference ... and now we have to win two more today."

The sweep

Howard's WJCAC record to 16-3, good enough for second play in the conference. Howard currently stands one game back of league leader Odessa College, and one game ahead of thirdplace Midland College.

Raines said she wasn't surprised that the top of the conference standings has become so crowded.

"Midland and Odessa always have good teams," she said. "For us to win it, we have to take care of business. You've got to be on your game ... and you can't slip up. But I feel we have a good team, too. This is one of the best teams we've ever had at Howard."

PORTLAND, Ore. -Before Thursday night's playoff game against the Dallas Mavericks, Portland Trail Blazers guard Brandon Roy got a text message from Charles Barkley.

The text encouraged Roy to keep his "head up, have fun out there and stay positive."

Roy, who has struggled in the second half of the season after double knee surgery, had lamented about how he was being treated after playing limited minutes in Game 2.

Boosted by his family and dozens of encouraging texts such as Barkley's, Roy came off the bench and scored 16 points to help the Blazers to a 97-92 victory.

The win narrowed Dallas' lead in the firstround series to 2-1.

"I was playing tonight. I was in go mode," Roy said. "I didn't worry about nothing else. I didn't worry about playing time, I didn't worry about who was playing. When it was my time I was going."

Aldridge added 20 for the Mavericks in Game 4 on Saturday afternoon.

ers split their regularseason series, with each team winning at home twice.

Portland has won 11 of its last 12 at the Rose Garden. Overall against Dallas, the Blazers have a 47-18 advantage at home in the regular season, and they are 7-1 in playoff games.

Reserve Jason Terry had 29 points for the Mavericks, including five 3-pointers. Dirk Nowitzkiadded 25 points and nine rebounds.

The Blazers led by as many as 13 points in the fourth quarter, but Nowitzki hit consecutive jumpers to make it 87-81 midway through the period.

The Hawks face EPCC in another doubleheader today starting at noon at Foundation Field.

Bulldogettes end season with win

DENVER CITY — The Coahoma Bulldogettes kept their playoff hopes alive by routing Denver City, 17-1, in District 3-2A softball action Thursday evening.

The Bulldogettes only collected eight hits, but combined that with 11 walks issued by Denver City pitching to gain the run-rule win.

Pitcher Kyla Clanton earned the win for Coahoma, striking out nine and walking only one in the four-inning game.

Offensively, the Bulldogettes were led by Savannah Neff, who was 2-for-4 at the plate with a double and four runs scored, and Emilea Brumley, who had a 3-RBI double in the first inning.

"We hit the ball pretty well, and Kyla did a good job pitching," Coahoma Coach Tracy Tadlock said. "We pretty much took care of business (Thursday)."

The Bulldogettes (14-20 overall, 7-5 in district play) must now await the results of today's District 3-2A game between league-leader Colorado City and Post, which is currently a half-game ahead of Coahoma in the fight for the third and final playoff spot from the league.

If Post wins, the Lady Antelopes will win the third playoff spot outright.

However, if C-City wins, Coahoma and Post will square off in an extra game to determine the district's final playoff representative. The extra game, if needed, will be played at 5:30 p.m. Monday at Cates Field in Snyder.

Willis takes early lead at The Heritage

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) - Garrett Willis may haveregained his putting touch at The Heritage. He'll need it with some of the world's best trying to chase him down.

Willis used a run of six straight birdies to shoot a 7-under 64 and grab a one-shot lead after completion of the first-round at Harbour Town Golf Links on Friday. The tournament featured seven of the world's top 20 golfers – many within striking distance of the top.

Third-ranked Luke Donald was three shots behind after a 67. The group at 68 included U.S. Open champion Graeme McDowell (No. 5 in the world), Matt Kuchar (No. 10) and defending Heritage champ Jim Furyk (No. 13).

Willis, who's only PGA Tour victory came in his first event at Tucson 10 years ago, is confident he can rise to the challenge.

"I just want to be able to play the golf that I know I'm capable of playing," he said.

He'll need it this week with 24 golfers within four strokes of the lead. Arjun Atwal, Matt Bettencourt, Chad Campbell and Tim Herron were at 65, while Mark Wilson, Camilo Villegas and 2009 Heritage winner Brian Gay were another shot back.

The round was slowed by a rain delay of 2 hours, 16 minutes that forced 18 players to return Friday before starting their second rounds.

Ben Martin made the most of his morning finish with birdies on the 16th and 17th holes for a 67.

Donald could move to No. 1 with a win. The Match Play Championship winner, the highest ranked player in the field, rallied from a sluggish start with three birdies over his final six holes. He'd rather not think about what a victory could mean.

But "a lot of people are telling me about" number one, Donald said. "So it's hard to put out of your brain. But that would be awesome."

It has been a struggle for Willis to keep his pro career going at times since his fast start. He fell to 228th on the PGA Tour money list in 2005 and regained his playing privileges in 2009 with a 12thplace finish on the Nationwide Tour money list.

The putting problems surfaced this season. Willis has made only two cuts in eight tournaments, shooting 78-78 last week for an early exit in the Texas Open. He's 177th in the tour's putting rankings.

"We can't make them all. I'm fully aware of that," he said. "But for some reason some of these guys do week in and week out."

Willis was on a full-out search for a winning replacement putter this week. He brought four putters with him, had three more made at Harbour Town and had his father ship in three more.

closed the gap to 93-87. Aldridge answered with a jumper for the Blazers, but Nowitzki came back after a free throw with a turnaround jumper to make it 95-90 with 42.8 seconds left.

Jason Kidd made a long jumper with 12.9 seconds to go but Dallas ultimately couldn't catch Portland.

Roy, who touched off a minor controversy over the comments he made after playing just 8 minutes in Game 2, came into the game with 2:17 left in the first quarter to a standing ovation.

He made a 21-foot jumper to give the Blazers a 28-23 lead heading into the second.

Thethree-time All-Star underwent arthroscopic surgery on both knees in mid-January. Upon his return, Roy struggled to find his place with the Blazers.

And after sitting for much of Game 2, Roy voiced his frustration to The Oregonian newspa-

"I'd be lying if I said I wasn't a little hurt or disappointed," Roy told the paper. "I just always thought I would be treated a little better. That was a little disappointing for me."

Before Thursday's game, Roy apologized for the comments, saying he was caught up in the emotion of the loss.

"I wasn't nervous," Roy said afterward. "The fans were really supportive. They were cheering for me before I went in the game. That's really big for me. We've been through a lot together and to know that they still have my back was great for me tonight."

Coach Nate McMillan wasn't surprised.

"This is a guy we know is capable of producing, and tonight he did that," McMillan said.

a 10-foot jumper that made it 37-32.

But Portland, elevated by the home crowd, came back to tie it at 41 on Andre Miller's layup. The Blazers went ahead 44-43 on Roy's 3-pointer.

Portland held the lead until Nowitzki's 3-pointer tied it at 52, but Matthews' layup gave the Blazers a 54-52 advantage at halftime.

Matthews had 22points in the first half. Terry, who coach Rick Carlisle sent in off the bench early, led the Mavs with 17.

"Our problems began at the beginning of the game when we got off to a very poor start and their aggressiveness put us on our heels," Carlisle said.

Portland went ahead 85-74 in the fourth after consecutive 3-pointers from Batum and Gerald Wallace.

"We hang our hat on defense," Terry said. "We gave up 95 points to this team, which we hadn't done in the first two games. That's the reason why we lost.

Dallas is 2-1 overall when it has opened a 2-0 lead in 15 previous bestof-7 series. The exception was the 2006 NBA finals, when the Miami Heat defeated the Mavericks in six games. The Heat were just the third team to claim a championship after trailing 0-2.

The last time Dallas and Portland met in the playoffs was 2003. The Mays claimed the first Terry's 3-pointer gave three games before the took the deciding game in Dallas.

MLB took control of the Dodgers Why

NEW YORK (AP) - As he read each report coming from Los Angeles, baseball Commissioner Bud Selig grew more and more concerned.

Dodgers owner Frank McCourt and his wife, Jamie — the team's former chief executive officer — were trading bitter accusations during a three-week divorce trial that centered on which of them owned the franchise of Jackie Robinson, Sandy Koufax and Tommy Lasorda.

Then Frank McCourt fired Dennis Mannion, the team president. Having already burdened the team and its real estate with more than $450 million of debt, McCourt wanted to take out additional loans and was having trouble securing them. He retained a high-powered law firm and wanted to negotiate a new front-loaded television deal that would give the club more cash he might withdraw for himself.

Then on opening day, a San Francisco Giants fan was severely beaten outside Dodger Stadium, highlighting a security problem fans have complained about for years.

The fan remains in a medically induced coma. And there were worries the Dodgers would not make their first player payroll on April 15.

Finally, Selig had enough. He took the extraordinary step Wednesday of saying Major League Baseball was taking over operations of one of America's most famous teams, the

"It wasn't one thing," a high-ranking baseball executive said Thursday, speaking on condition of anonymity because only Selig was authorized to speak on the situation. "It was a series of things that just kept building.'

Once a model, the Dodgers now are just a mess.

The team began play as the Brooklyn Bridegrooms in 1890 (several of the players had gotten married in the leadup to the initial season). The club later became known as the "Trollev Dodgers" - shortened to "Dodgers" and "Superbas" – and was affectionately labeled "Dem Bums" as it failed to win the World Series year after year until its first title in 1955.

After the 1957 season, Walter O'Malley moved the Dodgers to Los Angeles, persuading the Giants to go west with him to San Francisco, and his team became a prototype franchise with a sparkling modern ballpark that regularly led baseball in attendance.

But the Dodgers haven't won a World Series since 1988, when they were still owned by the O'Malley family. The Fox division of Rupert Murdoch's News Corp. bought the team in 1998, then sold it to McCourt in 2004.

Speaking Thursday, a day after his announcement, Selig wouldn't go into details about why he decided to take over the team. He is expected to appoint his new head of the Dodgers early next week, the baseball executive said.

Selig did draw a distinction between the problems of the Dodgers and those of the New York Mets, a team that is not only struggling for cash but is mired in the Bernard Madoff investor fraud scandal. While Mets owners Fred Wilpon and Saul Katz are seeking to sell a minority stake in the team, McCourt was becoming more and more leveraged.

"There are a lot of differences between the Mets' and Dodgers' situations," Selig told the Associated Press Sports "Comparing Editors. the Mets to the Dodgers, not only is it not true, it's just not accurate."

Baseball officials were worried that money coming into the Dodgers from a new deal with Fox would be redirected to McCourt personally and would not be used for team operations.

Steve Soboroff, hired Tuesday as the Dodgers' vice chairman, said baseball's concerned were unjustified and Selig's decision was "irresponsible."

McCourt's planned deal "should be the model for other baseball teams. But Frank is being picked out," Soboroff said. "He said, 'We meet these requirements.' Other teams, like in New York, don't. He's being picked out and selected.'

3B

Now, Soboroff said, any team expediture over $5,000 must be approved by MLB.

Former Dodgers manager Joe Torre said he talked with Selig about the move, and that he hopes it produces a healthy franchise.

League takeovers of troubled teams have occurred in other sports. The NBA purchased the New Orleans Hornets from George Shinn in December. The NHL bought the Phoenix Coyotes in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in November 2009.

In addition, the NHL and lenders to Dallas Stars owner Tom Hicks installed former baseball team executive Tony Tavares as the team president in January.

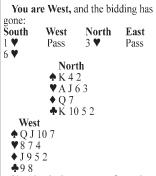

But baseball has never had a situation quite like this.

Test Your Defensive Play

Bridge

Contract 🛓

You lead the queen of spades, won by South with the ace. Declarer cashes the ace of diamonds, plays a low trump to dummy's jack - to which East follows with the nine and then trumps the queen of diamonds. Declarer next cashes the K-Q of trumps, East discarding two diamonds, and then plays the king and another spade. East and South following suit to both spades. You win the spade with the ten. What would you lead now?

A simple count of the three suits declarer has played thus far tells you that he started with precisely three ades, five hearts and one diamond. His other four cards must therefore be clubs. Although you can't be sure precisely which clubs South has, you can assume from the bidding that he must have the ace. Having gotten this far, you place

South with the A-Q-x-x, A-J-x-x or A-x-x-x of clubs. In the first and third cases, it doesn't matter whether you lead a club or give declarer a ruff-and-discard by returning a spade or a diamond. Declarer makes the slam in the first instance and doesn't in the third, regardless of what you do.

This leaves you with the remaining possibility — that declarer might have A-J-x-x, in which case his hand originally looked like: A 9 3 V K Q 10 5 2 ♦A ♣AJ74

It is only after you take the time to visualize declarer's possible club holdings that you find the correct play. After winning the spade with the ten, you continue with the jack of spades (or a diamond).

This allows South to ruff in one hand and discard a club from the other, but he must then guess which way to take the two-way club finesse after he ruffs. He might guess right and he might guess wrong, but that is much better than handing the contract by returning a club after winning the spade.

Selig: Baseball to expand playoffs

NEW YORK (AP) -With both sides expressing support for adding two playoff teams in 2012, negotiators for baseball players and owners are considering having the new wildcard round be best-of-3 or winner-take-all.

Because longer series would push playoffs deeper into cold weather, the sides are not considering have the new first round be best-of-5 of best-of-7.

"I would say we're moving to expanding the playoffs, but there's a myriad of details to work out," Commissioner Bud Selig said Thursday at his annual meeting with the Associated Press Sports Editors. "Ten is a fair number." Since 1995, eight of the 30 baseball teams make the playoffs. In the NFL, 12 of 32 teams make the playoffs. In the new format, the two wild cards in each league would meet, and the winners would advance to the following round against division winners. "The more we've talked about it, I think we're moving inexorably to that," Selig said.

Discussions have taken place as part of collective bargaining for a labor deal to replace the one that expires in December. Players want to make sure the new format doesn't cause lengthy travel with little recovery time.

"We've had a healthy exchange on a number of alternatives," union head Michael Weiner said, "but the sides recognize there has to be a balance of competitive considerations, economic considerations and player safety considerations.

Selig also said he will not consider changing Barry Bonds' records following the slugger's conviction on obstruction of justice last week.

"In life there's always got to be pragmatism," Selig said. "I think that anybody who understands the sport understands exactly why."

Bonds was convicted last week on a single count, with the jury finding he gave an evasive answer to a grand jury in 2003 when asked whether personal trainer Greg Anderson ever gave him anything that required an injection.

happens with the sweet humor represented in this entertainment. Todav is a delightful exception.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). The smoke and mirrors will be effective in diverting your attention, and you'll enjoy the day's illusions. Then something happens that is truly unexplainable. It's the real magic, and you will be properly enchanted.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You don't have time for speculative ventures now. You'll do business with the one who has proved himself time and again. You know the specific result you want to achieve and will settle for no less.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). A kindness will be extended to you by a stranger. This event will inspire you to pay it forward. It could be that you are an unknowing participant in someone's master plan for global peace.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Everything requires maintenance. Your relationships, your body and material your possessions all benefit from the extra care and repair you give them now. 18). You communicate well It's a day of restoration.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). The why isn't as important as the who, what and when. Show up and do what you said you would do, even if your reasons for doing it have changed. The change will be ongoing, but it's important that you keep your word.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You'll work hard and accomplish what you set out to do. There will be a satisfying feeling at the end of the day. It will be as though the mountains and hills burst into song before you as you drive off into the sunset.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). For the sake of your own happiness, you'll change how you think and react to certain situations. You'll give up being right in favor of creating harmony in vour environment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). It will benefit you to be around children and those whose sensibility is creative and childlike. These types will spout just the kind of nonsense that wakes up your brain cells. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb.

and with restraint. Keeping it short actually requires more time. It means you're thoughtful. You decide what is the most important part of your message and edit yourself accordingly.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You'll lighten up by incorporating some silliness into your day. If you don't do this on purpose, the silliness will still happen. It's like the universe is conspiring to make you laugh. Your levity is infectious.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (April 22). In the next six weeks, a burden will be lifted. The air around you changes this year as your aura brightens. You'll get the chance to model good character for loved ones in May. June brings fun and а roller coaster of emotional excitement. Dear Margo: No need to be strangled by family ties

Dear Margo: My younger brother, "George," and I have had a difficult relationship for years. He is highly educated, but unhappy and he's maladjusted, still single in his late 40s, and unable to get along with colleagues, girlfriends or _____ family members for any length of time. George 0 is bright and arrogant with a biting, gatherings. He refused delivery of a birthday present I sent to him, sending me an e-mail saying, "Please leave me saying, "Please leave me alone." Despite all this, my brother wants to maintain a relationship with my kids, and I need to know what to do about it.

The problem is coming to a head because my children are having a joint confirmation party at home this summer – a very small gathering of family and friends. Do I invite my brother? Beleaguered Sister

Dear Be: I think the answer to whether or not to invite your brother to this special occasion can be found in his e-mail to you, refusing the gift: "Please leave me alone.' His personality is his personality, and I must sav your description of your late father answered a few questions. I would let your children decide whether they want a relationship with Uncle George. Given what they've witnessed, they will not be surprised that it cannot take place in your house. — Margo, logically The Dilemma for an apartment to rent because she didn't want to go home for the summer. She says her mom and stepdad are too controlling to live with.

I know they only want the best for her, and I tried telling her that. Not only has she not told her mom she is pregnant, but she requested that I not mention it to her or anyone else. Her mom and I are also close, and when she finds out, she is going to call me and ask if I knew about it. I don't want to be dishonest and say no, but I don't want to betray my cousin's trust, either. - Put in the Middle

Dear Put: Not to go all fortune cookie on you, but life is choices. If your cousin confided in you with the stipulation that you not mention it to anyone, then I suggest you keep your word. Should vour aunt at some point ask you if you knew, the thing to do is 'fess up. But make it plain that you were sworn to secrecy, and vou honored vour cousin's trust. Looking at the big picture, there's nothing your aunt could do about the family "news," so I would let things play out. This way, you are neither lying to anyone nor breaking your word.
