Big Spring Independent School District officials have received federal approval of its new single-member district maps.

BSISD Business Manager Debbie Green said the district recently received a "notice of no objection" to its redistricting plan from the U.S. Department of Justice, meaning the new boundaries will take effect in time for the 2012 trustee elections.

Population and demographic shifts forced the school district to make changes to its single-member districts. Since the 2000 Census, that all-important demographic makeup has changed well beyond federally approved lim-

Officials with the Howard County Sheriff's Office say area residents should remain vigilant as they investigate reports of a possible phone scam where callers are identifying themselves as county employees.

According to Sheriff Stan Parker, the calls have come from a number identified as "private" by caller identification services.

"I have received information a person identifying themselves as an employee of the Howard County Sheriff's Office has been calling local residents," Parker said. "The caller is stating they have found a wallet belonging to

Man and Woman of the Year will be announced at the annual Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce banquet set for Jan. 31.

Of course, for those wanting to submit a nomination, there are a few requirements to remember. "People can nominate those who are out there behind the scenes making things happen here Spring," in Big Chamber Executive Director Debbye ValVerde said. "Those are the people we would like to see nominated. "There are also those in the forefront making things happen. We want to see those people nominated as well." All nominations must be submitted in written form, provided and approved by the selection committee in order to ensure the relevant information is received about the nominee. "In order to make sure it doesn't turn into a popularity vote, the committee will be basing their decision on information provided in the nomination only and not anything else," ValVerde said. Also to be included on the nomination form are the name, address and phone number of the nominator. The person nominating is required to be a member of the Chamber of Commerce, however, the nominee does not have to be, according to the selection criteria. "The winner will be chosen based on all around contributions to the community, not just for extraordinary performance in the person's businesses or employment," ValVerde said. A consistent track record of contributions to the community is recommended for the nominee. Those holding a political office at this time are not eligible for nomination.

"The people nominated for Man and Woman of the Year are very humbled because this is something they want to do for the community and it's not about the recognition for them," ValVerde said. "They are doing what they do because they want to. This is our way of saying thank you to them."

Forms can be picked up at the chamber office or can be faxed or emailed upon re-

Our Views

Christmas is over and a New Year is coming he presents have all been unwrapped, decorations are starting to go back into storage and the lights are starting to come down. The holiday season is starting to wrap up, but there is still one more day this year to celebrate — New Years Eve. Christmas brought us together with families and friends who some may not have seen in awhile. Children were able to visit with Santa and parents were able to watch their children's faces light up Christmas morning as they opened their presents from Santa. Now that Christmas holiday has passed, it is time to start looking back on all the memories made this past year, evaluate the mistakes we each have made and look to the coming year with hope.

Once again, several local businesses will be celebrating the holiday with a few extra days off of work and one last chance to make some memories before the new year arrives.

It is time for each of us to start thinking about new years resolutions. For some, it will involve losing weight, cutting out a bad habit from our daily routine and for others it will be to take on a new hobbie or extend a helping hand to others.

There is no right or wrong New Year's resolution. For some the resolution may be not to even make one this year.

No matter which route you choose to take the important thing to remember is there is a new year fast apporaching and with it comes new doors for each of us to go through. New Years will bring new possibilities, opportunities and a chance for us to take a leap of

'I column as I see 'em; Time is an all too precious thing here is an endless storehouse of clichés and adages about something we actually think very little about outside of our subconscious, that precious and inestimable treasure known as time. Even a casual perusal of that reserve will lend such familiar platitudes as "time flies when you're having fun", "in the nick of time", and

"Rome wasn't built in a day." Then there's a "split second" or "just a cotton pickin' minute," and my personal favorite, the "New York Minute." Surely we all know it's "better to be late than never."

And that's just a few of the seemingly countless number of such familiar references to time.

One thing is certain; as we make the earthly trek from the cradle to the grave time is indeed a very valuable element to consider. It can be used wisely or wasted. It can be immensely productive or absolutely worthless. It all depends on the user. That's us and we need to understand the grave responsibility (pun intended) which we have been entrusted with as the careful and loving caretakers of this priceless gift called time. The Bedford, Texas-born actress Jenna Boyd had a memorable line in a movie she appeared in when she was only 11 years old. When asked by another character if she was afraid of what may be waiting beyond this life, part of her insightful response was "Not of dying, really. It's more that I'm afraid of time. And not having enough of it." (The Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants-Warner Brothers 2005)

I am at that fascinating age where I cherish every minute of every day and unapologetically embrace the wonderful memories I have accumulated thus far on my personal passage through time. It isn't likely you would find those particular memories all that entertaining so I will spare you an insipid narrative related to my own recollections.

I will, however, challenge you to look at yourself in the mirror and honestly answer one question: How am I doing so far with the time I have been allotted? Don't cheat. Tell yourself the truth. It could mean the difference in being a success or failure in almost every area of your life. It's more than simple time management; it's making every minute count (cliché alert) that I believe to be one of the most significant life issues we will ever be faced with.

As difficult as it is to assimilate, we are only days away from the inevitable launch of 2012 and so many things loom on our horizon, both as Americans and as human beings in general. Most of us will commit to some worthwhile New Year's resolutions for the incoming year and many will also fail to realize those things won't just happen as a result of simply making the commitment. Talk is cheap and we usually get what we pay for. It will take a sincere resolution to make those things happen by becoming better stewards of our time. Knowledge may be power, but if we sit in our recliner and talk about how smart we are not much is going to be accomplished.

You may know I am a preacher and any preacher who doesn't practice what he preaches is a hypocrite, so I assure you I have already begun an intense evaluation of how I am using my time.

I need to be more productive and make better use of every minute and hour I have been allotted and I am making some changes. It takes courage and determination to change, but I hope you will join me in the pursuit of excellence in the area of time usage so we will all become better people in every way.

It may involve a lifestyle adiustment for vou or some mental or emotional housecleaning, but the end result of learning to use your time wisely will powerfully impact your personal world and your life will be much more constructive and fruitful. If you don't know it already those are some of the key ingredients to establishing self-worth and contentment.

Against my better judgment I am going to conclude this commentary with yet another timely cliché; "Never put off 'til tomorrow what you can do today".

You may not agree with a thing I've said but I column as I see ith the glut of debate stories safely behind us until human beings actually cast votes in Iowa on Jan. 3, the media now shift their full concentration to what really counts: polls.

Is there really magic in polls?

Polling drives our political process far more than debates do. Debates are just the candidates yakking in real time.

Polls are predictions of the future. They are crystal balls. They are magic.

Pollsters try to deny this, humbly murmuring about how their magic is a mere "snapshot in time." But we don't believe this.

Pollsters are wizards, shamans, diviners. They toss numbers around the way astra-galomancers once tossed bones to foretell events to come. (The name comes from the Greek astragalos, meaning "knucklebone." But you knew that.)

Increasingly, however, pollsters find it difficult to get people to talk to them. This should not be a surprise. Pollsters call us during inconvenient times when they expect us to be home (the dinner hour, for example) and then can ask all sorts of personal questions about our age, sex, religion, party affiliation, income and whom we intend to vote for.

I have never been called by a political pollster and don't know anybody who has, but I know some pollsters, who assure me they don't make the numbers up, and I believe them.

Pollsters, or rather the phonebankers who make call after all (or computers that make robocall after robo-call), do get people to talk to them. Not vast numbers of people, but pollsters do not require vast numbers.

A recent Washington Post-ABC News poll, which is highly respected, tells us that "Gingrich and Romney are each favored by 30 percent of Republicans and Republican-leaning independents."

Also, the "survey shows President Obama receiving his highest approval rating since March ... (and) the number who disapprove of his overall performance has dipped below 50 percent for the first time this fall."

We are a nation of nearly 313 million people. So how many people did the pollsters actually speak to? If you have extremely good eyes, you can find the answer in tiny type at the bottom of a chart: The Post-ABC poll was conducted by phone "among a random sample of 1,005 adults."

That represents 0.0003 percent of the nation at large. (The number of Republicans and Republican-leaning independents was an even smaller sample of 395 people.)

The poll does not tell us how many are registered voters, though it does say in a sidebar story: "The president leads a potential race against former House speaker Newt Gingrich (Ga.) by 51 to 43 percent among registered voters — in part because of an eight-point advantage among independents."

So the poll must have spoken to registered voters and independents, but we don't know how many.

And, frankly, who cares? Most people do not read the fine print. Just as most people, including most journalists, have no idea what the "margin of sampling error" really means, though most good polls tell us that. (The Post-ABC margin was plus or minus 3.5 percentage points for all adults.) As I said, this poll has a very good reputation, and I "believe" the results in that I believe they were calculated carefully and (unlike some partisan or campaign polls) without any agenda.

But in the vast, murky world known as reality, are Gingrich and Mitt Romney really tied 30-30? And, if they are, what different does it make? The primary is not a national contest, but a series of state contests by which the winning candidate amasses

rich by 8 percentage points in a (currently) imaginary matchup? I dunno. Sounds right to me.

Does Obama really lead Ging-

But I am an even smaller sample than 0.0003 percent. Gingrich's drop in the polls one shows him in third place in Iowa behind Ron Paul and Romney — and Obama's rise have become big media talking points over the last few days.

There is little real political analysis anymore. Instead, there are journalists who read polls and try to explain the results: Newt's drop? Attack ads by his opponents are damaging him, people are learning more about him and don't like what they are learning.

Obama's rise? The 21st paragraph of a sidebar story to the Post-ABC poll contains a figure that may be of critical importance: "The new survey finds that most Americans are optimistic about their personal finances, even though gloom continues about prospects for the national economy."

People who are personally optimistic are the kind of people who do not change horses in midstream, especially if they feel the stream is strewn with rocks.

Is this how "most Americans" — based on a survey of 1,005 of them — really feel?

Dunno. But the polls are changing the prism through which the media — both mainstream and social — see events, which changes the national conversation.

You can challenge the accuracy of polls. But you can't challenge their influence.

Authorities identify dead in Christmas shootings

GRAPEVINE (AP) — A 56-year-old suburban Dallas man facing marital and financial problems killed his estranged wife, two teenage children and three other family members on Christmas Day while dressed as Santa Claus before turning the gun on himself, authorities said Tuesdav.

A police spokeswoman said Aziz Yazdanpanah died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound and the six others were shot to death.

Police responding Sunday morning to a 911 call made without anyone on the line found the seven people inside an apartment near Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. It appeared they had been opening presents around their Christmas tree just before the attack.

Yazdanpanah became the focus of detectives after his sport utility vehicle was found outside the apartment and police believe he made the silent 911 call. The slayings have shaken friends and neighbors who knew Yazdanpanah and his wife, both of whom were born in Iran, as well as their two U.S.-born children.

In addition to Yazdanpanah, authorities said those killed were Rahmati, 55: their daughter Nona. 19: their son Ali, 14; Zohreh Rahmaty, 58; Zohreh's husband, Mohamad Hossein Zarei, 59; and their daughter, Sara Fatemeh Zarei, 22.

Brownsville man accused in stem cell scheme

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A Brownsville man is in federal custody facing charges of misrepresenting himself as a doctor and researcher to run an illegal stem cell mail business.

The FBI arrested 52-year-old Francisco Morales in Brownsville last week. A magistrate ordered him held without bond and be transferred to Houston for arraignment before a fed-

Harlingen television station KGBT reports a 19-page indictment unsealed Tuesday alleges Morales posed as a doctor and researcher to buy umbilical cords and placentas from a Del Rio maternity clinic, shipped them to a lab in Arizona and then forwarded them to a pathologist in South Carolina for harvesting of stem cells.

The 15-count indictment says he sold the stems for medical treatments and uses not approved by the federal Food and Drug Administration.

Lubbock hospital VP quits amid embezzlement audit

LUBBOCK (AP) — A vice president at Lubbock's University Medical Center has resigned after a routine internal audit turned up possible employee embezzlement.

The hospital said Tuesday Greg Bruce, its vice president of corporate services, quit. Spokesman Eric Finley told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal he wouldn't comment on the amount of money embezzled, whether Bruce was involved or when the loss was discovered.

Bruce wouldn't elaborate on a statement released by the hospital. He supervised several administrative departments at the hospital for the past six years. The Lubbock County Commission appoints the hospital's board of managers.

Dallas officer shoots, kills, passenger in car

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas police say one person is dead and another in custody after an officer shot a passenger in a car who reached for a handgun as the officer approached.

Police spokeswoman Cpl. Melinda Gutierrez says the fatal shooting occurred Tuesday night as officers responded to a call from a resident who reported a suspicious vehicle parked near a South Dallas intersection.

Gutierrez tells The Dallas Morning News the officer spotted the handgun as he reached the car and when the passenger reached for it, he fired. The passenger was killed. A second person in the car wasn't hurt but was

Laredo authorities investigating fatal fire

LAREDO (AP) — The deaths of a couple found Christmas Day at their Laredo home have authorities puz-

An apparent fire at the home never prompted a 911 call from the occupants or neighbors. Laredo Fire Capt. Eloy Vega tells the Laredo Morning Times that when authorities showed up Sunday night after getting a call about a dead person in the house, the fire already was out.

He says a relative of the victims, identified only as a couple in their 50s, went to the home after calls there weren't answered and reported finding a body. Police then discovered there were two.

Eloy says investigators are trying to find a cause for the blaze. Neighbors say the woman who lived in the home was confined to a wheelchair.

FBI hunting Houston armored car hijacker

HOUSTON (AP) — The FBI is looking for an armed robber who hijacked an armored car making a delivery at a Houston supermarket.

FBI spokeswoman Shauna Dunlap says the van was parked outside a Kroger store when the gunman managed to get inside the vehicle while one of the guards was in the store Tuesday afternoon.

A second guard who had been inside the truck exchanged shots with the hijacker but the gunman got away with the vehicle. No one was injured in the gunfire.

Paul's surge prompting 2nd look from GOP voters

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Ron Paul wants to legalize pot and shut down the Federal Reserve. He thinks the federal government has no authority to outlaw abortion, no business bombing Iran to keep it from acquiring a nuclear weapon, and no justification to print money unless it's backed up by gold bars.

The closer the first votes of the 2012 presidential campaign get, the more competitive the Texas congressman has become. It's a moment his famously fervent supporters have longed for. Plenty of others are asking: What's Ron Paul about, again?

As in his two quixotic prior campaigns for president, Paul has toiled for months as fringe candidate best known for staking out libertarian positions. As every other Republican candidate lined up to attack President Barack Obama's health care law and to promise tax cuts, Paul again demanded audits of the Federal Reserve and a return to the gold standard. Leading in some state polls, Paul is getting a look from mainstream voters in Iowa, where the 76-year-old obstetrician has emerged as a serious contender in the Jan. 3 caucuses — and in other early voting states, should he pull off a victory.

The sudden rush of attention to Paul's resume hasn't been kind. He's spent the past week disowning racist and homophobic screeds in newsletters he published decades ago, including one following the 1992 riots in Los Angeles that read, "Order was only restored in L.A. when it came time for the blacks to collect their welfare checks three days after rioting be-

"Everybody knows I didn't write them and they're not my sentiments, so it's sort of politics as usual," Paul said during a recent Iowa campaign

Looking to cut into Paul's support, rivals laid into him on Tuesday.

In an interview on CNN, Newt Gingrich said Paul holds "views totally outside the mainstream of virtually every decent American." And Rick Santorum chided, "The things most Iowans like about Ron Paul are the things he's least likely to accomplish and the things most Iowans are wor> ried about about Ron Paul are the things he can accomplish."

Paul returns to Iowa on Wednesday, giving his impressive grassorganization in the state last chance to present, and perhaps defend, positions he's staked out over a long political career and reiterated during the 13 Republican debates held this year.

Paul has served a dozen terms in Congress as a Republican, but he espouses views that have made him the face of libertarianism in the U.S. He blames both Republicans and Democrats for running up the federal debt and opposes any U.S. military involvement overseas. He wants to bring home all troops from all U.S. bases abroad.

He vows to do away with five Cabinet-level departments — Commerce, Education, Energy, Housing and Urban Development, and Interior — and repeal the amendment to the Constitution that created the federal income

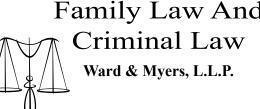

He opposes federal flood insurance and farm subsidies and wants to remove marijuana from the federal list of controlled substances while allowing states to decide how to regulate

Screams, wails in N. Korea as hearse carrying Kim Jong II's body winds way through Pyongyang

PYONGYANG, North Korea (AP) — Tens of thousands of North Koreans lined snow-covered streets on Wednesday, wailing and clutching their chests as a black hearse carried late leader Kim Jong Il's body through the capital for a final farewell that ended with a 21-gun salute.

The funeral procession on a gray, freezing day was accompanied by top military and party officials, but there was little doubt who the leader was. Son and successor Kim Jong Un served as head mourner, walking with one hand on the hearse, the other raised in salute, his head bowed against the State media — which over the past week have called Kim Jong Un "great successor," "supreme leader" and "sagacious leader" — made it clear that the family's hold on power would extend to a third generation, declaring the country in the younger Kim's "warm care."

At the end of the procession, Kim Jong Un again walked along with the limousine with his hand cocked in a salute. He stood head-bowed with top officials as rifles fired 21 times, then saluted again as goose-stepping soldiers carrying flags and rifles

Gingrich sharpens attacks on Romney, Paul, even while promising not to go negative

DYERSVILLE, Iowa (AP) — So much for staying

In just the last 24 hours, Republican presidential hopeful Newt Gingrich has blasted rival Mitt Romney as a "Massachusetts moderate" who isn't "man enough" to take responsibility for the harsh attack ads being run on his behalf. And he lambasted Ron Paul's views as "totally outside the mainstream of virtually every decent American."

Assume you're East, defending against three notrump. Your partner leads the queen of hearts, and before you do anything, you stop to assess the situation. You know declarer has the king of hearts, and the question is whether you should duck your ace, take the ace and return a heart, or take the ace and discontinue the suit. It should not take you very long to conclude that if you allow declarer to gain the lead with the king of hearts at either trick one or trick two, you will almost surely hand him the contract. Dummy's abundance of tricks — at least seven are in plain view — should convince you that your only hope of defeating the contract lies in spades, and that if South is not vulnerable in that suit, you can't stop him. Having reached this of hearts with the ace, and the only remaining question is which spade to lead at trick two.

Ordinarily, with the Q-8-5-2 of spades, you would lead your fourth-best card, the two. But in the present case, where your only chance to beat the contract is to garner four spade tricks at once, you should lead the queen!

As it happens, the queen play is spectacularly successful. You find your partner with the A-J-10-6, and South goes down one before he can even say "good play." Observe that if you return the two of spades instead of the queen, declarer makes the contract by playing the four or the nine from his hand.

Of course, you must be lucky for the queen play to work out so per-fectly, but that is a commodity one must learn to rely on to at least some extent. It certainly offers more hope than allowing declarer to win the first heart, or taking the ace and mechanically returning a heart at trick two, which is tantamount to conceding the

"I am not going to go negative, period," Gingrich said Tuesday at a campaign stop in Dyersville, Iowa, to appreciative murmurs from the crowd that had crammed into the National Farm Toy Museum to hear him speak. That remark came after a CNN interview in which he said he wouldn't vote for Paul if the Texas congressman became the GOP nominee and he mocked Romney for not having the courage to face him in a one-on-one debate.

Health overhaul says free preventive care, but it pays to ask doc first: $1,100 surprises lurk

CHICAGO (AP) — Bill Dunphy thought his colonoscopy would be free.

His insurance company told him it would be covered 100 percent, with no copayment from him and no charge against his deductible. The nation's 1-year-old health law requires most insurance plans to cover all costs for preventive care including colon cancer screening. So Dunphy had the procedure in April.

Then the bill arrived: $1,100.

Dunphy, a 61-year-old Phoenix small business owner, angrily paid it out of his own pocket because of what some prevention advocates call a loophole. His doctor removed two noncancerous polyps during the colonoscopy. So while Dunphy was sedated, his preventive screening turned into a diagnostic procedure. That allowed his insurance company to

Ware, Ratliff selected to Pro Bowl

The thrill is equal, whether it's eight-time invitee Ed Reed or his Baltimore Ravens teammate, newcomer Yanda.

"I am ecstatic, that is really the only thing I can say," said Yanda, a backup at guard to New England's Logan Mankins and Brian Water. "This is such a great honor, something that I never really expected. When I made it to the NFL, I was so happy to be on a team and playing in the league, and now, to be a part of a Pro Bowl team is something very

Or as old hand safety Reed put it Tuesday, "It is definitely an honor and blessing. To come back after an injury last year and to be voted by my peers and fans is special."

There are seven Ravens on the AFC squad, equaling the number of Green Bay Packers for the NFC. But they didn't lead their conferences in voting by players, coaches and fans.

Brady is one of eight Patriots and Patrick Willis one of eight 49ers to make the Jan. 29 game.

Schools object to multi-year scholarship plan

COLUMBIA (AP) — For the second time in less than two weeks, schools are objecting to a reform measure sought by university presidents and endorsed by NCAA president-Mark Emmert.

More than 75 schools are asking to override a plan approved in October to allow multi-vear athletic scholarships rather than the one-year renewable awards schools currently provide. That's the minimum number of dissenters needed for reconsideration by the Division I Board of Directors when it meets next month in Indianapolis at the annual NCAA convention. The NCAA announced the change the Friday before Christmas.

On Dec. 15, the NCAA suspended plans to give athletes a $2,000 stipend for living costs not covered by scholarships after at least 125 schools obiected. The higher number of protests allows the organization to immediately put the change on hold.

Both measures were pushed by Emmert and adopted as emergency legislation after a presidential summit in Au-

"The NCAA and presidents step up with this legislation and then the universities want to vote it down," said Christian Dennie, a former compliance officer at Missouri and Oklahoma who now practices sports law in Fort Worth, Texas, and writes an NCAA oversight blog.

"They say, 'We don't have enough money,' and then the coach gets a $2 million raise," Dennie added, speaking in general terms rather than about a specific school. "It's really a resource allocation is-

Celtics Heat-ed in loss

MIAMI (AP) — Norris Cole stepped to the foul line with 9.3 seconds left, set to clinch the game as cries of "M-V-P! M-V-P" rained down upon him from the sold-out stands.

No, this wasn't a scene from his days at Cleveland

Taking over in just his second NBA game — and with LeBron James, Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh all on the floor, no less — Cole scored 14 of his 20 points in the fourth quarter, including three huge jumpers down the stretch to save the Heat in a 115-107 win over the Boston Celtics on Tuesday night. "You grow up and live for moments like that," Cole said.

James scored 26 points, Wade had 24 points, eight assists and four blocks, and Bosh scored 18 for the Heat, which led by 20 points midway through the third quarter before having its lead twice sliced to three points in the final minutes. And both times, Cole took passes from James and knocked down jumpers, keeping short-handed Boston at bay.

"He's got savvy," Celtics coach Doc Rivers said. "Great pickup."

Lakers avoid an 0-3 start

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After finishing three games in roughly 56 hours with their best effort yet, Kobe Bryant and the Los Angeles Lakers demonstrated why their demise might not be as imminent as many thought.

Bryant scored 26 points, Pau Gasol added 22 points and nine rebounds, and the Lakers avoided just the fourth 0-3 start in franchise history with a 96-71 victory over the Utah Jazz on Tuesday night.

Metta World Peace scored 14 points for the Lakers, who had much more life than the Jazz despite playing their third game in three nights to open the season. Los Angeles ran away with a dominant third quarter, making a 27-8 surge out of halftime in the club's first win for coach Mike Brown.

After a tumultuous preseason under a new coaching staff, several injuries and the NBA's only three-games-in-threenights start, the Lakers realize they're still lacking a consistent identity and a thorough knowledge of Brown's game plan. At least a blowout win over the Jazz allowed them to enjoy their first day off since training camp began.

"We're a very active team," Bryant

Purdue downs Western Michigan in Pizza Bowl

DETROIT (AP) — Purdue coach Danny Hope sold school officials on his vision of winning with special teams when they picked him to replace the retiring Joe Tiller after the 2008 season.

That facet of the game helped the Boilermakers beat Western Michigan 37-32 on Tuesday night in the Little Caesars Bowl.

Purdue recovered two onside kicks and Raheem Mostert returned a kickoff 99 yards for a score that put Purdue up for good midway the second through quarter.

"The spread offense was the edge (with Tiller)," Hope said. "I wanttake a 27-15 lead in the ed our edge to be special first half. teams."

Caleb TerBush took the final snap at Ford Field, sprinted to the sideline and handed the football to Hope, who was recently given a contract extension. "It's a moment that we've been waiting for the last three years," Hope said. The Boilermakers (7-

6) almost didn't beat the Broncos (7-6) despite having a double-digit lead for two-plus quar-Third-string running back Reggie Pegram scored the first two TDs of his career and Carson Wiggs made two field goals to help Purdue to Wiggs also recovered one of his onside kicks, both of which he tapped toward a sideline after running at full speed as if he was trying to boot the ball deep. "Two onside kicks really hurt us," Western Michigan coach Bill Cubit said. "We never got a break on defense in the first half." Purdue had another 12-point lead early in the fourth quarter, but the Big Ten team had to hold on for the win against the Mid-American Conference pro-

The Broncos got the ball with a chance to go ahead, but their comeback hopes ended when quarterback Alex Carder fumbled for his fifth turnover with just under 2 minutes left. Ryan Russell forced the final fumble and Bruce Gaston recovered to seal the win. "It was nerve-racking," Purdue linebacker Joe Holland said. "But as a defender, you want the game to come to you.' The Boilermakers played in a bowl for the first time since 2007, when they beat Central Michigan — also in Detroit.

Michigan, Western meanwhile, fell to 0-5 in postseason play. "I thought we'd win and walk out of here happy," Cubit said.

Purdue's Akeem Shavers ran for a career-high 148 yards on 22 carries, filling in for the injured Ralph Bolden, and was named the game's MVP.

TerBush was 8 of 13 for 101 yards with a 33yard touchdown pass to Gary Bush midway through the third quarter that put Purdue up 34-18. Robert Marve was 6 of 7 for 76 yards with a 1-yard scoring pass to Pegram in the first quarter.

Purdue defensive end Gerald Gooden had two of his team's four interceptions, and gave back one of those two turnovers back to the Broncos in a game filled with miscues and missed opportunities for both teams.

Western Michigan's star receiver, Jordan White, who drew at least one NFL scout to watch him, caught 13 passes including a one-handed grab — for 249 yards and a score. He was given a sixth season of eligibility this year because of injuries. "We're about 10 points from being 10-3," said White, who set MAC marks for yards receiving in a season and career. "I think we had all the pieces to the puzzle but we didn't make it happen on the field." Carder was 31 of 57 for 413 yards with three TDs, but matched a career high with four interceptions.

Annie's Mailbox ®

Dear Annie: My sister is snide and competitive makes hateful comments whenever we're together. She's a bully who has made my life difficult for the past 10 years. I tried to make things right for my parents' sake, until I realized they were too spineless to say no to her. These days, I rarely speak to her.

Her wedding is in three months, and I told her I would not be attending. After all, if she dislikes me so much, why would she want me there anyway? Now, of course, she is furious, calling me all sorts of names.

My parents are hurt that I won't attend, and my grandmother says she know doesn't gotten into me. Frankly, I don't care what they think.

But I do care what my aunts, uncles, cousins acquaintances will believe about me if I don't show up. If they ask what's going on, I will tell them, but I'm sure mv sister will come up with an alternate version, and who knows which one of us they will believe? They never notice how she treats me.

I boycott If the wedding, a huge number of people connected to my family will look at me as the worst kind of person. What should I do? — Massachusetts

Dear Massachusetts: When you take a stand, you must be willing to with the consequences: Avoid the wedding and take your lumps from the relatives, or attend and hope your sister will behave. But we also think you should tell your sister how much it hurts when she bullies and belittles you, and ask why she finds necessary to treat you this way. If you can get to the root of her animosity, perhaps things could improve.

Dear Annie: I recently in with boyfriend, "Beau," and his roommate, "Scott." Scott is usually at his girlfriend's house, Beau and I pretty much have the place to ourselves. Scott splits the bills with us while unofficially living with his girlfriend.

the Scott makes and payments, we reimburse him in cash. The problem is, on more than one occasion, I've noticed he has been late. I just found out that the water bill is three months past due and they are ready to shut it off. We have already paid Scott our share, but I think he expects us to pay twothirds of the past-due amount.

I refuse to pay for this again, but don't know how to say it. Should we let it go? Do we ask him to write a receipt? That seems extreme, and Scott is a close friend. Moving out is not an option. What do we do? -NoWay, I Won't Pay

Dear No Way: It is unfair to pay twice for the same bill. But it's also unfair that Scott pays a third of the costs for a place he rarely uses. Offer to restructure your rental arrangements with Scott, and then perhaps you or Beau could take over the bill paying and let Scott reimburse you. And make sure he gets a receipt.

Chicago (7-8) each had five representatives.

Three rookies were chosen: Denver linebacker Von Miller, Cincinnati receiver A.J. Green, and Arizona cornerback Patrick Peterson, selected as a kick return specialist. He has tied an NFL record with four punt runbacks for TDs this season.

"As I've said before, A.J. is the best firstround draft pick that I've ever been around," Bengals coach Marvin Lewis said. "He has shown the other players in this league, and the fans, that he deserved this honor. I have not seen a receiver better than he is at getting to the ball."

NFC special-teamers included two 49ers: Lee and record-setting kicker David Akers; Peterson; and Corey Graham of Chicago.

For the AFC, the Raiders' Sebastian Janikowski is the kicker, Shane Lechler the punter. The kick return specialist is Pittsburgh WR Antonio Brown, and the specialteams player is Slater.

NFC starters will be Rodgers, Eagles running back LeSean Mc-Coy, Packers fullback John Kuhn, Graham, Panthers center Ryan Saints guards Jahri Evans and Carl Nicks, Eagles tackle Jason Peters and Staley, Cardinals wide receiver Larry Fitzgerald and Lions wide receiver Calvin Johnson on offense.

"I think it's the fact that I'm versatile at fullback," Kuhn said when asked why he was selected. "I can play the traditional fullback role and lead block, and the coaches also entrust the ball-carrying opportunities that I have. I think the combination of the two of those really gets my name out there."

On defense, it will be Vikings end Jared Allen and Eagles end Jason Babin, Cowboys tackle Jay Ratliff and Smith, Packers outside linebacker Clay Matthews and Cowboys outside linebacker DeMarcus Ware, inside linebacker Willis, Packers cornerback Charles Woodson and Rogers, Seahawks safety Earl Thomas and Cardinals safety Adrian Wilson.

AFC starters will be Ravens run-Brady, ning back Ray Rice and fullback Vonta Leach, Gronkowski, Steelers center Maurkice Pouncey, Mankins and Waters at guard, Browns tackles Joe Thomas and Dolphins tackle Jake Long, Welker and Steelers wide receiver Mike

"This is a blue-collar team. We're a scrappy bunch. You saw that. We're going to fight and scratch and claw for everything, as it should be. That'll get us by."

With a Christmas loss to the Chicago Bulls and another defeat in Sacramento one night later, the Lakers got off to their first 0-2 start since the 2002-03 season. But Los Angeles has started 0-3 just three times in franchise history — just once in the last 50 years (1978-79).

Utah missed 17 of its first 19 shots in the second quarter while the Lakers made a 13-0 run capped by a one-handed dunk by World Peace, the normally ground-bound leader of Los Angeles' second unit. Los Angeles blew out the Jazz after halftime, jumping to a 68-39 lead with a 12-2 run.

"To hold a team to 32 percent and 71 points in an NBA game, I don't care who you're playing, you're doing something right on that end of the floor," Brown said. "The focus, the energy, the effort, that communication and trust that we brought defensively, was exciting to see."

The Lakers comprehensively shut down the Jazz, the last NBA team to open its regular season. Paul Millsap had 18 points and 10 rebounds for Utah, but coach Tyrone Corbin scowled throughout the lowest-scoring performance in an opener in franchise history

"They're a veteran team, they have a lot of pride, and they have some great players in that locker room," Corbin said. "I told our guys before the game, 'If just standing around.'

you expect them to come out and lay down because they're playing there games in three nights, you're mistaken.' They wanted to get the monkey off their back as soon as they could, and they played like it."

In the Jazz's first season opener without coach Jerry Sloan running their bench since 1988, Utah made just 20 shots in the first three quarters and shot 20 fewer free throws than the Lakers. Al Jefferson went 2 for 16, C.J. Miles was 1 for 8, and rookie Enes Kanter was 1 for 7 in his NBA debut.

At least Utah's 25-point loss was one point better than the biggest blowout loss in Utah opener history.

"It didn't seem like much was working for us," said Utah forward Gordon Hayward, who had seven points. "It felt like we were

Ray Allen scored 28 points on 8 for 12 shooting for the Celtics, while Rajon Rondo finished with 22 points and 12 assists and Keyon Dooling scored 18 off the Boston bench.

Through two games, Miami (2-0) has trailed only once — by two points, for all of 14 seconds. Boston turned the ball over 24 times, and Miami turned those into 33 points.

"Any team you turn the ball over that much they're going to score on you," Allen said. "We just have to settle in on both ends of the floor. Whether you score or not, they're going to run down your throats."

Cole's jumper with 3:01 left gave Miami a 108-98 lead, most of which disappeared in the next 59 seconds, thanks to Dooling — a former Heat guard. He scored seven straight points, including a 3-pointer with 2:02 remaining, cutting the Heat's lead to three. And when Boston got a stop on the next Miami trip, the Celtics looked for Dooling again.

But Wade stepped in front of a pass intended for Dooling, starting a play where James found Cole for another jumper, and Miami's cushion was back to 110-105 with 1:31 to play. A half-minute later, Cole struck again to restore the five-point edge, and Miami had the win.

"He's earned their respect," Heat coach Erik Spoelstra said. "Even though it's been a short period of time, about three weeks, because he's pure, he's all about the team. He's mature."

to the schools for another 60-day comment period; or allow members to vote on the override, which needs a 5/8ths majority of the roughly 350 Division I members to pass.

A permanent reversal could force the NCAA and its schools to have two sets of standards, with an obligation to honor multi-year scholarship offers and stipend payments for some students but not others.

David Berst, the NCAA's vice president of governance for Division I, said that most schools support the concept of multiyear scholarships but have concerns about how to enact such a

"The overriding concern had to do with the time to prepare and plan (for a change) rather than objecting to the concept,"

"I'm anticipating the rule will still be in effect (after the next board meeting)."

The list of schools objecting to the multi-year scholarship plan, obtained by Dennie and provided to The Associated Press, includes Boise State, Boston University, Indiana State, Marquette, Marshall, Rutgers, Utah, Vermont and Wyoming.

Boise State called the move a "recruiting disaster" that would encourage a "culture of brokering" and pit wealthy schools with larger recruiting budgets against their less well-heeled brethren.

It would also obligate schools to long-term commitments that may not make competitive sense.
