COAHOMA — School trustees are expected to approve a resolution setting aside the "15 percent rule" for a year when they hold meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday in the administration building room. The "15 percent rule" is a buzz phrase much used in public school circles lately and relates to a requirement of the new state standardized test, the STAAR (State of Texas Assessments of Academic Readiness). Simply put, the rule states that STAAR end of course test scores for high school students will count for 15 percent of their total grade in that

There have been a few hiccups implementing the rule, however.

Independent Coahoma School District Superintendent Amy Jacobs said the major roadblock to implementing the rule this year is nobody yet knows exactly what the passing standard on the STAAR test will be.

"They can't tell you, for example, that if you get 40 of 52 test questions right, whether you passed," Jacobs said. "There's just so many

"So it's no joke when we say we're extremely thankful for the little bit of rain we've been getting."

Bear in mind, however, Sullivan and the county's volunteer firefighters have still had their fair share of fires to respond to, as high winds and electrical fires have recently teamed up to make for dangerous conditions. "Anytime you get the high winds like we've been having you have a recipe for wildfires," Sullivan said. "They will get the electrical lines rocking back and forth and cause the lines and the cross arms that hold them up to snap, so we've seen plenty of electrical fires in the past several weeks.

"We also recently responded to a tank battery fire. Luckily, however, we haven't been seeing the fires caused by human carelessness, which is a really big relief for us. Those are the needless fires we have to do everything we can as a society to stop."

Sullivan said the recent rains — while short-lived and not exactly drenching — have helped keep the electrically-based fires from being much more damaging than they have.

"We responded to a fire in Coahoma Monday and because of the fast," Sullivan said.

"That made a huge difference. In the end, it only burned about an acre. Without that green grass, the fire would have torn through that area a lot faster and there's really no telling how many acres it could have destroyed, so the little bit of rain we've been getting is having

"We've been able to get all of the equipment – minus a truck that went down during a fire Monday — back up and ready for action," he said. "We're just waiting on a part for that truck and it will be up and ready to go, as well. Last year took a horrible toll on all of our equipment, but it's all ready to go now.

"I think the biggest toll, however, was on the men. From about February until August last year, I was sleeping an average of 3.5 hours a day. You can imagine what kind of an effect that takes on your body and mind. Everyone was hurting. This year, I have to say we're all a lot more thankful for a full night's rest."

While the memory of last year's wildfire season certainly lingers in the back of Sullivan's mind — and the rest of his firefighter's mind's, for that matter — he acknowledges they are far from out of the proverbial woods yet.

"We're keeping a close eye on the moisture levels. We're walking a pretty thin line, know that," Sullivan more rain. It's going to said gravely. "As long as we keep getting a little bit of moisture like we've been getting, we'll be OK. However, if we hit a dry spell like we did a couple of years ago, we're going to be right back in the shape we were in this time last year. No one wants to think about it, but it can happen.

"I plan to meet with the county commissioners the first part of May and re-evaluate where we are. We may have to re-enact the countywide burn ban if we don't get start getting a lot hotter, especially as we move into June, July, August and September. Then we have the winter livan encourages Crossroads residents to remain vigilant. "Right now folks are doing a really good job of being safe and I'd ask them to simply keep doing that," he said. "There are fires we simply can't prevent, like these electrical fires and these tank battery fires. Those are going to happen no matter what we do. It's the fires caused by human carelessness we can prevent and we have to continue to be vigilant against those kinds of fires."

Powwow time this weekend

ll sorts of colors will be flowing in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum this weekend for the eighth annual Pow-

Doors are set to open Saturday for the twoday event. The weekend will consist of several Native American celebrations, as well as the opportunity to shop vendors offering different collectible items.

The event focuses on bringing knowledge of the Native American culture and the nation's culture to the Crossroads area in an entertaining way. The atmosphere is family-oriented and at times audience-involved.

One of the opportunities for the public to get involved is in the inter-tribal dances that are held on the coliseum floor. Getting the kids and younger adults involved is an easy thing to do, according to Powwow officials, but this year they are looking to get more participation from the adults.

In some ways the powwow will be the same as it was last year, but in other ways this year's event is going to be a little different. Most of the competitions will once again take place, however, different people will bring different views and different performances.

The community is encouraged to attend the powwow, learn a little bit of Native American culture and have some family fun.

Anyone with questions is more than welcome to ask during the event as well. Tim Harjo will be serving as the event MC this

Those attending can expect to find vendors selling jewelry, art and food, as well as a silent auction.

All community members are encouraged to stop by either Saturday or Sunday and learn about Native American culture, enjoy family time and support community activities.

A SMALL PRAYER

by K. Rae Anderson

May we discuss key issues, Lord, with You through prayer.

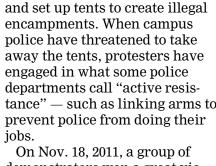

Amen

Mind-numbing protests lead to an introduction to pepper spray ou have to really work at it to get arrested at a University of California campus protest. University administrators look at protest as part of the education process — and they frequently issue memos stating how much they agree with left-wing causes. Administrators don't want campus police to arrest students – especially students who attend demonstrations against state cuts to higher education. Thus, students have had to ramp up dissident behavior if they want to be handcuffed and detained. Campus activists have begun to follow Occupy Wall Street's lead demonstrators won a great victory for their cause. In flagrant violation of campus rules, they set up tents in the UC Davis quad. Police were sent to disperse the encampment. As officers began to arrest protesters, students surrounded police as they chanted, "If you let them go, we will let you leave." They linked arms and eventually goaded two campus cops to use pepper spray.

Video of the exchange went viral. The protesters had won. They could portray themselves as victims, their highest calling. They could point fingers at authoritarian law enforcement.

Their 30 seconds of fame would launch — not a disciplinary hearing that ends with a warning, as should happen — multiple investigations that have combed through 10,000 pages of records and cost several hundred thousand dollars.

You may have read about the report by a task force headed by former state Supreme Court Justice Cruz Reynoso that leads with the conclusion, "The pepper spraying incident that took place Nov. 18, 2011 should and could have been prevented."

That is so true.

DEBRA

Campus cops repeatedly warned activists. UC Davis campus police Lt. John Pike told protesters that "pepper ball guns" would be "deployed" and they should understand that if they stayed, then they would be 'subject to the use of force."

Rather than do the smart thing and leave — in order to be free to protest legally another day one activist taunted Pike: "You are going to shoot me for sitting here? Is that what you said, officer?" (Presumably, that activist had the smarts to get into UC Davis.)

The Reynoso report has a great deal to say about the department's unnecessary use of pepper spray Nov. 18, but it barely deals with the need to educate students about the difference between free speech and civil disobedience. That is, other than recommending that UC consistently support free speech and protest while communicating "the consequences for breaches of the rules and policies," it doesn't sufficiently address the issue of student ignorance. It doesn't plainly recommend that know-it-all students be told that they can be jailed — and police are authorized to use force when they break laws against trespassing and illegal encamp-

You can see why students might not be clear on the concept. Certain chancellors — Davis' Linda Katehi and Berkeley's Robert Birgeneau — have authorized arrests at illegal demonstrations, only to discourage prosecution after the fact.

Also, the Reynoso report mentions a Davis professor who offered extra credit to students who attended an Occupy UCD rally and wrote a two-page report on what they saw and learned. A Freedom of Expression Support Team volunteer who spent the night of Nov. 15 with protesters who occupied Mrak Hall told in vestigators that another professor, Joshua Clover, warned students about cooperating with the administration and told them, "Right now, we're the law."

As we discussed the report, Alan Brownstein, a UC Davis law professor on the task force, reminded me the focus of the report was a finding of the police's "unreasonable use of force."

I hear that. But I cannot help but see the unreasonable use of smarts. Davis offers students this amazing opportunity to spend four years learning about the world. Sadly, some of those students end up in classes taught by ideologues who stoke the delusion that far-left intellectuals are an oppressed minority.

These kids think they are egalitarians. But they benefit from a system that lets elite students flout the law but won't cut a break for campus cops who try to enforce rules that are supposed to apply to all.

Little foxes spoiling the vine

'm sure you are familiar with the phrase "the little foxes spoil the vine." The Little Foxes is a 1939 play by Lillian Hellman. Its title comes from Chapter 2, Verse 15 in the Song of Solomon in the King James version of the Bible, which reads, "Take us the foxes, the little foxes, that spoil the vines: for our vines have tender grapes." Set in a small town in Alabama in 1900, it focuses on the struggle for control of the family business and highlights the influence small things can have

EDDY PRINCE on people's lives and even society in general. The play was made into a movie in 1941 starring Bette Davis and the phrase "little foxes" has continued to occupy a significant place in our vernacular. The concept of the destruction that can be done by the little foxes is worthy of serious consideration. It is, after all, the seemingly innocent and insignificant matters in our lives that oftentimes do the most damage.

Remember that "one bad apple?" Historical events certainly confer importance on small things. The negotiations with the Pope for dissolving Henry the Eighth's marriage, which brought on the "Reformation" in England, are said to have been interrupted by the Earl of Wiltshire's little dog biting the Pope's toe as he held it out to be kissed by that ambassador.

The Tory ministry, which gave a new shape to all Europe, was brought in by the Duchess of Marlborough spilling a pail of water upon Mrs. Masham's gown. Mohamet, when fleeing from his enemies, took refuge in a cave, which his pursuers would have entered had they not seen a spiders web over the entrance: but on seeing this they concluded there was no one within and passed on. A tiny spider's web influenced the religious history

The turning point at Waterloo, one of the great decisive battles of the world, resulted from the singular circumstances that prevented the arrival of General Grouchy. The well-planned attack of the Barbarians upon Rome was averted by the cackling of a goose. A series of most trivial events ended in the overthrow of Antony.

On a more personal and timely note think of a little nail in your tire as you are driving home from work, on a dark night in a pounding heavy rain. It makes a difference, doesn't it? Think of one pebble in your shoe as you are out on your morning stroll.

A Memphis newspaper had an article about a little mole. The mole burrowed into a newly rebuilt dike along the Red River. This mole did his work. And during a flood, that portion of the dike failed and there was a huge disaster.

NORAD computers at Cheyenne Mountain in Colorado have produced false alerts of possible nuclear attack on at least three occasions. June 3, 1980, a computer communications device failure caused warning messages to be sent to USAF command posts around the world that a mass attack was taking place, causing monumental response and massive preparation. It was later reported a computer component valued at less than 50 cents was to blame for the potentially catastrophic false report.

There is another verse in the Bible that comes to mind, "Dead flies will cause even a bottle of perfume to stink. An ounce of foolishness can outweigh a pound of wisdom and honor." (Ecclesiastes 10:1 NLT). Are you starting to get the idea that something doesn't have to be prodigious to have destructive capabilities? Luke 16:10 says. "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much: and he that is unjust in the least is unjust also in much."

I loved the Andy Griffith Show back in the 60s. There will never be another Barney Fife. One of his most famous quotes was when he was determined to keep Mayberry's 8 year olds going in the right direction. With a fervor like no one else Barney declared, "Nip it in the bud! You got to nip it in the bud! ... Nip it! You go read any book you want on the subject of child discipline, and you'll find that every one of 'em is in favor of bud-nippin'... Only one way to take care of it, Nip it, nip it, nip it!"

Know what I think? I think Barney was right on target.

People say "a stitch in time saves nine." Most of us could do some stitching in our lives, and trimming up. We are not guilty of big public sins, but we've got little things that are working on us. It's the little foxes, the little defects, the little neglects, the little deficiencies in life, the little dishonesties, the little departures from Christian principles that blind the soul and separate it from righteousness. Little things become larger and larger and soon they get out of control. We have to nip them in the bud. We have to stitch up that tear before it rips our life into shreds.

So never let your guard down, especially on the little things. We get overweight one cookie at a time. Every word and every thought matters. Regardless of your size you can trip and fall on a small obstacle in your path. When you get a few moments read 1 Peter 5:8. It's great advice for us all.

You may not agree with anything I've said, but I column as I see 'em.

What to do when a loved one dies

At one time or another in our lives, we will all face loss. Whether it's a loved one, a job, a pet, a marriage, or a friendship, loss is one of those things that make us stop and take stock of our lives.

I have experienced loss throughout my life and despite growing up in the funeral business, else.

Kasi WELCH BAKER it didn't prepare me to handle the loss any better than anyone

I had to learn how to grieve and with each loss the grieving was different. The most recent and tragic loss I experienced was of my dear friend Julie.

She was one of the most happy, fun, loving, and devoted friends one could have. You know, the friend who is so organized she never forgets an important date, birthday, holiday or event — that was Julie. She made everyone feel special. Julie was a beautiful wife, loving mother, daughter, sister and friend. She died after a short and difficult battle with breast cancer at the age of 33. I still think of Julie often, I miss her, I miss our friendship, laughs, and I miss her calls and the way she would say "Hello, Miss Kasi Shea!" I felt angry that she was taken from us too soon. I hurt for her family and her two girls who needed her most. Then one day I began to feel gratitude, gratitude for having her in my life. I felt thankful for the opportunity of having a friend and experiencing a friendship like one I had never had before. I get a smile on my face every time I think of her. I never stop sharing about Julie when I see her family, or even talk about her to those who never knew her. I am grateful I have been given one more day and that the days past were blessed with friends like her.

As a funeral director, I meet with families every week who are going through a very deep and personal loss, families whose pain is still fresh and who often need a shoulder to cry on. Through my own personal experience and through walking with so many families through such a difficult time, I've come to see that there are a few things we can do to help ease the pain of loss:

Face your pain rather than run from it. The only way to ease the pain of grief is to walk through it.

Take time alone to process your emotions. Don't deny the way you feel.

Say your loved one's name and tell the story as often as you need to. If you are a friend helping someone through a loss, don't be afraid to say the person's name. It is very comforting to those who grieve.

Don't minimize your pain or another person's pain. Saying that they will find someone else, or have another child is devastating to the bereaved. Fully acknowledge the tragedy of loss to yourself and others.

Grieve at your own pace. Everyone's grief is different.

Keep a journal or find some other artistic or expressive outlet. Sing, dance, scrapbook, listen to music, write poetry, journal, blog, or paint find a creative outlet for your feelings of grief and loss.

Seek out the help of a support group or counselor. It is not weak to ask for the help of someone who will listen without judgment.

Take care of yourself. Be gentle with yourself and don't expect yourself to "go back to normal" within a few weeks or months. Grief takes time.

Stay healthy. Don't neglect your health. Get exercise, take walks, try to meditate or pray, eat well, and get plenty of sleep. Staying healthy will help you come to terms with your grief much more easily and quickly.

Practice gratitude. Gratitude is a powerful healing emotion. Try to search for things you can be grateful for.

Don't ask why. Unless you also ask why good things happen to you, it probably is not helpful to ask why painful things happen. The better question is "How can I make sure that this person's memory lives on?" For me, it is telling others about my precious friend whose life was such a blessing to so many.

Loss of any loved one at any stage of life is devastating. We often are unprepared for the tragedy of loss. But it is possible to emerge on the other side of grief with a new appreciation for life, greater strength and inner peace, and a deeper understanding of the gift that family and friends are to you while on this earth. I know I have. I don't let a day go by without telling them how much I love them.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Everything that is in the world started out as an idea. Yesterday's Pisces moon favored imagination and flights of fancy. Hopefully, there was something in those dreams that you can act on now, bringing the intangible into a physical form. The moon moves

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Ask for advice and opinions, but don't be too quick to incorporate everything you hear. Don't change your ways just to get the right response. You know more than you think you know.

HOLIDAY

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). If you listen closely, you'll find that people will tell you who you are. They may not even realize they are doing it, but they feel a need for you to be who they want you to be. Resist. Take the time to decide what you think.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). A solo effort will be brilliant. You'll be surprisingly comfortable addressing the needs of the day alone. Maybe you'll even try harder because you're not relying on others.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You can feel good about many of the things you've done in your life. Mentally scan through some of your history, and you'll bring a wave of happy contentment upon yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). The authority figures in your life are losing their influence over you. By what standard would you judge your own success if you didn't have the example put forth by your parents, your boss or anyone else?

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You'll love the way another person sees you. It changes who you think you are, inspires arduous feelings in you and raises you to a state of complete enchantment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). It's not enough just to mention what you want. You'll have to bring it up again and again so that people remember. They want to help you, but you have to teach them

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You don't have to worry about what your loved ones will say about you when you're not there. People will be as loyal to you as you are to them. Your reputation is growing. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). The day starts off scattered, but your mind will get extremely focused once you complete a ritual to focus it. The ritual could be as simple as writing down your top aim and then giving yourself a timeframe in which to accomplish it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19).

You'll get the vague notion that something needs to be done, followed by a strong instinct as to precisely what that is and who should do it. It's likely that the "who" is you!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You'll be good at the games that get played regularly in your circle. Some of these are actual competitions with rules. Some of them are subconscious games to establish social order.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Wanting and needing to make a change won't inspire you as much as physical and mental discomfort will. It's only when your comfort zone becomes a discomfort zone that you will be inspired to make the change.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (April 18). The world seems to know that you're serious about getting what you want. You'll assert yourself and watch the doors open wide. Your strongest financial opportunities come this month and next. Someone falls for you and falls hard. You'll bond with people you trust in July and possibly start a business together. Aquarius and Virgo people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 30, 1, 28 and 18.

NYC subway plotter:

Bombmaking 'very simple'

NEW YORK (AP) — The admitted mastermind of a foiled terror plot to attack New York City subways testified Wednesday that al-Qaida trainers taught him a "very simple" formula for making explosives needed for suicide bombs.

After being recruited by the terror network and taken to a compound in the South Waziristan region of Pakistan, Najibullah Zazi said he learned how to mix chemicals found in nail polish remover and other products sold at beauty supply stores.

"It was very simple and they're everywhere," he said of the chemicals.

Zazi, 26, was testifying for a second day at the trial of Adis Medunjanin in federal court in Brooklyn.

Prosecutors allege that Medunjanin, Zazi and another former high school classmate from Queens, Zarein Ahmedzay, formed a terror cell that posed one of the most ominous terror threats since the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks.

Zazi has testified that during their 2008 trip to Pakistan, the three Americans met a top al-Qaida operative they knew only as Hamad. Authorities say Hamad was Adnan Shukrijumah, a Saudi still listed on an FBI website as a fugitive who plotted attacks for al-Qaida worldwide.

Hamad told the three that they were best suited for an operation on U.S. soil. He also mulled over potential targets with them, including the New York Stock Exchange, Times Square and an unspecified Walmart store, Zazi said.

U.S., NATO ready 2013 plan to step back from frontline Afghanistan combat, hand off to Kabul

BRUSSELS (AP) — The United States and its NATO allies are readying plans to pull away from the front lines in Afghanistan next year as President Barack Obama and fellow leaders try to show that the unpopular war is ending.

Top military and diplomatic officials from the U.S. and NATO allies met Wednesday to finalize the combat handover program and a strategy for world support to the weak Afghan government and fledgling military after 2014.

At the same time, the nations that have prosecuted a war against a Taliban-led insurgency are reassuring nervous Afghans they will not be left to fend for themselves. The competing messages aimed at different audiences are both challenged by current events in Afghanistan, where insurgents staged an impressive, coordinated attack last weekend that struck at the heart of the U.S.-backed government and international enclave in Kabul while Taliban leaders boycott peace talks the U.S. sees as the key to a safe exit.

"I expect NATO members and (partner countries) to commit to pay a fair share of the sustainment costs ... after 2014," NATO Secretary-General Anders Fogh Rasmussen said Wednesday as he arrived for the two-day meeting of defense and foreign ministers.

This week's sessions are meant to stitch together U.S. and NATO agreements on the pace of U.S. and allied combat withdrawal next year. U.S. and Aighan officials have already said they expect a shift to an Afghan military lead in combat operations by the middle of 2013, although the U.S. stresses that it will still have a large number of forces in Afghanistan as backup.

It's the economy: Obama to make case against GOP budget policies in hard-hit Ohio, Michigan

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an election season when the economy is king, the central debate between President Barack Obama and GOP challenger Mitt Romney comes down to what is enough Enough growth in the economy. Enough job creation. Enough help for those still struggling to get back on their feet.

Obama travels to two Midwest states at the epicenter of that debate, hard-hit Ohio and Michigan, on Wednesday to highlight his economic policies and place them in pointed contrast to the sharp budget-cutting proposals of House Republicans and by extension Romney. In Ohio, Obama will visit a successful job-training program of the type that the White House says would face steep cutbacks in federal financing under the House-passed budget, which Romney supports. And in Michigan, the president will scoop up more campaign cash to help him combat Romney's efforts to frame his presidency as an economic fail-Beyond job training, the president is making the broader case that while more remains to be done to boost the economy, he's successfully brought the country back from the brink of financial collapse and done what he should to help Americans weather the storm. For Obama, there's no more critical place to make that argument than Ohio, always an electoral battleground, and a general election bell-

Romney, for his part, never misses an opportunity to blame Obama for what he labels as failed economic policies and bloated government, and to argue that the president's had his chance and now it's time for him to move on. He criticizes a jumble of "federal workforce training programs, 49 reporting to eight different agencies.'

Gulf promises of Syria aid still unmet, highlighting difficulty of supporting rebellion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two weeks after their bold promise, Saudi Arabia and other wealthy Arab Gulf states have yet to start distributing money from a multimillion-dollar fund designed to prop up Syria's rebels and entice defections from President Bashar Assad's army, Syrian opposition members and international officials say.

The cash program was outlined this month at a conference in Istanbul, where representatives of the United States and more than 60 other nations met to strengthen Syria's opposition and increase pressure on the Assad regime. Hoping to crack Assad's support, Washington and its Arab partners seized on the plan as a path forward even as they disagreed on the idea of giving weapons to badly outgunned Syrian rebels.

But the fund's implementation is already beset by problems — basically, how to get the money there and how to make sure it gets to the right people. There's no way to monitor where the money goes as the country veers toward civil war. Because the rebels hold no territory and struggle even to maintain communications among inside and outside Syria, there is no clear way to deliver the money.

The problems underscore the larger problem to providing aid of any kind to the Syrian rebellion. The Obama administration recently signed off on $12 million in enhanced communications, medical and other "nonlethal" assistance to the opposition, but it is unclear what goods are making their way into Syria and by what means.

Even the recipients are largely unknown, with American officials themselves saying they are still trying to get to know Syria's armed and political

ers of swimming pools at hotels, city recreation centers and public parks are scrambling to install mechanical chair lifts to comply with new federal requirements that all public pools be accessible to disabled swimmers. Some hotels fear the cost of the equipment or fines for noncompliance could put them out of business, and an industry lobbyist says others may close their pools this summer if they can't upgrade in time, though the government can offer more time to those having trouble paying for it. Swimmers with disabilities say the changes are overdue. "I couldn't get into the pool without it," said Karen Kitchen of Savannah, who has multiple sclerosis and relies on a poolside chair lift at the Chatham County Aquatic Center for her physical therapy workouts up to four times a week.

Adding to the problem is a backlog of orders created by the rush to meet a May deadline. Harry Spirides ordered lifts last month for the hotel he owns on Georgia's largest public beach and was told they should arrive in late April. He expects to pay $12,000 for the lifts at the Ocean Plaza Beach Resort on Tybee Island.

"Our supplier is backed up with orders," said Spirides. "Everybody's rushing to comply; everybody wants to comply. But when you have tens of thousands of swimming pools that have to be retrofitted with these lifts, it takes time."

Body found might be Marine's wife: woman arrested

SAN DIEGO (AP) — One woman was arrested on suspicion of murder. The body of another was discovered near a lake some 70 miles away.

The connection between them, and just about everything else in the case, remained murky as authorities investigated the disappearance of a U.S. Marine's wife from San Diego County.

"There are too many loose ends to try to make any sense of it at this point," said Lt. Larry Nesbit, the lead homicide detective in the case, told KCAL-

Jessica Lynn Lopez, 27, was arrested at a Ramada Inn near the San Diego airport, sheriff's Capt. Duncan Frasier said at a Tuesday news conference in San Diego.

Later in the day to the north in Riverside County near Temecula, a woman's body was discovered about a mile from Lake Skinner, Frasier said

Detectives searching for Brittany Dawn Killgore, who has been missing since Friday, found the body after it was spotted by a maintenance worker leaving the area after clearing brush.

Nurse charged with murder in shooting of Texas mom

JUAN A. LOZANO

Associated Press SPRING, Texas — A registered nurse has been charged with capital murder in the shooting of a young mother and the abduction of her newborn son at a pediatric clinic near Houston. prosecutor a Wednesday.

Montgomery County District Attorney Brett Ligon told ABC's "Good Morning America" that Verna McClain, 30, was charged early Wednesday in the killing of Kala Marie Golden.

Witnesses say an argument broke out between Golden and another woman as Golden left Northwoods Pediatric Center in Spring on Tuesday afternoon with 3-day-old her Keegan.

The woman repeatedly shot Golden then snatched the baby from her arms and went to drive awav in a blue or light green Lexus. according to witness accounts. The dying woman leaned into the vehicle and tried to take Keegan back, screaming "My baby!" but her attacker sped away.

Ligon said McClain's statement to investigators indicates that she

"There were statements as indicated in the arrest record that were made by Ms. McClain that led us to believe that, in fact, this was an intentional act on her part," Ligon said. "Not that Ms. Golden was targeted specifically, but that this was part of a plan to kidnap a child."

He made no mention of a man whom witnesses said they saw in the blood-splattered Lexus.

Keegan was found unharmed Tuesday evening. Ligon said Child Protective Service officials were looking after him but that they expected the baby to soon be reunited with his father.

Speaking to Houston television station KHOU on Tuesday, Keegan's father, Keith Schuchardt said he was going to miss Golden.

"She was sweet, lovable. I loved her, and me," she loved Schuchardt said. "Everything was going fine until today."

that the infant was not found at a nearby apartment complex that was raided by officers wielding guns and riot shields evening. Tuesday Spring is about 20 miles north of Houston.

Authorities detained a person of interest late Tuesday, but it wasn't immediately clear if person McClain, nor if she was detained during the raid. Jail records show McClain lived Houston.

McLain, a nurse, is not employed by the Northwoods Pediatrics Center, according to a receptionist at the clinic, Jackie Longoria.

Golden's mother, Linda Golden, told the AP that she had been baby-sitting another of Kala's sons when someone at the scene called her using her daughter's cellphone. She rushed to the clinic but was unable to see her daughter because paramedics were trying to save her.

"I wanted to kiss her before they put her in the ambulance," Linda Golden said.

Joshua Jesson said he was at the clinic with his girlfriend when he heard gunshots. He said he saw a Lexus next to the pickup truck, then later looked back and saw the car was gone and a woman lying in the spot where the Lexus had been parked.

"I thought she just passed out. Then somebody ran in here and said, 'Somebody got shot," he said.

Police quickly surrounded the clinic and much of the parking lot with crime-scene tape, and yellow markers were placed next to a purse and pair of brown sandals near a red pickup truck. Spent ammunition also was nearby.

Linda Golden described her daughter as sweet-natured and

Seaton signs letter of intent for McMurry By BRIAN MCCORMACK

Sports Editor

Taylor Seaton is passionate about volleyball. This coming fall, she will get to take that passion to the next level. Seaton, a senior at Big Spring High School, signed a letter of intent to play volleyball at McMurry University in Abilene on Tuesday at the BSHS Athletic Training Center.

Heavily recruited by the institution, Seaton believes McMurry will be a good fit for many "I really wanted to go to a school that has

Christian values," Seaton said. "I know that is where I am supposed to be." Though BSHS Head Volleyball Coach Lynn Osborne will miss Seaton's leadership ability on the court next year, she is confident that she will excel at McMurry. "(Seaton) is a very passionate player - she's passionate about life," Osborne said. "She is very coachabe and very driven. She is quiet and soft spoken, but there is a gentle strength in her that the girls really respond

Humble about her opportunity, Seaton is thankful for a chance to pursue her dream.

Bulldogettes fall to Lady Wolves; Forsan, Coahoma and Colorado City in three-way tie

By BRIAN MCCORMACK

Sports Editor

COLORADO CITY — The Coahoma Bulldogettes had one thing on their minds Tuesday — avenge their only District 3-2A loss to the Colorado City Lady Wolves and take sole possession of first place in the highly competitive region.

Unfortunately, that plan was dashed with a 7-3 loss which forced a three-way tie between Coahoma, Colorado City and Forsan.

What started off as a defensive dual between the two juggernauts quickly turned towards Colorado City's favor when in the bottom of the second, Savanna Neff dropped a two-out, strike three pitch in the dirt to advance the batter to first.

The fumble would come back to haunt the Bulldogettes.

The error was the first of three on the inning, and with the help of a two-run triple, Colorado City took a 5-0 lead. None of the runs were earned for starting pitcher Kyla Clanton who struck out three during the complete game loss.

Coahoma answered back in the top of the third when Tobi Robinson drew a walk. Clanton then belted a RBI double, putting the Bulldogettes on the board. Laurel Nix then took a base on balls and with one out, Jennifer Castilaw made contact to drive Clanton home, making it a 5-2 game.

Down by three runs in the top of the fourth, Coahoma couldn't take advantage of its runners in scoring position. Clanton went down on strikes to leave the bases loaded for the first of two times during the outing.

Colorado City tacked on insurance runs in the bottom of the fifth with the help of two additional Coahoma errors.

A two-run single hit in the center field gap put the Lady Wolves Desperately needing to manufacture some runs, Coahoma's Minnie Goodblanket led off the top of the sixth with a double. Goodblanket stole third base and Jordan Matthews delivered with a base hit to bring Goodblanket home, cutting Colorado City's lead to four.

A strikeout and a caught pop-fly ended the inning.

With one chance left in the top of the seventh, Nix, Castilaw and Neff each singled to load the bases once again for the Bulldogettes.

Again, three runners were stranded after three consecutive outs ended the game for the disappointed Coahoma squad.

Coahoma swept both games of the season from rival Forsan. Forsan defeated Colorado City twice, and now Colorado City has swept Coahoma during district play. All teams hold a 9-2 district

Where it gets tricky is just how the three teams will be seeded. The two choices — as per district rules — are a coin flip — but all three coaches must agree to the option. A mini-tournament, where a playoff between the three teams will determine the seeding, is the alternative.

If the latter is chosen, a coin flip would determine who gets a first-round bye in the mini-playoff.

Other scores:

- Forsan def. Slaton, 9-2. (Wins District 3-2A Title).

Summer hoopsters looking for help

By BRIAN MCCORMACK

Sports Editor

The Big Spring Girl's Select Summer League athletes are in a in a jam. They need 11 uniforms before their first tournament, which is slated for May 18-20.

The uniforms — which will cost around $600 — were originally going to be donated by a local business. That plan fell through, and now the participants have to race against time to get their expenses in line for the Coach Patrick Shellman was hoping to raise funds to help offset the cost of travel and lodging expenses, but for now he is focused on the basics.

"We have got to get these girls uniforms," Shellman said. Brianne Park, a senior who plays varsity basketball for Big Spring High School, sees the league as a vital tune up for the regular basketball season.

"We're really working on getting better for next season," Park said. "We lost five starters, and this league helps us get better during the summer."

According to Shellman, most of the expenses are paid out of pocket, but costs add up quickly. Local businesses such as Nabors Oilfield, Flo-Lite, Pizza Inn, and Crossroads Collision have generously helped

After a rough outing during the first round of Region 1-3A tournament play Monday, the Big Spring High School Boy's golf team rallied back Tuesday, jumping ahead of Ft. Stockton and taking second place behind Andrews to punch their ticket to the state championship tournament in Austin.

The BSHS boys shot a total of 648 - 330 in the first round and 318 the second. Tyler Bryan led the Steers with a two-round total of 157. Devin Roberson shot a 163, Tate Kennedy 164, Jason Guevara 169 and Ryan Pollard 171.

Wylie's Taylor Grant was the first place medalist with a two-round score of 147. Despite a strong performance the Wylie team found themselves in third place behind Andrews and Big Spring.

BSHS Golf Coach Chris Joslin cites the character of his squad as the driving force behind the second round comeback.

"We didn't play our best golf the first day," Joslin said. "The wind was a factor and the greens were pretty fast. I was real proud of how they handled it. They came back and shot the low round of the tournament and the day to take second place.'

Routinely playing in what Joslin has called "One of the toughest districts in the state", as well as disappointing regional play last year, has prepared his

The Steers will have to bring the heat if they hope to unseat Andrews or reigning state 3A champs Prosper— and bring home the highest honor in Texas high school golf. Joslin, however, likes his team's chances.

"This is a great bunch of dedicated kids," he said. "I would take these five guys in any sport sport over anyone else. There are some other tough teams that will be competing, but we are just going to enjoy it. This hasn't happened in a while and you never know if it will happen again."

BSHS's girls girl's team did not qualify for the regional tournament as a team, though individual medalist - sophomore Kelsie Guinn - is playing today and Thursday in the two-day San Angelo event in hopes of making a state bid on her own.

Guinn enters the tournament ranked third overall in district.

This year's state tournament is slated for April 30-May 4 in Austin. Times and courses will be announced later.

Rangers belt six homers, romp Red Sox 18-3

BOSTON (AP) — Josh Hamilton started trotting around the bases rather than trying to catch a glimpse of where his home run landed in the right field seats at Fenway Park.

It may have been too far for him to really see.

Hamilton's three-run shot in the eighth was one of six homers the Texas Rangers hit in an 18-3 rout of the Boston Red Sox on Tuesday night.

Mike Napoli hit a pair of two-run shots to lead the home run derby for the Rangers, who increased their winning streak to five straight.

"The ball was carrying pretty good tonight," Hamilton said.

"Obviously I don't stand and watch it so I don't exactly where it hit," Hamilton said. "It felt good when it came off the bat."

Hamilton matched his career high with five RBIs and finished with three hits. He was coming off a three RBI game at Minnesota, which included the winning homer in the eighth.

"He's a talented baseball player. That's how you describe him. He's a very talented baseball player,' Texas manager Ron Washington said. "Nothing he does out there surprises me, at no time, because he's capable of doing it. It's not like that's something (where) he just gets hot and that's going to

Michael Young was the other Texas player to Texas finished with a season-high 21 hits, tagging Lester for eight of them before the Boston ace was pulled in the third inning.

The Rangers scored four times in the second and added three more in the third for a 7-2 lead.

They broke it open with an eight-run eighth that included a three-run homer by Hamilton and shots by Beltre and Cruz. The big inning came to an end when Beltre flied out and Boston fans gave the Red Sox a series of mock cheers.

Texas chased Lester (0-2) in the third after his con trol struggles left the bases loaded and nobody out Lester threw 49 pitches in the second and allowed seven runs on eight hits and walked four. His ERA more than doubled, going from 2.40 to 5.82 by the time the Rangers were done with him.

"He started keeping the ball down and changing speeds and really kept them off balance," Washington said. "To recover from that first inning the way it went just goes to show you the type of pitcher that Colby Lewis is."

Adrian Gonzalez added a solo homer for Boston in the eighth.

and West leads his fourth-best heart, the deuce. You win East's queen with the king, and you see only seven sure winners — one spade, one heart, three diamonds and two clubs. There are several ways to try to acquire one or two more tricks. The jack of diamonds might fall if you cash the A-K-Q, making your ten a trick; you might gain a trick by taking a spade finesse; and you might gain two tricks if the clubs are divided 3-2 and East has the queen.

No harm can come from first cashing the A-K of diamonds. When you do, both defenders follow suit, but the jack does not appear. You then try the clubs, leading the deuce to the ace and a low club back. When East shows out, your chances in that suit go down the drain.

Next you lead a low spade to the jack. When the finesse wins, you acquire your eighth trick. You could then lead a diamond toward your Q-10, but you'd be faced with a tough decision if East followed low. You wouldn't know whether to play the queen or the ten, and either play could sink you if you guessed wrong.

A much better idea is to cash dummy's ace of spades first. There are two great advantages to this play. One is that West's king might fall on the ace. The other is that if the king does not fall, you'll then know much more about West's hand.

In the actual case, West plays the ten of spades on the ace. This doesn't do your queen any good, but it does tell you that West - who is now known to have started with three spades, four hearts and four clubs could not have had more than two diamonds originally.

Accordingly, you next lead a diamond from dummy and play the ten, supremely confident that the finesse will produce your ninth trick.

"After all these years of hard work, she gets to fulfill her dream," Stephanie Seaton said. "McMurray has a stellar program, and she is going to be a part of a program that holds the same values that Taylor holds."

Seaton — who is preparing for a life beyond athletics by double majoring in business and graphic design — is proud to have been a part of the retooled volleyball program at BSHS.

"When Coach Osborne came, she showed us what it was like to be on a good team," Seaton added. "We made it to regionals last season. That was the farthest the school had gone in 40 years. I am glad I was a part of it all."
